to reprove. [h] That therefore our Saviour intended to limit this Prohibition to our ordinary Methods of Commerce and Diſcourſe, and not to extend it to judicial Caſes, is plain, both from the Word Communication, which, according to the uſual Forms of Speech, can hardly be applied to any Depoſition in a Court of Judicature, and from the Nature of the Oaths themſelves, by Heaven, by the Earth, by Jeruſalem, &c. which were frequent with the Jews in their common Diſcourſe and ordinary Negotiations, but never uſed upon ſuch publick Occaſions, for then their Cuſtom was to ſwear by the great Creator of Heaven and Earth, as the Lord liveth, and God do ſo to me and more, &c. [i] The Truth is, the Jews had got a very wicked and pernicious Cuſtom of Swearing by Heaven, by the Earth, and ſeveral other Creatures, which, becauſe God's Name was not expreſſed, they thought were harmleſs Forms, and ſuch as left no Guilt, nor laid any Obligation upon them: And therefore our Saviour, in theſe Words endeavours to convince them of their Miſtake; and to ſhew them, that their Excuſes and Pretences of not taking the Name of God in vain, when they made Uſe of ſuch evaſive Oaths, were impertinent and frivolous; that in ſwearing by the Creatures, they did in effect ſwear by the Maker of them; that in ſwearing by Heaven, they ſwore by him, whoſe Throne it is; in ſwearing by the Earth, they ſwore by him whoſe Footſtool it is; in ſwearing by Jeruſalem, they ſwore by him, who had taken that City into his peculiar Care and Protection; and in ſwearing by their Heads, they ſwore by their Creator, whoſe Power and Goodneſs appeared in every Thing about them. This is the Matter which Chriſt declares to the Sinners of this Age; and the Ground of his Aſſertion is plainly this,—that, in an Oath, not Pretences and Evaſions, but the Nature and Import of the Thing are conſidered by Almighty God. Men always ſwear by a greater, viz. a ſupreme Being; this is an eternal Rule, and whatever trivial Things are made the Expreſſions of an Oath, they do not alter the Nature of it, which has ſtill a Relation to God, who is the Maker and Preſerver of all the leſſer Things Men ſwear by, and is as much profaned and provoked by ſuch diſguiſed Oaths, as if he were particularly named in them.

Of the Apoſtle's.

THE Apoſtle's Words are much of the ſame Nature, and are therefore to be taken in the ſame Senſe: This however we cannot but infer from the repeated Prohibition, [k] that though Swearing itſelf be not diſallowed under the Goſpel, yet the Frequency of it certainly is; and therefore every good Chriſtian ſhould avoid it, if he can, altogether; if not ſo, as much as he is able. Candour and Ingenuity, Love of Truth, and Hatred of Falſity, is a proper Badge of Chriſtians; and therefore, as we profeſs to be ſuch, we ſhould uſe no Aſſeverations, much leſs any Oaths and Imprecations, in our Diſcourſe: Our Yea ſhall be Yea, and our Nay Nay: Simple Affirmations or Negations ſhould only paſs between us; for it becomes Chriſtians to be of ſuch Integrity and Faithfulneſs, that their bare Word ſhould be as valid as an Oath.

The primitive Fathers.

THIS is the whole of our Saviour's and of his Apoſtle's Senſe: And accordingly, if we look into the Words * of thoſe Primitive Writers, who are ſaid to deny the Lawfulneſs of Oaths, and obſerve the particular Scope and Intendment of their Diſcourſes, we ſhall ſoon perceive, that their Deſign is not to condemn all Swearing, but only the frequent Uſe of it. They ſaw how Oaths were abuſed, either by Mens raſhly or falſely Swearing; they expreſſed their Diſlike and Abhorrence of it; and adviſed their Hearers to ſhun all Swearing, as much as they could, and admit of no Oaths, but when there was an abſolute Neceſſity for them. This is all they meant; and this is that, which every good and conſcientious Man ſhould do at this Day; for it is indeed no more, than what ſome of the wiſeſt Heathens have preſcribed to their Diſciples, when they tell them, † that the beſt Way to preſerve the Reverence due to an Oath, was not to uſe it frequently, or upon trifling Occaſions, to fill up the Vacuities of our Diſcourſe, or procure Credit to a Tale; but, as far as they might, to uſe it only in Things neceſſary, and when there was no other Way to ſecure themſelves, but by the Help of an Oath.

The Prohibition itſelf, as extending to unlawful Oaths, as 1. Perjury.

I. THIS being ſufficient to prove the Lawfulneſs of Oaths, we come now to conſider what Kinds are accounted unlawful: And, of this Nature, what we conceive to be primarily intended in the Commandment, is the great Sin of Perjury.

1. PERJURY

[h] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [i] Horneck's Sermons, Vol. II. [k] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. * St Jerome [Comment. in Matth. v.] Chryſoſtome [Homil. 15. in Gen.] & Baſil [Homil. in Pſal. xiv.] ſeem to aſſert, that Oaths are unlawful under the Goſpel. Gregory Nazianzen, (as it is related in his Life) as ſoon as he was baptized, made a Vow not to ſwear as long as he lived, and kept it even to the laſt. According to his own Judgment and Practice, he adviſed others to refrain from Oaths; as there are many Paſſages in Epiphanius, Theodoret, Theophylact, Origen, Cyprian, and Athanaſius, that ſeem entirely to condemn the Uſe of them. Edwards, ibid. † Hierocles in Pythag. Aur. Car.

1. PERJURY is the ſolemn Invocation of God to the Atteſtation of what we aſſert or promiſe of any Kind, at the ſame Time that we know, what we aſſert is a direct Falſehood, and what we promiſe we neither can nor intend to perform [l]; which is one of the higheſt Affronts, we can offer to God, and an Act of moſt injurious Conſequence to Men. [m] He that calls God to Witneſs to a Lye, either imagines, that the Divine Being knows not the Truth, and ſo imputes Ignorance to him; or, that he is not diſpleaſed with Falſehood, and ſo denies his Holineſs; or, that he is not able to avenge the Indignity, and ſo derogates from his Power: [n] So that the Sin is not only an horrible Abuſe of the Name of God, an open Contempt of his Judgment, and inſolent Defiance of his Vengeance, but a very near Approach to Atheiſm itſelf; ſince the Difference is but little between believing there is no God, and believing there is one, whoſe Omniſcience and Purity, and whoſe Power and Majeſty, deſerve no Regard at all. [o] In Reſpect of other Men, it is not only a Wrong to this or that particular Perſon, who ſuffers by it; but a Kind of Treaſon againſt human Society, as it ſubverts the Foundations of publick Peace and Juſtice, and the private Security of every Man's Life and Fortune; for ſo the wiſe King has expreſſed it; [p] a falſe Witneſs againſt his Neighbour is a Maul, and a Sword, and a ſharp Arrow; intimating, that among all the Inſtruments of Ruin and Miſchief, that have been deviſed by Mankind, none is of more pernicious Conſequence to human Society, than Perjury, or the Breach of Faith: And in Reſpect of the Perſon himſelf, beſides the Waſte that it makes in his Conſcience, [q] it brings Diſgrace and Infamy upon him, if he comes to be detected; or if he eſcapes the Cenſure of the World, entails a Curſe upon him, and his Poſterity, which will not eaſily be removed. For ſo in the Viſion of the flying Roll, [r] I will bring the Curſe forth, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, and it ſhall enter into the Houſe of the Thief, and into the Houſe of him, that ſweareth falſely by my Name, and it ſhall remain in the Midſt of his Houſe, and it ſhall conſume it, with the Timber thereof, and the Stones thereof.

The great Impiety of it.

2. WICKED and profane Swearing, in common Diſcourſe and Converſation, is another Thing prohibited in this Commandment. For [s] Oaths are ſolemn Things, and reſerved for great Purpoſes, to give Confirmation to our Words in ſome weighty Matters, and to put an End to Controverſies, which cannot otherwiſe be peremptorily decided, and are not to be uſed upon trifling Occurrences, without expreſſing great Impiety, and Irreverence towards God. And yet, [t] whether it be that Men think Oaths ſet off their Paſſion better, and make it more terrible and impreſſive, or that they fancy their Words and Sentences have not their due Accent and Cadence without them, or that they believe their Mirth and Jollity is not modiſh enough, except it be accompanied with them; or whether it be merely Cuſtom, and a Vice, that they play with, purely for Company's ſake; but ſo it is, that no Sin is more frequently committed by Men of all Ranks and Diſtinctions, even tho' it has no Profit nor Pleaſure attending it, and may really puzzle a wiſe Man to give any tolerable Reaſon why it is ever committed at all; [u] tho' it be a great Incivility in Converſation, as it offends and grates upon all ſober and conſiderate Perſons, who cannot be preſumed (with any Manner of Eaſe and Patience) to hear God affronted, and his great and glorious Name treated with ſo much Contempt and Irreverence, upon every ſlight Occaſion; tho' it be ſo far from being any Commendation to him that uſes it, that it argues in him a perpetual Diſtruſt of his own Reputation, and is an Acknowledgment, that he thinks his bare Word not worthy of Credit; and ſo far from being an Ornament to his Diſcourſe, that it makes it look ſwollen and bloated, and more bold and bluſtering, than becomes a Man of good Breeding.

2. Profane Swearing.

The Folly of it.

BUT beſides theſe groſſer Profanations of God's Name, there are ſeveral other Kinds of Oaths, which, though they ſound not ſo heinouſly, are not without their Guilt and Condemnation: * Such as, 1. Swearing by any Creature, by the Heavens, by the Light, by the Light that ſhines, &c. which, according to our Saviour's Interpretation, is implicitly ſwearing by God himſelf; ſince all theſe were created by him, depended entirely upon him, and are nothing at all without him. [x] 2. Swearing by any Gifts or Endowments of the Body or Mind, by the Life, or Soul of ourſelves, or others, by our Faith, by our Troth, &c. becauſe our Saviour aſſured us, that if we ſwear by any Thing, which belongs to God, (as every Gift and Faculty we have cometh from him) it is ſwearing by God himſelf, tho' the Name of God be not expreſly

3. Other Kinds of unlawful Swearing.

[l] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [m] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [n] Tillotſon, ibid. [o] Ibid. [p] Prov. xxv. 18. [q] Horneck's Sermons, Vol. II. [r] Zech. v. 4. [s] Tillotſon, ibid. [t] Horneck, ibid. [u] Tillotſon, ibid. * Horneck, ibid. [x] Edwards, ibid.

expreſsly mentioned. [y] 3. Uſing ſuch minced and diſguiſed Expreſſions, as the Wit (ſhall I ſay, or rather Folly) of Mankind hath deviſed to evade the Scandal of bare-faced Profaneneſs. For all theſe, however palliated, are nevertheleſs Oaths, and will accordingly be charged upon us, at the great Day of Accounts, when Enquiries ſhall be made, what Obſervance we have paid to that Precept of the Apoſtle, Above all Things, my Brethren, ſwear not, neither by the Heaven, neither by the Earth, neither by any other Oath.

BESIDES theſe Oaths, whether open or diſguiſed, there are ſeveral other Ways of taking the Lord's Name in vain, as [z] when Men, 1. in their Prayers, run on without ever attending to what they are about, pray for what they ought not, or uſe vain Repetitions of God's Name, without Need, and againſt Reaſon. 2. In their Promiſes, undertake to do that, which afterwards they neglect to perform, not for Want of Power, but for Want of Will, and a due Regard to their Oath. 3. In their Vows, oblige themſelves to what, they either are not able to fulfil, or may not lawfully fulfil, or might much better, and more prudently have been let alone: And, 4. In their ordinary Converſation, [a] are frequently pronouncing the Name of God, by Way of Admiration, Exclamation, or Expletive, but without any due and ſuitable Reverence. To theſe Inſtances we may adjoin [b] all Curſing and Imprecations, which have Malice added to their Profaneneſs; all lewd and Atheiſtical Diſcourſes; all Blaſphemy, and ſpeaking reproachfully of God; all Murmuring and Repining at his Providence; all Ridiculing and Profaning his holy Word; all Deſpiſing and Expoſing his Miniſters, on Account of their Function; all Irreverence in his publick Service, in the Uſe of his Prayers and Sacraments; and, in ſhort, all Contemptuous Treating of any Thing, wherein his Name and Honour are concerned.

The Duties implied in the Commandment.

SUCH are the Things, which this Commandment forbids; and the Duties, which it implies, are the very Reverſe to theſe; Hallowing and Sanctifying God's bleſſed Name; never mentioning it, in our common Diſcourſe, without ſome Deference and Note of Diſtinction; never expreſſing it in our Prayers, without the profoundeſt Humility and Veneration; never employing it, on any judicial Occaſion, but with the greateſt Seriouſneſs and Solemnity; and always remembering to fulfil the Obligation punctually, which we bring upon ourſelves by ſo ſacred a Tye, at all Times, and in all Places, ſpeaking honourably of God's Word, his Sacraments, his Miniſters, and whatever relates to him; and [c] uſing our utmoſt Endeavours, that all Minds may entertain good and worthy Thoughts of him; all Tongues may bleſs and praiſe him; and all Creatures yield Adoration to his Name, and Obedience to his Will.

The Commination annexed to the Command, ſuitable to the Cuſtoms of all Nations.

II. BUT to proceed now to the Sanction of the Command, which is a Commination added to enforce it; God will not hold him guiltleſs, i. e. he will look upon him as a very guilty Perſon, and accordingly purſue him with great Severity, both in this Life, and that which is to come. To expreſs the Lawfulneſs of an Oath, and the great Guilt and Penalty incurred by the Violation of it, the Wiſdom of moſt Nations has appointed very ſignificant Ceremonies, which the Juror is obliged to obſerve, when he comes to the Reception of it. [d] The ancient Phœnicians, in taking an Oath, held a Lamb in one Hand, and a Stone in another, to intimate their Wiſhes, that God might ſtrike them dead, as they were ready to do the Lamb, if they ſwore not according to Truth. The old Romans, upon the like Occaſion, took up a Stone, and caſt it from them, imprecating to themſelves, that God might caſt them away, as they did that Stone, if there was any Falſity in what they ſwore. The Jews, in taking, or adminiſtering an Oath, [e] ſlew a Calf, and cut it aſunder, and the Perſon, that was to ſwear, walked thro' the diſſected Parts, to convince the Spectators, that he wiſhed God, in like Manner, might cut him aſunder, in Caſe he falſified his Oath. Lifting up their Hands to Heaven, in the Act of Swearing, (we [f] find it practiſed among the Angels themſelves) was an ancient Cuſtom among many Nations, in order to ſhew, that they engaged all the Powers of Heaven againſt them, if the Things they confirmed were not true; and the Cuſtom among us of Swearing upon the holy Goſpel, is no bad Repreſentation of the tremendous Nature of Oaths. In that Book are contained all the Benefits and Privileges of our Redemption, all that we can hope for from the Merits and Sufferings of Jeſus Chriſt, the Pardon of Sin, the Promiſes of Grace here, and of Salvation hereafter: So that he, who affirms, in his Oath, what is not true, renounces all Claim and Title to the Promiſes, and publickly lickly devotes himſelf to all the Curſes and Threats contained in that Book: And what then can the forſworn Wretch expect, but to fall under the ſpeedy Vengeance of God, if his Declarations of this Kind be not true? [g] I will come near you to Judgment, and will be a ſwift Witneſs againſt the Sorcerers, and againſt the Adulterers, and againſt falſe Swearers. The great Guilt and Danger of Perjury,

[y] Gardener's Sermons, Vol. II. [z] Wake's Explanation of the Church Catechiſm. [a] Gardener's Sermons, Vol. II. [b] Wake, ibid. [c] Barrow, on the Lord's Prayer. [d] Horneck's Sermons, Vol. II. [e] Jer. xxxiv. 18. [f] Dan. xii. 7. and Rev. x. 5.

THE like heavy Sentence has the Royal Pſalmiſt denounced againſt every vile Wretch, that indulges himſelf in profane Talking, in Curſing and Execrations. [h] He delighted in curſing, ſays he, and it ſhall happen unto him; it ſhall come into his Bowels like Water, and like Oil into his Bones; it ſhall be unto him as the Cloak that he has upon him, and as the Girdle that he is always girded withal: And therefore, to conclude with thoſe excellent Sayings of the wiſe Son of Syrach, [i] Accuſtom not thy Mouth to ſwearing, neither uſe thyſelf to the naming of the Holy One; for he, that uſeth much ſwearing, ſhall be filled with Iniquity, and the Plague ſhall never depart from his Houſe; and if he ſwear falſely, he ſhall not be innocent, but his Houſe ſhall be full of Calamities: There is a Word, that is cloathed about with Death; God grant that it be not found in the Heritage of Jacob! and profane [h] Swearing and Curſing.

Fourth Commandment.

Remember the Sabbath-day, to keep it holy, &c.

THIS Commandment conſiſts, 1. Of a Precept; and, 2. A Reaſon enforcing it; and the moſt material Points, in our treating of it, will be to ſhew, 1. How far it is of moral Obligation; and, 2. In what Manner it is be obſerved, and ſanctified.

1. OF all the Commandments in the Decalogue, this is the only one, wherein we are bid to remember our Duty: [k] The Reaſon is, becauſe all the other Precepts were written, at firſt, upon the Table of our Hearts, and engraven, as it were, in our very Nature; ſo that, having a connatural Senſe of them upon our Minds, we cannot ſo properly be ſaid to remember, as to feel them, being conſcious to ourſelves of our Duty and Obligation to obſerve them; whereas this is a Precept of a poſitive Nature, not imprinted in Man's Heart, but given to him after he was made, and might therefore be forgotten, without ſuch a Call and Admonition as this to remind us of it. The Diſpute, indeed, among Divines, has been very great, concerning the Nature of this Commandment, ſome affirming, that it is intirely ceremonial, and peculiar to the State of the Jewiſh Church, while others have aſſerted the moral and perpetual Obligation of it, as equally incumbent upon every Chriſtian now. A middle Opinion, however, has prevailed; and 'tis now become the general and received Doctrine, that this Precept is of a mixed Nature, partly moral, and partly ceremonial; that, as to its Subſtance, viz. that God ſhould be ſolemnly and publickly worſhipped, and, at ſome ſet Time more eſpecially, it includes a moral Duty, but, as to its Circumſtances, viz. the Determination of the Time and Manner of performing this Worſhip, it is purely ceremonial, and obliges Chriſtians no farther, than by Parity of Reaſon it may be ſuppoſed to do it. The Nature of this Precept.

[l] THAT we ſhould frequently, and with a grateful and joyful Senſe, reflect upon the glorious Works of God, eſpecially that great and fundamental one, the Creation of the World, wherein the Wonders of his Goodneſs, and Wiſdom, and Power, were ſo illuſtriouſly diſplayed; that we ſhould not be unmindful of the ſpecial Favours of God's Providence to our Country, our Relations, ourſelves, eſpecially ſuch ſignal ones, as that Delivery vouchſafed the Iſraelites from Egyptian Slavery; that we ſhould not ſpend ourſelves and our Time in perpetual carking and labouring about worldly Affairs, but aſſign ſome competent Portion of it, both for the Relaxation of our Minds, and our Attendance on the Concerns of our immortal Souls; that we ſhould allow fit Times of Reſpite and Refreſhment to ſuch, as Divine Providence has placed about us, in the Condition of Servants, that both their Lives may be made more comfortable, and themſelves enjoy the Opportunity of ſerving God, our common Maſter, and regarding the Welfare of their Souls, no leſs precious than our own; and laſtly, that we ſhould ſhew ſome Mercy and Kindneſs even to our very Beaſts, allowing them The Moral Part of it.

 ſome

[g] Mal. iii. 5. [h] Pſal. cix. 17, &c. [i] Eccluſ. xxiii. 9, &c. [k] Beveridge's Explanation of the Church Catechiſm. Barrow, on the Decalogue.

ſome Eaſe and Refreſhment from the painful Drudgeries they undergo for our Sakes: Theſe are, all of them, Things, which Reaſon evidently dictates, and which common Senſe muſt needs admit, as Duties of Piety, Juſtice, and Humanity: And, to ſecure the Performance of theſe, even common Prudence ſeems to ſuggeſt, that ſet Times ſhould be appointed, wherein they may be diſcharged, in a Manner pleaſing and acceptable to God. And accordingly, if we conſult the Practice of the World, we find, that in all wiſe and civil Societies, ſome Proviſion has ever been made, by the Appointment of feſtival Times, for the Obſervation of ſuch Duties; that the Founders of all Laws (according to [m] Seneca) did inſtitute feſtival Days, that Men might publickly be conſtrained to Chearfulneſs; and that the Gods, (according to [n] Plato) pitying Mankind, born to painful Labour, appointed, for an Eaſe and Ceſſation from their Toils, the Returns of feſtival Seaſons.

The Ceremonial.

THUS the Worſhip and Service of God, an Intermiſſion of Labour, to attend it, and the Appointment of proper Times, to perform it in, are the moral Parts of the Sabbath, which every one, both Jew and Gentile, is bound to obſerve: The circumſtantial Determination of the Meaſure and Manner of the Performances; that a ſeventh Day preciſely, rather than a ſixth or an eighth, ſhould be aſſigned, and a total Ceſſation from Labour, both for Man and Beaſt, preſcribed; this is a Matter of poſitive Inſtitution, whoſe only Foundation was in the Will of God, and whoſe Obligation extended to the Jews only; for ſo the Account of it ſeems to imply, [o] The Children of Iſrael ſhall keep the Sabbath, and obſerve it throughout their Generations, for a perpetual Covenant; it is a Sign between me and the Children of Iſrael for ever: [p] For as the Covenant between God and the Iſraelites included none, but ſuch as were of their Nation and Religion; ſo the Sabbath, being a Sign of that Covenant, was to extend no farther (as to the ceremonial Part of it at leaſt) than the Covenant did, and was therefore confined to themſelves only.

No Obligation on Chriſtians as to the Day.

[q] So little did the Apoſtles and firſt Diſciples of Chriſt think themſelves obliged by the ceremonial Part of this Law, that, immediately after his Aſcenſion, they forbore to keep the Sabbath, any longer, upon the ſame Day with the Jews. They held it very reaſonable, indeed, to follow the Example of God himſelf, in ſetting apart one Day in the Week to reſt from wordly Labours, the better to attend upon the Duties of Religion, as, after ſix Days, he reſted from the Works of the Creation; they thought it a great Diſparagement to the Holineſs and Perfection of their Religion, if they did not allot as much Time for God's publick Worſhip, as the Jews did; and, though they did not fulfil the Letter of the Commandment, they accounted themſelves bound by the Intent and Equity of it; and therefore they appointed one Day in ſeven to be kept holy; to be employ'd in Prayers and Praiſes, in hearing and meditating on God's Word, in receiving the Sacraments, and exerciſing all the pious Acts of Charity and Devotion: But they thought fit to alter the Day, from the Jewiſh Sabbath, to the firſt Day of the Week; and this they did upon very good Grounds and Authority.

The Jewiſh Sabbath, why changed.

THE Jewiſh Sabbath was at firſt inſtituted in Memory of God's Creation of the World, but afterwards we find this Reaſon omitted, and another made mention of; [r] Remember that thou waſt a Servant in the Land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence, through a mighty Hand, and a ſtretched-out Arm; therefore the Lord thy God commands thee to keep the Sabbath-day; from whence it is evident, [s] that the Sabbath was to be kept for another Reaſon, beſides that of the Creation, even in Memory of God's delivering his People out of their Bondage, and Slavery in Egypt: Which Deliverance, being a Type of our Redemption by Chriſt, makes it no obſcure Intimation, that when our Redemption ſhould be accompliſhed by him, the Sabbath ſhould be kept in Memory of that. [t] To change an Inſtitution, which, in a great Meaſure, was but ceremonial, was certainly as much in our Saviour's Power, (who for this Reaſon calls himſelf the Lord of the Sabbath) as it was in God's to appoint it at firſt: And if our Saviour had Power to abrogate the old, and inſtitute a new Day, we have Preſumption enough to ſuppoſe that he did ſo, not only [u] from his riſing from the Dead, * from his appearing to his Diſciples, and [x] ſending down the Holy Ghoſt, by which Events he conſecrated this new Day; but (what is our beſt Evidence in this his Affair) from the conſtant Practice of ſuch, as muſt be allowed to underſtand their Maſter's Mind in this Particular beſt, his Apoſtles and immediate Succeſſors, who always made the Day, which is now become the Chriſtian Sabbath, the moſt ſolemn Time of their publick Worſhip and Devotions.

[m] Legum conditores feſtos inſtituerunt dies, ut ad hilaritatem homines publicè cogerentur, tanquam neceſſarium laboribus interponentes Temperamentum. Sen. de Tranq. Ani. [n] De Leg. 2. [o] Exod. xxxi. 16, 17. [p] Towerſon, on the Commandments. [q] Nourſe's Practical Diſcourſe of the Church Homilies. [r] Deut. v. 15. [s] Beveridge, on the Church Catechiſm. [t] Taylor's Practical Catechiſm. [u] Matth. xxviii. 1. Luke xxiv. 1. * John xx. 26. [x] Acts ii. 1.

ON the Sabbath, immediately before the Reſurrection, the Women that attended Chriſt from Galilee, are ſaid [y] to reſt, indeed, according to the Commandment, and, in ſeveral Places, we find, that the Apoſtles frequented the Synagogues on the Jewiſh Sabbath; but, after the Knowledge of the Lord's Reſurrection, 'tis never more ſaid, that they did it according to the Commandment, but only [z] according to Cuſtom, or, as the Manner was. [a] They complied, no doubt, with the Jews, for ſome Time, in many Things, that were really abrogated, to try if they could win them by prudential Condeſcenſions; but when this Time was, in a good Meaſure, expired, and Ignorance of the Liberty, procured by Chriſt, from the ceremonial Part of the Law, became leſs excuſable, then the Jewiſh Sabbath was, by Degrees, declared an antiquated Rite, and the Chriſtian Sabbath univerſally received in its Stead: So univerſally, that we can ſcarce forbear thinking, that it was one of thoſe Precepts, which our bleſſed Saviour, after his Reſurrection, or, at leaſt, the Holy Ghoſt, after his Deſcent, left in the Hands of the Apoſtles, to be tranſmitted to ſucceeding Ages, according to that known Maxim of St Auſtin, [b] That what is held, and always was held, by the Univerſal Church, and was never inſtituted by any Council, is rightly believed to have been delivered by Apoſtolick Authority.

AND as there is no Obligation upon us to keep our Sabbath upon the ſame Day with the Jews; ſo neither are we tied to their ſtrict and rigorous Manner of obſerving it. Our bleſſed Saviour gives us the true Notion of our Duty, with reſpect to this Commandment, when he tells us, that [c] the Sabbath was made for Man, and not Man for the Sabbath. [d] God intended it for our Good, and to be the moſt profitable Part of our whole Time; and therefore we ſhould be careful ſo to employ it, as may beſt promote our true Intereſt and Happineſs. And as the Concerns of our Souls are of infinitely greater Moment to us, than thoſe of this Life, it ſhould, on this Day, be our chief Care and Buſineſs to provide for them; yet not ſo as to forget, that, whilſt we are in the Body, neceſſary Proviſion muſt, at all Times, be made for it; and, likewiſe, as long as we converſe among Men, there will be frequent Need of our charitable Help and Aſſiſtance, which muſt at no Time be neglected, when we have it in our Power to afford it them. In another Place, our Saviour tells the Jews, [e] My Father hitherto worketh, (meaning on the Sabbath-day) and I alſo work thereon; and therefore, as God ceaſeth not, on the Sabbath-day, to exerciſe the Works of Providence, but then, as at other Times, looketh after the Support and Suſtenance of all his Creatures; on that Day, as well as any other, openeth his Hand, and filleth all Things living with Plenteouſneſs: So ſhould we, on our Sabbath, provide thoſe Things which are neceſſary for ourſelves and Families, and all thoſe that have their Dependence upon us. For Works of Charity, and of Neceſſity, in us, anſwer to the Works of Providence in God, and his carrying on the one upon the Sabbath, is a ſufficient Warrant and Encouragement to us, that we ſhould never intermit, or neglect the other. 'Tis Part of our Chriſtian Liberty then, wherewith Chriſt has made us free, that we are not obliged to the Obſervation of the Sabbath with all that Strictneſs, that was incumbent on the Jews; but yet the Equity of the Precept requires thus much of us, that we ſhould not follow the Works of our ordinary Employ, much leſs run into a Courſe of Riot and Exceſs on the Day, which God has ſanctified. Pride or Wantonneſs, or extravagant Eating or Drinking, and what commonly attends it, [f] fooliſh Talking or Jeſting, which, the Apoſtle ſays, are not convenient, do ill become a Chriſtian at any Time; but the Unſeemlineſs of them is greateſt, and their Guilt is much

Or, as to the Manner of obſerving it.

[y] Luke xxiii. 56. [z] Acts xvii. 2.

[a] 'Tis true, that, for ſome Time, in the Eaſtern Parts, Saturday was kept holy; yet this was merely for the Sake of the Judaizing Converts, and, at the ſame Time, the Lord's-Day was alſo obſerved: But, in the Weſtern Churches, Saturday was not obſerved at all, as a Feſtival; yea, it was ſometimes made a Faſt-Day, and Sunday was the only Day, that was kept holy, as a Day that ſucceeded in the Place of the Jewiſh Sabbath, and in Remembrance of Chriſt's Reſurrection. Purſuant to this, we may obſerve, that the Apoſtles did not only make this the Day of their religious Aſſemblies, Acts xx. 7. But that Ignatius, the Contemporary, as well as Succeſſor of the Apoſtles, in his Epiſtle to the Magneſians, exhorteth them to lay aſide the Obſervation of the Sabbath, and to keep the Lord's-Day for a Feſtival, wherein our Life roſe with Chriſt: And Juſtin Martyr, the neareſt to him and the Apoſtles, tells us, that, upon Sunday, Chriſtians aſſembled together out of all Cities and Villages for Divine Service, which conſiſted in reading the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament, preaching, praying, and other ſuch religious Exerciſes, Apol. 2. See Towerſon, on the Commandments. [b] Quod univerſa tenet Eccleſia, nec conſiliis inſtitutum, ſed ſemper retentum eſt, non niſi Authoritate Apoſtolicâ traditum rectiſſimè creditur. [c] Mark ii. 27. [d] Nourſe's Practical Diſcourſe on the Church Homilies. [e] John v. 17. [f] Eph. v. 4.

much aggravated, if Men chuſe the Lord's-day to indulge themſelves in them: For whether it be conſider'd as a Memorial of God's Goodneſs in the Creation, or of his infinite Mercy in the Redemption of us, the Expoſtulation, which Moſes makes upon a like Occaſion, will be very appoſite to ſuch impious Prophaners of it; [g] O ye fooliſh People and unwiſe, do ye thus requite the Lord, who bought you, and him, who made you, and eſtabliſhed you? Which leads us, in the next Place, to obſerve,

The Jewiſh Manner of obſerving it, as to Reſt.

2. IN what Manner it is to be obſerved and ſanctified. The Jewiſh Sabbath was ordered to be kept with great Strictneſs from Work and bodily Labour; [h] Thou ſhalt not do any Work, thou, nor thy Son, nor thy Daughter, thy Man-ſervant, nor thy Maid-ſervant, nor the Cattle, nor the Stranger that is within thy Gates; and the Profanation of it (which conſiſted in doing any little Thing, even to the kindling of a Fire in order to dreſs their Meat) was accounted a Sort of Sacrilege, and the Offender was commanded to be ſtoned to Death. Nay, ſo great was the Reſt enjoined them on this Day, that they ſeemed not only to be reſtrained from all Kind of Labour, but even from moving from their Places; [i] For, abide ye (ſays God, when he appointed the Obſervation of it) every one in his Place; let no Man go out of his Place on the ſeventh Day: For though there is no Doubt, but that this was [k] to admit of ſome Relaxation, otherwiſe it would have hindered them from reſorting to the ſolemn Aſſemblies; yet it is apparent enough, from the End of its Inſtitution, [l] as well as the Practice of the Jews hereupon, that there was ſomething more than ordinary intended, even as to their not ſtirring from their Habitations.

Why enjoined: viz. for the Sak: of Reſt,

Now if it be enquired, for what Reaſon God enjoined the Jews ſo very ſtrict a Reſt on the Sabbath-day, the Reply may be, in the Words of Juſtin Martyr [m], that he did it, becauſe of their irregular Diſpoſitions, and the Hardneſs of their Hearts. They were a People extremely addicted to all the Methods of thriving in the World; to this Purpoſe they inured their Domeſticks, their Dependents, and Animals fit for Service, to very hard Labour all the Week. [n] Nay, ſince every ſeventh Year brought with it a general Releaſe from Servitude, the Covetouſneſs of their Maſters, as they ſaw that Year approaching, would have quite deſtroyed their Servants with perpetual Toil, had it not been for the happy Intervention of this Day of Reſt, every Week: And, [o] therefore, in Compaſſion to theſe, as well as to take off the others Thoughts from the World, and turn them, in ſome Meaſure, upon ſpiritual Objects, God ſtrictly prohibited them all bodily Labour or Drudgery on the Sabbath, and even ſuch diſtant Appearances of them, as are not neceſſary to be obſerved by Perſons, under different Circumſtances, and poſſeſſed of a better Diſpoſition. This Reflection will be farther confirmed, if we obſerve how often the Jews are reprimanded by the Prophets for the Profanation of the Sabbath, for polluting it, and for exacting their own Labours in it; as if the Work of the ſix Days had not been ſufficient to ſatisfy their worldly Ends, and to provide for the common Occaſions of Life. There is a Paſſage to this Purpoſe, in the Prophet Amos, which plainly ſhews, that the People thought either the Returns of the Sabbath too frequent, or the Manner preſcribed for the Obſervation of it too ſevere: Hear this, ſaith the Prophet [p], O ye, that ſwallow up the Needy, even to make the Poor of the Land to fail, ſaying, when will the new Moon be gone, that we may ſell Corn; and the Sabbath, that we may ſet forth Wheat, that we may buy the Poor for Silver, and the Needy for a Pair of Shoes? And from hence we may gather, that the Deſign of God, in giving ſo ſtrict an Injunction concerning the Sabbath, was to cure this worldly and avaritious Spirit in the Jews, or at leaſt to prevent their cruel Uſage of the poorer Sort; and, by ſuch Intervals of Eaſe and Relaxation, to enable them to live with ſome Sort of Comfort in their mean Condition.

and religious Offices.

BUT the Ceſſation from Labour was not all. [q] The Jews, tho' they had no expreſs Order, in this Commandment, concerning any natural or moral Services, they were to perform to God; yet were themſelves ſagacious enough to underſtand ſuch Duties couched in the Sanctification of the Day. Accordingly, in every Place of their Habitation, they ſettled Synagogues and Oratories, whereunto they reſorted at ſuch Times, [g] Deut. xxxii. 6. [h] Exod. xx. 10. [i] Exod. xvi. 29. [k] This Precept, the Jews ſay, is not violated, if a Man did not go above two thouſand Cubits from the City, where he dwelt, which they called a Sabbath-day's Journey. This was the Diſtance between the Ark and the Camp, when they marched, and probably the ſame Proportion was obſerved, when they reſted, and is commonly computed to be about the Space of a Mile. Now, if (according to their Manner of arguing) they were allowed to go from their Tents to the Tabernacle, to worſhip upon the Sabbath-day, which was the Diſtance of two thouſand Cubits; it could be no Breach of the Sabbath to go ſo far, upon that Day, on any other Occaſion, Lewis's Antiquities of the Hebrew Republick. [l] Acts i. 12. [m] Διὰ τὰς ἀνομίας, καὶ τὴν σκληροκαρδίαν. Dial. cum Tryph. [n] Le Clerc's Commentary. [o] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [p] Amos viii. 4, &c. [q] Barrow, on the Decalogue.

Times, to offer up their Devotions to God; to hear the Scribes read and expound the Law; and to join in the Offices of Prayer and Thankſgiving; and for their Encouragement herein, the Prophet is directed to acquaint them, [s] If thou turn away thy Foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy Pleaſure on my holy Day, and call the Sabbath a Delight, the Holy of the Lord, honourable, and ſhalt honour him, not doing thine own Ways, nor finding thine own Pleaſure, nor ſpeaking thine own Words, (which is the Form preſcribed for the Obſervation of the Sabbath-day) then ſhalt thou delight thyſelf in the Lord, and I will cauſe thee to ride upon the high Places of the Earth, and feed thee with the Heritage of Jacob thy Father; for the Mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it.

The Chriſtian's Obligation to obſerve the Lord's Day.

WE, indeed, who live under an eaſier Diſpenſation, are happily exempted from the rigid Obſervation of the Sabbath; [u] We are not to be judged by any Man, as the Apoſtle tells us, for Meat, or Drink, or in Reſpect of an holy Day, or of the New Moon, or of the Sabbath-days, which are a Shadow of the Things to come; [x] but ſtill, as to all Things, relating to the Honour of God, and the Advancement of true Piety and Holineſs, we are under greater and ſtricter Obligations, than the Jews themſelves were: So that, though we Chriſtians are not bound to keep the Sabbath upon the ſame Day with them, or in the ſame Manner, that they did; yet, ſince we have one Day in the Week, appointed for a religious Reſt, we ought to anſwer the Ends of it, and make it a Day of Reſt from our ordinary Labours, for our better attending upon the ſolemn Worſhip of God, and employing ourſelves in the Exerciſe of all Things, which pertain to ſpiritual Life and Godlineſs.

And Manner of do ingit.

[y] How zealous and punctual the primitive Chriſtians were, to ſanctify this Day with their publick Devotions, we have the general Suffrage of all Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. They did not think it enough, to read, and pray, and praiſe God at home, but made Conſcience of appearing in the publick Aſſemblies, from which nothing but Sickneſs, and an abſolute Neceſſity, did ever detain them. Yea, and when Perſecution at any Time forced them to keep cloſe, yet, if it were poſſible, they would aſſemble in the Night, or early in the Morning; and no ſooner was there the leaſt Mitigation, but they preſently returned to their open Duty, and publickly met all together, ſo that a Sabbath, without publick Worſhip, ſeemed unſanctified. When therefore this Day of the Lord approaches, (to conclude with a few Directions concerning it) that we may thus keep it holy, and make it a religious Reſt, (according to the preſent Intendment of the Law) it will become us [z] to riſe as early to the Service of God, as we were wont on other Days, to our Worldly Employments; to betake ourſelves in ſecret to the Supplication of the divine Aid and Benediction; to raiſe our Affections to a ſuitable Degree of Love and Reverence, by Reading and Meditation; and to allow as little Time, as may be, to other neceſſary or convenient Avocations from ſuch Exerciſes, until we repair from our Cloſets to the Church. When we are come to the Houſe of the Lord, (which ſhould always be at the Beginning of Service, and with our whole Family attending us) proſtrating ourſelves before the Divine Majeſty, to implore his Bleſſing upon our Endeavours, we muſt join in the publick Worſhip, in Prayers and Praiſes with all Fervour, in hearing the Word read and preached, with all Diligence and Attention; and, in receiving the holy Sacrament, if it be adminiſtered, with all affectionate Thankfulneſs. When the publick Worſhip is done, and we are returned from the ſolemn Aſſembly, we muſt not think ourſelves diſcharged from any other Duty: Our Children and Servants require then our Care, who, on this Day eſpecially, are to be inſtructed in the Principles of Religion, have their Proficiency enquired into, and themſelves adviſed, and encouraged ſeverally, according to their Needs and Capacities, in their reſpective Duties. When this is done, we muſt ſpend the reſt of the Day in religious and charitable Offices; in a loving and Chriſtian Communion with one another; in a thankful Enjoyment of the good Creatures of God; and finally, ſhut up the whole with Prayer and Thankſgiving; with imploring Forgiveneſs for all the Failings of the Day, and begging that our imperfect Services may be accepted for the perfect Righteouſneſs, and meritorious Interceſſion of Chriſt Jeſus.

[s] Acts xv. 21. [t] Iſa. lviii. 13, 14. [u] Col. ii. 16, 17. [x] Nourſe's Practical Diſcourſe on the Church Homilies. [y] Cave's Primitive Chriſtianity. [z] Newcomb's Catech. Sermons, Vol. I. and Towerſon, on the Commandments.

SECT. II.

TABLE II. Fifth Commandment.

Honour thy Father and thy Mother, &c.

THIS is the firſt Commandment of the Second Table, and is very properly ſet here in the Front of all; for as Honouring of God was the firſt Commandment of the former Table, ſo is it fit, that the Honouring of our Parents ſhould have the Preheminence in the latter; ſince, next to God himſelf, (according [a] to the Senſe of the wiſeſt Law-givers and Inſtructers) our Parents are chiefly to be reſpected and obeyed. And therefore the Senſe and Meaning of honouring our Parents, together with the Nature of the Promiſe annexed to the Duty, will be the two Things to be conſidered, in the Explanation of this Precept.

Duties of Children to Parents.

I. [b] HONOUR ſignifies a great many Things, and takes its Senſe, eſpecially, from the Perſon it relates to: To honour God is one Thing, to honour the King another, and to honour our Equals or Inferiors is a different Thing from all the reſt: And therefore the Word muſt not be taken in the ſame Senſe, wherever we meet it, but the Party, to whom it is addreſſed, muſt determine its Meaning and Extent. Since then the Intent of the Commandment is to ſecure the Duty of Children to Parents, all the ſeveral Duties of Love, of Reſpect, of Obedience, and of Support, which Children owe to their Parents, are comprehended in the Word Honour.

Love, and how to be promoted.

1. FIRST then, we are commanded to love our Parents. [c] But becauſe, properly ſpeaking, it is not in our Power (whatever we may think) to love or hate, to hope or fear, when or what, or whom we will, but according as we apprehend the Thing or Perſon deſirable and lovely; by being commanded to love our Parents, we are more eſpecially to take ſuch Courſes and Conſiderations, as may increaſe our natural Affection to them, and to avoid all ſuch Things, as may any Ways diminiſh it. How far the Conſideration of their being, under God, the Authors and Originals of our Life and Exiſtence, may contribute to the exciting of this Affection, is not ſo eaſy to determine; becauſe Life, according as it is happy or miſerable, is differently to be repreſented: But Parental Love, which exerts itſelf in a conſtant Care and Preſervation of us, is a real Good, which deſerves to be repaid with all the Love we can. 'Tis this, that ſupplies all the Wants of helpleſs Infancy, ſecures from all the Hazards of heedleſs Childhood, and giddy and unthinking Youth; that ſhapes the Body, keeps the ſeveral Limbs in Order, and makes the Perſon beautiful and comely. 'Tis this, that informs the Mind, and regulates the Manners, that trains up the Reaſon, that exerciſes the Memory, that inſtructs them to argue and underſtand their little Affairs, and takes Care to educate, and fit them for great Matters. 'Tis this, that brings them firſt to God in Baptiſm, and keeps them afterwards in the Ways of Goodneſs and Religion, by inſtilling into them wiſe and virtuous Principles, by reminding them conſtantly of their ſeveral Duties, encouraging them in Good by Favours and Rewards, and reclaiming them from Evil by Reproofs and Corrections [d].

THESE and a thouſand more are the Ways, which Parents take to make their Children happy; beſides thoſe endleſs and innumerable Labours, Watchings, and Sollicitations, which conſume their whole Life, to make an handſome Proviſion for them of the good Things of this Life. So that, whatever Benefits can be the Ground and Foundation of Love in Children, the Care and Love of Parents abundantly afford them; and therefore they are obliged to take the Remembrance of theſe frequently into Conſideration, in order to excite and ſtir them up to love their Parents, who have done ſo great Things for them; who, next under God, were not only the Authors of their Being, but of their Well-being likewiſe, and preſent Happineſs.

2. AN-

[a] Ἀθανάτους μὲν πρῶτα Θεὺς, &c. Pythag. Aur. Car. Πρῶτα Θεὸν τίμα μηδάποτε δὲ σεῖο γονῆας. Phocyl. [b] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [c] Fleetwood's Relative Duties. [d] Ibid.

2. ANOTHER Duty, which Children owe to their Parents, is Reſpect, i. e. all external Honour and Civility, whether in Words or Actions; by Virtue of which, they are obliged to be ſubmiſſive in their Behaviour, and mannerly and dutiful in their Speeches and Anſwers to them; to ſay Things honourable and commendable of them, to pry as little into their Failings and Infirmities as they can themſelves, and to extenuate and conceal them as much from others. And for this there is ſo much Reaſon and Decency in Nature, that it ſhocks us unavoidably to hear one reproach his Parents with Vices or Infirmities, though what he ſays be true, unleſs it be done with great Concern and Tenderneſs, with Grief and Pity; but when it is done with Contempt and Pleaſure of telling, we cannot help abhorring ſuch Impiety: For the Hearts of all Men go along with Noah, in laying Puniſhment upon Cham, for his unnatural and profane Deriſion, and love the Memory of thoſe Sons, that would not ſee themſelves, nor ſuffer others to be Witneſſes of, the Miſcarriages of their Father. Reſpect,

THAT therefore Children may diſcharge this Part of their Duty better, and in every Geſture, Word, and Action, ſhew all due Honour and Reſpect to their Parents; as it is partly in their Parents Power, ſo ſhould it be their Care and Concern to promote it. And to this Purpoſe, they muſt be careful how they live and behave in the Sight of their Children; for if they make themſelves vile and cheap in their Eyes by too much Familiarity, by light and indiſcreet Carriage, they will in vain expect the Reverence and Reſpect, that is due to their Character. The Foundation of Reſpect is ſome ſuppoſed Excellence and Worth, and, in Conſequence of this, ſome Kind of Superiority; but when Parents either admit their Children to an Equality, or make them privy to their Follies and Indiſcretions, they do, in Effect, invite Contempt. And therefore all due Care ſhould be taken, that the domeſtick Differences, the idle and unſeemly Quarrels and Debates, the ſimple and unkind Words and Actions, which too commonly paſs between Parents, ſhould be concealed and hidden from Children; for they obſerve and treaſure up theſe Follies, and ſecretly, at leaſt, ſide with the one, and learn to hate and deſpiſe the other, or entertain, too ſoon, a mean Opinion of both, which deſtroys all Manner of Eſteem and dutiful Obſervance. how to be procured.

3. ANOTHER Duty which Children owe their Parents, and without which, all their Honour and Reſpect is mere Shew and Formality, is Obedience to their lawful Commands. I ſay, lawful Commands, [c] otherwiſe we have our Saviour's Warrant not to obey them, [f] If any one love Father and Mother, more than me, he is not worthy of me; which, in another Place, we find expreſſed thus, [g] If any one hate not his Father and Mother, he cannot be my Diſciple: The Meaning of which is, that God is to be loved and obeyed above all, and that we may very juſtly withdraw our Obedience from our Parents, rather than abandon our Duty to God. Thus, if Parents ſhould be ſo wickedly inclined, as to command their Children to lye, to ſteal, to do Violence and Injuſtice, &c. the Children are not at Liberty to obey, becauſe they have an antecedent Obligation, and are tied by God to Truth, and Honeſty, and Juſtice. [h] Children obey your Parents in all Things; for this is well-pleaſing unto the Lord, ſays St Paul, in one Place; but then he explains himſelf in another, [i] Children obey your Parents in the Lord; for this is right, i. e. according to God's Commandment and Will; for to obey them againſt God, can neither be right nor pleaſing, and ſo we ſhould have underſtood him, had he not given us this Explication. Obedience, when to be refuſed.

AND as we are not bound to obey our Parents, when they command us any Thing contrary to the Laws of God, ſo neither are we, when their Injunctions are contrary to the Laws of the Land: The Reaſon is, becauſe the Authority, which enacts theſe Laws, is ſuperior to that of our Parents; nor may any one's private Good be conſidered in Competition with the publick. If a Father therefore ſhould command his Son to betray his Country, to ſet the Capital on fire, or be any Way inſtrumental to the Overthrow of the Conſtitutions of the Kingdom, he muſt not ſo far honour his Father, as to obey any ſuch Commands: But then, even when he diſobeys, he muſt do it with great Modeſty and Tenderneſs; not with Upbraidings and Reproaches, not with high and ſcornful Refuſals, but by declining and avoiding ſuch Commands, with all the gentle Arts, and Methods of Submiſſion poſſible; for even in a righteous Cauſe, the Language of Children muſt be humble to their Parents.

AND as our Obedience to Parents is to ceaſe, where the Authority of God, or the Government has laid a Prohibition, ſo it is ſuppoſed not to be required, where the Thing, under Command, carries an Invincible Antipathy to our Inclinations. The common common Inſtance of this Kind is in the Caſe of Marriage, which being a State and Condition, upon which the Happineſs or Miſery of Life depends, cannot be enterprized with any Hopes of Felicity, without a real Affection on the one Side, and a good Aſſurance of it on the other. But now when a Parent, overlooking all this, will enjoin a Child, upon mere Motives of Advantage, to marry, where there is no Foundation of Love, nor Proſpect of Content, 'tis hardly to be thought, that ſuch Inſtances are to be complied with. Parents, indeed, are ſuppoſed to have a great Hand in this Affair: [k] The Examples in Scripture, as well as [l] the Laws of moſt Nations favour their Direction in this Caſe; and therefore they are to take all due Care, to ſee their Children well diſpoſed of, according to their Age, Quality, and Tempers, and not let the Proſpect of Fortune and Eſtate preponderate all other Conſiderations of Form and Favour, Birth and Education, Virtue and good Qualities; and when they have done this, the Children are to obey, as far as poſſibly they can, and give up the little Objections of Fancy to the more mature Deliberations of their Parents: But when, on the contrary, Parents offer to their Children what they cannot poſſibly like, and what all wiſe and conſiderate People cannot but diſapprove, there is no Doubt to be made, but that, in ſuch a Caſe, Children may refuſe, and, if their Refuſal be made with Decency and Humility, that it will not fall under the Head of ſinful Diſobedience.

[c] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [f] Matth. x. 37. [g] Luke xiv. 26. [h] Col. iii. 20. [i] Eph. vi. 1.

And how to be promoted.

WITH Reſerve to theſe, and ſuch like Caſes then, our Obedience to Parents is founded upon their greater Knowledge and Experience, the Senſe of their Love and good Intentions towards us, and their earneſt and daily Sollicitude for our Welfare. And therefore, if Children, when any ſevere Injunction, that thwarts their natural Inclinations, comes from their Parents, would but reaſon thus with themſelves: [m] "Theſe are the Counſels and Commands of People, that have lived a great while "longer in the World, than I: I am but of Yeſterday, and know little; but ſure "my Parents have not lived ſo long for nothing: Their Age has taught them Expe"rience, and the Wiſdom and Knowledge, which commonly attends it, has qua"lified them for Counſellors: And as they are fit to adviſe me, ſo I have all the "Security imaginable of their Affection and good Will, nor can I ſuſpect the leaſt "Deſign, they can have upon me, unleſs it be to do me good, and to prevent my "falling into any Miſcarriage, which I find affects them, rather more than it does "myſelf. They have made me their Pride and Glory: They have placed all their "Happineſs and Content in my Welfare; and therefore I cannot but believe that "theſe Counſels and Commands are the beſt, that (conſidering all Circumſtances) "they can give, and the ſafeſt for me to follow:" If Children, I ſay, would but reaſon thus with themſelves, and, at the ſame Time, reflect upon the Ties and Obligations they have, to be obedient to their Parents, the Reaſonableneſs, the Pleaſure, and Security of being ſo, the Approbation of all good People, and the Bleſſing of God, that goes along with it, they would ſoon bring themſelves to a ready Diſpoſition of Obedience, even tho' there were ſome Things, not ſo agreeable to their own Deſires in what their Parents might enjoin.

Support.

4. THERE is one Duty more included in the Commandment, and that is the Support and Suſtenance of our Parents, or our adminiſtring to them in their Wants and Weakneſſes. [n] For conſidering the Care and Pains, which our Father, and the ſleepleſs Nights and homely Offices, which our Mother underwent for us; how tender they both were of us in our Infancy, when we were incapable of helping ourſelves, and how liberal of their Subſtance, to give us an Education, and ſettle us in a Station of Life, to the utmoſt of their Abilities; we cannot but think it incumbent on us, to requite their Care, and [o] make them a ſuitable Return (as the Apoſtle words it) when either Poverty, which is an heavy Load, and requires our Support, or old Age, which is a ſecond Childhood, and requires our Attendance, comes upon them. Upon the whole, [p] Parents, in Reſpect to their Children, do bear the ſignal Stamp and Image of God himſelf, not only as he is their Maker, but as he is their Preſerver and Benefactor;

[k] The Examples of the Patriarch Iſaac, Gen. xxiv. and Jacob, Gen. xxviii. who were directed by their Parents in their Marriage; and that Text in Numb. xxx. 3, 4. If a Maid vow a Vow unto the Lord, and bind herſelf by a Bond, and her Father ſhall hold his Peace at her, her Vow ſhall ſtand; but if her Father diſallow her, in the Day that he heareth her, not any of her Vows ſhall ſtand, ſeems to intimate, that the Parent's Conſent ſhould be obtained, in order to the Marriage-Vow, which is the moſt ſolemn of all. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [l] The Laws of the Greeks and Romans, two of the wiſeſt People in the World, and the Canons and Judgments of the beſt Writers, make the Conſent of Parents requiſite: Nay, the Canons of our own Church ſay expreſsly, [Canon 101.] that it is not lawful for any Children (unleſs arrived to the Age of 21) to make a Marriage-Contract, without the Conſent of their Parents, and, in Caſe they are dead, of their Guardians and Governors. [m] Fleetwood's Relative Duties. [n] Tomſon, on the Commandments. [o] 1 Tim. v. 4. ἀμοιβὰς ἀποδιδόναι. [p] Edwards, ibid.

factor; and therefore we may obſerve [q], that as the Duties to other Men are termed Kindneſs, or Charity, or Courteſy, or Liberality, &c. thoſe towards our Parents in every Language (I ſuppoſe) are ſtiled Piety, which implies ſomething Divine in the Object of them, and denotes, that the Offences of Children, in this Reſpect, are grievouſly inhanced; that to ſlight our Parents is more than Unkindneſs; to refuſe them Succour, is more than Uncharitableneſs; to be unmannerly to them, is more than Diſcourteſy; and, in their Neceſſity, to be illiberal, is more than ſordid Avarice; 'tis an high Impiety, and Flagitiouſneſs againſt Heaven; [r] For he that forſaketh his Father is a Blaſphemer; and he that angereth his Mother is curſed of God; but he that honoureth his Father ſhall have long Life. Which brings us,

II. To the Nature of that Encouragement, which God has annexed to the Performance of this Commandment, that thy Days may be long in the Land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee. Now that this Promiſe was peculiar to the Children of Iſrael is evident, from its being limited to the Land of Canaan, where they only were to inhabit; and therefore, from hence, it cannot in the leaſt be concluded, either that obedient Children ſhall always inherit long Life, or that they, who arrive at old Age, have therefore been obedient Children, ſince every Day's Experience ſhews the contrary: But the Encouragement which Children have from hence is this,—That if long Life be moſt convenient for them, (all Circumſtances conſidered) they may expect it; but if it will not prove a Bleſſing, (as of itſelf it ſeldom does) then is not God unfaithful to his Promiſe, if the beſt and moſt obedient Children are tranſlated betimes, into that better and heavenly Country, whereof the Land of Promiſe was confeſſedly but a poor Type and Shadow: And therefore we find the Son of Syrach exhorting Children to honour and obſerve their Parents from Motives of an higher Conſideration, than what are promiſed the Jews: [s] My Son, help thy Father in his Age, and grieve him not, as long as he liveth; and if his Underſtanding fail, have Patience, and deſpiſe him not, when thou art in thy full Strength; for the relieving of thy Father will not be forgotten; in the Day of thy Affliction it ſhall be remembered, and make thy Sins melt away, as the Ice in the fair warm Weather. By Parity of Reaſon, we might reduce to this Commandment our Obligation to honour all thoſe, who perform ſuch beneficial Offices to us, as we receive from our natural Parents; thoſe, who afford us Maintenance or Education; thoſe, who inſtruct and adviſe us; ſuch as our Governors and Magiſtrates, whether Civil or Eccleſiaſtical, our Patrons and Benefactors, our Tutors and Schoolmaſters, but eſpecially our faithful Friends: But as we ſhall have a proper Opportunity to treat of theſe Relative Duties ſeparately, we ſhall only obſerve, at this Time, what this Commandment is more immediately ſuppoſed to imply, viz. the reciprocal Duties of Parents towards their Children.

The Encouragement to this Duty.

1. Now, one great Duty incumbent upon Parents, after the tender and careful Nurſing of their Children, (which is properly the Mother's Buſineſs, and muſt not, without Sickneſs or Inability, be neglected) is to teach and inſtruct them in the Laws of God, and in the Ways of Religion. [t] This Duty God has particularly charged upon his own People, ſpeaking of the Laws which he had given them; [u] Thou ſhalt teach them diligently unto thy Children, and thou ſhalt talk of them when thou ſitteſt in thine Houſe, and when thou walkeſt by the Way, when thou lieſt down, and when thou riſeſt up: And that this Work ought to be begun very early, even upon the firſt Budding and Appearance of Reaſon and Underſtanding in them, the Prophet hath informed us, [*] Whom ſhall he teach Knowledge? Whom ſhall he make to underſtand Doctrine? Them that are weaned from the Milk, and drawn from the Breaſt; for Precept muſt be upon Precept, Precept upon Precept, Line upon Line, Line upon Line, here a little, and there a little. Nor is the Goſpel, in this Particular, leſs preſſing than the Law: [x] Fathers, provoke not your Children to Wrath, but bring them up in the Nurture and Admonition of the Lord, i. e. in a literal Senſe, bring them up in the Chriſtian Religion: [y] Teach them their Duty, what they are to believe, and what to practiſe: Inſtruct them in the Knowledge of God, and of Jeſus Chriſt: Shew them in what Condition they are by Nature, and to what they are advanced by Grace: Let them know, that without believing in Chriſt, they can reap no Benefit from his meritorious Undertakings; that without Holineſs there can be no Happineſs; and that therefore they muſt be careful to keep a good Conſcience towards God and Man, and, by a blameleſs Converſation, to adorn the Doctrine of the Goſpel. [z] Above all, inform, and endeavour to convince them, that there is a Life after Death, wherein Men ſhall

Duties of Parents to their Children.

Inſtruction.

[q] Barrow, on the Decalogue. [r] Eccluſ. iii. 16. [s] Ibid. ver. 12, &c. [t] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I.
[u] Deut. vi. 7. [*] Iſa. xxviii. 9, 10. [x] Eph. vi. 4. [y] Fleetwood, on the Relative Duties. [z] Tillotſon, ibid.

receive from God a mighty and eternal Reward, or a terrible and endleſs Puniſhment, according as they have done, or neglected their Duty in this Life; and [a] therefore urge it upon them, as an undeniable Truth, that if they live unholy Lives, they ſhall die miſerably; and that, though their Lives be never ſo long and proſperous, yet, if they die in their Sins, it would be better, far better, for them they had never been born.

AND as it is the Buſineſs of Parents, to inſtil into their Childrens Minds the Principles of Religion; ſo ſhould it be their Care to frame their Lives, according to the Rules and Precepts of it: [b] To train them up in the Exerciſe of Obedience and Modeſty, of Diligence and Sincerity, of Tenderneſs and Humanity, as the general Diſpoſitions to Religion; to accuſtom them to the Government of their Paſſions and Tongues, as the Foundation of it; and to inure them to the Practice of Piety and Devotion towards God, of Sobriety and Chaſtity with Regard to themſelves, and of Juſtice and Charity towards all Men, as the principal Parts of it.

Reproof and Correction.

2. ANOTHER Duty, incumbent upon Parents, is to reprove and correct their Children, when they do amiſs: For ſo the wiſe King has determined the Matter; [c] The Rod and Reproof giveth Wiſdom, but a Child, left to himſelf, bringeth his Mother to Shame; where he mentions the Mother emphatically, becauſe ſhe, many Times, is moſt faulty on the Side of fond Indulgence. The Apoſtle, indeed, enjoins Parents, [d] not to provoke their Children to Wrath; but where there is a manifeſt Hazard of their falling into wicked Courſes, there they are not to ſtand conſidering, whether what is proper to reclaim them, and prevent their Ruin, ought to be applied. [e] Such a Reſtraint, Reproof, Admonition, or Correction, as is in Reaſon and all Probability likely to procure the Amendment of Children, tho' it will certainly provoke them to all the Anger and Impatience poſſible, is not here adviſed to be forborne; but only ſuch a conſtant, rigorous, and auſtere Treatment, as makes Children look upon their Parents as their Tyrants, and accordingly reſent their Uſage of them. 'Tis ſaid indeed of Adonijah, the Son of David, [f] that his Father had not diſpleaſed him at any Time, in ſaying, why haſt thou done ſo? But, as David himſelf had ſufficient Reaſon to repent of ſuch Indulgence, his Example can be but a bad Precedent to other Parents, unleſs their Children behave ſo, as not to need any Check or Reproof. His Son Solomon was a great deal wiſer than his Father; and he adviſes Parents never to regard the Cries, the Pain, and Grief of their Children under their Puniſhments, when there was juſt Occaſion, and when they were in Danger of Miſcarriage; [g] for he that ſpareth the Rod, ſaith he, hateth his Son, but he that loveth him, chaſteneth him betimes; he chaſteneth him, while there is Hope, and lets not his Soul ſpare for his crying.

Errors in too much Lenity.

THERE is a Lenity then to our Children that is culpable; and, in caſe of a wilful and heinous Sin, eſpecially if it be exemplary, and of publick Influence, we muſt not uſe Mildneſs. [h] To rebuke gently, upon ſuch an Occaſion, is rather to countenance the Fault: It ſeems to argue, that we are not ſenſible enough of its Enormity, and have not a due Diſlike and Deteſtation of it: It looks like old Eli's Reproofs to his Sons, even when they were become ſcandalous to every-body elſe; [i] Why do you ſuch Things; for I hear of your evil-dealing by all the People? Nay, my Sons, for it is no good Report that I hear, you make the Lord's People to tranſgreſs: And, as this was a Rebuke of no Proportion to their Crimes, God accordingly reſents it, in the Revelation he made to Samuel; [k] I will judge his Houſe for ever, for the Iniquity which he knoweth, becauſe his Sons made themſelves vile, and he reſtrained them not; nor ſhall the Iniquity of Eli's Houſe be purged with Sacrifice or Offering for ever.

Too much Severity.

THERE is an Error, on the other Hand, which Parents often incur in the Education and Government of their Children, and that is, too much Rigour and Severity. In the Matter of Reproof and Correction, Parents are allowed indeed to do that with their Children, which they may not do to other People; but 'tis always upon this Preſumption, that what they do will tend to their Benefit. For this Reaſon the Laws of God and Man have left Children to their Parents Diſcretion, and will not puniſh them for doing that to them, which would be puniſhed, if done to Strangers; but neither do the Laws of God and Man allow Parents to do any Thing truly injurious to their Children, nor does Nature indulge them in ſuch Power. [l] She only gives them Power to do them all the Good they can, and allows them the Liberty of hurting and afflicting them only for a Time, in order to their Amendment: And therefore where where a Parent's Conſcience tells him, that the Affliction, he is laying upon his Child, is neither deſigned, nor likely to do him any Good, it tells him, at the ſame Time, he has no Authority to do it; it tells him, he is unnatural in doing it; and tho' no human Laws take Cognizance of ſuch Severity, (unleſs the Commonwealth be found to ſuffer by it) yet the Man cannot chuſe but know, that he is cruelly injurious all the while, and uſurps a Power, which does not naturally belong to him. A Parent therefore muſt be very careful, that he miſtake not the Silence of God's Word, nor the Permiſſion of human Laws, nor the Dictates of his own ſevere and rugged Temper for the Power and Authority, which Nature gives him; for he may be unnatural to his Children, tho' God's Word preſcribes him no Rule, how far he may go; tho' human Laws will allow of what he does, and his own Temper prompts him to it.

[a] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [b] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [c] Prov. xxix. 15. [d] Eph. vi. 4. [e] Fleetwood, on the Relative Duties. [f] 1 Kings i. 6. [g] Prov. xiii. 24.—xix. 18. [h] Tillotſon, ibid. [i] 1 Sam. ii. 23, 24. [k] Ibid. iii. 13, 14. [l] Fleetwood, ibid.

ABOVE all, he muſt have a ſtrict Guard upon himſelf, that, when the Nature of any Crime calls for Chaſtiſement, he does not correct his Child in a Paſſion; for this will look more like Revenge, than Good-will, and exaſperate the Offender, rather than reform him. [m] The firſt Experiment, proper to be made upon Children, ſhould be to allure them to their Duty, and, by reaſonable Inducements, to gain them to the Love of Goodneſs, by Praiſe and Reward, and ſometimes, by Shame and Diſgrace; and where this will do, there will be no Occaſion to proceed to Severity, eſpecially to great Severities, which are very unſuitable to human Nature. A Mixture of prudent and ſeaſonable Reproof and Correction (when there is Occaſion for it) may do well; but Whips are not the Cords of a Man: Human Nature may be driven by them, but it muſt be led by ſweeter and more gentle Methods.

3. ANOTHER Duty of Parents to their Children, is to make Proviſion for their Maintenance and Support; but in what Meaſure and Proportion they are to do this, it is not ſo eaſy to determine. The Benefit of a moderate Fortune ſeems to be recommended in that Requeſt of Agur's; [n] Give me neither Poverty nor Riches; feed me with Food convenient for me; leſt I be full and deny thee, and ſay, Who is the Lord? Or leſt I be poor and ſteal, and take the Name of my God in vain. By the Food that is convenient for us, he means all the Neceſſaries and Accommodations of Life; but theſe (as to their Quantity at leaſt) muſt be ſuppoſed to differ, according to the State, the Children are in, and the Condition they are born to. [o] If Children are in a State of Infancy, wherein they can provide nothing for themſelves, there is no Doubt but that the Proviſion of Parents ought to be as large, as the Neceſſities of their Children. [p] If Children have ſome natural Defect, either in their bodily or rational Faculties, tho' they are arrived even to Maturity of Age, yet are they as much Children, as thoſe of younger Years, and have conſequently, an equal Intereſt in their Parents Care and Proviſion: If Children have arrived to Years of Ability and Diſcretion, ſo as to be able to provide for themſelves, there is no Doubt to be made, but that their Father may oblige them to it, and ſubtract ſo much of his Maintenance from them, as they for themſelves are in a Condition to acquire. [q] The pooreſt Parents in the World are obliged to provide for their Children according to their beſt Abilities; but then, as they can provide for them no otherwiſe, but by inuring them to Labour and Induſtry, they muſt be careful to accuſtom them to it from their Youth up, that they may be enabled to undergo Fatigue, and to gain an honeſt Livelihood by the Sweat of their Brow. The richer and better Sort of People are to make Proviſion for their Children, according to the Rank and Condition whereunto they are born; and Perſons of high Extraction are to conſider, not only what is neceſſary for a Son, but what is requiſite for the Son of ſuch a Father, and one deſcended from ſuch a Family.

Support and Maintenance.

[r] NOR ſhould the Parent's Care only provide for his Children during his own Life, but, as much as in him lies, afterwards; eſpecially, when the Neceſſities of his Children (which is the Ground of providing for them) are, after his Deceaſe, like to be greater than they were before. And therefore every Parent ſhould, before he dies, either train up his Children in ſome uſeful Calling and Employment, whereby they may be able to provide for themſelves, (which indeed is an excellent Portion), or if that will not ſuffice, or be not ſo ſuitable to their Rank and Condition, provide for them ſuch competent Eſtates, as may ſupport the Dignity of their Family, when they die, and conſiſt with the Rules of Juſtice and Charity to acquire, while they live.

4. ONE Duty more, which Parents owe their Children, is to ſet them a good Example. [s] Example is the moſt lively Way of Teaching: And, becauſe Children are much much given to Imitation, it is likewiſe a very delightful Way, and beſt adapted to their Capacity, as being ſooneſt underſtood, and fitteſt to make a laſting Impreſſion upon them; and therefore [t] above all Things, as the antient Moraliſt expreſſes it, Parents ought to behave blameleſsly, and ſhew themſelves an evident Example to their Children; that they, looking upon their Lives, as in a Glaſs, may be drawn off from all baſe Actions and Words, and know how to dreſs and compoſe their own Lives by that Mirror.

A good Example.

[m] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [n] Prov. xxx. 8, 9. [o] Fleetwood, on the Relative Duties. [p] Towerſon, on the Commandments. [q] Fleetwood, ibid. [r] Towerſon, ibid. [s] Tillotſon, ibid.

An Exhortation to theſe Duties.

THESE are ſome of the chief Duties, which Parents owe to their Children, a ſufficient Maintenance and Proviſion, ſeaſonable Reproof and Correction, a religious Inſtitution, candid Uſage, and a good Example: And to engage the Performance of theſe, let Parents conſider, that ſuch a Form of Education will not only be a great Bleſſing to their Children, and the very beſt Inheritance they can leave them; but a ſtanding Comfort and Conſolation to themſelves, both in this Life, and in that which is to come. A wiſe Son, ſays Solomon, maketh a glad Father. Nothing, certainly, can yield a greater Satisfaction to a Man, than to ſee one, that is ſo near and dear unto him, take good Courſes; and, under God, to be able to impute the Virtue of his Conduct, and the Goodneſs of his Reputation, to the Care he took of him, and the Inſtructions he gave him, when he was young. This certainly muſt fill the Father's Heart with Joy and comfortable Reflections, every Time he looks upon his Son, or hears him mentioned with Praiſe; and when, at any Time, he himſelf comes to want his Aſſiſtance, in the Time of Sickneſs, or Decline of Life, ſurely there is no greater external Comfort in the World, than a good and dutiful Child. [u] He then will be the Light of his Eyes, and the Cordial of his fainting Spirits; and, as he is decaying and withering away, in him he ſhall flouriſh again, and have the Pleaſure to ſee his Youth, as it were, renewed; for ſo the Son of Syrach has expreſſed the Comfort, which a good Father has of a well-educated Son; [*] tho' he die, yet he is as if he were not dead; for he hath left one behind him, that is like himſelf: While he lived, he ſaw and rejoiced in him, and when he died, he was not ſorrowful; and the Reaſon is, becauſe he was conſcious, that good Children, who, by their Parents Inſtitution became ſuch, were not only a preſent Satisfaction, but would be an unſpeakable Matter of Joy to their Parents, in the Life which is to come.

WHEN we come to appear before God, at the Day of Judgment, to be able to ſay to him, Lo! here am I, and the Children which thou haſt given me; how will this comfort our Hearts, and make us lift up our Heads with Joy! On the contrary, [x] when God ſhall ariſe terribly to Judgment, and ſhall ſay unto us, Behold the Children, which I gave you; they were ignorant, and you inſtructed them not; they made themſelves vile, and you reſtrained them not; nay, inſtead of being Teachers and Examples of Holineſs, you were their chief Encouragers and Patterns of Vice. Unnatural Wretches! that have thus deſtroyed thoſe, whoſe Happineſs, by ſo many Bonds of Duty and Affection, you were obliged to procure. Behold the Books are open, and there is not one Prayer upon Record, that ever you put up for your Children; not an Hour ſeriouſly ſpent, in acquainting them with the Knowledge of their Duty; but, on the contrary, it appears that you have many Ways contrived their Miſery, and helped forward their Damnation: When God, I ſay, ſhall bring this heavy Accuſation againſt us, and our Conſcience, at the ſame Time, bear Teſtimony to the Truth of it, in what a lamentable Condition muſt we be! That therefore, neither our Children may be made miſerable by our Fault, nor we, by the Neglect of ſo natural and neceſſary a Duty, let us all conſider ourſelves, as reſponſible to God for their Education, and, in the Senſe of that terrible Day of Accounts, make it the Matter of our Care and Aſſiduity, to train them up, in their tender Years, in the Way which they ſhould go, that, when they are old, they may not depart from it.

Sixth Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not kill.

TO kill, in the Senſe of this Commandment, is to take away another Man's Life: And, becauſe there are ſome Caſes, wherein another Man's Life may be taken away, without the Violation of this Precept, it may not be improper to ſay Something concerning theſe, before we come to examine into the Nature, the Extent, and ſundry Aggravations of the Crime, that is here forbidden.

IT

[t] Πρὸ πάντων δεῖ τὸν πατέρας ἐναργῆς ἑαυτὸς παράδειγμα τοῖς τέκνοις παρέχειν, &c. Plut. Περὶ παιδαγωγῆς. [u] Tillet-ſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [*] Eccluſ. xxx. 4, 5. [x] Tillotſon, ibid.

Exempted Caſes. Killing in Execution of Juſtice.

IT has been the Opinion of ſome, in all Ages of Chriſtianity, that there is a certain Cruelty in all Capital Puniſhments, which is inconſiſtent with the Spirit of the Goſpel; and that God has ſo abſolutely reſerved to himſelf the Diſpoſal of Man's Life, that the Civil Magiſtrate, without an expreſs Commiſſion from him, is not to interfere in it. [a] But when we conſider, that God, in that very Law, which himſelf delivered to the Jews by the Hand of Moſes, did appoint ſo many capital Puniſhments, even for Offences againſt poſitive Precepts, we cannot think, that theſe are contrary to Juſtice or true Goodneſs, ſince they were dictated by God himſelf, who is eternally the ſame, and unalterable in his Perfections. The Precedent, which God ſet in the Moſaick Law, ſeems to be a full Juſtification of the like Puniſhments under the Goſpel; for the Charity, which the Goſpel ſo ſtrongly recommends, does not take away the Rules of Juſtice and Equity, by which we are allowed to maintain our juſt Poſſeſſions, or recover them out of the Hands of violent Aggreſſors; only it obliges us to make Uſe of them, in a ſoft and gentle Manner, without Rigour, and without Reſentment. We owe to human Society, and to the Safety and Order of the World, our Endeavours to put a Stop to the Vice and Wickedneſs of Mankind; and this a good Man may do, with great inward Tenderneſs to the Souls of thoſe, whom he proſecutes. And as it is probable, (conſidering the Degeneracy of human Nature) that nothing, beſides ſuch a Method, could ſtop the Progreſs of Injuſtice and Wickedneſs; ſo nothing can be ſo likely a Means to bring the Criminal to repent of his Sins, and fit him to die a Chriſtian, as to condemn him to die for his Crimes; inſomuch, that it may be affirmed with ſome Certainty, that a Man, who can harden himſelf againſt the Terrors of Death, when they come upon him, ſo ſolemnly, ſo ſlowly, and ſo certainly, would ſcarce be brought to any Manner of Reformation by a longer Continuance of Life.

[b] IF then Government be the Inſtitution of God, and if the Ends of Government cannot be attained, without a Power in the Magiſtrate to inflict Capital Puniſhments; which many Times are real Bleſſings to thoſe, on whom they fall; then is there a clear and juſt Foundation for the Claim and Exerciſe of ſuch a Power; in the Caſe of all ſuch Crimes, which the Safety and other Ends of Government require ſhould be puniſhed with Death. For this Reaſon the Magiſtrate, under the Goſpel, as well as under the Law, is the Miniſter of God, and an Avenger, to execute Wrath upon him that doeth Evil: [c] And therefore, when he condemneth a Man according to the Directions of the Law, he does it only as God's Miniſter, and they who put the Sentence in Execution, do it only in Obedience to the Authority, that is ſet over them; nor is either of them guilty of breaking this Command, which looks upon Killing as an exempted Caſe, where the Authority is competent, the Manner legal, and the Perſon, that is killed, deſerves to die.

An Enemy in Time of War.

2. ANOTHER exempted Caſe is the Killing an Enemy in a juſt War. [d] That God has not forbidden Sovereigns (in Caſes of Neceſſity, and where amicable Means will not prevail) to maintain the Safety, and Welfare of the Societies, intruſted to their Care, even by armed Violence, againſt ſuch, as wrongfully invade them; [e] nay, that he has allowed Sovereigns to aſſiſt ſuch other Princes, as are unjuſtly invaded, and may be devoured by ambitious and incroaching Neighbours, is plain from the Laws of Humanity and Self-Preſervation, as well as his Permiſſion and Encouragement given to Wars, in the Jewiſh Polity, which he himſelf inſtituted. And that, in ſuch Caſes, a Soldier's Employment is no illegal Profeſſion, is manifeſt from the Anſwer, which John Baptiſt gives them, wherein he does not require them to relinquiſh their Courſe of Life, (which he certainly would have done, had it been unavoidably ſinful) but only to do Violence to no Man, to accuſe no Man falſly, and to be content with their Wages. [f] There are ſome Wars indeed ſo apparently unjuſt, that no Subject can abet them with a good Conſcience; but, for the Generality, it is not neceſſary for the Soldier to be convinced of the Juſtneſs of the War, wherein he is engaged: 'Tis enough for him to know, that it is not abſolutely unjuſt, and that he is commanded by his Prince to aſſiſt him in it; and though, by this Means, he may ſometimes be engaged in an unjuſt Quarrel, yet the Blame thereof will not fall upon him, who is neither concerned, nor qualified to judge of it, but upon the Prince, by whoſe Authority the War is levied: Only he is to take Care, that, as his Prince's Commiſſion is his only Warrant to concern himſelf with War, ſo his private Revenge ſhould not puſh him on to do more Miſchief, than his Prince intended he ſhould do: And if he behaves behaves in this Manner, his killing and ſlaying, upon a juſt Provocation, and according to the eſtabliſhed Laws of Arms, will not fall under the Deſign and Meaning of this Prohibition.

[a] Burnet, on the Articles. [b] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [c] Beveridge's Explanation of the Church Catechiſm. [d] Barrow, on the Decalogue. [e] Burnet, ibid. [f] Towerſon, on the Commandments.

In one's neceſſary Defence.

3. ANOTHER exempted Caſe is, when we are conſtrained to kill another in the neceſſary Defence of our own Lives: [g] For Self-Preſervation (as we ſuggeſted before) is an inviolable Principle of Nature; and this dictates, that we may repel an Invader, an Aſſailant, an Aſſaſſin, any Man, that intends to bereave us of our Life; and if, in repelling and reſiſting him, it happens that we kill him, the Thing is done in Proſecution of that natural Principle of Self-Preſervation, which makes it not an unlawful Act to take away that Man's Life, who would otherwiſe certainly take away ours by Violence. And as we are permitted to do it, in the neceſſary Defence of our own, ſo may we lawfully do it, in Defence of an innocent Neighbour's Life, againſt any unjuſt Invader. We may kill the Aggreſſor, if we know he comes with an Intention of Murther; and for this [h] we have the Warrant of the Law of God, as well as a Licence from the Law of Reaſon and Nature to ſecure us; and that partly becauſe, in the Caſe of a ſudden Onſet, either upon ourſelves or others, we can have no Recourſe to the ordinary Means of Defence, I mean the Patronage of the Magiſtrate; and partly becauſe thoſe, whom God has entruſted with the Power of Vengeance, give private Perſons, on ſuch Occaſions, a Licence to ſlay the Invader, and deliver the Sword of Juſtice into their Hands.

Chance-Medley.

4. THERE is one exempted Caſe more, which we call Chance-Medley, when a Man kills another, without having any Enmity againſt him, or Deſign to do him any Harm: Upon which Occaſion, God appointed [i] Cities of Refuge for the Manſlayer to flee unto; but ſtill with this Reſtriction, that he was to abide there, in Nature of a Priſoner, and not have his perfect Liberty [k] till the Death of the High-Prieſt, to put him in Mind, that, though he was not properly guilty of Murther, yet, by being acceſſary to another Man's Death, (tho' it was only for Want of due Cure and Conſideration in him) he had contracted ſo much Guilt, that he could not be fully pardoned, but by the Death of JESUS CHRIST, the true High-Prieſt. So that from the Whole we may infer, that, he who kills another by Chance or Miſadventure, meaning no Harm; he who kills another in a Way not irregular, as a Miniſter of Juſtice; he who kills another in a lawful War, as a Soldier authorized by a ſovereign Power; or, laſtly, he who kills another in his own juſt and neceſſary Defence, does not lie under the Cenſure of this Law; ſince what he does, he only does as the Inſtrument of God, who is inconteſtably the Lord of Life and Death.

What it properly is.

'TIS not ſimply killing then, but killing in a private Capacity, and without any legal Commiſſion, that is the Subject-Matter of this Prohibibion; in what Manner ſoever it be done, whether [l] precipitately, or after Deliberation; [m] upon what Motive ſoever it be done, whether Hatred, Envy, or Revenge, our preſumed Safety, or pretended Reparation of Honour; and by what Means ſoever it be done, whether by direct Violence, or fraudulent Contrivance; in an open, or clandeſtine Manner; immediately by ourſelves, or by Means of others; by adviſing, encouraging, or any wiſe becoming Inſtrumental or acceſſary thereunto.

THIS is properly the Sin, which is forbidden; and, though it may admit of Aggravations, according to the Circumſtances of the Dignity, Relation, or Office, that the Sufferer enjoyed, while he lived (as to kill a Father, Mother, or Children, is a more horrid and unnatural, to kill a Magiſtrate, Judge, or publick Miniſter, but eſpecially a King or Prince, is a more flagitious Tranſgreſſion of this Command, than to ſlay a private Perſon, who ſtood in no ſuch Eminence or Relation): Though it admits of Aggravations, I ſay, from theſe and ſeveral other Circumſtances; yet, in itſelf, and abſtractly conſidered, 'tis certainly great and grievous enough.

The Heinouſneſs of it.

'TIS an heinous Offence againſt God, as being not only a Violation of his Command, but a Wrong done to his Property, [n] by robbing him of a Child, a Servant, a Subject; one whoſe Life was precious to him, and to whom he had a tender Regard, [g] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [h] Exod. xxii. 2, 3. [i] Ibid. xxi. 12, 13. Numb. xxxv. 6, &c. [k] Numb. xxxv. 28. [l] Our Law diſtinguiſhes between Manſlaughter or ſimple Homicide, (which is killing another in Heat of Blood, or out of a ſudden Anger) and that which, in a more reſtrained Senſe, is called Murther, which (according to our Lawyers) is killing a Man with Malice prepenſed, or Forethought: But in Divinity, both theſe Methods of killing are Murther, and properly ſo called. For though it be true, that this latter Way is more heinous of the two, becauſe Deliberation adds to the Guilt; yet the former is an unlawful Killing, and no leſs than Murther; becauſe it is a voluntary taking away a Man's Life, without juſt Cauſe and Reaſon, without any Neceſſity compelling him to it, and without any Licence from publick Authority. Theſe Things make it an unlawful and ſinful Shedding of Blood, though it be not accompanied with Deliberation, and premeditated Malice. Edwards, ibid. [m] Barrow, on the Decalogue. [n] Ibid.

Regard, as having created him after his own Image: And therefore excellent are thoſe Words of Philo, in the Beginning of his Diſcourſe upon this Commandment: [o] Murther has indeed the Name of Manſlaughter, ſays he, becauſe Man is the Perſon ſlain, but it is, in Reality, Sacrilege, and one of the greateſt Sacrileges, becauſe there is not any Thing more ſacred than Man, or what is a more expreſs Image of the divine Reaſon and Perfection. 'Tis a Sin againſt Nature, [p] which has eſtabliſhed a common Relation between us; deſigned us for Society, and, in order thereunto, made it one of its fundamental Laws, that we ſhould love, and protect, and do good to one another, which Murther totally deſtroys; a Sin againſt the Civil Society, by depriving it of one of its Members, and, by its evil Example, encouraging others to do the like; a Sin againſt the Magiſtrate, by invading his Right and Prerogative, who alone, under God, has the Power of Life and Death; a ſignal Offence againſt the Relations of him, who is cut off, who, perhaps, in him loſe all their Support and Comfort of Life; and an irreparable Injury to the Perſon himſelf, who by this Stroke loſes, not only the Advantages of this World, but (if ſurprized in his Sins) a Poſſibility of Repentance, and conſequently, all Happineſs in another. And [q] ſurely no one, that has the Bowels of a Man, can think on this without Horror, viz. that by this Means, and perhaps without any Provocation, Men are deprived not only of the preſent Life without Remedy, but condemned to endleſs Torment and Perdition.

God's Abhorrence of it,

'Tis Part of the Catholick Law, which God gave the Patriarch Noah, [r] Surely your Blood of your Lives will I require: At the Hand of every Beaſt will I require it, and at the Hand of Man, and at the Hand of every Man's Brother, will I require the Life of Man. [s] Beaſts indeed are not capable of Sin, becauſe whatever they do, they do it by the Force of that Natural Inſtinct, which directs them in all their Actions; and yet, ſo ſacred a Thing is the Life of a Man in the Eyes of God, and ſo ſevere his Reſentment againſt every Thing, that invades it; that, [t] if an Ox, (or, by Parity of Reaſon, any other Creature) gored a Man, that he died, the Ox itſelf (according to the Law of his own Inſtitution) was to be ſlain, and the Fleſh thereof caſt away, as an Abomination; and that even [u] his Altar, which, in other Caſes and Crimes, was a Sanctuary to fly unto, yielded no Shelter and Protection to the wilful Murtherer. His Sin was purſued by the avenging Hand of God; which, in all Ages, more viſibly and apparently concerned itſelf in making * wonderful Diſcoveries of it, and in bringing the Actors therein to condign Puniſhment. For this, of all other Sins, is the moſt clamorous, and calleth loudeſt to Heaven. [x] The Voice of thy Brother's Blood crieth unto me from the Ground, ſays God to Cain, [y] as if Heaven itſelf had been filled with the Outcries of the Murther, to ſollicit and importune the divine Juſtice to avenge it.

And Uneaſineſs of its Guilt.

WHAT is it then that the Man of Blood promiſes himſelf by committing a Crime of ſuch a complicated Guilt? The Gratification of a malicious and revengeful Temper, or the Acquiſition of a little Wealth; are the uſual Baits, which the Devil throws in his Way. But what are theſe to that Dread and Diſtraction of Mind, which will neceſſarily ſeize the Wretch, when he comes to reflect in cold Blood, and his Conſcience begins to murmur and remonſtrate? [z] Other Sins may, in ſome Meaſure, be palliated, and the Guilt of them alleviated by Excuſes; but no Man can flatter or excuſe himſelf ſo, as to quiet his Mind, after the Commiſſion of Murther. The Burthen of this confounds and breaks the Mind and Conſcience to Pieces, and fills it ſo full of Horror and Diſturbance, by frightful Remembrances, and continual Repreſentations of the murthered Perſon's Ghoſt, and Cries of his Blood for Vengeance againſt him, that it has, ſometimes, extorted a Confeſſion, even when there has been no other Evidence of the Fact; and, many Times, forced the Guilty to put an End to the Terrors, he was not able to endure, by becoming his own Executioner. So uneaſy is the State of the Murtherer, that, rather than bear the Laſhes of his own Mind, he ventures upon the Pains of Hell!

Self-murther.

How the Opinion has prevail'd, whether from falſe Notions of Courage and Liberty, or [a] from the Examples of ſome great Men of Antiquity, who have unhappily thought thought themſelves Maſters of their own Lives; but ſo it is, that ſome have been averſe to believe, that the Sin of Self-murther is included in this Commandment, and that the rather, becauſe they find no particular Prohibition againſt it in the Word of God. Now the true Reaſon, in the firſt Place, why Self-murther is not expreſsly forbidden in Scripture is this,——[b] That whatever Sins and Offences God, as a Law-giver, prohibits, he prohibits with a Penalty; he affixes ſuch a Puniſhment to ſuch a Crime; and he, who commits the Crime, is to undergo the Puniſhment in this World, whether it be Reſtitution, Loſs of Limb, or Loſs of Life itſelf. Now this can never happen in the Caſe of Self-murther, becauſe it prevents all Puniſhment, (the Man is dead, before you can take Cognizance of his Offence) and therefore prevents all Laws concerning it. In a Word, as no Law can be enacted, to any Purpoſe, without a Penalty, ſo, where there can be no Penalty, there can be no Law: But now Self-murther prevents all Penalty; and therefore, as it wants no particular Prohibition, it can only be included under general Commands, and forbidden as a Sin, whereof God alone can take Cognizance in the other World.

[o] Ὄνομα μὲν ἀνδροφονία κατὰ τὸ κτείναντος ἄνθρωπον ἐπιφημίζεται· τὸ δ' ἀληθὲς ἔργον ἐστὶν ἱεροσυλία, &c. De Spec. Legibus. [p] Wake, on the Church Catechiſm. [q] Towerſon, on the Commandments. [r] Gen. ix. 5. [s] Towerſon, ibid. [t] Exod. xxi. 28. [u] Ibid. ver. 14. * We have a very odd Diſcovery of this Nature in our Chronicles, which tell us, that, in the ſecond Year of King James the Firſt's Reign, when a Woman had killed a Perſon, and buried him under a Dunghill, one of the Town dreamed, that this Man, his Neighbour, was ſtrangled, and buried under ſuch a Dunghill; whereupon the dead Body was found, the Woman apprehended, and at her Execution confeſſed the Fact. Baker. [x] Gen. xiv. 10. [y] Towerſon, ibid. [z] Newcomb's Catech. Sermons. [a] Among the ancient Greeks, Self-murther was very frequent, yea their greateſt Philoſophers, ſuch as Empedocles, Chryſippus, Cleanthes, Zeno, &c. are Inſtances of it, and among the old Romans, Cato, and many others. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II.

Why not expreſsly forbidden.

Included in the Sixth Commandment.

Now that Self-murther is included in the Sixth Commandment, is evident both from its plain and literal Senſe, and the Reaſon, which is given to enforce it, in another Place. [c] The Commandment prohibits Murther; and 'tis certainly as much Murther, to kill ourſelves, as to kill another Man. The Reaſon, which the Scripture gives, why we are not allowed to do it, in both Caſes, is the ſame, becauſe [d] in the Image of God made he Man: For if I muſt not ſhed the Blood of another Man, becauſe he is made in the Image of God, I muſt not ſhed the Blood of my ownſelf, becauſe I alſo am a Man, and made in the Image of God, as well as he. Nay, the more unnatural the Sin is, or the greater Obligations we have to preſerve the Life of the Perſon, whom we kill, the greater is the Breach of this Commandment. [e] To murther a kind Friend, or a bounteous Benefactor, is a greater Evil, than to murther one, who is a Stranger to us; to murther a Parent or a Child, a Wife or an Huſband, is ſtill a greater Evil, becauſe they are ſo much nearer to ourſelves; and if the Nearneſs of the Relation increaſes the Sin, No-body is ſo near to us, as ourſelves, and therefore there is no ſuch unnatural Murther, as this.

Its Heinouſneſs.

BESIDES all the Guilt then, which attends ſimple Murther, as being a Breach of God's Command, a Deſtruction of his Image, an Offence againſt the Community, and an Injury to the Kindred and Dependents of the Sufferer; there is ſomething in this Sin, not only abhorrent to the Principle of Self-Love and Self-Preſervation, but monſtrouſly cruel and deſtructive: Since, by making Repentance impoſſible, (unleſs Men can be ſuppoſed to repent of a Sin, before they have committed it) it takes an effectual Courſe to ruin and undo both Soul and Body together. What Allowances God may make for ſome Mens Opinions of the Lawfulneſs of this Deed, and for the Diſtraction of other Mens Thoughts and Paſſions, through a ſettled Melancholy, or ſome violent and over-bearing Temptation, we cannot tell; our Buſineſs is not to limit the ſovereign Prerogative and Grace of God, but to declare the Nature of the Thing, according to the Terms of the Goſpel, which certainly denote, that to murther ourſelves is the moſt unnatural Murther, a damning Sin, and ſuch as no Man can repent of in this Life; [f] and therefore unleſs God forgive it without Repentance, (and this the Goſpel of Chriſt gives us no Authority for) it can never be forgiven. The Goſpel-Grace, which only forgives Penitents, cannot ſave ſuch Men; and therefore that Man is very bold, and preſumes very far upon unpromiſed and uncovenanted Mercy, who will venture to commit a Sin, which the Grace of the Goſpel cannot pardon.

The final State of thoſe that commit it.

IF however we will determine the Queſtion more peremptorily, the different Fate of ſuch, as deſtroy themſelves, ſeems, in a great Meaſure, to depend upon the Difference of the Cauſe, from whence the Fact ariſes; [g] inſomuch, that thoſe, who out of Pride and Haughtineſs, Fear of Miſeries to come, or Impatience under preſent Sufferings, Diſtruſt of God's Providence, or Deſpair of his Mercy, lay violent Hands upon themſelves, give us not the leaſt Hope of their Salvation, becauſe their Act was both voluntary and vicious, and not to be amended by Repentance; whereas we are to conceive much better of ſuch, as owe that Violence to a diſtempered Body and a diſordered Mind. For, conſidering the Mercy and infinite Goodneſs of God, it is moſt congruous to think, that no Man ſhall anſwer for any Miſcarriage, that is wholly cauſed by the Power of a Diſeaſe, or the Diſtraction of the Brain; the Reaſon is, is, becauſe whatever Fault is committed in ſuch a Caſe, is not a Man's free and voluntary Act, and, conſequently, not to be charged upon him.

[b] Fleetwood, againſt Self-murther. [c] Fleetwood, ibid. and Kidder's Demonſtration, p. 137. [d] Gen. ix. 6.
[e] Sherlock, on Death. [f] Ibid. [g] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II.

[i] WHETHER it be our Climate, our Diet, our Complexion, or Manner of Life, that produces more Matter for Melancholy to feed upon; but ſo it is, that this Nation of ours furniſhes, almoſt every Day, more Examples of violent and unnatural Deaths, than any other of its Extent, perhaps under the Face of Heaven. And therefore I cannot, with Decency, part with this Subject, without ſuggeſting ſome farther Conſiderations againſt it: That how well ſoever we may think of thoſe ancient Greeks and Romans, who either fell by their own Hands, or, in their Writings, defended the Practice; yet, if we examine their Character, we ſhall find, that they either were Atheiſts, or Men that believed in ſo many Gods, as almoſt came to the ſame Thing, and that, conſequently, their Example is no Precedent to us, who believe in the one true God, the ſole Author and Giver of our Lives, and, upon that Account, cannot ſuppoſe ourſelves at Liberty to throw them away at Pleaſure, and without his Direction: That whatever Pretence, [k] their Withdrawing from Life (as they uſed to call it) might make to Magnanimity and Courage; it was, in Reality, no more, than an Effect of Fear and Cowardice, and [l] a Mark of a poor impatient Spirit, that ſunk under the common Calamities of Life, and knew not how to bear Misfortunes: That, as we are Men, we are born to Sorrow, as the Sparks fly upwards, and muſt not therefore expect more from Life, than what is in it; that, as we are Chriſtians, we have the Promiſe of God, that [m] he will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will with the Temptation alſo make a Way to eſcape, that we may be able to bear it; that, as the Soldiers of Chriſt, we are to bear Afflictions manfully, [n] and not deſert the Station which our great Commander has given us to maintain; and as Poſſeſſors of immortal Souls, to make the Conſideration of their Fate deter us from doing any Thing, that may endanger their eternal Welfare. Farther Conſiderations againſt it.

AN ignorant Heathen, that thought this Life the only one, he was to experience, and Death the Expiration of his Being and Sorrows together, might think of diſpatching himſelf without much Inconſiſtency; but [o] that a Chriſtian, who believes a God, the Immortality of the Soul, and the Life of the World to come; that the Divine Wrath is revealed againſt all Unrighteouſneſs; that without Repentance there is no Pardon, and that after Death there can be none: That ſuch a Man as this, profeſſing the Faith of Chriſt crucified, and covenanting with God, in Baptiſm, to take up the Croſs, and bear it, if Need be, even unto Death, ſhould, in the Impatience of his Soul, and preſſed by ſome Calamity a little more than ordinary, deliberately chuſe to throw this Burthen off, by committing what he knows to be a Sin, of which he knows he can never repent, and venture the moſt dreadful Conſequences of that, to everlaſting Ages, is what Nobody would ever reaſon themſelves into a Belief of, did not the frequent Practice of ſome unhappy People convince us, that it might be done, by letting us ſee it was. [p] Did but Men ſeriouſly conſider this, however, it is impoſſible that the greateſt Shame, Infamy, Want, or Suffering, or whatever it is, that makes Men weary of Life, ſhould be thought ſo intolerable, as to make them force their Paſſage into the other World, to eſcape it, when ſuch a violent and unnatural Eſcape will coſt them their Souls, and conſign them to the Wrath of God, and Miſeries inconceivable, as long as God endures. More eſpecially Chriſtian.

ANOTHER Practice, which falls under this Prohibition of Murther, and yet has run away with the Vogue of ſomething gallant and honourable, is Duelling: For when Men have ſuch a Reſentment of Injuries and Affronts, as to revenge themſelves with their Swords, and to venture killing, or being killed, in the Deciſion of their Quarrel, they certainly have the Hearts of Murtherers; they would kill if they could, at leaſt would venture killing their Brother, to appeaſe their Reſentment: And therefore if ſuch Men fall in the Quarrel (as too frequently they do) without Time to aſk God's Duelling.

[i] Fleetwood, againſt Self-murther. [k] Εὐλόγως τὶ φάσιν ἐξαξειν ἑαυτὸν τῆ βίῳ τὸν σοφὸν. Laërt. in Zen. and to the ſame Purpoſe Seneca: Exerce te ut mortem excipias, & ſi ita res ſuadebit, accerſas. Intereſt nihil, an illa ad nos veniat, an ad illam nos. Epiſt. 70. [l] Si Rationem rectiùs conſulas, nec ipſa quidem animi magnitudo rectè nominatur, ubi quiſque, non valendo tolerare vel quæque aſpera, vel aliena peccata, ſeipſum interemerit: Magis enim mens infirma deprehenditur, quæ ferre non poteſt vel duram ſui corporis ſervitutem, vel ſtultam vulgi Opinionem; majorque animus meritò dicendus, qui vitam ærumnoſam magis poteſt ferre, quam fugere, Aug. de Civit. Dei, Lib. I. c. 22.

Rebus in anguſtis facile eſt contemnere vitam,
Fortiter ille facit, qui miſer eſſe poteſt. —— MART. Epig.

[m] 1 Cor. x. 13. [n] Vetat Pythagoras injuſſu Imperatoris, i. e. Dei, de præſidio & ſtatione vitæ diſcedere, CIC. de Senect. [o] Fleetwood, ubi ſupra. [p] Sherlock, on Death.

Pardon with their last Breath, they die under the Guilt of Murther unrepented of. Tho' they do not kill, but are killed, they die with a mortal Hatred and Revenge, and [s] he that hateth his Brother, says St John, is a Murtherer; and as we know that no Murtherer hath eternal Life abiding in him, we cannot but conclude, that whatever fine Names, or plausible Descriptions the Laws of Honour may have made of such Actions, he that kills another in a Duel, tho' he gets a Pardon of his Prince, will be arraigned, at the last Day, among the Murtherers, who shall have their Portion in the Lake, which burneth with Fire and Brimstone.

Excuses. I KNOW very well what is usually pleaded in Defence of this Practice; "That "'tis impossible to live in the World without Injuries, but base and inglorious not to "resent them; that to decline a Challenge favours of Cowardice, and to put up Affronts "is unbecoming a Man of Honour: 'Tis a Sign of a low and abject Spirit; and no "Man that has any generous Blood in his Veins, (unless he would have him tram-Answered. "pled upon) would ever advise his Friend to do it." [t] Thus a false Notion of Honour and Bravery deludes the Duellists into a dreadful Action, which, by long Impunity, is become reputable, and the Refusal to engage in it ignominious; as if every Affront unrevenged drew upon a Man, that wears a Sword, the Imputation of Cowardice; [u] or, as if that could be an honourable Atchievement, which the Civil Magistrate punishes, as a Capital Crime, and Almighty God threatens with Damnation.

BUT whatever high Pretences of Honour the Practice of Duelling may make, 'tis much to be feared, that Drinking, Gaming, and Whores, are those rotten Bones, (as * an ingenious Author expresses) which, for the most Part, lie hid under this painted Sepulchre and Title of Honour: Or, if this be not the Case, it may not be improper to consider, that this Custom of Fighting is of heathenish Extract, and [a] derived from those barbarous Nations, who, in any dubious and controverted Matter, were appointed by their Governors to decide it by single Combat; but that, as Christianity prevailed, the Custom was laid aside, as savage and inhuman, and such as died in the Enterprize, were denied Christian Burial; that, according to the Sentiments and Decision of the best Judges of Honour and Generosity, † there is no Disgrace in refusing a Challenge, or turning it off with a just Contempt; that when Augustus was challenged by Mark Antony, he returned him in Answer, that if Antony was weary of Life, and had a mind to die, there were Ways enough to Death without Duelling; and that, in short, instead of being a Disparagement to a Person of Honour, to pardon Injuries and Affronts, 'tis an Argument of a great and generous Mind, and a true Proof of Christian Gallantry, so to do. The Sentiment of the [x] heathen Moralist is very just upon this Occasion, "We ought to despise Calumnies and Injuries, says he, "whether they be offered to us deservedly or not: If deservedly, they are no Dis-"honour and Reproach; if undeservedly, then are they a Shame and Reproach to "him, that offered them, not to him that bears them." But Christian Morality carries the Point much higher: [y] Be angry and sin not, let not the Sun go down upon your Wrath, neither give Place to the Devil: Be not overcome of Evil, but overcome Evil with Good; for this is the Will of God concerning us, [z] that being reviled, we should bless; being persecuted, we should suffer; being defamed, we should intreat, and not let go our Patience and Meekness of Temper, tho' some reproachful and abusive Tongues may endeavour to make us the Filth of the World, and Off-scouring of all Things.

To refuse a Challenge not dishonourable.

Causeless Anger, and reproachful Language.

OUR blessed Master, in the Explication he gives us of this Prohibition, has extended the Sense of it still farther; [a] Ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old Time, thou shalt not kill, and whosoever shall kill, shall be in Danger of the Judgment: But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his Brother without a Cause, shall be in Danger of the Judgment, and whosoever shall say to his Brother, [b] RACA, shall be in Danger

[s] 1 John iii. 15. [t] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [u] Spectator, No. 85. and 98. where the Sin and Madness of this Practice is handsomely exposed. * Dr. Waugh's Assize Sermon at Kingston, 1717. [a] Hale's Sermon, on Duels, page 95. of his Remains. [a] The Northern Inhabitants used to try their Rights to their Estates and Goods by single Combat: The Germans, about the Tenth Century, purged their Innocence, and ended their Quarrels this Way; for he that was worsted, was always held the guilty Person: And, upon the Conquest here, the Normans renewed this Way of Trial, but it was soon disused, and deemed unchristian. † To this Purpose we read, that the French King Francis I. gave the Emperor Charles V. the Lye, and challenged him to fight; but the Emperor (and we know what a Warrior, and Man of Arms and Honour he was) refused it. Nor do we want a later Instance in the Marshal Turenne, who, though a professed Soldier, and Man of Honour, refused the Challenge to a single Combat, given him by the Prince Palatine of the Rhine. [x] Seneca. [y] Eph. iv. 26. [z] 1 Cor. iv. 12, 13. [a] Matth. v. 21. 22. [b] The Word Raca is used to signify a silly, vain, contemptible Fellow, and denote some Imperfection in Mind or Body; and the Word Fool, in Scripture-Language, does usually represent to us a very wicked and abandoned Sinner; which Term of Reproach is more heinous than the other, as it is a worse Evil to be wicked, than unfortunate, and to lead a bad Life, than to have a weak Understanding. Gardiner's Sermons.

Danger

Danger of the Council, but whoſoever ſhall ſay, thou FOOL, ſhall be in Danger [c] of Hell-Fire: Whereby he gives us to underſtand, that all unreaſonable and exceſſive Paſſion, all abuſive and cenſorious Language, all Looks and Geſtures of Scorn and Ridicule, and whatever elſe it is, whereby we mean to expoſe and vilify our Neighbour, falls under the ſixth Commandment, thou ſhalt not kill.

[d] THE Foundation of Miſchief and the Seeds of Violence are laid in the firſt Emotions of the Soul; nor is there much Ground to believe, that they, who indulge the Beginnings of Paſſion, will be diſpoſed, out of any true Principle, to prevent the fatal Conſequences of it. But admitting they were ſo diſpoſed, yet, when the Fire is kindled, every Thing helps to blow it up, and it may not afterwards be in their Power to get it under, would they never ſo fain. [e] The Beginning of Strife (as Solomon wiſely obſerves) is, as when one letteth out Water: As long as the Dams and Banks are well fenced, it runs in the proper Channel; but when once theſe give Way, a Stream, otherwiſe ſmall, bears down all before it, and makes a vaſt Inundation. Thus one Reſentment opens the Paſſage to a greater, and one Word draws on another, till at laſt all end in Revenge and Blood. They, therefore, that attend to the Conſtitution of Mankind, and how the ſenſual Part and Paſſions of the Soul puſh us upon all Manner of Extravagance, cannot but ſee the Neceſſity of keeping a ſtrait Rein, and that the only Way to govern theſe, is to prevent their flying out at firſt. And they, who reflect upon Anger in particular; how this, above all other Paſſions, blinds the Reaſon, and carries the Man out of himſelf; what Furies and Devils it makes, where it hath got Poſſeſſion; what Heart-burnings and Contentions, what Tumult and Confuſion it creates; muſt needs allow, that the Peace and Safety of the World could never be ſecured, but by cruſhing this venomous Cockatrice in the Egg. Religion therefore had not anſwered its End, nor been a competent Guard to human Society, without leaving Men anſwerable for the very Tendencies and Occaſions, and for wilfully taking the firſt Steps towards ſuch pernicious Wickedneſs. For the Hands of Men could not be tied up from Cruelty, without tying up their Tongues from Exaſperation and Bitterneſs; nor could their Tongues again be with-held from Evil-ſpeaking, without a Reſtraint from Evil-thinking, laid upon that Part, [f] out of whoſe Abundance it is that the Mouth ſpeaketh.

IT is to be obſerved however, [g] that, as Anger is one of the Paſſions implanted in us by Nature, whoſe firſt Motions ſeem to be mechanical, and to depend upon the Temper of the Body, and Complexion of the animal Spirits, it cannot be altogether ſinful; nay, that there are ſome Caſes, wherein the Honour of God and the Love of Virtue are concerned, in which to be angry is not only an innocent, but a commendable Accompliſhment. The Example of Moſes, that Man of Meekneſs, [h] whoſe Anger waxed hot at the molten Calf, which the Iſraelites had made to diſhonour God and themſelves, in the Wilderneſs: The Example of our bleſſed Saviour, the exact Model of all Perfection, who was not only grieved, but looked upon the Phariſees with Anger, becauſe of the Hardneſs of their Hearts, juſtify ſome Reſentments of this Kind, where the Glory of God, and the Good of others is the Occaſion; and that Precept of St Paul's, be angry and ſin not, ſeems to imply, that they may be warrantable, even with Regard to private Injuries and Affronts, provided always, that due Care be taken to reſtrain their Exceſſes, and to conquer and ſubdue them by Times. Anger, when lawful.

UPON ſome Occaſions, and in ſome Degrees then, our Anger may be lawful; and therefore it is not an Anger of this Kind, that our Saviour brands with the Imputation of Murther, but 'tis an Anger, that is without Cauſe, and [i] ſuch as Men fly out into upon little or no Provocation; when for meer Trifles, for any Thing, for nothing; for groundleſs Suſpicions, and jealous Whimſies of their own, they work themſelves up to all the Extravagances of Rage and Paſſion: when they ſwell and grow cholerick, [k] becauſe their Honour and Reputation is touched, or other ſecular Intereſt not promoted, When not ſo.

[c] Among the Jews there were three Degrees of publick Infamy, according to the Nature of the Puniſhments inflicted on Men for their Crimes. If an Offender was brought before the Court of three and twenty, (which in the Text, is called being in Danger of the Judgment) and there condemned, he was accounted infamous, but his Diſgrace was in a lower Degree: If he were brought before the Sanhedrim, or great Senate of the Nation, conſiſting of LXX Elders, (which is being in Danger of the Council) and they by them adjudged to Death; his Diſgrace was greater: But if, laſtly, he was condemned to be burnt in the Valley of Hinnom, or Tophet, where was a perpetual Fire to conſume all the Filth, and whatever was offenſive and naſeous in Jeruſalem, and which the Jews themſelves looked upon as an Emblem of Hell, the Infamy was the greateſt of all. In Alluſion therefore to theſe three Degrees of Infamy among the Jews, our Saviour ſhews, that there will be different Kinds of Puniſhment for the ſeveral Degrees of Anger and Virulence, in the World to come. Hornick's Sermons, and Whitby's Annotations.

[d] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III. [e] Prov. xvii. 14. [f] Stanhope, ibid. [g] Ibid.
[h] Exod. xxxii. 19. [i] Hornick's Sermons. [k] Stanhope, ibid.

moted, as they expected; when they diſorder themſelves, becauſe their vain Deſires are not cockered, or ſomething that gratifies their Luſts is with-held from them; when they fret and become uneaſy, that ſuch a Perſon has not given them the Title and Reſpect, they looked for; when they are ruffled with the Reproofs of a Teacher, or the Admonitions of a Friend, and grow hot and outrageous, becauſe every one in Company cannot give into their Sentiments, or conform to their Humour: When, in theſe or ſuch like Caſes, a Man feels himſelf to be provoked above Meaſure, and ſuffers his Reſentment to reſt upon his Mind, and ſettle into ſecret Grudges, he then is guilty of the Murther of the Heart, and lives in Danger of the Judgment.

Reproachful Words, when lawful.

IT is to be obſerved again, with Relation to our Saviour's Words, that Terms of Diſparagement and Reproach are not univerſally, and upon all Occaſions, unlawful. From the Mouth of a Superior they are often of Uſe, ſometimes of Neceſſity, to awaken ſtupid Men, and to make them, at once, both ſenſible and aſhamed of their Folly; to expoſe the Abſurdity of pernicious Opinions, and the flagrant Enormity of wicked Practices. Thus the very Term of Fool is applied, by David and Solomon, to the obſtinate Sinner, Times without Number; as that of Raca is, by St James, [l] to ſuch as reſted upon Faith, without Works: [m] A Child of the Devil, is the Appellation which St Paul gives Eliphaz the Sorcerer; [n] a Generation of Vipers, is the Baptiſt's Character of the Scribes and Phariſees; and a greater than all theſe, even the Pattern and Perfection of all Meekneſs, is not, upon ſome Occaſions, aſhamed to call them [o] Fools, and blind, Hypocrites, and Children of Hell. Theſe Inſtances make it plain, that Words of Reproach are, in ſome Cases, allowable, where Charity is at the Bottom, and an high Authority in the Reprover gives ſuch Language Countenance. But ſuch Examples are not to be drawn into Precedents, without great Caution, and almoſt abſolute Neceſſity: Otherwiſe, when we intend not the Party's or the Publick's Good by thus rouſing and expoſing him, but do it purely to vent a Rage, which boils over, and to do all the Miſchief, that ill Words can do; when, upon every ſlight Provocation, or preſumed Affront, we run into ſuch contumelious and reproachful Language, as is contrived only to ſpit the Venom of a furious undiſciplined Mind, out of a filthy and licentious Tongue, ſhooting out our Arrows, even bitter Words, (without any Regard to Truth) to gall our Enemy, and wound his Reputation; we then become guilty of the Murther of the Tongue, and live in Danger of the Council, and Hell-Fire.

When not ſo.

The Murther of the Soul.

I MENTION but one Sin more, which ſeems to come within the Compaſs of this Prohibition, and that is, the Murther of our Neighbour's Soul. [p] For tho' the Soul be naturally immortal, and ſo incapable of ceaſing to be; yet, ſince it may be robbed of its Comforts, and made more miſerable, than if it were not at all; ſince, by the intoxicating Pleaſures of Sin, it may loſe all its Feeling, and be deprived of its ſpiritual Life; it may at leaſt, in a metaphorical Senſe, be ſaid to be murthered; and God, who, in his Commandment, has taken ſuch Care for the Security of the Body, cannot be ſuppoſed to have excluded or omitted the Safety of the Soul, which is by much the better and more valuable Part, as well as liable to greater and more imminent Dangers. For there are many Ways, whereby the Souls of Men may be undone, [q] by poiſoning them with wicked Principles; by ſuggeſting evil Counſels; by tempting them to Wickedneſs; by ſetting them bad Examples; by with-holding ſuch good Advice, as is neceſſary for their Preſervation; by uſing, in ſhort, any Means to induce them to Sin, and by not uſing all of thoſe Means, which are in our Power, to reclaim them from it. 'Tis the Admonition of St Paul; Take heed, leſt by any Means, this Liberty of yours (viz. in Things of an indifferent Nature) become a Stumbling-Block to them that are weak. For if any Man ſee thee, which haſt Knowledge, ſit at Meat in the Idol's Temple, ſhall not the Conſcience of him that is weak, be emboldened to eat thoſe Things, which are offered to Idols? And through thy Knowledge ſhall the weak Brother periſh, for whom Chriſt died? But when ye ſin ſo againſt the Brethren, and wound their weak Conſciences, ye ſin againſt Chriſt. [r] Nor if thoſe, who do Things, in themſelves innocent, are ſaid to lay a Stumbling-Block in the Way of ſuch, as, thro' Weakneſs, may take Occaſion from thence to do Things forbidden; if they are accuſed of ſinning againſt Chriſt, of ſinning againſt their Brethren, of wounding their Conſciences, and of deſtroying their Brethren, for whom Chriſt died: How much much more deſervedly may this Accuſation be brought againſt ſuch, as lay Stumbling-Blocks in the Ways of others, by doing Actions, and propagating Notions notoriouſly and confeſſedly ſinful; and how juſtly may they be charged with being Coadjutors to Satan, who was a Murtherer from the Beginning, in compaſſing the Deſtruction of the Souls, as well as Copartners with him, in thoſe Things, which other Men commit, through their Inſtigation?

[l] James ii. 20. [m] Acts xiii. 10. [n] Matth. iii. 7. [o] Ibid. xxiii. 15, 16. [p] Towerſon, on the Commandments. [q] Smalridge's Sermons. [r] Ibid.

THESE are ſome of the Sins, together with the Springs, and Paſſions, that engage us in them (ſuch as Pride and Covetouſneſs, Luſt and Jealouſy, Malice and Revenge) forbid in this Commandment; and the poſitive Duties, which it requires of us, [t] are, to do all we can for the Safety and Preſervation of our own and our Neighbours Life; if they are ſick, to adviſe and aſſiſt them with our Money and our Service; if they are well, to prevent their Quarrels, and make up their Differences; if they are needy, to feed and cloath them; if we have injured them, to make them all reaſonable Satisfaction; if they have injured us, freely to forgive them; if they are good Men, to encourage them in the Ways of Virtue; if they are bad, to endeavour to reclaim them; [u] putting on Bowels of Mercies (as the Apoſtle's Exhortation is) Kindneſs, Humbleneſs of Mind, Meekneſs, Long-ſuffering, forbearing and forgiving, and [u] reſtoring one another in the Spirit of Meekneſs, conſidering ourſelves, leſt we alſo be tempted. Poſitive Duties included.

Seventh Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery.

THE Word Adultery, in this Commandment, muſt be underſtood * in its moſt extenſive Signification, as including all Acts of Uncleanneſs, under this groſſeſt and moſt pernicious Inſtance of it: And therefore, after we have conſidered the Nature and Flagitiouſneſs of this in particular, we ſhall take a Curſory View of the reſt, and ſo proceed to treat of them all together.

ADULTERY is properly a Violation of the Marriage-Bed, when either one, or both of the married Parties commit Folly in Iſrael, either with a Perſon married to another, or with one, that is not married. Cuſtom indeed, which gives a Currency to Words, has, in a Manner, appropriated the Title of Adultery to the Falſeneſs of the Wife, and the Wickedneſs of him, who deludes her to it; but, [x] ſince the Terms of the Matrimonial Covenant are equally obligatory, and the Wife, according to the divine Charter, has no leſs Power over her Huſband's Body, than her Huſband has over her's; the Huſband's Offence muſt be equally chargeable with the Violation of the Contract, which was mutual; and, conſequently, with the Sin of Adultery; though it cannot be denied, but that the Conſequences of the Wife's Perfidiouſneſs are much more fatal. Adultery, what.

IT can hardly be thought, but that the Solemnity of the Rite of Marriage, which was inſtituted by God in the State of Man's Innocence, ſhould make every Infraction of it deteſtable, did not the ſhameleſs Iniquity of the Age ſeem to make nothing of it, unleſs it be, now and then, to furniſh out a Subject for Banter and Ridicule. But, (to conſider the Thing, with relation to the married Parties) [y] Is it nothing, nay rather, is it not a Crime of a very flagitious Nature, to deſpiſe the Inſtitution of Almighty God, and to make a Separation there, where he intended the ſtricteſt Unity? Is it nothing, to violate that Faith, without which the Peace of Families, and, in them the Peace of human Societies, cannot ſubſiſt? Is it nothing, to rob one another of that Comfort and Communion, which they have ſo mutually, and ſo inſeparably made over, that there's no transferring it elſewhere? Is it nothing, to give the greateſt Occaſion to Grief and Uneaſineſs, the greateſt Temptation to Malice and Revenge, where Love and Tenderneſs only ſhould interfere; and where the greateſt Honour ſhould be ſhewn, there to expoſe each other to Reproach and Infamy, to their Rival's Scorn, as well as the Drunkard's Jeſt? And, laſtly, is it nothing, on the Man's Part, to divert his Subſtance from its proper Channel, to the Maintenance of a ſtrange Woman, and the Product of her Luſt; And, on the Woman's, to make a Baſtard-Brood inherit The Heinouſneſs of it.

[t] Wake, on the Church Catechiſm. [u] Col. iii. 12, &c. [u] Gal. vi. 1. * The original Word, which our Tranſlators reſtrain to committing Adultery, comprizes all Kinds of Lewdneſs; and even μοιχᾶσθαι, in the Greek, imports, not only Adultery, in the ſtricteſt Senſe, but Fornication likewiſe. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. and Horneck's Sermons, Vol. II. [x] Towerſon, on the Commandments. [y] Ibid.

inherit the Eſtate of the legitimate, and, by her looſe Conduct, to bring thoſe, that are legitimate, under the general Suſpicion and Neglect of their Father; to ſay nothing of the Profanation of the greateſt Myſtery of our holy Religion, even the Union of Chriſt and his Church, which is repreſented by Marriage? Men may extenuate this Sin, as they pleaſe, ſcorn the Shame, and ſtupify the Senſe of it, as Solomon brings in the adulterous Woman, * wiping her Mouth, and ſaying, what Evil have I done? But he, that conſiders Things without Prejudice, muſt needs conclude, that the Crime muſt be very black, and the Falſhood very foul, which is the unhappy Parent of ſo much Injuſtice, Fraud, and Cruelty, Breach of Oath, and Breach of Modeſty, and what brings Ruin and Deſtruction upon ſo many worthy Families.

NOR is the Sin leſs, if we conſider it, with Relation to ſuch as tempt others to violate their conjugal Faith. For, beſides that they give Occaſion to all the Evils, which are the Conſequents of the married Perſon's Falſhood; they not only injure the Woman, [z] by engaging her in a Courſe of Injuſtice and Perjury, wherein ſhe may continue to the End of her Days perhaps, and then certainly to the Ruin of her immortal Soul; [a] but do the greateſt Wrong to the Man, by depriving him of that Love and Affection, to which both divine and human Laws have given him an unalienable Right, and wherein perhaps he places the chief of his Contentment and Felicity.

The Danger of it. The Misfortune is, that, though this be one of the greateſt, and moſt irreparable Wrongs, that can be done to any Man, yet ſuch is the Humour of this wicked Generation, that it is leaſt of all commiſerated. The Adulterer applauds himſelf, and makes it a Matter of his Triumph and happy Acquiſition; and the World is generally malicious enough to impute it to ſome hidden Default, and throw the Blemiſh upon the Sufferer's Reputation; and therefore well it were, if (where all Senſe of Injury fails) the Fear of Puniſhment, which, by the Jewiſh Law, was [b] Capital, with us is Penal, [c] in the primitive Times was hardly pardonable, and, [d] even among Heathen Nations, has been attended with Circumſtances, more terrible than Death itſelf; nay, well it were, if the Terrors of the Lord, who has threatened to maintain the Honour of his own Inſtitution, and all bold Contemners of it [e] to exclude from the Kingdom of Heaven; would reſtrain Men from a Sin, which involves them in endleſs Snares and Troubles, the Sufferance of Affronts, Agonies of Fear, and Amazements of Diſcovery; which waſtes the Subſtance, blaſts the Reputation, very often ſears the Conſcience under a State of final Impenitence here, and (without great Regret, and a very ſevere Repentance) [f] leads down to the Chambers of Death and Hell hereafter: So true is that of the wiſe Man, [g] whoſo committeth Adultery, lacketh Underſtanding: He that doth it, deſtroyeth his own Soul: A Wound and Diſhonour ſhall he get, and his Reproach ſhall not be wiped away.

Other Kinds of Uncleanneſs. IT will not, I hope, be expected, that we ſhould deſcend to a minute Examination of the Sin of Polygamy, Fornication, Concubinage, Rape, Inceſt, Self-Pollution, ſuch exceſſive and preternatural Luſt, as either is tranſacted between any Perſon and a Beaſt, or between two Perſons of the ſame Sex; for which the Names of Sodom and Gomorrah are only remembered, as juſtly deſtroyed, by the divine Vengeance, for their horrid Obſcenity. What can hardly be mentioned without a Bluſh, cannot well be explained with Decency: And therefore (to comprize them all under the general Head of Uncleanneſs, and treat of them in Scripture-Language, which is ſingularly chaſte and modeſt) [h] Let Fornication and all Uncleanneſs not once be named among you, as becometh Saints; neither Filthineſs, nor fooliſh Talking, nor Jeſting, which are not convenient. For this ye know, that no Whoremonger, nor unclean Perſon, hath any Inheritance in the Kingdom of Chriſt and of God: Let no Man deceive you with fair Words, (let Wits ſay what they will, in Defence or Mitigation of this Crime) ye know, that, becauſe of theſe Things, cometh the Wrath of God upon the Children of Diſobedience.

The Judgments of God upon them. For did not he, before the Law, deſtroy the Cities of the Plain, and [i] ſet them forth for an Example, making them, in ſome Senſe, a Figure and Repreſentation of Hell, even becauſe they gave themſelves up to Fornication, and going after ſtrange Fleſh? Did not he, under the Law, command the Rulers and Princes of Iſrael to be [k] hung up againſt the Sun, becauſe they themſelves committed Whoredom with the Daughters of Moab, or connived at thoſe that did ſo? And does not he, under the Goſpel, declare, declare, (charging us at the ſame Time not to be deceived) that [l] neither Fornicators, nor Adulterers, nor Effeminate, nor Abuſers of themſelves with Mankind, ſhall inherit the Kingdom of God?

* Prov. xxx. 20. [z] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [a] Fidder's Body of Divinity, Vol. II.
[b] Lev. xx. 10. [c] Cave's Primitive Chriſtianity. [d] Towerſon, on the Commandments. [e] 1 Cor. vi. 9, &c. and Gal. v. 19, 21. Heb. xiii. 4. [f] Prov. v. 5. [g] Ibid. vi. 32, 33. [h] Eph. v. 3, &c.
[i] Jud. ver. 7. [k] Numb. xxv. 1, &c.

Their Repugnancy to Chriſtianity.

[m] THE Jews indeed, with their falſe Gloſſes and Interpretations, adulterated this very Command, and gave a great Latitude to Luſt and Laſciviouſneſs; among the Gentiles, not only their Poets repreſented their Gods in a lewd and wanton Dreſs, but even [n] ſome of the greateſt and graveſt of their Philoſophers favoured Incontinence both in Men and Women; and 'tis too well known, that the Mahometan Religion is the great Miſtreſs and Patroneſs of Uncleanneſs, inſomuch, that the chief Part of its Heaven and Paradiſe is placed in carnal Embraces: But the Religion, we profeſs, is of a quite different Complexion; it allows of none of theſe Things, but enjoins the moſt ſpotleſs Purity both of Body and Soul. We are not called to Uncleanneſs, but unto Holineſs, and are therefore required, not only [o] to abſtain from fleſhly Luſts, which war againſt the Soul; but to [p] mortify our Members, which are upon Earth, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, inordinate Affection, and evil Concupiſcence; not only [q] to flee Fornication, and to have no Familiarity with any immodeſt Perſon, but even to carry our Niceneſs ſo far, as not to touch a Garment polluted with the Fleſh; to keep our Body in Subjection to the Spirit, and carefully to avoid all Temptations and Incentives, that may have a contrary Tendency: And for this Reaſon the Catholick Exhortation is, [r] let us walk honeſtly, as in the Day, not in Rioting and Drunkenneſs, not in Chambering and Wantonneſs; but put ye on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and make no Proviſion for the Fleſh, to fulfil the Luſts thereof.

Some particular Arguments againſt them.

THAT Luſt and Intemperance [s] emaſculate Mens Minds, enfeeble their Bodies, propagate Sickneſs and Infirmities to their Poſterity, and are Enemies, in ſhort, to all ſerious Counſels and generous Actions, are Arguments, which Heathen Moraliſts have ſometimes made uſe of againſt ſuch Enormities: But the Apoſtle has advanced Conſiderations, that are entirely new, and ſuch as the World knew nothing of, before the Coming of Chriſt. [t] Every Sin, ſays he, that a Man doeth, is without the Body, i. e. all other Sins (ſuch as Theft, Murther, &c.) are acted outwardly, have ſomething without for their Objects, and the Body only for their Inſtrument; but he that committeth Fornication, or any other Act of Carnality, ſinneth againſt his own Body, [u] or (as it is better rendered) ſinneth in his own Body, i. e. the Body itſelf is the individual Part, which is injured and abuſed; whereupon he argues, * Know ye not, that your Bodies are the Members of Chriſt? (by that Myſtical Union, which is between him and his Church) Shall I then take the Members of Chriſt, and make them the Members of an Harlot? God forbid: Know ye not, that your Bodies are the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt? And ſhall we take the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt, and make them Dens of impure Luſts? God forbid. Other People, that are not acquainted with the Nature of the Chriſtian Covenant, may think it left to their Liberty to diſpoſe themſelves and their Bodies as they pleaſe; but ye are not your own, but bought with a Price, therefore glorify God in your Body, and in your Spirit, which are God's.

Inward Luſt forbid.

OUR bleſſed Saviour has carried the Senſe and Import of this Commandment, even to the hidden Deſires and Purpoſes of the Heart, when he tells us, [x] ye have heard what has been ſaid by them of old Time, i. e. The Scribes and Phariſees, who, by their Traditions and narrow Explications, contracted the Seventh Commandment, vainly ſuppoſing, that where there was no outward Act of Lewdneſs, there could be no Adultery; but I ſay unto you, that whoſoever looketh on a Woman to luſt after her, hath committed Adultery with her already in his Heart, i. e. [y] "Whoſoever allows his "Eyes the Liberty of gazing upon a Woman, with an Intention of kindling, in "himſelf, or her, laſcivious and unchaſte Deſires; or whatſoever Woman adorns her-"ſelf, out of a Deſign of raiſing an unlawful Paſſion in the Breaſt of a Beholder; he "or ſhe, though they only indulge themſelves in luſtful Wiſhes, and Imaginations, "without proceeding to any unlawful Act, are Adulterers in the Eſteem of God, "and will accordingly be puniſhed."

IT muſt be obſerved, however, with Relation to theſe Words, and their Explication, that as bare Looks cannot well be avoided, and the Paſſions, which God hath implanted in us, are not originally ſinful, no nor the firſt riſing of an impure Thought, ſuppoſing [l] 1 Cor. vi. 9. [m] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [n] Thus Tully defends meretricious Amours, in his Oration P. M. Cœlio. Plutarch has his ἐρωτικὸς, or Love-Diſcourſe, not befitting ſo grave an Author; and Plato's Ἔρως παιδικὸς, or, Love for Boys, though it be dreſſed up ſometimes in a Kind of chaſte and Socratic Way; yet, at others, it appears open and barefaced, and is, indeed, unſufferable. Edwards, ibid. [o] 1 Pet. ii. 11. [p] Col. iii. 5. [q] 1 Cor. vi. 18. [r] Rom. xiii. 13, 14. [s] Wake's Expoſition of the Church Catechiſm. [t] 1 Cor. vi. 18. [u] For εἰς is here oppoſed to ἐκτὸς, without. * 1 Cor. vi. 15, &c. [x] Matth. v. 27. 28. [y] Gardiner's Sermons.

ſuppoſing it be inſtantly ſuppreſſed; ſo what our Saviour here ſpeaks of, is not any natural Deſire, or unavoidable Infirmity, but a luſtful Inclination, blown up into a Flame by our own Encouragement and fond Indulgence. [z] When a Man, for Inſtance, purpoſes to ſollicit a Woman to that, which God accounts an Abomination, or wiſhes to enjoy the dangerous Love of a Perſon, to whom he has no Matrimonial Relation; when his Deſires languiſh, becauſe he cannot gratify the baſe Luſt, which the Naughtineſs of his Heart, and the Temptations of the wicked one ſuggeſt; when he feeds himſelf with impure Imaginations, with obſcene Pictures and Images of the Perſon, upon whom his Heart is ſet; he then becomes a ſecret Adulterer or Fornicator, and muſt expect the ſame Condemnation, with thoſe, that are outwardly ſo. 'Tis the Act of the Will, which makes any Thing ſinful; and therefore, when a looſe Heart ſends out the Eye to pimp for its debauched Deſires, (as [a] one expreſſes it) and a roving Imagination pleaſes and entertains itſelf with the Speculation of a Vice, which it wiſhes for an Opportunity of practiſing; in this Caſe, Fornication and Adultery are really committed in the Heart: So far as the Sinner dares go, he goes; he has the Enjoyment of a corrupt Fancy, and the Defilement ſticks upon his Conſcience: His Spirit, the beſt Part of him, is debauched; and no Thanks to any Virtue in him, if his Body is not ſo too.

Preſervatives againſt it.

IF therefore we would preſerve ourſelves from the Violation of this Command, we muſt, in the firſt Place, follow the Wiſe Man's Advice, [b] keep our Hearts with all Diligence, becauſe out of them are the Iſſues of Life; then, fortify our Minds with proper Conſiderations, how great, how dreadful, how heinous, how dangerous, Adultery, Fornication, Laſciviouſneſs, and all Manner of Uncleanneſs is; and ſo, keep a ſtrict guard upon our Eyes, and, according to holy Job's Expreſſion, [c] make a Covenant with them, leſt, at any Time, they draw us into theſe Commiſſions: Avoid, with Abhorrence, all unclean Thoughts, all obſcene Books, or Pictures, or whatever elſe may raiſe unchaſte Ideas in the Mind: [d] Let no corrupt Communication proceed out of our Mouths: Stop our Ears to all lewd Talk, amorous Songs, or indecent Jeſts, and ſhun the Company of ſuch, as are addicted to them; avoiding, at all Times, Eaſe and Idleneſs, Luxury and Drunkenneſs, and whatever tends to nouriſh and inflame the Paſſions; and betaking ourſelves conſtantly to Prayer, to Working, and Faſting, and whatever other Severities are of Uſe, [e] to crucify the Fleſh, with its Affections and Luſts, [f] to keep under the Body, and bring it into Subjection, leſt, by any Means, we ſhould become Caſt-aways.

Eighth Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not ſteal.

The Foundation of Property.

IN this Commandment, our Civil Rights and Properties are guarded againſt all open or ſecret Invaſions, as in the two foregoing ones, our Perſons, and the Perſons of ſuch, as are related to us, are ſecured againſt Violence and Luſt. But becauſe ſome have made it a Queſtion, whether there is any ſuch Thing as Right and Property in the World, it may not be amiſs to premiſe; that, [g] whereas Almighty God, by the Word of his Power, at firſt created, and ſtill preſerveth, all Things; all Things that are, muſt needs be his, and ſubmitted to his Diſpoſal: And therefore whatever any Man has, whether Houſes, or Lands, or Cattle, or Money, the Goods and Riches (as Men call them) of this Life; or howſoever he came by them, whether by Inheritance, Gift, or Purchaſe, by his Wit or Valour, by any Office or Calling, by his Care or Induſtry, or any other lawful Way, they muſt be ſuppoſed to come originally from God: And though God reſerves to himſelf his own Propriety in them, ſo that he may take them away again, when he pleaſes; yet, whenever he gives any Man the Poſſeſſion of them, he thereby gives him ſuch a Right, and Title to them, as makes them his own, in Reſpect of all other Men; inſomuch, that no Man has any Thing to do with them, but only he; and he alone is to give an Account of the Uſe of them to God, from whom he received them, and under whom he holds them.

As

[z] Horneck's Sermons, Vol. II. [a] Gardiner's Sermons. [b] Prov. iv. 23. [c] Job xxxi. 1. [d] Eph. iv. 29. [e] Gal. v. 24. [f] 1 Cor. ix. 27. [g] Beveridge, on the Church Catechiſm.

As therefore God is the great Proprietor of the World, and our Poſſeſſions are the Fruit of his Donation; ſo, to ſecure and confirm to every one the civil Right and Uſe of what he has put in his Hand, he has been pleaſed to make and publiſh this Law, to be obſerved by all Mankind, Thou ſhalt not ſteal: That is to ſay, [h] thou ſhalt not take from another Man any Thing that is his, or what God has given him: Thou ſhalt not take it by Force or by Fraud, openly or clandeſtinely; for we muſt not underſtand the Prohibition to relate only to what we commonly call Theft or Robbery, but to every unlawful and indirect Way, whereby we intrench upon our Neighbour's Right; whether it be by Forgery, Perjury, or the Subornation of Witneſſes in the Courts of Judicature; by lying, diſſembling, or concealing the Truth; by defrauding, cheating, or over-reaching in any Contract or Bargain; [i] by borrowing, or otherwiſe contracting Debts, we never intend to pay; by engaging for others above what we are able, or is fitting for us to anſwer; by oppreſſing the Needy, and extorting from ſuch, as, we know, we have Power to over-bear; by with-holding the Wages of the Hireling, and any Ways wearing thoſe out by Delays, that have a juſt Claim upon us. To this we may add the whole Myſtery of ruining Eſtates and Families, by the exorbitant Rates of procuring, continuing, and advancing of Money and Intereſt; the Trade of Pawns, as it is commonly manag'd, and the Exactions depending thereupon; and laſtly, all ſuch Trades, as live upon the Vices and Extravagancies of Men, together with all other wicked and injurious Ways of Gain. Theſe, and whatever other Practices are ſubſervient or acceſſary to the foregoing Methods of Injuſtice and Wrong, are Violations of this Command, and fall under the Denomination of Stealing. The different Kinds of Theft.

[k] Let no Man go beyond, or defraud his Brother in any Matter, is the Exhortation of the Apoſtle, and the Reaſon he aſſigns is this, becauſe the Lord is a Revenger of all ſuch. And well may he be a Revenger of a Crime, which is not only a Violation of his Authority, and a Contradiction to the eſſential Properties of his Nature; but a bold Uſurpation of his Prerogative, and Invaſion of his Province of beſtowing his own where he pleaſes. The Diſturbance and Overthrow of human Order and Happineſs, the Ruin and Deſtruction of mutual Truſt and Confidence, (whereof Juſtice is the main Pillar and Support) are Reflections, that perhaps ſeldom enter into the Thoughts of ſuch, as make haſte to be rich; but well it were, if they would conſider their own Intereſt in the Purſuit, and the wiſe Man's Aſſertion concerning the Event of it; [l] He that haſteth to be rich, hath an evil Eye, and conſidereth not, that Poverty ſhall come upon him. To better their Condition, and improve their Fortune; to build their Neſts on high, and raiſe themſelves above the Contingency of Want, is perhaps the chief Deſign of ſuch, as purſue any unjuſtifiable Methods of Gain; and yet, whether it is, that God, in his righteous Judgment, permits them to fall into the Hands of Cheats and Oppreſſors, and, as they [m] have ſpoiled many People, themſelves to be defrauded and circumvented by others; or that there is a ſecret Curſe attending all unjuſt Gains, which (as the Prophet expreſſes it) enters into the Houſe of the Thief, remains there, and conſumes the very Timber and Stones thereof; but ſo it is, that the holy Scriptures have aſſured us, that [o] he, who oppreſſeth the Poor, to increaſe his Riches, ſhall ſurely come to want; and that, [p] as the Partridge ſitteth on Eggs, and hatcheth them not; ſo he, that getteth Riches, and not by Right, ſhall leave them in the Midſt of his Days, and at the End ſhall be a Fool: A Fool, when amidſt his ill-gotten Poſſeſſions, he ſhall find his Conſcience expoſed to perpetual Trouble and Diſquiet, while every Thing, he ſees about him, throws Guilt in his Face, and awakens ſome dire Reflection in his Breaſt: A Fool, when upon his Bed of Sickneſs, his laſt Will and Teſtament ſhall preſent him with a Catalogue of uncancelled Crimes, and almoſt every Penny, he bequeaths, put him in mind of his approaching Doom: And laſtly, a Fool, when, on the great Day of Accounts, his ſly Tricks and Stratagems of Injuſtice ſhall be expoſed, and himſelf forced to acknowledge the hard Bargain of all unjuſt Acquiſitions in this Life, ſure to incur the Penalty of Damnation in the other: For ſuch is the Will and Decree of God, that [q] neither Thieves, nor Covetous, nor Oppreſſors, nor Extortioners, ſhall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven; whereupon the Poſition of the wiſe Man muſt needs be a true Inference and Concluſion, that [r] better is a little with Righteouſneſs, than great Revenues without Right. The Folly and Wickedneſs thereof.

As therefore we would not provoke God, injure our Neighbour, or undo ourſelves, it concerns us nearly to be true and juſt in all our Dealings, not willing to wrong, or The contrary Duties.

[h] Beveridge, on the Church Catechiſm. [i] Wake's Expoſition of the Church Catechiſm, and Towerſon, on the Commandments. [k] 1 Theſ. iv. 6. [l] Prov. xxviii. 22. [m] Hab. ii. 8, &c. [n] Zech. v. 3, 4. [o] Prov. xxii. 16. [p] Jer. xvii. 11. [q] 1 Cor. vi. 10. [r] Prov. xvi. 8.

be acceſſary to the wronging of any; [t] to render unto all their Due; Tribute to whom Tribute is due, Cuſtom to whom Cuſtom, Fear to whom Fear, Honour to whom Honour; to be careful to provide a competent Subſiſtence for our Families, and, in order thereunto, to be diligent in the Purſuit of ſome honeſt and uſeful Calling; to be frugal and ſaving of what God has given us, moderate and prudent in our Expences, punctual in the Payment of our Debts, and charitable in our Relief of the Poor; in all our Intercourſes, in ſhort, with other Men, to adhere to that Standard of Righteouſneſs, which our great Maſter has given us, [*] of doing to others, as we would they ſhould do unto us; or, if in any other Inſtance we have tranſgreſſed againſt it, to have Recourſe to that other Rule, which his Apoſtle has ſet us; [t] let him that ſtole, ſteal no more, but rather let him labour, working with his Hands the Thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth.

Ninth Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not bear falſe Witneſs againſt thy Neighbour.

The Senſe of the Words.

THE Word Witneſs, in its primary Senſe, [u] is a judicial Term, importing the Teſtimony, which is given, in Courts of Judicature, for the Deciſion of Controverſies, in Matters of capital, or high Concernment: And to bear falſe Witneſs againſt our Neighbour is, to depoſe any Thing upon Oath, or [x] by Way of ſolemn Affirmation, in legal Proceedings, to the Prejudice of his Life or Fortune, when we know very well, that ſuch our Depoſition is contrary to the real Sentiments of our Minds, and given with a Purpoſe to impoſe on thoſe, whom it may concern. But ſince there is a farther Meaning of the Words, wherein they are often uſed to ſignify all extrajudicial Teſtimonies (in Matters of leſs Moment, and common Converſe) in ſome Degree affecting the Intereſt and Reputation of our Neighbour; after we have conſidered, what is the principal Intendment of the Precept, viz. the forbidding falſe Evidences in judiciary Proceedings, we ſhall examine into ſome farther Inſtances, wherein it is equally violated.

The Sin of falſe witneſſing in judicial Caſes.

[y] I. THE Uſe, or rather the Neceſſity of Witneſſes, in Caſes of judicial Enquiry, is abundantly manifeſt, from a natural Unwillingneſs in moſt Men to confeſs, what, oftentimes, they have not the Grace to abſtain from committing; and an Inability in the wiſeſt Judges to make a right Determination, without a full Knowledge of the State of the Controverſy, which can only be attained by the Information of indifferent Perſons: And therefore for a Man, (when [z] convened before a competent Authority, to declare what he knows) either to atteſt a Thing that is falſe, or conceal any Thing that is true, when it tends to clear up, and determine the Matter in Queſtion, is a Crime attended with the Aggravations of being done in the moſt ſolemn Manner; in Contempt of the Laws, and of the Reaſons, upon which Perſons are impowered to take Cognizance in ſuch Caſes; in Prejudice to the common Good and Happineſs of Society, which can never be preſerved without a due and conſcientious Regard to Truth; and in Violation of the higheſt and moſt authentick Sanction, that can be given to any Teſtimony, the laſt [a] Confirmation for an End of Strife: Beſides the Ruin, [b] that it, many Times, brings upon the Perſon againſt whom it is levelled; the Aſſiſtance it lends his Adverſary to accompliſh his wicked Deſigns upon him; and the Obſtruction it gives the Magiſtrate, (upon whoſe Lips Mens Lives and Fortunes very often depend) in the juſt and impartial Adminiſtration of Juſtice. For this Reaſon, the Tongue, that bears falſe Witneſs, is commonly called, by the Rabbins, the Triple Tongue; for, according to them, it kills three; him, that ſpeaks; him, that hears; and him, that is ſpoken of: And, for this Reaſon, their Law gives them theſe Injunctions; [c] Be not Witneſs againſt thy Neighbour, without a Cauſe; [d] put not thine Hand with the Wicked to be an unrighteous Witneſs; and, upon the Diſcovery of any ſuch Injuſtice, allows of the Penalty of Retaliation: [e] If a falſe Witneſs riſe up againſt any Man, and teſtify againſt him that which is wrong, the Judges ſhall make diligent Inquiſition; and behold, if the Witneſs be a falſe Witneſs, and hath teſtified falſely againſt his Brother, then ſhall ye do unto him, as he thought to have done unto his Brother.

THE

[a] Rom. xiii. 7, 8. [*] Matth. vii. 12. [t] Eph. iv. 28. [u] Newcome's Catech. Sermons, Vol. II.
[x] An Indulgence, which the Law allows the People called Quakers. [y] Towerſon, on the Commandments.
[z] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [a] Heb. vi. 16. [b] Towerſon, ibid. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [c] Prov. xxiv. 28. [d] Exod. xxiii. 1. [e] Deut. xix. 16, &c.

THE Truth is, there is ſuch a Complication of Injuſtice and Villainy, of Boldneſs and Impiety; ſuch a baſe Proſtitution of Conſcience, and Deſtruction of the very Uſe and Ends of Judicatures, in this Practice; [f] that every falſe and ſuborned Witneſs ought to be looked upon, and deteſted as a publick Enemy, and common Diſturber of the Peace and Welfare of Mankind; and ſince there is no particular Perſon, but what has his private Intereſt concerned, and endangered in the Miſchief, that ſuch a Wretch does to the Publick, no Puniſhment can well be too ſevere for him; nor can any Court be too ſolemn in the Admiſſion, or too nice in the Examination of ſuch, as ſeem to be too forward in the Manner of offering themſelves to be Witneſſes. A falſe Witneſs, a publick Evil.

IT is uſually obſerved farther, that, though Witneſſes are chiefly concerned, yet all Perſons, that have any Buſineſs in publick Courts, and do any Way appertain to the Law, come within the Compaſs of this Commandment, and therefore, the Plaintiff, when he raiſes a falſe Accuſation, or mixes true and untrue Reports together in his Plea; the Defendant, when, to retard Juſtice, he denies that in Judgment, which his Adverſary juſtly charges him with; the Advocate, when he defends a wrong Cauſe, or makes falſe Repreſentations to the Judge and Jury; the Judge, when he ſuffers himſelf to be bribed, or ſeduced, or importuned to give a wrong Sentence; or the Jury, by any of theſe Means, to give a wrong Verdict: All theſe are guilty of bearing falſe Witneſs; and a great and crying Sin it is, when, in any of theſe Perſons, or by any of theſe Methods, Juſtice is perverted, and [g] Judgment (as the Prophet elegantly expreſſeth it) ſpringeth up as Hemlock, in the Furrows of the Field. This ſeems to be the primary Intention of the Precept: But, Others concerned in this Command.

II. IN a civil and extrajudicial Senſe (as we ſaid) it may not improperly be extended to the Prohibition of all Falſifications whatever; more eſpecially Lying, and Slandering, as they are Sins, which affect the Intereſt and Reputation of our Neighbour.

I. LYING is ſo frequently condemned in Scripture, and Lyars ſo often numbered amongſt the moſt profligate Sinners, that there is no Queſtion to be made of its Enormity, were but Men agreed, wherein its Nature does conſiſt: But herein both Divines and Moraliſts are greatly divided. [h] Some have made the Eſſence of a Lye to conſiſt in our thinking one Thing, and ſpeaking another: But, ſince there lies no Obligation on any one to tell always what he thinks; ſince thus to diſcover all our Thoughts is, in many Caſes, highly imprudent, and, in ſome Circumſtances, uncharitable and unjuſt; a Man may certainly, without Lying, without Sin, without offending God, or wounding his own Conſcience, think of thoſe Things, that he does not ſpeak of; provided he be careful to ſpeak nothing, but what he really thinks. Others therefore, by a Lye, underſtand, a voluntary Declaration of what is falſe; but it is a Miſtake to think, that the Falſehood of what is ſpoken, is eſſential to a Lye, ſince, though a Man ſhould ſpeak that, which is really true, yet if, when he ſpeaks it, he thinks it to be falſe, he is, without doubt, guilty of the Sin of Lying; as, on the contrary, he that ſpeaks what eventually proves falſe, if, when he ſpeaks it, he thinks it to be true, is certainly not chargeable with this Crime: And therefore, others, with more Juſtneſs, have concluded, that the Nature of Lying conſiſts [i] in the Intention of the Speaker to deceive by his Speech; and that, whether what is ſaid be in itſelf true or falſe; whether it agrees with the Thoughts of him, who ſpeaks it, or not; yet, if it plainly tends to deceive the Hearer; if he, who ſpeaks it, perceives the Tendency, and uſes it to this End; however diſguiſed it is, or under whatſoever Forms it be expreſſed, it is, to all Intents and Purpoſes, a Lye, involving the Speaker in the Guilt of Lying, and expoſing him to the Puniſhment threatened againſt Lyars. Different Opinions of the Nature of a Lye. Wherein its Nature really lies.

[k] No Benefit would accrue to Society by Speech, unleſs Men, by an expreſs or tacit Covenant, had agreed, or unleſs, by ſome ſuperior and antecedent Law, they were obliged, whenever they profeſs to open their Minds one to another, to do it with Sincerity. They may conceal their Sentiments indeed, when no one has a Right to know them, by Silence; but, whenever they make uſe of Words, they pretend thereby, to diſcover their Thoughts; and are therefore falſe to their Brethren, if they do not really perform what they pretend. [l] Every Man has a natural Right to Truth; and to communicate in our real Sentiments, if ſo be we think it fit to reveal our Sentiments at all: And therefore, when in our Declarations, Promiſes, or Profeſſions, there is a Repugnancy between what we ſay, and what we think; [m] when, by our Speech, we intend to impoſe upon the Credulity of others; when we abuſe Its Heinouſneſs.

the

[f] South's Sermons, Vol. I. [g] Towerſon, on the Commandments, and Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [h] Hoſ. x. 4. [i] South's Sermons, Vol. I. and Smalridge's Sermons. [k] Smalridge, ibid. [l] The Whole Duty of Man. [m] Smalridge, ibid.

the Truſt and Confidence, that they have in us, ſo far as to deceive them, at the very Moment we pretend to inform them aright; when we willingly, knowingly, and deliberately, under a Pretence of diſcloſing our Thoughts unto them, ſtudy to miſlead and miſguide them; ſuch a foul Prevarication, as this, is inconſiſtent with the Laws of God, and with the Rules of common Honeſty; 'tis an Act of great Baſeneſs and Diſingenuity, with Regard to ourſelves; of great Injuſtice and Uncharitableneſs to our Neighbour; and of great Boldneſs and Preſumption againſt the Omniſcient God, who ſearches our Reins and Hearts: And therefore the Scripture aſſures us, that [n] as a Lye is a foul Blot to him that uſes it, ſo it is [o] an Abomination to the Lord, and [p] a Matter of Deteſtation to the Righteous; that, conſequently [q] it excludes from Happineſs, and conſigns [r] to the Lake, which burneth with Fire and Brimſtone; for [s] a falſe Witneſs ſhall not be unpuniſhed, and he that ſpeaketh Lyes, ſhall not eſcape,

An officious Lye.

"BUT may not he eſcape, [t] who, to do a kind Office, rather than an Injury; to "appeaſe (for Inſtance) thoſe, that are angry; to comfort thoſe, that are dejected; "to diſſuade wicked Men from evil Purpoſes; or to excite good Men to commendable "Actions; to ſave the Life of a dear Friend, or preſerve an excellent Perſon from "periſhing; may not he, I ſay, now and then deviate from Truth, and ſpeak other-"wiſe than he thinks, in order to attain theſe good and commendable Ends?" A very learned and judicious [u] Divine of our Church gives us a full and peremptory Anſwer to this Queſtion. We know not a greater Good, ſays he, (for there is not a greater Good) than the Glory of God; we ſcarce know a leſſer Sin (if any Sin can be accounted little) than an harmleſs officious Lye: Yet may not this be done, even for the Sake of that. WILT THOU SPEAK WICKEDLY FOR GOD, AND TALK DECEITFULLY FOR HIM? ſays Zophar to Job; (where the Queſtion certainly implies the full Force of a Prohibition) and if we may not ſpeak deceitfully for the Glory of God, then certainly not for any other inferior End: Not for the ſaving of a Life; [*] not for the Converſion of a Soul; not for the Peace of a Church; and (if even it were poſſible) not for the Redemption of the World: For no Intention of an End can warrant the Choice of ſinful Means to compaſs it. [x] Officious Lyes are, without all doubt, much leſs flagitious, much more excuſable, than miſchievous ones; but they may ſtill be Sins, though not ſo heinous: They are certainly Faults, if they want to be excuſed. And therefore, though we are diſpoſed eaſily to forgive thoſe, who never allow themſelves to ſpeak what is falſe, but when they may do their Neighbour a good Turn by it; yet we cannot but eſteem, and commend, and reverence thoſe Perſons, and pay a more entire Deference to their Word, who think it not allowable to ſpeak that which is falſe in any Caſe, or for any End whatever.

Not allowable, though not ſo ſinful.

Evil-ſpeaking, the ſeveral Kinds of it.

2. ANOTHER Inſtance of bearing falſe Witneſs, is ſuch Evil-ſpeaking in general, as tends to leſſen the Reputation, and increaſe the Reproach and Diſparagement of our Neighbour: And this, [y] whether the Things related be true or falſe; ſpoken to the Face, or behind the Back; in expreſs Terms, or by Way of Inſinuation; in a ſerious or in a jocular Manner. If the Thing be falſe, and we know it, 'tis downright Calumny; if we know it not, but only take it upon the Report of others, 'tis nevertheleſs Slander. If the Thing be true, and we know it, 'tis Defamation, as prejudicing our Neighbour's good Name; if ſpoken to his Face, (which ſeems to be more generous) 'tis Reviling; if behind his Back, (which is vile and baſe) 'tis what we properly call, Slander or Back-biting. In what Manner of Addreſs this Evil-ſpeaking is convey'd, does not much alter the Caſe, ſo long as it has the Effect to defame; only it may be obſerved, that, many Times, the deepeſt Wounds are given by the ſmootheſt and moſt artificial Ways of Slander.

The Miſchief of it.

[z] MANY have fallen by the Edge of the Sword, (ſays the wiſe Son of Syrach, deſcribing the Miſchiefs of Slander and Defamation) but not ſo many, as have fallen by the Tongue. Well is he, that is defended from it, and hath not paſſed through the Venom thereof; who hath not drawn the Yoke thereof; nor been bound in its Bands: For the Yoke thereof is a Yoke of Iron, and the Bands thereof are Bands of Braſs; the Death thereof is an evil Death; and the Grave were better than it. The Truth is, [a] ſince all Men (eſpecially Men of Honour and Honeſty) do, from a neceſſary Inſtinct of Nature, [n] Eccluſ. xx. 24. [o] Prov. xii. 22. [p] Ibid. xiii. 5. [q] Rev. xx. 15. [r] Ibid. xxi. 8. [s] Prov. xix. 5. [t] The Papiſts are of Opinion, that officious Lyes are venal Sins; the Socinians, that they are allowable, becauſe they hurt nobody, and many Times do a great deal of Good; and ſome of our own Divines, that in ſome Caſes, and for ſome Ends, they are juſtifiable; but all this ſeems to be a groſs Miſtake. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [u] Sanderſon, ad Clerum, Ser. II. [*] Ad ſempiternam ſalutem nullus ducendus eſt, opitulante Mendacio. Aug. de Mend. C. 19. and Rom. iii. 8. [x] Smalridge's Sermons. [y] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [z] Eccluſ. xxviii. 18, &c. [a] Barrow's Works, Vol. I.

Nature, eſteem a good Name beyond all temporal Enjoyments, and hold it more dear and precious, than their very Lives; the Man, that either openly, or clandeſtinely deprives them of it, does them as much Wrong, as if he had robbed them of their Subſtance, or maliciouſly taken away their Lives. Since [b] all Men (eſpecially Men of Merit and Abilities) deſire to be uſeful, and conſiderable in the Society, wherein they live, and can hardly attain to that End, without preſerving a fair Reputation in the World; the Man, who ſullies or defaces that, puts ſo many Bands and Yokes upon them; he lays an Embargo upon their Promotion, and cramps the Sinews of their Endeavours to riſe. For 'tis impoſſible that the greateſt Merit ſhould ſhine forth with a due Luſtre, when Calumny and Reproach have effectually obſcured it. Both to the ſuffering Perſon,

BE the Report never ſo unjuſt, all Men have not Time, and few will give themſelves Trouble to enquire into the Grounds of it: Many will be pleaſed with the Miſrepreſentation, from ſome agreeable Humour or Turn of Wit in it; and ſome from a natural Inclination to depretiate ſuperior Merit, ſometimes from a Motive of Envy or Revenge, and, on certain Occaſions, of Intereſt and Competition, will not diſlike it. Thus the Story will have a free Paſſage given it; [c] and, as a poiſonous Vapour ſometimes infects a whole City, or Country; ſo a Calumny, once ſet forward, and meeting with ſo general an Encouragement, will be apt not only to ſpread itſelf wide, but the wider it ſpreads, the more to increaſe its Malignity. Little therefore does the firſt Author of it know, to how vaſt an Account, the Injury he has done, may ſwell; and leſs is he able to make a valuable Satisfaction to the Sufferer, for an Indignity, that not only lies heavy upon the Perſon himſelf, while he lives, but [d] deſcends to his Children and Poſterity: Becauſe the good or ill Name of the Father is derived down to them, and, many Times, the beſt Thing, he has to leave them, is the Reputation of an unblemiſhed Virtue and Worth, which the Mouth of the Slanderer labours to deſtroy. and his Poſterity.

THE wiſe King of Iſrael, therefore, conſidering the laſting and irreparable Injury and Injuſtice, which Slander and Defamation bring upon any Perſon, compares Men, whoſe Pleaſure lies that Way, to thoſe, that are really diſtracted; [e] as a Madman, ſays he, who caſteth out Fire-brands, Arrows and Death; ſo is he, that [f] defameth his Neighbour, and ſaith, am I not in Sport; 'Tis wild Mirth, however, which is the Mother of Grief to thoſe, whom we ſhould tenderly love; and a cruel and unnatural Sport it is, to play with a Man's good Name, and expoſe his Character to be baited, as it were, for the Laughter and Entertainment of the Company. The Reputation is too noble a Sacrifice to be offered to Raillery; [g] and a Good too dear and precious, and withal too tender and brittle, to be handled with Levity, or proſtituted to any one's Diverſion. The Madneſs of it.

3. THERE are ſome other Inſtances of bearing falſe Witneſs againſt their Neighbour reducible to this Commandment; ſuch as, 1. Detraction, [h] which conſiſts in repreſenting his Perſon and Actions in the moſt diſadvantageous View; impairing his good Qualities, improving his Defects, and interpoſing Exceptions to all his Commendations. 2. Flattery, the oppoſite Extreme, which hides and palliates his Vices, and raiſes and enhances his Virtues, in order to ſooth his Vanity, and increaſe his Self-conceit. And, 3. All Falſification of our Words, either in Contracts, or Promiſes, which cannot but have a manifeſt Tendency to his Prejudice and Diſappointment. Other Inſtances of it,

THESE are ſome of the principal Tranſgreſſions againſt this Precept; and the poſitive Duties, that ſeem to be included in it, are; [i] to be religiouſly ſtrict, both in civil and judicial Matters; to ſpeak nothing but the Truth; and be very exact in our delivering and deſcanting upon it, that we give no Occaſion to Miſtakes; to allow every one their Due; to report nothing that may tend to their Diſgrace, nor detract any Thing from their juſt Eſteem; to vindicate their Reputation, as far as we fairly can, and to hold our Tongues, at leaſt not to aggravate their Faults, where we cannot; to be ſincere in our Promiſes and Contracts, in our Praiſes and Commendations, as well as our Admonitions and Reproofs; bearing always in Mind, that ſolemn, that awful Declaration of our Lord and Maſter, [k] Every idle Word (and much more every ſlanderous and detracting, every hurtful and pernicious Word) that Men ſhall ſpeak, they ſhall give an Account thereof, at the Day of Judgment; for by thy Words thou ſhalt be juſtified, and by thy Words thou ſhalt be condemned. and the poſitive Duties ariſing from it.

[b] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [c] Fiddes's Sermons. [d] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [e] Prov. xxvi. 18. [f] So the LXX render it. [g] Barrow's Works, Vol. I. [h] Ibid. [i] Wake, on the Church Catechiſm. [k] Matth. xii. 36, 37.

Tenth Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not covet thy Neighbour's Houſe, &c.

Why this Commandment laſt.

THIS Commandment is the laſt of the ſecond Table; and as the other, (which, in ſome Reſpects, are reducible to it) do, in their literal Senſe, relate only to our external Actions; in this we are directed, how to regulate what is the internal Spring and Movement of all we do, our Deſires and Inclinations: And the Wiſdom of God thought proper to place it here, not [l] only to be a Supplement and Recapitulation, but a Security and Guard, as it were, to the reſt; being well aware, that as no Man can keep the other, except he keep this; ſo a due Senſe and Obſervation of this would make the Performance of all the other eaſy.

THERE ſeems however to be a Miſtake in thoſe, who imagine, [m] that this Precept is chiefly intended to reſtrain the firſt Motions and Stirrings of Sin, (called by the Divines Concupiſcence) which ariſes in the ſenſual Appetite, previouſly to any deliberate Act of the Intellect, or Conſent of the Will. Whether the firſt Motions of Concupiſcence, which ariſe in our Minds ſuddenly, and without any previous or ſubſequent Conſent, are, in a proper Senſe, Criminal, is not ſo well agreed: But admitting they be ſinful, and that, by an eaſy Way of arguing, they may be reduced to this Commandment; yet, ſince the other Commandments, which forbid all ſenſual Acts, do equally forbid the Principle, from whence they ariſe; the Thing, which ſeems here chiefly and properly to be prohibited, is an unlawful and inordinate Deſire of that, which, by Right and Property, belongs to another: And in Contrapoſition to this, the Thing that ſeems chiefly to be recommended, is to be content, and fully ſatisfied with that Portion of outward Things, which the good Providence of God has been pleaſed to beſtow on us, without envying, or greedily deſiring the Poſſeſſions, that are our Neighbours. So that the Commandment, both as to its negative, and affirmative Senſe, reſolves itſelf very properly into this double Exhortation of the Apoſtle; [n] Let your Converſation be without Covetouſneſs, and be content with ſuch Things as ye have.

All coveting not ſinful.

COVETOUSNESS indeed is an odious Name, which moſt Men are aſhamed to own; but all Covetouſneſs is not criminal, neither is the Deſire of what is another's, ſo long as it keeps within due Bounds, unallowable. [o] 'Tis a natural, 'tis a neceſſary Paſſion in us; and we may as well expect Light not to ſhine, or Fire not to burn, as that the Repreſentation of a Good, which we want, and may have from another, ſhould not affect us, and make us wiſh and deſire to obtain it. The Profit of Commerce, the Income of Induſtry, the Reward of Arts and Sciences, are the common Spur and Incentive to Men's Endeavours: Theſe Things they preſent to their Thoughts, and ſet before their Expectations; and yet theſe Things, for the moſt part, are the Property of another.

When, and in what Caſe it is.

IT is not therefore the Deſire, but the Inordinacy of the Deſire, that falls under the Prohibition in this Precept. [p] When Men give up their Minds and Affections to ſuch Things, as, by the Laws of God and Man, the Proprietor cannot alienate; to ſuch Things, as are ſo neceſſary and beneficial to him, that, without manifeſt Detriment, he cannot part with; to ſuch Things, as are the peculiar Objects of his Eſteem and Affection, and without great Grief and Trouble of Heart, he cannot forego; or, when they ſuffer their ill-grounded Deſires to proceed ſo far, as to diſcompoſe their Minds, and devour their Eaſe and Self-enjoyment; to raiſe turbulent Thoughts, and anxious Reſentments in their Breaſt: In ſhort, when they have ſo far ſet their Hearts upon what is another's, as to be reſtleſs, till they have it, and diſcontented, if they have it not, they then incur the Sin of Covetouſneſs, properly ſo called, even tho' they meditate (as yet) no unlawful Methods to obtain it. For this ſeems to be Ahab's Sin, in coveting Naboth's Vineyard, that he could not reſt himſelf ſatisfied with all his own Abundance, but ſet his Mind upon his Neighbour's Plot; [q] which, lying ſo commodiouſly for him, irritated his Deſires to ſuch a Degree, that,

Ahab's Caſe.

[l] Barrow, on the Decalogue. [m] Sanderſon ad Aulam, Ser. 5. [n] Heb. xiii. 5. [o] Newcome's Catech. Sermons, Vol. II. [p] Towerſon, on the Commandments.

[q] ——————O ſi angulus ille
Proximus accedat, qui nunc denormat agellum! ——— HOR. Sat. Lib. II.

that, unleſs he might have it, he could no longer enjoy his own. [r] He had not as yet (as far as it appears from the Hiſtory) any ſettled Purpoſe or Deſign to wreſt it from him by Force, or to weary him out of it by unjuſt Vexations: He offered fair Terms, either by Purchaſe or Exchange, to obtain it of him: Here was neither Fraud nor Violence, nor Threatnings uſed: The whole outward Carriage was civil, and the Propoſals reaſonable: All the Fault was within, and that Fault conſiſted in his inordinate Deſire of what was not his own; which Inordinacy diſcovered itſelf afterwards, in the Signs and Effects of a diſcontented Mind: [s] He came into his Houſe, heavy and diſpleaſed, laid him down upon his Bed, and turned away his Face, and would eat no Bread.

THIS farther Leſſon we may learn from Ahab's ſubſequent Behaviour, that when once the Spirit of Covetouſneſs has taken Poſſeſſion of a Man, it will not be long before it ſtupifies his Conſcience, and goads him on to the Perpetration of any Wickedneſs, in order to accompliſh his Deſires. "If Naboth will part with his Vine-"yard, he ſhall have his Price; but, if he will not, another Expedient muſt be "found out: Letters muſt be written, Witneſſes ſuborned, Juſtice perverted, and "an innocent Perſon (had not the Situation of his Vineyard made him guilty) un-"der a mock Form of Trial, and much baſe Hypocriſy, accuſed, condemned, and "executed." To ſuch Lengths of Miſchief and Flagitiouſneſs will the Indulgence of a vicious inordinate Deſire lead us, when the Object we covet, blinds our Eyes, and the Inſtigations of Satan prompt us on! The miſchievous Conſequences of Covetouſneſs.

GOOD Reaſon, therefore, had our bleſſed Saviour to give us ſo ſtrict a Caution againſt this Sin above all others; Take Heed, and beware of Covetouſneſs; for look upon all the Frauds, that are practiſed every where among the Sons of Men; take a Survey of all Oppreſſions, the greater and the leſs Oppreſſions, that are done under the Sun, and you will find, that moſt of them owe both their firſt Birth, and After-growth to this curſed Root of Covetouſneſs. [t] Extortion, Bribery, Flattery, Calumny, Perjury, Simony, Sacrilege, unjuſt Wars and Suits, falſe Weights and Meaſures in Markets, falſe Lights and Wares in Shops, falſe Pleas and Oaths in Courts, the Coldneſs of Charity, and Perfidiouſneſs of Friends, the Want of Bowels, and Bloodineſs of Mind, do they not all come from hence? And does not the Frequency of theſe in the World unanſwerably convince the Men of this Generation of much Injuſtice and Uncharitableneſs, in coveting other Mens Goods, and not being content with their own?

CONTENTMENT [u] is ſuch an Acquieſcence of the Mind in that Portion of outward Things, which we poſſeſs, upon a Perſuaſion of its being ſufficient for us, * as makes us well pleaſed with the Condition we are in, and ſuffers not the Deſire of any Change, or of any particular Thing we have not, to trouble our Spirits, or diſcompoſe our Duty. And to bring ourſelves to this Frame of Mind, it may not be improper to conſider,—[x] That as God is the Creator and Preſerver, and, conſequently, the Lord and Governor of all Things, his Right and Prerogative it is, to aſſign every Man his Station, and allot every Man his Portion, as he judges moſt convenient: That, as he is infinite in Wiſdom, and boundleſs in Goodneſs, [y] he both knows, better than we do ourſelves, what Condition is fitteſt for us, and will be ſure to appoint us, what he eſteems to be ſo: [z] That we ourſelves, as God's Creatures, have no juſt Claim to any Thing, (all we have, or can have, coming from the Bounty of Heaven) and therefore, how little ſoever is allowed us, have no Wrong done us, nor any Right to complain: That as we are his Servants, our Work, our Garb, our Diet, how we are to be employed, and how accommodated, is entirely at our Maſter's Diſcretion; and, as we are Sinners, any Allowance is good enough, and better than we deſerve: That this World, at beſt, is but [a] a ſhort Scene, where every one is to act ſuch a Part, as the great Maſter of the Drama thinks fit to give him; and that it matters not much, whether it falls to our Share, to act the Prince or the Peaſant, ſo long as we perform but handſomely what we are to do: That Contentment, what. Conſiderations leading to it. 1. From God. 2. From ourſelves.

[r] Sanderſon ad Aulam, Ser. 5. [s] 1 Kings xxi. 4. [t] Sanderſon, ibid. [u] Towerſon, on the Commandments. * Patrick, on Contentment. [x] Barrow's Works, Vol. III. Sermon 6.

[y] Permittes ipſis expendere numinibus, quid
Conveniat nobis, rebuſque ſit utile noſtris:
Nam pro jucundis aptiſſima quæque dabunt Dii, Charior eſt illis Homo, quam ſibi. —— JUV. Sat. x.

[z] Barrow, ubi ſupra. [a] Μίμνησο, ὅτι ὑποκριτὴς εἶ δράματος οἷον ἂν θέλῃ ὁ διδάσκαλος, &c. EPIC. Enchir. c. 23.

3. From the World. That [b] this World is but an Inn, and ourſelves but Paſſengers, and therefore it need not much diſturb us, if our Accommodations happen to be mean, ſince it is but for a very ſhort Stay we have to make, and Heaven, our native Home, will make us a full Amends, when we come to our Journey's End. What ſhould we think on more? Even what every Day's Experience teaches us, that [c] our Life conſiſteth not in the Abundance of the Things that we poſſeſs: That Contentment is rarely, more rarely to be found in a ſplendid, than in a moderate Fortune: [d] That the Things we naturally enjoy, are greater in Value, as well as more in Number, than thoſe we fancy we are in Need of, to our Happineſs: That the Gaieties, we ſo much admire, and without which we can hardly be eaſy, are attended with a proportionable Number of Inconveniencies; and that more Cares, and Fears, and Dangers wait upon the Scepter, than upon the Spade. What ſhall we think on more? Even the ſure Promiſes of God, recorded in the Scriptures, that he will ſupport us, under our humble Fortunes, or elſe make them advantageous to us: That [e] his Eyes are upon them that fear him, to deliver their Souls from Death, and to feed them in the Time of Dearth; that [f] tho' the Lions do lack, and ſuffer Hunger, yet they, who ſeek the Lord, ſhall want no Manner of Thing that is good; and, in fine, [g] that all Things ſhall work together for good, to them that love God, to them that are called according to his Purpoſe. What ſhall we think on more? Even the great Examples that have gone before, to teach us the Leſſon of Contentment: That ſome of the [h] heathen Moraliſts, by the bare Contemplation of the Nature of God, and the State of their own Dependence, have wrought themſelves up into a Spirit of Reſignation, and reſolved Acquieſcence, deſerving our Chriſtian Emulation: That the great Apoſtle of the Gentiles, [i] in whatever State he was, had learned to be content; every where, and in all Things, being inſtructed, both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound, and ſuffer Need; and that our bleſſed Saviour, the great Lord of the Univerſe, when found in the Faſhion of a Man, was never known to diſcover the leaſt Uneaſineſs, [k] tho' the Foxes had Holes, and the Birds of the Air had Neſts, while himſelf had not where to lay his Head. The proper Reſult of all theſe Conſiderations is, that [l] we be careful for nothing, but in every Thing, by Prayer and Supplication, with Thankſgiving, let our Requeſts be made known unto God.

4. From different Conditions in Life.

5. From Scripture Promiſes.

6. From Examples of others.

A General Rule, for the eaſier Obſervance of theſe Commandments.

THESE are the Commandments of the ſecond Table; and to inforce their Obſervance, as well as enable us to diſcharge them with more Eaſe and Readineſs, I know no Rule ſo proper to be recommended, as that which our bleſſed Saviour has given us; [m] all Things, whatſoever ye would that Men ſhould do unto you, do ye even ſo unto them, for this is the Law and the Prophets. To reſtrain our Minds from all covetous Deſires, ſo as to ſettle our Contentment in what is our own; to keep our Tongues from all Evil-ſpeaking, ſo as not to offend againſt Truth and Charity; to keep our Hands from all Violence and Wrong, ſo as not to offend againſt Mercy and Juſtice; to keep our Bodies from Riot and Uncleanneſs, ſo as not to offend againſt Modeſty and Temperance; to regulate our Conduct with relation to our Neighbour, either in Traffick, or any other Intercourſe; either as to his Bed, his Life, or any other Part of his Property; to regulate our Conduct with relation to our Parents, our Governors, our Superiors, our Equals, our Inferiors; and, in ſhort, to go thro' the whole Compaſs of what we owe towards one another, what Expedient can be deviſed more proper, than to bear always in Mind this ſhort Epitome of our Duty, doing to other Men, as we would be done by? * Let but a Child, for Inſtance, a Subject, or a Servant, aſk himſelf, without Partiality, what Honour, what Submiſſion, what Obedience he would think was due to him, were he himſelf a Father, a Magiſtrate, or a Maſter; and his Anſwer to this will be a Rule for his own Behaviour towards thoſe, that are ſo related to him. This would reſtrain us from an inſolent, or ſurly Carriage towards any one, from deſpiſing and ridiculing, from upbraiding and provoking

The Excellency of it.

[b] Sherlock on Death. [c] Luke xii. 15. [d] Patrick on Contentment. [e] Pſal. xxxiii. 18, 19. [f] Ibid. xxxiv. 10. [g] Rom. viii. 28. [h] There is a very remarkable Paſſage to this Purpoſe in Epictetus: "This is my Buſineſs, ſays the Philoſopher, to be found always void of Paſſion.——That I may have it to ſay "to God; Have I tranſgreſſed, at any Time, thy Commandments? Have I abuſed the Faculties, thou haſt given "me, to other Purpoſes? Did I ever accuſe thee? Did I find Fault, on any Occaſion, with thy Adminiſtration and "Government? I was ſick, becauſe it pleaſed thee to have it ſo: Others were ſick too; but I willingly. I was "poor, becauſe thou wouldeſt have it ſo: Others were poor too, but I joyfully. I was not advanced to be a Ruler, "becauſe thou wouldeſt not have me; but did I ever deſire Empire? Didſt thou ever ſee me the ſadder for Want of "it? Did I ever approach thee with a leſs chearful Countenance? —— I give thee all Thanks, that thou counteſt "me worthy of the Honour to ſee thy Works, and to underſtand thy Adminiſtrations." Arrian, Lib. III. cap. 3. [i] Phil. iv. 11, 12. [k] Matth. viii. 20. [l] Phil. iv. 6. [m] Matth. vii. 12. * Gardiner's Sermons.

provoking our Neighbour, if we do but ſeriouſly conſider, how ill we ourſelves would bear this from another. It would teach us to forbear and forgive, becauſe we deſire, in our Turns, to be forborne and forgiven; and it would make us candid and good-natured, in putting the beſt Interpretation upon the Words and Actions of others, if we reflect but how reaſonable we think it, that another ſhould deal ſo candidly with us.

IN a Word, this is a Rule particularly fitted for Practice, as it involves, in the very Notion of it, a Motive, ſtirring us up to do what it enjoins; and as it offers itſelf to our Thoughts, and is ready for preſent Uſe, upon all Exigencies and Occaſions; inſomuch, that no Neceſſity of acting can be ſo immediate, but that there may be Time for a ſhort Recourſe to it; Room for a ſudden Glance, as it were, upon it, in our Minds, where (as [u] one elegantly expreſſes it) it reſts and ſparkles always, like the Urim and Thummim on Aaron's Breaſt.

[x] HUMAN Laws are often ſo numerous, as to eſcape our Memories; ſo darkly ſometimes, and inconſiſtently worded, as to puzzle our Underſtandings; and their Original Obſcurity is many Times improved, by the nice Diſtinctions and ſubtle Reaſonings of thoſe, who profeſs to clear them; but this is a Law attended with none of theſe Inconveniencies. The groſſeſt Minds can ſcarce miſapprehend it: The weakeſt Memories are capable of retaining it: No perplexing Comment can eaſily cloud it: The Authority of no Man's Gloſs upon Earth can, (if we are but ſincere) ſway us to make a wrong Conſtruction of it: [y] It is, in ſhort, an Highway, (according to the Prophet's Expreſſion) and the wayfaring Man, tho' a Fool, ſhall not err in it. And as it is adapted to all Capacities, ſo it extends to all Ranks and Conditions of Men, to the Prince, as well as the Peaſant; and to all Kinds of Acts and Intercourſe between them, to Matters of Charity, Generoſity, and Civility, as well as Juſtice; to negative, no leſs than poſitive Duties: And in this Reſpect, our bleſſed Saviour pronounces it to be the Law, and the Prophets; for ſuch is its Compaſs and Extent, that whatever Rules of the ſecond Table are delivered in the Law of Moſes, or in the larger Comments and Explanation of that Law, made by the other Writers of the Old Teſtament, they are all virtually contained in this Precept, wherein every Line of our Duty, relating to our Neighbour, centers; and under which, as under one common Head and Principle, they may be all reduced and ranged.

IF therefore we are deſirous to fulfil all the Duties of Righteouſneſs, our ſureſt and moſt compendious Way will be, to have this one Precept engraven upon the Tables of our Hearts, (as the wiſe Heathen Emperor had it on the Walls of his Palace) that from thence, upon every Occaſion, we may tranſcribe it into our Practice: For the Practice of this will anſwer all; ſince, [z] If there be any other Commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this Saying, namely, thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour as thyſelf, and deal with him, as thou wouldeſt have thyſelf dealt with; for Love is the fulfilling of the Law.

SECT. III.

Of the Civil Laws.

THE next Sort of Laws, which God gave the Jews, are commonly called Civil or Judicial Laws, and were appointed for the Rule of political Government, the Preſervation of Peace, and the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, in that Nation. But before we come to ſpeak of theſe, it will be proper to premiſe ſomething concerning the ſeveral Forms of Government, which, at different Times, obtained among the Jews, in order to perceive, both how agreeable to ſuch Conſtitutions their political Laws were, and how far they may be ſuppoſed to affect Chriſtian Nations, ever ſince.

The Patriarchal Government.

WHETHER we ſuppoſe Civil Government to be a poſitive Inſtitution of God, or only founded in the natural Order and Reaſon of Things, it cannot otherwiſe be, but that the firſt Form of it was Paternal, and that Adam, while he lived, was, both in Right, and, ſo far as appears to us, in Fact, univerſal Monarch. [a] Upon his Death, [u] Atterbury's Sermons, Vol. I. [x] Ibid. [y] Iſa. xxxv. 8. [z] Rom. xiii. 9, 10. [a] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II.

Death, the ſovereign Power devolved to the next in Blood; and ſo ſucceſſively followed the Right of Primogeniture. After the Flood, and upon the Diſperſion of the Sons of Noah, the Patriarchal Authority was ſtill aſſerted and preſerved, and ſeveral Parts of the habitable World were, at that Time, divided [b] to every one after his own Tongue, after their Families, in their Nations. Upon the Uſurpation of Nimrod, and much more after the Confuſion of Languages, tho' there were frequent Infractions made upon this Order of Succeſſion; yet the Patriarchal Right was ſtill recognized till the Time of Abraham, who, by God's Appointment, removed into the Land of Canaan, and there governed his Family and Dependents with a full Authority; as indeed the Patriarchal Power was, all along, of as wide a Scope, as any Regal or Sovereign Power needed to claim; for it conſiſted in the Right [c] of bleſſing, [d] of curſing, [e] of caſting out of Doors, [f] of excluding from the common Right of Inheritance, and, in caſe of heinous Offences, of inflicting Capital Puniſhments; as appears in the Sentence of Judah againſt Thamar, upon an Accuſation of her having committed Adultery; [g] bring her forth, and let her be burnt. During the Time that the Jews ſojourned in Egypt, there were ſome Remains of this Patriarchal Authority in the Heads of the Tribes, and therefore they are called [h] the Elders of the Children of Iſrael, whom Moſes was commanded to gather together; but when Iſrael came out of Egypt, and the Houſe of Jacob from among ſtrange Children, God himſelf vouchſafed then to be their immediate Head and King, and appointed Moſes to be his Deputy; ſo that, from this Time forward, the Patriarchal Power was happily loſt in the Theocracy.

Of what Extent.

When expired.

Theocracy. THAT God was related to the Jews in a peculiar Manner, and not as he is the univerſal Ruler of the World, is manifeſt [i] from the diſtinguiſhing Marks and Glory of a Sovereign, which he was then pleaſed to aſſume. The Tabernacle, which was placed in the Middle of their Camp in the Wilderneſs, had thereby as much the Appearance of a General's Tent, as of a Temple; that Pillar, which was ſometimes dark, and ſometimes luminous, was, as it were, the Signal, which he gave them; for [k] they marched at the Commandment of the Lord; and, at his Commandment, they pitched, and kept Guard about him. When the Temple was built, the Jews gave it the Name of Hekal, which ſignifies a Palace: The Ark, that was in it, was the Throne, whereon he ſat; and the Manner, wherein he cauſed himſelf to be ſerved, gave him ſtill a greater Appearance of Sovereignty. As a King, he had his Captains, his Soldiers, his Guards; he eſtabliſhed Officers of all Kinds; reſerved to himſelf the Tenths and Firſt-Fruits of all Things; impoſed a Tribute upon every Head; made Laws for no other End, but his own Worſhip; appointed Prieſts and Levites, almoſt innumerable to attend his Service; and required, that all the Firſt-born ſhould be devoted to him: In ſhort, the moſt powerful Monarch upon Earth cannot be attended with more Order and Magnificence, than God was ſerved with in the Temple.

Ariſtocracy. [l] BUT, tho' this Republick had at this Time no other Sovereign but God, yet the Iſraelites, who could not bear the Glory of his Preſence, and were terrified at the Noiſe and Thunder, in the Midſt of which he ſhewed himſelf to them on Mount Sinai, prayed him, that he would not ſpeak to them himſelf, but make Uſe of the Miniſtry of Moſes, that he might be the Interpreter of his Will. Moſes accordingly, (as the Author to the Hebrews [m] tells us) diſcharged this important Office with Faithfulneſs; but, to eaſe the Burthen of the Adminiſtration, God commanded him to chuſe out ſeventy aged and experienced Perſons, who were afterwards called the great Sanhedrim, to whoſe Authority the Tribes, the Prophets, and High-Prieſts were ſubject, and whoſe Buſineſs it was, not only to determine the weightieſt Civil Cauſes, but to arbitrate likewiſe, in what related to Religion; ſo that, by this Diſtribution of the Authority, the Government put on the Face of Ariſtocracy.

Judicial. AFTER the Jews were in quiet Poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan, they were governed by Judges, [n] the Tenor of whoſe Commiſſion was different in this Reſpect, that, as they were called to the Adminiſtration upon ſome extraordinary Exigence: ſo, when the End, for which they were called, was effected, their Power expired; like that of the Roman Dictators, who, when the particular Occaſion, upon which they were created, was over, returned again to their former, and very often to a private private Manner of Life. During their Regency, they were abſolute and independent, inveſted with an Authority equal to Kings, but without the Royal State and Equipage. Their Power, [o] in ſhort, was like that of a General of an Army, rather than the Governor of a Nation; and for this Reaſon their Office was not Hereditary, but conferred upon the Perſon, who was beſt accompliſhed, and moſt likely to anſwer the Exigencies of State. [p] This high, and Dictatorial Power, being but temporary, and having ſo frequent Interruptions in it, gave the ordinary and inferior Judges an Opportunity of growing remiſs in the Diſcharge of their Duty, not to ſay corrupt. [q] Samuel indeed, (who judged Iſrael all the Days of his Life) was a good and vigilant Magiſtrate; but, in the Decline of his Age, being leſs capable of the Adminiſtration, he made his Sons Judges, who committed great Diſorders, and gave ſuch Offence to the Elders of Iſrael, that they aſſembled together, and came to Samuel, at once remonſtrating againſt the Male-Adminiſtration of his Sons, and addreſſing him to make them a King, who might judge them, in the Manner they ſaw other Nations governed. Samuel, with ſome Reluctance, and God, with ſome Reſentment, complied with the People's Humour; and ſo a Monarchy was introduced, but exceedingly mild and temperate in its Kind, if ſo be the Prince ruled according to the eſtabliſhed Laws. This Form of Government however expired, when the King and Kingdom were ſubdued, and the Inhabitants carried to Babylon, after it had ſubſiſted about five hundred Years. Regal,

[b] Gen. x. 5. [c] Ibid. ix. 26. [d] Ibid. ver. 25. [e] Ibid. xxi. 10. [f] Ibid. xlix. 27.
[g] Ibid. xxxviii. 24. [h] Exod. iii. 16. [i] Lamy's Introduction. [k] Numb. ix. 18,—23. Vulgat.
[l] Lamy, ibid. [m] Chap. iii. 2. [n] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II.

UPON the Return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh Captivity, [r] the Government was no longer Regal, but rather Sacerdotal, for the High-Prieſt had the chief Authority, though the Sanhedrim, or great Council of the Nation, retained a great Share of the Power. This Form continued, without any noted Intermiſſion, about the Space of four hundred and twenty Years, and then the Regal Government was again introduced by Ariſtobulus, one of the Succeſſors of the Maccabees, but continued free and independent not above forty-ſix Years, when Pompey the Great, then General of the Roman Army, coming down like a Torrent upon the Eaſt, ſubdued the Country, and made Paleſtine a Province of the Roman Empire. and Sacerdotal Government.

FROM this ſhort Review of the different Forms of Government, which obtained in the Jewiſh State, we may better perceive the great Wiſdom of thoſe Laws, which were enacted for the Safety and Preſervation of it. [s] With Regard to the Sovereign, as he is the Head of the State, upon whoſe Conduct the Safety of the Subject depends, Moſes took all the Precaution imaginable, to prevent any one's being admitted to the Dignity, who was not a Lover of Virtue, and a Stranger to all Vice. "It is ſuffi- "cient for you, ſays he to the People, [t] in the Words of Joſephus, that God be your "Sovereign; but, if you ſhould ever deſire to have a King, take Care to chuſe one "of your own Nation, and one, whom you ſee inclined to Juſtice, and all other "Virtues. Whoever he be, let him have a greater Regard to God and his Laws, "than to his own Underſtanding: Let him do nothing in Oppoſition to the High- "Prieſt and the Senate: Let him avoid having a great Number of Wives, great "State and Equipages, and heaping up immenſe Riches; [u] leſt his Heart be lifted up "above his Brethren; and let him, in ſhort, not turn aſide from the Commandment, to "the Right-Hand, or to the Left." The Wiſdom of the Laws, in Relation to the King,

AS to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice, the Rules which Moſes gave, were excellent in their Kind; that * Judges ſhould not ſuffer themſelves to be corrupted with Preſents; [x] ſhould not receive a falſe Report; [y] not reſpect Perſons in Judgment, nor [z] countenance a poor Man in his Cauſe: As to Witneſſes, [a] that one was not ſufficient, but that three, at leaſt two, were required in any Point of important Controverſy, and theſe not Women, becauſe of their natural Levity; nor Slaves, becauſe of the Baſeneſs of their Minds; but Perſons of Integrity, and whoſe good Conduct of Life, might give a proper Sanction to their Teſtimony: And, in caſe of any one's being deprehended a falſe Evidence, the Law of Retaliation took Place; for they were ordered [b] to do to him, as he thought to have done to his Brother, that thoſe which remained might hear, and fear, and thenceforth commit no more ſuch Evil among them. to the Adminiſtration of Juſtice,

AS to the general Intereſt of the Nation, God commanded the Jews to look upon themſelves as Brethren, and Members of the ſame Family. Upon this Account, the Land of Canaan was equally divided among them, and, leſt Avarice ſhould deſtroy the National Intereſt,

that

[o] Lewis's Antiquity of the Hebrew Republick. [p] Fidles's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [q] 1 Sam. vii. 15. [r] Lewis's, ibid. [s] Lamy's Introduction. [t] Joſeph. Antiq. lib. IV. c. 18. [u] Deut. xvii. 20. * Exod. xxiii. 8. [x] Ibid. ver. 1. [y] Deut. i. 17. [z] Exod. xxiii. 3. [a] Deut. xix. 15. [b] Ibid. ver. 19, 20.

that Equality, [d] the Law of Jubilee reſtored every Man to what he had at firſt. The Prohibitions [e] againſt Uſury, and [f] againſt removing Land-Marks, the Laws [g] for ſecuring Things entruſted with others, [h] and for regulating the Juſtice of Weights and Meaſures, as well as the ſtrict Proviſion made againſt Theft, (for it was [i] lawful to kill a Thief, who was taken in the Act of Stealing, or breaking through a Wall) were a good Fence to the Properties; and then [k] the Law of Retaliation, and [l] the Puniſhments annexed to Murther, were a great Security to the Lives of the People. For the Prevention of accidental Deaths, the Law required, [m] that all Wells ſhould be cloſed in, and the Roofs of all Houſes have Battlements; and, in caſe one Man had ſlain another unawares, [n] it appointed Places of Refuge, to ſcreen him from the Revenge of the Deceaſed's Relations.

and common Prudence.

IN Point of Prudence, nothing eſcaped Moſes. As Children are the Support, and what we may call the Nurſery of the State, [o] he proſcribed Eunuchs, who defraud the Publick of thoſe Pledges; he commanded, [p] that whoever debauched a Woman, ſhould marry her; and that [q] the Woman, who pretended to be a Virgin, and upon her Marriage was found otherwiſe, ſhould be ſtoned. Adultery, the great Reproach of the Marriage-State, was tried by a Miracle; [r] the Woman accuſed of it, was obliged to drink ſome Waters in the Temple, in Scripture called the Waters of Jealouſy, which, if ſhe was guilty, killed her, but in caſe ſhe was innocent, did her no Harm. Polygamy, as well as Divorces, was permitted the Jews, for the Hardneſs of their Hearts, [s] as our Saviour tells them, i. e. to prevent Poiſonings and Murthers: the Deſire of having Children, which Nature inſpires, was encouraged [t] by the Reproaches, which the Law throws upon the Barrenneſs of Women; and, in order to preſerve both the Names and Eſtates of Families among them, if a Woman had no Children by her Huſband, ſhe, after his Death, was to marry his Brother, [u] and the Children of the ſecond Marriage were eſteemed the Deſcendants of the firſt.

How far they oblige other People.

THESE are ſome of the Civil and Judiciary Laws, which God appointed the ancient Hebrews, and which were of excellent Uſe and Contrivance to that People; but whether, or how far they ought to oblige other political Societies, has been a Queſtion controverted among Divines. The Reſolution, however, ſeems to lie * in diſtinguiſhing between ſuch Laws, as have a Reſpect to the particular Condition and Circumſtances of the Jews and their Polity, and ſuch, as are not peculiar to them, but, with Parity of Reaſon, may be equally applied to other Nations. [x] The Jews, who, at their firſt Inſtitution, were a Society ſeparate from the reſt of the World, were, by the ſpecial Command of God, ordered to drive out and deſtroy a wicked Race of People, and, after their Deſtruction, to make an equal Diviſion of the Land among them, which Diviſion was to be a Perpetuity to each Family, as long as their State endured. [y] For this Reaſon, the Law of Jubilee, and the Prohibition of Uſury was enacted, as a Means to preſerve that Equality, to keep ſome from being exceſſively rich, and others from being miſerably poor: But this by no Means is to be applied to other Conſtitutions, where Men are left to their Induſtry, and neither have their Inheritance by a Grant from Heaven, nor, by any ſpecial Appointment of God, are put all upon a Level. What was peculiar to the State of the Jews therefore is not of any Obligation to other Nations: But this Regard we conceive is due to thoſe Politicks, which were the Invention and Appointment of Heaven, that, where they are of common Uſe and Equity, and founded upon ſome general Reaſon, there other Nations ought to conform, as much as they can, to the Model propoſed to them: [z] Particularly as to Judicial Proceedings, in awarding Puniſhments, and eſpecially capital Puniſhments; for, the Power of inflicting them being derived from God, the Meaſures and Regulation of them (wherein ſome Difficulty often occurs) cannot be better determined, than by thoſe Precedents, which God left us concerning them, when he condeſcended to be a Civil Legiſlator himſelf.

The Nature of their Sanctions.

WHAT Sanctions God gave to theſe Laws, and whether the Promiſes and Threats, whereby he was pleaſed to enforce the Obſervance of them, were only temporal, or of a larger Extent and Continuance, is another Point, not ſo well agreed on among Divines. The Truth is, [a] if we take the Words of the Covenant, which Moſes made between between God and the People of Iſrael, ſtrictly, and as they ſtand, they import only temporal Bleſſings and Puniſhments; [b] for the Law of Moſes, being a political Law, was not intended for the Government of all Mankind, but of one particular Nation only; and therefore was eſtabliſhed (as political Laws are) upon temporal Promiſes and Threatnings: But, that under theſe temporal Promiſes and Threats, Rewards and Puniſhments of a higher Nature were intended, the Tenor of the Promiſes made to their Forefathers, as well as the general Principles of Natural Religion, not yet quite extinguiſhed among them, were a ſufficient Indication. That Abraham, and the Patriarchs before him, had a true and full Notion of a Life after this, [c] looking for a City which hath Foundations, whoſe Builder and Maker is God; confeſſing, that they were Strangers and Pilgrims upon Earth, and embracing the Promiſes, which they ſaw at a Diſtance, and were perſuaded of, we are certain from the Teſtimony of the Author to the Hebrews; and that the Jews were all along inſtructed herein by their Forefather Abraham, we have an equal, if not a greater Certainty from the Character, which God gives that Patriarch, [d] I know him, that he will command his Children and his Houſhold after him, and they ſhall keep the Way of the Lord. [e] The Buſineſs of the Law, therefore, was not to eſtabliſh an eternal State of Happineſs, † wherein the Jews were ſufficiently inſtructed already; but, as the People of all Nations are encouraged, in their Obedience and Subjection to Governors, for the Benefit of Safety and Protection under them; ſo the Iſraelites were to be ſettled into a regular Method of Life, both Religious and Civil, and temporal Rewards and Puniſhments were appointed by Moſes, to encourage their Obedience, and deter them from the contrary; [f] though Men of more diſcerning Thoughts underſtood them, no doubt, as Pledges and Types, to repreſent and prefigure the Rewards and Puniſhments of a future State. For the End of the Law, [g] ſays a great Jewiſh Expounder of it, is not to make the Earth fructify, to give Men their Lives; but that, by all theſe Things, they may be encouraged to perfect their Obedience, and thereby become worthy of the Life of the World to come.

[d] Deut. xxv. [e] Exod. xxii. 25. [f] Deut. xxvii. 17. [g] Exod. xxii. 7. [h] Deut. xxv. 13, &c. [i] Exod. xxii. 2, 3, &c. [k] Ibid. ver. 24. [l] Lev. xxiv. 17. [m] Deut. xxii. 8. [n] Numb. xxxv. 11. [o] Deut. xxiii. 1. [p] Ibid. xxii. 28. [q] Ibid. ver. 21. [r] Num. v. [s] Matth. xix. 8. [t] Exod. xxiii. 26. Deut. vii. 14. [u] Deut. xxv. 5, 6. * Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [x] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II. [y] Burnet's Expoſition of the XXXIX Articles. [z] Fiddes, ibid. [a] Burnet, ibid.

SECT. IV.

Of the Eccleſiaſtical Laws.

WE come to the Ceremonial or Eccleſiaſtical Law, which contains thoſe Precepts, that God gave the Jews, concerning ſuch external Rites, as belong to Religion, and relate either to the Time, or Place, or Offices, or Officers of religious Worſhip.

I. [h] THE ſolemn Times of Worſhip, appointed to the Jews in the Moſaick Law, were by a general Name called Feaſts, though (to ſpeak properly) ſome of them were Faſts: But becauſe the Word Feaſt is frequently taken by the Jews for any ſolemn Time of religious Worſhip, whether it be accompanied with rejoicing or mourning, that Term is applied to them all: And, according to this Latitude, [i] Feſtivals are ſolemn Days ſet apart for the Honour and Service of God, either in Commemoration of ſome ſpecial Mercies received from his bountiful Hand, or in Memory of ſome Puniſhments, which he, in former Times, had inflicted on them; or in Hopes of averting ſuch, as, at the Time of their Inſtitution, hung over their Heads. Thoſe of the firſt Kind (which at preſent we are to ſpeak of) were attended with Rejoicings, Feaſtings, Hymns, Concerts of Muſick, Euchariſtical Sacrifices, and a total Exemption from Labour; upon which Account they were termed Sabbaths, [k] and are properly of three Sorts; 1. Such as were common, and returned oft in the ſame Year: 2. Such as were extraordinary, and returned but once in a certain Number of Years. And, 3. Such as were annual, or returned once every Year. Times of Worſhip.

[b] Pocock, on Hoſea ii. 3. [c] Heb. xi. 10, 13. [d] Gen. xviii. 19. [e] Collier's Introduction.

† The Author of the Divine Legation of Moſes has taken great Pains to prove, that, as temporal Rewards and Puniſhments were the proper Sanction of the Jewiſh Law, ſo there were no other: That as Moſes purpoſely omitted the Doctrine of a State of future Rewards and Puniſhments, ſo neither had the antient Jews any Knowledge of it, which he endeavours to demonſtrate from Paſſages, taken from the Books both of the Old and New Teſtament, and by anſwering the Objections, that are generally produced from thence. Vol. II. Lib. V. and VI.

[f] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs, Vol. II. [g] Maimonides in his Preface to Perck Cheleck. [h] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [i] Beauſobre's Introduction. [k] Lamy's Introduction.

The Feaſt of the Sabbath.

1. OF thoſe that were common, and returned oft in the ſame Year, the Sabbath was the chief, a Feſtival inſtituted by God, not only in Commemoration of the Creation of the World, and with a Purpoſe to prevent Idolatry, or the worſhipping of Creatures, by ſetting it apart for the Service of the great Creator of all Things; but, in a peculiar Manner, to give both Man and Beaſt one Day of Reſt and Relaxation every Week: And accordingly we may obſerve, that though religious Exerciſes, ſuch as reading the Law, praying, and bleſſing, &c. were reckoned neceſſary on the Sabbath-Day, yet were they not preſcribed by the Law. Reſt was the only Injunction, and it was required with ſo much Strictneſs, that [l] even the moſt neceſſary Works were forbidden upon Pain of Death; ſuch [m] as gathering Manna, or Wood, baking Bread, or lighting a Fire, &c. Not only ſowing and reaping were then reckoned unlawful, but [n] even plucking any Ears of Corn, [o] carrying any Thing from one Place to another, or [p] going above two thouſand Paces or Cubits, which in Scripture is called [q] a Sabbath-day's Journey. Nay, to ſuch a Degree did the Jews carry their Scruples as to this Particular, that they imagined, they were not ſo much as allowed to fight, in Defence of their Lives, on the Sabbath-day; [r] for which they paid dearly, during the Perſecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, but came to be convinced of their Error, in the Time of Mattathias.

Of the New Moon.

EVERY New Moon, or the firſt Day of every Month, was another Feſtival among the Jews; not that it was directly of divine Inſtitution, but, becauſe God having commanded them [s] to offer up a Burnt-ſacrifice to him at the Beginning of every Month, they therefore thought themſelves concerned to ceaſe from the Works of their ordinary Employments on that Day, and to be very exact in their Obſervations and Diſcovery of the New Moon. [t] The ancient Jews, who were not much acquainted with Aſtronomical Calculations, began their Month, not from the firſt Conjunction of the Sun and Moon; (which could only be known that Way) but from the firſt Phaſis, or Appearance of the Moon, which required no Learning to diſcover. To this Purpoſe they appointed Men of ſtrict Probity to go to the Top of the neighbouring Mountains, in the Time of the Conjunction, and, as ſoon as ever they perceived the New Moon appear, to come with all Speed, (even though it were the Sabbath-Day) and acquaint the Sanhedrim with it, who, upon Examination into the Matter, pronounced theſe Words; the Feaſt of the New Moon, the Feaſt of the New Moon, whereupon the Trumpet ſounded, and acquainted all the People with it; and unto this Ceremony David, no doubt, alludes, when he ſays, [u] Blow up the Trumpet in the New Moon, in the Time appointed, on our ſolemn Feaſt-Day.

The Sabbatical Year.

2. AMONG extraordinary Feſtivals, which happened but once in ſome conſiderable Time, was the Sabbatical Year, which returned every ſeventh Year, and was indeed one continual Feaſt. [x] The Ground remained untilled, and whatever it produced of itſelf was left to the Poor: Servants were ſet at Liberty, unleſs they deſired to continue with their Maſters; and [y] all Debts, that were contracted during the ſix preceding Years, were remitted; [z] but it may be queſtioned, whether the Creditor was not allowed to demand his Debt at the End of the Sabbatical Year; the Talmudiſts are not agreed about it, but thus much is certain, that this Year was at leaſt a Time of Acquittance for Creditors.

The Jubilee Year.

THE Jubilee, which was celebrated every fiftieth Year, had the ſame Privileges with the Sabbatical Year, that the Land was untilled, and Slaves ſet at Liberty; but over and above this, [a] that all Debts were cancelled, all Captives releaſed, all Priſoners ſet free, all Controverſies and Law-ſuits ended, and (what [b] was an excellent Law, to preſerve the ancient Diviſion of the Tribes, to ſuppreſs the Greedineſs of heaping up Wealth, and prevent the Poor from ſinking into Miſery) all mortgaged and alienated Eſtates were returned to their ancient Owners. This however was not done, until the tenth Day of the Month Tiſri: During the nine preceding Days, the Jews decked themſelves in Flowers and Garlands, and thought indeed on nothing but Mirth and Diverſions; but on the tenth (which was the Feaſt of the Expiation) the [l] Numb. xv, 32, &c. Exod. xxxi. 14. [m] Exod. xxxv. 3. Ch. xvi. 23. [n] Matth. xii. 1, 2. [o] John v. 10. [p] Acts i. 12. [q] A Sabbath-Day's Journey was much about one of our Miles, and the Reaſon of their thinking themſelves allowed to go ſo far on this Day of profound Reſt, was founded on this; that, in their Marches, after they came out of Egypt, the Ark was carried always at this Diſtance from the Tents of the Iſraelites, Joſh. iii. 4. And therefore, being permitted to go, even on the Sabbath-day, to the Tabernacle to pray, from thence they inferred, that the taking of the ſame Journey, though on another Account, could not be a Breach of the Sabbath-day. Lamy's Introduction. [r] Joſeph. Antiq. Lib. XII. [s] Numb. xxviii. 2. [t] Lamy and Beauſobre's Introduction. [u] Pſal. lxxxi. 3. [x] Exod. xxiii. 11. [y] Deut. xv. 2. [z] Beauſobre, ibid. [a] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [b] Lamy's Introduction.

the Sanhedrim blew their Trumpets, and then immediately were the Priſon-Doors ſet open, Slaves releaſed, and each Man reſtored to the quiet Poſſeſſion of his Eſtate.

The Paſſover.

AMONG annual Feſtivals, or ſuch as were celebrated once every Year, the moſt ſolemn and renowned was the Paſſover, which the Jews were to keep, in Remembrance of their great and happy Deliverance from Egyptian Bondage, when the deſtroying Angel paſſed over their Doors, which were ſprinkled with the Blood of the Lamb, appointed to be ſlain that Evening, and killed the Firſt-born of Egypt. But of this we have ſaid enough in another Place.

The Feaſt of Pentecoſt.

FIFTY Days after the Paſſover, fell the Feaſt of Pentecoſt, [c] inſtituted in Memory of the Delivery of the Law, on Mount Sinai. It was likewiſe called the Feaſt of Harveſt, becauſe on it were the Firſt-Fruits of the Harveſt offered up to God, which Oblation was accompanied with ſeveral Sacrifices and Libations, and the whole Feaſt celebrated with Abundance of Mirth and Rejoicing.

Of Tabernacles.

THE Feaſt of Tabernacles was inſtituted by God, in Remembrance of the Iſraelites having dwelt ſo long in Tents and Tabernacles, while they ſojourned in the Wilderneſs: Beſides, that it was farther deſigned for a Time of returning Thanks to God, for the Fruits of the Vine, as well as other Trees, that were gathered about this Time, and of begging his Bleſſing upon thoſe of the Year enſuing. No Feaſt was ever attended with more Rejoicing than this. [d] During the whole Solemnity, (which laſted eight Days) the Jews dwelt under Tents made of Branches of Trees; they offered every Day Abundance of Sacrifices, beſides the uſual ones; carried always in their Hands Branches, or Poſies of Palm-Trees, Olives, Citrons, Myrtles, &c. and expreſſed their Joy in Feaſting, Dancing, Muſick, and Illuminations; all which was owing, ſome ſay, to the Expectation they then had [e] of the Meſſiah's Coming, and for which, on that Feſtival, they prayed with the utmoſt Earneſtneſs and Importunity.

Of Trumpets.

ANOTHER annual Feſtival of God's appointing, was the Feaſt of Trumpets; not, but that other Feſtivals were uſhered in by the Sound of that Inſtrument, but becauſe this was introduced with a greater Solemnity of this Kind, than uſual. [f] It was inſtituted, as ſome think, in Memory of the loud Sounding of the Angelick Trumpets, on Mount Sinai, before God's Declaration of the Law; and, as it was the firſt Day of the Year, (according to the Æra, that they computed their civil Year by) it was commanded to be ſolemnized by a Ceſſation from all Work, [g] and by a particular Burnt-offering appointed for that Day.

Other Feaſts of human Inſtitution.

BESIDES theſe Feſtivals, commanded in the Moſaick Law, there were others of human Inſtitution; ſuch as [h] the Feaſt of Lots, in Remembrance of the ſignal Deliverance of the Jews, which Eſther obtained of Ahaſuerus, when they were juſt going to fall a Victim to the Pride and Cruelty of Haman; that of Dedication, mentioned by St John, and appointed by Judas Maccabeus, for a thankful Remembrance of the cleanſing of the Temple and Altar, after they had been profaned by Antiochus; that of the ſacred Fire, which was miraculouſly rekindled after the Captivity; that of Judith, for having killed Holofernes; and that, wherein was commemorated the Victory over Nicanor.

The great Day of Expiation.

THE Jews had but one ſolemn Feaſt of divine Inſtitution, which, becauſe they [i] were to do no manner of Work thereon, is, a little improperly, called the Feaſt of Expiation; on which Day, [k] the High-Prieſt brought a young Bullock, and the People two She-Goats, over which he made a publick Confeſſion, in the Preſence of God, both of his own Sins, and of all the Sins of the People. When this was done, they caſt Lots upon the two Goats, to know which of them was to be ſacrificed, and which driven into the Wilderneſs. The High-Prieſt ſacrificed the Bullock, and one of the Goats for a Sin-Offering, and, mixing the Blood of theſe two Victims together, went into the Temple, and ſprinkled it upon the Altar of Incenſe; and the Veil, which was before the Holy of Holies, into which, on this Day only of all the Year, he was permitted to enter. [l] Upon the Head of the other Goat, which was not ſacrificed, [c] Lamy's Introduction. [d] Ibid. [e] This Feſtival Chriſt honoured with his Preſence at Jeruſalem, coming thither on Purpoſe to bear a Part in the ſolemnizing, which implied his Approbation of it; and from hence Grotius very juſtly infers, that Feſtival Days, in Memorial of publick Bleſſings, may piouſly be inſtituted by Perſons in Authority, without a divine Command. Prideaux's Connection, Part II. [f] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [g] Lev. xxiii. 24, 25. Numb. xxix. 1—6. [h] The Feaſt of Lots is ſo called from Haman's enquiring by Lot, Eſth. iii. 7. when it would be the fitteſt Time for deſtroying the Jews. It was celebrated two Days together, in which Eſther was read out, and, as often as the Children heard the Name of Haman, they ſtruck the Benches of the Synagogues, with as much Joy, as they would have ſtruck Haman's Head, if it had been before them. Lamy, ibid. [i] Lev. xxiii. 31. [k] Lamy, ibid. [l] This Goat was called Azazel, i. e. (according to ſome) a Devil, becauſe it was ſent away with the Sins of the People. The LXX have rendered it by a Word, which ſignifies to remove, or turn away Evil. But it may likewiſe ſignify an Emiſſary, or Scape-Goat, from the Word [Az] which ſignifies a Goat, and [Azal] to ſeparate. Prideaux's Connection, Part. II.

ſacrificed, the High-Prieſt laid both his Hands, and, having confeſſed over it the Sins of the whole People, and laid them, as it were, upon it, he had it conveyed, by a fit Perſon, into the Wilderneſs; all which was a very expreſſive Ceremony. The Sins of the People were drawn away by the Sacrifice of the firſt Goat, and, to ſhew they would no more be had in Remembrance, the ſecond was loaded with them, and carried them with him into the Wilderneſs, [m] the uſual Aboad (as the Opinion then prevailed) of Devils, the Authors and Abetters of all Sin and Iniquity. And this was a fit Prefiguration of what our Saviour has done for us, [n] who took upon himſelf the Sins of the whole World; was condemned to Death by the Prieſts in the Temple; was carried out of Jeruſalem, and crucified upon Mount Golgotha; and there, by his own Blood, opened for us an Entrance into Heaven, where he now lives, and is for ever making Interceſſion for us.

Other leſs Faſts.

BUT beſides this great Day of Expiation, there were other Faſts among the Jews, which, though not commanded by the Law of Moſes, were by the Authority of the Church enjoined to be obſerved. [o] The Faſt of the fourth Month, or our June, in Remembrance of the Time, [p] when Jeruſalem was invaded, the Tables of the Law broken, and the Book of the Law burnt; the Faſt of the fifth Month, or July, [q] for the Deſtruction of the Temple; the Faſt of the ſeventh Month, or September, [r] for the Killing of Gedaliah; and the Faſt of the tenth Month, or December, [s] in Commemoration of the Siege of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar. On all which ſtated Faſts, as well as on thoſe, which were enjoined in the Time of any general Calamity, [t] the Cuſtom was, firſt to give Notice by the Sound of Trumpet, that the People (who on this Occaſion were obliged to appear in Sackcloth) might gather themſelves together, and then was the Ark, wherein was the Law, brought forth, covered with Aſhes, in Token of Sorrow and Affliction, and one of the Preſidents of the Synagogue made a Speech, ſuitable to the Day and Occaſion, which was accompanied with ſeveral Ejaculations and Prayers.

Places of Worſhip.

II. THE next Thing, which the ceremonial Laws took Notice of, was the Place of divine Worſhip, and the Veſſels and Utenſils thereunto belonging. The Tabernacle was a Kind of portable Temple, that might be pulled down, or ſet up upon Occa-

The Tabernacle deſcribed.

ſion, and was therefore very eaſily removed from Place to Place. [u] It was in Length thirty Cubits, i. e. fifteen Yards, (for the Cubit, by which this Fabrick and the Temple are meaſured, is but half a Yard) and in Breadth ten Cubits. Whenever the Iſraelites changed their Camp, the Tabernacle was taken down, and [x] the Levites (as it was their Office) carried ſome one Part of it, and ſome another; and, when they came to a Station, [y] it was always placed in the Midſt of the Camp, with the Tents at a proper Diſtance from it; which made it a Saying among the Hebrews, that the Tabernacle was, at the ſame Time, both the Temple of their God, where he was to be worſhipped, and the Palace of their King, where he ſat to rule and govern his People. [z] Before the Tabernacle there was an open Area of an hundred Cubits long, and fifty broad, incloſed with Pillars, fixed at equal Diſtances, and Curtains to fill up the Spaces. This Area was divided into two Courts, the exterior was for the People to meet at divine Service: Hither they brought all their Offerings, and here they prayed, and heard the Word, and ſtood all the while that the Prieſts ſacrificed. The interior Court, or that, which was next the Body of the Tabernacle, was the Place where the Sacrifices were offered. Here ſtood the great Brazen-Altar, which was exactly four-ſquare, five Cubits long, and five broad, but only three Cubits high, having four Horns, at every Corner one, whereunto the Sacrifices were tied, and whereupon ſuch Perſons as fled for Refuge were wont to lay hold: And not far from hence was the Brazen-Laver, wherein the Prieſts waſhed their Hands and Feet, before they offered Sacrifice, or went into the Holy Place, (for ſo they called the Nave, or Body of the Tabernacle) or undertook any other holy Work. In the Body of the Tabernacle, cloſe by the Entrance into the Holy of Holies, ſtood the Golden-Altar, called the Altar of Incenſe, one Cubit ſquare, and two Cubits high, whereon was burnt Frankincenſe, and other rich Perfumes (highly neceſſary to take away the ill Smell, occaſioned by the perpetual burning of Fleſh on the great Altar) every Morning and Evening; and to it belonged a Golden Cenſer, or Perfuming-pan, to tranſmit and ſcatter all around the Scent of the ſweet Incenſe and other Perfumes. On the North Side of this Altar, ſtood ſtood the Table of Shew-bread [q], whereon were ſix Loaves piled upon one another in one Diſh, and ſix in another, which Loaves were, every Sabbath-day, taken away, and new ones put in their Place; and on the South-Side was placed the Golden Candleſtick, with ſeven Branches, which were ſo many Lamps of Oil, burning all Night, and in the Morning extinguiſhed.

[m] It was a common Opinion among the ancient Hebrews, that Deſerts, and uninhabited Places, were the Haunt and Habitation of Devils. See Matth. xii. 43. and Rev. xviii. 2. [n] Lamy's Introduction. [o] Zech. viii. 19. [p] Jer. lii. 6, 7. [q] Zech. vii. 3. [r] 2 Kings xxv. 25. [s] Jer. lii. 4. [t] Beauſobre's Introduction. [u] Lewis's Antiquities, Vol. I. [x] Numb. iv. [y] Ibid. i. 50, 53. [z] Vid. Lewis's Antiquities.

Of the Holy of Holies.

IN the Holy of Holies, which ſeems to anſwer the Chancels of our Churches, and had a Veil between it and the Nave of the Tabernacle, was the Ark, wherein were laid up the Pot of Manna, Aaron's Rod, and the two Tables of Stone, wherein were the Ten Commandments written by God himſelf. It was in Length two Cubits and an half, in Breadth one Cubit and an half, and one Cubit and an half in Height. Its Covering (which was of Gold) was called the Mercy-Seat, or Propitiatory, and from this Propitiatory, eſpecially from the uppermoſt Part, and where the Wings of the Cherubims hovered over it, God was wont to give the Oracle, or Anſwer, to what the High-Prieſt came to enquire of him. [r] What theſe Cherubims were, the Diverſity of Opinions has made it not ſo eaſy to determine; only as the Holy of Holies was an Emblem of Heaven, and the Mercy-Seat denoted the Throne of God, they were not improperly ſuppoſed to be Images and Repreſentations of the Angelick Hoſt, thoſe Servants and Attendants of the Heavenly King; as the Cloud, which, [s] at firſt, filled the whole Tabernacle, but, afterwards, reſided moſt conſtantly on this Ark of the Teſtimony, with a great Luſtre ſhining from between the Cherubims, (which the Apoſtle therefore calls [t] the Cherubims of Glory) were a manifeſt Indication of his Majeſtick Preſence.

The Manner, in which theſe Things were made,

THESE were the ſeveral Things belonging to the Tabernacle of Moſes, and in what Manner they were made, as well as what myſtical Meaning they had, the Author to the Hebrews has ſufficiently inſtructed us. They were made exactly [u] according to the Pattern, which God ſhewed Moſes in the Mount; but whether this Pattern was a lively Deſcription and Enumeration of every Particular, or rather a real Plan and Model of the Whole repreſented to his Sight, is not ſo material to enquire; ſince, whatever it was, God muſt be ſuppoſed to have acted upon his Imagination in a ſupernatural Manner, otherwiſe he would not have been capable of retaining the exact Figure and Dimenſions of every Thing, he was to relate to the ſeveral Workmen.

and their myſtical Meaning.

THAT all this rich Furniture of the Tabernacle was * but a Shadow of heavenly Things, and had great and worthy Myſteries couched under it, the ſame ſacred Author teſtifies; and as he particularizes ſome of them, we may, without forcing the Alluſion, ſuppoſe, that the Altar of Burnt-Offering [x] ſignified the great expiatory Sacrifice of Chriſt upon the Croſs; the Altar of Incenſe, and the Golden Cenſer, his powerful Interceſſion at the right Hand of God; the Laver, and Table of Shew-bread, the two Chriſtian Sacraments of Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper; and the Candleſtick, and Lamps, [y] the Gifts and Graces of the Holy Ghoſt, with that abundant Light, which is the peculiar Bleſſing of the Goſpel. More eſpecially the inmoſt Part of the Tabernacle, whereinto the High-Prieſt only entered, was a more lively Repreſentation of the great Myſteries of the Goſpel; [z] the Holy of Holies was a Type of the Celeſtial Manſions above; the Veil was the Fleſh of Chriſt, which, when rent, ſignified his Death, which opened us a Way into them; the Ark repreſented the Divine Preſence, reſiding in human Nature; the Oracle was the Word incarnate, revealing the Will of God; the Mercy-Seat, the Merits of Chriſt, ſhielding us from the Condemnation of the Law, and, conſequently, from the Divine Diſpleaſure; and the Cherubims hovering over the Ark, and looking down with their Heads towards the Mercy-Seat, God's Protection of his Church, by the Miniſtry of his bleſſed Angels, [a] who are deſirous to pry into the Myſteries of the Goſpel. In a Word, the Preſence of God with his People, the glorious Undertakings of his Son, the gracious Influence of his bleſſed Spirit, and the State of the Chriſtian Church, both here and hereafter, are ſet forth in the ſeveral Things contained in the different Partitions of the Moſaick Tabernacle; [b] and though other ſpiritual Meanings may poſſibly be affixed to them, [q] It is, in Hebrew, the Bread of Faces, becauſe being placed before the Ark, where God was preſent, it was, as it were, ſet before God's Face, looking from the Mercy-Seat, Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [r] Some have thought, that they were Images in the Shape of Boys; others in the Likeneſs of Oxen or Calves; becauſe Cherubim, in Chaldee and Syriac, is Bos, and ſo is taken in Ezek. x. 14. compared with Ezek. i. 10. Others again think, that they had not one Shape, but many, viz. the upper Parts of a Man, the Wings of Eagles, the Backs of Lions, and the Thighs and Legs of Oxen; while others, laſtly, were of Opinion, that they were winged Creatures of ſuch a Shape as never was known, Joſeph. Antiq. [s] Exod. xi. [t] Heb. ix. 5. See Levit. xvi. 2. and 1 Sam. iv. 22. [u] Heb. viii. 5. * Ibid. [x] Heb. xiii. 10. [y] Rev. i. 4. and iv. 5. [z] Heb. ix. 24. [a] 1 Pet. i. 12. [b] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I.

yet that the Explication, which we have offered, is not precarious and fanciful, we have the Epiſtle to the Hebrews to produce, where we find the moſt of the ſacred Myſteries thus unfolded and explained.

2. THE Tabernacle wandered with the Children of Iſrael, in the Wilderneſs, until they arrived at the Land of Promiſe, and, for almoſt 400 Years, was the only Place of Divine Worſhip, that the Jews had to reſort to; but, in Proceſs of Time, King Solomon, by God's Appointment, began to build a Temple [c] on Mount Sion, (a principal Part of Jeruſalem) which, in the Space of ſeven Years, he finiſhed, with vaſt Expence and Magnificence. We ſhould, however, miſtake the Matter much, if we think, that the Temple of Jeruſalem was made like one of our Churches; [d] it did not conſiſt of one ſingle Edifice, but of ſeveral Courts and Buildings, which took up a great deal of Ground, and was large enough to contain the Miniſters, and all the People, i. e. more than two or three thouſand Men. The outward Incloſure, which went by the Name of the Mount of the Temple, was a Square of 500 Cubits every Way, which contained ſeveral Buildings for different Uſes, and was ſurrounded with Cloyſters, ſupported with Marble Pillars. Next to this Space, was the Court of the Gentiles, ranged all around with Cloyſters, and ſeparated from the other Courts with Stone Baluſters three Cubits high, with Pillars, at certain Diſtances, upon which were engraven, in Hebrew and Greek, Exhortations to Purity and Holineſs, [e] and a Prohibition to all the Gentiles, and ſuch as are unclean, to advance beyond them: In this Place ſtood the Shops, and Tables of Money-Changers. The Court of the Women was the next, and was ſo called, not becauſe Women only were ſuffered to go into it, but becauſe they were allowed to go no farther; it was one hundred and thirty-five Cubits ſquare, with a Balcony round it, from whence the Women might ſee what was doing in the great Court. In this Place ſtood the Treaſury, wherein was depoſited the Money, which the People gave towards repairing the Temple, relieving the Poor, and providing the Sacrifices. From the Court of the Women, there was an Aſcent of fifteen Steps into the great Court, which was divided into two Parts, the Iſraelites Court, and the Court of the Prieſts. The Court of the Iſraelites had ſeven Gates, one to the Eaſt, which was called the Beautiful, as likewiſe the Corinthian, becauſe it was covered with Corinthian Braſs; three to the South, and three to the North, and a great Number of Apartments, into which ſeveral pious People retired; and, having Conveniencies of Lodging, are ſaid to continue in the Temple Day and Night. The Prieſts Court was next the Body of the Temple, and in it was the Brazen Altar of Burnt-Offerings, a great deal larger than that of the Tabernacle; two Braſs Pillars, called Jachim and Boaz, which were not in the Tabernacle; ten Brazen Lavers, whereas the Tabernacle had but one; and a Sea of Braſs, which was ſupported by twelve Oxen; all theſe Courts were uncovered, and lay open to the Sky. From the Prieſts Court, there was an Aſcent of twelve Steps, to what we may ſtrictly call the Temple, which conſiſted of three Parts, the Porch, the Sanctuary, and the Holy of Holies. The Porch was about 15 or 20 Cubits long, and as many broad, with a large Portal, which, inſtead of Folding-doors, had only a rich Veil. Here hung up ſeveral valuable Ornaments, [f] the Preſents from Kings and Princes, and what were carried away by Antiochus Epiphanes. The Sanctuary, or Nave of the Temple, was twenty Cubits broad, and forty in Length and Height, having in it the Altar of Incenſe, and the Table of Shew-bread; but becauſe the Temple was larger, and wanted more Light than the Tabernacle, inſtead of one, it had ten golden Candleſticks. The Holy of Holies was twenty Cubits long, wherein was the Ark of the Covenant, containing the two Tables of Stone, but inſtead of two Cherubims, (as were in the Tabernacle) in the Temple there were four.

A Deſcription of the Temple. The ſeveral Courts.

The Temple itſelf.

Its Glory.

[g] BUT the Glory of Solomon's Temple was not in the Temple itſelf, much leſs in the Bigneſs of it, (for that alone was but a ſmall Pile of Building, as containing no more than an hundred and fifty Feet in Length, and an hundred and five in Breadth, taking the whole of it together, from Out to Out, which is exceeded by many of our Pariſh-Churches) but the main Grandure and Excellency of it conſiſted in its Out-buildings and Ornaments, its Workmanſhip being every where exceedingly curious, and Overlaying vaſt and prodigious; for the Overlayings of the Holy of Holies only (which was a Room but 30 Feet ſquare, and 20 Feet high) amounted to

[c] Mount Sion and Mount Moriah are the ſame, as Joſephus teſtifies, Antiq. Lib. I. c. 14. [d] Lamy's and Beauſobre's Introduction. [e] The Prohibition was, to let no Alien enter into the Holy Place. [f] 2 Mac. iii. 2. [g] Prideaux's Connection, Part I.

to six hundred Talents of Gold, which comes to four Millions, three hundred and twenty thousand Pounds of our Sterling Money.

The second Temple.

[h] IT is a Point of History sufficiently known, what was the End of this noble Building, and how God was pleased to permit it to be destroyed and laid waste, because it had been polluted and profaned. Zerobabel, however, obtained Leave of Cyrus, at the People's Return from Captivity, to re-build it; but though he built it upon the same Place, yet it fell far short of the Magnificence of the former. It cannot be denied indeed, but that Herod the Great very much improved and embellished it, and yet it still wanted those extraordinary Marks of the Divine Favour, wherewith the other was honoured. 1. The Ark of the Covenant and Mercy-Seat. 2. The Shechinah, or Divine Presence. 3. The Urim and Thummim. 4. The Spirit of Prophecy. And, 5. The Fire from Heaven, which often came down and consumed their Burnt-Offerings. In this, however, the Prophet is sent to assure them, that the latter Temple should have a Pre-eminence; that, during its standing, the Messiah should be born, and abundantly over-balance these Defects by his gracious and Divine Presence; [i] I will shake all Nations, and the Desire of all Nations shall come, and I will fill this House with Glory. The Glory of this latter House shall be greater than of the former, and in this Place will I give Peace, saith the Lord of Hosts.

Oratories.

3. ANOTHER Place of Divine Worship, very ancient among the Jews, tho' not instituted by the Law of Moses, was their Proseuchæ, or Praying-places, which were a Kind of Courts, encompassed only with a Wall or some other Inclosure, and left open above-head. [k] The chief Place, where the Israelites met together for the Worship of God, was the Temple at Jerusalem, and, before that was built, the Tabernacle; and the open Court before the Altar was, in both of them, that Part, where the People assembled to offer their Prayers unto God: But those, who lived at a Distance from the Tabernacle, while it was in Being, and afterwards from the Temple, when that was built, not being able, at all Times, to resort thither, built Courts, like those in which they prayed at the Tabernacle, and at the Temple, therein to offer their Prayers to God. Of what Form and Use these Proseuchæ were, Their Form, we have a notable Passage in [l] Epiphanius, who himself was a Jew, and born in Palestine, that acquaints us: For, after he has said, that the Massalians built themselves certain broad Places, in the Manner of Forums, which they called Proseuchæ, he goes on thus; and that the Jews of old (as also the Samaritans) had certain Places, without the Cities for Prayer, which they called Proseuchæ, is apparent from the [m] Acts of the Apostles, where Lydia, a Seller of Purple, is said to have met with the Apostle St Paul, and to have heard him preach in a Place, whereof the Scripture says, ἐδόκει τόπος προσευχῆς εἶναι, it seemed to be a Place of Prayer, or (as our Translation has it) where Prayer was wont to be made. There is likewise, at Sichem, which is now called Neapolis, says he, above a Mile without the City, a Proseucha, or Place of Prayer, like a Theatre, which was built in the open Air, and without a Roof, by the Samaritans, who in all Things affected to imitate the Jews.

and Antiquity.

[n] SICHEM indeed was the Place, where God appeared to Abraham, after he had left Haran, promising to give the Land of Canaan to his Posterity, and where Abraham, in Memory of that Vouchsafement, built an Altar unto the Lord, who appeared unto him. This gave a Kind of Sanctity to the Place: And therefore, we need less wonder, that we find one of these Proseuchæ (called [o] by the Name of the Sanctuary of the Lord, where Joshua, not long before his Death, assembled all the Tribes of Israel, and made a solemn Covenant between them and the Lord) erected in this Place, [p] and surrounded with a Grove of Oaks, even during the Time of the Tabernacle. There is great Reason to believe indeed, that these Proseuchæ were the very same with those, in the Old Testament, that are called high Places; for tho' these high Places were often employed in idolatrous Worship, or in a schismatical Way, by setting up Altars in them, in Opposition to that at Jerusalem, and are therefore frequently condemned; yet we meet with several Instances in Scripture, [q] wherein Prophets and good Men are said to make use of them: and it may not be an improbable Conjecture, [r] that our blessed Saviour himself did the same, when it is said that he went out to the Mountain to pray, and continued all Night, ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ τοῦ Θεοῦ, i. e. in the [h] Beausobre's Introduction.

[i] Haggai ii. 7, &c.
[k] Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. VI.
[l] In Tract. de Massalianis Hæreticis.
[m] Chap. xvi. 13.
[n] Gen. xii. 6, 7.
[o] Josh. xxiv. 26.
[p] See Mede's Discourse 18.
[q] 1 Sam. ix. 9.—x. 5, &c.
[r] Mede, ibid.

the Oratory, or Praying House of God; for why should it not be as likely that our Saviour might pray in the Jewish Oratories, as teach in their Synagogues?

Synagogues. THESE Oratories however, being, as we said before, open to the Sky, were not so commodious in the Winter and stormy Seasons of the Year; and therefore, to remedy this Inconvenience, in Process of Time, but, not till after the Babylonish Captivity, (as most learned Men agree) they erected Houses and Tabernacles, wherein to meet for the Purposes of God's Worship; and this was the Original of their Synagogues. In every Town, [t] where there were ten Men of some Learning, Fashion and Quality, that had Time, and were piously disposed to attend upon Divine Service, (for less than ten such did not make a Congregation, and without such a Congregation present, no Part of the Synagogue-Service could be performed) they were allowed to build a Synagogue, but not otherwise. And tho', at first, the Number of them was but small; yet, in a short Time, they multiplied, in the Manner as our Parish-Churches have done, to such a Degree, that in our Saviour's Time, there was no Town of any Note in Judea, but what had one or more of them.

Their Form. [u] THESE Places of Worship were so framed and contrived, as to bear a Resemblance of the Temple at Jerusalem, towards which they always pointed. They consisted of two Parts, which may be called the Chancel, and the Church: The Chancel they called the Temple, and it stood Westward, as did the Sanctum Sanctorum in the Tabernacle and Temple; and in this they set an Ark or Chest, made after the Model of the Ark of the Covenant, with a Veil before it, representing the Veil, which separated the Holy Place from the Holy of Holies, in which was laid up the Book of the Law, i. e. the Pentateuch, or five Books of Moses. In the Body of the Church, the Congregation met, and this was the Manner of their sitting. The Elders, i. e. Persons of more Gravity, Prudence, and Authority than others, † sat in a Semicircle near the Chancel, with their Faces down the Church, and the People sat, one Form behind another, with their Faces up the Church, towards the Chancel, and the Elders. Between the People and the Elders, thus facing one another, there was a Space left, where the Pulpit and Desk stood, in which the Person, who either read, or expounded the Law, stood raised above the rest. The Women were not admitted into the Congregation with the Men, but placed in a separate Balcony, or Gallery, where they could see into the Body of the Church, and hear Divine Service: And (to particularize no farther) over the Gate of the Synagogue was generally written this Inscription, [x] This is the Gate of the Lord, the Righteous shall enter into it; and upon the Walls, these, and the like Sentences, Remember thy Creator. Enter the House of the Lord thy God with Humility. Prayer, without Attention, is like a Body without a Soul. Silence is commendable in the Time of Prayer.

[y] WHAT the Service, both stated and occasional, performed in these Synagogues, was, we shall have Occasion to take Notice elsewere, and, at present, shall only remark, that they differed from the abovementioned Proseuchæ in these three Particulars, 1. The Synagogues were covered Houses, but the Proseuchæ were Courts, built in the Manner of Forums, which were open Inclosures, where anciently at Rome, and in other Democratical Cities, the People assembled for the Transaction of publick Affairs. 2. Synagogues were built within the Cities, whereunto they belonged, but the Proseuchæ without, and commonly on high Places, with Groves, either within or without them: 3. In the Synagogues the Prayers were offered up in publick Forms in common for the whole Congregation, but in the Proseuchæ they prayed (as in the Temple) every one apart for himself. But to return.

Sacrifices of several Sorts. III. ANOTHER Part of the Ceremonial Law related to the Manner and Offices of worshipping God, in Oblations and Sacrifices, joined with Prayers, for Favour and Pardon; and Praises, in Acknowledgment of the Divine Goodness. [z] Sacrifices, properly so called, were Animals killed, and then burnt. He, who presented the Sacrifice, led up the Animal before the Altar, laying his Hand upon its Head, and leaning upon it with all his Weight, to denote, that he loaded the Creature with his Iniquities, and deserved the Death, which it was going to suffer. The Animals, which were thus offered, were of five Sorts; Oxen, Sheep, Goats, Turtle-doves, and Pigeons;

[t] Spencer de Leg. Heb. Lib. I. c. 4. Vitringa, de Synagogâ veteri, Lib. I. Part II. c. 9. Relandus, in Antiq. Sacr. Part I. c. 10. Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. VI. [u] Prideaux, ibid. [u] Lewis's Antiquities of the Hebrew Republick. † The Seats of the Elders were the πρωτοκαθεδρίαι τῶν συναγωγῶν, affected by the Pharisees, for which our Saviour condemns them, Matth. xxiii. 6. Lamy, de Taber. Lib. IV. c. 8.

[x] Psal. cxviii. 20. [y] The Reader that is impatient to know, what the Synagogue-Service consisted in, may find it largely explained in Lewis's Antiquities of the Hebrew Republick, Lib. III. c. 12. or Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. VI. [z] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I.

Pigeons; and the Sacrifice of theſe was either ſtated or occaſional. Stated Sacrifices were ſome of them anniverſary, ſuch as thoſe, which were offered on the great Day of Expiation, at the yearly Commemoration of the Paſſover, and on other ſolemn Feaſt-Days; ſome monthly, viz the Sacrifices offered conſtantly at the New Moons; ſome weekly, viz. ſuch as were the Oblations made on every Sabbath-Day; and ſome that were offered every Day, as a Lamb every Morning, [a] at the third Hour, i. e. at nine o'Clock, and another at the ninth Hour, i. e. at three o'Clock in the Afternoon. Theſe daily Sacrifices, which were always attended with a Meat-Offering of Flour and Oil mingled, and were never without a Drink-Offering of Wine, were called [b] Holocauſts, or Burnt-Offerings, becauſe they where wholly conſumed by Fire; whereas, in other Offerings, a Part only was burnt, and the reſt was divided between the Prieſts, and the Perſons that brought them. Occaſional Sacrifices, which had no determinate Time of being offered, were either after the Commiſſion of ſome Sins, or the Receipt or Expectance of ſome particular Mercies. Thoſe, that were offered upon the Commiſſion of Offences, were either [c] called [Chattah] Sin-Offerings, becauſe they were appointed for the Expiation of the Sins of Ignorance, Infirmity, and Inadvertency; or [Aſham] Treſpaſs-Offerings, becauſe they were commanded to be offered for the Expiation of more enormous Tranſgreſſions, of voluntary and deliberate Sins, and therefore required a more coſtly Sacrifice, than the other. Thoſe, that were offered upon the Receipt or Expectance of ſome particular Mercies, were called [Shelamim] Peace-Offerings, and were either Euchariſtical, i. e. deſiged to be a Teſtimony of their Thankfulneſs to God for the Benefits they had already received; or Euctical, i. e. ſuch as were attended with Wiſhes and Supplications to God for the Bleſſings, which they ſtood in need of. Both theſe were called Freewill-Offerings: And we have only to obſerve farther of them, that, whereas the Holocauſt was all of it conſumed in the Fire, and nothing left, and whereas Part of the Sin-Offering was burnt, and the other Part given to the Prieſt, here it was otherwiſe diſpoſed of; for theſe Sacrifices were diſtributed into three Parts, one of which was burnt to God upon the Altar, for a ſweet Savour, another was given to the Prieſt, and the third was reſerved for the Perſon, who brought the Offering, and ſuch as he pleaſed to invite to partake with him: So that, always, after a Peace-Offering there followed a Feaſt, made of the Remainder of the Sacrifice; and to this the Apoſtle ſeems to allude, when he tells us, [d] that Chriſt our Paſſover, and Peace-Offering with God, is ſacrificed for us, therefore let us keep the Feaſt.

Stated,

and Occaſional.

BUT, beſides theſe Sacrifices of Animals, there were likewiſe, as was ſaid, ſome Oblations among the Jews, which were made of Bread, Wine, Oil, Incenſe, or any of the Fruits of the Earth; and theſe were of three Kinds, viz ſuch as were common, ſuch as were voluntary, and ſuch as were preſcribed. The common and ordinary Oblations were either of a certain Perfume (called Thumiama) burnt every Day upon the Altar of Incenſe; or of the Shew-bread, which was offered new every Sabbath-Day, and the old taken away, and eaten by the Prieſts. Free and voluntary Oblations aroſe from the Vows and Promiſes (which the Jews were apt to make, either in their Proſperity or Diſtreſs) of devoting Something to God, which neither was to be of a mean Value, nor of a polluted Nature; for ſo the Injunction is, [e] thou ſhalt not bring the Hire of a Whore, or the Price of a Dog, into the Houſe of the Lord thy God for any Vow. The preſcribed Oblations were either the Firſt-fruits, or the Tenths. The Firſt-fruits of Animals, if Males, were offered to God; if Men, or unclean Creatures, were redeemed with Money, to be expended in Charity, or the Reparation of the Temple. The Firſt-fruits of the Field were required in Token of their thankful Acknowledgment of God's inexhauſtible Goodneſs, and, according to the Difference of Geſture uſed in preſenting them, were either called Heave, or Wave-Offerings. Laſtly, the Tenths, which the Jews were Oblations.

Their different Kinds.

[a] The Jews and Romans divided the Day, i. e. the Space between the riſing and ſetting of the Sun, into four Parts, conſiſting each of three Hours; but theſe Hours were different from ours in this, that ours are always equal, being the four and twentieth Part of the Day, whereas with them the Hour was a twelfth Part of the Time, which the Sun continued above the Horizon: And as this Time is longer in Summer, than in Winter, their Summer-Hours muſt therefore be longer than their Winter-ones. The firſt Hour began at Sun-riſing; Noon was the Sixth, and the Twelfth ended at Sun-ſet; ſo that the third Hour divided the Space between Sun-riſing and Noon, as the ninth divided that, which was between Noon and Sun-ſet. Lamy's Introduction, Lib. I. c. 5.

[b] Numb. xv. 3, &c. [c] Maimonides was of a quite contrary Opinion, viz. that Chattah was a Sacrifice offered for the Expiation of Faults of an high Nature, and Aſham, for thoſe of an inferior Kind. More Nev. Part III. c. 46. Our learned Mede is of Opinion, Treſpaſs-Offerings were for Sins againſt the firſt Table, and Sin-Offerings for thoſe againſt the Second; and that, as our internal Sins, or Sins of Infirmity, are peccata jugia, continual and daily Sins; ſo the Holocauſt, or Burnt-Offering, was continual, and daily offered; whereas the Sin-Offering and Treſpaſs-Offering were not ſo. Mede's Dif. 51. [d] 1 Cor. v. 7. [e] Deut. xxiii. 18.

obliged to pay, [f] were of four Kinds; ſuch as were paid to the Levites by the People; ſuch as were paid by the Levites to the Prieſts; ſuch as were reſerved for the Banquets, which were made within the Verge of the Temple; and ſuch as were paid every three Years to the Poor.

The Ends of their Inſtitution to typify Chriſt's Death.

THESE were ſome of the Sacrifices and Oblations, which God appointed to the Jews: And, conſidering the great Number and Expenſiveneſs of them, it may well be enquired, for what Ends they were inſtituted, and of what Efficacy they were, towards the Atonement of Sin. [g] The moſt probable Account of the Original of Sacrifices is, that they were at firſt of divine Inſtitution, and appointed ſoon after the Fall of Man, as Types of the Sacrifice of the Death of Chriſt, who was promiſed to be ſent into the World, in order to die for the Expiation of Sin. For though there be a natural Reaſon, why we ſhould [h] not offer unto the Lord our God, of that which doth coſt us nothing, but ſhould [i] honour the Lord with our Subſtance, and preſent ſome Part of the beſt we have in Devotion and Gratitude to him, from whom we have received the Whole: Yet no ſufficient Reaſon can be given, why Beaſts ſhould be ſlain in Sacrifice, before they were uſed in Food; why God ſhould accept of the Blood of any Creature, or be pleaſed with taking away the Life, which he had given it; or why a peculiar Efficacy, towards the Expiation of Sin, ſhould be ſuppoſed to reſide in the Blood, more than any other Part, unleſs it had been upon the Account of the Blood of Chriſt, which was typically prefigured by the Blood of Beaſts: Unleſs, I ſay, we are prepoſſeſſed of this Truth, that the Sacrifices of the ancient Law were prefigurative of the Sacrifice of Jeſus Chriſt, [k] we can look upon the Tabernacle and Temple of Jeruſalem as no better than ſo many Slaughter-Houſes, and the Blood, and Fat, and continual burning of Fleſh will be a Means to excite our Diſguſt, rather than Religion.

[l] TO what Purpoſe is the Multitude of your Sacrifices unto me? I am full of the Burnt-Offerings of Rams, and the Fat of fed Beaſts, and I delight not in the Blood of Bullocks, and of Rams, and of He-Goats: Theſe are the Words of God, commanding the People to bring no more vain Oblations to him. But how came God to reject the Sacrifices, which he himſelf had inſtituted? Did that, which pleaſed him at one Time, diſpleaſe him at another? We cannot charge God with ſuch Inconſtancy; but we ſee by theſe Exprobrations, that, when he commanded the Sacrifices of the ancient Law, he did it not out of any Deſire [m] to drink the Blood of Goats, or to eat the Fleſh of Bulls, (as David ſpeaks) but only to typify thereby the great and precious Sacrifice, which his Son ſhould one Day offer up; and that as ſoon as theſe Sacrifices ceaſed to be animated by this Spirit, (as thoſe did, which the carnal Jews offered up) they became inſupportable to him.

To be of moral Intendment.

THERE were other Ends of a ſecondary Nature, which God might have, in appointing theſe Ordinances to the Jews. Oblations of all Kinds were federal Rites, and deſigned to ſignify the Covenant and Agreement between God and them. The continual Morning and Evening Sacrifices were ſymbolical of his divine Preſence reſiding among them; the Blood of the ſubſtituted Victim was declarative of the heinous Nature of Sin; the Fruits of the Earth, which they brought, were Acknowledgments of God's Bounty and Liberality to them; and every Pigeon or Turtle-dove, which they preſented, reminded them of the acceptable Sacrifice of a broken and contrite Heart; and whiſpered the Words of the wiſe Son of Syrach in their Ears, [n] He that keepeth the Law, bringeth Offerings enough; he that taketh Heed to the Commandment, offereth a Peace-Offering; he that requiteth a good Turn, offereth fine Flour; and he that giveth Alms, ſacrificeth Praiſe; to depart from Wickedneſs, is a Thing pleaſing to the Lord; and to forſake Unrighteouſneſs, is a Propitiation.

and to atone for Sins.

THERE is one End more which God might deſign in the Inſtitution of theſe Sacrifices, and that was the Remiſſion of Sin. [o] Some indeed are of Opinion, that the Jewiſh Religion allowed of no Expiation, but for legal Impurities, and involuntary Tranſgreſſions, ſuch as proceeded from Ignorance and Inadvertency, but not for Sins of Preſumption, and ſuch as were committed with an high Hand. "If Men ſinned "wilfully, there was no Sacrifice appointed by the Law for ſuch Offences; and this "they ſeem to prove, from the very Authority of the Law itſelf, viz. [p] that the "Prieſt ſhall make Atonement for the Soul that ſinneth ignorantly, but the Soul that "does [f] Jerome's Comment upon Ezek. liv. [g] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs of the Chriſtian Religion, Vol. II. [h] 2 Sam. xxiv. 24. [i] Prov. iii. 9. [k] Lamy's Introduction. [l] Iſa. i. 11. [m] Pſal. l. 13. [n] Ecclus. xxxv. 1, &c. [o] Volkelius, de Nat. Relig. Lib. II. c. 12. Tillotſon's Sermon, on 2 Pet. i. 4. Scott's Chriſtian Life, P. II. Vol. II. c. 7. [p] Numb. xv. 28, 30.

" does ought preſumptuouſly, ſhall be cut off from among the People." Now [q] it is generally confeſſed, that God appointed Sacrifices and Propitiations for the worſt of mental Sins, ſuch as Unbelief, blaſphemous Thoughts, Uncleanneſs of the Heart, &c. becauſe it is hardly ſuppoſeable, but that the beſt Men were not altogether free from theſe; and, though the Moſaick Law ſeems to have made no Proviſion for viſible, and outward groſs Enormities, ſuch as Idolatry, Murther, Blaſphemy, &c. becauſe the Offenders were preſently puniſhed with Death; yet it does not follow from thence, that there was no Expiation for theſe enormous Crimes. Upon ſincere Repentance they might be expiated, though the Perſons, that committed them, underwent the Penalty of the Law, it being neceſſary to animadvert ſeverely upon them, leſt Impunity ſhould give Encouragement to Vice, and thereby endanger the Commonwealth.

IT cannot but be granted, (becauſe it is manifeſt from ſeveral Inſtances) that the Crimes of Perſons have been forgiven and pardoned, though they themſelves were not exempted from Puniſhment. Moſes's Death was the Recompence of his Unbelief, though there is no Doubt to be made of his dying in the divine Favour; and Joſiah was juſtly ſnatched away in Battle, becauſe he engaged in it againſt the divine Will and Command; but yet he died in Peace and Reconciliation with God, and was tranſmitted to the Place of everlaſting Bliſs: And from hence we may gather, that though Death was, by Moſes's Law, made the penal Conſequence of Adultery, Diſobedience to Parents, Violation of the Sabbath, &c. yet whoever, among ſuch Criminals as theſe, turned unto God by an unfeigned Deteſtation of the Sins they committed, had, without doubt, the Benefit of legal Sacrifices, which expiated the Offences of all true Penitents, though they were never ſo great and grievous. The Reaſon is, [r] becauſe this Inſtitution and Ordinance of Sacrificing was the ſtanding Means of Salvation in the Jewiſh Diſpenſation; and therefore it was requiſite, that the Influence of it ſhould extend to all Sinners, that were heartily ſorry for their Offences, abhorring their paſt Crimes, and themſelves for committing them. But ſtill it muſt be owned, that theſe Oblations and Sacrifices did not of themſelves, or by their own Worthineſs, atone for the Guilt of Sin, but only by Virtue of the Expiatory Sacrifice of the Meſſias to come, whereof they were but Types and Shadows. And therefore, to ſpeak ſtrictly and properly, they did not really and formally, but typically and myſtically expiate, i. e. they did not pacify God's Anger, and ſatisfy his Juſtice, and take away Sin, and juſtify Perſons by their own Force and Efficacy; but as they were Figures and Significations of that univerſal Sacrifice, which, in the divine Intention, was ſlain from the Foundation of the World, and, in the Fulneſs of Time, was to come down from Heaven, in order to fulfil the great Undertaking of making Atonement for the Sins of all Mankind.

The ſeveral Sorts of Levites, and their Office.

IV. THERE is one Thing more which the Eccleſiaſtical Law took under it's Conſideration, and that was, the Order and Office of ſuch, as attended upon divine Service. The loweſt of this Order were the Levites, ſo called becauſe they were of the Tribe of Levi, one of the twelve Sons of the Patriarch Jacob. Moſes is very particular [s] in giving an Account of what each Levite was to carry, upon the Removal of the Tabernacle: For to carry about the Ark and the Tabernacle, and to take care of the ſeveral Things, which appertained unto them, was, at their firſt Inſtitution, their proper Employment; but this Part of their Office, after the Conqueſt of the Land of Canaan, ſubſiſted no longer. David, after he had ſettled the Ark and the Prieſthood, [t] eſtabliſhed a new Order among the Levites, whereby [u] ſome were appointed to guard the Gates, [x] ſome to ſing Pſalms, and [y] ſome to take care of the Treaſures of the Temple: He likewiſe divided them into different Claſſes, whereof Maimonides reckons twenty-four, and each of theſe were to ſerve a whole Week. The Head of each Claſs divided againſt thoſe, that were under him, into different Families, and choſe out, every Day, a certain Number of them, who were to ſerve, aſſigning every one his proper Office. Nor muſt it be forgot, that David choſe out two hundred and eighty-eight Levites, [z] to be Maſters of Muſick; ſo that as there were four and twenty Claſſes of Singers, and each Claſs had twelve Maſters, who, in their Performances, mixed Vocal and Inſtrumental Muſick together; it is very probable, that, out of this Order of Men, were choſen the Στρατηγοὶ, or Military Officers, (which [a] St Luke makes mention of) whoſe Buſineſs it was to give Notice of the Time for Solemnities, of the Day and Hour of the Sacrifices, and to ſet the [u] 1 Chron. ix. 17, 26. and Chap. xxvi. [x] Ibid. xxv. [y] Ibid. ix. 29. [z] Ibid. xxv. 7. [a] Luke xxii. 52.

[q] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [r] Ibid. [s] Numb. iv. [t] Lamy's Introduction.

the Guard; and, who, beſides this, had committed to their Charge and Inſpection the Muſick, the Inſtruments, the Libations, the Sick, the Waters, the Shew-bread, the Perfumes, the Oils, and the ſacerdotal Habits. The Levites, in ſhort, after the Temple was erected, had their Office much altered, and advanced, and inſtead of being Lacqueys and Porters to the Tabernacle, were appointed to aſſiſt at the Altar in the Time of Sacrifice; to help in the Service of the Temple, to teach and inſtruct the People publickly; and to be Aſſeſſors ſometimes with the Prieſts, in the Courts of Judicature.

Prieſts and their Office.

As to the Function of the Prieſts, their Buſineſs was, [b] to keep up the Fire upon the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, that it might not go out; to guard the ſacred Veſſels; to waſh the Victims; to make the Aſperſions, whether of Blood or Water, either upon the Victims, or the Book of the Law; to [c] burn the Incenſe upon the Altar; to place the new Shew-bread upon the Table, and remove the old; and (what peculiarly belonged to them) to catch the Blood of the Victims, and ſprinkle it upon the Altar. In a Word, the ſuperior Part of the Prieſt's Office and Employment was, [d] to offer Sacrifices for the People of God; [e] to bleſs the People; to intercede for them with God; [f] to teach and expound the Law; and [g] to judge and determine Cauſes, both Civil and Eccleſiaſtical; for which Reaſon they were to addict themſelves to Study, [h] that their Lips might keep Knowledge, when the People ſought the Law at their Mouth; for they were the Meſſengers of the Lord of Hoſts.

The High-Prieſt and his Office.

ALL the Prieſts had over them an High-Prieſt. Aaron was the firſt in that Office; to his Houſe it was tied by divine Inſtitution, and was to have deſcended in an hereditary Succeſſion, but it did not continue long in that State. Eleazer indeed came after his Father; and, upon his Death, three Prieſts of his Family ſucceſſively were High-Prieſts: After that, the Office went out of the Houſe of Aaron, and came to Eli, of the Family of Ithamar; but it was not long, before it reverted into it's former Channel; and then generally deſcended lineally, and continued for Life, [i] until the Jews became ſubject to the Greeks and Romans, and then the Duration of that venerable Office depended upon the Will of their Princes and Governors: But as long as it continued, the Perſon inveſted with it had the ſingular Honour of being Metropolitan of the Jewiſh Church, and Preſident of their Grand Council, or Sanhedrim. As to religious Matters, his Office was much of the ſame Nature with the Prieſts, to inſtruct, and bleſs, and pray for the People; but as his Habit was more ſplendid and his Conſecration more ſolemn, than theirs, ſo his peculiar Province was to preſide over them, and other inferior Officers of the Church; [k] to take care that they diſcharged their Functions right; and his diſtinguiſhing Adminiſtration was, to go into the Sanctum Sanctorum once a Year, and there make Atonement for his own Sins, and the Sins of the People; and to aſk Counſel of God, in the great and weighty Affairs of State by Way of Urim and Thummim; the Nature of which Politick Oracle (as we may call it) we ſhall here take Occaſion to explain.

Urim and Thummim, what.

IN order to this, we muſt obſerve, that the High-Prieſt, beſides other his rich Attire, had a Sort of Garment, which he wore outmoſt, not much unlike a Waiſtcoat without Sleeves, called, by the Hebrews [l] an Ephod, and by the Latins, a Superhumerale, becauſe it was faſtened upon his Shoulders; that upon each Shoulder he had a precious Stone, in which were engraven the Names of the Children of Iſrael; in that on the right Shoulder, the Names of the ſix Eldeſt, and in that of the left, thoſe of the ſix Youngeſt; and that upon his Breaſt he ſometimes wrote a ſquare Piece of Stuff, about a Span broad, ſet with twelve precious Stones, upon which were likewiſe engraven the Names of the twelve Sons of Jacob. This Breaſt-plate (as the Hebrew Word ſignifies) wherein was contained the Urim and Thummim (Light and Perfection as the two Words denote) the High-Prieſt was uſed to put on, when he conſulted God upon any Occaſion: But what this Urim and Thummim was, and in what Manner God anſwered the High-Prieſt, whenever he came to conſult him, with this Ornament on, has been a Matter of much Speculation and Debate among the Learned.

THE

[b] Lev. iv. 5, &c. [c] Exod. xxx. 7. 2 Chron. xxvi. 16—19. [d] Numb. iii. and iv.
[e] Ibid. vi. 23. [f] Lev. x. 11. [g] Ibid. x. and xiii. Deut. xvii. 8, &c. [h] Mal. ii. 7.
[i] Lamy's Introduction. [k] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [l] The Hebrew Word is Hoſchen, i. e. a Pectoral or Breaſt plate, becauſe it was worn upon the Breaſt; but the Greeks call it λόγιον, and the Latins, from them Rationale. The Greek Word may be tranſlated by the Latin one, but I think it would be better rendered Oraculum, becauſe this was, as it were, the Oracle, by which God gave his Anſwers. Lamy, ibid.

THE general Opinion ſeems to be, that this Urim and Thummim were one and the ſame Thing; [m] but an ingenious Writer of our own Nation conceives them to be two different Oracles, and applied to different Purpoſes: That the Urim was the Oracle, whereby God gave Anſwer to thoſe, that conſulted him in difficult Caſes; and Thummim that, whereby the High-Prieſt knew, [n] whether God did accept the Sacrifice or no; and therefore the former is called Light, as giving Knowledge, which diſpels the Darkneſs of our Minds; and the other Integrity, or Perfection, becauſe they, whoſe Sacrifices God accepted, were accounted Thummim, i. e. juſt and righteous in the Eyes of God. The Jewiſh Doctors are moſtly of Opinion, that Urim and Thummim were nothing elſe but the precious Stones which were ſet in the Breaſt-plate, and [o] that, by the ſhining and protuberating of the Letters in the Names of the twelve Tribes, graven on the twelve Stones, the High-Prieſt, when he came to conſult God, did read his Anſwer. [p] Others will have them to be the Tetragrammaton, or the ineffable Name of God, which being written or engraven, in a myſterious Manner, and put into the Breaſt-plate, gave it an Oracular Power: But, inſtead of the Name of God, [q] an Author of our own Nation will needs have it to be no more than the two Words, Urim and Thummim, written or engraven, as we ſaid, and ſo put in the Hollow of the Breaſt-plate, under the precious Stones; and that the High-Prieſt was inſtructed in his Anſwer by a certain Difference he obſerved in the Letters made by God's own Diſpoſal. [r] Chriſtophorus à Caſtro, and from him, [s] Dr Spencer tells us, that they were two little Images, much of the ſame Nature with the Gentile Teraphim, which, being ſhut up in the folding or doubling of the Breaſt-plate, did from thence give the Oracular Anſwer by a Voice. But, beſides that this ſavours more of Heatheniſm and Idolatry, than of the pure Inſtitution of a divine Law; [t] to think that God, who declares himſelf ſo poſitively againſt the idolatrous Practice of the Gentiles, ſhould, by theſe Images of Pagan Invention, take the ready Way to give them Countenance and Encouragement; or, to think that the Jews, who were particularly commanded not to learn the Ways of the Heathens, but to avoid them, and act contrary to them, were permitted, nay commanded, and encouraged to make Uſe of this magical and ſuperſtitious Rite, is ſuch an Heap of odd and wild Conceits, as no unprejudiced Mind can entertain. And therefore the moſt common, and indeed the only probable Opinion is, that Urim and Thummim were not any corporeal Things, but a certain Virtue and Power, given to the Breaſt-plate at its Conſecration, of obtaining an Oraculous Anſwer from God, whenever Counſel was aſk'd of him by the High-Prieſt with it on, in ſuch Manner as his Word did direct; and that the Names of Urim and Thummim, Light and Perfection, were given hereunto, only [u] to denote the Clearneſs and Perſpicuity, which theſe Anſwers of God had, viz. that they were not like heathen Oracles, enigmatical and ambiguous, but plain and manifeſt, and ſuch as never fell ſhort of Perfection, either of Fulneſs in the Anſwer, or Certainty of the Truth of it.

Different Opinions concerning it.

WHETHER this Oracle was only conſulted in the great and important Affairs of State, or might be adviſed with in Queſtions of a lower Nature, [x] is not entirely determined by the Learned: But the moſt prevailing Opinion is, that the High-Prieſt was not allowed to addreſs to it for any private Perſon, but only for the King, the Preſident of the Sanhedrim, the General of the Army, or ſome other great Prince, or publick Governor in Iſrael; and that, not upon any private Affairs, but ſuch only as related to the publick Intereſt of the Nation, either in Church or State. When therefore any ſuch Matter happened, wherein it was neceſſary to conſult God, the Cuſtom was for the High-Prieſt to put on his Robes, and over them his Breaſt-plate, in which the Urim and Thummim were, and ſo to preſent himſelf before God. The Place, where he preſented himſelf, was before the Ark of the Covenant, not within the Veil of the Holy of Holies, (for thither he never entered but once a Year, on the great Day of Expiation) but without the Veil, in the holy Place: And there ſtanding with his Robes and Breaſt-plate on, and his Face turned directly towards the Ark and Mercy-Seat, whereon the divine Preſence reſted, he propounded the Matter, and at ſome Diſtance behind him (but without the Holy Place) ſtood the Perſon on whoſe Behalf the Counſel was aſked, in devout Expectation of the Anſwer; which (as [y] it ſeems moſt congruous to the Thing) was given him by an audible Voice, from the Mercy-Seat, which was within, behind the Veil. Here it was that Moſes went to aſk Counſel of God in all Caſes; and from hence he was anſwered by an audible Voice: And, in like Manner, whenever the High-Prieſt preſented himſelf before God, according to the Preſcription of the divine Law, 'tis reaſonable to believe, that God gave him an Anſwer in the ſame Way, as he did Moſes, i. e. by an audible Voice, from the Mercy-Seat; and for this Reaſon it is, that ſuch Addreſs for Counſel is called [z] enquiring at the Mouth of God; and the Holy of Holies (the Place where the Ark and Mercy-Seat ſtood, and from which the Anſwer was given) is ſo often, in Scripture, [a] ſtiled the Oracle, becauſe from thence the Oracles of God were uttered and delivered to thoſe, that aſked Counſel of him.

When, and how conſulted.

[m] Mede's Diſcourſe 35. [n] He ſuppoſes farther, that both theſe Oracles were in uſe among the Patriarchs, and that, by ſome ſuch Means as this, Abel knew that God had accepted his Offering, and Cain, that he was refuſed, Ibid. [o] Prideaux's Connect. P. I. lib. 3. [p] Paraphraſis Jonathanis in Exod. xxviii. 39. [q] Edwards upon the Subject. [r] De Vaticinio. [s] Diſſert. de Urim & Thummim. [t] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. Pocock, in his Comment on Hoſea, iii. 4. [u] Hence it poſſibly is, that the LXX tranſlate Urim and Thummim by the Words, Δήλωσιν καὶ Ἀλήθειαν, Manifeſtation and Truth, becauſe all theſe Oracular Anſwers, given by Urim and Thummim, were always clear and manifeſt, and their Truth ever certain and infallible. Prideaux, ibid. [x] Mr Mede and Dr Edwards ſeem to be of Opinion, that it might be conſulted in Matters of a private Nature.

The Ceremonial Law, why inſtituted at firſt.

THESE, and ſuch like, were the Rites and Ordinances of the Ceremonial and Eccleſiaſtical Law, which God gave the Jews. And, before we diſmiſs this Argument, there are but two Enquiries more we think ourſelves concerned to make; 1. For what Reaſon God inſtituted it at firſt. And, 2. of what Continuance he intended it to be. [b] That all the legal Rites and Ceremonial Worſhip of the Jews were but Shadows, and Types, and Figures of Chriſt, and of that Redemption, Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification, which was to be wrought by him; that their Incenſe and Oblations, their legal Uncleanneſs and Purifications, their Diſtinction of Meats, their Faſtings and Feſtivals, and other Ordinances enjoined them by the Law of Moſes, were not required, for their own Sakes, or any Virtue or Efficacy ſuppoſed to be in the Things themſelves to recommend Men to God's Favour, but were inſtituted to ſignify the inward Purity and Integrity of the Heart, and by outward Obſervances, and ſenſible Things, to lead a carnal and ſenſual People to the Knowledge and Practice of Things ſpiritual, we have, in ſome Meaſure, proved before; and the Author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews has ſhewn enough to ſuperſede any farther Enquiry. [c] That they were ordained likewiſe for the Prevention of Idolatry, and to keep the People from hankering after the Ways and Cuſtoms of the religious Worſhip, perform'd to Idols and falſe Gods, either by the Egyptians, from whom they came, or the Inhabitants of Canaan, whither they were going, or any of the idolatrous Nations about them, is what [d] the Learned among the Jews, and [e] the ancient Fathers of the Chriſtian Church have not been wanting to obſerve. Maimonides was the firſt, who oppoſed, and confuted that received Opinion of ſome Jewiſh Doctors, that there was no Reaſon to be given for the ritual Law, which was wholly to be aſcribed to the ſovereign Will and Pleaſure of God. He, by his Acquaintance with the Rites and Ceremonies of the Zabii, an ancient Sort of Idolaters in the Eaſt, came to perceive, that moſt of the Jewiſh Rites were inſtituted in direct Oppoſition to the Superſtition of that People. The Jewiſh Prohibition [f] of cutting or mangling their Fleſh, of ſhaving the Corners of their Heads, [g] of wearing a Garment of Linnen and Woollen, [h] of ſowing the Ground with different Seeds, [i] of ſeething a Kid in his Mother's Milk, [k] of a Woman's wearing the Armour of a Man, and a Man's wearing the Garments of a Woman: Theſe, and ſeveral other Precepts of the Law of Moſes, are reduced, by that learned Rabbin, from idolatrous Cuſtoms, as the Occaſion of them; and his Conjectures ſeem to have more Weight, becauſe God, in general, did ſo ſtrictly forbid the Jews to imitate the Practices of other Nations; [l] after the Doings of the Land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, ye ſhall not do; and, after the Doings of the Land of Canaan, whither I bring you, ye ſhall not do; I am the Lord your God, ye ſhall therefore keep my Statutes and my Judgments: Which Words ſeem to imply, not only that the idolatrous Rites of the Gentiles were forbidden, but that thoſe of God's Appointment were made in direct Oppoſition to them: And, accordingly, we find the Roman Hiſtorian repreſenting the Jews [m] as a People, whoſe religious Rites were contrary to all the World beſides; that what, to others was moſt ſacred, they accounted profane; and allowed as lawful, what other Nations were wont to abominate.

IF

[y] Prideaux, ibid. [z] Joſh. ix. 14. [a] Pſal. xxviii. 2. 1 Kings vi. 5, &c. 2 Chron. iii. 16. Chap. iv. 20, &c. [b] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs, Vol. II. [c] Collyer's Introduct. [d] Maimon. More Nev. P. III. c. 29. [e] Prima Legis noſtræ Intentio Idololatriam tollere, & quæ illi adhærent, & occaſionem præbent. Irenæus Lib. IV. c. 28. Facilem ad Idola reverti populum erudiebat per multas avocationes, &c. Tertull. contra Marc. Lib. II. c. 18. [f] Lev. xix. 28, 29. [g] Ibid. xix. 19. [h] Deut. xxii. 9. [i] Exod. xxiii. 19. [k] Deut. xxii. 5. [l] Lev. xviii. 3, 4. [m] Profana illis omnia, quæ apud nos ſacra, rurſum conceſſa apud illos, quæ nobis inceſta. Tacitus, Hiſt. Lib. V. c. 4. The like Repreſentation is made of them by Dion. Caſſius, Lib. XXXVII.

IF then the Moſaick Laws and Ceremonies were given the Jews, as Barriers againſt Idolatry, and formally repugnant to the Practice of the Gentiles; it would ſound but very oddly, one would think, [n] to be told, "That moſt of them were "of heathen Original; and that, to cure his People of Idolatry, God had borrowed "the Inſtitution of New Moons and Sabbaths, of Tythes and Firſt-fruits, of Obla-"tions and Sacrifices, of Urim and Thummim, of the Ark and Cherubims, and almoſt "of all the other Ordinances of the Tabernacle and Temple-Worſhip from idolatrous "Nations." But [o] here we may appeal to any ſober and conſiderate Man, whether it be conſiſtent with good Senſe, or congruous to Truth and Reaſon, that God ſhould make Laws exactly contrary to the Chaldeans and Egyptians, and other Pagan Nations, ſhewing thereby, that he hated the very Semblance of their Rites; and yet, at the ſame Time, take the Riſe of its Inſtitutions from the Cuſtoms and Practices of theſe Gentiles: Nay, whether it gives us not ſuch an Idea of God (as Reverence to his tremendous Majeſty will not ſuffer us to name) to repreſent him raking up all the vain, ludicrous, ſuperſtitious, impious, impure, idolatrous, magical, and diabolical Cuſtoms, which had been firſt invented, and afterwards practiſed, by the moſt barbarous Nations; and, out of all theſe, patching up a great Part of the Religion, which he appointed his own People. But I forbear Exaggerations; and ſhall only obſerve, that, as many Precepts of the Ceremonial Law were not ſo much founded on any unalterable Reaſon, as inſtituted in Bar and Oppoſition to the idolatrous Cuſtoms of the Nations, among whom the Jews then dwelt, and to diſtinguiſh them from the reſt of Mankind; ſo do they ſeem, in their primary Intendment, not to have been deſigned for any longer Continuance, than the Reaſon, which at firſt occaſioned them, ſhou'd remain in Force. And therefore, when the Prophecies ſhould be fulfilled, and [p] the Deſire of all Nations was come; [q] when the Mountain of the Lord's Houſe ſhould be exalted, and all Nations flow into it; ſo that, [r] from the riſing of the Sun unto the going down thereof, God's Name ſhould be exalted among the Gentiles, and, in every Place, Incenſe ſhould be made unto him, and a pure Offering; then ſhould the Ceremonies, which made a Separation between God's People and other Nations, and [s] the Sacrifice and Oblation, which were of peculiar Uſe and Inſtitution, and not adapted to an univerſal Diſpenſation, be cauſed to ceaſe.

Dr Spencer's Opinion, cenſur'd.

When to ceaſe.

[n] Spencer, de Legibus Hebr. L. III. [o] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [p] Hag. ii. 7. [q] Iſa. ii. 2. [r] Mal. i. 11. [s] Dan. ix. 27.

CHAP. V.

The moſt memorable Tranſactions from the Giving of the Law, to the Building of the Temple.

WHILE Moſes was on the Mount, receiving theſe Laws from the Mouth of God, the People below ſoon forgot [a] the Promiſes of Obedience, they had made, and fell into a ſad Apoſtacy. Moſes, at his going up into the Mount, appointed [b] Aaron and Hur to be the Rulers of the People, during his Abſence; but his Abſence being longer than was expected, the Children of Iſrael began to be uneaſy. They ſaw the Glory of the Lord, which was like devouring Fire, on the Top of the Mount, and thereupon they concluded, that Moſes, who tarried ſo long, was certainly deſtroyed in the Flames: They ſaw too, that the Pillar of the Cloud, which uſed to reſt upon the Tabernacle, and conduct them in their Marches, was gone, and in no Likelihood of returning again; and hereupon, having loſt their Leader, as they thought, and the viſible Token of God's Preſence among them, they come unto Aaron, and, in a tumultuous Manner, demand of him to make them another Repreſentation of the Divine Preſence, in the Room of what was departed from them. [c] Up, ſay they, and make us Gods, (or as the Hebrew Text will bear it) make us a God, which ſhall go before us: For as for this Moſes, the Man that brought us up out of the Land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him:

Before Chriſt, 1491, &c. Of the World. 2513, &c.

The golden Calf, why made.

[d] Not

[a] Exod. xxiv. 3. [b] Ver. 14. [c] Ibid. xxxii. 1.

[d] Not that they were ſo ſtupid as to imagine, that the true God could be made by any Man, or that any Image could be a Means of conducting them; but what they wanted was, ſome outward Object, to ſupply the Want of the Cloud, by being a Type and Symbol of the Deity, and where they might depoſit the Homage, which they intended to pay to the ſupreme God; for ſo [e] ſome of the Jewiſh Doctors have expounded the Text of Moſes, they deſired a ſenſible Object of Divine Worſhip to be ſet before them; not with an Intention to deny God, who brought them out of Egypt, but that Something, in the Place of God, might ſtand before them, when they declared his wonderful Works.

Why Aaron did it.

THE Commandment againſt making Images had ſo lately, in ſo terrible a Manner, been enjoined by God himſelf, that tho' ſome Reaſon may be given, why the Children of Iſrael were ſo forward to make the Demand, yet none can be imagined, why Aaron ſhould comply with it, without Remonſtrance; and yet we meet with no Refuſal recorded by Moſes; all that we have in Extenuation of Aaron's Fault, is from the Suggeſtions of the Rabbins, [f] who pretend, that Aaron's Compliance proceeded from his Fear; that the People had murthered Hur, the other Deputy, for oppoſing their Deſire; that [g] to diſcourage them from purſuing it, Aaron demanded all their golden Ear-Rings, in Hopes that they would not inſiſt upon having an Idol, which would coſt them ſo dear; but that, when Nothing would avail, he took their Gold, and caſt it into the Fire, and contrary to his Intention, [h] by ſome Magical and Diabolical Art, there immediately came forth a Calf, which much increaſed the People's Superſtition. But this, and [i] Abundance more of the like Nature, ſeem to be Conceits, invented for the Excuſe of Aaron, who is plainly enough ſaid to have [k] made this molten Calf, which he could not have done, without deſigning it, and running the Gold into a Mould of that Figure.

Why a Calf made an Emblem of the Deity. Different Opinions.

BUT here a famous Queſtion does ariſe, "For what poſſible Reaſon Aaron ſhould "make choice of the Image of a Calf, to be an expreſſive Emblem of the Deity?" What we here render Calf, is, [l] in other Places of Scripture, called an Ox, and as an Ox's Head was, in ſome Countries, [m] an Emblem of Strength, and the Horns, a common Sign of Kingly Power; [n] a learned Prelate, out of a Deſire to apologize for Aaron, tells us, that his Intention in making an Ox the Symbol of the Divine Preſence, was, to remind the Iſraelites of the Power of God, and to expreſs the great Tokens, they had ſeen of it, in their wonderful Deliverance from the Land of Egypt. [o] But how ingenious ſoever this Opinion may be, yet it wants this Foundation for its Support, that this Hieroglyphick was in Uſe, in the Time of Moſes, which will hardly be proved; nor can we well imagine, why Aaron ſhould forget to plead this in excuſe for himſelf, when he is called to an Account by Moſes, or why God ſhould have been ſo highly incenſed againſt him, had his Deſign been only to exhibit a Symbol of the Divine Power and Authority to a People of too groſs Sentiments, without ſuch a viſible Repreſentation, ever to comprehend it.

[p] ANOTHER learned Prelate of our own Nation, equally inclined to excuſe this Action of Aaron's, ſuppoſes, that he took his Pattern from Part of what he ſaw on the holy Mount, [q] when the Shechinah of God came down upon it, attended with Angels, ſome of which were Cherubims, or Angels appearing in the Form of Oxen: But this Opinion is inconſiſtent with the great Care that was taken on Sinai, not to furniſh any Pretext for Idolatry, and the Caution that Moſes gives the People to that Purpoſe, Take ye therefore good heed unto yourſelves (for ye ſaw no Manner of Similitude, on the Day, that the Lord ſpake unto you in Horeb, out of the Midſt of the Fire) leſt ye corrupt yourſelves, [d] Saurin's Diſſertation, and Patrick's Commentary. [e] R. Jehudah, in Lib. Cozri, P. 1. Sect. 97. [f] Vid. Shemoth Rabba, Sect 41. Fol. 156. [g] Vid. Auguſt. Tom. 4. Quæſt. 41. in Exod. [h] The Ambiguity of the Words, wherein Aaron excuſes himſelf, I caſt it, i. e. the Gold, which they gave me, into the Fire, and there came out this Calf, Exod. xxxii. 24. gave Occaſion to this Conceit; whereas his Intent only is, to plead, in Mitigation of his Fault, that he was not actually the Maker of the Image; and therefore he repreſents, that they required him to make them a God; that thereupon he aſked them for Materials; that they brought him their Gold: Then, ſays he, I caſt it into the Fire, I delivered it out of my Hands to the Uſe it was deſigned for, into the Furnace, in which it was to be melted, and there came out this Calf, i. e. "I was no further concern'd in what "was done; the next Thing I ſaw was a Calf: What was done farther, was done by others, not by me; the "Workmen made the Calf, and brought it to me," Exod. xxxii. 24. And therefore, to make this his Excuſe conſiſtent with what went before, the Words in the fourth Verſe of this Chapter, he received them at their Hands, and he faſhioned it, &c. by a ſmall Emendation in the Text, may be rendered, not in the Plural, but in the Singular Number, thus: — And he received it [i. e. the Gold] at their Hands; and they formed it into a Mould, and they made a molten Calf, and they ſaid, this is thy God, O Iſrael. Vid. Shuckford's Connect. Vol. III. Lib. 11. [i] Nay, ſome of the Jews go a great deal farther, and ſay, that the Devil entered into this Calf, and made it roar, like a Bull, to ſtrike the greater Awe into the People; as R. Judah ſaith in Pirke Elieſer, C. 45. and in Tanchuma, they ſay, it not only roared, but danced alſo. Patrick's Commentary. [k] Exod. xxxii. 4. [l] Pſal. cvi. 20. [m] So it was among the Phœnicians, the Egyptians, and the Romans, as Patrick ſhews in his Commentary. [n] Patrick, Ibid. [o] Saurin's Diſſert. [p] Tenniſon, of Idolatry, C. 6. [q] Exod. xxiv. 10.

yourſelves, and make you a graven Image; the Similitude of any Figure, the Likeneſs of any Male or Female, the Likeneſs of any Beaſt, that is on the Earth, the Likeneſs of any winged Fowl, that flieth in the Air, the Likeneſs of any Thing, that creepeth on the Ground, the Likeneſs of any Fiſh, &c. Where the Holy Spirit enumerates Animals of all Kinds, and poſitively aſſures us, that none of their Forms or Figures appeared upon the Mount.

THE Generality of Interpreters, who are not ſo inclined to excuſe Aaron's Fault, have run into this Opinion, that he made Choice of the Figure of an Ox, or a Calf, in Compliance to the Prejudice of the People, and becauſe that Creature was worſhipped in Egypt. That the Iſraelites were ſorely infected with the Idolatry of the Egyptians, we have many plain Proofs [r] from Scripture to convince us; that all Sorts of Animals were worſhipped by the Egyptians, and, among the terreſtrial, more eſpecially the Ox, [s] is what the ſeveral Authors, who have treated of the Affairs of Egypt, do abundantly teſtify; and that the Idolatry of Animals, and more eſpecially of the Ox, was eſtabliſhed in Egypt, during the Sojourning of the Iſraelites in that Land, is more than probable from thoſe Words of Moſes to Pharaoh, [t] If we ſacrifice the Abomination of the Egyptians before their Eyes, i. e. [u] If we ſacrifice to our God Oxen, Sheep, and Goats, which the Egyptians worſhip and adore, and, conſequently, make an Abomination to the Lord, will they not ſtone us? So that it ſeems moſt rational to ſuppoſe, that this Image was made in Compliance to the giddy Humour of the People, and in Imitation of the Egyptians, who worſhipped their Idol Apis, or Serapis, not only in a living Ox, but in an Image made after the Similitude of an Ox, with a Buſhel on his Head, in Memory (as ſome ſay) of Pharaoh's Dreams, and Joſeph's Proviſion againſt the Dearth, that enſued them; if it were apparent, that the Worſhip of the Egyptian Apis was prior to the Formation of this Golden Calf, which happens to be a Point, wherein [w] the Learned are not ſo well agreed.

HOWEVER this be, 'tis a great Inſtance of the Clemency of God, as well as [x] the Prevalency of a great Man's Prayers, that Aaron, who, upon all Accounts, cannot but be thought guilty of a great Offence, upon the Interceſſion of his Brother Moſes, was not only pardoned, when [y] others were devoted to Deſtruction, but both he and his Sons, not long after, admitted to the Honour of the Prieſthood, and to have that Honour ſettled upon his Family, in an hereditary Succeſſion. Two of his Sons, however, Nadab and Abihu, were ſcarce inveſted in their Office, before they violated the Obligations of it, and incurred a ſevere Penalty for ſo doing: [z] They took their Cenſers (as Moſes has related the Fact) and put Fire therein, and put Incenſe thereon, and offered ſtrange Fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not; and there went out Fire from the Lord, and devoured them. Now, in order to know what this Offence of offering ſtrange Fire before the Lord was, we muſt obſerve, that, after the Conſecration of Aaron and his Sons to the Prieſtly-Office, [a] a miraculous Fire from the Lord, i. e. a Fire, which either came down immediately from Heaven, or out of the Cloud, which covered the Tabernacle, conſumed the firſt Victims, which Aaron offered for a Burnt-Offering: That God had expreſſly commanded, [b] that the Fire, which was upon the Altar, ſhould not be ſuffered to go out, which (according to the Conſent of moſt Interpreters) ſignifies, that the ſaid miraculous Fire, which had confirmed the Inſtallation of Aaron and his Sons, after ſo ſurprizing a Manner, ſhould be kept alive, and burning with the utmoſt Care; and that, as it was required [c] by another Law, that at this very Fire Aaron was to kindle the Incenſe, he offered to God in the moſt Holy Place, on the great Day of Expiation; ſo, we may take it for granted, that the like Law was impoſed on the inferior Prieſts, with relation to the Incenſe, which they were to offer every Day before God, in the Holy Place. We have, indeed, no Mention made of ſuch a Law, but the Hiſtory, we are commenting upon,

Of the World, 2514, &c. Before Chriſt, 1490, &c.

Nadab and Abihu's Crime.

[r] Vid. Joſh. xxiv. 14. Ezek. xx. 7, 8. Ch. xxii. 3, 8. [s] Vid. Strab. Lib. 17. de Egyptiacis Templis. Herod. L. 2. Diodor. L. 1. & Plutar. Mor. Lib. de Iſide & Oſiride. [t] Exod. viii. 26. [u] The Chaldee Interpreters, the Syriac, and others, take the Paſſage in this Senſe, which ſeems, indeed, to be the moſt obvious. [w] Vid. Ger. Voſſ. de Idololat. C. 6. Bochart Hieroz. P. I. L. 2. c. 2. and Tenniſon of Idolatry. [x] In the Prayer, which Moſes makes for the Forgiveneſs of this Offence, there is this Expreſſion of a particular Vehemence: But yet if thou wilt, forgive their Sins, and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of the Book, which thou haſt written, Exod. xxxii. 32. Whereby Moſes does not (as ſome imagine) wiſh Damnation to himſelf, but only to be excuſed from living any longer, if God ſhall refuſe to grant him his Requeſt: For the Expreſſion has a manifeſt Reference to the Numbering the People of Iſrael, whoſe Names were thereupon written in a Regiſter, and, as they died, blotted out every Year: And therefore we find him, upon the like Occaſion, praying in the ſame Senſe; If thou deal thus with me, kill me, I pray thee, out of Hand, Numb. xi. 15. [y] Exod. xxxii. 27, &c. [z] Lev. x. 1. [a] Ibid. ix. 24. [b] Ibid. vi. 12. [c] Ibid. xvi. 12.

gives us ſtrong Preſumption, that the Uſe of this Fire only was preſcribed; and therefore the Words, which he commanded them not, are thought to imply an expreſs Prohibition of any other.

Different Opinions concerning it.

THE Crime then of Nadab and Abihu conſiſted in their kindling with Fire, (different from that, which was continually on the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, and, conſequently, different from that, which God had appointed them to uſe) the Incenſe, which their Office of Prieſts obliged them to offer up to God, every Morning and Evening, in the Holy Place. * Other Offences indeed have been laid to their Charge, [d] ſome pretending, that they endeavoured to intrude into the moſt Holy Place, (which was not permitted them to enter) becauſe, immediately after the Recital of their Death, in another Place, Moſes relates, how God commanded him to ſpeak unto Aaron, [e] that he come not, at all Times, into the Holy Place, within the Veil, before the Mercy-Seat, that he die not: And [f] others inſinuating, that they were guilty of Intemperance, at the Entertainment made at their Inſtallation; becauſe, after the Relation of their fatal End, Moſes, by God's Order, gives this Injunction to Aaron, and the Remainder of his Sons; [g] Do not drink Wine nor ſtrong Drink, thou, nor thy Sons with thee, when ye go into the Tabernacle of the Congregation, leſt ye die: It ſhall be a Statute for ever thro' your Generations, that ye may put a Difference between Holy and Unholy, between Unclean and Clean: But theſe are no more than bare Surmiſes, that have no proper Foundation in the foregoing Texts; nor is there any Occaſion to hunt out for Paſſages to augment theſe Offenders Crime.

The Heinouſneſs of it.

NADAB and Abihu had not only been admitted, in common with the reſt of their Brethren, to the Honour of the Prieſthood, which, among the Jews, was a Dignity of no ſmall Eſteem; [h] but had particular Motives, which the others had not, to the Obſervance of all God's Precepts; [i] as having had the Privilege of ſeeing the Symbols of the Divine Preſence, on that formidable Mount, from whence his Laws were promulgated, without being conſumed. The higher therefore their Station was, and the more diſtinguiſhing the Favours they had received, the more provoking was their Affront, in attempting to adulterate an Ordinance of God's Inſtitution. Common Fire, they thought, might ſerve the Purpoſe of burning Incenſe, as well as that which was held more ſacred; at leaſt, in the Gaiety, or rather Naughtineſs of their Hearts, they were minded to try the Experiment, even in Oppoſition to the Divine Command; and therefore it was juſt and requiſite in God (eſpecially [k] in the Beginning of the Prieſthood, and when one Alteration in a Divine Precept might, in Proceſs of Time, be productive of many more) to inflict an exemplary Puniſhment upon them, that others might hear and fear, and not commit the like Abominations.

Aaron's Behaviour upon it.

IT may be imagined, perhaps, that the Injunction was a little too ſevere, [l] which, upon Pain of Death, forbad Aaron to ſhew any Tokens of Sorrow for ſo great a Loſs. "What, ſhould not a Father, in ſuch Circumſtances, be permitted to devote "ſome Time to Grief, which the fatal End of two of his Children did ſo juſtly call "for? Should Religion reſtrain our Tears, when we ſee thoſe, whom Nature has "ſo cloſely united to us, die impenitent? Can any Conſolation be a Balance to this "Reflection, or any Grief exceſſive, which is cauſed by the Loſs of a Soul?" ‡ Now, tho' we are not allowed to judge, or determine any Thing concerning the eternal Fate of Mens Souls; and our Religion, which requires us to tremble for our own Salvation, requires us to hope always for that of others; yet, in Caſe we were aſſured, even by a Divine Revelation, that thoſe, to whom we were united by the moſt tender Bonds of Nature, were for ever ſentenced to the Divine Wrath; even then, it would become us to reſign them to the Will of God. Aaron, however, had no ſuch Revelation: He might preſume, that the Juſtice of God, being ſatisfied with the temporal Puniſhment of his Sons, might be appeaſed, with relation to their eternal State, and that † the Fleſh being deſtroyed, their Spirits might be ſaved in the Day of the Lord. He knew too, how much himſelf had lately offended in the Matter of the Golden Calf, and might juſtly think, that God had called his Sin to Remembrance, in the Deſtruction of his Sons: He acknowledged therefore the Righteouſneſs of God, in all

* Le Clerc, in his Commentary upon Leviticus xix. 23, is of Opinion, that when Aaron came down from the Altar, after he had offered the appointed Sacrifices, and went with Moſes into the Tabernacle of the Congregation, it was to have Moſes ſhew him how he was to burn the Incenſe, according to the Commandment of God, Exod. xxx. 7, 8. And that Aaron, when he was inſtructed by Moſes, ordered his Sons, Nadab and Abihu, to do the ſame, which they badly obeyed.

[d] Le Clerc on Leviticus x. [e] Lev. xvi. 1, 2. [f] Patrick on Leviticus x. [g] Lev. x. 9, 10. [h] Saurin's Diſſertat. [i] Exod. xxiv. [k] Le Clerc's Commentary. [l] Lev. x. 3, 6. ‡ Saurin's Diſſertat. † 1 Cor. v. 5.

all that he had brought upon him: He wiſely adored the Divine Hand, which, though armed with Thunder, was not leſs worthy of Homage; [m] he was dumb (as the Scripture expreſſes it) and opened not his Mouth, becauſe it was the Lord's Doing.

WHILST the Children of Iſrael lay before the holy Mount, but were now upon their Removal from thence, their Encampments and Marches, by the ſpecial Order of God, were diſpoſed in this Manner. [n] In their Encampment, they were form'd into four Battalions, each under one general Standard; and theſe were ſo placed, that they incloſed the Tabernacle. [o] The Standard of the Camp of Judah was firſt, which conſiſted of the Tribes of Judah, Iſſachar, and Zabulun, the Sons of Leah; and was pitched over-againſt the Tabernacle, on the Eaſt Side of it, or towards the Riſing of the Sun. On the South Side was the Standard of the Camp of Reuben; under which were the Tribes of Reuben and Simeon, the Sons of Leah likewiſe, and of Gad, the Son of Zilpah, her Maid. On the Weſt Side was the Standard of the Camp of Ephraim; under which were the Tribes of Ephraim, Manaſſeh, and Benjamin: And on the North Side was the Standard of the Camp of Dan; under which were the Tribes of Dan and Naphtali, the Sons of Bilhah, Rachel's Maid, and of Aſher, the Son of Zilpah. [p] Between the four great Camps and the Tabernacle were pitched four leſs Camps, conſiſting of the Prieſts and Levites, near to the Tabernacle, where their Service lay. On the Eaſt Side encamped Moſes and Aaron, with Aaron's Sons, who had the Charge of the Sanctuary. On the South Side were the Kohathites. a Part of the Levites deſcended from Kohath, the ſecond Son of Levi. On the Weſt Side, behind the Tabernacle, ſtood the Gerſhonites, another Part of the Levites, deſcended from Gerſhon, Levi's Eldeſt Son; and on the North Side were placed the Merarites, the remaining Part of the Levites, who were ſprung from Merari, Levi's Youngeſt Son.

The Iſraelites Manner of encamping,

THIS was the Order of their encamping; and the Manner of their diſlodging, and marching, was thus: [q] When they were to remove, (which was when the Cloud was taken off the Tabernacle) the Trumpet was ſounded, and, upon the firſt Alarm, the Standard of Judah being raiſed, the three Tribes which belonged to it, ſet forward. Then the Tabernacle being taken down, the Gerſhonites and Merarites attended the Waggons, with the Boards and Staves of it. When theſe were on their March, a ſecond Alarm was ſounded; upon which the Standard of Reuben's Camp advanced, with the three Tribes under it. After them followed the Kohathites, bearing the Sanctuary; which being more holy, and leſs cumberſome, than the heavy Boards and Pillars of the Tabernacle, was not put into a Waggon, but carried on their Shoulders. Next followed the Standard of Ephraim's Camp, with the three Tribes belonging to it; and laſt of all, the other three Tribes, under the Standard of Dan, brought up the Rear.

and marching.

IT will not be expected, that we ſhould follow theſe People in all their Marches and Encampments, and take Notice of every Accident that befel them in the Wilderneſs, before they arrived at the Land of Promiſe: Let it ſuffice, that in this, and other Parts of their Hiſtory, we animadvert only upon ſuch Occurrences, as are moſt remarkable, and have been the Subject of ſome Theological Diſquiſition.

[r] THE long Stay which the Iſraelites had made in the Wilderneſs of Sinai, had ſo accuſtomed them to Eaſe and Indolence, that a March of three Days (and that not without ſome Reſt and Relaxation to be ſure, otherwiſe they could not have gathered the Manna, which fell every Night about their Tents, and [s] would keep no longer than one Day) made them murmur and complain. God had heretofore pardoned their Offences of this Kind, and even indulged them in every Thing they murmured for; but, ſince the Promulgation of the Law, he began to treat them with more Severity, and to puniſh their Refractorineſs in Proportion to the Knowledge, that he had given them: And therefore, a Fire, which the Scripture calls, the Fire of the Lord, as either coming immediately from Heaven, [t] like Lightning, or from the Pillar of the Cloud and Fire over the Tabernacle, burnt among them, and conſumed [u] ſome in every Part of the Camp; or, if the Words (as they are in our Tranſlation) be rendered, in the

The Fire from God, what.

[m] Pſal. xxxix. 9. [n] Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible. [o] Each Standard had the Sign of ſome Creature engraven on it: That of Judah had the Image of a Lion; Reuben, a Man; Ephraim, an Ox; and Dan, an Eagle. For what Reaſon theſe Hieroglyphicks were appointed, it is not ſo eaſy to diſcern, though ſome have imagined, that the Man denotes Wiſdom; the Lion, Power; the Ox, Aſſiduity; and the Eagle, Expedition in the Execution of God's Commands. Howell, ibid. [p] Between each Tribe, in every one of theſe Quarters, as Joſephus tells us [in Antiq. l. 3. c. 11.] there were diſtant Spaces, like Streets, where there was Buying and Selling, as in a Market, and Tradeſmen in their Shops, in the Manner of a City. [q] Howell, ibid. [r] Saurin's Diſſertations. [s] Exod. xvi. [t] 2 Kings, i. 12. [u] So Bochart has demonſtrated, that the Word, which we tranſlate the utmoſt Parts, ſignifies in all, or throughout. Hieroz. P. II. L. I. c. 34.

the utmoſt Parts of the Camp, then may the Suppoſition * of a learned Commentator ſeem not improbable, viz. that, which is here called Fire, was an hot burning Wind, in theſe Deſert Places not unuſual, and, many Times, very peſtilential, but, on this Occaſion preternaturally raiſed, in the Rear of the Army, to puniſh the Stragglers, and ſuch as, out of Pretence of Wearineſs, lagged behind.

THIS Diſaſter, inſtead of terrifying them into their Duty, did but increaſe their Murmuring. They began now to impute their Debility, and Wearineſs in marching, to the Poverty of their Diet; to upbraid Moſes with the Plenty of ſtrong Food, they had in Egypt; and, with Vehemence and Importunity enough, to clamour for Fleſh. Here it was, that Moſes's Faith failed him: For God having promiſed to give the People Fleſh in Abundance, even for the Space of a whole Month, the holy Man, as in a ſudden Lapſe of Mind, ſeems to forget the Miracles which God had formerly wrought: [x] The People, ſays he, among whom I am, are ſix hundred thouſand Footmen; and thou haſt ſaid, I will give them Fleſh, that they may eat a whole Month; ſhall the Flocks and Herds be ſlain for them, to ſuffice them? Or ſhall all the Fiſh of the Sea be gathered together for them to ſuffice them? Theſe are ſuppoſed to be ſome of the Words, which Moſes [y] ſpake unadviſedly with his Lips, and for which God gave him this gentle Rebuke, [z] Is the Lord's Hand waxen ſhort? Thou ſhalt ſee whether my Word ſhall come to paſs unto thee, or not. Accordingly there aroſe a mighty Wind, which brought vaſt Numbers of [a] Quails, from the Sea-Coaſt, within a Mile of the Camp; which the People, ſtill diffident of God's Providence, fell greedily to gathering, as if they were never to have any more. However, while they were regaling themſelves with theſe Dainties, the Scripture tells us, that God ſent [b] a great Plague among them: But of what particular Kind that Plague was, it is not ſo well agreed among Commentators.

Moſes's Diffidence.

The Plague, upon ſending the Quails, what.

[c] SOME, from the Words of the Pſalmiſt, [d] a Fire was kindled in Jacob, have been apt to imagine, that the Plague, here ſpoken of, was that ſame Fire, which is mentioned, in the Beginning of the eleventh Chapter of Numbers; and therefore they ſuppoſe, that, in the three firſt Verſes of it, Moſes but juſt touches upon what he afterwards re-aſſumes, and, in the reſt of the Chapter, treats of it more copiouſly: But, ſeeing there are ſo many Incidents intervening between the third and the thirty-third Verſe of that Chapter, [e] it ſeems more likely, that there was a double Murmuring among the People, and a double Plague inflicted on them. [f] Stomachs, that, for a whole Year, had been accuſtomed to the Digeſtion of no other Food, than the light Nouriſhment of Manna, may well be ſuppoſed not ſo able to bear what was more heavy and ſolid; and therefore others have thought, that this was the only Puniſhment which God ſent upon them. The Words of Moſes may indeed be underſtood in this Senſe, as well as any other, while the Fleſh was yet between their Teeth, e're it was chewed, the Wrath of the Lord was kindled againſt the People, and the Lord ſmote the People with a very great Plague; which may properly enough ſignify a Death, occaſioned by their eating of the ſaid Food to Exceſs: Or, if we will needs have it ſome particular Diſeaſe, [g] the Import of the Words ſeems to remit us to the Squinancy, or ſome ſuch ſuffocating Diſtemper, which choaked them, even while they were eating, or ſoon after. And to this the Account of the Pſalmiſt gives ſome Countenance and Confirmation: [h] ſo they did eat, and were well filled; for he gave them their own Deſire, they were not diſappointed of their Luſt: But, while the Meat was yet in their Mouths, the heavy Wrath of God came upon them, and ſlew the Choiceſt of them; inſomuch that they, from their luſting after Fleſh, gave to the Place, where they were buried, a Name, that ſignifies the Graves of Concupiſcence.

The Plague, upon ſending the Quails, what.

Korah's Rebellion, upon what Pretences.

AT what Time, or in what Encampment, the Rebellion of Korah and his Adherents happened, the ſacred Hiſtory has not informed us; but in this all Interpreters agree, [k] that the Cauſe of the Mutiny was his Reſentment, upon the Advancement of

* Le Clerc's Commentary on Numb. xi. [x] Numb. xi. 21, 22. [y] Pſal. cvi. 33. [z] Numb. xi. 23. [a] Theſe Quails muſt be ſuppoſed to come from the Arabian, or Red-Sea; and, as Paran and Kibroth Hattaavah were North, or North-Eaſt of the Red-Sea, it muſt be a Southerly Wind that brought them thither. Whether they were Quails or Locuſts, is a Matter of great Diſpute among the Learned. The great Bochart, in his Hierozoicon, [P. II. L. i. c. 15.] has produced many weighty Arguments and Authorities to prove they were the former; but the learned Ludolphus (whom we mentioned before on this Subject) in his Commentary upon his Ethiopick Hiſtory, [L. 1. c. 4.] is ſuppoſed by ſome to plead, with more Juſtneſs and Truth of Reaſon, for the latter; however that be, they both agree, that Quails and Locuſts were bred, in great Plenty, about the Banks of the Red-Sea: Bochart proves from Joſephus, [Antiq. L. iii. c. 1.] and Pliny, [L. x. c. 23.] as to Quails; and Lodolphus, from Strabo, [L. xvi.] and Doodorus Siculus, [L. iii.] as to Locuſts; ſo that, which ſoever they were, 'tis very preſumable, that they came from the Red-Sea. [b] Numb. xi. 33. [c] Bochart and Menochius. [d] Pſal. lxxviii. 21, [e] Le Clerc, ubi ſupra. [f] Saurin's Diſſertations. [g] Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible. [h] Pſal. lxxviii. 29, &c. [i] Kibroth Hattaavah. [k] Patrick's Commentary on Numb. xvi.

of Aaron and his Family, ſo high above the reſt of the Levites. It may be thought likewiſe, that he did not digeſt [l] the late Preferment of Elizaphan, the Son of Uzziel, who was the youngeſt Son of Kohath, to be chief of the Family of the Kohathites, which of Right, [m] he thought, belonged to him; and therefore finding himſelf too weak to make an Inſurrection alone, he perſuaded Dathan and Abiram, of the Tribe of Reuben, and thoſe, in whom they had an Intereſt, to join him, upon another Pretence, viz. that they were deſcended from the eldeſt Son of Iſrael, to whom the chief Authority in the Nation (which Moſes had uſurped) belonged; that he had preferred the Tribe of Judah to [n] the principal Place, or Poſt of Honour in their Encampments; and, in the Choice of the ſeventy Elders, to be his Aſſiſtants in the Government, had left them out of the Number.

UPON theſe, and ſuch like Grounds, the Heads of the Faction may be thought to have proceeded, Korah ſeeking the Prieſtbood, and the Sons of Reuben the Civil Dignity. To juſtify himſelf therefore, as well as his Brother Aaron, as to the Adminiſtration of the Government, both Civil and Eccleſiaſtical, which God had entruſted them with, Moſes puts the Matter upon this Iſſue: [o] "Hereby ye ſhall know, that "the Lord hath commiſſioned me to do what I have done, and that I have under-"taken nothing in Gratification of my own Pride or Ambition: If theſe Men die the "common Way of Nature, and be viſited like other Men, then may it be taken for "granted, that the Lord hath not ſent me; but, if he he deal with them after a ſtrange "and unuſual Manner, and the Earth opening her Mouth ſwallow them up alive, "then ſhall ye underſtand, that theſe Men have provoked the Lord." [p] And no ſooner had he ſpoken theſe Words, but terrible Convulſions heaved the labouring Earth, and, its Surface cleaving aſunder, Korah and his Faction, [q] with all their Goods and Families, were ſwallowed up alive, and, the Ground cloſing upon them, periſhed. The other Leaders in this Rebellion, to the Number of two hundred and fifty Men, who had profanely attempted to offer Incenſe contrary to the Law, were deſtroyed by a miraculous Fire; and when, the next Day, the People murmured againſt Moſes and Aaron, as if they had been the Authors of theſe Mens Death, God ſent a Peſtilence among them, which, in an Inſtant of Time, (as it were) carried off fourteen thouſand and ſeven hundred of them; and would have proceeded farther, had not the Incenſe of the High-Prieſt made Atonement for the People, and put a Stop to the Mortality. It's Puniſhment, and the Removal of it.

[r] A CERTAIN Doctor of the Jewiſh Church, upon this Occaſion, applies to Aaron the following Words of the Prophet: [s] He poured out his Soul unto Death; he was numbered with the Tranſgreſſors, and bare the Sins of many, and made Interceſſion for the Tranſgreſſors. [t] But had that Rabbin been inſtructed in a better School, and thereby enabled to penetrate farther into the Meaning of the Prophets, he would have perceived that Aaron, in this Circumſtance, was a Type and Figure of him, whom Iſaiah ſpeaks of in that myſterious Chapter: and who repreſents himſelf in another Book, (rejected indeed by the Jews, but dictated by the ſame unerring Spirit) as [u] holding a golden Cenſer, in which he offered Incenſe, whoſe Smoke aſcended up before God, being mixt with the Prayers of the Saints, which, by that Myſtical Union, were made more efficacious.

THE Acceptance of Aaron's Office, in putting a Stop to the Plague, was a ſufficient Teſtimony of his Right to the Prieſthood, by God's Appointment; but, to put the Matter paſt all Controverſy for the future, God commanded Moſes to take a Rod from each Tribe, and to write, or engrave upon it, the Name of the Prince of that Tribe, to which it belonged; on the Rod of the Tribe of Levi, to write Aaron's Name, as being the Prince thereof; to lay up all theſe Rods together in the Tabernacle; and to let the People know, that God would cauſe the Rod of that Man, whom he intended to honour with the Dignity of the Prieſthood, to bloſſom. Why God made choice of a Rod for the Inſtrument of the Miracle he was about to work, is a Matter that has been diſputed by Commentators; but the moſt probable Opinion is, * that for this Reaſon he did it, becauſe the Princes of the Tribes were uſed to carry Rods in their Hands, as Badges of their Authority. [x] Some will needs have this Rod of Aaron to have been the ſame with that of Moſes, where- Aaron's Rod bloſſoming. Not the ſame with that of Moſes.

[l] Numb. iii. 30. [m] As being the ſecond Son of Kohath. [n] Numb. ii. 3. [o] Ibid. xvi. 28, &c. [p] Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible. [q] Except ſome of Korah's Sons. See Numb. xxvi. 11. [r] R. Menachem on Numb. xvi. Paraſche Korah ſub fin. [s] Iſa. liii. 12. [t] Saurin's Diſſertations, and Patrick's Commentary on Numb. xvi. [u] Rev. viii. 3. * Ainſworth, on Numb. xvii. [x] Vid. R. Simon apud Galatin. L. VI. c. 15.

wherewith he wrought ſo many Miracles in Egypt, and at the Red-Sea; and concerning it the Cabbaliſts tell us many ſtrange Stories, viz. that it came originally from a Branch of the Tree of Life, which an Angel gave to Seth, who planted it in the Wilderneſs, where Moſes found it grown to a Tree, and, by God's Direction, cut this Rod from it: While others pretend, that it was given to Adam, and by him to Enoch, till it came to Joſeph, in whoſe Houſe the Egyptians found it, when he died, and brought it to Pharaoh; from whom Jethro ſtole it, and gave it to Moſes; with Abundance more of the ſame romantick Stuff. But, as there is not the leaſt Intimation of its being the Rod of Moſes, on the contrary, it is expreſsly called [y] the Rod of Aaron; [z] ſo it had not been a ſufficient Argument to convince the Infidelity of the Iſraelites, if Aaron's Rod had not been of the ſame Kind with all the reſt. For they might have aſcribed what came to paſs to the ſingular Quality and Virtue of that Rod, (eſpecially had it been Moſes's Wonder-working Rod) and not to a ſpecial Hand of God, appearing to eſtabliſh the Authority of Aaron: Whereas on the contrary we find that the Miracle had it's intended Effect. For no ſooner was Aaron's Rod, whereon were the Buds, and Bloſſoms, and Fruit of an Almond-Tree, produced, but the People immediately acknowledged their Error, and from that Time forward, we hear no more of any Diſputes with the Tribe of Levi, concerning their Privileges, nor any Repining at the ſuperior Authority of Aaron.

Of the World, 2552, &c. Before Chriſt, 1452, &c.

Water out of the Rock.

BUT it was not long, before they gave an Inſtance, in another Kind, of their mutinous and rebellious Temper, which proved of fatal Conſequence to Aaron and Moſes both. The Waters, which Moſes, above thirty-eight Years before, had made to come out of the Rock at Horeb, had hitherto followed the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs, which Way ſoever their Orders were to march; but, [a] whether God was minded, at this Time, to try the Faith of this new Generation, (for moſt of their Fathers, for whom the Waters of Horeb were provided, were dead) or that he intended very ſpeedily to bring them into a Country, wherein they might be ſupplied without a Miracle; ſo it was, that the Waters, (as we ſaid) which all along followed them in their Journies, began now to fail, being either ſtopped in the Rock from whence they iſſued out, or falling into the Red-Sea (as ſome imagine) at Ezion-Geber, [b] the Place of their laſt Encampment, were there ſwallowed up. Upon this Occaſion, the People, as uſual, began to murmur; Moſes, as his Cuſtom was, makes his Addreſs to God; and God, as he never failed to do, promiſed them Relief: [c] Take the Rod, ſays he, and gather the Aſſembly together, thou, and Aaron thy Brother, and ſpeak ye unto the Rock before their Eyes, and it ſhall give forth his Water, and thou ſhalt bring forth to them Water out of the Rock; ſo that thou ſhalt give the Congregation, and their Beaſts, Drink. This was the Order, God gave Moſes, and this the Promiſe of the Miracle, he intended to work. How it was, Commentators are at Variance to determine; but certain it is, that there was ſome great Default, both in Moſes and Aaron, either in not giving ſufficient Credit to the Miracle, or not executing the Order, as God appointed; becauſe we find him decreeing, that they ſhould not live [d] to bring the Congregation into the Land, that he had given them; becauſe they believed not, to ſanctify him in the Eyes of the Children of Iſrael; which accordingly happened, for Aaron [e] was gathered to his People, the very next Station they came to, and Moſes not very long after.

Moſes's Offence hereupon, what.

Several Opinions concerning it.

THE Talmudiſts have a very odd Conceit, that the great Sin, for which Moſes and Aaron were hindered from going into the Land of Canaan, was, becauſe they called God's People, [f] Rebels; and from hence they have formed a Maxim, that he, who treats the Church, which ought to be honoured, with Contempt, is, as if he blaſphemed the Name of God. But, in Oppoſition to this, it ſhould be conſidered, [g] that Moſes, on this Occaſion, uſes the very ſame Language that God himſelf does, when he bids him lay up the Rod of Aaron, [h] as a Token againſt the Rebels; and that, if this was the Thing, wherein he offended God, he, not long after, committed the ſame, in an higher Degree again, (which Nobody can think he would have done, had it already coſt him ſo dear) when he told the People plainly, [i] Ye have been rebellious againſt the Lord, ever ſince I knew you. Several Chriſtian, as well as Jewiſh Expoſitors, think, that the Tranſgreſſion of Moſes lay in ſmiting the Rock, when he was only ordered to ſpeak to it: And, for the Support of this, they alledge, [k] that God is an abſolute Sovereign, expecting an abſolute Obedience, and exacting Puniſhment, even of his greateſt Favourites,

[y] Numb. xvii. 6. [z] Patrick's Commentary on Numb. xvii. [a] Ibid. on Numb. xx.
[b] Numb. xxxiii. 36. [c] Ibid. xx. 8. [d] Ibid. ver. 12. [e] Ibid. ver. 24. [f] Ibid. ver. 10.
[g] Patrick's Commentary. [h] Numb. xvii. 10. [i] Deut. ix. 24. [k] Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible.

Favourites, when they pretend to vary from his Commands, or to mix their own Conceptions with his Directions. But though there ſeems ſomething in this, yet it is not eaſy to conceive, for what Purpoſe God appointed him to take the Rod, if he was not to ſmite the Rock with it, as he had done before. 'Tis certain, that [l] the divine Writers, who have touched upon this Hiſtory, have made mention of two Defaults in Moſes, his Impatience and his Infidelity; and therefore we may ſuppoſe, that, the Water now ceaſing [m] at the Time, when his Siſter Miriam died, he was exceedingly troubled on both theſe Accounts; that, unexpectedly aſſaulted by the People, who ought to have paid him more Reverence, eſpecially in a Time of Mourning, he fell into a greater Commotion of Anger and Indignation, than was uſually in him; and that this Anger gave ſuch a Diſturbance to his Mind, and ſo diſordered his Thoughts, that, when God bad him take his Rod, and go, and ſpeak to the Rock, he fell into ſome Doubt, whether the divine Goodneſs would grant the People the ſame Favour, he had done before; that therefore he ſtruck the Rock with Diffidence, believing it improbable, that ſuch worthleſs and rebellious Wretches ſhould deſerve a Miracle; and that, the Water not iſſuing at the firſt Stroke, his Diffidence increaſed into Unbelief, and a ſettled Perſuaſion, that they ſhould have none at all. Another Conjecture [n] of a very learned Man (which I mention, that the Reader may judge which has the beſt Appearance) is, —that Moſes and Aaron began to diſtruſt God's Promiſe of entering into the Land of Canaan at the End of forty Years, and to imagine, that, if they brought Water again out of the Rock, it muſt follow them as long as the other had done, and engage them again in the like Wanderings: And therefore the Comment he makes upon their Words is this: What, ye Rebels, muſt we bring Water out of a Rock, as we did at Horeb? Are all our Hopes and Expectations of getting out of the Wilderneſs come to this? We never fetched you Water out of the Rock but once, and that was, becauſe we were to ſtay a long Time in the Wilderneſs, and muſt we begin our Abode here again, when we thought we had attained to the End of our Travels? O ye Rebels, have ye brought it to this Paſs by your Murmurings? Whereupon he preſently ſmote the Rock in a Paſſion twice, whereas God commanded him only to ſpeak to it. But which ſoever of theſe Conjectures we are inclined to think moſt plauſible, there are few Writers, but who are diſpoſed to extenuate the Fault of Moſes and Aaron, [o] as not deſerving ſo ſevere a Puniſhment, had not God, in paſſing their Sentence, conſidered the Excellency and Dignity of their Perſons, in whom a Fault of this Nature was far more grievous, and inexcuſable, than in ordinary Men.

The moſt probable.

SECT. I.

Of the fiery Serpents, Balak, and Balaam, &c.

THE Wilderneſs, wherein the Iſraelites travelled, was full of all Kinds of Serpents; and Moſes repreſents it as one of the greateſt Mercies and Miracles, vouchſafed that People, that God [p] led them through it, all along protecting them from theſe venomous Creatures, until they began to complain [q] of the Tediouſneſs of their Journies, and their Want of Proviſions, even when they were ſupplied by a miraculous Providence every Day; and then he withdrew that Protection, and ſent Serpents among them, [r] whoſe Biting raiſed ſuch Inflammations in their Bodies, as occaſioned the Death of ſome of the moſt guilty, and violent Pains in all of them. Upon their Repentance, however, and the Interceſſion of his Servant Moſes, he appointed a Remedy of a particular Nature, [s] the Figure of one of theſe Serpents, made of poliſhed Braſs, and fixed upon a Pole, to cure all, that were bitten, as oft as they looked up to it. Whether the Sight of Braſs (as ſome Naturaliſts ſay) be hurtful or no, in ſuch Caſes, [t] this is certainly a Preſcription of Phyſicians, that ſuch People, as are bitten

Of the World, 2552, &c. Before Chriſt, 1452, &c.

The fiery Serpents.

The Brazen Serpent, why made choice of.

[l] Pſal. cvi. 32, 33. and Numb. xx. 10. [m] Numb. xx. 1. [n] Lightfoot's Chronica Temp. in Numb. xx. [o] Patrick's Commentary. [p] Deut. viii. 15. [q] Numb. xxi. 4, 5. [r] Gerard Voſſius is of Opinion, that the fiery Serpents, of which Moſes ſpeaks, were of the ſame Kind with thoſe, which the Greeks call Πρηστῆρες and Καύσωνες, and Pliny reckons among the Sceleratiſſimi Serpentes, the moſt pernicious Serpents, Lib. XXIV. c. 13. But the famous Bochart has, by many Arguments, proved, that they were a Sort of Serpents, called Hydri, becauſe, in Winter, they lived in Fens and Marſhes; but theſe Fens and watery Places being dried up in the Summer, they then living in dry Places, were thereupon called Cherſydri, and, in the hot Seaſons of the Year, had a moſt ſharp and ſtinging Poiſon, Boch. Hieroz. Part II. Lib. III. c. 13. Now, it being the latter End of Auguſt, when they infeſted the Iſraelites, they could not but be very venomous. Patrick's Commentary.
[s] Numb. xxi. 8. [t] Patrick, ibid.

bitten with any venomous Beaſt, ſhould be kept from the Sight of the very Image of the Beaſt, from which they received ſuch Hurt; and therefore God might take Occaſion, from the Contrariety of Means, to make Uſe of this Kind of Remedy, that the Iſraelites might know and be perſuaded, that both their Diſeaſe, and their Medicine came from him.

Its Virtue, whence.

[u] A Taliſman, which (according to the common Account) is a certain Piece of Metal, made under the Influence of ſuch and ſuch Planets or Conſtellations, having wonderful Qualities, to beget Love, and overcome Enemies, to drive away noxious Animals, and to cure ſome Kinds of Diſeaſes, is a chimerical Notion; and thoſe, who pretend to reſemble the Figure, which God appointed Moſes to ſet up, to any of theſe vain Devices, deſerve our Scorn, more than our Confutation. The Author of the Book of Wiſdom, addreſſing himſelf to God, and ſpeaking of the Iſraelites, has imputed the Virtue of this Serpent to its true Cauſe, * he that turned himſelf toward it, was not healed by the Thing, which he ſaw, but by Thee, who art the Saviour of all; and therefore he calls it, in the foregoing Verſe, a Sign, or Symbol of Salvation, to put them in Remembrance of the Commandment of the Law. The only conſiderable Difficulty in the whole Tranſaction is, why God, who had forbidden all Manner of Images, ſhould, on this Occaſion, command one to be made. This the Jewiſh Doctors (as Juſtin Martyr [x] obſerves in his Days) could give no Account of; but had they known Jeſus Chriſt, and him crucified, they might have ſoon perceived, [y] that God intended it for a Type of the Death of Chriſt, and the Manner, in which he was to die; and that the Effects of the Brazen Serpent, upon them who looked on it, did repreſent the Virtue received by true Believers from the Death of their Redeemer: For ſo we find Chriſt himſelf explaining the myſterious Meaning of it; [z] as Moſes lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderneſs, even ſo muſt the Son of Man be lifted up, that whoſo believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting Life.

A Type of Chriſt.

THE Hiſtory of the Brazen Serpent carries our Thoughts, naturally enough, to that of the Serpent of Æſculapius. 'Tis pretty remarkable, that the ſame Creature, whoſe Aſpect ſerved to cure the Iſraelites, ſhould be made the Symbol of the God of Phyſick among the Heathens; but, [a] whether that, which we find recorded by Moſes concerning the Brazen Serpent, be the Origin of what the Heathens tell us of Æſculapius, is a Queſtion yet undecided, and may poſſibly deſerve the Elucidation of the Learned. What we have further to obſerve of the Moſaick Serpent is, that it remained, among the Jews, above ſeven hundred Years, even to the Time of Hezekiah, King of Judah; but, when it came to be made an Object of Idolatry, and the People, for ſome Time, had paid their Incenſe and Adorations to it, [b] that pious King cauſed it to be broken to Pieces, and, by way of Contempt, called it Nehuſhtan, i. e. a Lump of Braſs only.

LONG had the Iſraelites travelled in the Wilderneſs; but approaching now to the Promiſed Land, and having defeated, and utterly deſtroyed the Amorites, and their King, who obſtructed their Paſſage thither; by the Rumour of their Arms, and Rapidity of their Conqueſts, they put Balak, King of Moab likewiſe, and his People, [c] into a terrible Conſternation. Balak, knowing himſelf too weak to engage the mighty Force of Iſrael, adviſed with the Chiefs of Midian, his Neighbours and Confederates, to whom he propoſed the common Danger of theſe Invaders; and the Reſult of the Conſultation was, that he ſhould ſend † Meſſengers to Balaam, the Son of Beor, who lived at Pethor, a City of Meſopotamia, by Preſents and Promiſes to invite [u] Saurin's Diſſertations. * Wiſdom xvi. 7. [x] Contra Tryph. p. 322, 328. For there inſiſting upon it, as a Type of Chriſt, and appealing to the Company, what Reaſon (excluding that) could be given of this Matter; one of the Jews confeſſed, that he was in the Right, and that he himſelf had enquired for a Reaſon among the Jewiſh Maſters, and could meet with none. Kidder's Demonſtration, p. 73. [y] Ibid. [z] John iii. 14, 15. [a] The Reader, that deſires to know what ſeveral Authors have ſaid, upon this Subject, will find them collected by Saurin, in his 63d Diſſertation. [b] 2 Kings xviii. 4. [c] If the Moabites had known the Protection they were under, they needed not to have been afraid; for, had they been quiet, they were particularly exempted from the Sword of Iſrael, as being deſcended from Lot by his eldeſt Daughter. Deut. ii. 9.

† Here in the Old Teſtament, Balaam is called the Son of Beor, but St Peter, in the New, (2 Pet. ii. 15.) ſtiles him the Son of Boſor: Beor and Boſor, however, are both the ſame Name in the Original, only differently pronounced. But then it looks a little ſtrange, that the Midianites and Moabites ſhould truſt ſo little to their own Gods at Home, as to ſend, as far as Meſopotamia, for a Prophet to aſſiſt them. But perhaps they imagined, that the Gods of their own Country were not able to defend them againſt the God of Iſrael, having ſo lately ſeen what the Iſraelites had done to the Amorites, their Neighbours: Or they might fancy, that Balaam had an Intereſt with all Kinds of Gods, and might engage them all to come in to their Aſſiſtance: Or rather, they might know, that he was a Prophet of the ſame God, whom the Iſraelites worſhipped; and that therefore, by his Means, they hoped to draw off the God of Iſrael from aſſiſting them, and to incline him to favour their Cauſe. Waterland's Sermons, Vol. II.

invite him to come and curſe the Iſraelites: For ſo great an Opinion had they of this Man's Skill and Power in Divination, [d] that, by his Benedictions or Imprecations, they thought he could turn the Fate of War which Way he pleaſed.

Balak ſends to Balaam, and why.

SOME Jews are of Opinion, that this Balaam was a Sort of Aſtrologer, who, obſerving when Men were under a bad Aſpect of the Stars, pronounced a Curſe upon them, which ſometimes coming to paſs, in the neighbouring Nations gained him a great Reputation. Several of the ancient Fathers ſuppoſe him no more than a common Soothſayer, (for ſo he is [e] ſomewhere called) who pretended to foretel future Events, and diſcover Secrets, &c. but by no good and juſtifiable Arts. Origen will needs have it, that he was no Prophet, but only one of the Devil's Sorcerers, and that of him he went to enquire, but God was pleaſed to prevent him, and to [f] put what Anſwer he thought fit into his Mouth. It cannot be denied, however, but that [g] the Scripture expreſſly calls him a Prophet; and therefore [h] ſome later Writers have imagined, that he had been [i] once a good Man, and a true Prophet, till, loving the Wages of Iniquity, and proſtituting the Honour of his Office to his Covetouſneſs, he apoſtatized from God, and, betaking himſelf to idolatrous Practices, fell under the Deluſion of the Devil, of whom he learned all his magical Inchantments; though, at this Juncture, when the Preſervation of his People was concerned, it might conſiſt with God's Wiſdom, to appear to him, and vouchſafe him Revelations.

That Balaam was a Prophet.

[k] BALAAM, indeed, was a Man of no great Probity, and might, by Profeſſion, be a Diviner; but, by the free Acceſs he had to God, it ſeems to be apparent, that he was no common Sorcerer, or Prophet of the Devil. [l] For, did ever any Sorcerer addreſs his Prayers to, and receive Anſwers from, the Supreme God? Did ever any Sorcerer preſcribe a Law to himſelf, to ſay nothing, leſs or more, than what the Spirit of God ſhould dictate? The Spirit of God, when did it ever [m] come upon an Enchanter? Or, was it ever known, that an Oracle, upon a remote Event, and what God alone was capable of revealing, ſhould be declared by a meer Magician? Bad therefore though he was, a Slave to his Paſſions, and an Enemy to the People of God, yet it muſt be acknowledged, that this Balaam was a Prophet. "But if he "was a Prophet, and Servant of the True God, why did he [*] ſeek for Inchantments? "Or, what Service could he think to receive from them?" Now, in Anſwer to this, it may be conſidered, [†] that the Arts of Magicians and their Inchantments to procure Prodigies and Oracles, tho' the vulgar People did not underſtand the Foundation they were built on, were, to the wiſe Men and Philoſophers, that Produce of Learning and natural Science, falſely, indeed, ſo called, but really eſteemed by them to be true: And therefore as Saul, tho' he had before [‖] put away thoſe who had familiar Spirits, and the Wizards, out of the Land, was induced, [‡] when the Lord anſwered him neither by Dreams, nor by Urim, nor by Prophets, to go to a Woman that had a familiar Spirit, and to enquire of her; ſo Balaam, ſeeing nothing but a full Diſappointment of all his Views, in the ſeveral Revelations, which God was pleaſed to make to him; and being warmly inclined to purchaſe (if he might, with any Colour, be able to do it) the Advancement, which Balak had offered him, was tempted to try, what might be the Event, if he uſed ſome of the Arts, which the moſt learned Nations held in the higheſt Repute, and eſteemed to be of the greateſt Efficacy. To theſe he was no Stranger, and therefore he attempted to try them, but found, to his Sorrow, that [§] there was no Inchantment againſt Jacob, nor was there any Divination againſt Iſrael. To illuſtrate this Part of the Hiſtory, which Moſes hath given us of him, it may not be improper to lay down the following Obſervations.

[d] It was a received Opinion, among the Gentiles, that ſome People had Power, eſpecially Prophets and Diviners, by the Help of their Gods, to blaſt, not only private Perſons, but even whole Armies, ſo that they ſhould not be able to effect their Deſign. Macrobius has preſerved us a very remarkable Form of ſuch Imprecations, and brings in the Prieſt, that officiates, ſpeaking thus: Dis Pater, ſive Jovis mavis, ſive quo alio nomine fas ſit nominare, ut omnem illam Urbem, exercitumque, quem ego me ſentio dicere, fugâ, formidine, terrore, compleatis; quique adverſus Legiones, exercitumque noſtrum, Arma telaque ferent, uti vos, eos exercitus, eos hoſtes, eoſque Homines, urbes, agroſque eorum, & qui, in illis Locis regionibuſque, agris urbibuſque habitant, lumine ſupremo privetis, &c. uti vos Urbes agroſque eorum, quos ego me ſentio dicere, capita, atateſque eorum devotas conſecrataſque habeatis. —— Uti me, meamque fidem, imperiumque Legiones, exercitumque noſtrum, qui in his Rebus gerendis ſunt, bene ſalvos ſinatis eſſe. Si hæc ita faxitis ut ego ſciam, ſentiam, intelligamque; tum quiſque votum hoc faxit, recte factum eſto, Ovibus atris tribus, Tellus mater, teque Jupiter, obteſtor, Macrob. Saturn. Lib. III. c. 9. ex Sammonico Sereno: And Patrick's Commentary on Numb. xxii. Joſh. xiii. 22.

This Balaam himſelf plainly diſcerned, and therefore calls himſelf, he, who heard the Words of God, Numb. xxiv. 4.

[e] 2 Pet. ii. 16. [h] Vid. Patrick's Commentary on Numb. xxii. [i] For this Reaſon ſome have ſuppoſed, that he was the ſame Perſon, who, in the Book of Job, is called Elihu. Patrick's Commentary. [k] Vid. Witſii Miſcel. Sacra, Lib. I. c. 16. [l] Saurin's Diſſertations. [m] Numb. xxiv. 2. [*] Ibid. ver. 1. [†] Shuckford's Connection, Vol. III. Lib. XII. [‖] 1 Sam. xxviii. 3. [‡] Ibid. ver. 6, 7. [§] Numb. xxiii. 23.

Some Obſervations thereupon.

1. THAT before the Giving of the Law, and the Conqueſt of the promiſed Land, [n] there were other true Worſhippers of God, beſides the Deſcendants of Abraham, diſperſed over the Face of the Earth. 2. That this Worſhip of God [o] was frequently mixed with Superſtition and Idolatry, even among them who profeſſed to adore the one God of Heaven and Earth. 3. That this odious Mixture did not hinder God [p] from revealing himſelf to thoſe, who practiſed ſuch a monſtrous and motly Religion. 4. That ſupernatural Gifts in general, and thoſe † of Prophecy in particular, tho' they enlightened the Minds of the Prophets, [q] yet, many Times, did not ſanctify their Hearts and Affections. And, 5. That the greateſt Weakneſs or Wickedneſs of Prophets never went ſo far, as to make them pronounce Oracles, contrary to what was dictated by the Holy Spirit; [r] If Balak would give me his Houſe full of Silver and Gold, I cannot go beyond the Word of the Lord, to do either Good or Bad of my own Mind, but what the Lord ſaith, that muſt I ſpeak.

Balaam's Aſs ſpeaking, not incredible.

[s] THE Speaking of Balaam's Aſs is a known Paſſage in his Hiſtory; but the Jews have not been able to perſuade themſelves, that an Event, ſo extraordinary, really came to paſs. Philo, in his Life of Moſes, paſſes it over in Silence, and [t] Maimonides pretends, that it only happened to Balaam in a prophetical Viſion: But leaſt of all ſhould theſe Men, who are ſo apt to fancy marvellous Events without the leaſt Neceſſity, and to give myſtical Interpretations to the moſt obvious Occurrences, deny their Aſſent to this Miracle. The ſevereſt Philoſophy cannot deny, but that God is as able to make Creatures, deſtitute of Underſtanding, pronounce articulate and rational Words, [u] as it is for a Muſician, by the different Touches he gives any Inſtrument, to make it expreſs a Variety of Notes; nor can the Heathens reproach us with any Abſurdity in this Story, * ſince they themſelves relate ſo many of the like Nature, but not near ſo well ſupported. It may ſeem a little ſtrange indeed, that Balaam ſhould ſhew no Kind of Surprize, when he heard his Aſs ſpeak like an human Creature: But to this [x] ſome reply, that Balaam had probably imbibed the Doctrine of Tranſmigration of Souls, (which they prove to be very common in the Eaſt) and from thence might be leſs aſtoniſhed to hear any Brute ſpeak: Whereas [y] others ſuppoſe, that he was in ſuch a Rage and Fury, at the ſuppoſed Croſſneſs of the Beaſt, cruſhing his Foot, and falling down under him, that, for the preſent, he could think of nothing elſe; though the Conciſeneſs of Moſes's Narration, that [z] muſt be preſumed to have omitted many Circumſtances, which, if rightly known, would diſpel this, and many more Difficulties, does certainly, in my Opinion, furniſh us with a better and more ſatisfactory Anſwer.

Why Balaam was not ſurprized at it.

Balaam's Prophecy of Chriſt.

AMONG the many Prophecies, which God put into the Mouth of Balaam, there is one of a more eminent and peculiar Nature; [a] I ſhall ſee him, but not now; I ſhall behold

[n] Thus Job and his Friends dwelt in Arabia, Jethro and his Poſterity in the Country of Midian; and Abraham's Abode in Meſopotamia might leave behind him ſome Proſelytes to the true Religion. The Moabites and Ammonites, 'tis certain, were the Deſcendants of righteous Lot, who was of the ſame Religion with Abraham: The Midianites too (of whom moſt probably Balaam was) were the Poſterity of Abraham by Keturah, and therefore, for ſome Time at leaſt, could not but retain the Knowledge of the True God; which makes it not improbable, that God might plant ſome Prophets among them in thoſe early Days, in order to preſerve the True Religion and Worſhip, which they had received from their Progenitors, Waterland's Sermons, Vol. II.

[o] The Teraphims of Laban prove this. [p] Abimelech and Nebuchadnezzar are Inſtances of this, Gen. xxvi. and Dan. ii. 1.

† Balaam had certainly the Gift of Prophecy, even while he was doing amiſs, and tempting Almighty God, for the Spirit of God came upon him, (Numb. xxiv. 2.) and made Uſe of his Organs in delivering ſeveral remarkable Prophecies, fulfilled in their Seaſon: Such as, the riſing Strength and growing Greatneſs of the Iſraelites: The Deſtruction of Amalek, which came to paſs in King Saul's Time: The Fall of Moab, and of Edom, which was effected by King David: The Overthrow of the Kenites, which was done by the Aſſyrians; and, what is more than all, the Conqueſt of the Aſſyrians themſelves, by the Power of Chittim, i. e. of the Macedonians, which was executed under the Conduct of Alexander the Great. Theſe were great and valuable Prophecies: And from theſe we may learn, that the Spirit of God may ſometimes vouchſafe to come upon a very wicked Man, (ſo far as concerns the extraordinary Gifts) without reforming or influencing him, as to his Life and Morals, in the Way of ordinary Operation. Waterland's Sermons, Vol. II.

[q] For ſo we read, The Heads of God's People judge for Reward, and the Prieſts thereof teach for Hire, and the Prophets thereof divine for Money, Micah iii. 11. [r] Numb. xxiv. 13. There is a remarkable Paſſage, in Joſephus, to this Purpoſe, where he brings in Balaam ſpeaking to Balak in the following Manner: "Can you then imagine, that, "in the Buſineſs of Propheſying, it depends on us to ſay, or not to ſay, what we think fit? It is God, who makes "us ſpeak, as he pleaſes, without any voluntary Concurrence of our own. I have not forgot the Requeſt, which the "Midianites made me: I came with a Deſign to ſatisfy them; and thought of nothing leſs, than of proclaiming the "Praiſes of the Hebrews, or relating thoſe Favours, which God has determined to heap upon them: But he has been "more powerful than I, who intended to have pleaſed Men, even againſt his Will. When he enters into our Hearts, "he makes himſelf abſolute Maſter of them; and, becauſe he has decreed to make this People happy, and to crown "them with immortal Glory, he has therefore put into my Mouth the Words, which I have now pronounced." Antiq. Lib. IV. c. 4. [s] Numb. xxii. 28. [t] More Nevoch. P. II. c. 42. [u] Le Clerc's Commentary on Numb. xxii. * Witneſs what they ſay of the Aſs, upon which Bacchus rode; of the Ram of Phryxus; the Bull of Europa; the Horſes of Achilles and Adraſtus; the Elephant of Porus in India; and the Lamb in Egypt, when Bocchoris reigned there, Patrick's Commentary. [x] Le Clerc, ibid. [y] Patrick, ibid. [z] Saurin's Diſſertations. [a] Numb. xxiv. 17.

behold him, but not nigh. There ſhall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter ſhall ariſe out of Iſrael, and ſhall ſmite the Corners of Moab, and deſtroy all the Children of Seth. All Opinions agree in this, that Balaam here ſpeaks of a King and Conqueror; and perhaps, in calling him a Star, he accommodates himſelf to the long eſtabliſhed Notion, that the Appearance of Comets denoted either the Exaltation or Deſtruction of Kingdoms; but the great Queſtion is, of what King or Conqueror it is he ſpeaks? [b] Some have applied it intirely to David, the moſt illuſtrious of the Jewiſh Monarchs, who extended his Conqueſts, and might very juſtly be ſaid to verify that Part of the Prediction, he ſhall ſmite the Corners (or [c] as ſome render it) the Princes of Moab. [d] Others have referred it, as entirely to the Meſſiah, ſuppoſing, that the Metaphor of a Star comports better with him, and his Celeſtial Origin, than with David, and the main Strokes of the Prophecy reſemble an heavenly, more than an earthly Conqueror. The Matter however may be compromiſed, if we will but allow of [e] a learned Man's Obſervation, viz. that the moſt remarkable Prophecies in the Old Teſtament bear uſually a two-fold Senſe, one relating to the Times before the Meſſiah, and the other either fulfilled in the Perſon of the Meſſiah, or in the Members of his Body, the Church: And of this Kind we may juſtly eſteem the preceding Prophecy. For though its primary Aſpect may be towards David, yet whoever conſiders it attentively, will perceive, that its Ideas are too full to extend no farther; and muſt therefore, in a ſecondary and more exalted Senſe, refer us to Chriſt, whoſe Kingdom ruleth over all, and to whom all Things are put in Subjection under his Feet. In this Senſe the Generality of Jews, as well as Chriſtians, underſtood it: And 'tis no improbable Conjecture, (whatever [f] ſome may think of it) that by the Strength of this Prophecy, kept upon Record among the oriental Archives, the Magi of that Country were directed to Jeruſalem, at our Saviour's Nativity, enquiring, [g] where is the King of the Jews, for we have ſeen his Star in the Eaſt.

THE Prophetic Benedictions, which Balaam, though ſore againſt his Will, poured out upon the Children of Iſrael, ſo provoked Balak, that being no longer able to reſtrain his Rage, he bad him haſte and be gone; [h] I thought to promote thee to great Honour, but lo! the Lord hath kept thee back from Honour. Whereupon, vexed at his Diſappointment, and reſolving to revenge himſelf on God's People, as the Occaſion of it, the Prophet [i] inſtructs their Enemies in a wicked Artifice, which was to ſend their Daughters into the Camp of Iſrael, in order to draw them into Fornication, and thence into Idolatry, as a ſure Method to deprive them of the Favour of that God, whoſe Aſſiſtance had made them ſo formidable. The Artifice ſucceeded: For the next Thing we hear is, [k] that Iſrael joined himſelf to Baal-peor. But what this Baal-peor was, is a Queſtion as yet undecided. Balaam's wicked Advice.

THE ancient Jews generally ſuppoſe, that he was no other than a Priapus, and that his Worſhip conſiſted in ſuch obſcene Practices, or Poſtures at leaſt, as are not fit to be named. But others have thought, that, as Baal is a general Term, which ſignifies Lord, Peor might poſſibly be the Name of ſome great Prince, tranſlated into the Number of the Gods; (as [l] it was a known Cuſtom among the Heathens, to deify the Souls of Men, and canonize them after Death) and to this the Pſalmiſt may be ſuppoſed to allude, where he tells us, that, when the Iſraelites worſhipped Baal-peor, [m] they eat the Offerings of the Dead. [n] Others have imagined, that as Peor is the Name of a Mountain, in the Country of Moab, where the Temple of Baal (by whom [o] they underſtood the Sun) was ſituated, from hence he might be called Baal-peor, even as Jupiter was called Olympius, becauſe he was worſhipped in a famous Temple, built upon the Mountain Olympus. Either of theſe Conjectures ſeem more probable, than the Baal-peor, what.

[b] Le Clerc's Commentary. [c] So the LXX. τῆς ἀρχοντος Μοάβ, which alters not the Senſe. [d] Vid. Patrick's Commentary on Numb. xxiv. [e] H. Grotius ad Matth. i. 22. [f] Witſius, in his Miſcell. Sacra, Lib. I. c. 16. ſeems to explode this Conjecture of Origen's, but not upon ſufficient Grounds.

[g] Matth. ii. 2. [h] Numb. xxiv. 11. [i] This indeed is not mentioned in Numb. xxiv. where the Interview between Balaam and Balak ends, but Moſes (Ch. xxxi. 16.) plainly refers to the Counſel of Balaam, and lays the whole Blame on him. St John likewiſe, in his Revelation (Ch. ii. 14.) ſpeaking to the Church of Pergamos, in the Name of Chriſt, takes Notice of this wicked Advice: I have ſome few Things againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt thoſe, that held the Doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to caſt a Stumbling-Block before the Children of Iſrael, to eat Things ſacrificed unto Idols, and to commit Fornication: Where the Perſons, pointed to, were a wretched Sect of falſe Teachers, which ſtarted up in the very Infancy of the Chriſtian Church. They held it lawful to follow Carnal Luſts, to commit Fornication, Adultery, Inceſt, and other Impurities. This palatable Doctrine ſuited the Taſte of the Voluptuous, and brought the Teachers in much Applauſe, and many a fair Preſent from their carnal Hearers: And therefore, becauſe their Doctrine was very like Balaam's, and the principal Motive to it was Avarice, and a Deſign of flattering and pleaſing others in their Luſts, as theſe Teachers were compared to Balaam, and their Doctrine to his, ſo they obtained the Hebrew Name of Balaamites, as their Greek Name was Nicolaitans, both of the ſame Signification, i. e. Lords, and Leaders of the People. Waterland's Sermons, Vol. II.

[k] Numb. xxv. 3. [l] Mede's Diſcourſes, Lib. III. c. 4. [m] Pſal. cvi. 28. [n] Selden, de Diis Syris. Synt. 1. c. 5. and Patrick's and Le Clerc's Commentaries. [o] Vid. Tenniſon, of Idolatry, c. 4.

the other, becauſe [p] the ancienter the Books are, which treat of theſe Matters, the leſs Mention they make of any Impurities in the Worſhip of Baal.

Phineas's Act of Zeal. BUT whatever this Baal-peor was, 'tis certain, that the Crime of worſhipping him was very enormous, ſince it drew upon the Iſraelites ſo ſevere a Puniſhment. A Thouſand [q] principal Men, that had been guilty of this foul Idolatry, were, by God's Appointment, publickly executed, and three and twenty Thouſand deſtroy'd by a Peſtilential Diſeaſe, which was going to ſpread itſelf farther, [r] had not Phineas, the Son of Eleazar, and Grandſon of Aaron, (by the Command of Moſes, ſays Philo, but ſhould rather have ſaid, by a divine Impulſe and Inſtigation) at one bold Stroke, killing both Zimri, and his Midianitiſh Paramour, put a Stop to its Progreſs.

An Objection, * "BUT was not Zimri † a Prince of a Chief-Houſe among the Simeonites, an Head "of a powerful Family at leaſt, and conſequently, not accountable to Phineas for "his Behaviour? How then could he have a Right to execute this Vengeance upon "him? Or, what could be the Safety of even the higheſt Magiſtrates, in this Oeco-"nomy, if private Men put on an officious Zeal, and aſſaſſinate, at Pleaſure, thoſe, Anſwered. "whoſe Actions were unjuſtifiable, and deſerved Puniſhment?" Zimri indeed was a great Man; the Prince of a Tribe, (as ‖ Joſephus makes him) and one of the ſupreme Judges, whoſe Right it was to be Aſſeſſors with Moſes and Aaron in the Government of the People, and conſequently could not be regularly brought under the Judgment of any inferior Authority. Moſes had ordered juſt before, that all the People, who had joined themſelves to Baal-peor, ſhould be proceeded againſt according to Law, and puniſhed by their proper Officers; but ſo far was Zimri from paying any Regard to this, that we find him acting in open Defiance to it; and, inſtead of appointing the Judges of his Tribe to puniſh thoſe, who were under their Juriſdiction, openly, and in the Face of the Congregation, abetting, by his own Practice, what he ought to have uſed his Authority to correct and ſuppreſs ‡. He brought unto his Brethren a Midianitiſh Woman, in the Sight of Moſes, and in the Sight of all the Congregation of the Children of Iſrael, who were weeping before the Door of the Tabernacle: So that ſomething extraordinary was here neceſſary to be done, in order to puniſh a Crime, which appeared too daring to be corrected, in the Practice of a Perſon, who ſeemed too great to be called to an Account for it. God indeed is the Fountain of all Power, and whoever has a Right to command or puniſh another, muſt derive it, either by Way of Delegation from thoſe, whom he has appointed to preſide, or by an immediate Revelation and Commiſſion from Heaven: And therefore to juſtify Phineas in this warm Expreſſion of his Zeal, we may obſerve, that God had not only commanded, that the Perſons, who had committed theſe Abominations, ſhould be puniſh'd with Death, but had enjoined Phineas, in particular, even before he attacked Zimri, to cut off that bold Offender; for ſo the divine Declaration ſeems to import, ‖‖ Phineas, the Son of Eleazar, the Son of Aaron, the Prieſt, hath not only turned away my Wrath, but, becauſe he was zealous for his God, has made an Atonement for the Children of Iſrael. But what Merit could there be in the Death of Zimri? How could that expiate the Sins of the Congregation? Or, what had Phineas to do, to pretend to make Atonement, unleſs God had appointed him, ſince ‡‡ no Man taketh his Honour to himſelf, nor can perform this Office to any Effect, but he who is called of God, as was Aaron? All this is reſolved by what God orders Moſes to declare to the People; Wherefore ſay unto them, Behold it was I, (for ſo the Hebrew ſhould be rendered) who gave to him my Covenant of Peace: Intimating, that Phineas had not done a raſh Action, moved to it by an impetuous Spirit, but that God himſelf had directed him to what he had performed; made him an expreſs Covenant upon his performing it; aſſured him, that the doing it ſhould obtain Pardon for the People, and that, upon the Death of the two Miſcreants, ſlain by his Hand, the Wickedneſs, that had been committed in the Camp, ſhould be forgiven. In this View of the Fact all Things are clear; and the Behaviour of Phineas in it appears to be nothing more, than a zealous and intrepid Performance of what God, by an expreſs Revelation, had required him to do.

No Precedent for others. IT muſt not be diſſembled however, that upon this Fact the Jews found what they call the Judgment of Zeal, which authorized ſuch, as were full of this holy Fervour, vour, to puniſh any violent Offenders, thoſe that blaſphemed God, or profaned the Temple, &c. in the Preſence of ten Men of Iſrael, without any formal Proceſs. But the Example of Phinehas countenances no ſuch Practice; nor can this Action, done upon an extraordinary Occaſion, by a Perſon in a publick Authority, moved thereunto by a ſtrong divine Impulſe, if not expreſs Revelation, (and what is a Circumſtance that ſome People add) in a Commonwealth, not perfectly ſettled, be made a Precedent for private Men, under a different Situation, to invade the Office of the Magiſtrate, without manifeſt Danger of Enthuſiaſtick Violence and Outrage, even againſt thoſe, that are moſt innocent; as we plainly find it happened among the Jews, when, in the latter Times of their Government, they put this Precedent in Execution; [t] of which, St Stephen, whom they inhumanly ſtoned, and St Paul, whom they vowed to aſſaſſinate, without any Form of Juſtice, are notorious Inſtances.

[p] Patrick's Commentary. [q] Thus the LXX, the Vulgar, and ſeveral other Interpreters underſtand it. And there is Reaſon for this Acceptation, if what the Samaritan Chronicle tells us be true, viz. that the Daughters of the chief Men of Moab were ſent, finely dreſs'd, to allure the Iſraelites, and one of the King's Daughters among the reſt, Patrick, ibid. [r] Numb. xxv. 8. * Shuckford's Connection, Vol. III. Lib. XII. † Numb. xxv. 14. ‖ Antiq. Lib. IV. c. 10. ‡ Numb. xxv. 6. ‖‖ Ibid. xxv. 11. ‡‡ Heb. v. 4.

Iſrael's General, and Victory over the Midianites.

[u] WHETHER this Phinehas was ſent to command the Troops, which were inſtantly appointed by God, to take Vengeance of the Midianites, for having ſeduced his People into Whoredom and Idolatry; or whether he went along with the Army, only to perform ſuch ſacred Offices, as ſhould be required by the General, * who, with more Probability perhaps, is thought to be Joſhua, are Queſtions, ariſing from the Silence of Scripture, concerning the chief Commander. At this Time, indeed, it was not uſual to ſet Prieſts at the Head of Armies, but, in the Time of the Maccabees, (who were of the Sacerdotal Line) the Troops of Iſrael were commanded by them: And [x] therefore ſome have ſuppoſed, that Phinehas, being an extraordinary Perſon, of great Courage, and ſignalized by his late magnanimous Action, might poſſibly recommend himſelf (even contrary to the common Cuſtom) to the chief Command, in order to compleat the Revenge, he had begun. But whoever it was, that headed the ſmall Army of Iſraelites, 'tis certain, they obtained an abſolute and compleat Victory over their Enemies, and (what made it more wonderful) [y] without the Loſs of one Man on Iſrael's Side, as appears from the Report of the Officers, made upon a Muſter.

Moſes's laſt Admonitions to the People.

THIS is the laſt memorable Action, which the Iſraelites did under the Adminiſtration of Moſes; for their forty Years Travels were juſt now expiring, and, conſequently, the Time of his Diſſolution drawing near. Being ſenſible of this therefore, and willing to take his laſt Leave of them, in a Manner ſuitable to the Care and Affection, he had all along expreſſed for them; he called them together, in the Plain of Moab, by Jordan, and there [z] briefly reminded them of all that had befallen them, and their Fathers, ſince they left Egypt; how graciouſly God had all along dealt with them; and how manifold their Rebellions and Provocations had been. [a] He repeated the chief Injunctions of the Law; exhorted them to a ſtrict Obſervation of it; promiſed they ſhould ſoon enter into the Land of Canaan, and commanded them to deſtroy the Idols, and extirpate the Inhabitants thereof. [b] He encouraged them to be faithful to God, upon Aſſurance, that, if they kept his Commandments, Bleſſings would be ſhowered down upon them; but if they neglected them, Curſes and Calamities. He renewed the Covenant with them in the Name of God; ordered the Diviſion of the Land, whereinto they were paſſing, among their ſeveral Tribes; and, after he had recorded all theſe Things in a Book, which he committed to the Care and Cuſtody of the Levites, and, by the Divine Direction, compoſed an Hymn for the People to learn, in Commemoration of God's Favours, and their Ingratitude; he appointed Joſhua, a Man every Way qualified for ſo high a Truſt, to ſucceed him in the Government.

Of the World, 2553, &c. Before Chriſt, 1451, &c.

His laſt Farewel, Death, and Burial.

HAVING thus diſcharged the Office of a faithful Ruler, and left them the beſt Legacy that he could, Laws, for the Direction of their Lives, and a Man of Worth and Ability, to be their Leader; [c] he took a ſolemn Farewel of them, in a prophetical Bleſſing, which he pronounced upon each Tribe, as Jacob had done before his Death; and ſo went up to the Top of [d] Piſgah, from whence he might [e] take a full View of the Countries round about. Here he feaſts his Eyes with the Proſpect of that good Land, which he is not permitted to enter; views the delightful Town and Plains of Jericho; ſees Lebanon's fair Cliffs and lofty Cedars; and then [f] reſigns his Soul into the Hands of Angels, waiting, ſome of them, to convey it to an happier Canaan, than what he had juſt before ſurvey'd, and others, [g] to inter his Body, in the Valley of Beth-peor, in the Land of Moab; but (to [h] prevent all ſuperſtitious Adoration of him) of the Place of his Sepulchre, knoweth no Man, even unto this Day.

[a] Le Clerc's Comment. on Deut. xxv. [t] Acts vii. 58. and xxiii. 12. [u] Saurin's Diſſertat. * Patrick's Commentary. [x] Patrick, ibid. [y] Vid. Numb. xxxi. 49. [z] His Speeches, upon this Occaſion, are the Matter and Subſtance of that Book, which is called Deuteronomy, i. e. a ſecond Law, or Repetition of the Law. Vid. Howell's and Dupin's Hiſtories of the Bible. [a] Vid. Deuteron. paſſim. [b] Deut. xi. [c] Ibid. xxxiii. [d] Piſgah was the very Top of Mount Nebo, as Nebo was the higheſt Part of the Mountain Abarim, which is a long Ridge of Hills between the Rivers Arnon and Jordan, ſituate in the Plains of Moab. Wells's Geography. [e] The Jews have a Notion, that God ſet before Moſes a compleat Map of Canaan, wherein every Part of it was exactly deſcribed; but as this might have been done on the Plain of Moab, without ever going up into the Mountain, it ſeems more reaſonable, that he ſtrengthened his Eyes with a greater Vigour than uſual, to enable him to take a larger Proſpect of the Country, than otherwiſe he could have done. Patrick's Commentary.

SECT. II.

Of the Paſſage of Jordan, and taking Jericho.

Of the World, 2553, &c. Before Chriſt, 1451, &c.

UPON the Death of Moſes, Joſhua, by the Command of God, ſucceeded to the Government. He had been Prime Miniſter to Moſes, for the greateſt Part of thoſe forty Years, that the Iſraelites wandered in the Wilderneſs; had ſeen the wonderful Works, which God wrought by his Hand; underſtood well the Nature and Diſpoſition of the People; was one of thoſe twelve Spies, which were ſent to ſearch the promiſed Land; and one of the two, that gave a juſt Report of it: And, for theſe and ſome other Qualifications, he was inſtalled into his Office with great Solemnity. After this Ceremony was over, the great Expedition, the People were to go upon, was, to take Poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan: But, becauſe it was bounded by the River Jordan, they were firſt to paſs that, in order to inveſt its chief Frontier-Town, which was Jericho.

The paſſing of Jordan.

JORDAN, according to the Account of [i] Joſephus, was the largeſt and moſt celebrated River in the Holy Land. Its Head was anciently thought to be Panion, but, in Truth, it paſſes thither under Ground; for the firſt Source of it is Phiala, an hundred and twenty Furlongs from Cæſarea Philippi, a little on the Right-hand, and not much out of the Way to Trachonis. From the Cave of Panion, it croſſes the Bogs and Fens of the Lake Semechonites, and, after a Courſe of an hundred and twenty Furlongs farther, paſſes under the City of Julias (or Bethſaida); then over the Lake of Gennezareth, and ſo running a long Way through a Wilderneſs, or Deſert, it empties itſelf at laſt into the Lake Aſphaltites, or the Dead-Sea. In the whole, it is about an hundred Miles long; but, at preſent, not above * twenty Yards broad; though certainly it was much larger at the Time, when the Children of Iſrael paſſed over it. It was then [k] the Time of Barley-Harveſt, or (as [l] it is expreſſed in another Place) in the firſt Month, i. e. the Month of March, when the Snow upon Mount Lebanon uſed to diſſolve, and ſwell the adjacent Rivers to a conſiderable Degree. But how large ſoever it then was, as ſoon as the Prieſts, who carried the Ark, and went firſt in the Proceſſion, approached the River, its Waters were parted; and whilſt the Waters above forgot to flow, and ſtood ſtill, as if they had been congeal'd, thoſe below ran down the Channel towards the Dead-Sea, as uſual, and ſo left the Ground dry for the People to paſs over. The Jewiſh Doctors have a Tradition, that the vaſt Heaps of Waters, piled one upon another, while the Iſraelites paſſed over the River, being ſeen to the People of Jericho, and other adjacent Places, occaſioned a general Conſternation. Jericho, [m] according to Joſephus, is diſtant from Jordan about ſeven Miles and an half, and the intermediate Country was a Plain; but whether this Circumſtance be true or no, we ſhall not contend; all that we ſhall ſay upon the Whole is this:—[n] That they, who look upon this Part of the divine Hiſtory as improbable, if not incredible, ſhould do well to conſider, what Shame it is to have leſs Faith, [f] The Jews have a Saying of Moſes, that his Soul departed with a Kiſs, becauſe he is ſaid to die Alpi, at the Mouth, (as it is literally in the Hebrew) i. e. according to the Word of God. But, if there be any Senſe in the Expreſſion, it muſt be, that he parted with his Soul with great Chearfulneſs and Serenity of Mind. Witſius Miſcel. Sacra, C. 17. [g] Since the Circumſtances of Moſes's Death are ſo fully recorded, it ſeems to be a frivolous Notion of the Jews, though ſupported by Joſephus, [Antiq. Lib. IV. c. 8.] and followed by ſome Chriſtian Fathers, that he did not die, but was tranſlated into Heaven, where he ſtands and miniſters before God. Patrick and Witſius, ibid. [h] This very Reaſon we have in R. Levi Ben. Gerſom: Fortaſſe ſi innotuiſſet locus, errando erraviſſent generationes ſequentes, & feciſſent ex eo Deum, per claritudinem miraculorum, quibus excelluit. Nonne vides quod in ſerpente æneo, quem fecerat Moſes, erraverint quidam Iſraelitarum? Witſius, ibid. [i] De Bell. Jud. L. III. * This is Maundrell's Account of the River; [Journey from Aleppo, p. 83.] but it is very certain, that, as the Courſe of Rivers is liable to great Alterations, Jordan was a much larger Stream, when the Iſraelites came into Canaan, than it is now. In Pliny's Time, it filled a larger Channel, and therefore he ſtiles it, Amnis ambitioſus. [Nat. Hiſt. Lib. V. c. 19.] When Strabo wrote, Veſſels of Burthen were navigated in it; [Geogr. Lib. XVI.] and therefore the ſame ingenious Traveller obſerves, that anciently it had covered a large Strand, and waſhed up an outer Bank, about a Furlong from the common Channel, Maundrell, ubi ſupra. [k] Joſh. iii. 15. [l] 1 Chron. xii. 15. [m] This agrees very well with Mr Maundrell's Account, who tells us, that he arrived at the River Jordan, from Jericho, in two Hours. [n] Patrick's Commentary.

Faith, than the Heathens; who, leſt their Gods ſhould be thought leſs powerful, than the God of Iſrael, forged [o] thoſe Stories, which the Perſians tell us of, Zoroaſter's paſſing over Rivers, and the Greeks, of Neptune's drying up Inachus, &c. why then ſhould they call in queſtion the Power of the true God; ſince it cannot be conteſted, but that, either by himſelf, or by his Angels, he could eaſily ſtop the Courſe of a River, make its Waters riſe up in an Heap, as high as he pleaſed, and ſo ſtand reared in Firmneſs and Solidity, as if they were congealed?

The Perſon, that appeared to Joſhua.

THIS wonderful Paſſage of the River Jordan ſo alarmed the neighbouring People, that they flocked in great Multitudes to Jericho, as the ſtrongeſt and moſt tenable Place in the Country, there to wait for Joſhua's Approach, and to put a Stop to his intended Conqueſt. It was not long before Joſhua came up with his Army; and, while he was conſidering with himſelf in what Manner he was to attack Jericho, there appeared to him, in a martial Habit, a very extraordinary Perſon, who [p] gave him Inſtructions what to do: But who this Perſon was, it is not ſo well agreed among the Learned. [q] Several, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian Authors, are of Opinion, that the Perſon, who ſtiles himſelf here the [r] Captain of the Hoſt of the Lord, was an Angel, and particularly, the Angel Michael, who, in the Prophet Daniel, is ſtiled one of the chief Princes of the People of God, and ſuppoſed to have had the Preſidence over them, after that God (incenſed againſt them for making the Golden Calf) withdrew his immediate Preſence from them. 'Tis evident however, that Joſhua conceived an higher Opinion of him, becauſe he fell on his Face, and worſhipped him, which he would not have done, had he ſuppoſed him to be an Angel only; nor can we imagine, how the other could have accepted his Worſhip, much leſs why he ſhould command him to put off his Shoes, (which [s] was the higheſt Acknowledgment of a divine Preſence, that was uſed among the Eaſtern Nations) had he not been a divine Perſon: And therefore, the more probable Opinion is, "that this Captain, or Guardian of the Lord's "Hoſt, who ſuffered himſelf to be worſhipped, and by whoſe Preſence the Place "where he appeared was ſanctified, was no other than the Son of God, whom all the "Angels in Heaven are commanded to worſhip and adore."

The taking of Jericho.

ACCORDING to the Inſtructions of this divine Perſon, Joſhua cauſed all his Forces to march round the Place ſix Days ſucceſſively, and, on the ſeventh Day, when (after ſeven Times ſurrounding the City) the Prieſts blew with the Trumpets, and the People ſhouted with a loud Voice, the Wall thereof fell down flat, ſo that the Army marched directly up to it, and took it, and put all to the Sword (Rahab and her Family only excepted) both Man and Beaſt. It would be Madneſs to repeat what [t] ſome Authors (in order to depreciate this Miracle) have told us of a certain Fitneſs there is in Sounds, to break and demoliſh ſolid Bodies; and how, from the violent Effects of ſubterraneous Eruptions, or the blowing up of ſome Magazines of Powder, they have ſuppoſed, that the Fall of the Walls of Jericho might be imputed to a natural Cauſe. The Number of the Trumpets we find was but ſeven, and theſe made of Rams Horns, which could not be of the ſhrilleſt Sound; and tho' the Noiſe of ſo great a Number of People might be very loud, yet ſtill it would require a Miracle in Joſhua to know, what the juſt Proportion was between their Noiſe and the Strength of the Walls of Jericho. This is however but mere trifling with Matters of Fact. The ſacred Hiſtory has repreſented the whole Event, as an extraordinary Act of the divine Power, exerted for the Encouragement of the Iſraelites, and the Confuſion of their Adverſaries: And accordingly, if we peruſe the Account of the Conqueſt of the Land of Canaan, we ſhall find, that this was not the only Inſtance of the divine Interpoſal.

Of the Shower of Hail-ſtones, and the Sun's ſtanding ſtill.

NOT long after the taking of Jericho, all the People of that Country (except the Gibeonites, who, pretending to come from afar, drew Joſhua and the Heads of the Tribes unwarily into a League) confederated together, in order to defend themſelves againſt the Iſraelites: But Joſhua, coming upon them ſuddenly, put them to Flight, and, to compleat the Victory, God did two great Miracles for Iſrael that Day; he 1. caſt down great Stones from Heaven upon their Enemies, as they [o] Theſe are collected by Huetius, in his Quæſtiones Alnetanæ, L. II. c. 12. [p] Joſh. vi. 2. [q] Saurin's Diſſert. Vol. II. [r] Joſh. v. 15. [s] Vid. Dr Alix's Book on this Argument, p. 234. [t] P. Merſenne, in his Comment on Geneſis, and D. Geo. Morhof. de Scypho vitreo, per certum humanæ vocis ſonum, fracto.

they were running away; and, 2. ſtopped the Courſe of the Sun in the Firmament, that his People might have the longer Space to deſtroy them, as they fled.

The Shower of Hail-ſtones.

1. THE learned Calmet, in a Diſſertation before his Commentary upon Joſhua, has taken great Pains to ſhew, that the Stones, which the Lord is ſaid to caſt down upon the Amorites, were not common Hail-ſtones, but real ſolid Stones; which he ſuppoſes may be ingendered in the Air, by a Whirlwind's carrying up Sand, or Gravel, into a Cloud, and there mixing it with ſome ſuch oily or nitrous Matter, as may conſolidate it; that ſo, when it comes to be fired, it may burſt through the Cloud, and, ſcattering itſelf upon the Exploſion, deſcend in the Nature of a perfect Shower of Stones: [u] "But beſides the Difficulty of conceiving, how ſuch a Quantity of Stones, as this Paſſage of Scripture ſeems to intimate, could, for any Time, be ſuſtained in a Cloud; there ſeems to be no Neceſſity for having Recourſe to ſuch an uncommon Solution, when the Thing is ſo notorious, that Hail-ſtones have frequently fallen, large enough to deſtroy ever ſo great a Number of Men, when naked and defenceleſs againſt their Blows. A Shower of Hail indeed may be ſuppoſed to proceed from a more natural Cauſe; but when the Event happened at the very Inſtant, wherein God promiſed to aſſiſt his People againſt their Enemies; when, though it might have annoyed either Army, it fell only on that, which God had before determined to ruin, and fell ſo very heavily upon it, as to deſtroy more, than the Sword of the Conquerors had done; ſuch an Event as this, I ſay, cannot but be looked upon as a miraculous Interpoſition of Providence, how fortuitous ſoever the Concourſe of ſecond Cauſes may ſeem to be. And much more then may we ſay ſo,

The Sun's ſtanding ſtill, in what Senſe to be underſtood.

2. OF God's ſtopping the Courſe of the Sun, at Joſhua's Requeſt. [x] Sun, ſtand thou ſtill upon Gibeon, i. e. [y] ſtand immoveable in that Part of the Heavens, where I now ſee thee ſhining upon Gibeon; and thou Moon, in the Valley of Ajalon, i. e. of Ajalon [z] in the Tribe of Dan, which was fartheſt remote from Gibeon: For we muſt ſuppoſe, that theſe two Places were at ſome conſiderable Diſtance, otherwiſe Joſhua could not ſee the Sun and the Moon both appear at the ſame Time, as it is probable they were both now in his Eye, when he ſpake theſe Words. It is to be obſerved, however, that (even upon the Hypotheſis of the Motion of the Sun) the Jewiſh General cannot be ſuppoſed to ſpeak in a proper and philoſophick Senſe; for ſince the Sun is almoſt a Million of Times bigger than the Earth, and ſome Millions of Miles diſtant from it, to juſtify the ſtrict Senſe of the Words, a Line, drawn from the Center of the Sun to that of the Earth, muſt exactly paſs by Gibeon, which we know it cannot do, becauſe no Part of the Holy Land lies between the Tropicks: And therefore we may, with leſs Scruple, be bold to conclude, that the Words of Joſhua (even with Relation to the Motion of the Sun) are to be taken in a Senſe accommodated to the Notions of the Aſtronomy, that then prevailed, rather than according to the Reality of the Thing. The moſt ſuperficial Reader cannot but obſerve, that in Scripture nothing is more common, than to expreſs Things, not according to the ſtrict Rules of Philoſophy, but according to their Appearance, and the vulgar Apprehenſions concerning them. The Sun and Moon, for Inſtance, are called [a] two great Lights; but, however that Title may agree with the Sun, 'tis plain, that the Moon is but a ſmall Body, the leaſt that has yet been diſcovered in the Planetary Syſtem, and that it has no Light at all, but what it borrows and reflects from the Rays of the Sun; and yet, becauſe it is placed near us, it appears to us larger than other heavenly Luminaries, and, from that Appearance, the holy Scripture gives it ſuch an Appellation. And, in like Manner, becauſe the Sun ſeems to us to move, and the Earth to be at Reſt; the Scriptures ſpeak a great deal of the Pillars, and Baſis, and Foundations of the Earth, of the Sun's [b] rejoicing like a Giant to run his Race, and of [c] his ariſing, and going down, and haſtening to the Place, where he aroſe, &c. whereas it is certain, [d] that if the Sun were made to revolve about the Earth, the univerſal

Law

[u] Saurin's Diſſertations, Vol. II. [x] Joſh. x. 12. [y] Patrick's Commentary, in locum. [z] Joſh. xix. 42, Judg. i. 35. [a] Gen. i. 16. [b] Pſal. xix. 5. [c] Eccleſ. i. 5.

[d] Keill's Aſtronomical Lectures. Beſides this general Argument of Mr Keill's, Mr Whiſton has one, which he accounts no leſs than a Demonſtration. "If the Earth, ſays he, have an annual Revolution about the Sun, it muſt "affect the apparent Motions of all the other Planets and Comets, and, notwithſtanding the Regularity of their "ſeveral Motions in their own Orbits, muſt render the regular Motions, as to us living upon the moving Earth, "ſometimes direct, and that ſwiftly or ſlowly; ſometimes ſtationary, and ſometimes retrograde, and that ſwiftly or "ſlowly alſo; and all this, at ſuch certain Periods, in ſuch certain Places, for ſuch certain Durations, and according to ſuch certain Circumſtances, as Geometry and Arithmetick will certainly determine, and not otherwiſe. "Now that this is the real Caſe in Fact, and that every one of theſe Particulars are true in the Aſtronomical World, "all, that are ſkilful in that Science, do freely confeſs, even thoſe, who do not think fit to declare openly "for Law of Nature would thereby be violated; the Harmony and Proportion of the heavenly Motions deſtroy'd; and no ſmall Confuſion and Diſorder brought into the Frame of the Univerſe. But, on the contrary, if the Earth, turning upon its own Axis every Day, be made to go round the Sun in the Space of a Year, it will then perform its Circulation according to the ſame Law, which the other Planets obſerve, and, without the leaſt Exception, there will be a moſt beautiful Order and Harmony of Motions every where preſerved thro' the whole Frame of Nature. As therefore the Scriptures were deſigned to teach us the Art of holy Living, and not to inſtruct us in the Rudiments of natural Knowledge; it can be deemed no Diminution, either to their Perfection, or divine Authority, that they generally ſpeak [e] according to the common Appearance of Things, and the vulgar Notions and Opinions, which the World have of them, not according to their Reality or philoſophical Verity.

UNDER this miraculous Aſſiſtance of Divine Providence, it was not long before Joſhua conquered moſt of the Land of Canaan; and, having divided it among the People, reaped, for ſome Years, the Fruits of his Victories in a quiet Enjoyment of Peace; till, at length, finding himſelf grow old, and his Death approaching, he aſſembled all Iſrael together, and having ſet before them the many great Bleſſings, which God had vouchſafed them, and their Anceſtors, he thereupon exhorts them, to have no Communication with the Canaanites; to have their idolatrous Practices in Deteſtation; to [f] ſerve the Lord in Sincerity, and in Truth; and to be [g] courageous to keep all, that was written in the Book of the Law of Moſes. Upon this Condition, he promiſes them an intire Conqueſt over all their Enemies; that, by God's Help and Aſſiſtance, [h] one of them ſhould chaſe a Thouſand, and no Man ſhould be able to ſtand before them; and, in the Concluſion, renews the Covenant between God and them: And ſo having done all, that could be required of a wiſe Governor, towards the Welfare of a People committed to his Charge, he took his final Leave of them, and, after he had ruled them [i] ſeventeen Years, (as the beſt Interpreters account) in the hundred and tenth Year of his Age, died, and was buried in [k] Timnath-Serah, which is in Mount Ephraim, the City, which (upon the Diviſion of the Land among the Tribes) the Children of Iſrael gave to him, in Token of Gratitude for the many Services and Benefits, which they had received by his Adminiſtration.

Of the World, 2590, &c. Before Chriſt, 1414, &c.

Joſhua's final Exhortation, and Death.

SECT. III.

The Government of the JUDGES.

AFTER the Death of Joſhua, we read of none, that was appointed to ſucceed him, and therefore the general Opinion is, that every Tribe was governed by their reſpective Heads, or [l] Elders; but how long this Form of Government ſubſiſted, has not ſo well been determined by Chronologers, tho' (according to the beſt Computation) it ſeems to have been no leſs than thirty Years; for ſo the Word Generation, in the ſacred Hiſtory, is thought, by ſome, to ſignify: And accordingly we read, that [m] Iſrael ſerved the Lord all the Days of Joſhua, and all the Days of the Elders, which out-lived Joſhua; [n] but when all that Generation were gathered to their Fathers, there aroſe another Generation after them, which knew not the Lord, nor yet the Works, which he had done for Iſrael. However this be, 'tis hardly to be imagined, but that, in ſuch a looſe Kind of Government, ſeveral Corruptions ſhould ſpring up; and, accordingly, the Hiſtory takes Notice, that, in this Period of Time, the People did not deſtroy the Inhabitants of the Land, as they were commanded, but, contenting themſelves with making them tributary, ſuffered them to live promiſcuouſly among them; that they not only ſhewed them this Indulgence, but entered into cloſe Alliances, and made Intermarriages with them, which Thing God had expreſſly forbidden; and, in Conſequence of this Familiarity, fell gradually into the ſame Crimes, and the

Of the World, 2592, &c. Before Chriſt, 1412, &c.

Judges inſtituted.

[e] for this annual Revolution of the Earth, which yet is the natural and certain Conſequence of that Conceſſion. Whiſton's Aſtronomical Principles of Religion. The Reader, that is deſirous to know more upon this Subject, may conſult Dr Derham's Preliminary Diſcourſe to his Aſtro-Theology.

[f] Derham's Aſtro-Theology. [g] Joſh. xxiv. 14. [h] Ibid. xxiii. 6. [i] Ibid. ver. 9, 10. [k] Patrick's Commentary, Vol. II. [l] This is alſo called (Judg. ii. 9.) Timnath-heres, becauſe of the Image of the Sun, which is engraven on Joſhua's Sepulchre, in Memory of that famous Day, when the Sun ſtood ſtill, till he had compleated his Victory. [m] Patrick, ibid. [n] Joſh. xxiv. 31. [n] Judg. ii. 10.

the ſame Kind of Idolatry with them: For ſo we find it related, that [o] the Children of Iſrael dwelt among the Canaanites, &c. that they took their Daughters to be their Wives, and gave their Daughters to their Sons, and that they forgot the Lord their God, and ſerved Baalim and the Groves. Incenſed at theſe Provocations, God left them to themſelves, who, without his Care and Protection, made but a poor Defence againſt their Enemies; for, upon the King of Meſopotamia's invading them, they were ſorely defeated, and enſlaved for eight Years; and 'twas on this unhappy Conjuncture, that the Office of Judges was firſt inſtituted.

The Nature of their Office.

THE Judges were a Kind of Magiſtrates, not much unlike the Archontes among the Athenians, and the Dictators among the Romans. Grotius compares them to thoſe Rulers, that were in Gaul, in Germany, and Britain, before the Romans introduced another Form of Government. Their Honour laſted for Life, but their Succeſſion was not always continued; for there were frequent Interruptions in it, and the People lived often under the Dominion of Strangers, without any Government of their own. According to the common Cuſtom, they were generally appointed by God; but, in Caſes of extreme Exigence, the People made ſometimes Choice of ſuch, as they thought beſt qualified to reſcue them out of their Oppreſſion, without waiting for any Divine Deſignation. Their Authority was not inferior to that of Kings; they arbitrated in all Affairs of War and Peace; had an abſolute Power to determine all Cauſes, but none at all to make any new Laws, or to lay any new Taxes upon the People. They were, in ſhort, the Protectors of the Laws, the Defenders of Religion, and the Avengers of Crimes, eſpecially of that of Idolatry: But then, even during this their Power, they lived without any Pomp or Splendor; had no Guards, no Attendance, no Equipage, no certain Revenue, nor any other Emolument, wherewith to ſupport their Dignity, but what aroſe from the voluntary Contributions of the People.

THIS Form of Government (if we reckon from the Death of Joſhua to the Beginning of Saul's Reign) was about three hundred and thirty-nine Years. The firſt of this Order was Othniel. He defeated the King of Meſopotamia, and reſtored Peace to Iſrael for the Space of forty Years: But, after him, we ſhall think ourſelves concerned to take Notice of ſuch only, as are the moſt remarkable in ſacred Hiſtory: And therefore, to ſay nothing of [p] Ehud, who aſſaſſinated Eglon, King of the Moabites, an Action no Ways to be juſtified, but upon the Suppoſition, that he did it by God's expreſs Order; nothing of [q] Shamgar, who ſlew ſix hundred Philiſtines with an Ox-Goad, that no Weapon might be thought inſufficient in the Hand of one, excited by the mighty Power of God; nothing of [r] Deborah, who, together with Barak, vanquiſhed the mighty Army of Jabin, King of Canaan, and all his nine hundred Chariots of Iron; nothing of [s] Jael, the Wife of Heber, who, in murthering Siſera, Captain of Jabin's Army, then in Amity with her Houſe, did an Act, which cannot be warranted [t] upon any other Suppoſition, but her being moved thereunto by an immediate Impulſe from God: To ſay nothing of theſe, and ſeveral other Judges of leſſer Note, the Characters and Exploits that ſeem to deſerve our more particular Attention, during this Period of Time, are thoſe of Gideon, Jephtha, Sampſon, and Samuel; which we ſhall now conſider in their Order.

[o] Judg. iii. 5, &c. [p] Ibid. ver. 21. [q] Ibid. ver. 31. [r] Ibid. iv. 14, &c.
[s] Ibid. ver. 18.

[t] Vid. Patrick, in Locum; but Mr Saurin, in his Diſſertation upon the Defeat of Jabin and Siſera, has another Way of juſtifying this Action, which ſeems not ſo very conſonant either to the Laws of God, or Nations. For having propoſed ſome Suppoſitions, mentioned by Puffendorf, and other Civilians, which he rejects, his next Words are theſe; " Il me ſemble, qu'on peut trouver dans le Charactére même de Jabin, & de ſes Miniſtres, l'apologie de Jahel. " Jabin étoit un Tyran; Sizera étoit le principal Fauteur de ſes Tyrannies. Les hommes les plus fourbes, & les plus " cruels, ont beſoin que leurs Alliez ſoient droits & bienfaiſans. Mais devons-nous avoir de la bonne foi & de l'humanité pour ces perſonnes exécrables, qui n'exigent ces vertus de nous, que lorſqu'elles leur fourniſſent les moyens " de les violer eux-mêmes impunément, de manquer à leurs promeſſes, de porter par tout le Sang & le Carnage? " J'avoue que je ne comprens pas ſur quoi cette Obligation ſeroit fondée. Il y à certains Monſtres dans la Nature, à " la perte deſquels toute la Societé eſt intéreſſée. Concourir à les conſerver, refuſer même de ſe prevaloir des occaſions, qui s'offrent pour en purger la Terre, c'eſt (quelque Liaiſon qu'on ait d'ailleurs avec eux) ſous prétexte de " fidélité envers un Allié, être perfide à ce qu'on doit à tous ces hommes, qui tôt ou tard deviendroient les victimes " de ſes concuſſions & de ces Barbaries: C'eſt manquer à ce qu'on ſe doit à ſoi même, & s'expoſer à être immolé à ce " monſtre, qu'on ſe fera un ſcrupule d'etouſer, pour arrêter le progrès de ſes Cruautés, &c.

Gideon's

Gideon's Exploits.

Of the World. 2739, &c. Before Chriſt, 1265, &c.

Gideon's Deſignation to be Judge.

I. AFTER the Death of Deborah and Barak, the People fell again into their old Apoſtacy; and, by their crying Sin of Idolatry, provoked God to deliver them into the Hand of their Enemies. The Midianites were a People ſituate beyond the River Jordan, whom the Children of Iſrael, in their Paſſage to the Land of Canaan, [u] had deſtroyed; [x] but it is not improbable, that ſome of that Nation, ſaving themſelves by Flight into other Countries, and, after the Iſraelites were ſettled in Canaan, returning again, might, in the Space of two hundred Years, re-people the Land, where they dwelt before, and ſtill retain the Name of Midianites. Theſe People, together with their Neighbours, the Amalekites, for ſeven Years, kept the Iſraelites in ſuch Subjection, that they were forced to betake themſelves to Dens in the Mountains, and Caves in the Earth, and to their fortified Places, from whence, as the Spring came on, they ſtole out, to ſow and cultivate their Land; but always, towards the Time of Harveſt, theſe Enemies made Inroads into their Country, and tarrying there till they had devoured all the Proviſion and Forage they could find, they then returned home, and left the poor Iſraelites nothing to ſupport Life. Under this ſore Calamity, the People began to be ſenſible of their Wickedneſs, and to humble themſelves under the afflicting Hand of God; who, upon their Humiliation, provided them an Inſtrument for their Deliverance, in the Perſon of Gideon, the Son of Joaſh, and, to encourage the Undertaking, ſent an Angel to him to Ophrah, while he was threſhing Wheat privately, in order to conceal it from the Enemy. Convinced by the Diſcourſe, as well as [y] by the Actions of the Perſon, that converſed with him, that he was in Reality an Angel ſent from God, Gideon began to take Courage, and that very Night (as the Angel very probably had ordered him) demoliſhed the Altar of Baal, which, in thoſe corrupt Times, had been erected; cut down the Grove thereof, and, building another Altar to the Lord his God, on the Top of the Rock, where the Angel had appeared to him, he there offered a Burnt-Sacrifice with the Wood of the Grove, which he had cut down. But this was not all.

His Victory over the Midianites.

IT was now about the Time, when the Midianites, paſſing over Jordan, to ravage and plunder the Country, came, and encamped in the Valley of Jezreel; whereupon Gideon, inſpired with more than ordinary Courage, ſummoned all thoſe of his own Family to come in to his Aſſiſtance; and, ſending Meſſengers through the Tribes of Manaſſeh, Aſher, Zebulun, and Naphtali, which lay towards the North of the Land of Canaan, he ſoon collected an Army to the Number of two and thirty thouſand Men, though much inferior to what the Enemy had brought againſt him. As ſoon as all the Forces were come together, Gideon (to ſatisfy them that he did not act this on his own Head, but was the Perſon appointed by Heaven to be their Leader and Deliverer) deſired of God to give them ſome Token of his Commiſſion. The Token that he inſtanced in was——that, upon laying a Fleece of Wool upon the Ground, the Dew might be upon the Fleece only, and the Earth round about it dry, which accordingly happened; and then, inverting the former Manner, he deſired that the Fleece might be dry, while the Ground round about it was wet, which accordingly came to paſs.

ENCOURAGED by this double Token, the Iſraelites were immediately for attacking the Enemy; but God, knowing the Folly and Ingratitude of the People, and rightly foreſeeing, that, if with this Army they ſhould conquer the Midianites, they would vainly impute it to their own Courage and Numbers, and not to his Aſſiſtance, ordered Gideon to make Proclamation in the Camp, that whoever was diffident of the Undertaking, ſhould have Liberty to return home; whereupon two and twenty Thouſand quitted the Field, and only ten Thouſand remained with Gideon. This was a very inconſiderable Number, in Compariſon of the numerous Hoſt of the Midianites; but ſtill, as few as they were, it came within the Verge of Poſſibility, that their Foes might be defeated with ſuch an Handful of Men; and therefore God, thinking them too many, and reſolving that the whole Action and Victory ſhould appear to be his doing, ordered Gideon to bring his Soldiers down to the Water, where he would give him a Signal what Men were fit for his Buſineſs; and the Signal was——that they, who took up Water in their Hands, and lapped it, ſhould go with him; but they, who who lay down to drink, ſhould not go; which Experiment reduced the Men to three hundred only.

[u] Numb. xxxi. 7, &c. [x] Vid. Patrick, on Judg. vi. 1. [y] Judg. vi. 21.

INTERPRETERS are at a ſad Puzzle to conceive, for what poſſible Reaſon God made a Diſtinction between the Soldiers, that lapped Water in their Hands, and thoſe that laid themſelves down to drink. Some of the [z] Jewiſh Doctors are of Opinion, that all, except the three hundred, who lapped, had been accuſtomed to the Worſhip of Baal, which they unwarily diſcovered by their bowing down their Knees to drink; but this is a groundleſs and far-fetched Conceit. The Notion of [a] thoſe, who impute the three hundred Mens lapping, ſome to their Sloth and Lazineſs, and others, to their Timorouſneſs, and the great Fear they were in of being ſurprized by the Enemy, is not of more Validity: For tho' God, if he had thought ſo fit, might have employed the moſt daſtardly among them upon this Expedition, that the Glory of the Victory might entirely redound to himſelf; yet ſince (as we are told) all the fearful Perſons were diſmiſſed before, and ſince it but badly befits the Character of the Courageous to be lazy; this Action of Lapping, as I take it, is rather to be accounted a Token of their Temperance, and of the Nobleneſs of their Spirit, which made them ſo deſirous to engage the Enemy, that they would not ſtay to drink, but (though they were very thirſty) contented themſelves to moiſten their Mouth (as we ſay) with a little Water; whereas the reſt indulged themſelves ſo far, as to drink their Belly-full.

WITH this ſmall Number of Men however God promiſed to deliver into Gideon's Hand the whole Hoſt of the Midianites; but then he directed him to obſerve this Stratagem——that each Man ſhould have a Trumpet, and a Pitcher with a burning Torch in it, and ſo march up to the Enemy's Camp; which, when they had done, they were all, at once, to break their Pitchers, ſound their Trumpets, and cry with a terrible Shout, the Sword of the Lord and of Gideon. The Thing was accordingly executed; and [b] the Blaze of ſo many Torches, the Sound of ſo many Trumpets, the Clattering of ſo many Pitchers, all increaſed by the Shouts and Horrors of the Night, put the Enemy, juſt awakened out of Sleep, and fancying an infinite Number breaking in upon them, into ſuch a Fright and Conſternation, that, miſtaking their own Party, they fell on each other's Swords: So that Gideon and his Army obtained an eaſy Victory, and, after the Midianites had quitted their Camp, had nothing to do, but to call in their Friends, to purſue, and ſlay them.

THIS Victory raiſed Gideon's Name to ſuch an Height, that the People came voluntarily, and offered to ſettle the Government upon him and his Family; which he modeſtly and generouſly rejecting, and deſiring only, as an Acknowledgment of his Service, to have the Ear-rings, taken in the Plunder of the Midianites, given him; the People readily conſented, and, over and above the Ear-rings, threw in the rich Ornaments and Robes of the Kings, together with the Chains of Gold, which were upon their Camels Necks, and with theſe, it is ſaid, that he made an Ephod; but what that Ephod was, and for what Purpoſe it was made, has been a Matter of much Perplexity to Commentators.

The Ephod which he made, what.

AN Ephod, we know, was a common Veſtment belonging to Prieſts in general, but that of the High-Prieſt (which we had [c] Occaſion to deſcribe elſewhere) was of very great Value. This Veſtment however was not ſo peculiar to the Prieſts, but that ſometimes we find the Laity (as in the Caſe of David [d] bringing home the Ark of God) allowed to wear it; and therefore ſome have imagined, that the Ephod, which Gideon made, was only a rich and coſtly Robe of State, which, on certain Occaſions, he might wear, to denote the Station he held in the Jewiſh Republick. But, if his only Intent was to diſtinguiſh himſelf from others by ſuch a particular Veſtment, how could this give Occaſion to the People's falling into Idolatry, or any Way become a Snare

[z] Salom. Jarchi, in Judg. vii. 5. [a] Joſephus & Theodoret, ſecundum Patrick, in locum.

[b] Plutarch, in his Life of Fabius Maximus, tells us of a Stratagem, which Hannibal made Uſe of, not altogether unlike this, when his Guides, inſtead of conducting him to Caſinum, by miſtaking his Orders, led him to Caſilinum, where Fabius had gained the Advance-Ground, and poſted his Men ſo advantageouſly, as in a Manner to hem in Hannibal, and all his Army. Upon which Occaſion, Hannibal cauſed 2000 Head of Oxen, which he had in his Camp, to have Torches and dry Bavins faſtened to their Horns, and, lighting them in the Beginning of the Night, ordered the Beaſts to be fairly and ſoftly drove on, towards the Paſſages, that the Enemy had ſeized, and, at the ſame Time, made his Army, with great Silence, march after them. The Oxen, at firſt, kept a ſlow and orderly Place; but when the Fire began to burn their Horns to the quick, they no longer preſerved their regular Motion, but ran about at a wild Rate, toſſing their Heads, and ſcattering the Fire, wherever they went. Alarmed at this Spectacle, the Romans, who guarded the Paſſes, and were at ſome Diſtance from the main Body, thinking that the Enemy was coming upon them to ſurround them, quitted their Poſts, and, with great Precipitancy, fled to the Army. This gave Hannibal an Opportunity to ſecure the Paſſes, by that Means to gain the Advance Ground, and ſo extricate himſelf from the preſent Difficulty. [c] Vid. Pag. 440. [d] 2 Sam. vi. 14.

Snare to Gideon and his Houſe, we cannot perceive. Others therefore ſuppoſe, that the Word Ephod is a ſhort Expreſſion, to denote the High-Prieſt's Breaſt-plate, together with the Urim and Thummim; and hence, by an eaſy Figure, they are led to think, that, to make an Ephod is to eſtabliſh a Prieſthood, and hereupon conclude, [s] that Gideon's Crime, in making this Ephod, was, not to give Divine Honour to any but God, but to inſtitute another Kind of Prieſthood, beſides that which God had appointed in Aaron and his Poſterity. And, to this Purpoſe, they ſuppoſe, that he erected likewiſe a private Tabernacle with Cherubims; that, being now made the ſupreme Governor, he might conſult God at his own Houſe in ſuch difficult Points, as might occur in his Adminiſtration. But, beſides that it is not eaſy to imagine, that a Man, familiar with God, and choſen by him, (as Gideon was) ſhould, after ſo ſignal a Victory, as he had obtained, immediately apoſtatize, as he muſt have done, had he ſet up an Oracle in his own Houſe; there ſeems to have been no Manner of Neceſſity for it, becauſe Shiloh, where the Tabernacle ſtood, was in the Tribe of Ephraim, which adjoined to that of Manaſſeh, whereunto Gideon belonged. And therefore, the moſt probable Opinion is, that this Ephod was deſigned for nothing more, than to be a ſimple Monument of his Victory, in the Manner that other Conquerors had done before him; only, that, as the common Cuſtom was to erect a Pillar, or hang up Trophies, upon the like Occaſion, he choſe rather to make an Ephod, or Prieſt's Habit, as a Token, that he aſcribed his Victory only to God, and triumphed in nothing ſo much, as in the Reſtoration of the true Religion by his Means. This was an Action of no bad Intent in Gideon; though in After-times, when the People began to return to Idolatry, and had this Fancy, among others, that God would anſwer them at Ophrah, where this Ephod was, as well as at his Tabernacle in Shiloh, where he dwelt, it proved a Snare (as the Scripture expreſſes it) both to his Family, and the whole Houſe of Iſrael.

Jephthah's raſh Vow.

II. THE Children of Iſrael had not long been delivered from the Oppreſſions and Depredations of the Midianites, before they fell into the ſame Apoſtacy again; whereupon God let looſe the Ammonites upon them, until, by their Repentance and Renunciation of Idolatry, they pacified his Diſpleaſure; and then he raiſed up Jephthah, the Gileadite, a Man of great Courage and Conduct, to be their Chieftain and Deliverer. Jephthah, as [t] the Text tells us, was the Son of an Harlot: But [u] ſeveral Interpreters are of Opinion, that his Mother was only a Woman of another Tribe, or of another Nation at the moſt; and therefore they obſerve, that [w] he reſents the Injury, which his Brethren, by another Wife, had done, in expelling him his Father's Houſe. Being however thus expelled, he retired into the Land of Tob, (very likely the ſame Country, where his Mother was born) which was not far from Gilead, upon the Borders of the Ammonites, in the Entrance of Arabia Deſerta; and here, getting together a Band of young Fellows like himſelf, he lived by the Plunder he got in making Incurſions upon the Publick Enemy. Renowned for his Valour, and perhaps reſpected for the Service, which, by this Means, he did his Country, he was at length invited to take upon him the Command of the Army, which was intended to be raiſed againſt the Ammonites, and, upon the Condition of his being made Governor, in Caſe he ſucceeded in the War, he accepted it. He is repreſented in Scripture as a Man of ſome Fire and Paſſion, and ſuch was his Zeal to avenge his Country's Wrongs at this Time, that, when he went out to War, * He vowed a Vow unto the Lord, and ſaid, If thou ſhalt, without fail, deliver the Children of Ammon into mine Hands, then it ſhall be, that whatſoever cometh forth of the Doors of my Houſe, to meet me, when I return in Peace from the Children of Ammon, ſhall ſurely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a Burnt-Offering. He went; he fought; he conquered the Children of Ammon: But, when he returned to his Houſe, behold his Daughter came out to meet him, with Timbrels and with Dances, and ſhe was his only Child; beſide her he had neither Son nor Daughter. And it came to paſs, when he ſaw her, that he rent his Cloaths, and ſaid, alas, my Daughter, thou haſt brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me; for I have opened my Mouth to the Lord, and I cannot go back. And she said unto him, my Father, if thou hast opened thy Mouth unto the Lord, do to me according to that, which hath proceeded out of thy Mouth, forasmuch as the Lord hath taken Vengeance for thee of thine Enemies, even of the Children of Ammon; only let me alone two Months, that I may go up and down upon the Mountains, and bewail my Virginity, I and my Fellows. And he said, go: And he sent her away for two Months, and she went with her Companions, and bewailed her Virginity upon the Mountains. And it came to pass, at the End of two Months, that she returned unto her Father, who did with her according to his Vow, which he had vowed, and she knew no Man. And it was a Custom in Israel, that the Daughters of Israel went yearly, to lament the Daughter of Jephthah, the Gileadite, four Days in the Year.

Of the World, 2834, &c. Before Chriſt, 1170, &c.

Jephthah's Condition, and Vow.

[s] Vid. Spencer, de Leg. & Rit. Hebr. & M. Le Clerc, in Judg. viii. 7. [t] Patrick's Commentary, on Judg. viii. 1. [u] Judg. xi. 1. [w] Joſephus himſelf ſeems to think ſo; for he calls him, Ξένον περὶ τὴν μητέρα, a Stranger as to his Mother's Side. [x] Judg. xi. 7. * Ibid. ver. 30, &c.

I HAVE set the whole Passage before the Reader, that he may the better judge of the depending Controversy; for a great Controversy there is among Commentators, whether this Daughter of Jephthah's was really sacrificed or no. [x] The plain Narration, as it stands in our Version, without consulting any Comment upon it, would really induce one to think, that this Virgin was certainly sacrificed, and the concurrent Testimony of [y] Jews, as well as ancient Fathers of the Christian Church, do contribute not a little to the Confirmation of this Opinion. But then, on the other Hand, [z] to find a Man, and that not a wild Barbarian, but an Israelite, offering for a Burnt-Sacrifice a young, innocent, and, no doubt, beautiful and virtuous Maid: To find an indulgent fond Father burning the Fruit of his own Body, his own Child, nay, and his dutiful and obedient Child too, the Object of his Hopes, and present Comforts: To find him, whom the Apostle lists in the Catalogue of the most pious and faithful Worthies of the Old Testament, vowing to offer an human Sacrifice to God, at the very Time, in which the Scripture says, [a] the Spirit of the Lord was upon him; and putting his Vow afterwards in Execution, tho' human Sacrifices were hateful to the Lord, provoked him utterly to destroy the Canaanites, and kindled his Indignation against Israel, when they brought the King of Moab to the said Necessity [b] of offering up his eldest Son for a Burnt-Offering upon the Wall of his City: I say, to find all this is very puzzling and unaccountable; and therefore, the Interpreters, that take the negative Side of the Question, have devised a more harmless and less offensive Way of expounding the Words. They tell us, 1. That the Word, which we render Door, [Judg. xi. 31.] signifies likewise a Gate; and that the House is not to be strictly taken, but in a Sense, that comprizes the Precincts, and Places adjoining, even as the Temple, and the Courts belonging to it, are frequently included in the Denomination of the House of God. So that, by whatever cometh forth out of the Doors of my House, to meet me, we are to understand, whatsoever, coming out of Jephthah's Gate, or any Place adjoining to his House, should happen to meet him in his Return, that he would sacrifice; but then it was upon the Supposition, that the Beast (if it happened to be one) was a clean one, because an unclean Beast he was not permitted to offer. 2. They observe, that the Word [vah] in the same Verse, which our Translation makes, and, in a great many Places of Scripture signifies, or; and that it should rather be taken in this Sense here they imagine, because the preceding Words, it shall be the Lord's, i. e. dedicated, and set apart for God's special Service, or I will offer it up for a Burnt-Offering; and in this they are the rather confirmed, because, where Jephthah is said to have [c] done with her according to his Vow, it is immediately subjoined, that she knew no Man, which would have been superfluous, had not Celibacy been the Thing, to which she was devoted. 3. They observe, that the Word, which we render lament, [Ver. 40.] signifies every whit as properly (and as the marginal Note indeed has it) to talk or converse with. [d] In some Places it imports to speak or rehearse; and from hence an [e] Interpreter of no mean Note makes it in this Place signify, to praise or celebrate, and thereupon it is inferred, that this Daughter of Jephthah's was not slain, but only devoted to a State of perpetual Virginity, in some solitary and retired Place; whither the Daughters of Israel went up four Days in the Year, i. e. one Day every Quarter, either to converse with her, and comfort her, or to celebrate her Fame, with Verses composed in her Praise. According to these Explanations, the full Purport of Jephtha's Vow will be this, —— "That if God would bless him with the Victory over his Enemies, "the

The Arguments of those, who maintain the Negative of it.

[x] Smalridge's Sermons. [y] Josephus and Philo are both of this Opinion. [z] Howell's History of the Bible. [a] Judg. xi. 29. [b] 2 Kings iii. 27. [c] Judg. xi. 39. [d] Especially in Judg. v. 11. [e] Lud. de Dieu.

" the Ammonites, the firſt Thing that ſhould meet him upon his Return home, if " it belonged to him, and was fit to be ſacrificed, (were it never ſo precious) he " would offer it to the Lord immediately; but that, if it happened to be ſuch, as " was not proper to be ſacrificed, he would, nevertheleſs, devote it to his Service " for ever, in Commemoration of his great Mercy towards him." So that, according to this Senſe of the Words, there was no Neceſſity for him to ſacrifice his Daughter, when reſigning her up, as a perpetual Virgin, to the Service of God, anſwered the whole Purpoſe and Obligation of his Vow.

An Objection.

" BUT, if conſecrating his Daughter to a State of perpetual Virginity was all that " Jephthah intended by making ſo ſolemn a Vow, what Cauſe was there for his " renting his Cloaths, and bemoaning himſelf, as we find he does? Is the being " ſhut up, as a Recluſe, and entered into the Liſt of perpetual Virgins, a Matter of " ſuch bitter Complaint and Lamentation? Was this ſo ſore an Evil, an Affliction " ſo extraordinary, that, not only before ſhe underwent it, ſhe and her Companions " ſhould, for two Months together, be allowed to bewail it, but that (after ſhe had " undergone it) the Daughters of Iſrael ſhould be required to lament it four Times " a Year? If ſhe was actually put to Death, in Execution of her Father's Vow, it " is eaſy then to underſtand, why the particular Circumſtance of her dying without " Iſſue, when ſhe was the only Daughter of her Father, and he had no other Proſpect " of Poſterity to keep up his Family, ſhould be repreſented, as a ſore Aggravation " of her violent and untimely Death; but it ſeems very difficult to account for that " bitter Lamentation made by her Father, by herſelf, by her Companions, and by " all the Daughters of Iſrael, in ſucceeding Times, if ſhe ſuffered no other, no ſe- " verer Puniſhment, than that of being devoted to a ſingle Life †."

Anſwered.

THIS is the great Argument againſt ſuch, as ſuppoſe that this Virgin was really ſacrificed: But to this it is replied, [g] that, from ſeveral Places of the Old Teſtament, it appears, that the being without Children, and conſequently, in perpetual Virginity, was looked upon as a Curſe and Reproach; ſo that it is no way ſtrange to find Jephthah troubled, and renting his Cloaths, when his only Child was to live and die under this Reproach; when he ſaw his Family extinct, (for in her Celibacy he had the ſame Proſpect, as in her Death) and himſelf excluded from all Hopes of Poſterity, and particularly from the Hopes of having the Meſſiah to come of his Seed, which was the general Hope and Deſire of all the Iſraelitiſh Women. It may be alledged, perhaps, that Jephthah had no Right to oblige his Daughter to perpetual Virginity; but then it will follow, that, if the Want of Right to do a Thing be an Argument that the Thing is not done, the more Degrees of Injuſtice and Unlawfulneſs there are in any Thing, the more boldly we may conclude, that it has not been done. If therefore it follows, that Jephthah did not oblige his Daughter to perpetual Virginity, becauſe he had no Right to do ſo, then much more will it be evident, that he did not ſacrifice his Daughter, becauſe ſuch an Action was impious and barbarous, contrary to the Laws of God, of Nature, and Humanity. Her embracing perpetual Virginity, however, was an Act of her free Choice, not inflicted on her againſt her Will, but done with her Conſent, and at her own Entreaty: In which, (ſays [h] the Annotator above-cited) ſhe deſerved greater Commendation than her Father. For he, as ſoon as he ſaw her come to meet him, repented of the Vow, he had raſhly made, and tore his Cloaths, lamenting the miſerable Condition, into which he had brought himſelf, and her: But ſhe moſt courageouſly comforted her Father, and, congratulating his Victory, deſired him not to be troubled about her; for ſhe was ready to ſubmit to what he had vowed.

BUT

[f] Smalridge's Sermons.

† A very learned Prelate of our own, who has examined this Vow of Jephthah to the full, and ſeems plainly to be of the affirmative Side, ſums up his Arguments againſt the contrary Opinion, in theſe Words: " Since therefore this " Explication is novel, and therefore not to be over-haſtily embraced by thoſe, who have a Reverence for Antiquity; " ſince it is chiefly advanced by Popiſh Writers, in Favour of the Doctrine of perpetual Celibacy, and for that Reaſon " juſtly to be ſuſpected by us Proteſtants; ſince, moreover, it renders the Relation of this Matter confuſed, unintelli- " gible, and unaccountable, and for that Cauſe deſerves to be rejected by all, who profeſs an Eſteem and Veneration " for holy Writ; I think we have ſufficient Grounds to conclude, that when it is ſaid in the Text, that Jephthah did " with his Daughter according to the Vow, which he had vowed, we can underſtand no leſs, than that he did actually " put her to Death." This is the unanimous Opinion of the Ancients, and with theſe agree the Compilers of the Homilies of our Church, as to the Subſtance of the Fact, where we read, that Jephthah, when God had given him Victory over the Children of Ammon, promiſed, of a fooliſh Devotion unto God, to offer, for a Sacrifice unto him, that Perſon, which, of his own Houſe, ſhould firſt meet him after his Return home; by Force of which fond and unadviſed Oath, he did ſlay his own and only Daughter, which came out of his Houſe, with Mirth and Joy, to welcome him home. Smalridge's 22d Sermon.

[g] Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible. [h] Lud. de Dieu.

BUT whether it was Death, or perpetual Virginity, to which Jephthah had devoted his Daughter, ſince it is agreed, on all Sides, that his Vow, in itſelf, was unlawful; that his Child was intirely innocent, and had done nothing deſerving ſuch hard Treatment; that her running out to meet him, with Joy and Congratulation, was an Act of Piety, that properly intituled her to his Love; and that his giving her up, either to the Altar or a Cloyſter, either to be ſacrificed, or abdicated from his Preſence and Society for ever, was cruel Uſage to a loving Child, and a Thing abhorrent to the natural Affections of a tender Parent. The Leſſon, we are to learn from the great Imprudence of his Example, is this,——That, tho' * when we vow a Vow unto God, we ſhould not defer to pay it, yet, in Caſes of this Nature, we ſhould not be raſh with our Mouths, nor let our Hearts be haſty to utter any Thing before God.

Samſon's Exploits.

Of the World, 2864, &c. Before Chriſt, 1140, &c.

III. WHETHER Samſon was really the Judge and ſupreme Magiſtrate of Iſrael, or only a Man of great Might, born of an eminent Family, in the Tribe of Dan, as the Jewiſh Writers [i] tell us, and raiſed up by God, when Eli the High-Prieſt had the Civil Adminiſtration, to be a Scourge to the Philiſtines, who, at that Time, ſadly oppreſſed his Countrymen, is a Matter, wherein Commentators are not ſo well agreed. 'Tis certain, that he was a very extraordinary Perſon; for [k] his Birth, we find, was predicted by an Angel, and himſelf ordained, from the Womb, to be a Nazarite unto God.

His Nazaritiſm, of what Kind.

[l] A NAZARITE was one, who, under the Levitical Law, either to attain the Favour, or avert the Judgments, or acknowledge the Mercies of Almighty God, vowed a Vow of Particular Purity, and ſeparated himſelf, (for ſo the Word ſignifies) in an extraordinary Manner, to the Service of God. The Time of this Vow laſted uſually for eight Days; ſometimes for a Month; and, in ſome Caſes, for the Perſon's whole Life. During this Time, the Perſons (for Women, as well as Men, might enter into this Engagement) bound themſelves to abſtain from Wine, and all ſtrong Liquors; not to cut the Hair of their Heads; not to come near a dead Corps, nor aſſiſt at any Funeral; nay, the Matter was carried ſo high, that if any happened to die ſuddenly in their Preſence, the whole Ceremony of this their Separation was to begin a-new. After the Time of their Separation was expired, they were to offer ſuch Sacrifices, as the Law appointed, and then, being abſolved from their Vow by the Prieſts, they might drink Wine, and uſe the ſame Freedom, that other People did.

SAMSON's Nazaritiſm was to laſt the whole Term of his Life: [m] But his frequent Intercourſe with the Philiſtines, and the great Havock and Slaughter, that he ſo often made among them, may induce us to think, that he had a particular Diſpenſation, exempting him from a rigorous Obſervation of the Law: In this one Circumſtance, however, he was very punctual, that, till he was infatuated by Delilah, [n] he ſuffered not a Razor to come upon his Head. What the Adventures and Exploits of his Life were: How, when he grew up, he killed a Lion; ſlew thirty Philiſtines at one Time; at another, no leſs than a Thouſand with the Jaw-bone of an Aſs; burnt their ſtanding Corn with Foxes and Firebrands; carried away the Gates of Gaza; and did many ſtrange and prodigious Things, till, at length, diſcovering to Delilah where his great Strength lay, by her he was betrayed, and delivered into the Hands of his Enemies; who, putting out his Eyes, loaded him with Irons, and ſhut him up in Priſon, till, in Time, (his Strength returning with his Hair) he was ſufficiently avenged by pulling the Houſe of their God Dagon upon them, tho' he himſelf periſhed in the Ruins: Theſe Things are ſo fully recorded in the Book of Judges [o], that there is no Occaſion to relate them here: Only we may take Notice, that (what has been ſo common a Subject of Ridicule) the three hundred Foxes, which Samſon is ſaid to have caught, is not ſo incredible a Thing, as ſome may imagine. For we are to conſider, (as the learned Bochart [p] evinces) that the whole Country, eſpecially that Part of it, which belonged to the Tribe of Dan, abounded ſo with Foxes, [q] that from them ſeveral Places took His Foxes.

* Eccleſ. v. 4, 2. [i] Joſephus and Philo. [k] Vid. Judg. xiii. [l] Vid. Numb. vi. and Calmet's Dictionary. [m] Saurin's Diſſertations, Vol. II. [n] Numb. vi. 5. and Judg. xiii. 5. [o] From Chap. xiii. to Chap. xvi. [p] Hieroz. Lib. iii. c. 13. [q] Judg i. 35. and Joſh. xix. 42.

took their Names: That, under the Name of Foxes, may not improperly be comprehended a Creature, very much like them, called Thoes, which go in ſuch Herds, that two hundred of them have been ſeen together at once; that the Manner of catching them was not (as we imagine) by Hunting only, but by Snares and Nets, as our Author plainly demonſtrates; and that Samſon did not this alone by himſelf, in a Day and a Night's Time; but that, being aſſiſted by his Servants and Neighbours, (as he was a Man of conſiderable Eminence in his Country) he might poſſibly be ſome Weeks in accompliſhing a Deſign, whereby he both injured his Enemy, and benefited his own Country, by freeing it of ſo many noxious Animals; for that poſſibly might be a ſecondary Reaſon for his getting together ſuch a Multitude of Foxes. "How impious then, as well as incongruous is it, ſays our Author, for "Men, who profeſs to believe the divine Authority of the Scriptures, to make a Jeſt "of this Tranſaction; when, at the ſame Time, they both believe and read, with "Admiration, what Pliny tells us, of Lucius Sylla, that when he was Prætor, he "ordered to be ſhewn on the Amphitheatre a thouſand Lions at once; and Julius "Cæſar, when he was Dictator, four Times as many; when they believe, what Vo-"piſcus teſtifies, that the Emperor Probus exhibited, at one Spectacle, a thouſand "Stags, three hundred Bears, an hundred Lybian, an hundred Syrian Leopards, and "an infinite Number of other ſtrange Creatures, and yet are ſtaggered at the Account "of Samſon's taking three hundred Foxes?"

THE like is to be ſaid of his killing a Thouſand Men with the Jaw-Bone of an Aſs; that whatever the Inſtrument be in the Man's Hand, when God inſpires him with Courage againſt thoſe, whom he intimidates, 'tis the ſame Thing: But, in this Caſe 'tis preſumable enough, [r] that the Philiſtines, ſeeing Samſon, firſt [s] break the Cords, wherewith he was bound, ſo eaſily and ſuddenly, and then coming upon them with ſo much Fury, might be put into no ſmall Confuſion, and, ſtraggling about in their Flight, give him the Advantage of ſlaying them one by one, as he came up to them, till they amounted to the Number of a Thouſand. This indeed is the higheſt Inſtance of Perſonal Proweſs, that we read of, and yet profane Hiſtorians inform us of other Men, who by their mere natural Courage, unaſſiſted by any divine Power, (as the Scripture informs us Samſon was) have made great Havock among their Enemies. For [t] the above-cited Author reports, that, in the Sarmatick War, Aurelian ſlew forty-eight Men in one Day, and in ſeveral Days, [u] nine hundred and fifty; which diminiſhes the Wonder not a little, that a Man, aſſiſted by God, who could raiſe his Powers to what Degree he pleaſed, and equally enfeeble the Spirits of thoſe that were his Adverſaries, ſhould be able to deſtroy ſo many.

Killing ſo many with the Jaw-Bone of an Aſs.

* WHETHER Samſon's Hair was the Phyſical, or only the Moral Cauſe of his Strength, needs not, I think, be made any Queſtion. For, though Plenty of Hair may be a natural Indication of bodily Strength; yet ſince he, that is naturally ſtrong, becomes not leſs ſo by having his Hair cut off, (though this was certainly the Caſe of Samſon) it muſt follow, that his Hair was no natural Cauſe of his Strength, which was a ſupernatural and miraculous Gift, [x] not, perhaps, always inherent in him, but only diſpenſed at certain Times, when the Spirit of God came upon him. [y] It depended indeed on the Covenant, made between God and him, the Sign of which Covenant was his Hair; and therefore when, in Compliance to his Harlot, he ſuffered his Hair to be cut off, he broke the Covenant with God, and forfeiting the Spirit of Strength and Courage, was left to his own natural Weakneſs, and ſo became an eaſy Prey to his Enemies.

And his Strength in his Hair accounted for.

WHAT Reſemblance ſoever there may be imagined between the Perfidy of Delilah, and that, [z] which is fabled of the Daughter of Niſus, King of Megara, the Fate of whoſe Empire depended upon one particular Hair of his Head, which ſhe enamoured with his Enemy Minos, then beſieging him in his Capital, impiouſly cut off, and ſent for a Preſent, to engage his Affections to her: Whatever there is in this, I ſay, there is certainly ſo near a Similitude between the Heathen Hercules, and the Jewiſh Samſon, that, in all Probability, they were one and the ſame Perſon. And, to this Purpoſe, ſome Criticks have obſerved, that not only [a] their Names, [b] their Epithets, and the Time of their Appearance in the World were much the ſame, but that Samſon's killing a Lion, ſlaying the Philiſtines, carrying away the Gates of Gaza, &c. were exemplified in other Inſtances by Hercules; and above all, that the predominant Paſſion of their Complexions, an immoderate Love for Women, was in both the ſame, attended with the ſame Effects, and the ſame ſad Cataſtrophe in both; that which tarniſhed the Glory of both their great Exploits, and brought them both, at laſt, to an untimely End. And therefore to conclude theſe Reflections, in the Words of the wiſe Man, [c] Hearken unto me, ſays he, O ye Children, and attend unto the Words of my Mouth. Let not thine Heart lead thee to the Ways of a ſtrange Woman, even of a Stranger, who flattereth with her Mouth, which forſaketh the Guide of her Youth, and forgetteth the Covenant of her God; for her Houſe inclineth unto Death, and her Paths unto the Dead. With fair Words ſhe will cauſe thee to yield; with the Flattery of her Lips ſhe will force thee; thou ſhalt go after her ſtraightway, as an Ox goeth to the Slaughter, and as a Fool to the Correction of the Stocks; but none, that go unto her, return again, neither take they hold of the Paths of Life; for ſhe hath caſt down many wounded, and many ſtrong Men have been ſlain by her.

Samſon and Hercules compared.

[r] Patrick's Commentary on Judg. xv. [s] Vid. Judg. xv. 14, &c. [t] Vopiſcus. [u] Upon this Occaſion the Boys made a Song (not much unlike what Samſon made of himſelf, Judg. xv. 16.) which, after a military Manner, they ſhouted in their Dances, mille, mille, mille, mille, mille, mille decollavimus unus homo; mille, mille, mille, mille decollavimus. Mille, mille, mille vivat, qui mille, mille occidit. Tantum vini habet nemo, quantum effudit ſanguinis. * Calmet's Dict. [x] Vid. Patrick's Commentary. [y] Collier's Introduction. [z] Vid. Ovid's Metam. Lib. VIII.

Of Samuel and the Prophets.

Of the World, 2904, &c. Before Chriſt, 1100, &c.

DURING the Adminiſtration of Eli, the Affairs of Iſrael ran into great Diſorders. His two Sons, Hophni and Phinehas, led very looſe and irregular Lives; himſelf, by reaſon of his Age, had loſt all Power and Authority over them; the Philiſtines had vanquiſhed their Armies in the Field, and, when the Ark of the Covenant was brought into the Camp, in Hopes, [d] that it ſhould ſave them from the Hand of their Enemies, their Enemies ſtill prevailed againſt them; ſlew thirty thouſand of them in a pitched Battle, and took the Ark of the Covenant at the ſame Time. How the Ark of the Covenant was removed from Eben-ezer to Aſhdod, from Aſhdod to Gath, from Gath to Ekron, and all along carried heavy Judgments and Deſtruction to the Places, where it came, 'till, at length, the Philiſtines were glad to get rid of it, and ſent it back honourably to the Children of Iſrael; all theſe Particulars are ſo fully recorded in [e] the firſt Book of Samuel, that it were in vain to pretend to enlarge upon them: Only we may obſerve, [f] that it was a Cuſtom among the [g] ancient Heathens, to conſecrate unto their Gods ſuch Monuments of their Deliverances, as repreſented the Evils, from which they were freed; ſo the Philiſtines, hoping ſhortly to be delivered from the Emrods and Mice, wherewith they were ſorely afflicted, during the Stay of the Ark among them, ſent the Images of theſe Things to the God of Iſrael: [h] If peradventure (as their Prieſts adviſed them) he will lighten his Hand from off you, and from off your Gods, and from off your Lands.

The Schools of the Prophets inſtituted by Samuel.

AFTER the Death of Eli, the Government came into the Hands of Samuel, who judged the People for twenty Years: But as he was a Prophet, as well as a Governor, 'tis in this Light, that, at preſent, we conſider him; and ſhall hence take Occaſion to add ſomething to what we have ſaid, [i] in the Beginning of this Work, concerning thoſe Schools, or Colleges of the Prophets, which, in all Probability, were of his Inſtitution. [k] Some of the modern Jews indeed carry the Account of theſe Schools much higher, than they have any Authority for, pretending to trace them to Abraham, to Noah, to Seth, nay, even to Adam himſelf: But though it be granted, that the Spirit of Prophecy did, more or leſs, reſide among the Patriarchs, and others, from the earlieſt Ages; yet we meet with no Inſtance in Scripture of any Society formed, or Method of Education inſtituted, in order to attain it, but what was of much later Date. The firſt Mention indeed, that we have of this, is, when Saul is ſaid to meet, and join himſelf to [l] a Company of Prophets, at the Hill of [a] The Word Samſon means the Sun, and Hercules is derived from the two Words Our and Coll, which ſignify all Light. [b] The Perſians call Hercules Sandes, which ſignifies terrible, which exactly agrees with Samſon. Saurin's Diſſertations, Vol. II. [c] Prov. ii. 16. and vii. 21, &c. [d] 1 Sam. iv. 3. [e] Ch. vi. and vii. [f] Patrick's Commentary on 1 Sam. vi. 4. [g] That this is ſtill a Practice among the modern Indians, we may obſerve, from what Tavernier relates, in his Travels to their Country, viz. That, when any Pilgrim goes to a Pagod, for the Cure of any Diſeaſe, he brings the Figure of the Member affected made either of Gold, Silver, or Copper, according to his Quality; which he offers to his God, and then falls a ſinging, as the Cuſtom is. [h] 1 Sam. vi. 5. [i] Vid. p. 28. [k] Vid. Jacob. Alting, de Republicâ Hebræorum, and Abenda, of the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Polity of the Jews. [l] 1 Sam. x. 5. 10.

of God, as they came down from the High Place, with Muſick before them. [m] What the Text expreſſes, by a Company of Prophets, moſt Commentators, both Jewiſh and Chriſtian, agree to interpret of a Society of Students, devoting themſelves to the Attainment of Prophecy. Where, and what the Hill of God was, is diſputed by Interpreters; but the moſt probable Conjecture is, that it was in Gibeah of Benjamin, the Place where Saul's Father dwelt, and that it was called the Hill of God, both becauſe it was an high Place, whereon the People were uſed to offer Sacrifice, as alſo becauſe here dwelt a Company of Prophets, who had addicted themſelves to the Service of God. After this we read of a like [n] Company of Prophets at Naioth, in Ramah, propheſying with Samuel, who ſtood as appointed over them; of the Sons of the Prophets, who were [o] at Bethel; of others [p] at Jericho; of others [q] at Gilgal; and of others [r] at Jeruſalem: So that it ſeems as if they were diſperſed about all the Cities of the Iſraelites, that they might be every where at hand, to inſtruct and admoniſh them. Nay, ſo very numerous were they in the Days of Ahab, that [s] one good Man (Obadiah by Name) is ſaid to have hid an hundred of them, by fifty in a Cave, to preſerve them from Jezabel's Perſecution, even after ſhe had taken off their main Body.

Their Manner of Life and Education.

IN theſe ſeveral Places the Prophets had convenient Colleges built for their Abode; and, living in Communities, had ſome one of diſtinguiſhed Note, very probably by Divine Election, ſet over them, to be their Head and Preſident. Here it was that they ſtudied the Law, and learned to expound the ſeveral Precepts of it: Here it was, that, by previous Exerciſe, they qualified themſelves for the Reception of the Spirit of Prophecy, whenever it ſhould pleaſe God to ſend it upon them: But (what is the moſt remarkable Part of their Employment) here it was, that they were inſtructed in the ſacred Art of Pſalmody, or (as the Scripture calls it) in [t] propheſying with Harps, with Pſalteries, and Cymbals; and the End of their uſing ſo much Muſick, was, to keep themſelves continually in ſuch a due Temper of Mind, as might the better diſpoſe them for the Divine Breathings of the Prophetick Spirit, which being of a mild, free, and gentle Nature, would not conſort with Sadneſs, or Melancholy, or turbulent Paſſions, but always choſe an eaſy, calm, and chearful Diſpoſition.

FROM theſe Schools of the Prophets, when any Bleſſings were to be promiſed, any Judgments to be denounced, or ſome extraordinary Event to be predicted, the Meſſengers were generally choſen, as being, by their preparatory Exerciſe and Diſcipline, more ſuſceptible of the Divine Impulſe: And tho' Amos declares of himſelf, that he [u] was neither a Prophet, nor a Prophet's Son, but an Herdman, and Gatherer of Sycamore Fruit, when the Lord appointed him to that Office; yet this ſeems to be a particular Caſe; becauſe, generally ſpeaking, the Prophets, of whom we have any Remains in ſacred Record, have diſcovered themſelves to be Men of a good Education. The Elegance of Iſaiah, the Rhetorick of Jeremiah, and the Skill of Ezekiel in Architecture and Geography are very remarkable; nor is there any Ground to imagine, that theſe Endowments were inſpired, or that they received them together with the extraordinary Influence or Operations of the Spirit, ſince * it appears, by the Practice of Daniel in particular, that even thoſe, who were actually endued with the Holy Ghoſt, ſtill uſed the ſame Diligence, or rather more than before, to gain what Knowledge and Aſſiſtance they could, by the Uſe and Help of ordinary Means: And this ſeems to point out the Reaſon, why St Paul adviſes Timothy, a Man extraordinarily endowed with the Gift of the Spirit, and marked out by Prophecy as one, that would prove eminent in the Work of the Miniſtry, [x] to give Attendance to Reading, to Exhortation, and to Doctrine; and why St Paul himſelf, who could boaſt of Viſions, and Revelations, and of ſpiritual Gifts, beyond all the Apoſtles, writes to Timothy to bring him his [y] Book-caſe, (for [z] ſo the Word φαιλόνης ſhould be rendered) his Books, and his Parchments, or Common-place-book; becauſe he wanted to make Uſe of them, as never thinking that his Abundance of ſpiritual Gifts ſuperſeded all Neceſſity to ſtudy.

SECT.

[m] Wheatly, on the Schools of the Prophets. [n] 1 Sam. xix. 20. [o] 2 Kings ii. 3. [p] Ibid. ii. 5. [q] Ibid. iv. 38. [r] Ibid. xxii. 14. [s] 1 Kings xviii. [t] 1 Chron. xxv. 7. [u] Amos vii. 14. * Vid. Dan. ix. 21, 22, 23. and Chap. x. 11, 21. [x] 1 Tim. iv. 13. [y] 2 Tim. iv. 13. [z] I am very ſenſible, that, in our Engliſh Tranſlation, it is called a Cloak; but it may as well be interpreted a Book-Caſe, or Scriptore. Phavorinus is of Opinion, that it ſignifies folded Vellum, or Parchment; and therefore Dr Hammond thinks it all one with the μεμβρανα, mentioned afterwards, becauſe the μάλιστα δὲ, but more eſpecially, ſeems to denote ſomething mentioned before. Hammond, in locum.

SECT. IV.

Saul and his Actions.

Of the World, 2944, &c. Before Christ, 1060, &c.

THE Miſconduct of Samuel's Sons, whom he had appointed to be Judges of Iſrael, gave the People a fair Pretence to demand a King to be ſet over them, as other neighbouring Nations had; and God ſo far complied with their Requeſt (tho' [a] with ſome Signification of his Diſpleaſure) as to order Samuel to anoint Saul, the Son of Kiſh, [b] a Man of a tall and majeſtick Stature and Appearance, but not ſo well qualified, in his Mind, to ſuſtain that important Office. For though in the Beginning of his Reign, in two or three Actions, he behaved himſelf very well; yet he ſoon forgot his Duty to the God, who had raiſed him to that high Honour, and in the Matter of his ſparing Agag, and the beſt of the Spoil, contrary to his expreſs Command, provoked him to that Degree, that his Prophet is commiſſioned to tell him, that, becauſe he had rejected the Word of the Lord, the Lord had rejected him from being King over Iſrael; and had given his Kingdom to a Neighbour of his, that was better than he.

THIS ill News made ſuch an Impreſſion upon Saul, that it was not long before he fell into a deep Melancholy. The Scripture expreſſes it, by an evil Spirit's being ſent by the Lord to trouble him; but this Spirit (according to Joſephus and others) was no more than a Mind, ſadly diſtracted with the ſeveral Paſſions of Jealouſy, Envy, Grief, Deſpair, Anger, and other Anxieties, which, [c] in the Opinion of many learned Writers upon the Subject, are often known to be diſſipated and appeaſed by Muſick; and accordingly the Text tells us, that, when the evil Spirit from the Lord was upon Saul, David, who was an excellent Muſician, took an Harp, and played with his Hand; and Saul was refreſhed, and was well.

HOW ungratefully Saul requited David for all his good Offices, eſpecially for his defending, in ſeveral Engagements, his Throne with the manifeſt Hazard of his Life, is ſo particularly related in [d] the firſt Book of Samuel, that thither we may refer our Reader, who, as he cannot but ſuppoſe, that ſuch wicked Proceedings could never be attended with the Bleſſing of God; ſo will he ſoon find this malicious and bloody-minded King, reduced to the laſt Extremity, forſaken by God, and betaking himſelf to the Powers of Darkneſs for Counſel and Relief. For this is what the Text informs us, that [e] when Saul enquired of the Lord, and the Lord anſwered him not, neither by Dreams, nor by Urim, nor by Prophets, then ſaid he unto his Servants, Seek me out a Woman that hath a familiar Spirit, that I may go to her, and enquire of her. His Servants accordingly inform him where there was one; and he, putting on a proper Diſguiſe, went to her, and requeſted of her to bring up Samuel, who had been dead for ſome Time: But whether it was really Samuel, or only a Cheat and Deception of the Woman; or, if it was Samuel, whether he was made to appear by her Incantations, and the Power of the Devil, or by the Interpoſition of Divine Providence only, are Queſtions, that have long exerciſed the Pens of the Learned.

Saul and the Witch of Endor.

Of the World, 2950, &c. Before Christ, 1054, &c.

THOSE who imagine that the Whole was a Cheat and a Juggle of the Woman, take Notice, [f] that the ſacred Story never once makes Mention of Saul's ſeeing Samuel

[a] 1 Sam. viii. 7. [b] This was reckoned ſo neceſſary a Qualification in a King, that the Lacedæmonians (as Plutarch tells us in the Beginning of his Book περὶ παιδῶν ἀγωγῆς) ſet a Fine upon their King Archidamus for marrying a Wife of a low Stature, who was likely to bring them, οὐ βασιλέας ἀλλὰ βασιλίσκους, not Kings, but Kinglings, to reign over them. And therefore remarkable are the Words in Pliny's Panegyrick to Trajan, "That the Strength and "Tallneſs of his Body, the Nobleneſs of his Aſpect, the Dignity of his Countenance, the Gracefulneſs of his Speech, "&c. longè lateque, Principem oſtentant, do every where proclaim a Prince." [c] All Authors are full of the Praiſe of the Power of Muſick, both to ſtir up Paſſions, and to allay them, according to the ſeveral Kinds of it. Athenæus [Lib. XIV.] praiſes it for the Virtue that is in it, to regulate Men's Manners, and to calm and ſoften the furious, and thoſe that are diſturbed in Mind. Gerh. Voſſius [in his Book De Artibus Popularibus, c. 3.] ſhews how Diſeaſes of the Body have been cured by Muſick, as well as thoſe of the Mind. Bochart reckons up many famous Artiſts among the Ancients, beſides Orpheus and Amphion, that are celebrated, not only by Poets, but by very good Hiſtorians, for their wonderful Skill in moving Men's Paſſions by Muſick: And (to name no more) the great Eraſmus hath obſerved the Force of Muſick, in curing Diſeaſes, and quite altering the Paſſions of Men's Minds, in his Preface to Arnobius upon the Pſalms. Patrick's Commentary on 1 Sam. xvi. 23. [d] From Chap. xviii. to Chap. xxvii. [e] 1 Sam. xxviii. 6, 7. [f] Scot and Webſter upon Witchcraft.

Samuel with his own Eyes. It tells us indeed, that he knew him by the Deſcription which the Woman gave, and that he held ſome conſiderable Diſcourſe with him; but, ſince it is no where ſaid, that he really ſaw him, "Why might not the Woman counterfeit a Voice, and pretend it was Samuel's? When he told her, he would have Samuel brought up to him, ſhe might withdraw from his Preſence into her Cloſet, or Cell, and there having her Familiar, i. e. ſome crafty confederate Knave, to aſſiſt her in making proper Reſponſes, might eaſily impoſe upon one, who was diſtracted with uneaſy Thoughts, and had already ſhewn ſufficient Credulity, in thinking there was any Efficacy in magical Operations to evocate the Dead."

That Samuel's Appearance was real.

BUT, [g] beſides that we find no Mention of a Cloſet, or any other Place, whereinto the Sorcereſs might retire, in order to impoſe upon Saul, 'tis very plain, from the whole Narration, that he actually did ſee Samuel; not ſo ſoon as the Woman did, we own, becauſe probably the Woman's Body, or ſome other Object, might interpoſe between him, and the firſt Appearance; but that he did ſee him is manifeſt, becauſe, when, perceiving (which Word in the Original ſignifies ſeeing ſo, as to be aſſured of our Object) that it was Samuel himſelf, he ſtooped with his Face to the Ground, and bowed himſelf, which a Man is not apt to do to bare Ideas, or Imaginations, and much leſs, a Perſon of Saul's undaunted Courage, to a Creature of a ſilly Woman's Contrivance. For whatever uneaſy Thoughts the King might be under, as to the Event of the enſuing Battle, 'tis plain, that, upon this Occaſion, he had not loſt his Preſence of Mind. His Words to the Pythoneſs, Bring up Samuel to me, manifeſtly ſhew, that he had no Apprehenſion of Fear from the Thought of ſeeing him; and, when the Woman was frightened, and ſhrieked at the Sight of the Apparition, 'tis evident, that Saul was not; for he bids her not be afraid, and deſires to know what it was that occaſioned her Conſternation. The whole Tenor of his Diſcourſe with Samuel indeed is a ſufficient Indication, that he was under no Deliquium or Diſturbance of Mind at this Interview; but that the Woman ſhould be ſurprized, and cry out, with a loud Voice, when ſhe ſaw Samuel appear, or that the Sight of him ſhould convince her, that the Perſon, who was come to conſult her, was the King, is no Wonder at all. For though, at firſt, ſhe might not ſuſpect it, from his requiring her to raiſe up Samuel; yet when, without the Aid of Incantations, Samuel appeared, ſhe might well be amazed and affrightened. [h] She ſaw an Apparition, ſhe did not expect; ſhe knew the Prophet; ſhe knew the Veneration Saul had for him; ſhe knew that Prophets were only ſent to Kings; ſhe knew, the poor deluded Mortals, ſhe had to do with, had no Notion of having any Commerce with Perſons of a ſacred Character, and ſhe knew her Art (whatever that was) had never exhibited a Perſon of that Figure to her; ſo that, as ſoon as ſhe ſaw him, the Importance of his Appearance, and the Relation he had to Saul, brought the King preſently to her Mind, and with him, her Fears; and, that this was the true Cauſe of her crying out, is plainly intimated by what ſhe ſays, Why haſt thou deceived me? Thou art Saul.

THERE was undoubtedly then ſomething more in this Tranſaction, than a bare Contrivance of the Woman to impoſe upon Saul; [i] ſince, be the Apparition what it will, it certainly foretold him more, than any human Penetration could find out. [k] Becauſe thou obeyedſt not the Voice of the Lord, nor executedſt his fierce Wrath upon Amalek; therefore the Lord will deliver Iſrael, and thee, into the Hand of the Philiſtines, and to-morrow ſhalt thou, and thy Sons, be with me. The Lord alſo ſhall deliver the Hoſt of Iſrael into the Hand of the Philiſtines: In which Words, there are three ſeveral Predictions; the firſt, concerning the Victory of the Philiſtines over the Iſraelites; the Lord ſhall deliver Iſrael and thee into the Hand of the Philiſtines; the ſecond, concerning the Death of Saul and his two Sons; to-morrow thou and thy Sons ſhall be with me; and the third, concerning the Plunder, and Advantage, which the Enemy ſhould make of their Victory; the Lord ſhall deliver the Hoſt of Iſrael into the Hand of the Philiſtines: And, accordingly, if we attend to the Sequel of the Hiſtory, we ſhall find, that exactly thus it came to paſs. For [l] when the Philiſtines fought againſt Iſrael, ſays the Text, the Men of Iſrael fled before them; this is the Accompliſhment of the firſt Prediction: [m] The Philiſtines followed hard upon Saul, and upon his Sons, and they ſlew Jonathan, and Aminadab, and Malchiſhua, his Sons, whilſt himſelf fell upon his own Sword; this is the Accompliſhment of the Second: [n] And when the Men of Iſrael, that were on the other Side of the Valley, and they that were on the other Side Jordan, ſaw, that the Men of Iſrael fled, and that Saul and his Sons were dead, they forſook the Cities, and fled, and the Philiſtines came and dwelt in them; this is the Accompliſhment of the Third: Nor were ever Predictions more clearly expreſſed, or more exactly fulfilled; which is enough to convince us, that there was ſomething more than human Foreſight concerned in them both Ways. The Truth is, had there been only the Witch and her Accomplice concerned in this Affair, 'tis certain, that they, knowing nothing of Futurity, can only be ſuppoſed to have ventured at a bold Conjecture; and, if they ventured to gueſs only, it ſeems more conſiſtent to Reaſon, that they ſhould have propheſied grateful and pleaſant Things to the afflicted King. [o] The Woman, by her courteous Entertainment of the King, and according to the Character, which Joſephus gives of her, ſeems to be a Perſon of no bad Nature; and therefore it is improbable, that either ſhe or her Confederate ſhould agree to lay an additional Load of Trouble and Deſperation upon him, when he was in ſuch Diſtreſs before. It is improbable, [*] that a little contemptible Juggler, or a poor daſtardly Woman, ſhould ever dare to treat the King of Iſrael with that Air of Superiority and Contumely, wherewith Samuel treats Saul upon this Occaſion. It is improbable, that any ſuch Impoſtor ſhould be ſo zealous (as we find Samuel here was) for a ſtrict Obſervance of the Commands of God, and ſo rigid in pronouncing divine Vengeance upon the Violation of them.

[g] Glanvil's Sadduciſmus Triumphatus. [h] Hiſtorical Account of the Life of David, Vol. I. [i] Saurin's Diſſertations, Vol. II. [k] 1 Sam. xxviii. 18, 19. [l] Ibid. xxxi. 1. [m] Ibid. ver. 2.

[†] EVERY one knows, that the Buſineſs of Impoſtors is to flatter, to delude, to deceive, to anſwer doubtfully, to promiſe Good, and put off the Evil: And therefore it was the Woman's Province, in a particular Manner, to act her Part in this Matter. Had ſhe promiſed Saul Victory, and the Succeſs had anſwered, ſhe was then ſure of conſiderable Advantage: Had the Fate of the Day turned againſt him, and he himſelf been ſlain in Battle, all then was ſafe: As no one was privy to the Affair, the Falſhood of the Prediction, upon his Death and Defeat, muſt of Courſe have been buried with him: Nay, had he eſcaped, and yet been worſted, her foretelling Succeſs would have paſſed for an Indication of her good Will, and good Wiſhes to the King, and his People, and ſo have been overlooked; whereas by prognoſticating Evil to the Royal Family, if the Event did not juſtify and ſave her, ſhe ran a manifeſt Hazard of being undone for ever.

And occaſioned not by the Power of the Devil, but by the Appointment of God.

FOR theſe, and ſeveral other Reaſons that might be produced, we think it evident, that there was no Cheat and Impoſture in this Appearance of Samuel, as it is recorded in Scripture; but [p] then, whether it was effected by a diabolical Power, or by the ſole Appointment of Divine Providence, is a farther Queſtion, that deſerves to be conſidered. Some of the [q] Fathers of the Chriſtian Church were of Opinion, that the Devil had a certain limited Power over the Souls of the Saints, before Jeſus Chriſt deſcended into Hell, and reſcued them from the Hands of that Prince of Darkneſs. [r] St Auſtin, in particular, thinks there is no more Abſurdity in ſaying, that the Devil was as able to call up Samuel's Soul, as he was to preſent himſelf among the Sons of God, or to ſet our Saviour on one of the Pinacles of the Temple.

[s] A LEARNED Doctor of the Jewiſh Church ſeems to be perſuaded, that Devils have ſuch Power over human Souls, for the Space of a Year after their Departure, that they can make them aſſume what Bodies they pleaſe; whereupon he ſuppoſes, that it was not a Year from the Time of Samuel's Death to his Appearance. But theſe are wild and extravagant Fancies, not deſerving a ſerious Confutation. [t] 'Tis abſurd to ſay, that the Souls of Saints (ſuch as we are now ſpeaking of) were ever in Hell; and more abſurd to ſay, that, if they are in Heaven, it is in the Power of any magical Incantations to call them down from thence. Great, without all Doubt, is the Power of Apoſtate Angels; but miſerable, we may ſay, would the State of the Bleſſed be, if they had any Licenſe to diſturb the other's Happineſs, when, and as long as they pleaſed: God forbid then, ſays [u] Tertullian, that we ſhould believe the Soul of any holy Man, much leſs of a Prophet, ſhould be ſo far under his Diſpoſal, as to be brought up, at Pleaſure, by the Power of the Devil. It cannot be denied indeed, that the Devil's Knowledge is vaſtly ſuperior to that of the moſt accompliſhed human Underſtanding; that his natural Penetration, joined with his long Experience, is ſuch, that the greateſt Philoſophers, the ſubtleſt Criticks, the moſt refined Politicians, or the moſt profound [n] 1 Sam. xxxi. 7. [o] Glanvil's Sadduciſmus Triumphatus. [*] Hiſtorical Account of the Life of King David, Vol. I. [†] Ibid. [p] Calmet's Dictionary, on the Word Samuel. [q] Juſtin Mart. in Dial. cum. Tryph. and Origen in 1 Reg. Cap. xxviii. [r] De Diver. Quæſt. Lib. II. Q. 4. [s] R. Manaſ. Ben. Iſrael, de Reſurrectione Mortuorum, L. III. c. 6. [t] Saurin's Diſſertations, Vol. II. [u] De Animâ, c. 57.

profound Divines, are but mere Novices, in Compariſon of him; yet what Genius (however exalted and improved) without a Divine Revelation, can be able to foretel Things, that were lodged in God's own Breaſt, viz. the preciſe Time of two Armies engaging, the Succeſs and Conſequence of the Victory, and the very Names of the Perſons, that were to fall in the Battle. This is what the Apparition plainly revealed to Saul; and yet this, we dare to maintain, is more, than any finite Underſtanding, by its own mere Sagacity, will ever be able to find out. None, but God himſelf, could reveal this Secret; * none but he is capable of ſeeing into Futurity, and of pronouncing upon it: And therefore we find the Prophet Iſaiah giving this Challenge to all falſe Gods and Devils: Let them bring forth, and ſhew us what ſhall happen: Let them ſhew the former Things, what they be that we may conſider them: Let them declare the Things, that are to come hereafter, that we may know that they are Gods: Which plainly implies, that the Fore-knowledge of future Events is an incommunicable Attribute and Prerogative of the true God only.

UPON the whole therefore, we may conclude, that the moſt natural, and indeed the moſt probable Opinion is——That it was the real Soul of Samuel, cloathed in ſome viſible Form, that was ſent to the King of Iſrael, not upon the Call of any magical Operations, but by the Order and Appointment of Almighty God, to tell him his Doom, and pronounce that Sentence upon him, which afterwards came to paſs. To this Purpoſe we may obſerve, that, through the whole Narration, Samuel is the only Thing that is mentioned. [y] 'Tis Samuel, whom Saul deſires to be called up; Samuel, who appeared to the Woman; Samuel, whom the Woman deſcribes; Samuel, whom Saul perceives and bows himſelf to, with whom he converſes ſo long, and, becauſe of whoſe Words, he was afterwards ſo ſore afraid. The Scripture indeed, we own, ſpeaks often according to the Miſapprehenſions of Men; but when it is ſo, there is uſually ſomething in the Context, or Nature of the Thing, that leads us to make this Judgment, which cannot, I think, be pretended in the Caſe now before us, becauſe we find the wiſe Son of Sirach (an excellent Interpreter of Canonical Scripture) telling us expreſsly, that Samuel, after his Death, propheſied and ſhewed the King his End. Unleſs there were therefore a cogent Reaſon to the contrary, the plain and literal Senſe of the Words muſt here be admitted.

An Objection.

" BUT is there not Reaſon enough to the contrary, may ſome ſay, when the very " Text tells us, that Saul was become ſo reprobate a Man, that God had wholly " withdrawn himſelf from him; [z] would neither anſwer him by Prophets, nor by " Dreams, nor by Urim and Thummim: And can we imagine, that he would ſend " Samuel to him from the Dead, (or that Samuel would be ſo ready to come, and that " at the Call of a Witch) when he would not favour him with any Revelation from " a living Prophet, or any other Method of Enquiry?" That the Souls of Men departed have Life, and Senſe, and Motion; have a Capacity, and, no doubt, an Inclination to be employed in the Service of Men alive, as having the ſame Nature and Affections, and being more ſenſible of our Infirmities, than any pure and abſtracted Spirits are, can hardly be conteſted; that, in their abſent State, they are embodied with aërial or ætherial Vehicles, which they can condenſe, or rarify at Pleaſure, and ſo appear, or not appear, to human Sight, is what ſome of the greateſt Men, both of the Heathen and [a] Chriſtian Religion, have evinced; and that frequent Apparitions of this Kind have happened, ſince the World began, cannot be denied by any one, that is converſant in its Hiſtory. But, at the ſame Time that we aſſert all this, and are verily perſuaded, that the Apparation of Samuel was no fictitious Thing, we utterly deny, that it was any Ways occaſioned by the Woman's magical Incantations. [b] It was indeed ſent immediately from God: And for this Reaſon perhaps, we find the Woman ſtruck with Horror and Amazement, (as we ſaid before) becauſe the Prophet might appear contrary to her Expectation, and before ſhe had performed her Spells.

Anſwered.

HAD the Prophet appeared to give Saul Comfort and Conſolation in his Affliction, this might have been thought a favourable Vouchſafement of God; but, when he appeared to the very contrary Purpoſe, it ſeems to be rather an Inſtance of his continued Diſpleaſure, and a Judgment perhaps, to which his Juſtice was farther provoked by this his freſh Sin, in dealing with a Sorcereſs. Since the Wiſdom of God however

* An Hiſtorical Account of the Life of King David, Vol. I.

[y] 1 Sam. xxviii. 11, &c.

[z] Ibid. xxviii. 6.

[a] This our learned Dr Cudworth and Dr More have largely ſhewn to be conſonant to the Doctrine of the greateſt Philoſophers, and moſt ancient and learned Fathers, as well as agreeable both to the Scriptures and Reaſon. Glanvil's Sadduciſmus Triumphatus.

[b] Ibid.

however thought proper to diſpatch a Meſſenger to him upon this Occaſion, there is ſome Reaſon to be given, why the Soul of Samuel ſhould be thought moſt proper, and (upon the Suppoſition it were left to his Option) ſhould rather be deſirous to be ſent upon that Errand. Samuel, in his Life-time, had denounced God's Judgments againſt Saul, for his Diſobedience to the divine Command, in the Caſe of Amalek; and, when he did ſo, we are informed, that he was * clad in a Mantle; and therefore it cannot but be thought expedient, that he, more eſpecially, ſhould now be ſent to repeat, and ratify the Sentence then denounced, and, to ſtrike him with fuller Conviction, (as ſome † obſerve) ſhould appear in the ſame Dreſs, the ſame Mantle, in which he had denounced that Sentence before.

HOWEVER this be, 'tis certain, whatever may be ſaid in Diminution of Saul's religious Character, that he was a brave Prince and Commander; had lived in a ſtrict Intimacy with Samuel, profeſſed a great Eſteem for him in all Things, and was by Samuel [c] not a little lamented, when he had fallen from his Obedience to God. Upon theſe Conſiderations we may imagine, that the Soul of Samuel might have ſuch a Kindneſs for him, as to be ready to appear to him in the Depth of his Diſtreſs, in order to ſettle his Mind, by telling him plainly the Upſhot of the whole Matter, viz. that he ſhould loſe the Battle, and he and his Sons be ſlain, that ſo he might give a Specimen (as the Jews love to ſpeak) of the braveſt Valour, that ever was atchieved by any Commander, in that he would not ſuffer his Country to be over-run by the Enemy, while he was alive, without Reſiſtance; but, though he knew certainly he ſhould fail of Succeſs, and he and his Sons die in the Fight, yet in ſo juſt and honourable a Cauſe, as the Defence of his Crown and Country, would give the Enemy Battle in the Field, and ſacrifice his own Life for the Safety of the People: Which gave Occaſion to David, in the Lamentation, which he makes over him, and over Jonathan his Son, to expreſs himſelf in theſe Terms; [d] the Beauty of Iſrael is ſlain upon the High Places; how are the Mighty fallen! From the Blood of the ſlain, from the Fat of the Mighty, the Bow of Jonathan turned not back, and the Sword of Saul turned not empty; how are the Mighty fallen in the Midſt of the Battle!

Of the Actions of David and Solomon.

His ſlaying Goliah.

DAVID was much about fifteen Years old, when Samuel privately anointed him King of Iſrael, after God had rejected the Houſe of Saul, and intended to make him his Succeſſor. There is one remarkable Action however, among many more, preceding his Reign, but after his Anointment, which muſt not be paſſed by without ſome Obſervation, and that is [e] his killing Goliah in ſo wonderful a Manner. For, while the Iſraelites and Philiſtines were encamped near each other, there came every Day, out of the Camp of the Philiſtines, a Champion of a prodigious Size, to challenge any in the Camp of Iſrael, that durſt engage him in ſingle Combat. Offended at this inſolent Challenger, and ſeeing his Men all fearful and diſmayed, the King made publick Proclamation, that whoever ſhould encounter and ſlay him, ſhould be amply rewarded; [f] ſhould have the King's Daughter in Marriage, and for ever be exempted from paying any Taxes or Tribute, juſt as David was coming to the Camp, to bring his Brethren ſome Proviſion; [g] for, in thoſe Days, the Cuſtom was for Men to go to War at their own Expence. David ſeeing the Champion, and hearing the Conditions of the Victory, was moved by a divine Impulſe to accept of the Challenge: But with what ſtrange Diſparity did the two Combatants meet! The Philiſtine, a Man of gigantick Stature, inured to War from his Youth, and with Arms and Armour proportionable: The Iſraelite, a young Stripling, accuſtomed to a Shepherd's Life, and without any Weapon, but a Sling and a Stone; and yet ſuch was the Direction of Divine Providence, that the Stone, when ſlung, [h] ſmote the Philiſtine on his Forehead, and ſunk into it: So that David prevailed over him with a Sling and a Stone. It would be injurious to the Power and Glory of God, to exclude him from an Action of this Importance, or otherwiſe we might ſay, that, upon a probable Suppoſition or two, all the Stupendiouſneſs of it would vaniſh, and nothing

* 1 Sam. xv. 27. † Hiſtorical Account of the Life of King David, Vol. I. [c] 1 Sam. xvi. 1.
[d] 2 Sam. i. 19. [e] 1 Sam. xvii. [f] Ibid. ver. 25. [g] Vid. Patrick's Commentary, in locum.
[h] 1 Sam. xvii. 49, 50.

nothing remain in it exceeding human Strength. 'Tis but ſuppoſing, that this arrogant Champion, in Diſdain of his inferior Combatant, might come negligently toward him, [j] with his Helmet turned back, and his Forehead bare: Or, if this will not do, 'tis but ſuppoſing, that David might level his Stone ſo right, as to hit the Place, which was left open for his Adverſary's Eyes; or throw it with ſuch Force, as to penetrate both Helmet and Head together. And, to convince us of the Probability of theſe Suppoſitions, we need only remember (what we read in ſacred Hiſtory) of no leſs than [k] ſeven hundred Men in one Place, who were ſo expert with their Left-Hands, that every one could ſling Stones at an Hair's Breadth, and not miſs; or (what we read in [l] profane Hiſtory) of ſome Slingers, who threw Stones with ſuch a Violence, that nothing could reſiſt their Impreſſion; and that, when they made uſe of Lead inſtead of Stone, the very Lead would melt in the Air, as it flew, by Reaſon of the Rapidity of the Motion, which they gave it.

THIS then is eaſily accounted for: But then there is another Difficulty relating to this Action, which ſome Cavillers eagerly lay hold on. For, "whereas it is ſaid, "that, before this Combat with Goliah, David was well acquainted at Saul's Court, "as being not only his Muſician in his melancholy Fits, but, in Reward for that "Service, promoted likewiſe to be [m] his Armour-bearer; how comes it to paſs, ſay "they, that, now he is going out againſt the Philiſtine, Saul ſhould know ſo little "of him, as [n] to aſk Abner, the Captain of his Hoſt, whoſe Son is this Youth? And "Abner ſhould anſwer, as thy Soul liveth, O King, I cannot tell. That Abner, a "military Man from his Youth, who had all along lived in Camps, ſhould not have "ſeen David, when he was at Court, is no Wonder at all; but that Saul, who had "received ſuch ſignal Benefit from the Charms of his Muſick, ſhould ſo ſoon forget "him, is a Thing incredible." It is to be obſerved however, [o] that the Queſtion, which Saul puts, is not, who David himſelf was, but who his Father was; for it is not incongruous to ſuppoſe, that the King, though he remembered his Perſon, might have forgot his Parentage, which now he was deſirous to be better informed in, when he ſaw him adventuring upon an Action, wherein, if he ſucceeded, he was, by Agreement, to be his Son-in-Law. However this be, he certainly muſt be a Stranger to Courts, to the Hurry of Buſineſs, and the Variety of new Faces, that are every Day ſeen there, who thinks it any Wonder at all, that Saul ſhould have loſt the Remembrance of David, after he had been ſome Time abſent, and was now dreſſed in his rough Shepherd's Coat and Habit. The Place of Armour-bearer, which he held, might be honorary only, and require no Attendance, or perhaps be officiated by ſeveral. 'Tis certain, from David's Abſence, that it required no conſtant Reſidence at Court; and therefore ſuppoſe him gone, but for the Space of Six Months, yet this is enough to account for the Forgetfulneſs of a King, who not long before was under a melancholy Diſorder, and even then, beſides the Diſtractions inſeparable from his high Station, had the Concern and Fatigue of a very troubleſome and dangerous War lying heavy upon his Spirits.

And the Reaſons of his being not known to Saul afterwards.

AFTER the Death of Saul, David was only anointed King of Judah, 'till [p] upon the Murder of Iſh-boſheth, Saul's Son, who reigned over the other Tribes, all Iſrael fell under his Government; and, when the whole Force of the Kingdom was thus happily united, it was not long before he did many great Exploits. He took the [q] Fortreſs of Zion, which was the Citadel of Jeruſalem, where the Jebuſites had fortified themſelves; he [r] routed the Philiſtines, in the Vale of Aſtaroth, and obtained ſeveral other Victories over them; he ſubdued the Moabites; gave Battle to Hadadezer; and the Syrians, who came to his Aſſiſtance, he quite vanquiſhed, and made tributary. All Edom he brought under his Subjection, and the King of the Ammonites, [s] who had groſsly affronted his Ambaſſadors, he beſieged in his royal City; took him, and ſlew him, and deſtroyed all his People. [t] Thus, as the Text tells us, the Lord preſerved David, whitherſoever he went, and he reigned over all Iſrael, and executed Judgment and Juſtice unto all the People; and his Felicity doubtleſs would have been compleat, had he not ſullied his Reputation with an Action, unbecoming a juſt Prince. What we mean is that, wherein the unhappy Uriah was ſo highly injured, whoſe Wife, Bath-ſheba, he firſt drew into his unlawful Embraces, and then, to conceal their mutual Shame, perfidiouſly deſtroyed her Huſband.

Of the World, 2957, &c. Before Chriſt, 1047, &c.

His Victories, when King.

[j] Kimchi has a Fancy, that when Goliah ſaid to David, Come, and I will give thy Fleſh to the Fowls of the Air, he looked up to Heaven, and his Helmet then fell off his Head. Patrick's Commentary, in locum.
[k] Judg. xx. 16. [l] Diod. Sicul. Lib. V. [m] 1 Sam. xvi. 21. [n] Ibid. xvii. 55.
[o] Saurin's Diſſertations, Vol. II. [p] 2 Sam. iv. [q] Ibid. chap. v. [r] Ibid. chap. viii. [s] Ibid. chap. x. [t] Ibid. viii. 14, 15.

His Sin and the Aggravations of it.

THIS mournful Story is ſo fully related [u] in the ſecond Book of Samuel, that there needs no enlarging upon it: Only we ſhall take Notice of what Moraliſts have made the Aggravations of the Crime, as well as for what Reaſons the Spirit of God hath recorded it. And, to this Purpoſe, ſome have obſerved, 1. That, as * David tarried at Jeruſalem, at the Time, when Kings went forth to Battle, he there indulged himſelf in Eaſe and Luxury, which is the Bane and Ruſt of the Mind; and ſo inſenſibly fell into thoſe looſe Deſires, which drew him into ſuch vile Perpetrations: So that Idleneſs was the firſt Cauſe of his Sin. 2. They obſerve it as an Aggravation of his Sin, [x] that he certainly knew ſhe was another Man's Wife, and yet deliberately and adviſedly committed the Sin; nay, that ſhe was the Wife of one, who was a Proſelyte to the Jewiſh Religion, and therefore added Scandal to his Wickedneſs; or, as the Text expreſſes it, [y] gave great Occaſion to the Enemies of the Lord to blaſpheme. 3. They obſerve, that there was Perfidy added to his Guilt, and ſinful Contrivance, [z] in cauſing Uriah to be ſent for home, in receiving him with great Tokens of his Favour, and in entertaining him with good Chear and great Plenty, that he might be the more deſirous to enjoy the Company of his Wife; and ſo have the Child, which was got in Adultery, reputed his own. 4. They obſerve, [a] from Uriah's Anſwer, that, had not David's Heart been ſeared, it could not but have felt a ſtrong Remorſe, upon thinking, how he had abuſed ſo brave a Man, and how vilely he indulged himſelf in ſinful Pleaſure, whilſt this Man, and the reſt of the Army, gloriouſly endured all Manner of Hardſhips, and refuſed the moſt innocent Pleaſure, for the Service of their Country. 5. They obſerve, [b] from his Deſign upon Uriah's Life, when he could not otherwiſe conceal his Lewdneſs, how naturally one Sin paves the Way to another, and how, in a ſmall Proceſs of Time, the Faſcination of ſenſual Appetites is enough to change the very Nature of Mankind; ſince even he, who formerly ſpared Saul unjuſtly ſeeking his Life, when he could have deſtroyed him without any one's Privity, is now put upon contriving the Death of a very faithful Servant, in a very baſe and unworthy Manner. 6. They obſerve it as a farther Aggravation of his Crime of Murther, that he not only expoſed an innocent and faithful Servant to be killed, but that, together with him, [c] ſeveral more brave Men, ſet in the Front of the Battle, where the Service was hotteſt, muſt neceſſarily have fallen in the Attack. 7. They obſerve, from his Anſwer to the Meſſenger ſent by Joab, to acquaint him with Uriah's Death, [d] the Sword devoureth one as well as another, the vile Hypocriſy and Obdurateneſs of his Heart, in imputing that to the Chance of War, or rather to the Direction of Divine Providence, which, his Conſcience could not but tell him, was of his own Contrivance. 8. And, laſtly, they obſerve, [e] from his Marriage with Bath-ſheba, even before her Huſband was cold in his Grave, how the Eagerneſs of his indulged Appetite had now extinguiſhed (what in ſome Sinners is laſt of all parted with, and for which, he himſelf had ſo lately embrued his Hands in Blood) all Senſe of Shame, and Regard to Reputation, or Decency.

Why recorded in Scripture.

THESE are ſome of the Aggravations obſervable in David's Crime; which, beſides its Luſt and Cruelty, is loaded with too juſt an Imputation [f] of Perfidy, of Ingratitude, of Hypocriſy, of Deliberation, of Obſtinacy, and of Shameleſſneſs in Sin: And for theſe Purpoſes were they recorded in Scripture, that they might caution us againſt Sloth and Idleneſs, being always employed, and not giving ourſelves Liberty to gaze upon any Objects, that may endanger our Innocence; and that they might remind the very beſt of Men, how much they ſtand in Need continually of the divine Aſſiſtance; and therefore how much they are concerned to pray, with all Prayer and Supplication, and to watch, as well as pray, that they fall not into Temptation.

God's Reproof, and the Puniſhments ſent upon him for it.

HOW long it was, that David continued in this ſinful Lethargy, the Scripture has no where informed us; God however thought it expedient, at laſt, to ſend his Prophet [u] 2 Sam. xi. &c. * Ver. 1. [x] Ver. 3. [y] 2 Sam. xii. 14. [z] Ibid. xi. 6, &c. [a] Ibid. xi. 11. [b] Ver. 15. [c] Ver. 17. [d] Ver. 25. [e] Ver. 27. [f] It has been a Matter of Surprize to ſome, why David, who was guilty of Sins of ſuch an heinous Nature, ſhould be ſtiled in Scripture, as we find he is, [1 Sam. xiii. 14. and xv. 28.] the Man after God's own Heart: But if we conſult the Occaſion of that Expreſſion, we ſhall find, that it ought to be taken in a comparative Senſe only, and in Derogation indeed to Saul, whoſe Tranſgreſſion, in invading the Prieſtly Office, and in ſparing Amalek, the Prophet Samuel was then reproving. 'Tis only in theſe two Reſpects then, that the Prophet may be ſuppoſed to call him a Man after God's Heart, or one, that would execute his Decrees, in abſtaining from the Prieſtly Office, and in deſtroying the idolatrous Nations round about him; which David effectually did, though Saul was found culpable in both Reſpects. But this I advance only as a probable Conjecture, and not in Oppoſition to the received Solution, that the Severity of his Repentance cleared him in the Sight of God, and made an Amends for the Grievouſneſs of his Tranſgreſſion.

Prophet † Nathan to awake him out of his Sleep, and to give him ſome Senſe of his Sins; which was done [g] in ſo appoſite a Parable, that many have very juſtly obſerved from hence, that there is never more Need for Wiſdom and Diſcretion, than in the Contrivance of Reprehenſion, eſpecially when it is intended for Princes and great Perſons. It is not neceſſary to apply every Word of the Parable to David's Caſe, but (to give the Reader the common Explication of it) "The rich Man "plainly ſignifies David; his Flocks and Herds are his Wives and Concubines; the "poor Man repreſents Uriah; his Ewe-Lamb is his Wife Bath-ſheba; the Traveller "denotes David's inordinate Affection, which he ſuffered to wander from his own "home; and the rich Man's taking the poor Man's Lamb, is his taking Bath-ſheba, "and lying with her." Thus far the Parable goes, and it would have made the Reſemblance more complete, if the Prophet had added, that the rich Man killed the poor Man, from whom he took the Lamb; but it is therefore omitted in the Parable, that David might not ſo readily apprehend Nathan's Meaning, and ſo might be induced, unawares, to pronounce a Sentence of Condemnation upon himſelf. For hereupon the Prophet had a fit Opportunity to ſhew him, that if the rich Man, who took away the poor Man's Lamb, deſerved Death according to his own Judgment; how much more did he deſerve it, who had not only taken another Man's Wife, but alſo cauſed her Huſband to be ſlain by the Enemies of Iſrael? And, accordingly, we may obſerve, that, when the Prophet begins to make his Application, he deals very roundly with the King, and is [h] not afraid to declare any of thoſe ſore Judgments, wherewith God had ordered him to threaten David and his Houſe, for his crying Sin. And as he threatened, ſo the Event was: For, if we look into the Sequel of the Hiſtory, [i] the Death of the Child, begotten in Adultery; [k] the Rape of Amnon upon his Siſter Tamar; [l] the Murther of Amnon by his Brother Abſalom; [m] the Rebellion of Abſalom againſt his own Father; [n] Shimei's Curſes; [o] Abſalom's Death; and [p] Sheba's Inſurrection, are all the declared Puniſhments of David's Adultery and Murther. Nay, it is not unlikely, that [q] the dreadful Peſtilence, wherein God ſmote the Children of Iſrael not long after, (if not wholly derived from the ſame Fountain) [r] yet had ſome Spice and Tincture of it, which might add to the Sin of numbering the People, and improve its Heinouſneſs to deſerve ſo ſevere a Puniſhment.

DAVID, being now waxen old, and willing to prevent all Confuſion in the Succeſſion, appointed Solomon, whom he had by Bath-ſheba, to be anointed King in his Life-time: And, not long after, finding his End approaching, he called the young King to him, and, having given him his Inſtruction concerning the Government of the State, he recommended him to God [s] in a Prayer, which is indeed a Kind of Prophetick Declaration of the Greatneſs and Proſperity of his enſuing Reign; and ſo dying in the ſeventy-firſt Year of his Age, and the forty-firſt Year of his Reign, he was [t] buried in that Part of the City, he had formerly taken from the Jebuſites, which, from him, was called the City of David. David's Death.

SOLOMON

† Who this Nathan was, we learn little more from the ſacred Writings, than that he was David's Prophet, intimate Counſellor, and Hiſtoriographer. Joſephus ſays of him, that he was a polite and prudent Man, who knew how to temper the Severity of Wiſdom with the Sweetneſs of good Manners; and Grotius compares him to Manius Lepidus, who had a Talent of turning away the Emperor Tiberius's Mind from ſuch cruel Purpoſes, as the vile Flattery of others was apt to incline him to; but it muſt be owned, that Nathan knew how to do more than this: He knew how to reprove Princes with Authority, and yet without Offence, without being impaired in any Degree, either of Favour or Affection with his King: So far from this, that he increaſed in both; inſomuch, that (as Tradition tells us) David named one Son after him, and committed another, even his Favourite and Succeſſor, to his Tuition and Inſtruction, Hiſtorical Account of the Life of King David, Vol. III.

[g] Vid. 2 Sam. xii. 7. [h] Ibid. [i] Ver. 18. [k] Chap. xiii. [l] Ibid. [m] Chap. xv. [n] Chap. xvi. [o] Chap. xviii. [p] Chap. xx. [q] Chap. xxiv. [r] For this Conjecture there is the more Reaſon, conſidering, that except the Pride and Oſtentation of the Thing, no one Interpreter has given us one probable Reaſon, why God ſhould be ſo highly exaſperated at David for numbering the People: For David's forgetting the half Shekel, that was due to the Service of God, upon ſuch Occaſions, Exod. xxx. 13. his numbering thoſe, who were under twenty Years old, contrary to the Order of the Law, Exod. xxx. 14. his covetous Deſign herein to lay a Capitation-Tax upon the People, together with ſeveral other Things of the like Nature, are all crude and groundleſs Conjectures. [s] The Prayer makes up the whole ſeventy-ſecond Pſalm.

[t] Joſephus [Antiq. Lib. VII. c. ult.] tells us, that Solomon laid up a vaſt Treaſure in his Father's Tomb, which Hircanus, the High-Prieſt, three hundred Years afterwards, when he found himſelf beſieged in Jeruſalem by Antiochus, and knew not what to do for Money, that he might bribe him to raiſe the Siege, made bold to open, and took thence three thouſand Talents, a good Part of which he gave to Antiochus. The ſame Author adds, that, ſeveral Years afterwards, Herod the Great broke open the ſaid Tomb, and took away a large Quantity of Wealth; but what Authority he has for all this, unleſs he met with ſome in the Records of his own Country, we cannot tell. Calmet's Dictionary. We read indeed in the Arabick Memoirs, publiſhed in M. le Jay's Polyglotts, that, when Hircanus was beſieged by Antiochus Sidetes, he opened a Treaſure, which belonged to one of the Deſcendants of David, and after he had taken a good deal of Money thence, and left ſome behind, he cloſed it up again. But this is nothing to Joſephus's Story, which the Reader will find abundantly confuted in Dr Prideaux's Connection, Part II. Lib. v.

Of the World, 2990, &c. Before Chriſt, 1014, &c.

Solomon's Actions.

SOLOMON had no ſooner taken Poſſeſſion of his Father's Kingdom, than he eſtabliſhed himſelf in his Throne, by cutting off all his Enemies. [u] Adonijah, his Brother, he put to death, for pretending to marry Abiſhag, his Father's concubinary Wife: Abiathar, the High-Prieſt, he depoſed and baniſhed, for adhering to Adonijah's Party: Joab, the old bloody General, who had fled to the Foot of the Altar, he commanded there to be ſlain; and Shimei, who had curſed his Father, and, upon Pain of Death, was confined to Jeruſalem, he ordered to be killed for tranſgreſſing that Injunction. Having thus taken off the Heads of the Faction, which was againſt him, he thought it adviſable to enter into Alliance with Pharaoh King of Egypt, by eſpouſing his Daughter. And 'tis upon the Celebration of theſe Nuptials, (as ſome imagine) that * the Song, which goes under his Name, as well as the forty-fifth Pſalm, which ſeems to have an Aſpect that Way, were certainly compoſed. But how well pleaſed ſoever Solomon might be with this new Alliance, it proved of fatal Conſequence to him, as well as the whole Nation. [x] The holy Scripture ranks the Daughter of Pharaoh among the Number of thoſe ſtrange Wives, which perverted him from the Worſhip of the true God; which ſeems to intimate, that, though ſhe might ſeem a Convert at firſt, ſhe returned in Time to the old Idolatry, and, by her Allurements, engaged her Huſband in the ſame abominable Practice.

His Song.

His great Wiſdom and Knowledge.

NEVER Prince certainly came to a Crown with a better Diſpoſition, both to Wiſdom and Religion, than did Solomon. [y] The Judgment he gave between the two lewd Women is a memorable Inſtance of his Wiſdom, in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice: The great Care he took of building the Temple, and of eſtabliſhing in it the true Worſhip of God, is a ſufficient Argument of his Senſe of Religion: And what vaſt Proficiency he had made in all Natural, Moral, and Polite Knowledge, the Scripture gives us this honourable Teſtimony, when it tells us, that [z] he ſpake three thouſand Proverbs, ſo that he was an excellent Moral Philoſopher; that he wrote a thouſand and five Songs, ſo that he was a very conſiderable Poet; and that he ſpake of Trees, from the Cedar Tree, that is in Lebanon, even to the Hyſſop, that ſpringeth out of the Wall, ſo that he underſtood the Nature of all Plants; and that he ſpake alſo of Beaſts, and of Fowl, and of creeping Things, and of Fiſhes, ſo that he underſtood the Nature of all Animals: And therefore no Wonder if Perſons, from all Nations, among whom we read of one, whom the Scripture ſtiles the Queen of Sheba, came to hear the Wiſdom of Solomon; but who this Queen of Sheba was, Interpreters are not ſo well agreed.

The Queen of Sheba who.

[a] JOSEPHUS (and with him many more) is of Opinion, that Sheba was the ancient Name of Meroë, an Iſland or rather Peninſula, in Egypt, before Cambyſes, in Complement to his Siſter, gave it her Name. The Natives of the Country have a Tradition, that this Queen's Name was Marqueda (Joſephus calls her Nicaula) that ſhe had a Son by Solomon, whoſe Poſterity reigned there many Years, and, to this very Day, have preſerved a continual Liſt of their Names and Succeſſions; nor can it be denied, but that it was uſual in theſe Parts for Women to have the ſupreme Command: And yet I cannot but think, that thoſe, who ſuppoſe that this Princeſs came from ſome Place in Arabia Felix, have a fairer Probability on their Side, not only becauſe it is generally allowed, that the Sabæans and Ethiopians lived in Arabia, and that [b] Women were allowed to reign there; not only becauſe our Saviour calls her [c] the Queen of the South, as Arabia certainly lies South of Judea, and ſays, that ſhe came from the uttermoſt Parts of the Earth, as Arabia, towards the South, is bounded by the Ocean, [d] which the Ancients knew no Land beyond; but more eſpecially, becauſe the Preſents, which ſhe made Solomon, [e] ſuch as Spices, and Gold, and precious Stones, were certainly the Product of Arabia Felix, though rarely to be found in the Place, which Joſephus aſſigns.

NOR

[u] 1 Kings ii. * The Song indeed is in the Form of an Epithalamium. It is diſtinguiſhed into ſeven Days or Nights, according to the Time appointed for the Celebration of Nuptials, and recounts the ſeveral Adventures of each; but then it is written in a lofty poetick Stile, and, to enter into the myſtical Senſe of it, we muſt carry our Conceptions above Fleſh and Blood, and therein contemplate the Marriage of Jeſus Chriſt with human Nature, with his Church, and with every pious and faithful Soul. Calmet's Dictionary. [x] 1 Kings xi. 1, &c. [y] Ibid. chap. iii. [z] Ibid. iv. 32, &c. [a] Vid. Calmet's Dictionary, on the Word Saba, viz. la Reine, and Patrick's Commentary on 1 Kings x.

[b] ——————Medis levibuſque Sabæis
Imperat hic ſexus; Reginarumque ſub armis
Barbariæ pars magna jacet. CLAUD. in EUTROP.

[c] Matth. xii. 42.
[e] 1 Kings x. 2.

[d] Terra, fineſque, quæ ad orientem vergunt, Arabiâ terminantur. Tacit. Lib. V.

NOR was it only to hear the Wiſdom of Solomon, that this Princeſs took ſo long a Journey, but to ſee likewiſe the Splendour and Magnificence, wherein he was reported to live; for, after he had finiſhed the Houſe of the Lord, [f] he built ſtately Palaces, rebuilt ſeveral Cities, and fortified others. And well might he be ſufficient to do all this, ſince his own annual Revenue, without reckoning the Tribute of other Nations, or the Subſidies of his own Subjects, was [g] ſix hundred threeſcore and ſix Talents of Gold. The Bounds of his Kingdom he extended, from the River Euphrates, to the Country of the Philiſtines, and to the Borders of Egypt. All neighbouring Princes paid him Tribute. He had a numerous Court, a ſplendid Equipage, and a ſumptuous Table. [h] The Throne, whereon he ſat, was overlaid with Gold; [i] the Guard, that attended his Perſon, had their Shields and Targets made of Gold; every Diſh and Plate, that was ſerved up to him, was of ſolid Gold; nor was there [k] any Veſſel, in all the Houſe in the Foreſt of Lebanon, but what was of pure Gold; none were of Silver; it was nothing accounted of in the Days of Solomon. And if we ſhould enquire, what might be the poſſible Occaſion of all this Redundancy of Wealth, we ſhall find, that it chiefly aroſe from the Importation, which Solomon's Navy ſo frequently made from the Gold Mines in Ophir; but in what Part of the World this Ophir lay, the Conjectures of the Learned have been, in a Manner, infinite.

His vaſt Riches.

[l] MOST People agree, that the Trade to Ophir and Tarſhiſh was the ſame, that is now in the Hands of our Eaſt-India Merchants, and hereupon ſome will have it to be the ſame with the Iſland Zocatora, which lies in the Eaſtern Coaſts of Africa, a little without the Streights of Babel-mandel; whilſt others rather think it to be the Iſland, anciently called Tapobrana, now Ceylon. The Rule, which [m] Grotius lays down, upon this Occaſion, I think is not amiſs: He tells us, that there is no better Way to gueſs, where this Place was, than by conſidering what Commodities were brought from thence, and inquiring of Merchants (who have been in the remote Parts of the World) where not only Gold, and precious Stones, but Ivory likewiſe, and Almug-Trees, and whatever elſe was brought from Ophir, is now to be found. [n] Now it is to be obſerved, that, though from Eloh, in the Land of Edom, (where the King's Fleet ſet out) to Tarſhiſh, was [o] a Voyage of three Years going and coming, yet it is no where ſaid, in what Compaſs the Voyage to Ophir was compleated; and therefore Tarſhiſh might be ſomewhere in the Eaſt-Indies, though Ophir might be any where nearer Home, within the Reach of thoſe Seas: So that any Place, in the Southern, or great Indian Sea, that can beſt furniſh Merchants with Gold, precious Stones, Ivory, and Almug-Trees, and with Gold in ſuch Plenty, as Solomon brought Home in one Voyage, may well be ſuppoſed to be the Ophir, which the Holy Scriptures make Mention of. [p] Only thus much I cannot forbear ſaying, that if the Southern Part of Arabia did, in thoſe Times, furniſh the World with the beſt Gold, and in the greateſt Quantity (as good Authors ſeem to ſay) they that would have the Ophir of the Holy Scriptures to be there ſituated, ſeem, of all others, to have the beſt Foundation for their Conjecture.

The Gold of Ophir, whence.

THUS great and glorious was Solomon in all his Actions for a conſiderable Time of his Reign. [q] How wiſe waſt thou in thy Youth, (as the Son of Sirach handſomely epitomizes Solomon's Perfections) and as a Flood filled with Underſtanding! Thy Soul covered the whole Earth, and thou filledſt it with dark Parables. Thy Name went far into the Iſlands, and for thy Peace thou waſt beloved. The Countries marvelled at thee, for thy Songs, and Proverbs, and Parables, and Interpretations. By the Name of the Lord God, which is called the Lord God of Iſrael, thou didſt gather Gold as Tin, and didſt multiply Silver as Lead. This was his Character at firſt: But the latter Scenes of his Life ſpoiled and disfigured all. For he not only gave himſelf up to the wanton Embraces of many Women, but of many [r] ſtrange Women, ſuch as were not Iſraelites by Nature or Profeſſion, but of idolatrous Nations, with whom the Lord had expreſſly [s] prohibited Iſrael in general, but more eſpecially their King, to contract Marriage; and by their Allurements he was ſeduced to worſhip filthy and abominable Idols, ſuch such as [t] Aſtaroth, the Goddeſs of the Sidonians; [u] Moloch, the God of the Ammonites; and [x] Chamos, the God of the Moabites. And in theſe Impieties he continued ſo long, that it is now become a famous Queſtion, whether he be in a State of Salvation or no; though conſidering [y] the Promiſe, God makes to his Father concerning him, I think it more rational, as well as more charitable to conclude, that God's Mercy did not finally depart from him; but that, in his old Age, he was brought to a Senſe of his Tranſgreſſions, and, humbling himſelf before God, wrote his Book called Eccleſiaſtes, or the Preacher, as an Acknowledgment of his own Apoſtacy, and a Warning and Admonition to all others; that, however they might think of doing (as he had done) [z] whatever their Eyes deſired, to keep nothing from them, and not to with-hold their Heart from any Joy; yet, in the Event, they would find, what his Experience had taught him ſo late, that all was Vanity and Vexation of Spirit; and that there was no Profit in any Kind of Wickedneſs under the Sun.

Solomon's Character.

[f] 1 Kings vii. [g] Ibid. x. 14. This amounts to four Millions, ſeven hundred ninety-five Thouſand, two hundred Pounds of our Sterling Money. [h] 1 Kings x. 18. [i] Ibid. ver. 16. [k] Ibid. ver. 21. [l] See Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. II. [m] Vid. Epiſt. 483. ſecundum Patrick. [n] Prideaux, ibid. [o] 1 Kings x. 22. [p] Prideaux, ibid. [q] Ecclus. xlvii. 14, &c. [r] 1 Kings xi. 1. [s] Deut. vii. 3.

[t] Aſtaroth, in the Syrian Tongue, ſignifies Sheep, particularly Ewes, when their Dugs are turgid, and they give Milk; and, from the Fecundity of theſe Creatures, which in Syria breed a long Time, the Tyrians and Sydonians framed the Notion of a Deity, which they called Aſtarte, and muſt, without Diſpute, be the Venus of the Syrians; for ſo Cicero, in his Book de Naturâ Deorum, tells us, that the fourth Goddeſs is Venus, who was conceived at Tyre, and is called Aſtarte. [u] Moloch, both in the Hebrew and Ethiopick, ſignifies a King, denoting the Sun, which the Heathens called the King of Heaven. See Calmet's Diſſertations before Leviticus. It is repreſented by a large Statue made hollow, into which, ſome ſay, they put their Children, and burnt them; others, that they put the Children into the Arms of the Statue, and then ſet fire to the combuſtible Matter w thin it. But, be the Manner of ſacrificing Children to this Idol how it will, it is certain, that they offered them to him by Fire. See 2 Kings xxiii. 10. Jer. xxxii. 35. [x] Chamos, in Arabick, ſignifies to make Haſte; and from hence ſome have imagined, that he is the ſame with the Sun, whoſe Motion is ſuppoſed to be ſo rapid. From the near Reſemblance between the Hebrew Word, Chamos, and the Greek, Comos, others have thought him the ſame with Bacchus, the God of Drunkenneſs; but Calmet, in his Diſſertation before Numbers, has ſufficiently evinced, that he is no other, than Adonis. [y] 2 Sam. vii. 14, 15. [z] Eccleſ. ii. 10, 11.

CHAP. VI.

The moſt memorable Tranſactions from the Diviſion of the Kingdom, to the End of the Captivity.

Of the World, 3029, &c. Before Chriſt, 975, &c.

The Diviſion of the Kingdom.

HOWEVER God might be pleaſed, upon Solomon's Repentance, to forgive the eternal Puniſhment due to his Tranſgreſſions; yet the temporal Puniſhment, which he threatened to inflict in his Son's Days, [a] by rending the Kingdom from his Poſterity, and giving it to his Servant, he thought fit no longer to defer. For, immediately upon his Death, when Rehoboam his Son refuſed to hear the Petitions of his Subjects, and was reſolved to impoſe more burthenſome Taxes upon them, than his Father had done; all the Tribes, except thoſe of Judah and Benjamin, unanimouſly revolted, and choſe Jeroboam, his [b] Father's Servant, to reign over them. No ſooner was Jeroboam promoted to this Honour, but, fearing leſt his Subjects, if permitted to go up to Jeruſalem to offer Sacrifice, might, in Time, return to their former Allegiance, he erected two Golden Calves, in the two extreme Parts of his Kingdom, one at Bethel, and the other at Dan, with two Altars belonging to them, ſuch as he had ſeen conſecrated to the God Apis [c] in Egypt; and then publiſhed a Proclamation, forbidding all his Subjects to repair any more to Jeruſalem, and enjoining them to pay their Adorations at the Places which he had appointed: And, to give the better Sanction to this new Inſtitution, he ordained a ſolemn Feſtival, and himſelf went up to Bethel to attend the Ceremony, and countenance the Impiety by his own Example. But while he was ſtanding at the Altar, to offer Incenſe, [d] a Prophet, that came

[a] 1 Kings xi. 11. [b] He was a bold and daring Man, and therefore Solomon made him the Collector of the Tribute, which the Houſe of Joſeph, i. e. the two Tribes of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, were to pay. Calmet's Dictionary. [c] For thither he had fled, being in Rebellion againſt Solomon before his Death. 1 Kings xi. 40. [d] Joſephus, St Jerom, and others, would fain have this Prophet to be Iddo, who wrote the Acts of Solomon, 2 Chron. ix. 29. but this is very unlikely: For, beſides the Variation of the Name, which they mangle very much came from Judah, [e] foretold him, that the Altar ſhould one Day be deſtroyed by a Child of the Houſe of David, Joſiah by Name, and, as a Proof of the Truth of his Prediction, he added, that it ſhould inſtantly be ſplit. Provok'd at this Freedom of Speech againſt his new Religion and Altar, Jeroboam ſtretched out his Hand, and called to ſome of his People to ſeize the Prophet; but, to his great Surprize, he found his Hand withered, i. e. the Muſcles and Sinews thereof ſo ſhrunk, that he perfectly loſt the Uſe of it, and, at the ſame Time, ſaw the Altar ſplit aſunder. Upon the Prophet's Prayer however the King's Hand was reſtored; and, when the King hereupon invited him to dine with him, and to accept of a Reward, he abſolutely refuſed both; urging the Command of the Lord to the contrary.. But tho' he declined Jeroboam's Invitation, yet his eaſy Credulity betrayed him to his Ruin: For an old Prophet, who lived at Bethel, hearing which Way he took, went after him, and, with falſe Aſſurances, prevailed with him to go back and refreſh himſelf. But for this Compliance he paid very dear, having not been far gone, before a Lion, out of the Wood near Bethel, fell upon him, and ſlew him.

The Death of the Prophet that came to Bethel, accounted for.

THAT the Death of the Prophet was not a Matter of Chance, but occaſioned by the Interpoſition of Divine Providence, is apparent from the Circumſtances of the Story. For, that a Lion, contrary to his Nature, [f] ſhould not eat his dead Body, nor kill the Aſs, whereon he rode, nor meddle with the Travellers, that paſſed by, nor moleſt the old Prophet, when he came to take the Carcaſe away; but, on the contrary, ſhould ſtand quietly by it, until this ſtrange News was carried into the City, as if he were ſet to guard it againſt the Violence of any other Creature; this plainly ſhews the Hand of God in the whole Tranſaction, by whoſe Appointment the Lion was ſent to execute what he had threatened, but could not move one Step beyond his Commiſſion. And, that it may not ſeem too great a Severity in this Diſpenſation, that one Prophet, [g] deluded by another, equally pretending to a divine Revelation, and a Revelation ſeeming to ſuperſede the Injunction, he lay under, ſhould come to ſo untimely an End, merely for refreſhing himſelf a little at a Brother's Houſe; it may not be improper to conſider, [h] that, whenever God, in an extraordinary Manner, diſcovers his Will to a Prophet, he always makes ſuch a ſenſible Impreſſion upon his Mind, that he cannot but perceive himſelf actuated by a divine Spirit, and conſequently, cannot but be aſſured of the Evidence of his own Revelation. This Evidence, the Prophet, that was ſent to Bethel, had: For as he was able, by the Power, that was given him, to work Miracles, he could not but be ſenſible of his Divine Miſſion, and that the particular Injunction of his not eating nor drinking in the Town of Bethel, was as much the Will of God, as any other Part of his Commiſſion.

Now the Deſign of God in this Prohibition was, to expreſs his Abhorrence of that idolatrous Place; and therefore, the other pretended Revelation of the old Prophet, who lived therein, was juſtly to be ſuſpected, not only becauſe it was repugnant to God's main Deſign, but becauſe it came from a Perſon, who had given no great Teſtimony of his Sincerity, in chuſing to live in a Place, notoriouſly infected with Idolatry, and yet making no publick Remonſtrances againſt it. The Conſideration of this one Circumſtance, ſhould have made the young Prophet diffident of what the other told him, at leaſt, 'till he had ſhewn him ſome Divine Teſtimony to convince him; for it argued a great deal of Levity, if not Infidelity of his own Revelation, to liſten to that of another Man, in Contradiction to what he had abundant Reaſon to believe was true: And the Leſſon we are to learn from God's Severity in this Inſtance, is, —— not to ſuffer our Faith to be perverted by any Suggeſtions, that are made againſt a Revelation, that is of unconteſted Divine Authority; but, [i] if an Angel from Heaven (as the Apoſtle words it) ſhould preach any other Goſpel, than what we have received, to deteſt, and denounce him accurſed.

much to make it like, Iddo, there is this Circumſtance, which plainly ſhews it could not be Iddo; becauſe this Prophet died too ſoon, to have Time to write the Acts of Solomon, being inſtantly killed by a Lion; whereas the Iddo, who wrote Solomon's Acts, lived at leaſt ſeventeen Years after Solomon, becauſe [in 2 Chron. xiii. 22.] he is ſaid to have wrote the Acts of Abijah, King of Judah. Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible.

[e] This was propheſied three hundred and fifty Years before it came to paſs; and the Prediction is more wonderful, becauſe it expreſsly names both the Family, and Perſon. Howell, ibid. and Patrick, in locum.

[f] 1 Kings xiii. 24, &c.

[g] Ibid. ver. 18, &c.

[h] Stillingfleet's Origines Sacræ.

[i] Gal. i. 8, 9.

SECT.

SECT. I.

Elijah's Actions.

Of the World, 3068, &c. Before Chriſt, 136, &c.

AFTER five Reigns from Jeroboam, (wherein no great Matter of Theological Enquiry occurs) Ahab ſucceeded to the Crown of Iſrael, a Prince that ſurpaſſed all his Predeceſſors in Wickedneſs: For he not only walked in the Sins of Jeroboam, but (to compleat his Crimes) married Jezebel, the Daughter of Eth-baal, King of the Zidonians, whereby he introduced all Manner of Idolatry among the Iſraelites. Provoked at theſe Abominations, the Lord ſent [k] Elijah the Tiſhbite, whom next to Moſes, the Jews ſtile the Prince of the Prophets, to remonſtrate his Iniquity to him, and to denounce this Judgment againſt the Land, that, for ſome Years, [l] there ſhould be neither Dew nor Rain, but according to his Word; and having delivered his Meſſage, he withdrew, and, as he was ordered by God, went and lived by the Brook Cherith, where the Ravens [m] brought him Food twice every Day.

Elijah's being fed by Ravens.

RAVENS, as Naturaliſts relate, are Creatures ſo deſtitute of any Concern for their Young, that they forſake them before they are fledged, and therefore Providence has taken care to feed them with Worms, which are produced by their Dung, and out of the Carcaſſes, that have been brought into their Neſts, until they are able to fly, and to provide for themſelves; and to this the Pſalmiſt is ſuppoſed to allude, when he tells us, [n] that the Lord giveth to the Beaſt his Food, and to the young Ravens, which cry. The greater therefore was the Interpoſition of Providence, in over-ruling theſe Creatures to ſuch a Degree, as to make them more ſubſervient to his Prophet, than they are to their own Young: But [o] thoſe Jews ſeem to carry the Miracle needleſsly too high, who pretend that the Proviſion, which theſe Ravens brought, came either from Ahab's Houſe, or from Jehoſhaphat's, as if the Prophet was fed with nothing but Royal Dainties. 'Tis ſufficient for us to ſay, in the Words of the Pſalmiſt, [p] that the whole World is the Lord's, and all that is therein; that he knows the Fowls of the Mountains, and the wild Beaſts of the Field are in his Sight; and therefore, if any Man be hungry, and he is minded to provide for him, he need not tell any one thereof; for he can either ſend us Suſtenance by unknown and unexpected Hands, or enlarge the [q] Handful of Meal in our Barrel, and the little Oil in our Cruſe (as in the Caſe of the Sareptan Widow) to a long Subſiſtance.

His Conteſt with the Prophets of Baal.

THE Drought, which occaſioned the Famine, continued as Elijah had foretold; but, [r] in the third Year, God, being willing to withdraw this heavy Judgment, ſent his Prophet to Ahab with ſome Intimations of Relief, upon Condition, that he would order his Subjects, and eſpecially the Prophets of Baal, and of [s] the Groves, to meet him

[k] The Name Elijah, which in Hebrew is Elijahu, carries ſomething divine in it: For it is compounded (as Ægid. Camartus imagines) of three of the Names of God, viz. Eli, Jah, and Hu. He was indeed an eminent Meſſenger ſent from God, but thoſe Jews carry the Matter too far, who ſay, that he was no mortal Man, but an Angel, ſent to reduce them to the true Religion, becauſe his Original is unknown; there being no Mention made of his Father or Mother in holy Writ. Patrick's Commentary on 1 Kings xvii. [l] 1 Kings xvii. 1. [m] This ſeems ſo very ſtrange, that ſome will have the Word Orebim not to ſignify Ravens, but Merchants, as others will have it to be Arabians. But, beſides that the Word (as Bochart obſerves) never ſignifies Merchants, and the Thing is notorious, that there were no Arabians inhabiting in the Country, where Elijah now was, there is this one Argument, ſufficient againſt all Suggeſtions of this Nature, viz. that Elijah's Retreat would have ſoon been diſcovered to Ahab, if Merchants, or any other People, that travelled that Way, had been acquainted with it. Thoſe therefore, who make ſuch loud Outcries upon hearing this Miracle, ſhould do well to remember what the Heathen Stories tell us, of Jupiter's being fed in the Cradle by Bees, Æſculapius nouriſhed by a Goat, Janus, the Son of Apollo and Evadne, by Dragons, that brought him Honey, and the like; and then they will leſs wonder at the miraculous Care, which God took of his faithful Servant, in a Time of general Famine. Vid. Bochart, Hieroz. Part II. Lib. II. c. 13. Huetii Quæſt. Alnet. Lib. II. c. 12. and Patrick's Commentary on 1 Kings xvii. [n] Pſal. cxlvii. 9. and Job xxxviii. 41. [o] In Gemara Sanhedrim, c. 11. [p] Pſal. l. 11, &c. [q] 1 Kings xvii. 12. [r] Ibid. xviii. 1. 'Tis very certain, that both our bleſſed Saviour, [Luke iv. 25.] and his Apoſtle, St James, [Chap. v. 17.] do aſſure us, that this Drought continued three Years and ſix Months; and yet this does not diſagree with the Lord's ſending his Prophet to Ahab in the third Year. At the Beginning of this Drought, very probably Ahab might impute the Want of Rain to natural Cauſes, and thereupon not ſeek to ſlay Elijah: But, after ſix Months, neither the former nor the latter Rain falling in their Seaſons, he began to be enraged at him, as the Cauſe of the Drought, which forced Elijah, at God's Command, to ſave himſelf by Flight; and, from that Time, the three Years, here mentioned, are to be computed. One Year he was at the Brook Cherith, and two Years he lived with the Widow of Sarepta; at the End of which, God took Pity upon the Land, and ſent his Prophet to Ahab. Patrick's Commentary on 1 Kings xviii. [s] By the Prophets of the Groves, (as we tranſlate it) Mr Selden underſtands the Prophets of Aſtarte, the great Goddeſs of the Zidonians, which he proves by comparing many Places of Scripture together. De Diis Syris, Syntag. 2. c. 3. But Maimonides has a peculiar Notion, that the Prophets of Baal and of the Groves were ſuch, as had imbibed the Opinions of the ancient Zabii, who made Images to receive the Influences of the Stars, Golden ones for the Sun, Silver ones for the Moon, &c. whereby they attained the Gift of Prophecy. More Nevoch. Part III. c. 29.

him at Mount Carmel. When all the People were come together, Elijah propoſed to the idolatrous Prieſts, that, ſince there was a manifeſt Difference between them, in Point of Religion, and the People now aſſembled might poſſibly deſire to know, who was in the right; tho' he was but one, and they many, he would put the whole Streſs of the Cauſe upon this one Iſſue——That two Bullocks ſhould be brought, and ſlain, one of which they ſhould lay upon Wood, without putting any Fire under it, and that he would do the like by his; that they ſhould then call upon their Gods, and he would call upon the Name of the Lord; and that the Deity, which ſhould make it appear he heard their Prayers, by conſuming the Sacrifice with Fire, the ſame ſhould be owned as God. This Propoſition was generally liked: Whereupon the Prieſts of Baal fall to work, make ready their Altar, kill their Bullock, lay it upon their Altar, and then begin to invoke their Gods. But all in vain: Their Gods are deaf, and cannot hear. Whereupon they dance and caper round the Altar, ſlaſh themſelves with Knives, and, by their many wild and extravagant Freaks, give the Prophet an handſome Opportunity of Banter; [t] cry aloud; for he is a God; either he is talking, or he is purſuing, or he is in a Journey, or peradventure he ſleepeth.

ELIJAH, having allowed them ſufficient Time to try all their Inventions to no Purpoſe, invited the People at laſt to draw near to him; and, taking twelve Stones, according to the Number of the twelve Tribes, he built an Altar, made a Trench round it, laid the Bullock on the Wood, and poured Water on the Sacrifice, the Wood, and the Altar three Times, until the Trench was quite full; and then, drawing near to the Altar, he implored of God, by ſome viſible Inſtance, to demonſtrate to the People, that he was the only true God, and himſelf no more than his Miniſter, acting by his Authority, and according to his Injunctions. Whereupon immediately Fire fell from Heaven, and conſumed, not only the Burnt-Offering, but the Wood and Stones, nay, the very Duſt and Water, that was in the Trench about the Altar. This ſtruck the People with ſuch Admiration, that, falling on their Faces, they devoutly acknowledged the God of Elijah to be the only true God: Whereof the Prophet taking the Advantage, ordered them to ſeize the idolatrous Prieſts, and put them all to Death; and then, going up to the Top of the Mountain, he prayed to God with great Earneſtneſs, that he would be pleaſed to ſend Rain upon the Land, and he did ſo.

IT may well exerciſe our Wonder, why God ſhould ſo far liſten to the Prayers of a Man, as to ſuffer him to lock and unlock (as it were) the Store-Houſes of Heaven, at his Pleaſure; but that Wonder will begin to abate, when we come to conſider, that he was in ſo great Eſteem with God, as to be vouchſafed [u] the Sight of his glorious and Majeſtick Preſence; as to have * Angels ſent to comfort and refreſh him, when he was weary; as to have [x] Fire ſent down from Heaven to avenge him of his Enemies, when they came to apprehend him; and, at laſt, by the Miniſtry of Angels, in the Form of a bright Chariot and Horſes, [y] to have his Body tranſlated into Heaven, without undergoing the common Fate of Mortals: Whereupon the Son of Sirach has given us this Epitome of his Actions, in Commemoration of God's Vouchſafements to him: [z] Elias, ſays he, ſtood up as Fire, and his Word burnt like a Lamp. He brought a ſore Famine upon the People, and by his Zeal he diminiſhed their Number; by the Word of the Lord he ſhut up the Heavens, and alſo three Times brought down Fire. O Elias! How waſt thou honoured in thy wonderous Deeds! and who may glory like unto thee! Who didſt raiſe up a dead Man from Death, and his Soul from the Place of the Dead, by the Word of the moſt High: [this he ſpeaks of the Widow of Sareptha's Son] Who broughteſt Kings to Deſtruction, and honourable Men from their Bed to the Grave: [this he means of Ahab, Ahaziah, and Jezebel] Who anointedſt Kings to take Vengeance, [viz. Jehu and Hazael] and Prophets, [viz. Eliſha and his Brethren] to ſucceed after thee: Who waſt taken up in a Whirlwind of Fire, and a Chariot of fiery Horſes. Bleſſed are they that ſaw thee, and ſlept in Love; for we ſhall ſurely live.

[t] 1 Kings xviii. 27. [u] Ibid. chap. xix. * Ibid. ver. 5. [x] 2 Kings i. 10, &c.
[y] Ibid. ii. 11. [z] Ecclus. xlviii. 1, &c.

Eliſha's Actions.

Of the World, 3108, &c. Before Chriſt, 896, &c.

Eliſha's Miracles,

AFTER the Aſſumption of Elijah into Heaven, Eliſha ſucceeded him both in the Gift of Prophecy, and in that of working Miracles. He divided the Waters of Jordan, [a] by ſtriking them with the Mantle, which Elijah had left him; he [b] cured the unwholſome Waters of Jericho, and the Barrenneſs of the Soil, with nothing elſe but a little Salt; and, as he went up to Bethel, [c] he curſed the Children, that inſulted and reviled him, and immediately two She-Bears came out of the Wood, and revenged his Quarrel. He [d] multiplied the Oil for one of the minor Prophet's Widows to ſuch a Quantity, as abundantly enabled her to pay her Debts; and [e] for the Shunamite-Woman, that entertained him hoſpitably, he firſt procured a Son, and, upon his Death, reſtored him to Life again. At Gilgal, [f] he ſweetened the bitter Herbs, that had been dreſſed for the Sons of the Prophets; and, in the Time of great Scarceneſs, [g] fed a great Number of Perſons with a ſmall Quantity of Bread. In Samaria [h] he cured Naaman's Leproſy, by ordering him to waſh ſeven Times in the River Jordan, and [i] inflicted it upon his own Servant, for his Fraud and Covetouſneſs, for ever. In Jordan, [k] he made Iron ſwim; and when the King of Syria ſent to apprehend him, [l] he ſtruck all the Forces, which came on that Errand, with Blindneſs, and delivered them up into the Hand of the Iſraelites, their Enemies.

and Predictions.

[m] THE Generoſity of the Iſraelites however, in letting the Syrians go, was not long remembered by Benhadad their King. For he, not long after, raiſing a great Army, laid cloſe Siege to Samaria, and [n] reduced the City to ſuch Diſtreſs by Famine, that an Aſs's Head was ſold for fourſcore [o] Pieces of Silver, three Quarters of a Pint [p] of Pulſe for five; and thoſe, that were not able to procure ſuch Proviſions, were driven to the laſt Extremity, and forced to eat their own Children. In which diſconſolate Circumſtances, the Prophet foretels, that, in one Night's Time, there ſhould be ſuch a Plenty of all Things, that a Meaſure of fine Flour ſhould be ſold for a Shekel, and two Meaſures of Barley for the ſame Price, which accordingly came to paſs: For God had ſo ordered the Matter in the Night, that, by the Miniſtry of Angels, he made ſuch a Rattling, like that of Chariots and Prancing of Horſes, that the Syrians imagined a great Army was not only marching towards them, but ready to fall upon them; which put them into ſuch a Conſternation, that it immediately ſpread thro the whole Army, and, leaving their Camp ſtanding, every Man ſhifted for himſelf, and made the beſt of his Way home. Whereupon the Iſraelites had nothing to do, but to go out and plunder the Tents of the Syrians; in which they found ſuch Store of Proviſion, as made the ſudden Alteration in the Price of Corn, which the Prophet had foretold.

NOT long after this Defeat, Benhadad, King of Syria, fell ſo ill, that [q] Hazael, one of his Prime Miniſters, was ſent with a coſtly Preſent, to conſult Eliſha, whether his Maſter would recover of his Sickneſs. His Sickneſs, as Joſephus tells us, was no more than a deep Melancholy, occaſioned by the ſhameful Flight of his Army from before Samaria; and therefore the Prophet told him, that, though his Diſtemper was not incurable, yet he foreſaw he was not to live, becauſe Hazael himſelf would ſpeedily murther him, uſurp his Throne, and commit great Outrages againſt the People of Iſrael; [r] which accordingly came to paſs. Theſe, and ſeveral others, were the Predictions and Miracles, which Eliſha performed in his Life-time; and, even after his Deceaſe, a divine Power did not depart from him: For, when the Iſraelites, going to bury a certain Perſon in the Country, ſaw a Band of Moabites, who, at that Time, invaded the Land, coming upon them, they rolled away the Stone from Eliſha's Sepulchre, and laid the dead Corps by his; which no ſooner touched the Prophet's Bones,

[a] 2 Kings ii. 14. [b] Ibid. ver. 19. [c] Ibid. ver. 23, &c. [d] Ibid. iv. 3. [e] Ibid. ver. 16, 36. [f] Ibid. ver. 38. [g] Ibid. ver. 42. [h] Ibid. v. 1. [i] Ibid. ver. 27. [k] Ibid. vi. 6. [l] Ibid. ver. 18. [m] Ibid. ver. 22. [n] Ibid. ver. 25. [o] Reckoning theſe Pieces of Silver, or Shekels, at fifteen Pence a-piece, they come to five Pounds Sterling. Howell's Hiſtory.

[p] What we, in this Place, call Pulſe, our Tranſlation has rendered Dove's Dung: But Interpreters have been at a great Loſs to let us know, upon what Account the Inhabitants of Samaria ſhould be obliged to buy ſo ſmall a Quantity of it at ſo great a Price. For Salt, for Food, for Firing, for dunging their Gardens within the Walls, ſeveral Interpreters have ſeverally applied it: But, upon a ſmall Examination, it will appear, that none of theſe Uſes could ſuit with the Circumſtances of a City, ſo ſtraitly beſieged; and therefore the learned Bochart has obſerved, that the Arabians give the Name of Dove's Dung, or Sparrow's Dung to two ſeveral Things, viz. to a Kind of Moſs, which grows on Trees and ſtony Ground, and to a Sort of Peaſe, or Pulſe, which was very common in Judæa, as may be ſeen in 2 Sam. xvii. 28. and therefore he ſuppoſes, that the Word Chirſonim may very well ſignify Fitches or Pulſe, which, though very ordinary Food, were ſold at ſo high a Rate. Vid. Hieroz. P. II. L. I. c. 7. and Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible. [q] 2 Kings viii. 7, &c. [r] Vid. 2 Kings xiii. 22.

Bones, but immediately the Perſon revived, and was reſtored to his perfect Health: Whereupon the Son of Sirach has this ſhort Deſcant, in Commendation of the Prophet: Eliſha was filled with God's Spirit; while he lived, he was not moved with the Preſence of any Prince; and, after his Death, his Body propheſied; i. e. by reviving the Man, gave Teſtimony of a future Reſurrection. He did Wonders in his Life, and, at his Death, his Works were marvellous.

SECT. II.

The State of the Kingdoms of Judah and Iſrael.

Of the World, 3120, &c. Before Chriſt, 884, &c.

The Revolutions in the Kingdoms of Iſrael and Judah.

ELISHA, before his Death, knowing that the Time was now come, for Ahab's Family to be extirpated, and Jezebel puniſhed for her Wickedneſs, ordered one of the Sons of the Prophets to go, and anoint Jehu, the Son of Jehoſhaphat, the Son of Nimſhi, King; and to give him, at the ſame Time, full Inſtructions, what he was to do upon his Advancement. How ready and punctual Jehu was to execute God's Judgments upon the whole Houſe of Ahab; how he ſlew Jehoram, King of Iſrael, and Ahaziah, King of Judah; ordered Jezebel to be thrown down from a Window, and all the Princes of the Blood to be beheaded: How, in his Way to Jeruſalem, he ſlew the Brothers and Kindred of Ahaziah; and, when he came thither, cut off all that remained of Ahab, without ſparing one; how he deſtroyed the Prieſts of Baal, pulled down and burnt his Images, and, demoliſhing his Temple, made it no better than a common Draught-houſe: And, while theſe Things were tranſacting in Iſrael, how Athaliah, the Queen-Dowager of Judah, and Mother to the late King Ahaziah, hearing that her Son was ſlain, uſurped the Government of Judah; and, in Revenge of the Death of her Father Ahab's Family, murthered all the Blood-Royal, in order to extinguiſh the Race of the good Jehoſhaphat, and ſecure to herſelf, and her other Children, the Succeſſion of the Kingdom; but how God diſappointed her, and brought her to Puniſhment, by the wonderful Preſervation of young Joaſh, to ſucceed in the Throne of his Anceſtors; and how, in the Beginning of his Reign, this Joaſh behaved like a juſt and religious Prince; reſtored the Worſhip of the true God, and greatly reformed the Eccleſiaſtical State; but, when his good Friend and Counſellor, Jehoiada, the High-Prieſt, was dead, the Princes of Judah ſoon drew him over to the Worſhip of Idols, inſomuch, that when Zechariah, the Son of his Friend Jehoiada, went about to reprove him, at his Command he was ſtoned to Death in the Porch of the Temple, for which heinous Act, neither he nor his People went unpuniſhed: Theſe Things, I ſay, are ſo fully recorded [s] in the ſecond Book of Kings, that it would be tedious to the Reader to detain him, either with a Repetition, or any jejune Reflections upon them. The State of the Kingdoms both of Judah and Iſrael was, for ſome Time after this, ſo torn with Convulſions, the Murthers of their Princes were ſo many, their Succeſſions ſo quick, and ſo frequently interrupted, while all Manner of Violence, and eſpecially Superſtition and Idolatry, like a common Deluge, overflowed the Land; that we have little or nothing but Accounts of this Kind, (which furniſh no Matter for Theological Enquiry) until we come to the Reign of good Hezekiah, King of Judah.

Of the World, 3278, &c. Before Chriſt, 726, &c.

The Iſraelites made Captives by Shalmanezer.

ABOUT the Beginning of the Reign of Hezekiah, [t] Sabacon, the Ethiopian, having invaded Egypt, and taken Boccharis, King of that Country, Priſoner, cauſed him, with great Cruelty, to be burnt alive, and then, ſeizing his Kingdom, reigned there in his Stead. He is the ſame, who, in [u] Scripture, is called So: And, having thus ſettled himſelf in Egypt, he ſoon grew ſo powerful, that Hoſhea, King of Samaria, entered into Confederacy with him, hoping, by his Aſſiſtance, to ſhake off the Yoke of the Aſſyrians; and, in Confidence of this, withdrew his Subjection from Shalmanezer, and refuſed to pay him any more Tribute. But Shalmanezer ſoon marched againſt him with a powerful Army, and, having ſubdued all the Country round about, pent him up in Samaria, and, after a Siege of three Years Continuance, took the City, and, putting Hoſhea in Chains, ſhut him up in Priſon all his Days, and carried the People into Captivity.

IN

[s] From 2 Kings ix. to xiii. [t] Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. I. [u] 2 Kings xvii. 4.

The Book of Tobit.

IN this Captivity, Tobit was taken out of his City of Teſbe, in the Tribe of Naphthali; and, with Anna his Wife, and Tobias his Son, carried into Aſſyria, where his Piety was conſpicuous to all, and ſo won upon the Conqueror Shalmanezer, that he made him his Purveyor, with Liberty to go whither he pleaſed, which gave him an happy Occaſion to viſit and relieve his diſtreſſed Countrymen: But of this we may read at large in the Book which goes under his Name. The Book, indeed, in its original Draught, ſeems to have been the Memoirs of his Family, firſt begun by Tobit, then continued by Tobias, then finiſhed by ſome other of the Family; and, at laſt digeſted, by ſome Babylonian Jew, in the Form, wherein we have it. It is generally looked on, both by Jews and Chriſtians, as a genuine and true Hiſtory, though there ſeems to be good Reaſon for * our not placing it among the Canonical Books of Scripture, [x] becauſe there are ſome Matters in it, (ſuch as that of the Angel's accompanying Tobias in a long Journey, under the Shape of Azarias; the Story of Raguel's Daughter; the frightening away the Devil by the Smoke of the Heart and Liver of a Fiſh, and curing of Tobit's Blindneſs by the Gall of the ſame) which are not ſo reconcileable to a rational Credibility. They look, indeed, more like the Fictions of Homer, than the Writings of a ſacred Hiſtorian, and give ſuch an Objection againſt this Book, as does not lie againſt any other; though it is certainly of great Uſe, to repreſent to us the Duties of Charity and Patience, in the Example of Tobit's ready helping his Brethren in Diſtreſs, to the uttermoſt of his Power; and his bearing, with a pious Submiſſion, the Calamities of his Captivity, Poverty, and Blindneſs, as long as they were inflicted on him.

The Samaritans, whence.

SHALMANEZER, having thus carried away the Iſraelites into Aſſyria, drew out ſeveral Colonies of his own People from Babylon, and other Provinces, and ſent them into Canaan, where they took Poſſeſſion of the Cities, and dwelt therein: But as they polluted the Holy Land with their Idolatries, [y] the Lord ſent his Lions among them, which deſtroyed them. The People imputing this Affliction to their not adoring the God of the Country in ſuch a Manner, as he might deſire, ſent into Aſſyria for one of the Prieſts of the Iſraelites, who, coming and dwelling at Bethel, taught them how to worſhip the God of Iſrael. [z] But then they only took him into the Number of their former Deities, and worſhipped him jointly with the Gods of the Nations from whence they came; ſo that, what with worſhipping their own Idols, and the true God at the ſame Time, they fell into a ſtrange and unaccountable Mixture of Religion, which was the firſt Beginning of that mungrel Set of People, which were afterwards called Samaritans.

Hezekiah's Piety.

THE Kingdom of Judah was of a longer Duration, and, at that Time, was governed by Hezekiah, a truly religious Prince, who allowed of no other Worſhip, through all his Dominions, but that of the Lord only, and as it was appointed in the Law of Moſes. To this Purpoſe [a] he cauſed the Gates of the Temple, which his Father Ahaz had ſhut up, to be opened, and its Fabrick to be repaired; ordered the Prieſts and Levites to cleanſe it; and, when it was ſanctified, renewed the uſual Sacrifices, celebrated the Paſſover, and, in ſhort, reſtored the ancient Worſhip in all its former Solemnity. Nay, not only ſo, but he deſtroyed the Altars of the falſe Gods; removed the high Places; cut down the Groves where the People went to worſhip; and [b] brake in Pieces the Brazen Serpent, which Moſes had ſet up in the Wilderneſs, becauſe, until that Time, the Children of Iſrael had burnt Incenſe unto it.

Sennacherib's Army deſtroyed, and how.

This Piety his God rewarded with a proſperous Reign, and a very ſignal Deliverance from the violent Attempts of Sennacherib, King of Aſſyria. For, while he was on his full March towards Jeruſalem, the very Night (as ſome think) that his Army came before it, with a thorough Purpoſe to deſtroy the Place, and all that was therein, [c] an Angel of the Lord went forth, and, in one Night ſmote, in the Camp of the Aſſyrians,

* The Church of Rome has received this Book into their Canon, but without a ſufficient Warrant: For even ſuppoſing the Hiſtorical Ground-Plot of the Book to be true, (which is the moſt that can be ſaid of it) yet it is certainly interlarded with many Fictions, which are purely the Invention of him that wrote it. Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. i. [x] Prideaux, ibid. [y] 2 Kings xvii. 25. [z] Ibid. ver. 33. [a] 2 Chron. xxix. 3. [b] Notwithſtanding this poſitive Declaration of the Holy Scripture, that the Brazen Serpent was in this Manner deſtroyed by Hezekiah; in the Church of St Ambroſe in Milan, the Romaniſts, at this Day, ſhew a Brazen Serpent, which they pretend is the very ſame, that Moſes ſet up in the Wilderneſs; and, upon this Belief, the Ignorant pay an idolatrous Devotion to it; though it muſt not be diſſembled, that, among their learned Men, there are ſome, that acknowledge the Cheat, and diſclaim it. Prideaux, ibid. [c] 2 Kings xix. 35. Herodotus, from the Relation of the Egyptian Prieſts, gives us [Lib. II.] a Kind of diſguiſed Account of this Deliverance from the Aſſyrians, in a fabulous Application of it to the City Peluſium, inſtead of Jeruſalem, and to Sethon, the Egyptian King, inſtead of Hezekiah; by whoſe Piety, he ſaith, it was obtained, that while the King of Aſſyria laid Siege to Peluſium, a great Number of Rats were miraculouſly ſent into his Army, which, in one Night, did eat Aſſyrians, an hundred fourſcore and five thouſand Men; ſo that, when he aroſe, he found almoſt all his Army dead Corpſes. This was ſo terrible a Judgment upon him, that he fled out of Judea in the utmoſt Confuſion, and made all the Haſte he could back again to Nineveh, where, by the Tyranny and Cruelty of his Government, he became at laſt ſo intolerable to his own Family, that even [d] two of his Sons conſpired againſt him, and ſlew him. Some of the Jewiſh Doctors are of Opinion, that this Deſtruction upon Sennacherib's Army was occaſioned by Lightning; but it ſeems moſt likely, that it was effected by bringing on them an hot peſtilential Wind, which [e] is frequent in thoſe Parts; and often, when it lights among a Multitude, deſtroys great Numbers of them in a Moment; as it frequently happens in thoſe vaſt Caravans of the Mahometans, who go their annual Pilgrimages to Mecca.

The Sun's Receſs upon Ahaz's Dial.

But by what Means ſoever this Deliverance was effected, it was certainly done by the Interpoſition of Providence, as was likewiſe his Recovery from a dangerous Diſeaſe, whereof he had Aſſurance by the Receſs of the Sun, as it appeared, upon the Dial of Ahaz: But of what Nature this Receſs was, there is ſome Uncertainty among Commentators. Moſt of the Moderns are of Opinion, that, whereas in the twentieth Chapter of the ſecond Book of Kings (wherein this Event is particularly related) no Mention is made of the Sun's going back, but only of the Shadow upon the Dial, which is repeated three ſeveral Times; and whereas the Degrees, or Lines in the Dial, may denote either Hours, or half Hours, (or [f] as ſome think) Minutes; they from thence conclude, that the Miracle was wrought upon the Dial only, and not upon the Body of the Sun, or that God, upon this Occaſion, made no Alteration in the Motion of the Heavens, but only, [g] by the Means of ſome extraordinary Meteors or Refractions, ſo diſpoſed the Rays of the Sun, and directed its Light, that no Shadow ſhould be projected, but where the Prophet foretold. The Prophet however, where himſelf gives the Account of the Miracle, tells us expreſsly, that [h] the Sun returned ten Degrees; and from hence the Opinion of the Ancients, both Jews and Chriſtians, has been, that the Miracle was not wrought upon the Shadow, but upon the Body of the Sun; or, that the Sun, (as [i] our excellent Biſhop Uſher, in his Annals, expreſſes it) and all the heavenly Bodies went back, and as much was detracted from the next Night, as was added to this Day. [k] The Retrogradation however was not of ſo long a Continuance, as to make any conſiderable Alteration in the heavenly Bodies. As ſoon as the Miracle was exhibited, we may ſuppoſe, that they all returned to their proper Stations, though, for the preſent, the Change was remarkable enough to raiſe the Wonder of the neighbouring Countries, eſpecially ſuch as had any Skill in Aſtronomy; for which Reaſons we read, that Berodach Baladan, King of Babylon, ſent Embaſſadors unto Hezekiah, not only to congratulate him upon his Recovery, but [l] to enquire likewiſe of the Wonder that was done in the Land.

Thus favoured and beloved of God, Hezekiah reigned in Peace, and, at his Death, was highly honoured by all Judah and Jeruſalem: For they buried him with great Solemnity, in the chiefeſt and higheſt Place of [m] the Sepulchres of the Sons of David, expreſſing thereby their Opinion of him, that he was the worthieſt and beſt of all, eat all their Shield-ſtraps, Quivers, and Bow-ſtrings; ſo that, on their riſing the next Morning, finding themſelves without Arms to carry on the War, they were forced to raiſe the Siege and be gone. Now it is very remarkable, that Herodotus calls the King of Aſſyria, to whom this happened, by the Name of Sennacherib, as the Scriptures do; which plainly enough ſhews, that this is the ſame Fact, though it be diſguiſed in the Relation. And, that it ſhould be thus diſguiſed, we need not wonder, when we conſider, that it comes to us through the Hands of ſuch, as had the greateſt Averſion both to the Nation and Religion of the Jews; and therefore would relate nothing in ſuch a Manner, as would give a Reputation to either. Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. i. [d] Some Commentators will have it, that he had vowed to ſacrifice his two Sons, Adrammelech and Sharezer, in order to appeaſe his Gods, and make them the more favourable to him in the Reſtoration of his Affairs; and that, to prevent this, they made bold and ſacrificed him firſt: But for this there is no Foundation, except that no other Thing can be thought on, to excuſe ſo wicked and deteſtable a Parricide. Prideaux, ibid. [e] Vid. Thevenot's Travels, Part II. Lib. 1. c. 20. [f] Vid. Voſſ. de Orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. Lib. II. c. 9. [g] Derham's Aſtro-Theology. [h] Iſa. xxxviii. 8. [i] A. M. 4001. [k] Patrick's Commentary on 2 Kings xx. 11. [l] 2 Chron. xxxii. 31. [m] This Burial-Place, which is called the Sepulchres of the Kings of the Houſe of David, is a very ſumptuous and ſtately Work. It lies now without the Walls of Jeruſalem, but (as it is ſuppoſed) was formerly within them, before the City was deſtroyed by the Romans. It conſiſts of a large Court, of about 120 Feet ſquare, with a Gallery, or Cloyſter on the Left-Hand, which Court and Gallery, with the Pillars that ſupport it, were cut out of the ſolid Marble-Rock. At the End of the Gallery, there is a narrow Paſſage or Hole, through which there is an Entrance into a large Room or Hall, of about 24 Feet ſquare, within which are ſeveral leſſer Rooms, one within another, with Stone-Doors opening into them; all which Rooms, with the great Hall, were likewiſe cut out of the ſolid Marble Rock. In the Sides of theſe leſſer Rooms are ſeveral Niches, in which the Corpſes of the deceaſed Kings are depoſited in Stone-Coffins; and in the innermoſt, and chiefeſt of theſe, was the Body of good Hezekiah laid, in a Nich cut out on Purpoſe, in the upper Part of the Room, to do him the greater Honour. The whole ſeems to have been the Work of King Solomon: For it could not have been made without vaſt Expence. It is ſtill entire to this Day, and is the only true Remainder of old Jeruſalem now to be ſeen in that Place. Prideaux, ibid.

that had reigned over them, of that Family, ſince him, that was the Founder of it.

Of the World, 3396, &c. Before Chriſt, 608, &c.

IT was the Misfortune of King Hezekiah to be ſucceeded by a Son, who was the wickedeſt, and worſt of all his Race: For after him reigned [n] Manaſſeh, who being a Minor, of twelve Years old only, when he came to the Crown, had the Misfortune to fall into the Hands of ſuch of the Nobility, for his Guardians and chief Miniſters, as, being ill-affected to his Father's Reformation, took effectual Care to breed him up in the greateſt Averſion to it, and to corrupt his Youth with the worſt of Principles, both as to Religion and Government; inſomuch, that when he grew up, he proved the moſt impious towards God, and the moſt tyrannical and wicked towards his Subjects, of any, that ever reigned, either in Jeruſalem, or Samaria. For he not only reſtored all Kinds of Idolatry, but converted the Houſe of God into an Idol-Temple, ſet up an Image in the Sanctuary, erected Altars to Baalim, and all the Hoſt of Heaven, in both the Courts; made his Children paſs through the Fire to Moloch; and, in ſhort, brought in all Manner of idolatrous Profanations, whereby the true Religion might be moſt corrupted, and all Manner of Impiety the moſt promoted in the Kingdom. And, to this Purpoſe, he not only practiſed theſe Abominations himſelf, but raiſed a terrible Perſecution againſt all, that would not comply with them; whereby he filled the whole Land with innocent Blood, and put many of the Prophets, who adventured to reprove him (and, among theſe, the Prophet Iſaiah, who was ſawn aſunder) to violent and very barbarous Deaths. Provoked at theſe horrid Impieties, God ſolemnly declared, that he would [o] ſtretch out over Jeruſalem the Line of Samaria, and the Plummet of the Houſe of Ahab, and wipe Jeruſalem clean, of all its Inhabitants, as a Man wipeth a Diſh, and turneth it upſide down: Which, in Proceſs of Time, was fully executed; but, for the preſent, he only ſtirred up the Aſſyrians to make an Incurſion into Judea, who committed great Outrages in the Country, and, ſeizing the King, put him in Irons, and, with a great Number of his People, carried him away Priſoner to Babylon. But when his Chains and Priſon had brought him to himſelf, he repented of his Sins, and (God mollifying the Heart of the King of Babylon towards him) was reſtored to his Liberty, and returned to Jeruſalem; where he deſtroyed the idolatrous Worſhip, he had before eſtabliſhed, and, for the Remainder of his Days, devoted himſelf entirely to the Service of God, for which he vouchſafed him a very ſignal Deliverance.

Manaſſeh's Wickedneſs, and Reformation.

NABUCHODONOSOR, King of Aſſyria, having defeated and taken Arphaxad, King of the Medes, propoſed to himſelf to ſubdue the Nations of Aſia to the Weſtward. On which Expedition he ſent his General Holofernes with a mighty Army, who, ſpreading Terror in all Parts, made himſelf Maſter of Meſopotamia, Syria, Lybia, and Cilicia; and, at length, coming into Judæa, and laying Siege to [p] Bethulia, was there deſtroyed, and all his Army cut to pieces, in ſuch a Manner, as is related at large in the Book of Judith: But whether this Book be true, or feigned Hiſtory only, is what learned Men are not ſo well agreed in.

The Book of Judith conſidered.

THE Romaniſts indeed will have it to be all true; for they have received it into the Canon of divine Writ: But many Proteſtant Writers [q] account it rather a parabolical, than real Hiſtory, deſigned for the Comfort and Inſtruction of the Jews under a Figure or Allegory, but not to be a Narrative of any Thing really done. [r] Grotius, in particular, is very poſitive, that this Book was written in the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes, when he came into Judæa to raiſe a Perſecution againſt the Jewiſh Church; and that the Deſign of it was, to confirm the Jews, under that Perſecution, in their Hopes, that God would ſend them a Deliverance. He tells us, "that therein by "Judith is repreſented Judæa; by Bethulia, the Temple or Houſe of God; and "by the Sword, which went out from thence, the Prayers of the Saints; that Na"buchodonoſor doth there denote the Devil; and the Kingdom of Aſſyria, the Devil's "Kingdom, Pride; that by Holofernes is meant the Inſtrument of the Devil in that "Perſecution, [n] 2 Kings xx. 21. [o] Ibid. xxi. 13. [p] Bethulia, according to Calmet, [before his Commentary on the Book of Judith] was the ſame with Bethul, [Joſh. xix. 4.] a City in the Tribe of Simeon, where ſtood a famous Pantheon, or Temple dedicated to all the Gods, ſituate on a riſing Hill, and ſo overlooking the whole City; from whence, very probably, the Place was called Bethul, i. e. the Houſe of God. Travellers indeed tell us of another Place, called Bethulia, ſituate in the Tribe of Zebulon, to the North of Scythopolis: But that is of too modern a Date, to be the Place here intended, ſince neither Joſhua, nor Joſephus, nor Euſebius, nor St Jerome, make any Mention of it. [q] What hath led theſe Men to account the whole an Allegory is its utter Inconſiſtency (if taken in a true and literal Senſe) with all the Times, where it has been placed, either before or after the Captivity of the Jews: But the Objections, brought to this Purpoſe, are all taken off, by our placing it in the latter Part of Manaſſeh's Reign. Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. I. [r] In Præfatione ad Annotationes in Librum.

" Perſecution, Antiochus Epiphanes, who made himſelf Maſter of Judæa, that fair " Widow, ſo called, becauſe deſtitute of Relief; and that Eliakim ſignifies God, who " would ariſe in her Defence, and at length cut off that Inſtrument of the Devil, who " would have corrupted her." All this Explication is very ingenious; but then it muſt be owned, that, as there is not much of the Air of a Fiction or Parable in the Book, ſo both the Jews and ancient Chriſtians always looked upon it as a true Hiſtory, and have accordingly quoted it, though the former never admitted it into the Number of their Canonical and Inſpired Writings.

Joſiah's great Piety.

AFTER Manaſſeh, reigned [s] Amon his Son, who imitating the firſt Part of his Father's Reign, rather than the latter, gave himſelf up to all Manner of Wickedneſs and Impiety; whereupon the Servants of his Houſe conſpired againſt him, and ſlew him, ſo that, after two Years Reign, he was ſucceeded [t] by his Son Joſiah, who was then but eight Years old: But having the Happineſs to fall under the Conduct of better Guardians, in his Minority, than did Manaſſeh, his Grandfather, he proved, when grown up, a Prince of very extraordinary Worth, and not only equalled, but even excelled, in all Kinds of Piety and Goodneſs, the very beſt of his Predeceſſors. For immediately, upon his Acceſſion to the Throne, he not only deſtroyed the Idols, and Altars of Baal, but that of Bethel likewiſe; and thoſe, that were in the High-Places, together with all other Things, that tended to Idolatry. Nay, himſelf viſited Bethel in Perſon, cauſed the Bones of the idolatrous Prieſts to be dug up, and burnt upon one of the Altars, according to the Predictions, that had been made of him ſome hundred Years before; and, in this Manner, carried on a general Reformation, through all the Cities of Samaria, that were ſubject to his Dominion. In the mean Time, he ordered the Temple at Jeruſalem to be repaired and beautified, which while the High-Prieſt was narrowly ſurveying, in order to ſee what was proper to be done, he found the authentick Copy of the Law of Moſes, which ought indeed to have been laid up on the Side of the Ark of the Covenant, in the moſt Holy Place, but was taken out from thence, and hid elſewhere, in the Reign of Manaſſeh (as is conjectur'd) for fear it might be deſtroyed by him, in the Time of his Impiety. [u] By the Behaviour of the High-Prieſt, as well as the King, at the finding of the Book of the Law, it plainly appears, that neither of them had ſeen any Copy of it before; which ſhews into how corrupt a State the Church of the Jews was then ſunk, until this good King reformed it. For, though Hezekiah * kept Scribes on Purpoſe to collect together, and write out Copies of the holy Scriptures; yet, through the Iniquity of the Times that afterwards followed, in the Reigns of Manaſſeh and Amon, they had either been ſo deſtroyed, or elſe ſo neglected and loſt, that there were none of them left in the Land, unleſs in ſome few private Hands, were they were kept and concealed, till this Copy was found in the Temple: And therefore, after this Time (by the Care, we may be aſſured, of this religious Prince) were tranſcribed thoſe Copies of the Law, and other holy Scriptures then in being, out of which Ezra, after the Captivity, made his Edition of Canonical Books, as we ſhall take notice of hereafter.

A Copy of the Law found in the Temple.

Of the World, 3392, &c. Before Chriſt, 612, &c.

IT was in the 29th Year of the Reign of Joſiah, that Nabopollaſer, King of Babylon, having made an Affinity with Aſtyages, the eldeſt Son of Cyaxares, by the Marriage of Nebuchadnezzar, his Son, with Amyitis, Daughter to Aſtyages, entered into a Confederacy with him againſt the Aſſyrians: Whereupon, joining their Forces together, they beſieged Nineveh, took it, and ſlew the King thereof; and then, to gratify the Medes, utterly deſtroyed that great and ancient City. For [x] though there was another erected out of the Ruins of it, which, for a long Time, bore the ſame Name; yet it never attained to the Grandeur and Glory of the Mother City. It is, at this Time, called Moſul, and is ſituated on the Weſt-Side of the River Tigris; whereas the ancient Nineveh ſtood on the Eaſt-Side of it, where are to be ſeen ſome of its Ruins, of great Extent, even to this Day. And indeed the Extent of it could not but be very large, when, according to the Account of [y] an Author of good Authority, the Circuit of it was four hundred and eighty Furlongs, which, in our Computation, makes ſixty Miles; and, when, even in Jonah's Time, the Number of thoſe, who [z] could not diſcern between their Right-Hand and their Left, i. e. of Infants, that had not yet attained to the Uſe of Reaſon, being more than ſixſcore thouſand Perſons, could not fail [a] of making the whole amount to above ſix hundred thouſand Souls.

The Deſtruction of Nineveh.

THE

[s] 2 Kings xxi. 19. [t] Ibid. chap. xxii. [u] Ibid. xxii. 8, &c. * Prov. xxv. 1.
Thevenot's Travels, P. II. L. I. c. 11. [y] Diodorus Siculus, L. II. [z] Jonah iv. 11.
Calmet's Dictionary, on the Word Nineveh.

The Death of Joſiah,

THE Babylonians and Medes, having thus deſtroyed Nineveh, became ſo very formidable, that they raiſed the Jealouſy of all their Neighbours; and therefore to put a Stop to their growing Greatneſs, Necho, King of Egypt, marched with a great Army towards Euphrates, with a Deſign to make War upon them: But, taking his Way through Judæa, and deſiring of Joſiah a free Paſſage, which Joſiah refuſing, and poſting his Army at proper Places, in order to obſtruct his March; they ſoon came to an Engagement, wherein the King of Judah received a Wound, of which he ſhortly after died. The Death of ſo excellent a Prince was deſervedly lamented by all his People; and by none more than by Jeremiah the Prophet, who, having a thorough Senſe of the Greatneſs of the Loſs, as well as a full Foreſight of the ſore Calamities, which were afterwards to follow upon the whole People of the Jews, while his Heart was full with the View of both theſe, he compoſed the greateſt Part of that mournful Song, which is called the Lamentations of Jeremy.

and why occaſioned.

IT is the Notion of many, that Joſiah engaged raſhly and unadviſedly in this War, upon an Over-Confidence in the Merit of his Undertakings. But this would be a Preſumption very unbecoming ſo religious a Perſon, and what there is no Occaſion for ſuppoſing, ſo long as there is a much better Reaſon to be given for what he did. [b] From the Time of Manaſſeh's Reſtoration, the Kings of Judah were Homagers to the Kings of Babylon, and bound by Oath to adhere to them againſt all their Enemies, and eſpecially to defend that Border of the Empire, againſt the Egyptians: For which Purpoſe they ſeem to have had a Conceſſion of the other Parts of the Land of Canaan, which were inhabited by the Children of Iſrael, before their Captivity; as it is certain that Joſiah exerciſed a Juriſdiction over them. And therefore had Joſiah, under ſuch an Obligation, permitted an Enemy of the King of Babylon to paſs through his Country to make War upon him, without any Oppoſition, it would have amounted to the Breach of his Oath, and a Violation of that Fidelity, which he had, in the Name of his God, ſworn unto him; and this, ſo good and juſt a Man, as Joſiah was, could not but abſolutely deteſt. 'Twas not from any Preſumption of his own Merit therefore, but from a real Senſe of his Duty, that he engaged in this War, wherein he unhappily fell, and with him fell all the Glory, Honour, and Proſperity of the Jewiſh Nation. For, after this Time, nothing elſe enſued, but a diſmal Scene of God's Judgments upon the Land, till, at length, all Judah and Jeruſalem were ſwallowed up by a woeful Deſtruction.

The Captivity of Judah, and Deſtruction of Jeruſalem.

FOR (not to mention the intermediate Reigns, which were remarkable for nothing ſo much, as for their Wickedneſs) ſoon after Jehoiakim came to the Throne, [c] Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, invaded Judæa, beſieged Jeruſalem, and took it, and carried away the King, and Part of the Veſſels of the Temple, into Babylon; but afterwards, upon Condition, that Jehoiakim ſhould become tributary to him, he releaſed him, and reſtored him to his Dominions. It was not long however before Jehoiakim revoked his Subjection; whereupon Judæa was again invaded, Jeruſalem again beſieged, and Jehoiakim in a Sally taken and ſlain; and when Jehoiachin his Son ſurrendered the Town, he obtained no other Favour, than barely to ſave his Life: For he was immediately put in Chains, and carried to Babylon, and with him a vaſt Number of Captives, his Mother and Wives, his Officers and Princes, the mighty Men of Valour to recruit the King's Army, and Artificers of all Kinds to carry on his Building at Babylon, together with all the Treaſures of the Houſe of the Lord, and all the Riches, that were found in the King's Houſe. He left, in ſhort, none behind, but the very Refuſe of the People; yet over theſe he made Mattaniah (giving him the Name of [d] Zedekiah, and requiring an Oath of Subjection of him) King. But, after ſome Time, Zedekiak, having entered into a League with Pharaoh Hophra, King of Egypt, and thereupon broken his Oath to the King of Babylon, the King of Babylon drew together a great Army; and, in a ſhort Time, coming before Jeruſalem, he ſo cloſely begirt it, that the People were reduced to the laſt Extremity, and forced to feed upon one another for Want. In this ſad Condition the City was taken by Storm, and when the King, with ſome of his beſt Forces, had broken through the Enemy's Camp, and endeavoured to eſcape over Jordan, he was ſoon overtaken in the Plains of Jericho, where the few, that were with him, were diſperſed, and himſelf, being being made Priſoner, was carried to Nebuchadnezzar, then reſiding at Riblah in Syria, who (to augment his Grief) having cauſed his Sons, and all the Princes that diſſuaded the Surrender of the Town, to be put to death before his Face, commanded his Eyes to be put out, and, binding him in Fetters of Braſs, carried him in Triumph to Babylon, where he died in Priſon. Soon after this, Nebuzaradan Captain of his Guards, having plundered the Houſe of the Lord, and every Houſe in Jeruſalem, of all the Wealth, that he could any where find, ſet the Temple and the City on Fire, overthrew the Walls, Fortreſſes, and Towers belonging to them; and utterly razed every Building therein, until he had brought it to a perfect Deſolation. And in this Condition it remained for fifty-two Years after, when, by the Favour of Cyrus, the Jews were releaſed from their Captivity, and, returning to their own Land again, repaired theſe Ruins, and rebuilt their holy City.

[b] Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. IV. [c] 2 Kings xxiv. 10. [d] Zedekiah, in the Chaldee Tongue, ſignifies the Juſtice of the Lord, and Nebuchadnezzar, in giving Mattaniah that Name, intended to remind him continually of the Vengeance, which he was to expect from the Juſtice of the Lord his God, in Caſe he violated that Fidelity, which he had, in ſo ſolemn a Manner, ſworn unto him. Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. I.

SECT. III.

Occurrences during the Captivity.

Of the World, 3417, &c. Before Chriſt, 587, &c.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR, returning to Babylon, after the End of the Jewiſh War, and the full Settlement of his Affairs in Syria and Paleſtine, out of the Spoils, which he had taken in that Expedition, made a Golden Image to the Honour of [e] Bel, his God, whoſe [f] Height was threeſcore Cubits, and the Breadth thereof ſix Cubits, which he ſet up in the Plains of Dura, with a poſitive Injunction for every one of his Subjects to worſhip it. The whole Story is at large related in the third Chapter of Daniel; but how Daniel eſcaped the fiery Furnace, to which his three Friends, upon this Occaſion, were condemned, is made a Matter of Enquiry by ſome. That he did not fall down and worſhip the Idol is moſt certain, becauſe ſuch an impious Act could no where comport with the Character of ſo religious a Man: And therefore we muſt ſay, that, either he was abſent, or elſe, being preſent, was not accuſed. Nebuchadnezzar, we read, had ſummoned all his Princes, Counſellors, Governors, Captains, and other Officers and Miniſters, to come to the Dedication of this Image; and therefore it is hardly ſuppoſable, that Daniel, who was become one of the Chief of them, ſhould be abſent. That he was preſent therefore ſeems moſt probable; but his Enemies thought it not adviſable to begin with him, becauſe of the ſingular Eſteem which the King had for him, for having ſo lately interpreted his Dream of the Image, made up of different Metals, which all the Magicians, and Aſtrologers, and Sorcerers, and Chaldeans, that were in his Kingdom, could not do. They thought it more proper therefore to fall firſt on his three Friends, and by that Means to pave their Way to the other's Deſtruction afterwards. But the miraculous Interpoſition of Providence in Behalf of his Friends quaſhed all farther Accuſations about this Matter, and ſo Daniel's Name was not once called in queſtion.

Why Daniel was not thrown into the fiery Furnace with his three Friends.

DANIEL, who was deſcended from the Royal Race of David, was one of thoſe noble Youths, [g] who, at the firſt Captivity of Judah, was made choice of for his Wit and Beauty, and carried away to Babylon, with his three Companions, to be inſtructed in the Language and Learning of the Country, in order to qualify them to ſtand before the King, and ſerve him. He had made great Proficiency in all the Arts and Sciences of the Chaldeans; but Nebuchadnezzar, perceiving that there was a Power ſuperior to all Sciences communicated to him, advanced him to be [h] Chief of the Governors of the wiſe Men, and Ruler over all the Province of Babylon. With him he lived in great Credit and Eſteem: And when he had interpreted his Dream, concerning the great and ſpacious Tree, that was hewn down, ſo as to import his own approaching Calamity, he had nevertheleſs that Authority with him, as to interpoſe this wholeſome Counſel: [i] Wherefore, O King, break off thy Sins with Righteouſneſs, and thine Iniquities by ſhewing Mercy to the Poor, if peradventure there may be a lengthening of thy Tranquillity.

[e] Bel, or Baal, is the ſame with Belus, who, being the firſt King of Babylon, had, after his Death, divine Honours paid him, and a noble Temple built in that City, and conſecrated to him; which ſtood, until Xerxes, in his Return from his Grecian Expedition, demoliſhed, and laid it in Rubbiſh, after he had plundered it of its immenſe Riches. Vid. Calmet's Dictionary on the Word Bel, and Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. i. [f] When this Image is ſaid to be 60 Cubits, i. e. 90 Feet high, it muſt be underſtood of the Image and Pedeſtal all together: For, ſince it is but ſix Cubits broad or thick, its Height (if 60 Cubits) muſt have been ten Times its Breadth or Thickneſs, which exceeds all the Proportions of a Man; becauſe no Man's Height is above ſix Times its Thickneſs, meaſuring the ſlendereſt Man living at the Waiſt. 'Tis very likely therefore, that this Image was the very ſame with that which, as Diodorus Siculus tells us, was ſet up in the Temple of Belus, and was no more than 40 Feet high, or thereabouts; for this makes the Proportion between its Height and Breadth very juſt: Beſides that the ſame Diodorus tells us, that this of 40 Feet high contained a thouſand Babyloniſh Talents of Gold, which amounts to three Millions and half of our Money, and therefore to advance the Height of the Statue to 90 Feet without the Pedeſtal, will increaſe the Value to a Sum utterly incredible. Prideaux ibid. [g] Dan. i. 3, 4. [h] Ibid. ii. 48.

Nebuchadnezzar's being turned into a Beaſt, and the Occaſion of it.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR, who had ſeen the verifying of Daniel's Propheſies, and likewiſe been Eye-witneſs of God's great Power and Providence, might have been depreſſed in Mind, one would think, upon the Apprehenſions of ſuch an impending Judgment: But, inſtead of humbling himſelf, and deprecating it by Repentance; as he was walking, not long after, in his Palace at Babylon, moſt likely in his hanging Gardens, and in the uppermoſt Terraſs of them, from whence he might have a full Proſpect of that vaſt and overgrown City, he oſtentatiouſly ſaid, [k] Is not this great Babylon, which I have built, for the Houſe of the Kingdom, by the Might of my Power, and for the Honour of my Majeſty? But while the Words were yet in his Mouth, there came a Voice to him from Heaven to rebuke his Pride, which told him, that his Kingdom was departed from him, and that he ſhould be driven from the Society of Men, and thenceforth, for ſeven Years, have his Dwelling with the wild Beaſts of the Field, there to live like them in a brutal Manner. Immediately hereupon he fell into a Diſtemper, which made ſuch a Change in his Imagination, that he thought himſelf transformed into an Ox; and accordingly aſſumed the ſame Inclinations and Manner of Life, eating Graſs as Oxen do, and taking his Lodging on the Ground, in the open Air, [l] until his Hair (as the Text expreſſes it) was grown like Eagles Feathers, and his Nails like Birds Claws.

SEVERAL Interpreters indeed impute his abſenting himſelf from all human Society, and retreating into the Fields in this Manner, not to any Diſtemper of his own, but to a Compulſion put upon him by his Subjects Rebellion; who, weary of his Tyranny, conſpired againſt him, and forced him to fly, placing, in the mean Time, his Son Evil-Merodach upon the Throne. But, though it ſeems not unlikely, that, during his Diſtraction, his Son might be admitted to the Adminiſtration of the Government; yet, at the End of the ſeven Years, when his Underſtanding returned to him again, his Subjects, we find, were ſo far from being offended at any Miſconduct of his, that they ſent a Deputation of his Lords and Counſellors to re-call him, and re-eſtabliſh him in his Kingdom, with more Glory and Majeſty than ever; whereupon he extolled and honoured the King of Heaven, [m] whoſe Dominion is an everlaſting Dominion, whoſe Works are Truth, and his Ways Judgment, and to whom all the Inhabitants of the Earth are reputed as nothing; and, by a publick Decree, made Acknowledgment hereof, through all the Babyloniſh Empire, praiſing the Almighty Power, and magnifying the divine Mercy and Goodneſs, in his late Reſtoration: And in this good Diſpoſition 'tis preſumable he died; becauſe one of the laſt Acts of his Life [n] is ſaid to have been his foretelling his Subjects of the Coming of the Perſians, to deſtroy the Babyloniſh Empire; [o] wherein he teſtified the Faith and Confidence he had, in what the God of Heaven had declared unto him by the Mouth of his Prophet Daniel.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR was ſucceeded by his Son Evil-Merodach, who took Compaſſion on Jehoiachin, the Captive King of Judah, and releaſing him from his Impriſonment, in the ſeven and thirtieth Year of his Captivity, treated him with great Reſpect, and allowed him an honourable Maintenance, with the Right of Precedence before all other Princes in Babylon. He reigned but two Years, and was ſucceeded by his Son Belſhazzar, a profane and luxurious Prince, who, in the Midſt of his Rioting and Drunkenneſs, fell a Sacrifice to the Medes and Perſians, when they took his Royal City by a Stratagem, (which we ſhall ſhortly have Occaſion to mention) and, at the ſame Time, deſtroyed the Babyloniſh Empire, after it had continued from the Beginning of the Reign of Nabonaſſar (who firſt founded it) two hundred and nine Year. After Belſhazzar, Cyaxares, whom the Scripture calls Darius the Mede, aſſumed the Throne, and, beſtowing great Marks of his Favour on Daniel, intended to have made him his prime Miniſter, as he had been in ſome preceding Reigns; but the Thoughts of this ſtirred up ſo great Envy againſt him among the other Courtiers, that they laid [p] ſuch a Snare for him, as caſt him into the Lions Den. But the Providence of God appeared ſo viſibly in his Preſervation from all Harm, Daniel delivered from the Lions.

[i] Dan. iv. 27. [k] Ibid. ver. 30. [l] Ibid. ver. 33. [m] Ibid. ver. 34, &c. [n] Abydenus apud Euſeb. Præp. Evan. Lib. IX. [o] Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. i. [p] Dan. vi.

Harm, that this malicious Contrivance ended in the Deſtruction of its Authors, the Manifeſtation of God's Glory, and the Eſtabliſhment of Daniel in the Prince's Favour.

His Prayers to God,

THE Time, which the Prophet Jeremiah had prefixed for the Continuance of Judah's Captivity, being now drawing towards a Concluſion, Daniel thought it his Duty to humble himſelf before God, and to make his ardent Supplications to him, [q] that he would remember his People, and grant a Reſtoration to Jeruſalem, and make his Face ſhine again upon his holy City, and upon his Sanctuary which was deſolate. Whereupon, he had, in a Viſion, Aſſurance given him, by the Angel Gabriel, not only of the Deliverance of Judah from their temporal Captivity, under the Babyloni-ans; but alſo of a much greater Redemption, which God would give his Church, in his delivering them from their Spiritual Captivity, under Sin and Satan, to be accompliſhed at the End of ſeventy Weeks, from the going forth of the Commandment to rebuild Jeruſalem. The Words of the Propheſy are theſe: [r] Seventy Weeks are determined upon thy People, and upon thy holy City, to finiſh the Tranſgreſſion, and to make an End of Sins, and to make Reconciliation for Iniquity, and to bring in everlaſting Righteouſneſs, and to ſeal up the Viſion and Propheſy, and to anoint the moſt holy. Know therefore and underſtand, that, from the going forth of the Commandment to reſtore and to build Jeruſalem, unto the Meſſiah the Prince, ſhall be ſeven Weeks; and threeſcore and two Weeks, the Street ſhall be built again, and the Wall, even in troublous Times. And after threeſcore and two Weeks ſhall the Meſſiah be cut off, but not for himſelf: And the People of the Prince, that ſhall come, ſhall deſtroy the City, and the Sanctuary, and the End thereof ſhall be with a Flood, and to the End of the War Deſolations are determined; and he ſhall confirm the Covenant with many for one Week; and, in the Midſt of the Week, he ſhall cauſe the Sacrifice and the Oblation to ceaſe; and for the overſpreading of Abominations, he ſhall make it deſolate, even until the Conſummation, and that determined ſhall be poured out upon the Deſolate. Now to ſet theſe Words in a right Light, we muſt conſider, 1. That the main Purport and Intendment of them is to foretel the Coming of the Meſſiah, his aboliſhing the Jewiſh, and ſetting up a new, and more perfect Religion; which is ſo manifeſt to every common Reader, that the Jews (to avoid the Force of this one Propheſy) have adventured to exclude the whole Book of Daniel from the Number of inſpired Writings. 2. It is agreed by moſt Interpreters, [s] that the ſeventy Weeks here ſpoken of (according to the Prophetick Stile) are to be taken for Weeks of Years, every one of which contains ſeven Years, and ſo, the ſeventy Weeks will amount to 490 Years: At the Expiration of which Term, the Matters contained in this Propheſy were to have their Accompliſhment. But then the Queſtion is, at what Point of Time the ſeventy Weeks, or, what is all one, theſe 490 Years, either began or expired; for, if we can happily find out one of the Periods, there will be leſs Difficulty in ſtating the other. Now, 3. It ſeems pretty plain, that the ſeveral Events, ſpecified in the Beginning of the Propheſy, viz. 1. To finiſh, or reſtrain Tranſgreſſions; 2. To make an End of Sins; 3. To make Expiation, or, Reconciliation for Iniquity; 4. To bring in everlaſting Righteouſneſs; 5. To ſeal up, or compleat, and fulfil Viſion and Propheſy; and, 6. To anoint the moſt Holy, were all accompliſhed in that great Work of our Salvation, by the Death and Paſſion, and by the Doctrine and Reſurrection of our Saviour Chriſt. For, being born without original, and having lived without actual Sin, he truly was the moſt Holy of all, that ever bore our Nature; and, being thereby fully qualified for this great Work, he was anointed with the Holy Ghoſt, and with Power, to be our Prieſt, our Prophet, and our King. As our Prieſt, he offered himſelf a Sacrifice upon the Croſs, and thereby made Atonement for our Sins, which is making an End of them, by taking away their Guilt; and, in ſo doing, working Reconciliation for us with God. As our Prophet, he gave us the Goſpel, a Law of everlaſting Righteouſneſs, and the only Revelation we are to expect; and, as our King, he ſent his holy Spirit into our Hearts, to guide and influence us according to this Law; whereby he has taken an effectual Method to reſtrain and extinguiſh in us all Manner of Tranſgreſſions; and, in doing all this, he hath ſealed up, i. e. fulfilled and thoroughly finiſhed all, that, by Viſions and Propheſies, had been before revealed concerning him. Since therefore all theſe Events were brought to paſs, and accompliſhed, at the Time of Chriſt's Death, this muſt determine us where to fix the End of the Weeks, wherein the Events were to be accompliſhed: And if the End of theſe Weeks and famous Propheſy ſtated and explained.

[q] Dan. ix. [r] Ibid. ver. 24, &c. [s] Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. v.

Weeks is to be fixed at the Death of Chriſt; then, 4thly, This will determine us where to place the Beginning of them, viz. 490 Years before; which is [t] the very Year and Month, wherein Ezra had his Commiſſion from Artaxerxes Longimanus, King of Perſia, for his returning to Jeruſalem, there to reſtore the Church and State of the Jews.

An Objection againſt this Explanation anſwered.

THE only Objection againſt this Computation is, "that the Words of the Pro-"pheſy ſeem to denote a real Building of the City, ſince it makes mention of its "Streets and Walls; whereas that Work was executed, upon the Decree granted by "Cyrus, ſeveral Years before Ezra was in Commiſſion." But this Objection will appear of little Force, if once it be conſidered, that figurative Expreſſions are in a Manner neceſſary in Propheſies, and that nothing is more common in Scripture, than, by Jeruſalem in particular, to mean the whole Political and Eccleſiaſtical State of that People. The Commiſſion itſelf however determines the Controverſy. For, if we look into it, we ſhall find, that the King gave Ezra full Power and Authority to reſtore the Law of Moſes, and fully re-eſtabliſh it both in Church and State; to appoint Magiſtrates and Judges; to govern the People according to it; and to puniſh all ſuch, as ſhould be refractory and diſobedient, either by Death, Baniſhment, Impriſonment, or Confiſcation of Goods, according to the Nature of their Crimes; which is reſtoring and building Jeruſalem in a figurative Senſe.

THERE is another Difficulty, obſervable in this Propheſy, which deſerves our Attention, and that is, the Diviſion of the ſeventy Weeks into three diſtinct Periods, i. e. into ſeven Weeks, ſixty-two Weeks, and one Week; to each of which a different Event is aſſigned. In the ſeven Weeks, or forty-nine Years, from the going forth of the Commandment, the Streets and Walls of Jeruſalem, i. e. the Reſtoration and Eſtabliſtment of the Church and State of the Jews is to be accompliſhed. In the ſixty-two Weeks, or 434 Years more, the Meſſiah is to come, and make his Appearance in the World; and in one Week, or ſeven Years after this, he is to confirm a Covenant with many, and cauſe the Sacrifice and Oblation to ceaſe: All which was literally fulfilled. For, in the Space of forty-nine Years, which anſwers to ſeven Weeks, the Reformation and Eſtabliſhment of the Jewiſh Church and State was carried on, and compleated; firſt by Ezra, in Virtue of a Decree, granted him in the ſeventh Year of Artaxerxes, and afterwards by Nehemiah, in Virtue of another, granted him by the ſame Prince, in the twentieth Year of his Reign. From that Time, in the Space of 434 Years, which anſwers to ſixty-two Weeks, our bleſſed Saviour appeared in the World as the Meſſiah, and for ſeven Years after that, firſt by his Forerunner John the Baptiſt, for the Space of three Years and a half; and then by himſelf in Perſon, for three Years and an half more, (which being put together make up the laſt Week in the Propheſy) he confirmed the Covenant of the Goſpel with as many of the Jews, as were converted, and embraced thoſe Laws of everlaſting Righteouſneſs, which he publiſhed: And, at length, by the Sacrifice of his moſt precious Blood, made all other Victims and Oblations, which were but Types and Emblems of his, for ever ceaſe and be aboliſhed.

AS to the other Part of the Propheſy, it relates ſo evidently to the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, that it needs no Explanation. Whoever has read Joſephus cannot but obſerve, that by the Deſtruction of the City and Sanctuary by the People of the Prince, that was to come, who, with their Armies, and deſolating Abominations, ſhould invade Judea, as with a Flood, and, by a terrible and conſuming War, bring utter Ruin and Deſolation upon it, and upon all the People of the Jews, that ſhould dwell therein, can be meant nothing, but Titus, at the Head of a Roman Army, executing the Wrath of God, for the Murther of his Son our Saviour, upon that devoted City and People, in ſuch a terrible and tragical Manner, as their Hiſtorian has related it. But to return.

Of the World, 3467, &c. Before Chriſt, 537, &c.

Cyrus's Actions, and Decree for the Reſtoration of the Jews.

AFTER the Death of Darius the Mede, Cyrus, who by the Death of his Father Cambyſes, was already become King of Perſia, returned to Babylon, and, taking upon him the Government of the [u] whole, was the firſt Founder of what was called the Perſian Empire. He was indeed a very extraordinary Perſon, in the Age wherein he lived, for Wiſdom, Virtue, and Valour. His aſſiſting his Uncle Cyaxares, and vanquiſhing

[t] Moſt learned Men agree, that the Death of Chriſt happened in the Year of the Julian Period 4746, and in the Jewiſh Month Niſan; and therefore, if we reckon 490 Years backward, this will lead us up to the Month Niſan, in the Year of the Julian Period 4256, which, according to Ptolemy's Canon, was the ſeventh Year of Artaxerxes's Reign, in which the Scripture tells us, [Ezra vii. 7.] that his Commiſſion was granted.

[u] i. e. Of all Media, Perſia, and Aſſyria.

vanquiſhing his Enemies, when the King of Babylon and other confederate Powers had conſpired his Ruin; his ſubduing Cræſus, King of Lydia, and afterward receiving him into his moſt intimate Counſels; and his taking the great City of Babylon, by draining the Euphrates, in a Manner almoſt incredible: Theſe, and many more of his martial Exploits, are recorded by the * Authors, that have enquired into his Life: But what makes him ſo famous in holy Writ is, his being appointed, by Name, to be the Reſtorer of the State of Iſrael, above an hundred and fifty Years before he was born. [x] The Propheſies relating to this Matter, Joſephus tells us, he had read, as, indeed, we find them recited [y] in the Decree for rebuilding the Temple. So good a Man as Daniel, who had the Reſtoration of his Brethren ſo much at Heart, and, in the Station he filled, ſo eaſy an Acceſs to this Prince, can hardly be ſuppoſed to be backward in employing the Credit and Intereſt, he had with him, to perſuade him to a Thing, ſo good in itſelf, and ſo highly conducive to his immortal Honour. But, whatever ſecond Cauſes might contribute hereunto, 'twas God's overruling Power, which turneth the Hearts of Princes which Way he pleaſes, that, in the firſt Year of his Monarchy over the Eaſt, put it in his Royal Breaſt to iſſue out a Decree for the rebuilding of the Temple at Jeruſalem, and the Return of the Jews to their own Country. Whereupon he reſtored to them all the ſacred Veſſels and Utenſils, which had been brought to Babylon in the Reign of Nebuchadnezzar, and gave them all the farther Encouragement, that their Rulers could requeſt.

SECT. IV.

Occurrences after the Return of the Jews.

Of the World, 3468, &c. Before Chriſt, 536, &c.

WHEN the Jews were returned from their Captivity, under the Conduct of their chief Leaders, Zerubbabel and Joſhua, they immediately ſet about the building of the Temple; [z] but the Samaritans coming, and offering their Aſſiſtance as well as to join with them in the ſame religious Communion, (which the Jews, for good Reaſons, thought fit to reject) they became their utter Enemies: And though they could not procure a Revocation of the Decree, which Cyrus had granted, yet, by Bribes and underhand Dealings with his Miniſters, they put ſuch Obſtructions to the Execution of it, that, for ſeveral Years, the Building went on but very ſlowly. Nay, the Jews themſelves, conſidering what a poor Figure the Temple, they were erecting, was like to make, in Compariſon of that ſplendid one, which Solomon had built, began to be dejected and deſpond; whereupon the Prophet † Haggai was ſent with this Meſſage of Encouragement: Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts, I will ſhake all Nations, i. e. I will ſtir up in all Nations, by Signs, by Propheſies, and by mighty Wonders, a general Expectation of the Meſſiah, and, in the Fulneſs of Time, will ſend him, who can anſwer all their Wants and Wiſhes; who will be a Prophet to inſtruct them, a Prieſt to make Atonement, and an Advocate to make Interceſſion for them; and may therefore deſervedly be ſtiled the Deſire of all Nations: And I will fill this Houſe with Glory: For, though the former Temple was very famous for many extraordinary Things, for the Ark of the Covenant, the Urim and Thummim, a vaſt Profuſion of Silver and Gold, and, above all, for the angelical Appearance on the Mercy-Seat; yet all theſe ſhall be nothing, in Compariſon of that Glory, which ſhall redound upon this preſent Temple, when this Divine Perſon ſhall vouchſafe to grace it with his Preſence, as he certainly ſhall do, during its ſtanding. In other Ornaments, ſaith the Lord, I could make the Splendor of this Temple, as well as Haggai's Prophecy expounded.

* The two chief are Herodotus and Xenophon, whoſe Relations are very different. Herodotus's Account of him contains Narratives, that are much more ſtrange and ſurprizing, and, conſequently, more diverting and acceptable to the Reader; and, for this Reaſon, more have choſen to follow him, than Xenophon. But, though Xenophon (as being a great Commander, as well as a great Politician) has certainly grafted many Maxims of War and Policy into his Hiſtory; yet, where nothing of this appears, I take him to be an Hiſtorian of much better Credit, in Matters of Fact, than Herodotus. Herodotus, having travelled through Egypt, Syria, and ſeveral other Countries, in order to the writing of his Hiſtory, did, as Travellers uſe to do, put down all Matters upon Truſt, and, in many, no Doubt, was impoſed on. But Xenophon was a Man of another Character: He wrote all Things with great Judgment, and due Conſideration; and, having lived in the Court of Cyrus the Younger, a Deſcendant of the Cyrus whom we now ſpeak of, had Opportunities of being better informed of what he wrote of this great Prince, than Herodotus was; and, confining himſelf to his Argument only, no Doubt he examined all Matters relating to it more thoroughly, and gave a more accurate and exact Account of them, than could be expected from the other, who wrote of all Things, at large, as they came in his Way. Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. ii.

[x] Iſa. xliv. 28. and xlv. 1. [y] Ezra i. 2. [z] Ibid. iv. † Chap. ii. ver. 6, &c.

Solomon's, conſiſt; for Gold is mine, and Silver is mine; but in this Particular I will have it diſtinguiſhed, that in this Place I will give Peace, that, during its ſtanding, the Deſire of all Nations ſhall come, upon whoſe Account, the Glory of the latter Houſe ſhall be greater than that of the former: Wherefore be ſtrong, O Zerubbabel, ſaith the Lord, and be ſtrong, O Joſhua, Son of Joſedech the High-Prieſt, and be ſtrong all the People of the Land, ſaith the Lord, and work; for I am with you.

Daniel's Death, Character, and Writings.

THIS was a very gracious Exhortation from God, but at this Time, perhaps, the more neceſſary, becauſe it is very probable, that, much about this Time, Daniel died, who, during his Life, was in great Favour with the ſeveral Princes he had the Honour to ſerve, and a powerful Advocate for his Countrymen the Jews [a]. He was (as we hinted before) a very extraordinary Perſon both in Wiſdom and Piety, and, for this Reaſon, was both favoured by God, and honoured by Men, beyond any that lived in his Time. His Propheſies, concerning the Coming of the Meſſiah, and other great Events, are ſo very clear and full, that [b] Porphyry, in his Objections againſt them, will have them to be written after the Facts were done; for, to him, they ſeemed to be rather a Narration of Matters already tranſacted, than a Prediction of Things to come. The Jews, indeed, think fit to place them only among their Hagiographa, becauſe, ſay they, he lived not in the Prophetick Manner of Life, but was converſant in Courts, and a prime Miniſter to the Kings of Babylon: And, though he might be vouchſafed ſome Divine Diſcoveries, yet they were but by Dreams and Viſions of the Night, which they account the moſt imperfect, and below the Prophetick Manner of Revelation. 'Tis to be obſerved, however, that [c] Joſephus, who was one of the ancienteſt Writers of that Nation, reckons him among the greateſt of the Prophets; telling us, that he had familiar Converſe with God, and not only foretold future Events, as other Prophets did, but determined the very Time, when they were to come to paſs. Our Saviour, we all know, gives him the Title of [d] a Prophet, though all Things, that go under his Name, muſt not be accounted Canonical Writings. The Book, wherein his Predictions are contained, is originally written in the Chaldee Language, i. e. from the fourth Verſe of the ſecond Chapter, to the End of the ſeventh, (for there he treats of Babyloniſh Affairs) but all the reſt is Hebrew. The Song of the three Children, and the Hiſtory of Suſannah, and of Bel and the Dragon, (tho' allowed by the Church of Rome to have the ſame Authority with the reſt of his Writings) are neither extant in the Hebrew, nor Chaldee Language; were never received into the Canon of Holy Writ by the Jewiſh Church; and are too manifeſtly the Work of ſome Helleniſtical Jew; becauſe, in the Hiſtory of Suſannah, Daniel, in his Replies to the Elders, [e] alludes to the Greek Names of the Trees, under which, they ſaid, the Adultery, wherewith they charged her, was committed, which Alluſions cannot hold good in any other Language.

The Death of Cyrus, and Manner of it.

NOT long after the Death of Daniel, the Jews had another great Loſs in the Death of Cyrus, their great Benefactor, after he had reigned, from his firſt taking on him the Command of the Perſian and Median Armies, thirty Years; from his taking of Babylon, nine Years; and from his being ſole Monarch of the Eaſt, ſeven Years: But, as to the Manner of his Death, there are different Accounts among Hiſtorians. Some tell us, that he loſt his Life in a Sea-fight with the People of Samos; others will have it, that, in a War with the Scythians, he was taken Priſoner, and had his Head cut off by their Queen Thomyris: But the moſt probable Opinion is, [f] that he died peaceably in his Bed, amidſt his Friends, and in his own Country. For, beſides, that it is by no Means likely, that ſo wiſe a Man, as Cyrus was, and in ſo advanced Years, as he then muſt be, ſhould engage in any hazardous Undertaking; we can hardly conceive, how his Son Cambyſes could have ſettled himſelf ſo eaſily in this new-erected Empire, held it in ſuch Quiet at home, and enlarged it with ſuch Conqueſts abroad, had not his Father left it to him in the utmoſt Tranquillity.

CAMBYSES's

[a] Prideaux's Connection, Part I. Lib. iii. [b] Hieronymus, in Præmio ad Comment. in Danielem.
[c] Antiq. Lib. X. c. 12. [d] Matth. xxiv. 15. [e] Thus, in the Examination of the Elders, when one of them ſaid, that he ſaw the Adultery committed ὑπὸ σχῖνα, i. e. under a Maſtich-Tree. Daniel anſwers, in Alluſion to σχῖνον, the Angels of God have received Sentence of God σχίσαι σε μέσον, i. e. to cut thee in two; and, when the other Elder ſaid, that it was ὑπὸ πρῖνον, i. e. under an Holm-Tree, Daniel anſwers, in Alluſion to the Word πρῖνον, the Angel of the Lord waiteth with the Sword πρίσαι σε μέσον, i. e. to cut thee in two. Prideaux, ibid. [f] Xenophon's Cyropæd. Lib. VIII. Beſides, all Authors agree, that Cyrus was buried at Paſargada in Perſia, where Xenophon ſaith he died, and where his Monument was ſtanding, in the Time of Alexander: But, had he been ſlain in Scythia, and his Body there mangled, by Way of Indignity, in ſuch a Manner, as Herodotus and Juſtin relate, how can we ſuppoſe it could ever have been brought thence out of the Hands of thoſe enraged Barbarians to be buried at Paſargada? Prideaux, ibid.

CAMBYSES's Reign however was not [g] long: And, when, after a ſhort [h] Uſurpation, Darius Hyſtaſpes came to be choſen King, and the Jews, who had been obſtructed before, began now to renew the Building of their Temple, the Samaritans betook themſelves again to their old malicious Practices; and, applying to Tatnai, whom Darius had made Præfect, or chief Governor of Syria and Paleſtine, they inſinuated, that the Jews proceeded herein without any Authority from the King. Of this Tatnai ſent Information to Darius, who, examining the Imperial Records, and finding, that, in the firſt Year of Cyrus, a Decree had been granted to the Jews to return and rebuild their Temple, (as he had lately married two of the Daughters of Cyrus, the better to fortify his Title to the Crown) thought it concerned him to do every Thing, that might tend to ſupport the Honour and Veneration due to the Memory of ſuch a Prince; and, accordingly, revoked the Decree which Smerdis the Magian (by Ezra called Artaxerxes) had made againſt building the Temple, and confirmed that, which Cyrus had granted ſome eighteen Years before: Whereupon the Building went on with Succeſs, and, in leſs than four Years more, was compleated. The Temple finiſhed.

THE reſt of the Acts of Darius, his War againſt the Scythians, wherein he had not ſo very good Succeſs; his Invaſion and Conqueſt of Judea, from whence he received a Tribute of [i] three hundred and ſixty Talents of Gold every Year; his long Engagement in War with the Grecians, which on both Sides was attended with various Succeſs; and, a little before his Death, his appointing his Son [k] Xerxes to be his Succeſſor; theſe, and many more Incidents of his Life, are ſo largely recorded by Herodotus, that to him we refer our Reader, and ſhall only take Notice of one remarkable Perſon, that, during his Reign, appeared in Perſia, viz. the famous Prophet of the Magians, whom the Perſians call Zerduſht, or Zaratuſh, and the Greeks Zoroaſtres. And, to this Purpoſe, we muſt obſerve, that all the Idolatry of the World was, at this Time, divided into two Sects; that of the Sabians, who firſt worſhipped the Planets, and then Images; and that of the Magians, who worſhipped Fire only. The Magians began firſt in Perſia, and made theſe the chief Articles of their Faith; —— "That there were two Principles, or Gods, the one, the Cauſe of "all Good, and the other the Cauſe of all Evil; that between theſe two there is a "continual Oppoſition, and ſo will be until the End of the World; but that then, "the Good God having overcome the Evil, they ſhould each of them have his "World to himſelf, the Good ruling over all the Good, and the Evil over all the "Wicked. They imagined, that Darkneſs was the trueſt Symbol of the Evil, as "Light was of the Good God, and therefore they always worſhipped him before Fire, "as being the Cauſe of Light; and eſpecially before the Sun, as being, in their "Opinion, the perfecteſt Fire, and cauſing the perfecteſt Light. But they always "hated Darkneſs, becauſe they thought it a Repreſentation of the Evil God, whom "they ever had in the utmoſt Deteſtation." This Sect was once in good Reputation; but, after the Uſurpation of Smerdis, they fell into great Contempt, and muſt have utterly been extinguiſhed, had not Zoroaſtres revived their Credit again. He was ſprung but from a very mean Parentage; by Birth and Education was very probably a Jew; The Acts of Darius. The Principles of the Magians. An Account of Zoroaſtres, [g] He reigned but ſeven Years and five Months. [h] The Manner of which Uſurpation is thus related by moſt Hiſtorians. Cambyſes had an only Brother, whom Herodotus calls Smerdis, and Juſtin, Mergis, whom he, conceiving ſome Jealouſy of, cauſed to be murthered privately. He had, when he went upon the Egyptian Expedition, left the ſupreme Government of his Affairs in the Hands of Patizithes, one of the chief Magians, who likewiſe had a Brother, very much reſembling Smerdis, the Son of Cyrus, and, for that Reaſon perhaps, called by the ſame Name. Patizithes, hearing of the young Prince's Death, and ſuppoſing that the Extravagancies of Cambyſes had made him deteſted by his Subjects, placed this Brother of his on the Throne, pretending that he was the true Smerdis, the Son of Cyrus, and ſo ſent Heralds through the Empire to proclaim him King. It was the Cuſtom of the Eaſtern Kings, in thoſe Times, to live retired in their Palaces, and there tranſact all their Affairs by the Intercourſe of their Eunuchs, without admitting any elſe, unleſs thoſe of the higheſt Confidence, to have Acceſs to them. This Conduct the pretended Smerdis exactly obeyed: But Otanes, a noble Perſian, having a Daughter, who had been one of Cambyſes's Wives, and was now kept by Smerdis in the ſame Quality, and being deſirous to know whether he was the real Son of Cyrus or no, ſent her Inſtructions, that, the firſt Night ſhe lay with him, ſhe ſhould feel, whether he had any Ears, (becauſe Cambyſes, for ſome Crime or other, had cut off this Magian's Ears) and ſhe acquainting her Father, that he had none, immediately he took ſix others of the Perſian Nobility with him, and, entering the Palace, ſlew both the Uſurper and his Brother. Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. III.

[i] Which, according to the Number of the Days in the then Perſian Year, was a Talent every Day, and, according to the Standard of the Euboic Talent, amounted in the whole to one Million and ninety-five thouſand Pounds of our Money. Prideaux, ibid.

[k] Darius had three Sons by his firſt Wife, the Daughter of Gobrias, all born before his Advancement to the Throne; and four others by Atoſſa, the Daughter of Cyrus, who, having an abſolute Power over her Huſband's Inclinations, prevailed with him to ſettle the Succeſſion upon her Son. This however bred no ill Blood between two Brothers; for Artabaſanes (ſo was the Elder named) chearfully ſubmitted to his Brother's Government, and at laſt died in his Service, as he was fighting for him in the Grecian War; an Example very rarely to be met with, where ſo great a Prize as a Crown is at Stake. Prideaux, ibid.

a Jew; and, as ſome ſuppoſe, the Servant of the Prophet Daniel, becauſe he was certainly a Man of great Learning, and thoroughly acquainted with the Books of Moſes. As ſoon as he took upon him the Prophetick Office, he retired into a Cave, and there lived a long Time as a Recluſe, pretending to be abſtracted from all worldly Conſiderations, and to be given wholly to Prayer, and divine Meditations. In this Retirement he compoſed [l] the Book wherein all his pretended Revelations are contained. [m] The firſt Part of it conſiſts of a Liturgy, which the Magians, in all their Oratories and Fire-Temples, make uſe of to this Day. The reſt is an hiſtorical Account of the Life, Actions, and Propheſies of its Author, the ſeveral Branches and Articles of his Superſtition, together with Rules and Exhortations to Morality, wherein he is very preſſing and exact, except in allowing of Inceſt: And the whole, being interſperſed with ſeveral Things, taken out of the Old Teſtament, abundantly ſhews that his Original was from the Jews. Upon leaving his Retirement, he went into India among the Brachmans, where having learned all their Knowledge in Mathematicks, Aſtronomy, and Natural Philoſophy, he came back, and taught his Diſciples theſe Sciences, which gained them ſo great a Reputation, that, for many Years after, a Learned Man and a Magician became equivalent Terms. Nay, he pretended, that, once upon a Time, he was taken up into Heaven, to be inſtructed in thoſe Doctrines, which he was to deliver unto Men; that there he heard God ſpeak out of the Midſt of a great and bright Flame of Fire; and, for this Reaſon, he taught his Followers, that Fire was the trueſt Repreſentation of the Divine Preſence, and the Sun (as the moſt perfect Fire) the more immediate Throne of his Glory; that, of the Fire, from whence God ſpake, he, upon his Return, brought ſome with him, and placed it on the Altar of the firſt Fire-Temple, that he erected; from whence, as they ſay, it was propagated to all the reſt: And this is the Reaſon, they give, for keeping it ſo carefully, and treating it with ſo much Superſtition.

and his Tenets. HAVING thus qualified himſelf to be a Prophet, he made his firſt Appearance in Media, in the City of Ziz, ſay ſome, or in Ecbatana, now Tauris, according to others; where the principal Doctrines that he profeſſed (as a Refinement upon what the old Magians maintained) were theſe—— "That there was one ſupreme Being, "independent, and ſelf-exiſting from all Eternity; that, under him, there were "two Angels, one the Angel of Light, who is the Author and Director of all Good; "and the other the Angel of Darkneſs, who is the Author and Director of all Evil; "and that theſe two, out of the Mixture of Light and Darkneſs, made all Things; "that they are in perpetual Struggle with each other, and that, where the Angel of "Light prevails, there the moſt is good; where the Angel of Darkneſs, there the "moſt is evil; that this Struggle ſhall continue unto the End of the World, when "there ſhall be a general Reſurrection, a Day of Judgment, and a Retribution to "every one according to his Works; after which, the Angel of Darkneſs and his "Diſciples ſhall go into a World of their own, where they ſhall ſuffer, in everlaſting "Darkneſs, the Puniſhments of their evil Deeds; and the Angel of Light and his "Diſciples ſhall go alſo into a World of their own, where they ſhall receive, in "everlaſting Light, the Reward due unto their good Deeds; whereupon they ſhall "remain ſeparated for ever, and Light and Darkneſs be no more mixed together "to all Eternity:" And all this the Remainder of that Sect, which is now in Perſia and India, do, after ſo many Ages, ſtill hold, without any Variation, even to this Day.

His Actions, and violent Death. AFTER Zoroaſtres had acted the Part of a Prophet in Media, and there ſettled all Things according to his Intentions, he removed from thence into Bactria, the moſt Eaſtern Province of Perſia, and there ſettling in the City of Balch, which lies on the River Oxus in the Confines of Perſia, under the Protection of Hyſtaſpes, the Father of Darius, he ſoon ſpread his Impoſture through all that Province with great Succeſs. From Bactria he went next to the Royal Court at Suſa, where he managed his Pretenſions with ſo much Addreſs and Inſinuation, that he made Darius likewiſe a Proſelyte; and, from his Example, drew over the Courtiers, Nobility, and great Men of that City, into the ſame Profeſſion. But when, upon his Return into Balch, he attempted the like upon Argaſp, King of the Oriental Scythians, (who was a zealous Sabian) and pretended an Authority from Darius to that Purpoſe, the Scythian Prince reſented [l] This Book is called Zendaveſta, and by Contraction Zend, which ſignifies a Fire-kindler, ſuch as a Tinder-box is with us; and this fantaſtical Name the Impoſtor gave it, becauſe, as he pretended, all, that would read this Book, and meditate thereon, might from thence kindle in their Hearts the Fire of all true Love for God, and his holy Religion. Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. III. [m] Ibid. L. IV.

reſented it with ſuch Indignation, that he invaded Bactria with an Army, and, having there defeated the Forces, that oppoſed him, ſlew Zoroaſtres, with all the Prieſts of his Patriarchal Church, which amounted to the Number of eighty Perſons, and demoliſhed all the Fire-Temples in the Province; but it was not long, before Darius fell upon him, and revenged the Injury.

Of the World, 3522, &c. Before Chriſt, 482, &c.

Darius's Character.

DARIUS was a Prince of great Wiſdom, Clemency, and Juſtice, and hath the Honour to have [n] his Name recorded in Holy Writ, for a Favourer of God's People, a Reſtorer of the Temple at Jeruſalem, and a Promoter of his Worſhip therein, for all which God was pleaſed to make him his Inſtrument; and therefore I make no Doubt, but that, upon this Account, he bleſſed him with a numerous Iſſue, a long Reign, and great Proſperity. He was ſucceeded by his Son Xerxes, of whom the Prophet Daniel gives this Account: [o] There ſhall ſtand up three Kings in Perſia, (viz. Cyrus, Cambyſes, and Darius Hyſtaſpes) and the Fourth ſhall be far richer than they; and by his Strength, through his Riches, he ſhall ſtir up all againſt the Realm of Grecia. His prodigious Expedition into Greece, and almoſt innumerable Number of Forces; his Paſſage of the Helleſpont over a Bridge made of Boats, and, for ſome Time, carrying all before him like a Torrent; the Reſiſtance, that his Army met with at Thermopylæ, from an Handful of Men, commanded by the gallant Leonidas; the Defeat of his Fleet, at the Streights of Salamis, and the Overthrow of his Confederates, at the Iſle of Sicily; his Loſs of the great Battle at Platæa, and, [p] on the ſame Day, his Loſs of another at Mycale, ſo that his vaſt Army, which, but a Year before, marched ſo proudly over the Helleſpont, was now in a Manner totally deſtroyed; after theſe Defeats, his precipitate Flight into his own Country; his plundering the Temples of Greece and Babylon, to repair the Loſſes of this expenſive War; his inceſtuous Attempt upon his Brother's Wife, and, at length, moſt inhuman Murther of him and all his Family; his giving himſelf up to Eaſe and Pleaſures, Luſt and Luxury, whereby he became contemptible to his Subjects; and fell at laſt a Sacrifice by the Hand of the Captain of his Guards: Theſe, and many more Paſſages of the like Nature, are ſo fully related by Herodotus, Diodorus Siculus, and Plutarch, in the Lives of thoſe Grecians that were employed againſt him, that to them I muſt refer my Reader; and ſhall only obſerve, that, upon the Death of this Prince, Artaxerxes Longimanus (who in the Book of Eſther is called Ahaſuerus) having cut off his Father's Murtherers, and vanquiſhed his Brother Hyſtaſpes, and ſettled himſelf in the quiet Poſſeſſion of the whole Perſian Empire, [q] appointed a ſolemn Rejoicing, on that Account, to be continued for an hundred and fourſcore Days; at the End of which he made a great Feaſt for all his Princes and People, that were at Suſa, for ſeven Days. On the ſeventh Day (his Heart being merry with Wine) he ſent for his Queen, that he might ſhew to the Princes and People her Beauty; but, upon her refuſing to come, he for ever repudiated her; and, in a ſhort Time, made choice of [r] Eſther, the Niece of Mordecai the Jew, to be his Queen. And 'tis to her Sollicitation we muſt impute it, that his Favour and Kindneſs to the Jews was ſo extraordinary, as to grant Appointments out of his Treaſures for the Service of the Temple, and to ſend Ezra, a very learned and religious Man, with ſo full and ample a Commiſſion to Jeruſalem, in order to reſtore the State, and reform the Church of the Jews; to correct all Abuſes in both, and regulate and govern them according to their Laws.

Xerxes's Actions.

Of the World, 3531, &c. Before Chriſt, 473, &c.

Ezra's Commiſſion from Ahaſuerus.

[n] Ezra v. and in the Propheſies of Haggai and Zachariah.

[o] Dan. xi. 2, 3.

[p] The Battle of Platæa was fought in the Morning, and that of Mycale in the Afternoon of the ſame Day; yet it is commonly ſaid by the Greek Writers, that they had an Account of the Victory of Platæa at Mycale, before they began the Battle there, though the whole Ægean Sea (which was ſeveral Days ſailing) lay between. But Diodorus Siculus (Lib. XI.) clears this Matter: For he tells us, that Leotycides, finding the Forces, that followed him, in great Pain for the Greeks at Platæa, leſt they ſhould be over-powered and vanquiſhed by the numerous Army of Mardonius; the better to encourage and hearten his Men for the Battle, juſt before he made the firſt Onſet, he cauſed it to be given out, through all the Army, that the Perſians were defeated, though he knew nothing of the Matter. But what he then feigned, happened to be true, and done likewiſe on the ſame Day; this gave Occaſion for what is ſaid of that quick Intelligence, which was utterly impoſſible to have come, in ſo ſhort a Time, from ſo diſtant a Place by any human Means; and to ſuppoſe a Miracle in this Caſe, there is no Reaſon. Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. IV.

[q] Eſther i. 3, &c.

[r] This is her Perſian Name, the Senſe of which is not known: Her Jewiſh Name was Hadaſſah. Prideaux, ibid.

CHAP. VII.

The moſt memorable Tranſactions from the End of the Captivity, to the Coming of CHRIST.

Of the World, 3667, &c. Before Chriſt, 337, &c.

AFTER the Return of the Jews from the Babyloniſh Captivity there was one great Abuſe crept in among them, which Ezra at firſt, and after him Nehemiah, endeavoured to reform. [a] Their Law ſtrictly forbad them to make Intermarriages with any foreign Nations, either by giving their Daughters to them for Wives, or by taking their Daughters to themſelves: But, ſince their Return, People of all Conditions had paid ſo little Regard to this Command, that even the Pontifical Houſe, which, of all others ought to have ſet a better Example, was become polluted with ſuch impure Mixtures.

The Temple of Samaria, and Manaſſeh's Schiſm.

[b] Joiada was then High-Prieſt, and one of his Sons (whom Joſephus calls Manaſſeh) having married Nicaſo, the Daughter of Sanballat, and, by the Elders of Jeruſalem being ordered, either to diſmiſs his Wife, or depart the Country, fled to Samaria, with many others, that were in the like Circumſtances, and there ſettled under the Protection of his Father-in-law, who was Governor of the Place. Upon this Occaſion, Sanballat applied to [c] Darius, who had all thoſe Parts then under his Dominion, and ſo far inſinuated himſelf into his Favour, as to obtain a Grant for building a Temple on Mount Gerizim near Samaria, and for making Manaſſeh, his Son-in-law, High-Prieſt of it. The Samaritans originally were the Cutheans, and ſuch other of the Eaſtern Nations, as Eſerhaddud, upon the Deportation of the Iſraelites, planted there; but after this Temple was built, and Samaria became a common Refuge and Aſylum to all refractory Jews, this Mixture of Inhabitans, in a ſhort Time, produced a Change in Religion: For whereas theſe Samaritans had hitherto worſhipped the God of Iſrael in Conjunction with the Gods of the Eaſt, from whence they came, when once the Jewiſh Worſhip came to be ſettled, and the Book of the Law of Moſes to be read publickly, they conformed themſelves wholly to the Worſhip of the true God, and, in their Performance of it, were as exact, as the Jews themſelves. The Jews however, looking on them as Apoſtates, hated them to ſuch a Degree, as to avoid all Manner of Converſe and Communication with them.

The Hatred between the Jews and Samaritans.

[d] Their Hatred firſt began, from the Oppoſition, the Samaritans made againſt them, at their Return from the Captivity, both in their Rebuilding of the Temple, and their Reparation of the Walls of Jeruſalem. It was afterwards much increaſed by this Apoſtacy of Manaſſeh, and thoſe that joined with him in it, and by their erecting an Altar and Temple, in Oppoſition to that at Jeruſalem; and it was all along kept up, [e] on Account of their differing in ſome Points of Religion, with the utmoſt Rancour and Malice, even to the Time of our Saviour's Coming; for this is the Ground of the Samaritan Woman's aſking our Saviour, [f] How is it, that thou, being a Jew, aſkeſt Drink of me, who am a Woman of Samaria? For the Jews (as the ſacred Hiſtorian has obſerved) have no Dealings with the Samaritans.

THE

[a] Prideaux's Connection, P. I. L. VI. [b] Some Authors will have it, that he was the Brother of Jaddus the High-Prieſt, and Colleague with him in that Office. [c] Not to Alexander, as ſome Hiſtorians will have it, for this Tranſaction was prior to Alexander's coming into theſe Parts. Prideaux, ibid.

[d] Prideaux, ibid. [e] The Particulars, wherein the Samaritans differ from the Jews, are chiefly theſe, 1. That the Samaritans receive no other Scriptures, than the five Books of Moſes, rejecting all the other Books, that are in the Jewiſh Canon. 2. That they diſallow of all Traditions, and adhere only to the written Word. 3. That they aſſert and maintain, that Mount Gerizim, whereon their Temple was built, was the only proper Place for the Worſhip of God, becauſe there Abraham, (Gen. xii. 6, 7.) and there Jacob (Gen. xxxiii. 20.) built Altars unto God; and, by offering up Sacrifices on them, conſecrated that Place in a peculiar Manner: And to this the Woman of Samaria, in her Diſcourſe with our Saviour, alludes: Our Fathers worſhipped in this Mountain, but ye (meaning the Jews) ſay, that in Jeruſalem is the Place, where Men ought to worſhip, John iv. 20. The Temple of Gerizim is ſaid to have ſtood about two hundred Years, and though it was then deſtroyed by Hircanus, one of the Maccabees; yet the Samaritans ſtill continued their Worſhip and Sacrifices, on the Mountain where their Temple had been. [f] John iv. 9.

Of the World, 3672, &c. Before Chriſt, 332, &c.

THE Jews, for ſome time, after their Return from the Captivity, were governed by their own Laws, and practiſed their own Religion, under the Adminiſtration of the High-Prieſt, aſſiſted by the Sanhedrim; but remained ſtill ſubject to the Dominion of the Perſians, as long as that Empire laſted. When Alexander the Great had given Darius a Defeat, and was now ſet down before Tyre, he ſent out his Commiſſaries, requiring the Inhabitants of Judea to ſubmit to him, and to furniſh him with all Neceſſaries, for the Support of his Army. The Jews pleaded, for themſelves, their Oath to Darius, whereby they thought themſelves obliged to own no new Maſter; and therefore, as long as he lived, they could not obey his Commands. But Alexander, fluſh'd with his late Succeſs, could bear no ſuch Contradiction: And therefore, as ſoon as he had done with Tyre, he reſolved to march immediately againſt Jeruſalem, and to puniſh the Jews as ſeverely, as he had done the Tyrians, for not obeying his Injunctions. While he was on his Way, breathing out Revenge againſt the People of God, Jaddua the High-Prieſt, and all Jeruſalem with him, were in great Perplexity; but, having nothing to truſt to but God's Protection, they made their Addreſſes to him with Sacrifices, Oblations, and Prayers; whereupon, being moved with Compaſſion towards them, he directed Jaddua, in a Viſion of the Night, to go out, and meet the Conqueror, in his Pontifical Robes, with the Prieſts, in their proper Habits, attending him, and all the Inhabitants of the City, in white Garments. Jaddua, next Day, with the Prieſts and People, habited as the Viſion directed, went out of the City to a certain Eminence, called Sapha, which commanded the Proſpect of all the Country round, and there waited the Coming of Alexander. As ſoon as the High-Prieſt ſaw him coming, he moved forward in this ſolemn Pomp; which ſtruck the King with ſuch an Awe, that, as he drew near, he bowed down to him, and ſaluted him with a religious Veneration, to the great Surprize of all, that attended him. While every one ſtood amazed at this Behaviour, Parmenio took the Freedom to aſk him, How it came to paſs, that he, whom all Mankind adored, paid ſuch Adoration to the Jewiſh High-Prieſt? To which his Anſwer was, "That he did not "pay ſuch Adoration to him, but to the God, whoſe Prieſt he was; that, while he "was at Dio in Macedonia, and deliberating with himſelf, how to carry on the War "againſt Perſia, this very Perſon, and in this very Habit, appeared to him in a Dream, "encouraging him to paſs boldly over into Aſia, and not to doubt of Succeſs, for "that God would be his Guide in the Expedition, and give him the Empire of the "Perſians; and that therefore from hence he was aſſured, he made the preſent War "under the Conduct of that God, to whom, in the Perſon of the Prieſt, he paid his "Adoration:" And hereupon turning to Jaddua again, he kindly embraced him, and ſo, going into Jeruſalem with him, offered Sacrifices to God in the Temple; where the High-Prieſt ſhewed him [g] the Propheſies of Daniel, predicting the Overthrow of the Perſian Empire by a Grecian King. This pleaſed Alexander much, ſo that he returned highly ſatisfied, and full of Aſſurance of Succeſs; leaving behind him great Immunities to the People, the Freedom of their Country, Laws, and Religion, and an Exemption, every ſeventh Year, from paying any Tribute, becauſe, in that Year, according to their Law, they are not permitted to till the Ground.

Alexander the Great's coming to Jeruſalem, treats the High-Prieſt and People very kindly.

Of the World, 3681, &c. Before Chriſt, 323, &c.

[h] UPON the Death of Alexander, the vaſt Empire which he had acquired was divided among his four Generals; whereof Syria, Phœnicia, and Judea fell to Laomedon's Share. But Ptolemy, Son of Lagus, ſirnamed Soter, having got Egypt, and (for the Security and Defence thereof) coveting to make himſelf Maſter of Laomedon's Countries, offered him, at firſt, vaſt Sums of Money for them; but, not prevailing that Way, he ſent Nicanor, one of his Captains, with an Army into Syria, while himſelf, with a Fleet, invaded Phœnicia; and ſo, having vanquiſhed Laomedon and taken him Priſoner, he made himſelf Maſter of theſe Provinces. The Jews, however, for ſome Time, ſtood out againſt him, and, upon Account of the Oath, they had taken to the former Governor, refuſed to ſubmit. Whereupon he marched into Judea, and, having got Poſſeſſion of moſt of the Country, laid Siege to Jeruſalem. The Place was ſtrong enough both by Nature and Art, to have made a conſiderable Jeruſalem made ſubject to Egypt.

[g] Viz. What is written of the Ram and He-goat, (Dan. viii.) where the He-goat is interpreted to be the King of Grecia, who ſhould conquer the Medes and Perſians, (ver. 21.) and alſo, what is written by the ſame Prophet of the ſaid Grecian King; [Ch. xi. 3.] for both theſe Propheſies foretold the Deſtruction of the Perſian Empire by a Grecian King. Prideaux's Connect. [h] Some Authors are of Opinion, that he died of Poiſon, but the true Account of the Matter is this——That, having ſet out one long Drinking-bout, he was immediately invited to another; at which, there being twenty in Company, he drank to every one of them in their Order, and pledged each of them again; and then calling for the Herculean Cup (which held ſix Quarts in our Meaſure) he drank it full to Proteas, a Macedonian, and not long after pledged him again in the ſame: Whereupon he dropped down upon the Place, and then fell into the violent Fever, of which he died. Prideaux, ibid.

ſiderable Defence againſt him; but that the Jews had then ſuch a ſuperſtitious Notion for the keeping of their Sabbath, that they thought it a Breach of their Law, even to defend themſelves on it; which when Ptolemy underſtood, he made choice of that Day to ſtorm the Place, and in the Aſſault took it, becauſe there were none, that would defend the Walls againſt him. At firſt he dealt very hardly with the Inhabitants, and carried above an hundred Thouſand of them Captives into Egypt; but, afterwards, conſidering how faithful they had been to their former Governors, he employed many of them in his Army and Garriſons, and granted them all large Immunities and Privileges: And thus the whole Nation of the Jews was made ſubject to the Power and Dominion of the Kings of Egypt.

Of the World, 3727, &c. Before Chriſt, 277, &c.

PTOLEMY Philadelphus, Son and Succeſſor to Ptolemy Soter, being very intent on making a great Library at Alexandria, and, deſirous of getting all Manner of Books into it, committed the Care of that Matter to Demetrius Phalereus, a noble Athenian, then living at his Court. [1] Purſuant to the King's Orders, Demetrius made ſearch every where; and being informed, that, among the Jews, there was a Book of great Note, called, The Law of Moſes, he acquainted the King with it; who, ſignifying his Pleaſure to have it ſent for from Jeruſalem, and Interpreters, from the ſame Place, to render it into Greek, was put in Mind, that it would be in vain to expect from the Jews either a true Copy of their Law, or a faithful Tranſlation of it, ſo long as he kept ſo many of their Countrymen in Slavery; and therefore it was propoſed to him, firſt to releaſe all the Jews, who, at different Invaſions, had been brought away by his Father, and then to ſend to Jeruſalem about this Matter. The King approved of the Propoſal; and accordingly publiſhed a Decree for the Releaſe of all the Jewiſh Captives in Egypt, and ordered a vaſt Sum of Money to be iſſued out of the Treaſury, for the Payment of thoſe, that had them in Servitude, as the Price of their Redemption. When this was done, a Letter was written, in the King's Name, to Eleazar, the High-Prieſt, requeſting him to ſend the Book, and with it ſix Elders out of every Tribe, (ſuch as he ſhould judge moſt competent for the Work) to tranſlate it into Greek. The Meſſengers, that were ſent upon this Errand, carried with them many rich Preſents for the Temple; and, coming to Jeruſalem, were, with great Honour and Reſpect, received both by the High-Prieſt, and all the People; and, having received a Copy of the Law of Moſes, all written in golden Letters, and ſix Elders, out of every Tribe, (i. e. ſeventy-two in all) to make a Verſion of it into the Greek Language, they returned with them to Alexandria. Upon their Arrival, the King, calling theſe Elders to his Court, propoſed to each of them a Queſtion; and finding, by their Anſwers, their Learning and Abilities, he ſent them into Pharus, (an Iſland joining to Alexandria) to an Houſe appointed for that Purpoſe, where they immediately betook themſelves to the Buſineſs of Tranſlation. As they agreed in the Verſion of each Period, Demetrius wrote it down: So that, in the Space of ſeventy-two Days, the whole Work was compleated, and afterwards repoſited in the King's Library; who, for the Reward of their Labour, gave each Interpreter three rich Garments, two Talents in Gold, a Cup of Gold of a Talent Weight, and ſo ſent them home to their own Country.

The Verſion of the Septuagint.

Of the World, 3828, &c. Before Chriſt, 176, &c.

AFTER the Jews had been, about an hundred Years, ſubject to Egypt, there happened a War between Ptolemy Epiphanes, King of Egypt, and Antiochus the Great, King of Syria; wherein the Jews, whoſe Country lay between the two Kingdoms, like a Ship toſs'd in a Storm, which is batter'd and daſh'd between two Billows, ſuffered very much; till at length, Antiochus getting the better, the Jews ſubmitted to him; and, receiving him, with his Army, into their City, aſſiſted him in the Recovery of the Citadel, which was then held by a Garriſon of Ptolemy's Army. Seleucus Philopater, who ſucceeded his Father Antiochus in the Kingdom of Syria, at firſt favoured the Jews, and ſupplied them with all Things, for the Service of the Temple, Judea becomes ſubject to Syria.

[1] This is the Account of the Affair, as we have it in a Book, ſtill extant under the Name of Ariſteas; but the learned Author, [Dr Prideaux] from whom we have extracted it, for very good Reaſons, that he gives, (Page ii. lib. 1.) ſeems to diſtruſt the Genuineneſs of that Book. He allows however, that there was a Tranſlation of the Hebrew Pentateuch into Greek, made in the Time, very probably, of Ptolemy Philadelphus, but ſeems to aſſert, that the true Cauſe of that Tranſlation was for the Uſe of the Jews, then inhabiting Alexandria, who, by mixing with other Nations, had forgot their own Language, and underſtood Greek only; that, at firſt, the Law was only tranſlated, but afterwards, when the Prophets came to be read in the Synagogues of Judea, in the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes, the Jews of Alexandria, following their Example, were induced to do the ſame; which occaſioned the Tranſlation of the Prophets likewiſe: That Ptolemy Philadelphus, as ſoon as the Greek Verſion was made at Alexandria, had, no doubt, a Copy of it put into his Library, which Copy continued there, but without any great Notice taken of it, until that noble Repoſitory of Learning, containing four hundred thouſand Volumes, was accidentally burnt by Julius Cæſar, in his Wars againſt the Alexandrians, 47 Years before Chriſt.

Temple, at his own Expence. [k] But being, ſome Time after, informed by one Simon, a Benjamite, that there were great Riches in the Temple, he ſent his Treaſurer [l] Heliodorus to make a Seizure of them, and bring them to Antioch: But Heliodorus, going into the Temple for that Purpoſe, and entering into the ſacred Treaſury, was ſtopped, in his Attempt, by an Apparition of Angels, armed, as it were, to defend the Place againſt his ſacrilegious Hands. For theſe are the Words, wherein the Hiſtory of the Maccabees relates the Matter: [m] There appeared unto him an Horſe, with a terrible Rider upon him, and adorned with a very fair Covering, and he ran fiercely, and ſmote at him with his Fore-feet, and he, that ſat upon the Horſe, ſeemed to have compleat Harneſs of Gold. Moreover, two other Men appeared before him, notable in Strength, excellent in Beauty, and comely in Apparel, who ſtood by him on either Side, ſcourging him continually, and giving him many ſore Stripes, inſomuch that he fell to the Ground; but being taken up by thoſe that attended him, and carried off in a Litter, he continued ſpeechleſs, and without all Hope of Life for ſome Time, till, at the Interceſſion of his Friends, the High-Prieſt prayed to God for him, and ſo he recovered.

Heliodorus hindered, by an Apparition, from plundering the Temple.

NOT long after this, Heliodorus, aſpiring at the Crown, murthered his Maſter Seleucus, in Hopes of ſucceeding him; but Eumenes and Attalus, Kings of Pergamus, obſtructed his Deſign, and placed Antiochus Epiphanes, Son to Antiochus the Great, upon the Syrian Throne, who proved a terrible Enemy and Perſecutor of the Jews. For when, upon a falſe Rumour of his Death, the People of Jeruſalem (as he was informed) had made great Rejoicings, he was ſo provoked at it, that immediately marching into Judea, and taking Jeruſalem by Force, he ſlew of the Inhabitants, in three Days Time, forty thouſand Perſons, and taking as many Captives, ſold them for Slaves to the neighbouring Nations. Nor did this ſatisfy his Rage, for he afterwards forced himſelf both into the Holy-Place, and alſo into the Holy of Holies; ſacrificed a great Sow upon the Altar of Burnt-Offerings; cauſed the Broth, which was made of ſome Part of the Fleſh, to be ſprinkled all over the Temple, to pollute it as much as poſſible; and, having done this, he took away the Altar of Incenſe, the Shew-bread Table, the Candleſtick of ſeven Branches, and ſeveral other Golden Veſſels, Utenſils, and Donatives of former Kings, to the Value of eighteen hundred Talents of Gold; and making the like Plunder in the City, he returned to Antioch, leaving behind him Philip, a Phrygian, a Man of a cruel and barbarous Temper, to be Governor of Judea, and Andronicus, another of the like Diſpoſition, to be Governor of Samaria.

Antiochus Epiphanes perſecutes the Jews.

BUT this was but the Beginning of Sorrows. About two Years after, he ſent Apollonius, one of his Generals, with an Army of two and twenty thouſand Men, and an expreſs Order to kill all the Men, that remained in Jeruſalem, and to ſell the Women and Children for Slaves. On his firſt Arrival, Apollonius carried himſelf peaceably, concealing his Intent, and forbearing all Hoſtilities, till the Return of the Sabbath, when he put his bloody Commiſſion in Execution; for, falling upon the City, while the People were at their Devotion, he maſſacred many of the Inhabitants, plundered the Place, led away the Women and Children Captives, and forced the few, that eſcaped, to flee to the Caves and Deſarts for Shelter. Nor was this all; for, in a ſhort Time after, he iſſued out a Decree, commanding all Nations to leave their former Rites and Uſages, and to conform to the Religion of the King; which, however expreſſed in general Terms, was chiefly deſigned againſt the Jews. The Officer, who was ſent to ſee this Decree put in Execution, was one Athenæus, a Man well verſed in all the Rites of the Grecian Idolatry, and therefore thought a proper Perſon to initiate the People into the Obſervance of them. On his Coming to Jeruſalem, all Sacrifices to the God of Iſrael were made to ceaſe, and all the Rites of the Jewiſh Religion ſuppreſſed. The Temple itſelf was polluted, being dedicated to Jupiter Olympius, (whoſe Image was ſet up on the Altar of Holocauſt) and all the People, upon Pain of Death, were obliged to ſacrifice to it. Thoſe, who met in Caves to keep the Sabbath, if they happened to be diſcovered, were burnt; the Book of the Law was caſt into the Fire; the Circumciſing of Infants was forbid, and Women, accuſed of having circumciſed their Children, were led publickly about the City, with their Infants hanging at their Breaſts, and then caſt headlong from the Walls. In ſhort, no Manner of Cruelty was omitted to compel the Jews to abandon their Religion; and 'tis to their Perſecution, at this Time, that the Author to the Hebrews chiefly alludes, when he tells us, that ſome [n] were tortured, not accepting De- liverance, that they might receive a better Reſurrection; that others had Trial of cruel Mockings and Scourgings, yea, moreover, of Bonds and Impriſonment. They were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, ° were ſcorched to Death, were ſlain with the Sword. They wandered about in Sheep-ſkins and Goat-ſkins, being deſtitute, afflicted, tormented. They wandered in Deſerts, and in Mountains, and in Dens and Caves of the Earth.

[k] 2 Maccab. iv. [l] He, who gave Information to Seleucus, is, by Joſephus, called Apollonius; but this is a Miſtake; for Apollonius was the Governor of Cœlo-Syria and Paleſtine. Prideaux's Connection. [m] 2 Maccab. iii. 25, &c. [n] Heb. xi. 35.

Some principal Martyrs.

IN this terrible Perſecution, ſome of thoſe wretched People yielded to Violence, but many choſe rather to die, than forſake the Law of their God. Among the latter Sort, thoſe of the moſt memorable Note were Eleazar, a prime Doctor of the Law, and that Heroine Solomona, and her ſeven Sons. Eleazar was a very aged Man; yet when his Perſecutors would have compelled him to eat Swine's Fleſh, (which they forced into his Mouth) he ſpit it out; and even when ſome, in Pity to his Age, would have given him Leave to elude the Sentence, by taking a Piece of any other Fleſh, and eating it as Swine's Fleſh, he ſcorned to purchaſe his Life at ſo ſordid a Rate, deſiring them to diſpatch him, rather than let him be guilty of Diſſimulation, and ſtain the Honour of his grey Hairs with ſo mean an Act. Nor were the ſeven Brothers, and their Mother, inferior to him in a religious Courage and Magnanimity: For, being put to the moſt exquiſite Tortures to oblige them to renounce their Religion, they, with a wonderful Conſtancy, endured all that the Rage of their Perſecutors could invent, and, through a Sea of Blood and Torments, (as ᵖ one expreſſes it) waded to the happy Port of eternal Reſt.

SECT. I.

The Jewiſh State under the Maccabees.

Mattathias aſſerts his Country's Cauſe.

IN this Calamity and Diſtreſs, God raiſed up Mattathias, * a Prieſt of the Courſe of Jehoiarib, and the Head of the Family of the Aſmonæans, to aſſiſt and protect his Brethren, the Jews. Fired with a religious Zeal, like that of Phinehas, he bravely killed an Apoſtate Jew, that was going to offer Sacrifice upon an Heathen Altar, erected for that Purpoſe: He fell likewiſe on the King's Commiſſioner, that came to compel Men to ſuch Idolatry, and, by the Aſſiſtance of his Sons, and others, that joined him, ſlew him and all his Retinue. After this, getting together his own Family, and inviting all, that were zealous for the Law, to follow him, he retired into the Mountains, in order to make the beſt Defence he could: But the Jews had one Principle, which, at the Beginning of their Reſiſtance, had like to have deſtroyed them quite; and that was their ſcrupulous Obſervation of the Sabbath, even to ſuch a Degree, as not to eſteem it lawful to defend themſelves on that Day; whereof their Enemies taking the Advantage, deſtroyed great Numbers of them, without making the leaſt Oppoſition: But, finding the Frailty of their Miſtake in this Particular, Mattathias and his Followers made a Decree, (which was confirmed by the unanimous Conſent of all the Prieſts and Elders among them) that, whenever they were aſſaulted on the Sabbath-day, it was lawful for them to fight for their Lives, and to defend themſelves in the beſt Manner they could, which afterwards became a general Rule in their Wars.

Of the World, 3838, &c. Before Chriſt, 166, &c.

MATTATHIAS, having acted the Part of a brave and prudent General, was forced, at laſt, to ſubmit to the Weight of an hundred and forty-ſix Years; when, taking Leave of his Friends and Countrymen, he exhorted them to defend their Nation and Religion, and declared his Son, † Judas Maccabæus, his Succeſſor, in the Command

° The Word, in our common Copies, is ἐπειράσθησαν, they were tempted; but that this is not the right Reading, is eaſy to be gathered from this one Conſideration, that, after two ſuch great Puniſhments, as Stoning and being ſawn aſunder, it is very proper to introduce their being tempted, which ſignifies no certain Puniſhment at all, and is included in the other Puniſhments, here mentioned. Some therefore read ἐπυράσθησαν, ſome ἐπυρώθησαν, and ſome ἐπρήσθησαν, all ſignifying, they were burnt, which agrees very well with the Story of the Maccabees, (Chap. vi. to Chap. xii.) where they bring Eleazar, and the young Men, ἐπὶ τὸ πῦρ καταφλέγουσι αὐτῆς. to the Fire, and burnt them. Whitby's Annotations. ᵖ Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible. * The Courſe of Jehoiarib was the firſt of the twenty-four Courſes of the Prieſts, that ſerved in the Temple, 1 Chron. xxiv. 7.

† The Motto, which Judas had upon his Standard, was the Hebrew Sentence in Exod. xv. 11. MI CAMOKA BAELIM JEHOVAH, i. e. Who is like unto thee among the Gods, O Jehovah? Which, taking the initial Letters only (as on the Roman Enſign, S. P. Q. R. ſtood for Senatus Populuſque Romanus) made the artificial Word Maccabi; and from hence all that fought under that Standard, were called Maccabees, or Maccabæans, and he, in an eſpecial Manner, had that Name above the reſt, by Way of Eminence, as being their Captain. Prideaux's Connection.

Command of the Forces. Judas had no sooner taken the Field, than having defeated the Syrians in several Engagements, and quite driven them out of Judea, he went about all the Cities, pulling down the Altars, and destroying, every where, all the Utensils and Instruments of Idolatry, and then came up to Jerusalem, to recover the Sanctuary out of the Hands of the Heathen, and to cleanse and dedicate it anew for the Service of God. [q] The Solemnity of this Dedication was continued for eight Days together: 'Twas celebrated by the Jews, with great Joy and Thanksgiving, for the Deliverance, that God had given them; and, for the more solemn Acknowledgment thereof, a Decree was made, that the like Festival (under the Name of [r] the Feast of Dedication, or (because their Houses were, at that Time, illuminated) called by some, the Feast of Lights, should, ever after, be annually kept in Commemoration of it. Judas succeeds him.

In the mean Time, Antiochus, hearing that the Jews had defeated his Forces, recovered the Temple of Jerusalem, pulled down the Images which he had erected there, and restored the Place to its former Worship, was so enraged thereat, that he commanded his Charioteer to double his Speed, threatening, as he went, that he would make Jerusalem a Sepulchre for the whole Jewish Nation. But while he was uttering these proud Words, the Judgment of God overtook him; for a great Pain (which no Remedy could abate) immediately seized his Bowels, and, not long after, falling from his Chariot, his Body was so bruised, and his Limbs so mashed, that he could proceed no farther; but putting in at a Town, called Tabæ, in the Confines of Persia and Babylonia, he there betook himself to his Bed; and, [s] having languished out a while, under horrid Torments both of Body and Mind, stung with Remorses for his wicked Deeds, and almost consumed with Rottenness and Ulcers, he concluded a Life, remarkable for its Cruelty, and God's Vengeance upon Tyrants. God's Judgment upon Antiochus.

After the Death of Antiochus Epiphanes, Antiochus Eupator continued the War, and, [t] by the Advice of Lysias, who had then the Direction of Affairs, gave all the Molestation he could to the valiant Judas. But the rest of the Acts of that Jewish General, and how he warred with the Syrians, and the neighbouring Nations, that assisted them; how he made the first Alliance with the Romans, and, through a Scene of different Successes, came at last to fall gallantly in the Defence of the Religion and Liberties of his Country; [u] The Succession of Jonathan, the Brother of Judas, to the Command of the Army, and the gallant Acts he did against Bacchides, who had slain his Brother, and against Apollonius, Governor of Cælo-Syria; * how he destroyed the Temple of the God Dagon; repaired the Walls of Jerusalem; built Castles and Fortresses in Judea; renewed the League with the Romans and Lacedæmonians; and, at last, with two of his Sons, was perfidiously put to death [x] by a villainous Traitor: [y] The Succession of Simon to his Brother Jonathan, and all the remarkable Occurrences of his short Reign; [z] how he enlarged the Bounds of his Nation, and recovered all the strong Holds in the Country; how he defeated the Syrian Armies, and delivered his Countrymen from the Yoke of all the Gentiles round about them; how, by a general Decree, he was made Prince, as well as High-Priest to the Jews; had that double Honour entailed upon his Posterity; but not long after, with two of his Sons, was barbarously murthered by a treacherous Kinsman; [a] though his Kingdom and Priesthood descended to his remaining Son John, who had likewise the Name of Hircanus, a bold and daring Prince, that enlarged his Dominions, and entirely threw off the Yoke of the Syrians: These, and many more worthy Deeds of the Asmonæan Race, are fully recorded in the [b] two Books of the Maccabees, to which we remit our Reader, without troubling him with The Acts of the rest of the Maccabees.

[q] 1 Maccab. iv. 59. Joseph. Antiq. Lib. XII. c. 11. [r] This Festival our Saviour honoured with his Presence at Jerusalem, which shewed his Approbation of it. [s] A filthy Ulcer broke out at his secret Parts, wherein were bred an innumerable Quantity of Vermin, and such a Stench proceeded from thence, as neither those who attended him, nor he himself, could well bear; and in this Condition he lay languishing and rotting till he died. Prideaux's Connection. [t] 1 Maccab. v. [u] Ibid. ix. * Ibid. x, &c.

[x] This Man was at first called Diodotus, but afterwards Tryphon; who having a Design to make away with Antiochus, and seize the Crown of Syria, and foreseeing that Jonathan would never be brought to suffer so great a Villainy; under a Pretence of putting Ptolemais into his Hands, he decoyed him into the City, where he made him Prisoner; and then, under a farther Pretence of having two of his Sons as Hostages for their Father's Fidelity, as soon as he had got them into his Possession, he murthered them all together. Prideaux, ibid. [y] 1 Maccab. xiii. [z] Ibid. xiv. 6. [a] Ibid. xvi. [b] The former of these Books is an accurate and excellent Account of Things, coming nearest to the Stile and Manner of the sacred Historical Writings, of any Book extant, and is supposed to be composed by this John Hircanus, the Son of Simon, seeing he was Prince and High-Priest of the Jews near thirty Years, and began his Government, at the very Time, when this History ends. The other, for the most Part (except two Epistles in the Beginning of it) is an Abridgment of the History of Jason, an Hellenist Jew of Cyrene, who wrote, in Greek, the History of Judas Maccabæus, and his Brethren, together, with their Wars against Antiochus Epiphanes, and Eupator his Son, in five Books. Prideaux's Connection, Part II. Lib. iii.

with vain Repetitions. What is more ſuitable to our preſent Purpoſe is, to make ſome few Obſervations upon the ſeveral Sects of Religion, that, in this Period of Time, began to make their Appearance, and, not long after, made a conſiderable Figure in the Jewiſh Church.

SECT. II.

The Original and Tenets of the Jewiſh Sects.

When Sects firſt began.

IN thoſe happy Times, ſays Cunæus, wherein the Prophets lived, who, by their Converſe with God, learned his Will immediately from himſelf, there could no Diſputes ariſe about Religion; for their Authority was ſo well eſtabliſhed, that it would preſently have decided all difficult Queſtions, and put an End to every Controverſy. But when theſe Prophets diſappeared, and that ſovereign Authority ceaſed, then every one gave himſelf the Liberty of Reaſoning, Enquiring, and Diſputing, and by this Means they wandered in the Ways of vain Curioſity, and fell into Darkneſs. Soon after the Return of the Jews from Babylon, and the full Settlement of their Church again, there aroſe two Parties of Men among them; the one, who adher'd to the written Word only, were of Opinion, that, in the Obſervance of that, they fulfilled all Righteouſneſs, and were intitled to the Name of Zadikim, i. e. the Righteous: The other, over and above the written Law, ſuperadded the Traditional Conſtitutions of the Elders, and other religious Obſervances, to which, by Way of Supererogation, they devoted themſelves, and from hence, being eſteemed more holy than others, had the Name of Chaſidim, i. e. the Pious. So that from the former of theſe, the Sadduces, and from the latter, the Phariſees and Eſſenes ſeem to have proceeded.

Sadducees, their Original.

THE moſt ancient Sect among the Jews was that of the Sadducees, which took its Name from Sadock, the Founder of it. This Sadock, as the Talmudick Story is, was the Diſciple of Antigonus Socho, who lived, according to the Jewiſh Calculation, about three hundred Years before Chriſt, and uſed often to inculcate into his Diſciples, that they ought to ſerve God diſintereſtedly, and without any View of Compenſation, not like Slaves, who only ſerve their Maſter for the Sake of a Reward: And from hence his Diſciples Sadock and Baithus made this wrong Inference, that there was no Reward to be expected in another World, and conſequently, that the Soul dies, and the Body will not riſe again. Whether this Miſtake of the Doctrine of Antigonus, or (as others ſuppoſe) the Diſſoluteneſs of Manners, which, at that Time, might prevail, gave Occaſion to the Opinions of the Sadducees, but ſo it was, that, in Proceſs of Time, they grew to be very impious and deteſtable.

Their Opinions.

THEY denied the Reſurrection of the Dead, the Being of Angels, and the Exiſtence of the Spirits, or Souls of Men departed. Their Notion was, that there was no ſpiritual Being, but God only; that, as to Man, this World was his All; that, at his Death, his Soul and Body die together, never to live any more; and that therefore there is no future Reward or Puniſhment. They acknowledged, indeed, that God made this World by his Power, and governs it by his Providence, and, for the carrying on of this Government, hath ordained Rewards and Puniſhments; but then they ſuppoſe, that theſe Rewards and Puniſhments are in this World only, and for this Reaſon alone it was, that they worſhipped him, and paid Obedience to his Laws. All unwritten Traditions, as well as all written Books, except the five Books of Moſes, they abſolutely rejected; and the probable Reaſon why they did ſo is, that they could not ſo well maintain theſe Opinions, which are not ſo flatly contradicted in the Pentateuch, as in other ſacred Books, if once they admitted theſe Books to be Canonical. All ſupernatural Helps to their Duty they utterly denied; for their Doctrine was, that God had made Man perfect Maſter of all his Actions, with a full Freedom to do either Good or Evil, as he thinks fit, without any Aſſiſtance to him for the one, or Reſtraint upon him, as to the other; and for this Reaſon, becauſe they looked upon all Men to have an inherent Power to make their Condition better or worſe, according as they took right or wrong Meaſures, whenever they ſat in Judgment upon Criminals, they were remarkable for paſſing the ſevereſt Sentences; as indeed their general Character was, that they were a very ill-natured Sort of Men, churliſh and moroſe in their Behaviour, even to each other, but cruel and ſavage savage to every one besides. Their Number was the fewest of all the Sects of the Jews, but they were Men of the best Quality, and greatest Estates; and, as all those, who were of the greatest Power and Riches, were cut off in the Destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, 'tis generally supposed that this whole Sect then perished with them.

[c] Vid. Prideaux's Connection. Lamy and Beauſobre's Introductions.

The Pharisees.

THE Pharisees were so called from the Hebrew Word Pharas, which signifies to separate; because the prevailing Passion, or rather Ambition of this Sect was, to distinguish and separate itself from the rest of the People, by a greater Degree of Holiness and Piety, but accompanied with very much Affectation, and Abundance of vain Observances. [d] At what Time this Sect began first to appear, is no easy Matter to determine. Josephus makes mention of them in the Reign of Jonathan, an hundred and forty Years before Christ, as a very powerful Body of Men at that Time: Nor is it improbable, that their Origin was somewhat earlier, and that, as soon as the Sadducees discovered their Principles to the World, these Men of different Sentiments might, not long after, rise up in Opposition to them: For 'tis evident from the Character, which the Jewish Historian gives of them, that, in the main Articles of their Belief, they were entirely repugnant to the Sadducees. [e] "The "Pharisees believe in a Fate, says he, and attribute all Things to it, but nevertheless they acknowledge the Freedom of Man." They teach, that God will one Day judge the World, and punish or reward Men according to their Deserts. They maintain, that Souls are immortal, and that, in the other World, some will be shut up in an eternal Prison, and others sent back again; but with this Difference, that those of good Men shall enter into the Bodies of Men, those of wicked Men into the Bodies of Beasts, which exactly agrees with the famous Transmigration of Pythagoras. Their Adherence to the Law was so exact, that, for Fear of violating the least Precept of it, they scrupulously observed every Thing, that had the least Relation to it, even though the Law had neither commanded, nor forbidden it. Their Zeal for the Traditions of the Elders was such, that they derived them from the same Fountain with the written Word itself, pretending that Moses received both of them from God on Mount Sinai, and therefore ascribing an equal Authority to both. They had a Notion that good Works were meritorious, and therefore they invented a great Number of supererogatory ones, upon which they valued themselves more, than upon a due Observance of the Law itself. Their frequent Washings and Ablutions, [f] their long Prayers in publick Places, their [g] nice Avoidance of reputed Sinners, their often Fasting and great Abstinence, [h] their minute Payment of Tythes, their [i] strict Observance of the Sabbath, and [k] ostentatious Enlargement of [l] Phylacteries, were all Works of this Kind; which, nevertheless, gained them such Esteem and Veneration, that while the common People loved, the greater ones dreaded them; so that their Power and Authority in the State was considerable, though generally attended with pernicious Consequences, because their Hearts were evil.

Their Opinions.

The Scribes, who.

IN Conjunction with the Pharisees, the Scribes are often mentioned in the Scriptures of the New-Testament. They were not however any particular Sect, but a Profession of Men, of diverse Kinds, following Literature: For generally all, that were any way learned among the Jews, were, in the Time of our Saviour and his Apostles, called Scribes; but especially those, who, by their Skill in the Law and Divinity of the Jews, were advanced to sit in Moses's Seat, and were either Judges in the Sanhedrim, or Teachers in their Schools, or Synagogues. They were chiefly of the Sect of the Pharisees, because all the Learning of the Jews, in those Times, lay in their Pharisaical Traditions, and their Way of interpreting (or rather perverting) the Scriptures by them: And, because they were the Men, that dictated the [d] Vid. Lamy's Introduction and Prideaux's Connection. [e] Jos. de Bello Jud. Lib. II. c. 12.

[f] Matth. vi. 5, &c. [g] Luke vii. 39. [h] Matth. xxiii. 23. [i] Ibid. xii. 2. [k] Ibid. xxiii. 5. [l] The Word Phylactery, in the Greek, signifies a Place to keep any Thing in; in the Hebrew it is called Tephillim, which signifies Prayers, because the Jews wear them chiefly, when they go to their Devotion. It is a common Opinion, that these Phylacteries were long Pieces of Parchment, whereupon were written certain Passages out of Exodus and Deuteronomy, which they tied to their Foreheads, and Left-Arm, in Memory of the Law; but a late Explainer of the Jewish Customs, assures us, that they were Parchment-Cases, formed, with great Nicety, into their proper Shapes; that the Case for the Head had four Cavities, into each of which, they put a Piece of Parchment roll'd up, wherein were written some Sections of the Law; but that which was for the Arm, had but one Cavity, and into it they put one Piece of Parchment, wherein four Passages of Scripture are written. Lamy's Introduction, Lib. I. c. 16. The whole of this Custom is founded on Exod. xiii. 9. and Deut. vi. 8. but the Words are only metaphorically to be understood, as a Command to have God's Laws perpetually before our Eyes, and his Deliverances always in Remembrance: It cannot be denied however, that these Phylacteries were generally wore by the Jews, in our Saviour's, and were not disused so late as St Jerom's Time. Lamy, ibid.

Law both of Church and State, it hence came to paſs, that Lawyers and Scribes are convertible Terms in the Goſpel, and denote both of them the ſame Sort of Men.

The Eſſenes. IT is ſuppoſed (with a good deal of Probability) that the Sect of the Eſſenes began during the Perſecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, when great Numbers of Jews were driven into the Wilderneſs, where they inured themſelves to an hard and laborious Courſe of Living. Philo, who gives us a full Account of them, tells us, that they were called Eſſenes from the Greek Word Ὅσιος, which ſignifies Holy, and that there were two Sorts of them; ſome, who living in Society, and marrying, tho' with a great deal of Warineſs and Circumſpection, inhabited Villages, and applied themſelves to Huſbandry, and other innocent Trades and Occupations, and were therefore called Practical; and others, who living a Kind of Monaſtick Life, gave themſelves wholly up to Meditation, and were therefore called the Contemplative Eſſenes: But however they differed in their Manner of Life, they were both of the ſame Belief, and followed the ſame Maxims.

Their Opinions and Principles. THEY had not indeed the like Traditions with the Phariſees, but, as they were Allegoriſts, they had ſeveral myſtical Books, which ſerved them for a Rule in explaining the ſacred Writings, all which, contrary to the Sadducees, they acknowledged and received. They believed that God governs the World, but by ſuch an abſolute Predeſtination of every Thing, as allowed Mankind no Liberty of Choice in all their Actions. They acknowledged a future State, thinking, that the Souls of good Men went into the fortunate Iſlands, while thoſe of the Wicked were ſhut up in ſubterraneous Places; but as for the Reſurrection of the Body, and the Soul's returning to it again, after they were once parted, of this they had no Manner of Notion. All practical Religion they reduced to theſe three Heads: 1. The Love of God. 2. The Love of Virtue. And, 3. The Love of Mankind. 1. Their Love of God expreſſed itſelf in their accounting him the Author of all Good, and conſequently applying to him, every Morning and Night, for the Bleſſings they wanted; in their abſtaining from Swearing, from Lying, and all other Sins, that are abhorrent to his Nature; and in their ſtrict Obſervance of the Sabbath, and all other holy Rites, except Sacrificing: For, though they ſent their Gifts to the Altar, yet they themſelves went not thither, preſuming, that the Sanctity of their Lives was the pureſt and moſt acceptable Sacrifice to God, that they could offer. 2. Their Love of Virtue was ſhewn in the Government of their Paſſions, their Refraining from Pleaſures, their Contempt of Riches, their Abſtinence in Eating, their Continence, their Patience, the Simplicity of their Speech, and the Modeſty of their Carriage. And, 3. Their Love of Mankind appeared in their great Benevolence, and ſtrict Juſtice; their Charity to the Poor, and Hoſpitality to Strangers; and there needs no other Proof of their Love to one another, than the Union in which they lived; for they had the ſame Houſes, the ſame Proviſions, the ſame Habits, the ſame Tables; their Gains were put in the common Stock; they divided the Care of the Sick among them; and honoured the elder Men of their Society with the ſame Reverence, as if they had been their Fathers.

The Form of their Admiſſion. THIS Strictneſs and Regularity of theirs gave them a great Character, and made it a Matter of no ſmall Conſequence to be admitted into their Society. For when, after a due Courſe of Probation, any one preſented himſelf for that Purpoſe, they bound him under the moſt ſolemn Vows and Proteſtations, "to love and worſhip God, "and do Juſtice to all Men; to profeſs himſelf an Enemy to the Wicked, and a "Friend to the Lovers of Virtue; to keep his Hands from Theft, and all fraudulent "Dealings, and his Soul unpolluted with the Deſire of unjuſt Gain; not to uſurp "upon his Inferiors, nor diſtinguiſh himſelf from them by any Ornaments of Dreſs "or Apparel; not to conceal any of the Myſteries of Religion from his Brethren, "nor to diſcloſe any to the Profane, though it were to ſave his Life; but to preſerve "the Doctrine, he profeſs'd; the Books, that were written of it; and the Names of "thoſe, from whom he had it." This was the Form of Admiſſion into their Communion, which whoever violated in any groſs Inſtance, was immediately excluded, and never received again, without the deepeſt Humiliation and Repentance. And if ſuch was the Religion and Manner of Life of the Eſſenes, we have the leſs Reaſon to be ſurprized, at our finding ſome Authors ſo much extolling their Courage and Magnanimity upon ſeveral Occaſions; as Perſons, who under Diſtreſſes and Perſecution, ſuffered Death, and the moſt grievous Torments, even with Joy and Chearfulneſs, rather than ſay or do any Thing contrary to the Law of God.

THERE

THERE was another Sect among the Jews, [m] mentioned in the Gospel, which, though of later Original, may not improperly be considered in this Place; and that is the Herodians, who, [n] in their main Principles, were not very different from the Sadducees: They sprang up, no doubt, in the Time of Herod the Great, some twenty or thirty Years perhaps before Christ, and had their Denomination from him, but upon what Account it is not so well agreed. The common Opinion is, that they looked upon Herod as the promised Messiah; but it is a very improbable Thing, that any Jews should, in the Time of our Saviour's Ministry, above thirty Years after the Death of Herod, hold him to have been the Messiah, when they had found no one of these Particulars, which they expected from the Messiah, performed by him, but rather every Thing quite contrary. [o] Others therefore suppose, that they were called Herodians, because they constituted a Sodality, or Club, (as we call it) in Honour of Herod, at Jerusalem; as there were several in Rome, in Honour of their [p] Emperors. But since the earliest of these Sodalities in Rome were not instituted till after the Death of Augustus, who outlived Herod sixteen Years and upwards, this could be no Pattern or Foundation for the Institution of the like in Memory of Herod, who died so long before.

The Herodians, who.

Why so called.

HEROD, no doubt, came into the Government with great Opposition; and, as he was by Birth a Foreigner, and had made his Entrance with much Blood, his Title was not acknowledged by the greater Part of the Jews, especially as long as Antigonus was alive. Those therefore, that would own his Title, and espouse his Interest, might for this Reason, perhaps, go under the Name of Herodians; but this seems not to be the Whole of the Matter. Our blessed Saviour cautions his Disciples [q] against the Leaven (i. e. against the evil and erroneous Tenets) of Herod; which seems to imply, that Herod himself was the Author of some false Notions, which constituted a particular Sect, differing from the other Sects of the Jews; and that his Followers, imbibing these Principles from him, had the Denomination of Herodians. [r] For as much then [s] as Herod, the better to secure himself on the Throne, had put himself under the Roman Protection, [t] contrary to an express Precept of the Law; and, to ingratiate himself with the great Men at Rome, built Temples, and erected Images in them for idolatrous Worship, excusing himself to the Jews, that all this he did purely in Compliance to the Commands, which he was necessitated to obey; and might probably lay it down for a Maxim in Religion, that, in Case of Compulsion, it was lawful to submit to unjust Injunctions: There is no Wonder at all, that some bold Men should rise up to justify the King's Practice, and (by the Royal Permission) call themselves by his Name; whose distinguishing Tenet might probably be, "That, although they professed the Jewish Religion, and abominated Idolatry in "their Hearts; yet, to humour the Romans, and make themselves easy with their "Governors, it was not unlawful to comply sometimes with their Demands, and, "at least, outwardly, to become Occasional Conformists."

The true Occasion.

ANOTHER Sect, mentioned by [u] Josephus, as arising after this Time, was that of Judas of Galilee: For when Archelaus, Son of Herod the Great, was sent into Banishment, and Judea reduced to a Province of Rome, Judas, a Native of Galamala, took Occasion, from some new Exactions, to exhort his Countrymen to shake off the Roman Yoke, pretending, that, to pay Tribute to any foreign Power was a shameful Badge of their Slavery. An Aversion to the Roman Dominion, and an Hatred of the Publicans (who had the Care of receiving the Taxes and Tributes) was natural enough to all the Jews; but they, whose Zeal led them to join Judas, and form a particular Sect, valued themselves upon their Holiness and Justice, because they would not acknowledge any other Sovereign, but God, and, rather than submit to the Dominion of Man, or give him the Title of Lord, they chose to subject themselves, and their dearest Friends and Relations, to any Torments, or even to Death itself. These seem however either to have been at first, or afterwards to have grown into a Sect, so famous in the Jewish History, which calls them Zealots, as they were likewise commonly called THE JUST; and, accordingly, * some have thought, that they, who insidiously asked our Saviour the Question. [x] Whether it was lawful

The Sect of Judas.

[m] Matth. xxii. 16. Mark iii. 6. Ch. viii. 15. Ch. xii. 13.
[n] Accordingly St Mark (Ch. viii. 15.) calls that the Leaven of Herod, which Christ stiles the Leaven of the Sadducees, Matth. xvi. 6.
[o] Scaliger in Animadver. ad Eusebii Chron. & Casaubon Exercit. &c.
[p] Such were the Augustales Adrianales, Antonini, &c. constituted in Honour of Augustus, Adrian, and Antoninus, and the rest of the Emperors, after their Death. Prideaux's Connection, P. II. L. V.
[q] Mark viii. 15.
[r] Prideaux, ibid.
[s] Joseph. Antiq. L. XV. c. 12.
[t] Deut. xvii. 15.
[u] Antiq. Lib. XVIII.
* Vid. Lamy's Introduction, L. I. c. 9.
[x] Matth. xxii. 17.

lawful to pay Tribute to Cæſar, (ſuppoſing him to be no Well-wiſher to the Roman Government) pretended to be of this Sect; for inſtead of who feigned themſelves to be good Men, the Paſſage ought to be tranſlated, who feigned themſelves to be THE JUST.

The Karraites,

I MENTION but one Sect more, whereof we have no Notice in Scripture, becauſe it had no Beginning, till after the Talmud was finiſhed, and that is the Karraites: For when, about the Beginning of the VIth Century after Chriſt, that vaſt voluminous Book, containing the Traditions of the Jewiſh Church, came to be publiſhed, and a great Deference and Veneration was required to be paid to it; Men of Judgment and Learning looking into it, and finding it ſtuffed with trifling and incredible Stories, rejected its Authority, as not deſerving their Belief, and betook themſelves wholly to ſuch, as were of undoubted Credibility, the Writings of the Law and the Prophets: In Conſequence of which, there aroſe two Parties, one ſtanding up for the Talmud and its Traditions; and the other diſavowing both, as containing, in their Opinion, the Inventions of Men, and not the Doctrines and Commands of God. Thoſe, who ſtood up for the Talmud and its Traditions, were chiefly the Rabbins, and their Folwhy ſo called.

lowers, from whence this Party had the Name of Rabbiniſts; and the other, who were for the Scripture only, which, in the Babylonian Tongue, is called Kara, had, for this Reaſon, the Name of [y] Karraites, as much as to ſay Scripturaliſts; under which two Names, the Controverſy was, from that Time, carried on between them, and ſo continues, even to this Day.

SECT. III.

The Jewiſh State under the Romans.

Of the World, 3926, &c. Before Chriſt, 78, &c.

Hircanus and Ariſtobulus diſagree,

AFTER the [z] Maccabees had continued in the Government of Judea above an hundred Years, and, for ſome Time of late, ruled in the Capacity of Sovereign Princes, there happened a great Change in the Affairs of that Nation, occaſioned by a Quarrel between Hircanus II, and Ariſtobulus, two Brothers, Sons of Alexander Jannæus, and Princes of the Maccabæan Race. When their Father Alexander was beſieging Ragaba, on the other Side of Jordan, and found his Life declining, he ordered his Wife Alexandra (whom he left Regent of the Kingdom) to conceal his Death from the Army, that it might not retard the Siege; and when ſhe had taken the Place, to return in Triumph to Jeruſalem; where the chief Thing he adviſed her to do was, to court the Phariſees, the Sect that had then the prevailing Power among the Jews, and who, by their Intereſt, could advance or depreſs whom they pleaſed.

As ſoon as the Siege was over, ſhe returned to Jeruſalem, and punctually obeyed her Huſband's Directions; which ſucceeded ſo well, that ſhe cauſed herſelf to be declared Queen, but committed the Government of all Things to the Phariſees; made Hircanus High-Prieſt; and left Ariſtobulus, a Prince of an active Spirit, to lead a private Life. He, towards the End of the Queen's Reign, taking the Advantage of her Sickneſs, and his Brother's Indolence, ſeized ſeveral Strong-Holds, with a Purpoſe to have himſelf declared King after her Death; and accordingly, as ſoon as his Mother was dead, he made War with his Brother Hircanus, and obliged him to yield up the Kingdom: But it was not long before freſh Conteſts aroſe between them.

and appeal to Pompey.

THE Power of the Romans was, at this Time, become very formidable, and the Fall of Mithridates had eaſed that Republick of every Enemy, that was able to contend with it. Pompey, their victorious General, came, not long after this, into Cælo-Syria; and, as the Maccabæan Family had, all along, courted the Alliance of Rome, theſe

[y] This Sect is ſtill in Being in Poland and Ruſſia: There are ſome, but not a great many, in the Eaſtern Countries, and wherever they are, they are reckoned Men of the beſt Learning, and greateſt Probity of all the Jewiſh Nation. Prideaux's Connection.

[z] Simon, the laſt of the Maccabæan Brothers, when he, and his two eldeſt Sons were baſely murthered by Ptolemy, his Son-in-Law, was ſucceeded by his third Son, John Hircanus, who deſtroyed the Temple of the Samaritans, ſubdued the Idumeans, and opened David's Tomb, from whence he took 3000 Talents. He was ſucceeded by his Son Ariſtobulus, who firſt took upon him the Title of King; and he, by his Brother Alexander Jannæus, a cruel Prince, the Father of this Hircanus and Ariſtobulus. Du Pin's Hiſtory of the Old Teſtament.

theſe two contending Brothers ſent to him both their Deputies, praying his Protection, and Determination of the Controverſy between them. Pompey, having heard what was ſaid on both Sides, ordered the two Brothers to appear in Perſon before him, promiſing that he would then take a full Cognizance of the Cauſe, and determine it, as Juſtice ſhould direct. When therefore he was come to Damaſcus, Hircanus and Ariſtobulus waited upon him to receive his Deciſion; and, at the ſame Time, ſeveral chief Men of the Jews came to remonſtrate againſt them both. The Jews pleaded, "That it had been formerly the Uſage of their Nation to be governed "by the High-Prieſt of the God they worſhipped, who, without aſſuming any other "Title, adminiſtered Juſtice to them, according to the Laws, and Conſtitutions, "tranſmitted down to them from their Forefathers: They owned indeed, that the "two contending Brothers were of the Sacerdotal Race; but then they alledged, "that they had changed the old, and introduced a new Form of Government, in "order to enſlave the People; and therefore they prayed they might not be go-"verned by a King." Hircanus, on his Part, urged, "That, being the elder Bro-"ther, he was unjuſtly deprived of his Birthright by Ariſtobulus, who, leaving him "only a ſmall Portion of Land for his Subſiſtence, had uſurped all the reſt; and, "as a Man born for Miſchief, practiſed Piracy at Sea, and Rapine and Depredation "at Land, upon his Neighbours:" And for the Atteſtation of all this, there appeared above a Thouſand of the principal Jews. What Ariſtobulus had to ſay, in Anſwer to this, was, "That Hircanus was ſuperſeded in the Government by Rea-"ſon of his Incapacity to rule, and not through any Ambition of his; that his Sloth "and Inactivity had brought upon him the Contempt of the People; and that there-"fore he was forced to interpoſe, merely to preſerve the Government from falling "into other Hands." And for the witneſſing of this, he produced ſeveral young Gentlemen of the Country, who, by the Gaudineſs of their Dreſs, and Levity of their Carriage, did no great Credit to the Cauſe, they pretended to abet.

UPON this Hearing, Pompey referred the full Determination of the Matter, till his Coming to Jeruſalem: But Ariſtobulus, perceiving that his violent Proceedings were not approved of, haſted back to Judea, and ſhut himſelf up in the ſtrong Fortreſs of Alexandrion; which offended Pompey ſo highly, that, taking the Army, which he intended againſt the Nabatheans, and ſome auxiliary Troops of Syria, he marched directly againſt him. Upon his Approach to Alexandrion, Ariſtobulus ſurrendered himſelf, and had a Guard ſet over him; but his Party at Jeruſalem, having ſeized the Mount of the Temple, cut down the Bridges over the deep Ditches, that ſurrounded it; and, in the Cauſe of their captive King, made Preparation for a vigorous Defence. Pompey himſelf, with his whole Army, went up againſt them, and, after a Siege of [a] three Months, wherein twelve thouſand Jews were ſlain, took the Place. After this, going up into the Temple, with ſeveral chief Officers attending him, he cauſed the moſt ſacred Parts of it to be opened, and himſelf entered alſo into the Holy of Holies, where none by the Law were permitted to come, but only the High-Prieſt, once a Year, on the great Day of Expiation. In the Treaſuries he found two thouſand Talents of Money, beſides Veſſels, and other Things of a prodigious Value, all which he left untouched: But Craſſus, ſoon after coming that Way, not only extorted the two thouſand Talents, and a large Bar of Gold, by Way of Bribe to reſtrain him from farther Plunder; but, contrary to the Promiſe he had given upon Oath, ranſacked the Temple all over, and robbed it of every Thing, he thought worth taking away; ſo that the Whole of his ſacrilegious Plunder amounted to the Value of ten thouſand Talents, which is above two Millions of our Money. "Thus Jeruſalem became a Prey to every hungry General of Rome, and, "from the Diſſention between theſe two Brothers (ſays [b] the Hiſtorian) may be "dated the Ruin of the Jewiſh Nation, with the Loſs of their Liberty to the Romans, "the Impoſition of above ten thouſand Talents, and the Tranſlation of the ſove-"reign Power, which had, ever till then, deſcended in the Prieſthood, to the "Commonalty."

Pompey takes Jeruſalem.

[a] 'Tis ſuppoſed by the Jewiſh Hiſtorian, that the Mount of the Temple would have hardly been taken ſo ſoon by the Romans, had it not been for the Superſtition of the Jews, in their Obſervation of their Sabbath. For though they now thought it lawful to defend themſelves vigorouſly on that Day; yet they would not ſtir an Hand to annoy the Enemy, nor obſtruct them in any of their Works. This Pompey obſerving, ordered his Men to employ the Sabbath-day in nothing elſe, but in making their Approaches; in which the Beſieged giving them no Moleſtation, their Engines of Battery were brought forward, and, without Oppoſition, placed juſt as they pleaſed, and ſo being fitted, and played to Advantage, ſoon made a Breach in the Wall, large enough for an Aſſault. Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. L. I. c. 5. [b] Joſeph. Antiq. L. XIV. c. 8.

Herod obtains the Kingdom of the Romans.

IN this Condition remained the Jewiſh State, deprived of its Regal Power, and ſubjected to the Tribute and Government of its Conquerors; until Herod, commonly called the Great, by his Intereſt with Antony, and his cloſe Practices with other great Men at Rome, from being Tetrarch of Judea, obtained a Decree for the Royal Dignity thereof, by the unanimous Suffrage of the whole Senate. This Herod was the Son of Antipas, a noble [c] Idumean, and of Cyprus, a Woman deſcended from an illuſtrious Family among the Arabians. Antipas (who to bring his Name to a Greek Termination, called himſelf Antipater) was a Perſon of great Wiſdom and Sagacity, and had thereby acquired ſuch an Intereſt in Judea, Arabia, Syria, and all Paleſtine, that he made himſelf neceſſary to all the Roman Governors who came into thoſe Parts; and by this Means had frequent Opportunities of promoting the Fortunes of his Family. He had, by his Wife Cyprus, [d] four Sons, now grown up to Maturity of Age, whereof Herod was the ſecond. He is repreſented, by Joſephus, as a Man of Courage and Reſolution, extremely generous to ingratiate himſelf with the great ones at Rome, magnificent in his Buildings, liberal, and even extravagant in his publick Expences, and, in all Appearance, diſpoſed to do Good to every one; but ſtill, in all his Actions and Behaviour, attending only on the Procurement of his own Honour and Greatneſs, of which he was immoderately covetous: And for this Reaſon he became very burthenſome to his Subjects for the Supply of his Extravagancies, and inexorably cruel and oppreſſive, whenever he was oppoſed; a Slave, in ſhort, to his Paſſions, and ſticking at no Means, how unjuſtifiable ſoever, to attain his Deſires.

His Character.

Of the World, 3974, &c. Before Chriſt, 30, &c.

DURING the Roman Civil War, he had always followed Antony's Party: But, after the fatal Battle at Actium, though he had Reaſon to fear that Auguſtus would deprive him of his Kingdom, for being ſo firm a Friend to his Enemy; yet he was reſolved to wait upon him, as ſoon as he could. But as he ſuſpected, that, in his Abſence, ſome inteſtine Diſturbances might ariſe, he confined his Wife Mariamne, and her Mother Alexandra, in the Caſtle of Alexandrion, with a ſtrong Guard, under the Command of Joſeph, and Sohemus, two of his moſt truſty Confidents, with this poſitive Order, that, in Caſe they found Things went amiſs with him at Cæſar's Court, they ſhould deſtroy them both, (that none of the Aſmonæan Family might be left alive) and preſerve the Kingdom for his Sons, and his Brother Pheroras; and ſo he ſet forward on his Journey to meet Auguſtus. Auguſtus was then at Rhodes, where Herod, having obtained Audience, as he entered into his Preſence, laid aſide his Diadem, and, in his Speech of Addreſs, freely owned all he had done for Antony, and what he was farther ready to have done, had he required it of him. "This, he "ſaid, he thought himſelf obliged to by the Friendſhip, that was between them, "which, would he be pleaſed to think worthy his Acceptance (ſince Antony was loſt, "quite loſt) he would not fail to ſerve him with the ſame Zeal and Fidelity." This Herod delivered with ſuch an Intrepidity, that Cæſar, pleaſed with the Spirit of the Man, cauſed him to put on his Diadem again, accepted of his Friendſhip, and confirmed him in the Kingdom of Judea.

His Application to Auguſtus.

His Speech to him.

He puts Mariamne his Wife to Death.

HEROD, being highly pleaſed with this good Succeſs, returned home with much Joy: But, on his Arrival, found all his Felicity ſoured with the Troubles of his own Family. [e] Mariamne, the Wife that he loved moſt, having bribed the Secret out of Sohemus, conceived thereupon ſuch a ſtrong Hatred and Averſion to her Huſband, that ſhe not only refuſed his Embraces with Scorn, but (concealing the true Cauſe of her Reſentment) was perpetually upbraiding him with the Murther of her own Relations, and the Meanneſs of his Birth and Extraction; inſomuch that, one Time, he could hardly forbear laying violent Hands upon her. This Opportunity his Siſter Solome, her implacable Enemy, took, to ſend in his Butler (whom ſhe had before ſuborned for that Purpoſe) to accuſe the Queen of having tempted him to give the King Poiſon; whereupon he ordered her favourite Eunuch (without whoſe Privacy, he knew, ſhe did nothing) to be put upon the Rack; but all he confeſſed was, that ſomething, Sohemus had told Mariamne, was the Cauſe of her being out of Humour. Upon hearing this, Herod fell into a Rage of Jealouſy, and ſuppoſing that Sohemus would

[c] Theſe Idumeans were not Jews by Birth, but only Proſelytes to the Jewiſh Religion, from the Time that John Hircanus, Son to Simon, one of the Princes of the Maccabees, obliged them to embrace it, on the Peril of quitting the Country, they had poſſeſſed about 129 Years before Chriſt: So that King Herod was of the Jewiſh Religion, though not of the Family or Country of the Jews. Joſeph. Antiq. L. XIII. c. 17.

[d] The eldeſt was Phaſaelus, the third Joſeph, and the youngeſt Pheroras. He had alſo, by the ſame Wife, a Daughter, called Solome, who, by her Intrigues, was continually creating Diviſions in the Family, whereby ſhe very oft perplexed her Brother Herod's Affairs, and yet maintained an Intereſt with him to the laſt. Prideaux's Connection, P. II L. VII.

[e] Vid. Du Pin, and Howell's Hiſtory.

would never have been induced to betray this Secret to her, but at the Price of an adulterous Converſation, he ordered him immediately to be put to Death; and then calling together a Council of his own Friends, and accuſing her of an Intention to take away his Life, had her condemned, but without a Deſign to haſten her Execution. Solome, however, knowing very well her Brother's Temper, and fearing, that ſo long as Mariamne lived, he might eaſily relapſe into his former Fondneſs, urged the Neceſſity of her ſpeedy Execution, and had that Influence over her Brother, that he commanded her immediately to be put to Death; but he ſoon repented of his Raſhneſs: For after his Rage was quenched with her Blood, his Love revived, and the Conſideration of what he had done filled his Mind with the Agonies of Remorſe (which almoſt ran him diſtracted) and Regret for her Loſs, as long as he lived.

His other cruel Acts.

A GREAT Part of the reſt of his Life was ſpent in Acts of Cruelty: for he put to death Coſtobarus, Huſband to his Siſter Solome, his two Sons, Alexander and Ariſtobulus, whom he had by Mariamne; and, not long before his own Death, another Son, named Antipater, whom he had by a different Wife. Macrobius, a Writer of the Vth Century, tells us, that, among the Infants whom he put to death at Bethlehem, he ſlew a young Son of his own, whereupon Auguſtus made the Reflection, that it was better to be Herod's Hog, than his Son. It is not however ſo likely, that Herod, at that Age, ſhould have a Son ſo young, as theſe Innocents were, as that the Death of Antipater, together with that of Alexander and Ariſtobulus, might give the Occaſion for this Sarcaſm.

His idolatrous Compliances.

BUT whatever Opinion Auguſtus might have of Herod, 'tis certain that Herod had no ſmall Veneration for him, or at leaſt carried his Compliment very far: For he not only built two [f] ſtately Cities, and called them both after his Name, but, in the very City of Jeruſalem, built a Theatre, and an Amphitheatre; and, in Honour of Auguſtus, celebrated Games, and exhibited Shews, which gave great Diſguſt to the Jews, as Things inconſiſtent with the Legal Conſtitutions, and Religion of their Country. Nay, to ſuch a Degree of Compliance proceeded he, as not only to ſet up the Roman Enſign, which was the Figure of an Eagle, over one of the Gates of the Temple; but even to raiſe a ſumptuous Temple all of white Marble, in Memory of the Favours, which Auguſtus had conferred on him; by which idolatrous Flattery, he alienated the Hearts of the Jews, and raiſed ſome Conſpirators againſt his Life: But to recover their good Opinion again, and make ſome Amends for theſe Breaches upon their Law, in the nineteenth Year of his Reign, he formed a Deſign of Rebuilding the Temple, which, by the Length of Time, (having now ſtood five hundred Years) as well as the Violence of Enemies, was in a very decayed and ruinous Condition. In two Years Time, he got together all proper Materials, and, in nine and an half more, had it ſo far finiſhed, as to make it fit for divine Service, though, to carry on the Out-buildings, Workmen were continued about it till the Time of our Saviour's Miniſtry and longer; in which Senſe we find the Jews telling him, [g] Forty and ſix Years was this Temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three Days? When the Temple was finiſhed, it was conſecrated with great Pomp and Solemnity, but ſtill retained the ſame Name, and was called the ſecond or latter Temple, becauſe this Rebuilding of Herod's was only by Way of Reparation, not of Reſtoration, and new Erection after a long and total Demolition, as was the Caſe of the Temple which Zerubbabel raiſed.

The Time of the Birth of Chriſt.

WHILE theſe Things were doing in Judea, the Temple of Janus was ſhut at Rome. In Times of War the Cuſtom was to have its Gates laid open, but ſhut in the Time of Peace; and 'twas now the fifth Time, ſince the Building of the City, that the Gates of this Temple had been ſhut. The firſt Time was, in the Reign of Numa; the ſecond, after the End of the firſt Punick War; the third, after Auguſtus's Victory over Antony and Cleopatra; the fourth, upon his Return from the Cantabrian War in Spain; and the fifth, in the twenty-ſixth Year of his Reign, and the thirty-third of Herod's; when a general Peace, which laſted for twelve Years together, prevailed all over the World, and was a proper Prelude for uſhering in the Coming of the Prince of Peace, even Chriſt our Lord, who, according to the exacteſt Computation [h], was born in the four thouſandth Year from the Creation, falling in exactly with the Time, where [i] an old Tradition of the Jews places the Beginning of the Days of the Meſſiah.

CHAP.

[f] Sebaſte and Cæſaria. [g] John ii. 20. [h] That of Archbiſhop Uſher. [i] The Tradition ſays, that the World was to laſt ſix Thouſand Years; two Thouſand Years of which were before the Law, two Thouſand under the Law, and the laſt two Thouſand under the Meſſiah; which Tradition is of great Antiquity among the Jews, and ſtill retains much Veneration, as one of the moſt authentical of this Sort. Prideaux's Connection, Part II. Lib. ix.

CHAP. VIII.

The State of Religion, and of the Idolatry, and Polytheiſm, of the Heathen World.

WE have hitherto conſidered the State of the Jewiſh Church, and gone through the ſeveral remarkable Occurrences, recorded in the Holy Scriptures, relating to the People of God. It remains now, that we take a ſhort View of the reſt of Mankind, and enquire a little, how thoſe Nations, that were Aliens to the Covenant, and deſtitute of divine Revelation, conducted themſelves in Matters of Religion.

The wiſeſt Heathens believed in one God only.

[a] THAT the wiſeſt, and moſt thinking Part of the Heathens, acknowledged but one Eternal, Independent, and Self-exiſtent Being, the Creator and Governor of the Univerſe, from whom all other inferior Divinities derived their Eſſence and Original, is manifeſt from the Teſtimony of both Heathen and Chriſtian Writers: And by what Steps they might arrive at this Knowledge, the Apoſtle to the Gentiles has, in ſome Meaſure, informed us; [b] For the inviſible Things of God, ſays he, from the Creation of the World, are clearly ſeen, being underſtood by the Things that are made, even his eternal Power and Godhead. They might argue, from the Light of Nature, that, as it is a Contradiction for any Thing to be the Author of its own Exiſtence, ſo all the viſible Parts of Nature were produced by ſome Cauſe; and, conſidering the Spaciouſneſs of their Extent, and Curiouſneſs of their Texture, by ſome infinite and almighty Cauſe; that, as leſs than an infinite and almighty Being was able neither to create, nor govern the innumerable Parts of the Univerſe, ſo more than one Being of that Kind, would both be ſuperfluous and repugnant; ſuperfluous, becauſe one would have all imaginable Perfections, and leave the other in a State of Inferiority; and repugnant, becauſe, ſuppoſing them of equal Perfections, they might nevertheleſs diſagree in their Adminiſtrations and Counſels: And therefore, [c] ſince the Heathens obſerved ſuch an exact Harmony in the Frame and Government of the World, all Things conſpiring to one End, and continuing in one uniform Courſe, it was not ſo great a Stretch of Reaſoning for them to conclude, that a Plurality of Gods was no more than a Fiction, ſince all Things were certainly made and governed by one great, and good, and wiſe Principle.

Οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη, εἷς κοίρανος ἔστω, is a Verſe of Homer, [d] which Socrates, the wiſeſt Head of Greece, uſed frequently to have in his Mouth, againſt the vaſt Number of Gods, that were in uſe in his Country: And as it is well known, that as one Part of his Impeachment was his breaking the Athenian Laws, by denying thoſe to be Gods, whom the City of Athens acknowledged to be ſuch; ſo his dying in that Cauſe, and becoming a Martyr for the Unity of the Godhead, may be ſome reaſonable Preſumption, that his Followers, the Academicks, continued in the ſame Perſuaſion. Plato, the Founder of another Sect, was of this Opinion, [e] that there were not two Gods, governing the World by different Counſels, but one only, [f] the Author and Parent of all Things, who made the great Animal of the World, and directed all its Motions: And therefore he tells his Friend, [g] When I am in earneſt, I begin my Letter with one God; but when I am otherwiſe, I begin it with the Name of many. The Sect of the Stoicks (as [h] they are repreſented by the learned Commentator on Virgil) held, that the divine Nature or Power is one and the ſame, but had different Titles, according to the different Relations we ſtand in to God, and the Variety of our Duties, which have reſpect to him: To [a] King's Crit. Hiſt. of the Creed, c. 2. of the Idolatry of the Gentile World. [b] Rom. i. 20. [c] Tilloſon's Serm. V. I. [d] Edwards, [e] Plat. Polit. Vol. II. [f] Timæus Locrius. de Animâ Mundi. [g] Plat. Epiſt. 43. ad Dionyſ. [h] Stoici dicunt non eſſe niſi unum Deum, & unam eandemque eſſe poteſtatem, &c. Serv. in Æn. iv.

To which Purpoſe [i] Seneca, and, not long before him, [k] Ariſtotle, rejecting a Multitude of Deities, reſolve the Difference of God's Names into this, that they ſignify to us the Variety of his Operations, and the different Exertments of his Power: For, though the Pagans worſhipped ſeveral Deities, (as [l] St Auſtin informs us) yet their Philoſophers declared, that theſe were only ſo many different Names of their great God Jupiter, who was called, in the Air, Juno; in the Sea, Neptune; in the Earth, Pluto; in Hell, Proſerpina; in War, Mars; in Vineyards, Bacchus; and in the Woods, Diana. Yea, all thoſe other inferior Gods and Goddeſſes, ſays he, ſuch as Apis, Lucina, Cunina, Fortuna, and the reſt of that numberleſs Company, were but one and the ſame Jupiter, [m] who, according to the various Benefits, that he beſtowed upon Mankind, was worſhipped under different Names and Appellations. "'Tis "of no great Conſequence therefore, concludes [n] Seneca, by what Name you call the "Firſt Nature, and the Divine Reaſon, which preſides over the Univerſe, and fills "all the Parts of it; he is ſtill the ſame God. He is called Jupiter Stator, not, as "Hiſtorians ſay, becauſe he ſtopped the Roman Armies, as they were flying, but "becauſe he is the conſtant Support of all Beings. Some may call him Fate, be"cauſe he is the Firſt Cauſe, on which all others depend: We Stoicks call him "ſometimes Father Bacchus, becauſe he is the univerſal Life, that animates Na"ture; Hercules, becauſe his Power is invincible; Mercury, becauſe he is the Rea"ſon, the Order, and the eternal Wiſdom. You may give him as many Names "as you pleaſe, provided you allow him but one ſole Omnipreſent Principle, filling "all Things that he hath made."

The more Ignorant believed a Plurality.

BUT, though ſome of the wiſeſt Heathens are ſuppoſed to acknowledge one Supreme God only, and him to worſhip, according to his ſeveral Powers and Perfections, under different Titles and Denominations; yet it will be very irrational and groundleſs to infer from hence, that there never was any ſuch Thing as Polytheiſm in the World. The Philoſophers, indeed, who were forced to comply with the Follies of the People, might, in Excuſe of ſuch their Compliance, pretend, that ſuch a Multitude of Deities, as the Vulgar owned, was either the Parts of the Univerſe, which, among the Egyptians, was looked upon as a God, or the ſeveral Powers and Properties of the one Supreme God, under a Variety of Appellations: But certainly the common People had no ſuch refined Thoughts; they ſeldom looked farther than the Objects of Senſe; and therefore we need leſs wonder, (as [o] one of the moſt plauſible Apologiſts for the Gentile Religion owns) if Men of groſs Ignorance eſteemed Wood and Stones divine Images, ſince they, who are unlearned, look on Monuments, that have Inſcriptions on them, as ordinary Stones; eſteem valuable Tables, as Pieces of common Wood; and Books of the beſt Learning, they regard no otherwiſe, than ſo many Bundles of Paper.

Proved from Scripture,

THAT the Generality of the heathen World was guilty of Idolatry and Polytheiſm, in the common and moſt obvious Acceptation of the Words, is evident from the moſt authentick Records. [p] In the Old Teſtament, how poſitively, how expreſſly is the worſhipping a Diverſity of Gods related? How frequently are the Gods and Idols, belonging to ſeveral Nations, mentioned? How exactly are the Rites, and diſtinct Circumſtances of their Adoration deſcribed, and the Folly and Infatuation of their Worſhippers ſet off, [q] with all the Keenneſs of Deriſion and Sarcaſm? In the New Teſtament, among many more, we have one Paſſage, that fully determines the Matter, where the Apoſtle, ſpeaking of the Pagan Idolaters, tells us expreſsly, [r] that they changed the Glory of the incorruptible God, into an Image made like to corruptible Man, and to Birds, and four-footed Beaſts, and creeping Things——and worſhipped and ſerved the Creature, more than the Creator, who is bleſſed for ever: Inſtead of true, they entertained falſe Conceptions of God, and worſhipped corruptible Creatures in the Place of the incorruptible Creator. All Sorts of created Beings, even thoſe that were moſt contemptible, had the ſame Veneration, that was due to the glorious Majeſty of Heaven; yea, they were worſhipped by them, more than God himſelf: Or if παρὰ may be rendered beſides, as well as more than, then it is evident, that the Pagans worſhipped the true God, and falſe Gods too; i. e. tho' ſome of them were perſuaded of the Exiſtence of one Supreme Being; whom, in ſome Sort, they reverenced and adored; yet, beſides him, they worſhipped other Beings, and ſet up a vaſt Number of other Gods, who were no more than Creatures: And therefore the ſame Apoſtle, who well underſtood the Nature of Gentile Idolatry, tells the Lycaonians, when he found them going to offer Sacrifice to him and Barnabas, that the Intent of his preaching the Goſpel to them, was, * to turn them from theſe Vanities, i. e. the Worſhip of the many Idols, to which they were addicted, to that of the living God, who made Heaven and Earth, the Sea, and all Things that are therein.

[i] Tot Appellationes ejus poſſunt eſſe, quot munera —— Omnia ejuſdem Dei nomina ſunt, variè utentis ſuâ poteſtate. De Benef. Lib. iv. c. 7. [k] Εἰς δὲ ὢν πολυώνυμός ἐστι, &c. De Mundo. [l] And yet, ſome other Fathers look upon both the Grecian and Roman Jupiter, as no other, than an Arch-Devil, and a Topical God; and accordingly deride his Worſhip, as the Adoration of a Man, that was born and buried at Crete. Tenniſon of Idolatry, c. 5. [m] Quid? Uſque adeo Majores noſtros inſipientes & cæcos fuiſſe credendum eſt, ut Bacchum, & Cererem Deos putârint? Imo unum Deum credebant, cujus illa munera, illæ functiones eſſent. Aug. de Civit. Dei, Lib. iv. [n] De Benef. Lib. iv. [o] Porphyr. apud Euſeb. de Præpar. Evang. Lib. iii. c. 7. [p] Edwards, of the Idolatry of the Gentile World. [q] Vid. Iſa. lxi. 7, &c. Ch. lxiv. 9, &c. Hab. ii. 20, &c. [r] Rom. i. 23, 25.

And other Authorities.

SUBSEQUENT to the Apoſtle's Time, we find Juſtin the Philoſopher, (once a Pagan, and then writing to the Pagans) reminding them of their Images and Idols of all Sorts, and telling them plainly; † that they not only called theſe Gods, but ſerved them, and worſhipped them as ſuch; and that they hated the Chriſtians, becauſe they were of another Opinion; and Clemens of Alexandria, another Convert from Paganiſm, recounting the Reaſons of the firſt Invention of Heathen Deities, in theſe Words: "Some, contemplating the Stars, ‡ ſays he, and admiring their Courſes, made them "Gods; ſo the Indians worſhipped the Sun, and the Phrygians the Moon: And "others, collecting with Delight the Fruits of the Earth, deified Corn, which they "called Ceres, and the Vine, which they called Bacchus. Some being afraid of Puniſhments, Diſtreſſes, and Calamities, found out particular Deities, whom they "either took to be Means of ſending them upon Mankind, or of diverting them. "The Philoſophers, following the Fancy of the Poets, made Gods of the Paſſions, "as Love, Hope, Joy; others put the Virtues into the Number of the Gods, re"preſenting them by outward Shapes; and the common People, laſtly, did gene"rally deify thoſe, from whom they received any conſiderable Benefit or Advan"tage." So that, according to theſe Men's Account, not only the common People, but even their Philoſophers, and Men of the beſt Underſtanding made no Scruple of ſetting up a Multiplicity of Gods: We need leſs wonder then, ſays Lactantius, (who was a good Judge in the Caſe, as having himſelf been bred up in Heatheniſm) if barbarous Nations, and the ignorant People erred, in adoring the Stars; ſeeing the very Philoſophers of the Stoick Sect (who were the prime Moraliſts, as well as Naturaliſts) were of the ſame Opinion, and thought that all the heavenly Bodies, which are in Motion, were to be reckoned among the Number of the Gods.

The firſt Inſtitution of Idols, &c.

AND, indeed, if we look a little into the firſt Inſtitution of Idolatry and Polytheiſm, it will appear more than probable, that it was not the ignorant Rabble, but ſome wiſer, or, at leaſt, ſome pretendedly-wiſer Head, that firſt formed the Deſign of introducing more Gods than one into the World. The Apoſtle has given us good Grounds for this Conjecture: For, having obſerved in what Manner divine Homage was paid to the moſt contemptible Creatures, he immediately denotes the Men, that were the Occaſion of it; they were ſuch, ſays he, as profeſſed themſelves to be wiſe; which plainly relates to the Philoſophers, (as moſt Commentators allow) who made great Pretences to Reaſon, and were Profeſſors of Wiſdom; and are therefore very appoſitely upbraided with their Folly, in making Brutes their Gods, and, by their Practice and Perſuaſion, encouraging the more ignorant Sort to do the ſame.

In what Age of the World.

IN what Age of the World, the Number of Gods began to multiply upon the Face of the Earth, is not ſo eaſy to determine: ᵘ "The Silence of the ſacred Hiſtorian, however, is a good Preſumption, that, in the Times before the Flood, there was no Worſhip of ſtrange Gods, ſince it can hardly be ſuppoſed, but that ſo foul a Sin (had it been in Practice in thoſe early Days) would have met with the ſame Animadverſion from Moſes, as ‡ the Violence and Injuſtice, which then filled the Earth, or ˣ the unclean Mixtures of the Sons of God with the Daughters of Men. The old World was doubtleſs ʸ wicked enough to deſerve the Deſtruction, which God brought upon it: But, from the freſh Memory of the Creation, from the frequent Apparitions of God and Angels, who might remind Men of their Duty; from the long Lives of the Antediluvian Patriarchs, who would not fail to inculcate to their Families

* Acts xiv. 15.
† Exhort. ad Gent. Rom. i. 22.
‡ Gen. vi. 11.
ʸ Ibid. ver. 12.
ᵗ Ταῦτα θεὺς καλεῖτε, τούτοις δουλεύετε, τούτοις προσκυνεῖτε, &c. ad Doognet. Epiſt.
ᵘ Quid mirum, ſi aut Barbari, aut imperiti homines in adorandis Aſtris errârint, cùm etiam Philoſophi Stoicæ Diſciplinæ in eâdem fuerint Opinione, ut omnia cæleſtia, quæ moventur, in Deorum numero habenda eſſe cenſuerint? Inſtit. Lib. II.
‡ Tenniſon, of Idolatry, ch. iv.

milies what themſelves were abundantly aſſured of, the Almighty Power and Unity of the Godhead; from theſe, and perhaps ſeveral other Cauſes to us unknown, it might come to paſs, that the Worſhip of Idols was, either not in Being, or, at leaſt, not in frequent Uſe, in this Infancy of the World. Some indeed, from a Paſſage in Moſes, [z] then began Men to profane (as they would render it) inſtead of tranſlating it (as our Church has done) to call upon the Name of the Lord, have been inclined to refer the Origin of Idolatry to the Days of Enos: But, [a] ſince the Name of God may be profaned by ſundry other Means, as well as by Idolatry, (as it was certainly profaned before, and with great Irreverence abuſed, in the wicked Families of Cain and Lamech) though the Hebrew Word may ſometimes ſignify to profane, yet [b] in this Place there is no Reaſon to enforce ſuch an Expoſition; eſpecially ſince the Chaldee Interpreter ſeems to come nearer the Scope of the Paſſage, and has given us a Senſe that ſeems unexceptionable: In thoſe Days Men began to make Supplications in the Name of the Lord, i. e. the Number of Families increaſing in the Days of Enos, they appointed more publick Places for God's Service, in which, at Set-times, they met together, and, in a more ſolemn Congregation, worſhipped their great Creator.

FROM Cham therefore, rather than from Enos, the Learned have derived the Beginning of Idolatry; and they ſuppoſe, that this Man's Heart, being deeply depraved before the Deluge, was but more hardened by his wonderful Eſcape from it; ſo that it might be juſt with God, to give him up to the farther Seducement of his Senſuality, and to the viſible Power of the old Serpent, who, for a Time might be chained down by the Curſe in Paradiſe, but was now let looſe again, for the Puniſhment of thoſe, whom God's ſevere and miraculous Diſcipline did not cleanſe of their Wickedneſs and Folly. This Date however [c] ſome have accounted a little too ſoon, and therefore placed the Beginning of Idolatry at the Confuſion of Languages, and under Belus, rather than Cham; reaſonably preſuming, that the Difference of Mens Dialects, and the Diſtinction of their Opinions concerning God, might not improbably commence together.

BUT be the preciſe Time of the Commencement of Idolatry what it will, it was the wiſe Men of the World, (as we ſaid before) the reaſoning Philoſopher, or cunning Prieſt, who found his Advantage in it, that having formed the Deſign, addreſſed to the Multitude with a grave Appearance, [d] and prevailed, as we may imagine, by ſome ſuch Way of arguing, as this: "We are all aware, ye Sons of Noah, that "Religion is our chief Concern, and therefore it well becomes us to improve and "advance it as much as poſſible. We have, indeed, received Appointments from "God for the Worſhip which he requires; but if theſe Appointments may be al-"tered for his greater Glory, who doubts but that it will be a commendable Piety ſo "to alter them? Now our Father Noah has inſtituted us in a Religion, which, in "Truth, is too ſimple, and too unaffecting. It directs us to worſhip God abſtractedly "from all Senſe, and under a confuſed Notion; under the Formality of Attributes, "as Power, Goodneſs, Juſtice, Wiſdom, Eternity, and the like; an Idea, foreign "to our Affections, as well as our Comprehenſion: Whereas, in all Reaſon, we ought "to worſhip God more pompouſly, and more extenſively, and not only to adore his "perſonal and eſſential Attributes, but likewiſe all the Emanations of them, and all "thoſe Creatures, by which they are eminently repreſented. We ought therefore "(if we will be wiſe) to worſhip the Hoſt of Heaven, becauſe they are eminent Re-"preſentations of his Glory, and Eternity. We ought to worſhip the Elements, be-"cauſe they repreſent his Benignity and Omnipreſence. We ought to worſhip "Princes, becauſe they ſuſtain a divine Character, and are the Repreſentatives of his "Power upon Earth. We ought to worſhip Men famous in their Generation, even "when they are dead, becauſe their Virtues were the diſtinguiſhing Gifts and Com-"munications of God. Nay, we ought to worſhip the Ox, and the Sheep, and "whatever Creatures are moſt beneficial, becauſe they are Symbols of his Love and "Goodneſs; and, with no leſs Reaſon, the Serpent, the Crocodile, and other Animals "that are noxious, becauſe they are the Symbols of his awful Anger." This ſeems to be a fair Opening of the Project, and, by ſome ſuch cunning Harangue as this, we may ſuppoſe, that the firſt Contrivers of Idolatry, drew in the ignorant and admiring Multitude. And indeed, conſidering the natural Stupidity of vulgar Minds, and the ſtrong Inclinations they have, in Matters of abſtruſe Conſideration, to help them-

By whom.

[z] Gen. iv. 26. [a] Tenniſon, of Idolatry. [b] The Word [Chala] in the Conjugation wherein it is here uſed is never taken for Profaning, but Beginning.
[c] Cyril. Alex. contra Julian. Lib. I. [d] Young's Sermons, Vol. II.

themſelves by ſenſible Objects, it ſeems not ſo difficult a Taſk to have drawn them in.

For what Reaſons.

'THOSE, who worſhipped Univerſal Nature, or the Syſtem of the Material World, perceived firſt, that there were Excellencies in the ſeveral Parts of it; and then to make up the Grandeur and Perfection of the Idea, they joined them all together in one Divine Being. Thoſe, who laboured under a Weakneſs and Narrowneſs of Imagination, diſtributed Nature into its ſeveral Parts, and worſhipped that Portion of it, which was accounted of moſt general Uſe and Benefit. Uſefulneſs was the common Motive; but it was not the only Motive, that inclined the World to Idolatry: For, upon farther Enquiry, we ſhall find, that whatever raviſhed with its tranſcendent Beauty, whatever affrighted with its malignant Power, whatever aſtoniſhed with its uncommon Greatneſs, whatever, in ſhort, was beautiful, hurtful, or majeſtick, became a Deity, as well as what was profitable for its Uſe.

'THE Sun, they perceived, had all thoſe Powers and Properties united in it. Its Beauty is glorious to behold; its Motion wonderful to conſider; its Heat occaſions different Effects, Barrenneſs in ſome Places, and in others Fruitfulneſs; and the immenſe Globe of its Light appears highly exalted, and riding in Triumph, as it were, round the World: The Moon, they ſaw, ſupplied the Abſence of the Sun, by Night gave a friendly Light to the Earth, and, beſides the great Variety of its Phaſes, had a wonderful Influence over the Sea, and other humid Bodies: The Stars they admired for their Height and Magnitude, the Order of their Poſitions, and Celerity of their Motions, and thence were perſuaded, either that ſome Celeſtial Vigour or other reſided in them, or that the Souls of their Heroes and great Men were tranſlated into them, when they died; and upon theſe, and ſuch like Preſumptions, they accounted all heavenly Bodies to be Deities, though the Sun, in all Places, was the moſt univerſal and popular Idol. [g] 'The Force of Fire, the Subtilty of Air, the Uſefulneſs of Water, as well as the Terror and Dreadfulneſs of Thunder and Lightning, gave Riſe to the Conſecration of theſe Elements. The Sea itſelf, ſwelling with its proud Surface, and roaring with its mighty Billows, is ſuch an awful Sight, and the Earth bedecked with all its Plants, Flowers, and Fruits, ſuch a lovely one; as might well affect a Pagan's Veneration: When from the like Motive, their beneficial, hurtful, delightful, or aſtoniſhing Properties, Beaſts, Birds, Fiſhes, and Inſects came at firſt to be adored. The Pride and Pomp of the Great, and the low and ſlaviſh Diſpoſitions of the Mean occaſioned, firſt the Flattery, and then the Worſhip of Kings and Princes, as Gods upon Earth. Men famous for their great Adventures and Exploits, the Founders of Nations or Cities, or the Inventors of uſeful Arts and Sciences were reverenced, while they lived, and upon their Death canonized. The prevailing Notion of the Soul's Immortality made them imagine, either that immediately they aſcended up to Heaven, and there ſettled their Abode in ſome Orb or other; or that they hovered in the Air, whence, by ſolemn Invocations, and by making ſome Statue or Image reſemblant of them, they might be prevailed with to come down, and inhabit it.

The Riſe of Images.

THE Author of the Book of Wiſdom [h] has given us a full Account of the firſt Inſtitution of Statues and Images, and upon what Occaſions they were probably ſet up. A Father, ſays he, afflicted with untimely Mourning, when he hath made an Image of his Child, ſoon taken away, now honoured him as a God, which was then a dead Man; and delivered to thoſe that were under him Ceremonies and Sacrifices. Thus, in Proceſs of Time, an ungodly Cuſtom, grown ſtrong, was kept as a Law, and graven Images were worſhipped by the Commandment of Kings. Whom Men could not honour in Preſence, becauſe they dwelt far off, they took the Counterfeit of his Viſage from far, and made an expreſs Image of a King, whom they honoured, to the End, that, by this their Forwardneſs, they might flatter him, that was abſent, as if he were preſent. Alſo the ſingular Diligence of the Artificer did help to ſet forward the Ignorant to more Superſtition; for he, peradventure, willing to pleaſe one in Authority, forced all his Skill to make the Reſemblance of the beſt Faſhion; and ſo the Multitude, allured by the Grace of the Work, took him now for a God, who, a little before, was but honoured as a Man. [i] 'Thus the Splendor and Artifice of the Statues themſelves, together with the Juggles and Impoſtures of the Heathen Prieſts, telling ſtrange Stories of their Original, or their Diſcovery, inclined the World to an Opinion, that what what was primarily a Memorial of a departed Child, or Hero, a Remembrancer of a diſtant Friend, or Governor, or a Monument of ſome remarkable Accident in the World, was the Receptacle of ſome ſtrange Divinity.

[e] Tenniſon, of Idolatry. [f] Ibid. [g] Herbert's ancient Religion of the Gentiles. [h] Chap. xiv. 15. [i] Tenniſon, ibid.

When firſt worſhipped.

WHEN Statues came firſt to be idolized, is not ſo eaſy a Matter to determine; but that they were of very early Inſtitution is manifeſt from that Paſſage in Scripture, where we are told, that [k] Rachel ſtole away her Father Laban's Images. Laban lived in Chaldea, or in Meſopotamia, which belongeth to it; and, as this is the firſt Inſtance of Idolatry, that we have upon Record, 'tis preſumed by ſome learned Men, that theſe Images, or [l] Teraphim, which Rachel ſtole, were Images in Miniature, made in Imitation of the Statues of ſome great Aſſyrian Kings, who very probably were the firſt Heathen Gods: And from hence they farther conjecture, that the firſt Images of this Kind were thoſe, which (as Lactantius tells us) Ninus erected in Remembrance of his Father Belus, (whom the Scriptures call Nimrod) and that theſe were the earlieſt Objects of profane Worſhip. Chaldea, no doubt, was the Mother of Idolatry: There Abraham dwelt; and from thence he was ordered to depart, that he and his Poſterity might be reſcued from the general Impiety, and taught to worſhip the true God only: But then, whether the Images of great Men were the firſt Objects of the Chaldean Adoration, is a Matter much to be queſtion'd. [m] The Chaldeans, 'tis certain, by Reaſon of the plain and eaſy Situation of their Country, which gave them a larger Proſpect of the heavenly Bodies, than thoſe, who inhabited mountainous Places, had a great Conveniency for Aſtronomical Obſervations; and, accordingly, were the firſt People, that took any great Pains to improve them. And as they were the firſt Aſtrologers, ſo learned Men have obſerved, that [n] they had no other Gods, but the Stars, to whom they made Statues and Images: Thoſe, which they made to the Sun, were of Gold; to the Moon, of Silver; and ſo to the reſt of the Planets, of the Metals dedicated to them. They ſuppoſe therefore, that theſe Aſtrologers, lying on the Ground, or elſe on flat Roofs, all Night, to make their Obſervations, fell in Love with the Lights of Heaven, which, in the clear Firmament of thoſe Countries, appeared ſo often, and with ſo much Luſtre; and perceiving the conſtant and regular Order of their Motions and Revolutions, they thence began to imagine, that they were animated by ſome ſuperior Souls, and therefore deſerved their Adoration. And as the Sun, excelling all the reſt, ſeemed to command the greateſt Obſervance; ſo the Generality of learned Men have, with good Reaſon, imagined, that this bright Luminary was the firſt Idol in the World.

The Sun the firſt Idol.

For what Reaſon.

JOB very probably (as [o] we have had Occaſion to take Notice before) lived in Jacob's Time, yet it is plain, (by his aſſerting his Innocence in this Reſpect) that this Kind of Idolatry was cuſtomary in his Days; [p] If I beheld the Sun, when it ſhined, or the Moon walking in Brightneſs, and mine Heart hath been ſecretly enticed, or my Mouth hath kiſſed mine Hand, i. e. if, with Devotion of Soul, or Profeſſion of outward Ceremony, I have worſhipped thoſe heavenly Bodies, which, by their Height, Motion, and Luſtre attract the Eye, and raviſh the Senſes; this alſo were an Iniquity, to be puniſhed by the Judges; for I ſhould have denied the God, that is above, Moſes, conducting the Children of Iſrael into Canaan, gives them Intimation, what Kind of Idolatry was current in the Land, and a ſtrict Caution, [q] that, when they lifted up their Eyes to the Heavens, they ſhould arm their Minds, againſt that Enchantment, to which they were ſubject by the ſenſible Glory of the Sun, Moon, and Stars: And therefore, the Account, which [r] the Hiſtorian gives us of the firſt Commencement of Idolatry, ſeems not improbable, viz. That the moſt ancient Inhabitants of the Earth, (meaning thoſe, that lived ſoon after the Flood, and particularly the Egyptians) contemplating on the World above them, and being aſtoniſhed, with high Admiration, at the Nature of the Univerſe, believed that there were eternal Gods, and that the two Principal of them were the Sun and the Moon, the firſt of which they called Oſiris, and the ſecond Iſis; [s] ſince, of late Years, when the Mariner's Compaſs directed Men to

[k] Gen. xxxi. 19. [l] Theſe Teraphim (according to Kircher's Oedip. Egypt.) were the ſame Idol with the Egyptian Serapis, i. e. an Image, like a little Child wrapped up, without Hands or Feet. The Jewiſh Rabbins agree with him thus far, that they were Images of human Shape; but they add farther, that they were Taliſmanical Images, made by Aſtrologers, and capable of Celeſtial Influence: And therefore Rachel ſtole them from her Father, ſay they, leſt, by their Inſpection, he ſhould diſcover which Way Jacob took his Flight. Selden de Diis Syris Syntag. 1. [m] Stillingfleet's Orig. Sacræ. [n] Maimon. More Nev. P. III. c. 29. [o] Vid. pag. 356. [p] Job xxxi. 26, &c. [q] Deut. iv. 19. [r] Diod. Sicul. Bibl. Hiſtor. L. III. c. 11. [s] Tenniſon, of Idolatry.

to a new World in America, (peopled no doubt from ſeveral Parts of the old) many different Idols were found in particular Places; but as for the Sun, it was the general Deity both in Mexico and Peru.

The great Multitude of Idols.

BUT, whatever the firſt Idol might be, it ſoon multiplied to ſuch a prodigious Number, as to fill both Heaven and Earth with its Progeny; inſomuch, that there were few Parts of the Creation, but what, in one Nation or other, had their Worſhippers. [t] They worſhipped univerſal Nature, the Soul of the World, Angels, Devils, and the Souls of Men departed, either by themſelves, or in Union with ſome Star, or other Body. They worſhipped the Heavens, and, in them, both particular Luminaries, and Conſtellations; the Atmoſphere, and, in it, the Meteors, and Fowls of the Air; the Earth, and, in it, Beaſts, Birds, Inſects, Plants, Groves, and Hills, together with divers Foſſils, and terreſtrial Fire. They worſhipped the Water, and, in it, the Sea and Rivers; and, in them, Fiſhes, Serpents, and Inſects, together with ſuch Creatures as are doubtful Inhabitants of either Element. They worſhipped Men, both living and dead, and, in them, the Faculties and Endowments of the Soul, as well as the ſeveral Accidents and Conditions of human Life. Nay, they worſhipped the Images of Men, the Images of Animals, even the moſt hateful, ſuch as Serpents, Dragons, Crocodiles, &c. Images of ſeveral Parts of very different Creatures, and reckoned all ſuch Figures and Repreſentations, though never ſo ſtrange and monſtrous, ſacred and venerable. Thus they ranſacked Heaven and Earth, and in every Place found out ſomething to tranſmute into a God.

Some Nations had particular ones.

BUT, amidſt this ſtrange Variety, [u] there were few Nations, but what had one God peculiar to themſelves, to which they paid a more than ordinary Veneration. And * though this God might poſſibly be the ſame, with what other Nations worſhipped; yet, by the Difference of the Name and Title, which they gave it, and the Diverſity of Rites and Ceremonies, wherewith they addreſſed it, they made it, at leaſt, ſeem to be a diſtinct Deity. Thus the Holy Scriptures acquaint us, that not only [x] every Nation made Gods of their own; that [y] Aſtoreth was the Goddeſs of the Zidonians, Chemoſh the God of the Moabites, and Milcom the God of the Children of Ammon, &c. but that every City and large Town had a particular Deity, to which, in a peculiar Manner, they were devoted. This the Exprobration of the Prophet, [z] according to the Number of thy Cities, ſo are thy Gods; and this the vaunting Speech of Rabſhakeh implies, [a] Where are the Gods of Hamath, and of Arpad? Where are the Gods of Sephervaim, Henah, and Ivah? As much as to ſay, that the Gods, who preſided over theſe ſeveral Cities, and were worſhipped and invoked by the Inhabitants thereof, could not deliver them out of the Hands of his Maſter the King of Aſſyria.

NAY, ſome Nations were ſo far infatuated this Way, as not to be content with the particular Deities of their own Countries, but were eager to import from other Climates, and to worſhip all the Gods, they could any where hear of. [b] The Romans, for their Superſtition in this Reſpect, were very remarkable: For, as they conquered all Nations, they adopted their Religions: And, having built a Pantheon, or Temple for all the Gods of the whole World, they made their Worſhip as univerſal, as their Empire. Nor were the Athenians, in the leaſt, inferior to them; They had their θεοὶ ξενικοὶ, ſtrange Gods, or Gods of other Countries, in every Corner of the City; and, that they might be ſure to take in the whole Complex of them, they erected Altars (as not only [c] the Apoſtle, but [d] Pagan Authors have likewiſe told us) to unknown Gods, inſomuch, that Athens was but one great Temple, or (in the Language of [e] a very conſiderable Writer) all Altar, all Sacrifice, all Conſecration to the Gods.

The Abſurdities they ran into.

AMONG ſuch a Number of Deities, their Importers, or firſt Inſtituters, ran themſelves into frequent Abſurdities. [f] They confounded the Species of Things, and mixed ſometimes the moſt monſtrous and inconſiſtent together, in Order to conſtitute conſtitute a God of an uncommon Make. [g] They confounded the Sexes, and made one and the ſame Deity ſometimes Male, ſometimes Female, and frequently both. They confounded the Offices of their Gods, and made them many Times preſide in very different and incompatible Provinces. Apollo, for Inſtance, was their God of Muſick, and yet, at the ſame Time, they made him the God of Phyſick, the God of Poetry, and the God of Wiſdom, and all this, to be reconciled with his being the Sun. Diana was the Goddeſs of the Woods and Foreſts, yet, under the Name of Trivia, ſhe ſome way related to the Streets; ſhe is made to be the Moon, or Queen of Heaven; ſometimes an Huntreſs; ſometimes a Midwife, under the Name of Lucina; and again, under the Title of Hecate, no better than a Witch. What can be more abſurd and ridiculous, than the Repreſentation they gave of their God Dagon, who, in his upper Parts, was a Man, or a Woman, (for they made him of either Sex) and, below, a Fiſh; of the Lybian Jupiter, [h] with his Ram's Head, and a pair of crooked Horns; or of the Egyptian Anubis, who was worſhipped in the Shape of a Man's Body, [i] with the Head of a Dog? This ſhews the fatal Progreſs of Error, and into what wild Conceits Men naturally deviate, when once they forſake the Worſhip of the true God, and, by the Deception of the Devil, [k] become vain (as the Apoſtle expreſſes it) in their Imaginations, and have their fooliſh Hearts darkened.

[t] Tenniſon, of Idolatry. [u] Unicuique enim Provinciæ, & Civitati, ſuus Deus eſt, ut Syriæ Aſtarte, ut Arabiæ Diſares, &c. Tertul. Apol. c. 24. Inde adeo per univerſa Imperia, provincias, Oppida videmus ſingula, ſacrorum Ritus Gentiles habere, & Deos colere Municipes, ut Eleuſinios Cererem, Phrygas magnam Matrem, Epidauros Æſculapium, &c. Min. Felix. * Thus the Oſiris of the Egyptians, the Baal of the Phœnicians, the Moloch of the Amorites, the Belus of the Syrians, the Mithras of the Perſians, and the Apollo of the Greeks and Romans, are ſuppoſed by ſome learned Men to be one and the ſame Deity, and to ſignify the Sun. Herbert's Religion of the Gentiles. [x] 2 Kings xvii. 29. [y] 1 Kings xi. 33. [z] Jer. ii. 28. [a] 2 Kings xviii. 34. [b] Edwards, of the Idolatry of the Gentile World. [c] Acts xvii. 23. [d] Pauſan. in Attic. Lucian. in Philopat. & Laërt. in Epimenide. [e] Zenoph. de Repub. Athen. [f] Edwards, ibid.

The Order ſettled among them.

THIS prodigious Number of Deities, giving ſuch a Latitude to Men's wild Conceits, occaſioned great Perplexity among their Worſhippers, and raiſed Diſputes about their Preference and Priority: * So that, to end theſe Diſputes, it was concluded by the Romans, and others, that ſome ſhould be eſtabliſhed as Dii majorum Gentium, much ſuperior in Power and Dignity to the Dii minorum Gentium, who were but called Heroes and Half-gods: Not but that the former were only Men canonized after their Death, as well as the latter; but the Diſtance of Time, wherein they lived, which increaſed the Stories of their Atchievements, as well as the long Courſe of Devotion, which, in ſucceeding Ages, had been paid them, raiſed them above the reſt, and, in the general Eſteem, gave them a Pre-eminence. What the Number of this Order was, is not ſo well agreed on, ſome making them but twelve, (ſix Males, and as many Females;) and others [l] twenty; and what their ſeveral Actions and Adventures were, would be an endleſs Work to recount: Our preſent Purpoſe leads us rather to conſider, by what Ways the heathen Mythology concerning them might poſſibly ariſe.

The heathen Mythology, whence it aroſe.

Now, tho' the chief Cauſe of this may be imputed [m] to the fanciful Humour of the firſt Writers, that appeared in the World, the Poets, who took Delight to diſguiſe all ancient Stories under Fables, wherein they were ſo loſt, as never to be recovered afterwards; yet it ſeems apparent to any diligent Enquirer, that, [n] either by taking the Idiom of the Oriental Languages in a literal and proper Senſe, or, by altering the Names of the ancient Tradition, and ſubſtituting others, in their own Language, of the like Importance; either, by attributing what was done by the Anceſtors of Mankind to ſome Perſons of their own Nation, or, by aſcribing the Actions of ſeveral Perſons to one, who was either the firſt, or the Chief of them; theſe ancient Authors, did, by Degrees, corrupt the original Account of Men and Things, and changed it into the heathen Mythology.

Probably from Scripture-Hiſtory.

THAT they had ſome Knowledge of the Writings of Moſes is manifeſt from the plain Footſteps of Scripture-Hiſtory, which are diſcoverable in their Fictions. [o] Thus Saturn, the oldeſt of their Gods, who was the Son of of Heaven and Earth, once in great Power, but afterwards depoſed, and forced to abſcond, agrees exactly with the Account we have of Adam's Creation, his Dominion in the golden Age of his Innocence, his Loſs of it by his Folly, and hiding himſelf from the Preſence of the Lord, for Fear and Shame. That Tubal-Cain gave firſt Occaſion to the Name and Worſhip of Vulcan, has been probably conceived, both from the great Affinity of the Names, and from Tubal-Cain's being called [p] an Inſtructor of every Artificer in Braſs

[g] Among the Aſſyrians, Syrians, and Greeks, the Pagan Gods were of both Sexes: Bacchus, in Ariſtides's Oration, is made Male and Female, and ſo is Jupiter, in one of Orpheus's Hymns: Among the Romans, Fortune was accounted not only a Goddeſs, but a God; and among the Pagan Saxons, Friga, which was their Venus, (to whom the ſixth Day of the Week, called Friday, was dedicated) was an Idol repreſenting both Sexes. Edwards, of the Idolatry of the Gentile World. [h] Stat tortis Cornibus Ammon. Luc. Lib. IX. [i] Omnigenûmque Deûm monſtra, & Latrator Anubis. Virgil, Æn. viii. [k] Rom. i. 21. * Herbert's Religion of the Gentiles.
[l] Their Names are Janus, Jupiter, Saturn, Genius, Mercury, Apollo, Mars, Vulcan, Neptune, Sol, Orcus, Bacchus, Terra, Ceres, Juno, Luna, Diana, Minerva, Venus, and Veſta; twelve Males, and eight Females. Herbert, ibid.
[m] Stilling fleet's Orig. Sacræ. [n] This, and the following Means of occaſioning their Mythology, the learned Stilling fleet has illuſtrated by ſeveral Inſtances. Orig. Sacræ, p. 365, &c. [o] Stilling fleet, ibid.
[p] Gen. iv. 22.

Braſs and Iron. The Story of Prometheus, and his forming Mankind, relates to the Memory of Noah, from whom the World was re-peopled; Bacchus's being twice born ſeems to denote his Preſervation after the Flood; and the double Face of Janus, wherewith he looks both forward and backward, is not ſo fit an Emblem of any Thing, as of Noah's ſeeing two Ages, one before, and the other after the Flood. 'Tis no vain Conjecture, that the Memory of Jacob's long Peregrination, and Service with his Uncle Laban, was preſerved under the Story of Apollo's Baniſhment, and being a Shepherd under Admetus; and that the Memory of Joſeph in Egypt was preſerved under the Egyptian Apis, has been ſhewn with a great deal of Probability, [q] by ſeveral learned Men: So that from theſe, and many more Inſtances, that might be produced, we cannot but conclude, with [r] a very judicious Enquirer, That this wonderful Agreement, of heathen Mythology with the Scriptures, is a convincing Argument, that the one is a Corruption of the other, and that many of their Stories came from thence, though by the Change of Names, and other proper Inverſions, the firſt Compilers of them gave them a different Dreſs, to ſuit them to their own Meridian.

THUS we have enquired into the firſt Inſtitution of the heathen Idolatry, and from what probable Occaſions it might ariſe; into the great Number of their Gods, and the very confuſed Accounts they give of them; and have nothing more to ſay upon this Argument, except it be what relates to the Rites and Ceremonies wherewith they uſed to worſhip. That theſe fictitious Deities had Temples, and Altars erected to them, in great Variety, and according to their reſpective Natures, is too manifeſt, to need any Proof; [s] only the Perſians, Scythians, and Tartars, who worſhipped the Fire and Earth, had no Structures, at leaſt none made in any formal or ſolemn Manner. What they offered to the Terreſtrial Gods, was laid upon the bare Ground; what to the Infernal, was offered in Ditches, or Pits made in the Ground; and what to the Celeſtial, in Places raiſed above the Earth, i. e. Altars, and theſe ſometimes ſet upon Hills and Mountains. Their Manner of worſhipping was moſt commonly with their Heads covered, but, on ſome Occaſions, bare; often lying proſtrate, and ſometimes ſtanding barefooted; running ſometimes about in frantick Fits, with hideous and confuſed Outcries; and at others, exerciſing great Cruelty, and cutting and ſlaſhing themſelves, (as [t] we read Baal's Worſhippers did) with Knives and Lancets, till the Blood guſhed out upon them. The Firſt-fruits were a common Oblation to their Deities; but the chief Part of their Worſhip conſiſted in ſacrificing Animals: And this they did out of a real Perſuaſion, that their Gods were pleaſed with their Blood, and were nouriſhed with the Smoke and Nidor of them; and therefore the more coſtly, they thought them the more acceptable, for which Reaſon, they ſtuck not ſometimes to regale them with human Sacrifices. Some Things indeed were offered in common to them all; but, for the Generality, they had their diſtinct Sacrifices. To Apollo was offered a Bull; a Goat and a Tyger to Bacchus; a Boar and a Wolf to Mars; a She-goat, and ſometimes a young Heifer, to Minerva; a Dove to Venus; a Peacock to Juno; and a barren Cow to Proſerpine, &c. Each of theſe Gods had Rites and Myſteries of a peculiar Nature; and, to gain an Admiſſion to the moſt ſecret of them, their Votaries, after a long Courſe of Penance, (for the Perſians were to undergo a dozen Sorts of Torments, ſome greater, ſome leſs, before they fitted themſelves for the Myſteries of their God Mithras) had certain [u] Symbols, and Forms of Words given them, as a Badge and Token of their Profeſſion, which none, but their own Fraternity, were acquainted with. The Feaſts and other Solemnities, in Honour of their Gods, were mixed with a great deal of Lewdneſs and Intemperance; nor were they thought to be duly performed, unleſs they were attended with Riot and Debauchery, and ſometimes with Cruelty and Bloodſhed. The Bacchanalia, and the Rites of Cybele, the Mother of the Gods, were always celebrated with Gluttony and Drunkenneſs: On this Occaſion, * one of their great Moraliſts allows of Intemperance, and thinks it a very fit and becoming Thing, to

The Manner of worſhipping theſe Gods.

Their Feaſts.

[q] Voſſius de Idol. Lib. I. c. 29. Kirch. Oed. Egypt. Syn. 3. c. 5. and Tenniſon, of Idolatry, who proves it in this Method, 1. That Moſes was the ancient Egyptian, or Arabian Bacchus. 2. That Bacchus was the Egyptian Oſiris. And, 3. That the ancient Egyptian Bacchus, or Oſiris, was no other than Apis, p. 126. [r] Ex mirabili illo conſenſu, vel cæcis apparebit, priſcos Fabularum Architectos à Scriptoribus ſacris multa mutuatos. Bochart. Canaan. [s] Edwards, of the Idolatry of the Gentile World. [t] 1 Kings xviii. 28. [u] With Alluſion to theſe Symbola among the Pagans, the learned Author of the Hiſtory of the Apoſtles Creed ſuppoſes, that that Syſtem of Faith was called by the Name of Symbolum; and, upon this Occaſion, has given us a brief Account, what ſome of theſe Symbols were, both mute and vocal, p. 11. as thoſe of Ceres more eſpecially, are mentioned by Arnobius, Clemens of Alexandria, and Julius Firmicus.

* Πίνειν δὲ εἰς μέθην ὅτε ἄριστόν ἐστι πρᾶγμα, πολὺν ἐν τῷ τοῦ οἴνου δύνασθαι Θεῶν ἰσχύν. Plato de Leg. Lib. VI.

to drink to Excesſ, at the Feaſts of that God, who is the Giver of Wine. The Saturnalia were riotous Times among the Romans, wherein (as [x] Seneca complains) a Licenſe was given to all publick Luxury and Uncleanneſs. The Lupercalia (which were the Feaſts of the God Pan) were ſolemnized by naked Men; thoſe of Flora, by the other Sex, in the ſame Condition; and (to name no more) in the Myſteries and Ceremonies of Ceres, as well as the Rites and Sacrifices of Bacchus, ſuch inhuman Actions and Barbarities were committed, [y] that the Obſervation of them was prohibited at Rome by a poſitive Decree of the Senate: For where theſe, and ſuch other Solemnities were allowed of, the Pſalmiſt, ſpeaking of the Iſraelites, has acquainted us in what Manner they were performed; [z] they were mingled among the Heathen, ſays he, and learned their Works, inſomuch, that they worſhipped their Idols, which turned to their own Decay: Yea, they offered their Sons and Daughters unto Devils, and ſhed innocent Blood, even the Blood of their Sons and Daughters, whom they offered unto the Idols of Canaan, and the Land was defiled with Blood: For ſuch as their Gods were, ſuch were the Ceremonies of their Worſhip, lewd and riotous, bloody and brutal. Let us now proceed a little farther, and ſee, whether the Caſe is at all amended with Relation to the preſent State of Idolatry in the heathen World.

SECT. I.

Of the preſent State of the Heathen Idolatry.

A Summary of the ancient Idolatry.

THE Gentiles of old (as we ſhew'd before) did, moſt of them, acknowledge one Supreme God, the firſt and univerſal Cauſe of all Things, and to him they made their Supplications and Vows: But then they imagined likewiſe, that he did not rule by his immediate Providence, but by ſeveral Orders of inferior Beings, as his Subſtitutes and Lieutenants. [a] They ſaw, that the Pride or Policy of their Princes (in order to create a greater Awe and Reverence) made them withdraw from the Management of Affairs, appear but ſeldom in Actions themſelves, and commit the Reins of Government to their Miniſters; and thereupon they ſuppoſed, that it comported beſt with the State and Dignity of God, not to concern himſelf with the Government of the World, but to leave it entirely to his Subſtitutes. Upon this Preſumption, [b] they were eaſily induced (next to the Supreme God) to give divine Worſhip, firſt to intellectual Subſtances of an heavenly Nature, whom they called Gods, whether they were Subſtances ſeparate from Bodies, or the Souls of Orbs and Stars; next, they addreſſed to intellectual Subſtances united to aërial Bodies, which they called Dæmons, and thought worthy of divine Worſhip, as being the Mediators between their Gods and them; in Proceſs of Time, they came to worſhip the Souls of ſuch, as had diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their Uſefulneſs to Mankind, and theſe they called Heroes, as being raiſed to an Elevation above this preſent Life; and, in the Concluſion, thought it not amiſs to pay the like Honour, even to the ſeveral Images of theſe Beings, or of other Parts of the Creation, as ſuppoſing them to participate of a ſuperior Nature, either from the Influence of heavenly Bodies, or the Inhabitation of ſome Spirit. This, in ſhort, ſeems to be the State and Progreſs of ancient Idolatry, which we come now to compare with the preſent; beginning (where it is chiefly predominant) in the Eaſt.

In the Eaſt-Indies. The preſent Idolatry of the Chineſe.

THE Chineſe, [c] in general, worſhip the Supreme God, the King of Heaven and Earth, or rather the Eternal Mind, which (as they imagine) animates the whole Creation; but him they ſuppoſe [d] to govern the Univerſe by a Vicegerent, whom they call Laocon-Tzanty; by the Sun, which they account an eternal Spirit; and by another Divinity, named Chanſay, whom they ſuppoſe to have Dominion over all ſublunary Things. To theſe Spirits, [e] and the three principal Miniſters employed under them, together with the Heavens, and all the heavenly Hoſt, the Souls of their Anceſtors, and of ſuch as have been the Authors of any notable Invention, they preſent Oblations, and religious Worſhip; only with this Diſtinction, [f] that the King alone ſacrifices to celeſtial Bodies, the Sun and Stars, &c. the Lords and Grandees to terreſtrial, to the Mountains and Lakes, &c. the Gentlemen and Officers, to the four Seaſons of the Year, &c. and the Commonalty to their Houſhold-Gods, and tutelar Angels. In their Temples, [g] they have three remarkable Idols ſet up for the publick Uſe: The Image of Immortality, which they worſhip in the Form of a monſtrous fat Man, ſitting croſs-legg'd, with his Breaſt open, and an huge prominent Belly: The Image of Pleaſure, about twenty Feet high; and between theſe, another large Image, of thirty Feet, gilded all over, and adorned with a Crown, and rich Apparel, to which they pay a particular Adoration, and call it the great King Kang. Leſſer Images are innumerable, not only in the Temples, but in the Streets, and other publick Places. Every one has his Jos, or Houſhold-God, but they ſometimes uſe them very coarſely; for if they have prayed to them any conſiderable Time, and find no Effect of their Prayers, they not only upbraid them with Neglect, but very often drag them through all the Kennels of the Streets: However, if in the mean Time, they happen to obtain what they aſked, they ſet the Idol in its Place again, fall down before and adore it, excuſing their ignominious Uſage of it, and (to make it more propitious for the future) they waſh, and paint, and gild it over afreſh. They conſecrate Temples to Dæmons, who (as they fanſy) are confined within Statues; [h] and have, particularly, a little Iſland dedicated to the Devil, where they ſacrifice ſolemnly to him, under the Name of Camaſſono, and where the Veſſels, which paſs by, make an Offering to him of whatever they have on board, and throw it into the Sea, to prevent his Anger.

[x] Jus Luxuriæ Publicæ datum eſt. Ep. xviii. [y] Liv. Hiſt. Lib. lix. c. 9. & Val. Max. Lib. vi. [z] Pſal. cvi. 35, &c. [a] Tenniſon, of Idolatry. [b] Th. Aquinas cont. Gent. Lib. iii. [c] Salmon's Modern Hiſtory. [d] Mandelſlo's Travels into the Indies, Lib. ii. [e] The three Miniſters, or Coadjutors in the Government of the World, are, Tanquam, Teiquam, and Tzniquam; whereof the firſt preſides over the Air, and makes it rain; the ſecond over the Generation of Men, and the Production of Fruits and Animals; and the third has the Government of the Sea. Mandelſlo, ibid. [f] Semedo's Hiſtory of China.

Of the Banians.

[i] THE Banians believe, that there is but one Supreme God, whom they call [k] Parabrama, which, in their Language, ſignifies abſolutely perfect, exiſting from himſelf, and free from all Corruption: But then they ſay, that he has committed to Brama the Care of all Things concerning Religion; to Wiſtnow, another of his Sons, the Care of Men's Rights and Neceſſities; and to a third, the Power over the Elements and human Bodies. [l] Theſe three they repreſent by an Image [m] with three Heads, riſing out of one Trunk, and make their Addreſſes to them, as the chief Diſpenſers of divine Favours. But becauſe they imagine, that God created the Devil, on Purpoſe to puniſh, and to do Miſchief to Mankind, they therefore worſhip him likewiſe, and have their Temples filled with the Repreſentations of him, in Statues of all Kinds of Metals and Materials. The Figure, under which they uſually repreſent him, is dreadful to behold. Out of its Head (which is adorned with a triple Crown, in the Faſhion of a Tiara) grow four Horns; out of its Mouth come two large Teeth, like the Tuſk of a wild Boar; and its Chin is ſet out with a great ugly Beard. Under its Navel, between its two Thighs, comes out another Head, more ghaſtly than the former, having two Horns upon it, and from its Mouth thruſting out a filthy Tongue; and (as an Addition to all this Ghaſtlineſs) inſtead of Feet, it has Paws, and behind it a long Cow's Tail. This Figure they ſet upon a Table of Stone, which ſerves inſtead of an Altar; on the Right-hand of which, ſtands a Trough, full of Water, wherein thoſe, that intend to do their Devotion, waſh and purify themſelves; and, on the Left, a Box or Cheſt, for the Reception of ſuch Offerings, as they are minded to make to the [n] Braman, or Prieſt of the Place, that is in waiting.

Of the Japaneſe.

THE Japaneſe, though they acknowledge a Supreme Being, which dwells in the higheſt Heaven; [o] yet admit of ſeveral other inferior Gods, whom they place among the Stars; though, it muſt be owned, they do not much worſhip and adore them. What they chiefly worſhip and invoke are the Gods, whom they ſuppoſe to have the ſovereign Command of their Country, and the chief Direction of its Produce, its Elements, its Animals, &c. and who, by Virtue of their Power, can more immediately affect their preſent Condition, to make them either miſerable or happy, in this Life, and, by their Aſſiſtance and Interceſſion, obtain Rewards for them, proportionable to their Deeds, in that which is to come. Of theſe Gods of their own Country, they make mention of two Succeſſions; the firſt, they ſay, was that of the ſeven great Celeſtial Spirits, who lived in the moſt ancient Times of the Sun, long before the the Existence of Men and Heaven, and inhabited the Japanese World (the only Country, in their Opinion, then existing) many Millions of Years. The seventh and last of these Celestial Spirits, whose Name (as they fable) was Isanagi, begot of his divine Consort, Isamani, a second Succession of Divinities, called the Succession of the five Terrestrial Deities, who lived, and governed the Country of Japan a long while, and of whose Adventures and Knight-Errantries, their Defeats of Giants, Dragons, and other Monsters, they tell many ridiculous Stories. But besides these invisible Deities, which they call by the Names of Sin and Cami, signifying Souls or Spirits, they have an infinite Number of Pagods; [p] and, among these, [q] one of a prodigious Size, in a stately Temple at Meaco, and another at Tencheda, [r] no less famous for other extraordinary Qualities, have the principal Esteem and Adoration. Their Temples, which are curiously carved and gilt, and dedicated some to the Devil, and others to Apes, Rivers, and Fishes, have many frightful Figures in them, and in that dedicated to Chamis, one of the Heads of their Sects, they have as many Idols, as there are Days in the Year.

[g] Atlas Geogr. Modern. and Salmon's Modern Hiſtory. [h] Atlas Geogr. Modern. [i] Bartoli de Vitâ & Geſt. Xaverii, Lib. i. [k] Mandelſlo's Travels into the Indies, Lib. ii. [l] Mandelſlo ſays, that they ſometimes call him Wiſtul, and ſometimes Etwara. Ibid. Lib. i. [m] Some are of Opinion, that this Idol, with three Heads, repreſents their three great Philoſophers, Confuſius, Xequiam, and Tanzu. Reſs's View of all Religions. [n] The Bramans, who are the Prieſts among the Banians, make it their Boaſt, that they came out of the Head of their God Brama. Many other Creatures, they ſay, were produced out of his Arms, Thighs, Feet, and other ignoble Parts; But their peculiar Privilege was to be born of the Brain of their God. Mandelſlo, ibid. [o] Engelbertus Kæmpfer's Hiſtory of Japan.

Of the Siamese.

THE Siamese believe, that there is One God, who created the Universe; [s] but, at the same Time, they are persuaded, that he has under him several other Gods, by whom he governs the World. The God, whom they worship with the highest Devotion, they call Sommona Codom, and of him they tell this Romantick Story;—[t] that he, being the King of Ceylon, bestowed all his Estate in Charity, and even killed his Wife and Children, and gave them to the Talapoins, i. e. the Priests of the Place, to feed upon; that, before he entered into Bliss, he had acquired a prodigious Strength, and was able to work Miracles; could enlarge his Body to what Size he pleased, and then reduce it to so small a Point, as almost to be invisible; that he had two principal Disciples, Pra Molga, and Pra Scarabout; that Pra Molga, at the Request of the evil Genii, overturned the Earth, and took Hell-fire in the Hollow of his Hand, with a Design to extinguish it; but, finding himself not able to do it, he begged the Assistance of Sommona Codom, who, apprehending that Men would abound in Wickedness, if the Dread of the Punishment were once removed, refused to grant it him. This, and Abundance more of the like Nature, the deluded People believe, and accordingly place the Image of this their Favourite Deity, with his two Disciples, on the same Altar, and behind him several other Statues, representing the Officers of his Court, to whom they address their Vows and Supplications. They are of Opinion, that the Dead have Power to assist or torment the Living; [u] and are therefore very careful and magnificent about their Burials. The Priests are hired to sing in a Room, on Pretence of teaching the Souls of the Deceased (which they suppose to stand about the Chamber) the Road to Heaven; and, as they believe themselves commonly tormented by their Apparitions, they carry Provisions to their Tombs, in order to appease them, and give Alms to the Priests, as esteeming Charity the best Ransom for the Sins of the Deceased.

and other People of the East.

THE People of Peru hold an eternal Succession of Worlds without Creation, and a Multiplicity of Gods to govern them: To these they offer up their Petitions sometimes; but, in all their Calamities, their first Addresses are to the Devil, to whom they make their Vows, and punctually perform them; and to whom, at their Meals, before they eat any themselves, they throw over their Shoulders Part of what they have, by Way of Oblation. Those of Bengal worship the River Ganges, and are so besotted as to think, that whoever, at the Point of Death, drinks of its Water, shall immediately be translated into Paradise. Those of Goa, besides several Idols of horrible Aspects, pray to the first Thing they meet in a Morning, all that Day, especially if it be a Hog; and, every New Moon, salute its Appearance with Supplications on their bended Knees: And, to finish the Account of this Part of the World with the People of Narsinga and Bisnagar, here is an Idol, whereunto Pilgrims in great Numbers resort, with Ropes about their Necks, or Knives sticking in their Legs and Arms, which, if they happen to fester, are accounted holy. This Idol is, every Year, carried about

[p] Salmon's Modern History. [q] This Idol, which is of Copper, reaches up to the Roof of the Temple: Its Chair, according to Sir Thomas Herbert, is seventy Feet high, and eighty broad: Its Head big enough to hold fifteen Men, and its Thumb full forty Inches round; by which we may make a Judgment of the Whole. Salmon, ibid. [r] The Bonzes, i. e. the Priests of that Place, pretend, that every New-Moon, their God appears, in human Shape, to a Virgin, whom, at that Time, they bring into the Temple, all illuminated with golden Lamps, and place before the great Image; when, on a sudden, the Lights are miraculously put out, and something, in human Shape, immediately embraces, and sometimes impregnates the young Damsel. But whether this be done by one of the Priests, or by the Phantom, they adore, is left to the Reader to conjecture. The Girl, however, after this Adventure, is highly honoured by Priests and People, and (as if she were inspired) takes upon her to resolve the most difficult Questions, that are propounded to her. Salmon, ibid. [s] Mandelslo's Travels. [t] Salmon, ibid. [u] Atlas Geogr. Modern.

about in Proceſſion, with Virgins and Muſick going before it; under its Chariot-Wheels the Pilgrims ſtrive to be cruſhed to Death, and whoever are ſo, have their Aſhes kept as ſacred Reliques. Its Votaries cut off their Fleſh, and let out their Blood, by Way of Offering; and thoſe of the Female Sex make no Scruple of proſtituting themſelves, in order to procure Money for its Maintenance.

Of the Tartars. FROM the Idolatry of the Eaſtern Nations, we proceed to that of the Tartars, (a People now ſubject to the Empire of China) * who are ſaid to acknowledge One God, the Maker of all Things, and the Author of all worldly Bleſſings and Puniſhments; but yet, inſtead of addreſſing him, [x] they have a Kind of inferior Deity, called Itoga, whom they believe to be the God of the Earth, and him they worſhip with the greateſt Solemnity, though their Adoration generally terminates in ſecular Advantages. They worſhip likewiſe the Sun and Moon, as the Authors of all the noble Productions of the Earth; and, though they do not believe that there is an Hell, yet they are perſuaded there are Devils and evil Spirits, which afflict and torment People in this Life; [y] and therefore endeavour to appeaſe them with rich Preſents and coſtly Sacrifices. One Sort of Idolatry, peculiar to this Nation, eſpecially to thoſe, who live in the Eaſtern Parts of it, is, their worſhipping a living Man, whom they call Lama, and to whom they pay ſuch a ſuperſtitious Veneration, that the greateſt Lords eſteem themſelves happy, if they can, by rich Preſents, obtain ſome of his Excrements dried, which they put into a golden Box, and wear about their Neck, as a certain Preſervative againſt Calamities of all Sorts. In a ſecret Part of his Palace, bedecked with Gold, Silver, and precious Stones, and illuminated with coſtly Lamps, the Man is ſhewn, ſitting upon a ſtately Throne, and dreſſed in Robes exceſſively rich, to receive the Adorations of thoſe, who come from all Parts to proſtrate themſelves before him, and humbly kiſs his Feet. They call him the Eternal Father; and, that he may be thought immortal, and in ſome Meaſure anſwer his Name, his Prieſts take Care to have one in Readineſs, as like him as poſſible, to ſet up in his Stead, as ſoon as he dies; and, burying the Corps privately, carry on the Impoſture to a Miracle, and make his Votaries believe, that he really lives for ever.

In the Weſt-Indies. The preſent Idolatry of Virginia. FROM the Eaſt we come to the Weſtern Parts of the known World, and, if we take a ſhort View of ſome of the moſt conſiderable Nations, we ſhall find, that their Idolatry is much of the ſame Complexion. [z] In Virginia the Indians, that ſtill remain unconverted to Chriſtianity, ſeem to have ſome Senſe of one Supreme God, who has been, as they ſay, from all Eternity; but then they affirm, that, when he firſt purpoſed to make the World, he made other Gods of a ſuperior Order, to be his Inſtruments in the future Creation; and, after them, the Sun, the Moon, and Stars, by whoſe Influence theſe firſt-created Gods were, in a good Meaſure, to govern the World. They have no Notion of a Providence, and therefore they neither fear, nor worſhip the Supreme God; [a] but the Devil, they think, muſt be pacified, for fear he ſhould ruin their Health and Plenty, and be always viſiting them with Thunder and Storms, &c. and therefore they make no Scruple to offer up young Children to him. They have Idols in Abundance, but a great Part of their Devotion, with Regard to them, conſiſts in howling, and dancing about Fires, with Rattles in their Hands; in beating the Ground with Stones, and offering Tobacco, Deer-Suet, and Blood, on their Altars, which are commonly made of Stone. [b] Their Notions of another State favour of Mahometiſm; for, to the Good, their Prieſts promiſe perfect Pleaſure, fine Women, and an eternal Spring; but thoſe that are Bad, they threaten with Lakes of Fire, and Torments inflicted by a Fury, in the Shape of an old Woman. In Canada. Canada, [c] the Natives believe, that there is an Almighty God, the Creator and Supporter of all Things, whom they call the Great Spirit, or Maſter of Life, ſuppoſing that he contains, appears, acts in, and gives Motion to every Thing; for which Reaſon, they pretend to adore him in whatever they ſee, eſpecially what is fine and curious, curious, as the Sun, and Stars, &c. Every Thing, however, that ſurpaſſes their Underſtanding, they call by the Name of Genius or Spirit; and of theſe they imagine there are two Sorts, ſome good, the Cauſe of all fortunate, and others bad, the Authors of all unlucky Events, that befal them. To the evil Spirits they never ſacrifice living Creatures, but only ſuch Goods, as they have from the French for Bevers; and, when they ſacrifice, the Air muſt be ſerene. Then every one lays his Offering on a Pile of Wood, and, when the Sun is high, the Children make a Ring, and burn the Pile, while the Warriors dance and ſing, and the old Men harangue the evil Spirit, and preſent him with Pipes of Tabacco, lighted at the Sun: And in this Manner they continue, dancing, ſinging, and haranguing, till Sun-ſet, only, that, at certain Intervals, they ſometimes ſit down and ſmoke. In Florida, [d] their great Idol is the Sun, which, once every Year, they worſhip in this Manner. They fill the Skin of a Stag with Fruits and ſweet Herbs, and ſo adorning its Horns and Neck with Garlands, place it, with the Head towards the Sun, upon the Trunk of a Tree; and then kneeling down, pray to the Sun to bleſs them with a Continuance of ſuch Fruits, as they offer unto him. Before an Engagement, they turn, with great Reverence, towards the Sun, begging of it to grant them Succeſs, which, if they obtain, they return ſolemn Thanks, and, by Way of Acknowledgment, ſacrifice their own eldeſt Sons, knocking out their Brains with a Club. Florida.

* Unum Deum credunt, quem credunt eſſe Factorem omnium viſibilium & inviſibilium, & credunt eum tam bonorum in hoc Mundo, quam pœnarum eſſe Factorem; non tamen Orationibus, aut Laudibus, aut Ritu alieno ipſum colunt. Joh. à Plano Caprini Lib. de Tartaris. [x] Paulus Venetus, de Reg. Orient. L. I. c. 29.

[y] About forty Leagues from Caſan, there is a Place, called Nemda, amidſt the Fens, whither the Tartars go in Pilgrimage to do their Devotion; and they believe, that thoſe, who go thither empty-handed, and carry no Preſent to the Devil (who, as they imagine, has his principal Reſidence in the Brook Shockſchem, only becauſe its Rapidity hinders it from being frozen) ſhall languiſh, and pine away of ſome long and incurable Diſeaſe. Olearius's Travels into Tartary. [z] Harriot's Deſcription of Virginia. [a] Atlas Geograph. Ancient and Modern. [b] Ibid. [c] Ibid.

In Peru [e] they generally own one Sovereign Lord, and Maker of all Things, whom they call Pachacamac, or wonderful Creator of Heaven and Earth. To him they offer what they eſteem moſt precious, and pay ſuch a profound Veneration, that both their Kings and Prieſts enter his Temple with their Backs towards the Altar, and ſo come out again, without daring to turn about, and look upon his Image: But, together with him, they worſhip the Sun, by Reaſon of the Benefits which the World receives from it; the Moon, as Wife, and Siſter to the Sun; and the Stars, as her Daughters, and Servants of her Houſe. Among the Stars, they have great Reſpect for the Planet Venus, which they call the Page of the Sun; a great Awe for Thunder and Lightening, as the Executioners of Juſtice; and a great Veneration for the Rainbow (which their Yncas or Kings made their Coat of Arms) as the Iſſue and Production of the Sun. [f] Human Sacrifices are generally prohibited; but, upon more ſolemn Occaſions, ſuch as the Sickneſs, or Coronation of their King, their entering upon a War, and publick Supplications for Succeſs, they ſacrificed Children, from four to ten Years of Age: And (to finiſh the Account of this Part of the World with the Pagans of Mexico) though they undoubtedly have a Notion of one Supreme God, the Maker and Preſerver of the Univerſe; yet all their viſible Worſhip centers upon Idols, of which they have Multitudes, ſome of Gold and other Metals, and ſome of Wood and Stone; but among theſe, two of diſtinguiſhed Note; the one, made of Wood, but curiouſly adorned with Gold and Jewels, repreſents the Sun, and therefore is ſeated in an Azure-coloured Chair, to ſignify his Abode in the Sky, and has a high Tuft of Feathers, tipped with Gold, on his Head, to denote his Brightneſs and Glory; and the other, which they call the God of Repentance, made of black ſhining Stone, has in his Left-hand a Plate of Gold, burniſhed like a Looking-Glaſs, in which, as they fancy, he obſerves all worldly Tranſactions; and in his Right, a Rod, a Quiver, and four Darts, for the Puniſhment of all Criminals; and therefore of this Idol they ſtand in great Awe, for fear it ſhould diſcover, and take Cognizance of their Crimes. They ſacrifice to Devils, and (as [g] an Author, who dwelt in the Place, tell us) have ſeveral Oratories, or dark Houſes, full of Idols, great and ſmall, which they bathe and waſh in Blood, even the Blood of Men, of which they ſhed ſuch Quantities, that the Walls of the Houſes are an Inch thick with it, and the Floor a Foot. Into theſe Oratories the Prieſts ſuffer none to enter, but Perſons of the firſt Diſtinction, and when any ſuch go in, they are obliged to offer ſome Man or other as a Sacrifice, that the Prieſts may waſh their Hands, and ſprinkle the Houſe with the Blood of the Victim. The Author of The Civil and Moral Hiſtory of the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, ſays, that the Mexicans never ſacrifice any, but ſuch as are Captives in War; but of the Blood of theſe, their Prieſts Peru. Mexico.

[d] Atlas Geograph. Antient and Modern. c. 1. [e] Garciliſſo de la Vega, dans le Commentaire Royal Yncas, L. II. [f] Anton. de Herrera's Hiſtory of America. [g] Gage, in his Survey of the Weſt-Indies, c. 2.

about in Proceſſion, with Virgins and Muſick going before it; under its Chariot-Wheels the Pilgrims ſtrive to be cruſhed to Death, and whoever are ſo, have their Aſhes kept as ſacred Reliques. Its Votaries cut off their Fleſh, and let out their Blood, by Way of Offering; and thoſe of the Female Sex make no Scruple of proſtituting themſelves, in order to procure Money for its Maintenance.

Of the Tartars. FROM the Idolatry of the Eaſtern Nations, we proceed to that of the Tartars, (a People now ſubject to the Empire of China) * who are ſaid to acknowledge One God, the Maker of all Things, and the Author of all worldly Bleſſings and Puniſhments; but yet, inſtead of addreſſing him, [x] they have a Kind of inferior Deity, called Itoga, whom they believe to be the God of the Earth, and him they worſhip with the greateſt Solemnity, though their Adoration generally terminates in ſecular Advantages. They worſhip likewiſe the Sun and Moon, as the Authors of all the noble Productions of the Earth; and, though they do not believe that there is an Hell, yet they are perſuaded there are Devils and evil Spirits, which afflict and torment People in this Life; [y] and therefore endeavour to appeaſe them with rich Preſents and coſtly Sacrifices. One Sort of Idolatry, peculiar to this Nation, eſpecially to thoſe, who live in the Eaſtern Parts of it, is, their worſhipping a living Man, whom they call Lama, and to whom they pay ſuch a ſuperſtitious Veneration, that the greateſt Lords eſteem themſelves happy, if they can, by rich Preſents, obtain ſome of his Excrements dried, which they put into a golden Box, and wear about their Neck, as a certain Preſervative againſt Calamities of all Sorts. In a ſecret Part of his Palace, bedecked with Gold, Silver, and precious Stones, and illuminated with coſtly Lamps, the Man is ſhewn, ſitting upon a ſtately Throne, and dreſſed in Robes exceſſively rich, to receive the Adorations of thoſe, who come from all Parts to proſtrate themſelves before him, and humbly kiſs his Feet. They call him the Eternal Father; and, that he may be thought immortal, and in ſome Meaſure anſwer his Name, his Prieſts take Care to have one in Readineſs, as like him as poſſible, to ſet up in his Stead, as ſoon as he dies; and, burying the Corps privately, carry on the Impoſture to a Miracle, and make his Votaries believe, that he really lives for ever.

In the Weſt-Indies. The preſent Idolatry of Virginia. FROM the Eaſt we come to the Weſtern Parts of the known World, and, if we take a ſhort View of ſome of the moſt conſiderable Nations, we ſhall find, that their Idolatry is much of the ſame Complexion. [z] In Virginia the Indians, that ſtill remain unconverted to Chriſtianity, ſeem to have ſome Senſe of one Supreme God, who has been, as they ſay, from all Eternity; but then they affirm, that, when he firſt purpoſed to make the World, he made other Gods of a ſuperior Order, to be his Inſtruments in the future Creation; and, after them, the Sun, the Moon, and Stars, by whoſe Influence theſe firſt-created Gods were, in a good Meaſure, to govern the World. They have no Notion of a Providence, and therefore they neither fear, nor worſhip the Supreme God; [a] but the Devil, they think, muſt be pacified, for fear he ſhould ruin their Health and Plenty, and be always viſiting them with Thunder and Storms, &c. and therefore they make no Scruple to offer up young Children to him. They have Idols in Abundance, but a great Part of their Devotion, with Regard to them, conſiſts in howling, and dancing about Fires, with Rattles in their Hands; in beating the Ground with Stones, and offering Tobacco, Deer-Suet, and Blood, on their Altars, which are commonly made of Stone. [b] Their Notions of another State favour of Mahometiſm; for, to the Good, their Prieſts promiſe perfect Pleaſure, fine Women, and an eternal Spring; but thoſe that are Bad, they threaten with Lakes of Fire, and Torments inflicted by a Fury, in the Shape of an old Woman. In Canada, [c] the Natives believe, that there is an Almighty God, the Creator and Supporter of all Things, whom they call the Great Spirit, or Maſter of Life, ſuppoſing that he contains, appears, acts in, and gives Motion to every Thing; for which Reaſon, they pretend to adore him in whatever they ſee, eſpecially what is fine and curious, curious, as the Sun, and Stars, &c. Every Thing, however, that ſurpaſſes their Underſtanding, they call by the Name of Genius or Spirit; and of theſe they imagine there are two Sorts, ſome good, the Cauſe of all fortunate, and others bad, the Authors of all unlucky Events, that befal them. To the evil Spirits they never ſacrifice living Creatures, but only ſuch Goods, as they have from the French for Bevers; and, when they ſacrifice, the Air muſt be ſerene. Then every one lays his Offering on a Pile of Wood, and, when the Sun is high, the Children make a Ring, and burn the Pile, while the Warriors dance and ſing, and the old Men harangue the evil Spirit, and preſent him with Pipes of Tabacco, lighted at the Sun: And in this Manner they continue, dancing, ſinging, and haranguing, till Sun-ſet, only, that, at certain Intervals, they ſometimes ſit down and ſmoke. In Florida, [d] their great Idol is the Sun, which, once every Year, they worſhip in this Manner. They fill the Skin of a Stag with Fruits and ſweet Herbs, and ſo adorning its Horns and Neck with Garlands, place it, with the Head towards the Sun, upon the Trunk of a Tree; and then kneeling down, pray to the Sun to bleſs them with a Continuance of ſuch Fruits, as they offer unto him. Before an Engagement, they turn, with great Reverence, towards the Sun, begging of it to grant them Succeſs, which, if they obtain, they return ſolemn Thanks, and, by Way of Acknowledgment, ſacrifice their own eldeſt Sons, knocking out their Brains with a Club. Florida.

Canada.

* Unum Deum credunt, quem credunt eſſe Factorem omnium viſibilium & inviſibilium, & credunt eum tam bonorum in hoc Mundo, quam pœnarum eſſe Factorem; non tamen Orationibus, aut Laudibus, aut Ritu alieno ipſum colunt. Joh. à Plano Caprini Lib. de Tartaris. [x] Paulus Venetus, de Reg. Orient. L. I. c. 29.

[y] About forty Leagues from Caſan, there is a Place, called Nemda, amidſt the Fens, whither the Tartars go in Pilgrimage to do their Devotion; and they believe, that thoſe, who go thither empty-handed, and carry no Preſent to the Devil (who, as they imagine, has his principal Reſidence in the Brook Shockſchem, only becauſe its Rapidity hinders it from being frozen) ſhall languiſh, and pine away of ſome long and incurable Diſeaſe. Olearius's Travels into Tartary. [z] Harriot's Deſcription of Virginia. [a] Atlas Geograph. Ancient and Modern. [b] Ibid. [c] Ibid.

In Peru [e] they generally own one Sovereign Lord, and Maker of all Things, whom they call Pachacamac, or wonderful Creator of Heaven and Earth. To him they offer what they eſteem moſt precious, and pay ſuch a profound Veneration, that both their Kings and Prieſts enter his Temple with their Backs towards the Altar, and ſo come out again, without daring to turn about, and look upon his Image: But, together with him, they worſhip the Sun, by Reaſon of the Benefits which the World receives from it; the Moon, as Wife, and Siſter to the Sun; and the Stars, as her Daughters, and Servants of her Houſe. Among the Stars, they have great Reſpect for the Planet Venus, which they call the Page of the Sun; a great Awe for Thunder and Lightening, as the Executioners of Juſtice; and a great Veneration for the Rainbow (which their Yncas or Kings made their Coat of Arms) as the Iſſue and Production of the Sun. [f] Human Sacrifices are generally prohibited; but, upon more ſolemn Occaſions, ſuch as the Sickneſs, or Coronation of their King, their entering upon a War, and publick Supplications for Succeſs, they ſacrificed Children, from four to ten Years of Age: And (to finiſh the Account of this Part of the World with the Pagans of Mexico) though they undoubtedly have a Notion of one Supreme God, the Maker and Preſerver of the Univerſe; yet all their viſible Worſhip centers upon Idols, of which they have Multitudes, ſome of Gold and other Metals, and ſome of Wood and Stone; but among theſe, two of diſtinguiſhed Note; the one, made of Wood, but curiouſly adorned with Gold and Jewels, repreſents the Sun, and therefore is ſeated in an Azure-coloured Chair, to ſignify his Abode in the Sky, and has a high Tuft of Feathers, tipped with Gold, on his Head, to denote his Brightneſs and Glory; and the other, which they call the God of Repentance, made of black ſhining Stone, has in his Left-hand a Plate of Gold, burniſhed like a Looking-Glaſs, in which, as they fancy, he obſerves all worldly Tranſactions; and in his Right, a Rod, a Quiver, and four Darts, for the Puniſhment of all Criminals; and therefore of this Idol they ſtand in great Awe, for fear it ſhould diſcover, and take Cognizance of their Crimes. They ſacrifice to Devils, and (as [g] an Author, who dwelt in the Place, tell us) have ſeveral Oratories, or dark Houſes, full of Idols, great and ſmall, which they bathe and waſh in Blood, even the Blood of Men, of which they ſhed ſuch Quantities, that the Walls of the Houſes are an Inch thick with it, and the Floor a Foot. Into theſe Oratories the Prieſts ſuffer none to enter, but Perſons of the firſt Diſtinction, and when any ſuch go in, they are obliged to offer ſome Man or other as a Sacrifice, that the Prieſts may waſh their Hands, and ſprinkle the Houſe with the Blood of the Victim. The Author of The Civil and Moral Hiſtory of the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, ſays, that the Mexicans never ſacrifice any, but ſuch as are Captives in War; but of the Blood of theſe, their Prieſts Peru. Mexico.

[d] Atlas Geograph. Antient and Modern. [e] Garciliſſo de la Vega, dans le Commentaire Royal Yncas, L. II. c. 1. [f] Anton. de Herrera's Hiſtory of America. [g] Gage, in his Survey of the Weſt-Indies, c. 2.

were ſo profuſe, that they thought it diſhonourable to ſacrifice leſs than forty or fifty at a Time to one ſingle Idol; and had ſuch an Aſcendant over their Princes, that they made them believe, their Gods were angry, and would not be appeaſed, without four or five thouſand Men ſometimes ſacrificed in a Day.

In the North. THE ſpreading of the Chriſtian Faith in the North has happily aboliſhed Polytheiſm and Idolatry in moſt Places, but [h] there are ſtill ſuch conſiderable Remains of Lapland. it among the Laplanders, as incline many Authors to believe, that they never heartily embraced Chriſtianity; for they worſhip Chriſt and their Idols promiſcuouſly, and with the ſame Form of Worſhip. They own indeed one Supreme God, whom they arm with Thunder, and have the ſame Conceptions of him, that the Pagans of old had of their Jupiter: But they have another ſubordinate God, to whom they acknowledge, they owe all the Bleſſings of Life; and, together with him, they worſhip the Sun, whom they call Baiva; becauſe of his Influence over the Bodies of Men and Beaſts. To each of their Gods they have Temples conſecrated, and Images made of Stone, or rudely carved out of the Trunk of Trees, which, when they worſhip, they anoint with the Blood of the Sacrifice they offer, and [i] then, lying flat on their Bellies, they mutter their Prayers into the Ground, under which they conceive that the Devil has his Abode.

The Witchcrafts there. NO Nation has been ſo remarkable for Sorcery and Enchantments as this. [k] Here Parents teach their Children theſe Diabolical Arts, and, as Part of their Inheritance, bequeath ſuch Spirits to them, as they think have been aſſiſtant to themſelves. Each Family has its Dæmons, and, with ſome, theſe Dæmons are ſo familiar, that they meet them in Woods, and in private Walks, and teach them a Song, which, when they ſing, they always appear to attend their Commands. They ſend abroad Flies of a blueiſh Colour, which they pretend to be their Familiars, to hurt their Enemies, their Cattle, or their Children; and between ſome Families there frequently happens a Trial and Conteſt, whoſe Familiar ſhall be moſt powerful. They tie Knots, by which they pretend to make the Winds favourable or croſs to ſea-faring Men: But the uſual Inſtrument of Magick and Divination is their Drum; which he that beats, mutters ſome Charms all the while, till falling into a Trance, (during which, all that are preſent ſet up a ſinging) he pretends, when he comes to himſelf, that whatever it was, he employed this Enchantment for, was fully revealed to him. The People, in ſhort, are under ſtrong Deceptions of the Devil; they believe nothing of the Reſurrection; and have ſuch groſs Notions of a future State, that, when any of them die, they put into the Coffin a Flint and Steel, that they may not want Light in the other World; an Hatchet, that they may cut out their Way to Heaven through Woods; together with a Bow, Arrows, and Victuals, that they may be able to encounter all Oppoſition, and fight their Way thither without fainting.

In the South. Guinea. THOUGH the Mahometan Religion has over-run a great Part of Africa, [l] yet in Guinea (a Country, where we have ſome Dealings, and ſhall therefore make it a Specimen of the reſt) the People retain their ancient Gentiliſm. They believe indeed in one true God, to whom they attribute the Creation of the World, and all Things in it; but this Opinion they rather owe to their daily Converſation with the Europeans, than to any Tradition of their Anceſtors: For, inſtead of calling upon God, or making their Oblations to him at any Time; in all their Difficulties they apply to their Fetiche, or falſe God, and, in all their Undertakings, pray to him for Succeſs. Their Notions about the Creation of Man are ſomewhat ſingular: They ſay, that God, at the Beginning, created a black, as well as a white Man, and made them an Offer of two Sorts of Gifts, Gold, and Learning; that he gave the firſt Option to the black Man; but he, deſpiſing the Knowledge of Letters, made choice of Gold, which ſo incenſed God, that he reſolved the Whites ſhould for ever be their Maſters, and they be obliged to wait on them as Slaves. What particular Notions they have of their Gods, 'tis hard to determine. This only is obſervable of them, that they have a great Number; that each Man, at leaſt each Houſe-keeper, has one to himſelf, of whom he is perſuaded that he narrowly inſpects his Actions, rewards the Good, and puniſhes the Bad; but then, he makes the Reward to conſiſt in a Multiplicity of Slaves and Wives; the Puniſhment, in the Want of them; for of future Rewards and [h] Atlas Geogr. [i] The People of Greenland are ſaid to obſerve the ſame Way of Worſhip; and of them it is likewiſe reported, that in ſome Diſeaſes, they tie a Stick to a great Stone; and, after they have prayed to it, if they can lift it up eaſily, they think their Prayers are heard. Atlas, ibid. [k] Ibid. [l] Boſman's new Deſcription of Guinea.

and Puniſhments, they have a ſlender or no Conception, except it be ſome of them, who take it for granted, that, when they die, they are immediately conveyed to a famous River, called Boſmanque, ſituate in the Inland-Country, where their God enquires, what Sort of Life they have led, whether they have kept their Oaths, obſerved Holidays, and abſtained from all forbidden Meats; which if they have done, they are gently wafted over the River, to a Land abounding with all Kind of Happineſs; but if they have offended againſt theſe Precepts, their God plunges them into this River, where they are drowned, and buried in eternal Oblivion. Though they have a Multitude of Gods, (as we ſaid before) yet, in ſeveral Places of the Country, eſpecially all along the Gold-Coaſt, they are not acquainted with Idol-Worſhip; and, though they believe that there are Devils, which do them much Miſchief, yet it does not appear, that intentionally they either pray, or make Offerings to them: On the contrary, they ſeem to deteſt the Devil, and at a certain [l] Feſtival, have an annual Cuſtom of driving him out of their Cities with a great deal of Ceremony. What they call Gods however are, in effect, no other than Devils, of which there is one of a very gigantick Size, with one Side of his Body ſound, and the other rotten, (which if any Perſon do but touch [m] he dies immediately) whom the deluded People of Ante endeavour to appeaſe with Eatables of all Kinds; and for this Reaſon, Thouſands of Pots and Troughs full of Victuals, are continually found ſtanding throughout the whole Anteſe Country.

THUS we have enquired into the Grounds of the ancient Idolatry, and made a Survey of ſome principal Parts of the World, wherein that Sin and Impiety ſtill prevails: A diſmal Proſpect, and full of Horror! But, to do Juſtice to our Subject, we muſt carry our Obſervations a little farther, and purſue our Enquiry into the ſound, as well as the corrupt Part of the Religion of the Heathens, and what Sentiments of this Kind the Learned, as well as the Ignorant, the Philoſopher, as well as the Vulgar have, in all Ages, entertained.

SECT. II.

Of the Sounder Parts of the Heathen Religion.

THOSE, that have conſidered the Nature of the Pagan Religion, [n] (in order to ſeparate it from its Droſs) have generally reduced the ſubſtantial Parts of it to theſe five Propoſitions: The Sound Part of the Ancients.

1. THAT there is one Supreme God.
2. THAT this God ought to be worſhipped.
3. THAT Virtue, and Piety ought to be acquired.
4. THAT Repentance and Sorrow for Sin ought to be exerciſed. And,
5. THAT Rewards and Puniſhments are diſpenſed by God, both in this Life, and that which is to come.

A DILIGENT Enquirer into theſe Matters [o] lays it down for a certain Poſition, that there never was, in any Age, any People ſo rude and barbarous, which did not acknowledge and worſhip one Supreme Deity, the firſt Principle and Governor of all Things: "But that the wiſer Sort, ſays he, might teach the more ignorant, that "the Supreme Being, whom they called God, was preſent in all Places, they there-"fore made Abundance of Gods, in all Places, and over all Things." But from whatever Cauſe the Multitude of their Gods might ariſe, 'tis certain, that they always had one whom they looked upon as Supreme, to whom their publick, as well as private Worſhip, their Prayers and Vows, and other Acts of religious Homage were, in God to be worſhipped.

[l] After ſeven Days ſpent in Mirth and Jollity, Singing, and Dancing, &c. our Author tells us, that on the Eighth in the Morning, they hunt out the Devil with a diſmal Cry, all running one after another, throwing Sticks, Stones, Excrements, or any Thing they can come at, as thick as hail, after him, and purſuing him a conſiderable Way out of the Town; which, when they have done, they come back rejoicing; and the Women, to prevent his Return, take care to waſh and ſcour all their wooden and earthen Veſſels very clean. Boſman's new Deſcription of Guinea. [m] This our Author, who lived long in the Country, tells us, he verily believes without the leaſt Scruple. Boſman, ibid. [n] Herbert's ancient Religion of the Gentiles. [o] Kircher's Oed. Egypt. Syn. 3.

in a peculiar Manner, addreſſed. [p] Among the Romans, Jupiter (whom the Poets call the Father of Gods and Men, and graver Writers diſtinguiſh by the Stile and Title of Optimus Maximus) was accounted this firſt and greateſt God, the ſupreme Governor of the World, and King over all rational Beings; and to ſignify what great Eſteem they had of all moral Virtues and Perfections, they deified, and built Temples to Honour and Chaſtity, to Fidelity and Fortitude, &c. Cicero, in his ſecond Book de Legibus, has given us an Abſtract of the Religion of the Ancients, and plainly tells us, that Men have no other Means of carrying them to Heaven, but a pure Mind, an holy Faith, a ſincere Piety, and a Combination of all Manner of Virtues; and, in his Proem to his natural Queſtions, Seneca maintains, that Virtue enlarges the Soul, prepares it for the Knowledge of Celeſtial Things, and renders it fit and worthy to be admitted into the Society of God.

Virtue to be valued.

Repentance for Sins.

[q] TOGETHER with theſe Injunctions, and Commendations of Virtue, as perfective of Man's Nature, and conducive to his Happineſs, they preſcribed the wiſeſt Rules, both for the Prevention, and Expiation of Sin. The ſuppoſed, that all Sin and Wickedneſs proceeded, either from the Society of bad Men, from Imprudence, or Ignorance of what was evil, or from Anger, or Concupiſcence, the Paſſions or depraved Appetites of the Man's own Mind; and from hence they concluded, that the beſt Remedies would be to avoid all wicked Company and Converſations; to reſtrain the Impetuoſity of evil Affections; to correct and cure ſuch unruly Propenſions, as ariſe from human Frailty; to waſh away thoſe Stains of Sin, which had defiled their Conſcience; and to make frequent and fervent Supplications to their Gods, that they might become kind and propitious to them. They imagined, that Man, conſidered ſimply, and in his own Nature, was neither good nor evil, but inclinable either Way, according to his Education; and that Vice and Sin were not ſo radicated in him, but that, with good Management, they might be totally weeded out and deſtroyed: So that, unleſs the Soul was obſtinately bent upon Wickedneſs, they ſaw no Reaſon why it might not be reduced to a good State (even after the Pollution of Sin) by an internal Purification. Conſcious they were of the Deformity of Vice, and what an high Provocation it was to God; but then they conſidered, that Goodneſs was eſſential to a divine Being, and that where Goodneſs reſided, Wrath and Reſentment could not laſt long: Whereupon they encouraged themſelves with Hopes of a Pacification, upon expreſſing their Sorrow and Regret for what they had done amiſs: And that they were ſincere in ſuch Expreſſions, the many Vows they made, the many Prayers they put up, the Temples they built and dedicated, and their Expiations, Luſtrations, and other piacular Rites and Ceremonies to pacify their Gods, (whereof the Writers of their Antiquities give us ſo long a Detail) are a ſufficient Indication.

Future Rewards and Puniſhments.

[r] SOME of the wiſeſt of their Philoſophers owned, that the Supreme God was to be worſhipped for himſelf, the moſt excellent Nature deſerving the utmoſt Veneration; but, notwithſtanding this, from his Bounty and Goodneſs they promiſed themſelves a Recompence of Reward, if not in this, at leaſt in the other World, for all their Sufferings and Services. In this World they perceived an unequal Diſtribution of Things, the Good oftentimes oppreſſed with Calamities, and the Wicked rejoicing in Pleaſure and Plenty; and thereupon, from the Juſtice, as well as the Goodneſs of God, they inferred, that the Righteous were to receive ample Rewards, and the Wicked ſuffer condign Puniſhments after this Life; for it ſcarce ever entered into their Thoughts, that this was the only Life they were to experience, or that ſo noble a Creature as [s] Man, who is big with immortal Deſigns, and full of Projects for future Ages, who was made to contemplate the Wonders of Nature and Providence, to admire and adore his Maker, and can look backward and forward, and view an Eternity without Beginning, and without End, was made but for a Moment, as it were, and finally periſhes when he dies: And from this Reflection they inferred that the Soul was immortal, and that Death only tranſlated it to another State, joyous to the Virtuous, but full of Torments to the Wicked. Thus far were their Notions juſt and regular: [t] But when they came to aſcertain the Places, where thoſe, that had deſerved well, received their Reward, and the Guilty their Puniſhment; as the Elyſian Fields, the Iſles of the Bleſſed, the Stars, and Heaven,

[p] Stilling fleet. [q] Herbert's ancient Religion of the Gentiles. [r] Ibid. [s] Sherlock upon Death. [t] Herbert, ibid.

Heaven, for the Virtuous; Tartarus, Erebus, and Orcus, and the four infernal Rivers, for the Vicious; they fell into very groſs and abſurd Errors, without any Manner of Neceſſity. For they might more eaſily have convinced the People, that divine Juſtice had allotted Puniſhments, after this Life, in ſome Place or other, according to what every one had deſerved, though they could not define the preciſe Place, Manner, and Duration of them; than raſhly determine it to be in ſome obſcure, ſubterraneous Caverns, near the Center of the Earth, or in Apartments in the middle Region of the Air, with many other Circumſtances equally ridiculous and uncertain: Though it muſt be confeſſed, that their making Heaven and the Stars the Seat of the Bleſſed was not at all incongruous; ſince the univerſal Opinion, even at this Time, is, that an eternal and happy State is only to be found in God and Heaven.

Of the Modern heathen Religion in China.

THESE are ſome of the Truths of the ancient heathen Theology, and (to compare them now a little with what are more modern) in China we find a Sect, called the Literati, that adhere to the Doctrines of the much celebrated [u] Confucius, [x] whoſe Philoſophy, like that of Socrates in Greece, is thought to have been brought down from Heaven. [y] He ſpeaks of God, as the moſt pure and perfect Principle, the Fountain and Eſſence of all Things; he prohibits the Worſhip of Images; acknowledges the Immortality, though he allows the Tranſmigration, of the Soul; believes a future State; and, [z] in a Book, which is called Siudo, i. e. the Philoſophical Way of Life, has left a Collection of ſuch wiſe Sentences, and moral Maxims, as are not inferior to any of that Kind; wherein he recommends to his Followers the Practice of Virtue, a free Conſcience, and a good and honeſt Life; [a] and teaches them to contemn Riches and Pleaſure, to ſubdue their Paſſions, and improve their Reaſon.

In Japan.

IN Japan, there is a Sect, following the Inſtitutions of [b] Siaka, their Founder, [c] who believe that the Souls of Men, and Animals both, are immortal; and thoſe of Men, after their Departure from their Bodies, have their Portion, in a Place of Happineſs or Miſery, according to their Behaviour in this Life. In the Place of Happineſs, they ſuppoſe that there are different Degrees of Pleaſure, in order to reward every one according to his Deſerts; but the whole Place is ſo thoroughly filled with Bliſs, that each happy Inhabitant thinks his Lot the beſt, and, far from envying the greater Felicity of others, wiſhes only for ever to enjoy his own. Amida, the general Patron, and Protector of human Souls, is the ſovereign Commander of theſe happy Regions; and the leading a virtuous Life, and doing nothing that is contrary to the Commandments of the Law of Siaka, (which are chiefly theſe, not to kill any Thing, not to ſteal, not to whore, not to lye, not to drink ſtrong Liquors, but to faſt and pray, to adore God, his Word, and thoſe, that imitate his Virtues) is the only Way to become agreeable to him, and worthy of eternal Happineſs. In the Place of Miſery, (which they call Dſigokf) Degrees of Torments are, in like Manner, proportion'd to Men's Offences. Juſtice, they imagine, requires, that every one ſhould be puniſhed ac[u] This Confucius, whom the Chineſe call Kooſi, was born in the Province of Kok, about 483 Years before Chriſt. He was called a Child of Sorrow, becauſe his Birth was poſthumous, which, nevertheleſs, was accompanied with ſome remarkable Signs and Prognoſtications of his being a Seſin, or Philoſopher: For Muſick, they ſay, was heard in Heaven, while his Mother was in Labour, and two Dragons were obſerved to attend, while the Child was waſhed. His Stature, when grown up, was very noble and majeſtick; his Deportment grave, and his Piety, even in his earlieſt Years, very exemplary. He honoured his Relations; endeavoured to imitate his Grandfather, who was much admired for his Sanctity; and never eat any Thing, before he offered it to the ſupreme Lord of Heaven by Proteſtation. After the Death of his Grandfather, he made a conſiderable Proficiency in the Knowledge of Antiquity, and compiled the abovementioned Collection of Moral and Political Maxims, which ever ſince (now upwards of two thouſand Years) has been looked upon as a Performance incomparable in its Kind, and an excellent Pattern of a good and virtuous Life. A profound Reſpect is ſhewn to his Memory, both in China and Japan, by publick as well as private Perſons. His Picture is allowed the moſt honourable Place in the Houſes of Philoſophers; and 'tis not long ago, ſince the Emperor of Japan cauſed two Temples to be built to him in his capital City Jedo, whither he went in Perſon, as ſoon as they were finiſhed, and, on this Occaſion, ſet forth, in an handſome Speech to his Courtiers, the Merits of this great Man, and the peculiar Excellency of the Maxims of Government, which he had laid down. Kæmpfer's Hiſtory of Japan, and Atlas Geogr. Ancient and Modern. [x] Ibid. [y] Salmon's Modern Hiſtory. [z] Kæmpfer, ibid. [a] Atlas Geogr. Modern. [b] This Siaka, whom the learned Men among them uſually call Sommona Codom, was (according to the Japaneſe Hiſtorians) a Native of Magattakokf, which is ſuppoſed to be the Iſland of Ceylon, and born above 1029 Years before Chriſt, Son to the King thereof. When he came to the nineteenth Year of his Age, he quitted his Parents, leaving his Wife, and an only Son behind him, and became a Diſciple of Arara-Sennin, then an Hermit of great Repute, who lived on the Top of a Mountain, called Dandokf; and, under his Inſpection, betook himſelf to an auſtere Life, and continual Meditation on heavenly and divine Things, whereby he penetrated into the moſt ſecret and important Points of Religion, viz. the Exiſtence and State of Heaven and Hell, the State of Souls in the Life to come, and the Manner of their Tranſmigrations, the Way to eternal Happineſs, the Power of the Gods in governing the World, and many more Things beyond the Reach of human Underſtanding, which he afterwards freely communicated to his Diſciples, who, for the Sake of his Doctrine and Inſtructions, followed him in Crowds, and embraced the ſame auſtere Courſe of Life. He lived in this Manner ſeventy-nine Years, and died (according to the common Computation) 950 Years before Chriſt. Kæmpfer's Hiſtory of Japan. [c] Ibid.

cording to the Nature and Number of his Crimes, the Number of the Years he lived in the World, the Station he lived in, and the Opportunities he had to be virtuous and good. Jemma, or with a more majeſtick Character, Gemma O (as they call him) is the ſevere Judge, and ſovereign Commander of this Place of Darkneſs and Miſery; to whom all the vicious Actions of Mankind appear in their proper Horror and Heinouſneſs, by Means of a large Looking-Glaſs, placed before him, which is called the Looking-Glaſs of Knowledge. The Miſeries of the Souls, confined to theſe diſmal Abodes, are however not ſo inceſſant and laſting, but that ſome Relief may be expected from the virtuous Life and good Actions of their Friends and Relations, whom they left behind, but more eſpecially from the Prayers and Offerings of their Prieſts to the great and good Armida, who, by his powerful Interceſſion, can ſo far prevail upon the Judge of this infernal Place, as to oblige him to abate of the Severity of his Sentence; where it is conſiſtent with Juſtice, and the Puniſhment due to their Crimes; to treat theſe unhappy Souls with Kindneſs; and, at laſt, to ſend them abroad again, [d] in order to enter upon a freſh Probation.

A Reflection hereupon.

THESE Doctrines, though diſguiſed with Abundance of Fiction, are, in the main Intendment of them, true; and, abating the Notion of the Pre-exiſtence and Tranſmigration of the Soul, and its temporal Confinement only to the Place they aſſign for its Puniſhment, there are few Points in them, but what, not only an honeſt Heathen, but even a ſober Chriſtian may embrace; while the Integrity of their Lives, their remarkable Juſtice, and Temperance, and Sobriety, the Strictneſs of Penance impoſed upon themſelves, and great Severity in puniſhing moſt enormous Crimes, are enough to upbraid us Chriſtians, and make us aſhamed of the Compariſon.

Of Peru,

IT can hardly be expected, that, in Countries over-run with Ignorance, and devoid of all Kind of Learning, Reaſon ſhould have Power enough to preſerve any of the fundamental Articles of Religion; and yet we are told of the People of Peru, [e] that they have a clear Notion of God, and eſteem his Name ſo very ſacred, that, without an abſolute Neceſſity, they never pronounce it, and then with all imaginable Signs of Devotion; that they are ſo cautious of profaning it, that, in the moſt important Cauſes, Witneſſes never take an Oath, but only promiſe the Judge to ſpeak Truth, which they do with great Strictneſs, and make any Falſification here n Capital: And that the Natives of Canada have a full Perſuaſion of the Immortality of the Soul, as well as future Rewards and Puniſhments, [f] upon this Motive——that they ſee moſt Men, eſpecially the beſt, are ſubject to Hardſhips here, which they ſay, are ordained, that they may be happy in the other World, and therefore they account none of their Calamities to be real Misfortunes. A true Principle in Religion! and a good Preparative, one would think, to their Converſion; but to this (as [g] our Author obſerves) the bad Manners of the Prieſts, teaching Chriſtianity, and the wicked Lives of the French, that have made their Settlement there, are the greateſt Impediment and Obſtruction.

and Canada.

Whether this Religion of the Heathens will ſave them.

IN general (for it would be endleſs to produce Particulars) we may obſerve, that in moſt of the Countries, hitherto diſcovered, the Belief of a God, and Obligation to worſhip him; the Belief of a future State, and Neceſſity of Virtue to prepare Men for it; Sorrow for Sin, and the Invention of many Rites to expiate it, have been the known Principles of the Heathen Religion: But whether theſe Principles, loaded as they are with all the Superſtitions abovementioned, the Worſhip of Idols, the Sacrifice of human Blood, the Adoration of Devils, and other ſuch Impieties, as the Divine Nature cannot but deteſt, will be available to their Salvation, is a Queſtion neither ſo eaſy, nor ſo ſafe to be reſolved. This only we may ſay, (without intruding into the Counſels, which God has hid in his own Breaſt) that, as Ignorance of Duty, the Prevalence of Cuſtom, and the Power of Prepoſſeſſion, plead ſtrongly in Mitigation of any Fault, ſo has the Heathen World, not only theſe Apologies to produce, but ſome Declarations likewiſe in Holy Writ, which ſeem to have their their particular Caſe under Conſideration. For if, [h] as St Paul tells the Athenians, a People wholly given to Idolatry, God winked at their former Times of Ignorance; if, [i] as our Saviour tells the Phariſees, ſuch as are blind, i. e. without a competent Knowledge of their Duty, have no Sin, at leaſt, not in ſo great a Meaſure; [k] and if, as he tells his Diſciples, Moſes, the Lawgiver of God, ſuffered the Iſraelites to do Things, which were not directly right, for the Hardneſs of their Hearts, [l] i. e. becauſe the Imperfection of his Revelation wanted proper Efficacy to work their Hearts to a greater Softneſs; then have we ſufficient Reaſon to ſuppoſe, that the ſame Connivance and kind Conſtruction of Faults will be granted to the preſent, that was to the Generations of old: Though, when we conſider farther, that there is [m] no Communion between Light and Darkneſs, no Concord between Chriſt and Belial, no Agreement between the Temple of God and Idols, in what Method this Grace will be extended, and the divine Attributes remain unblemiſhed, is a Myſtery paſt our Comprehenſion. This only we know farther, that as the Merits of Chriſt, whereby alone we obtain Salvation, are imputable to the Gentile, as well as the Chriſtian World, (which we have in ſome Meaſure ſhewed already) [n] in his interceding with God, and offering Sacrifice for Sin, he can (as the Apoſtle aſſures us) have Compaſſion on the Ignorant, and ſuch as are out of the Way, ſince their Error is involuntary, and their Ignorance no Part of their Crime; for, how can they call on him, (as [o] he argues in another Place) in whom they have not believed? How can they believe in him, of whom they have not heard? And how can they hear without a Preacher?

[d] For this is their Opinion, that when theſe Souls have been confined long enough to expiate their Crimes, they are ſent back again into the World, not indeed to animate the Bodies of Men, but of ſuch Creatures, whoſe Nature reſembles their former ſinful Inclinations; where, after ſeveral Tranſmigrations, they are ſuffered at laſt to enter human Bodies again, and, by that Means, are put in a Capacity, either by a good and virtuous Life, to make themſelves unalterably happy; or, by a new Courſe of Vices, to expoſe themſelves to a freſh Confinement, and another Round of Tranſmigrations. Kæmpfer's Hiſtory of Japan. [e] Atlas Geogr. [f] Ibid. [g] La Hontan, in his Account of the Savages of Canada, &c.

The Opinion of the Millennaries.

To ſatisfy, in ſome Meaſure, theſe Enquiries, thoſe who favour the Doctrine of a Millennium, have deviſed a Scheme, whereby to account for the future Condition of the Heathen World. [p] They lay it down for an undoubted Truth, that the great Deſign of Chriſt's Coming into the World was to procure the Salvation of all Mankind, and that the Merits of what he did and ſuffered, were available to that Purpoſe; that Salvation is to be had by no other Name, but only that of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and yet thoſe, who ſhall be ſaved by him, muſt believe in him, i. e. muſt receive him for their Saviour, and embrace the Conditions of that Covenant, which he hath eſtabliſhed in order to their Salvation. Since therefore Men cannot believe in him, of whom they never heard; and yet there are many Men, yea, many Nations of Men, that never heard of the Name of Chriſt; from hence they conclude, that, at ſome Time or other, he ſhall be made known to all Men; and, ſince ſo great a Part of Mankind had no Knowledge of him before their Death, that they certainly ſhall have it, after their Reſurrection; and, to ſupport this Concluſion, they ſuppoſe, that, after this Life, there will be a threefold Reſurrection. [q] The firſt will be of the Faithful in Chriſt, ſuch as have been Martyrs for Jeſus, and lived in this Life obſervant of his Laws. Theſe, for a thouſand Years, ſhall reign with Chriſt upon Earth, and then, together with him, aſcending into Heaven, ſhall there continue for ever. The ſecond will be of thoſe, who, during this Life, never heard of the Sound of the Goſpel, or had the Offer of a Saviour made them. Theſe, upon their Reſurrection, ſhall be admitted to the Knowledge of him and his Doctrines, and put upon the ſame Probation, that we now are, who live under the Goſpel-Covenant. If they believe and obey, they ſhall be inſtated in the ſame Happineſs, that good Chriſtians are to enjoy, and, without taſting Death any more, be tranſlated into Heaven: But in Caſe they prove Impious or Infidels, ſhall be reſerved to the third Reſurrection, which will be of ſuch, as rejected the Saviour of the World in this Life, and, together with them, ſhall be caſt into the Lake of Fire.

What beſt becomes us.

BUT though this Hypotheſis, as it is chiefly built upon abſtruſe Paſſages in a [r] very difficult and myſterious Book, has not obtained a general Reception; yet this we may lay down for an infallible Truth, that, as the Judge of the World cannot but do Right, Mankind will never be condemned for the Want of what they were in no Condition to attain; and therefore, [s] inſtead of ſtretching the Severity of God's Juſtice, in relation to this Argument, we may rather venture to extend the Bounds of his Mercy; [t] ſince this is the Attribute, which, of all others, is the moſt magnificently ſpoken of in the Scriptures. But, indeed, the moſt proper Way is, to leave the Secrets of God, as Myſteries too far above us to examine, and rather ſtudy to work work out our own Salvation with Fear and Trembling, than let our Minds run into uncertain Speculations concerning the Meaſures and Conditions of that of others. We are allowed, very juſtly indeed, to commiſerate the State of thoſe, who ſit in Darkneſs, and in the Shadow of Death; [n] but, as Darkneſs itſelf is ſometimes called upon, in Scripture, to praiſe the Lord; ſo even intellectual Darkneſs, i. e. Ignorance, has, occaſionally, great Reaſon to join in the Praiſe: For ſuppoſing Men to be ſinful, 'tis happy for them if they are ignorant; the Supreme Judge of the World having laid down this for one Rule, by which he will proceed at the laſt Day; viz. [x] That the Servant, who knew his Maſter's Will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his Will, ſhall be beaten with many Stripes; but he, that knew not, and committed Things worthy of Stripes, ſhall be beaten with few.

[h] Acts xvii. 30. [i] John ix. 41. [k] Matth. xix. 8. [l] Young's Sermons, Vol. I. [m] 2 Cor. vi. 14, &c. [n] Heb. v. 2. [o] Rom. x. 14. [p] Vid. Staynoe's Short Enquiry, and Burnet's Theory. [q] Rev. xx. 4. [r] Ibid. chap. xx. [s] Burnet, on the Articles. [t] Ibid.

[n] Young's Sermons, Vol. I. [x] Luke xii. 47, 48.

A COM-

A

COMPLEAT BODY

OF

Speculative and Practical DIVINITY.

PART IV.

Of the Myſteries of our moſt Holy Faith.

CHAP. I.

Of the Nature of the Second Covenant, commonly called The COVENANT of GRACE.

WE left the firſt Parents of Mankind [a] under the Breach of the firſt Covenant, and, in them, all their Poſterity loſt and undone; ſentenced to Labour, to Sorrow, to Sufferings, to Sickneſs, to Death, and expoſed to the Vengeance of Almighty God: And, in this Situation, there are but three Things that can occur to our Thoughts; 1. that God ſhould deſtroy them inſtantly; or, 2. reſerve them for Puniſhment; or, 3. extend Mercy and Forgiveneſs to them. What to be done with Man, under the Breach of the firſt Covenant.

IF indeed we conſider the pure and ſpotleſs Nature of God, and how abominable and loathſome all Sin and Wickedneſs is to him, we muſt be inclined to think, that, upon the Commiſſion of it, he ſhould immediately withdraw his divine Influence, and ſuffer his rebellious Creatures to ſink into nothing: [b] But then, if we conſult farther the Idea we have of an Infinitely perfect Being; One, who foreſees the neceſſary Connections of Cauſes and Effects, and all the Reſults and Conſequences, that attend them; One, whoſe Property it is to be conſtant and immutable in all his Counſels and Actions, and what he wills for once, to will for ever; we ſhall find, that it was not ſo conſiſtent with the Attributes of God, ever to have created Mankind at all, if there could be any ſubſequent Reaſon of ſufficient Force to induce him to deſtroy them. To project and contrive to no Purpoſe, to build and deſtroy again, is common to Men, whoſe Views are ſhort, and Humours fickle; but God cannot be miſtaken in his Meaſures, nor defeated in his Purpoſes: And yet (upon the Suppoſition of an Annihilation) Not to be deſtroyed.

[a] Vid. p. 281, & ſeq.

[b] Taylor, on the two Covenants, work out our own Salvation with Fear and Trembling, than let our Minds run into uncertain Speculations concerning the Meaſures and Conditions of that of others. We are allowed, very juſtly indeed, to commiſerate the State of thoſe, who ſit in Darkneſs, and in the Shadow of Death; [u] but, as Darkneſs itſelf is ſometimes called upon, in Scripture, to praiſe the Lord; ſo even intellectual Darkneſs, i. e. Ignorance, has, occaſionally, great Reaſon to join in the Praiſe: For ſuppoſing Men to be ſinful, 'tis happy for them if they are ignorant; the Supreme Judge of the World having laid down this for one Rule, by which he will proceed at the laſt Day; viz. [x] That the Servant, who knew his Maſter's Will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his Will, ſhall be beaten with many Stripes; but he, that knew not, and committed Things worthy of Stripes, ſhall be beaten with few.

[u] Young's Sermons, Vol. I. [x] Luke xii. 47, 48.

A COM-

A

COMPLEAT BODY

OF

Speculative and Practical DIVINITY.

PART IV.

Of the Myſteries of our moſt Holy Faith.

CHAP. I.

Of the Nature of the Second Covenant, commonly called The COVENANT of GRACE.

WE left the firſt Parents of Mankind [a] under the Breach of the firſt Covenant, and, in them, all their Poſterity loſt and undone; ſentenced to Labour, to Sorrow, to Sufferings, to Sickneſs, to Death, and expoſed to the Vengeance of Almighty God: And, in this Situation, there are but three Things that can occur to our Thoughts; 1. that God ſhould deſtroy them inſtantly; or, 2. reſerve them for Puniſhment; or, 3. extend Mercy and Forgiveneſs to them.

What to be done with Man, under the Breach of the firſt Covenant.

IF indeed we conſider the pure and ſpotleſs Nature of God, and how abominable and loathſome all Sin and Wickedneſs is to him, we muſt be inclined to think, that, upon the Commiſſion of it, he ſhould immediately withdraw his divine Influence, and ſuffer his rebellious Creatures to ſink into nothing: [b] But then, if we conſult farther the Idea we have of an Infinitely perfect Being; One, who foreſees the neceſſary Connections of Cauſes and Effects, and all the Reſults and Conſequences, that attend them; One, whoſe Property it is to be conſtant and immutable in all his Counſels and Actions, and what he wills for once, to will for ever; we ſhall find, that it was not ſo conſiſtent with the Attributes of God, ever to have created Mankind at all, if there could be any ſubſequent Reaſon of ſufficient Force to induce him to deſtroy them. To project and contrive to no Purpoſe, to build and deſtroy again, is common to Men, whoſe Views are ſhort, and Humours fickle; but God cannot be miſtaken in his Meaſures, nor defeated in his Purpoſes: And yet (upon the Suppoſition of an Annihilation)

Not to be deſtroyed.

[a] Vid. p. 281, & ſeq.

[b] Taylor, on the two Covenants, hilation) 'tis on him only that the Diſappointment falls, if ſo be, that, after the vaſt Expence and Pains (if we may ſo ſpeak) of building this majeſtick Temple of the World, he ſhould be obliged to ſet it on fire with his own Hands, and thereby give his great Adverſary the Devil, and Sin and Rebellion, his deteſted Off-ſpring, a ſufficient Matter of Triumph, in having effected ſo glorious a Miſchief, as to force the Almighty to the diſhonourable Work of razing his own Foundations, and yet neceſſitate him to leave the Stain of Wickedneſs ſtill behind, as an everlaſting Blemiſh on his Power and Glory.

But reſerved for Puniſhment.

SINCE therefore the Deſtruction of the World, for the Tranſgreſſion of Mankind, would have been a Work, wherein God alone had been the Sufferer, (the Sinner being only to be reduced to the Condition he was in before) our Thoughts, in the next Place, ſuggeſt, that this guilty Creature muſt be preſerved, to atone for offending againſt infinite Majeſty, by the Infinity, i. e. the eternal Duration of his Sufferings: And in this Thought we are the rather confirmed, not only by the Notions we have of the Juſtice and Holineſs of God, but by his particular Proceedings againſt a nobler Rank of Creatures, the Angels of Heaven; [c] who, not keeping their firſt Eſtate, but diſobeying their Maker, were thrown headlong thence into the bottomleſs Regions of Deſpair, and are reſerved in everlaſting Chains, unto the Judgment of the Great Day.

For he could not atone for himſelf.

THAT this muſt have been the wretched Condition of apoſtate Man, if no Satisfaction could be made to the injured Deity, if no Ranſom could be paid to offended Juſtice, ſeems to be a plain Dictate of Reaſon. And now, if we caſt about, and conſider where ſuch a Satisfaction is to be found, as may pacify the Wrath and Indignation of an angry God; where ſuch a Ranſom is to be met with, as will be a ſufficient Price for the Sins of all Mankind; the Earth ſaith, it is not in me, the Sea ſaith, it is not in me. It cannot be gotten with Gold, it cannot be valued with the Gold of Ophir, with the precious Onyx and the Sapphire; and therefore, vain are all Attempts of Man to emancipate himſelf; [d] it coſt more to redeem his Soul, therefore he muſt let that alone for ever.

WE may ſuppoſe indeed, that Adam, having now experienced the Folly of his Choice, might think of returning, with firmer Reſolves to obey his Maker; that the Shame and Guilt of Sin, having wounded his Conſcience with a deep Remorſe, might put him upon an unfeigned Repentance, which would happily reſtore him to the Favour of God, and blot out the Remembrance of his Tranſgreſſion: But [e] alas! he is not capable of Repentance; or, if he were, his Repentance would not be available for his Pardon. Repentance, which leads to Salvation, is the Gift of God, and a conſiderable Branch it is of the Divine Mercy: But that Attribute, as yet, lies hid and undiſplayed in the infinite Goodneſs of God, and cannot exert itſelf, till Almighty Juſtice be ſatisfied. [f] So that guilty Man can find no Expedient for his Deliverance; he cannot conceive how Mercy can ſave him without the Violation of Juſtice, nor can he be brought to make an humble Confeſſion of his Fault, when he expects nothing but an irrevocable Doom. And accordingly we may obſerve, that the Hiſtory of Adam's Tranſgreſſion makes no Mention of an Overture on God's Part, or any ſort of Advance on Man's, towards a Recovery this Way. The Man and Woman indeed are aſhamed but 'tis of their Nakedneſs; and afraid of God, but 'tis with a ſlaviſh Fear of Puniſhment for their Offence. There appear no Tokens of a ſincere Contrition; no deploring their Unhappineſs, no deprecating offended Juſtice, no Promiſe of Amendment, no Fears, no Sorrow for what was paſt, nor any Indications of Perſons poſſeſſed with the Heinouſneſs of their Guilt, and importunate for Pardon: On the contrary, they both make Excuſes for their Sin, and, in Effect, throw all the Blame of their Miſconduct upon God; the Woman pretending, that he had made the Serpent too wiſe, [g] the Serpent beguiled me; and the Man, that he had made the Woman too full of Charms and Temptations to be reſiſted, the Woman that thou gaveſt to be with me, ſhe gave me, and I did eat.

Nor any other for him.

HITHERTO no Hopes appear for the Recovery of loſt Man upon his own Performances, nor can he any more depend upon the Aſſiſtance of any other Creature, to pay his Ranſom, and ſet the Captive free. [h] Which of all the heavenly Powers and [c] Jude ver. 6. [d] Pſal. xlix. 8. [e] Taylor, on the two Covenants. [f] Bates's Harmony.

[g] Gen. iii. 12, 13. [h] Milton, in his excellent Poem, brings in God aſking the bleſſed Angels, ſurrounding his Throne, which of them would undertake to atone for Man's Sin?

" Say,

and Principalities will be willing, or able, to bear the Vengeance of an Omnipotent God, demanding Satisfaction for the Violation of his Laws, and the Contempt of his Authority? Or what Creature, that ſhould be ſo zealouſly charitable, as to wiſh himſelf accurſed for his Brethren's Sake, would be able to undergo ſo vaſt a Burthen, as the propitiating, by his Sufferings, for ſo many Millions of Offenders, that lie dormant in the Loins of a ſinful Progenitor? Where is that one Creature, or what is his Name, who, by his Righteouſneſs, can obtain a general Indemnity, cancel our Obligations to Puniſhment and Merit, [i] a free Gift of God upon all Men unto Juſtification of Life, in the ſame Latitude, as, by the Offence of one, the Sentence of eternal Death was paſſed, and Judgment came upon all Men, unto Condemnation? We may ſafely pronounce, that there was no Creature of itſelf ſufficient to be [k] this Days-man between God and us, and to lay his Hand equally on us both; for God is not a Man, that we ſhould anſwer him, (either by ourſelves, or any created Subſtitute) and come together in Judgment.

REASON then could never have found out a Mediator, nor obnoxious Sinners expected a Propitiation, had not God made the Overture of his Mercy (even before he pronounced the Sentence of his Juſtice) in the gracious Promiſe of a Redeemer, appointed before the Foundation of the World, in the Seed of the Woman, i. e. his own beloved Son aſſuming human Nature, and, by the Sacrifice of himſelf, vanquiſhing the Enemy, and atoning for the Guilt of Mankind.

Therefore God compaſſionates him.

TO form ſome Conception then of the Ground and Foundation of the Covenant between God the Father and God the Son, wherein the Redemption of Mankind was concerted; we may imagine to ourſelves, that God, in his eternal Counſel purpoſing to create Mankind, in order to ſupply the vacant Places of thoſe Angelick Powers, which he foreſaw would revolt, foreſaw likewiſe that Man would abuſe the Liberty of Choice implanted in his Nature, and, deluded with Satan's Temptations, violate the great Command, which was to be the Teſt of his Obedience, and thereby plunge himſelf into a State of Perdition; and that, moved with Compaſſion at his unhappy Circumſtances, and conſidering withal, that, tho' his Iniquity was voluntary, in ſome meaſure, it was occaſioned by the Malice and Suggeſtions of another, who would pride himſelf in the Succeſs, and triumph in the poor Creature's Ruin, reſolved not to proceed againſt him according to the Demerits of his Tranſgreſſion, but to find out an Expedient for his Recovery. [l] The Angelick Nature was not quite loſt: Myriads of thoſe bleſſed Spirits did ſtill continue in the State of their Innocence; and this ſome aſſign for a Reaſon, why God did not contrive a Means for their Reſtoration: But in Adam all Mankind ſinned at once, and fell ſhort of the Glory of God, and therefore, leſt they ſhould all periſh, and a whole Species of rational Creatures, capable of beholding and enjoying him, for ever be cut off from his Preſence, and the Beatifick Viſion, he thought of their Redemption; but here were the Difficulties that obſtructed the Deſign. Man had ſinned, and therefore Man was to ſuſtain the Puniſhment of his Sin: The original Law, founded in the Nature of God, and in the Nature of Man, as he was created after God's own Image, could not be repealed, without ſome one to fulfil its Obligation of perfect and unſinning Obedience; but where was the Man, or indeed any other created Being, ſufficient for ſo great a Taſk?

Why.

THE Unity of the Divine Nature is ſuch, that no Perſon in the Godhead can be ſuppoſed to have any Thoughts or Purpoſes, but what the other are equally admitted to. But (to help our Conceptions in this Matter) we may imagine, that, [m] God the Father, having communicated to his Son the kind Intention he had of recovering loſt Man, and admitting him to a farther Probation, might urge the Difficulties, that attended it; whereupon his Son, moved by the ſame Divine Compaſſion, might offer himſelf to accompliſh the great and arduous Work, which the Father accepting, the Covenant

The Tenor of the ſecond Covenant.

" Say, heavenly Powers, where ſhall we find ſuch Love?
" Which of you will be mortal, to redeem
" Man's mortal Crime, and juſt, th' unjuſt to ſave?
" Dwells in all Heaven Charity ſo dear?"
He aſk'd, but all the Heavenly Quire ſtood mute,
And Silence was in Heaven: On Man's Behalf
Patron or Interceſſor none appear'd;
Much leſs, that durſt upon his own Head draw
The deadly Forfeiture, and Ranſom ſet. Paradiſe Loſt, Book iii.

[i] Rom. v. 18. Divine Attributes.
[k] Job ix. 32, 33.
[l] Hopkins, of the two Covenants, and Bates's Harmony of the [m] Allen, on the two Covenants.

Covenant of Man's Redemption was immediately concluded. Chriſt, for his Part, engaged, that he would aſſume human Nature, and ſo become the Proxy and Repreſentative of Mankind; that, in their Stead, he would fulfil the Law of Righteouſneſs, wherein they failed, and undergo the Penalty, which, by ſuch Failure, they had incurred; that he would die, in ſhort, for their Salvation; and (to effect a Reconciliation between their Creator and them) whatever the Divine Juſtice had to charge upon them he would be reſponſible for, and bear, in his Body, the Tranſgreſſions of them all. Upon theſe Performances, God promiſed to accept Mankind as innocent, and receive them into Favour again; for the future, to pardon their Offences, upon the Condition of their Humiliation and Repentance; to help the Infirmities of their Nature with the Supplies of Grace, upon their Supplications and Prayers; and to admit them into that State of Happineſs, they were intitled to before, upon their ſincere, though imperfect Obedience, joined with the Merits and Interceſſion of their great Mediator; and upon the Conſideration of theſe advantageous Conditions it is, that the Apoſtle founds the Diſparity of the two Covenants: * Not as the Offence, ſays he, ſo alſo is the free Gift; for, if, through the Offence of one, many be dead, much more the Grace of God, and the Gift by Grace, which is by one Man Jeſus Chriſt, hath abounded unto many: The Judgment was by one to Condemnation, but the free Gift is of many Offences unto Juſtification.

The two Covenants compared, and Advantages of the Second.

To form the Compariſon then, and ſo ſtate the Difference of theſe two Covenants, in order to perceive how much the one is preferable to the other, we ſhall conſider them, 1. With Reſpect to the Duty they require; 2. The Strength given for the Performance; and, 3. The Reward annexed to the Diſcharge of them. And here we may obſerve, [n] 1. That the firſt was properly a Covenant of Juſtice; its Conditions were ſtrict and rigorous; its Obedience was to be entire, performed by the Man's own Strength, without the leaſt Failing or Imperfections, and its Penalties and Rewards abſolute and indiſpenſable. No Court of Equity was here eſtabliſhed, to ſoften or mitigate the Rigour of the Command, or interpret in Favour of the Offender: If he tranſgreſſed in the leaſt Point, he knew his Doom; [o] Curſed is he, that continueth not in all Things written in the Book of the Law, to do them; and in this lies one great Difference, [p] that the Rigour and Severity of the Covenant of Works requiring that our Righteouſneſs ſhould be perſonal, and wrought out by ourſelves, is now relaxed by the Covenant of Grace, promiſing us the Remiſſion of Sin, and Acceptance of our Services, thro' the Righteouſneſs of our Surety, conveyed unto us by Faith.

2. IT muſt be preſumed indeed, that God gave the firſt Man a native Strength, ſufficient to enable him to keep his Commandments: But when it is conſidered, that [q] he left him in the Hands of his own Counſel, without any farther Direction or Aſſiſtance, and to grapple with an Adverſary, envious and deceitful, againſt whoſe Wiles and Stratagems he had no Preſervative, but only the Dread of the impending Puniſhment; we can hardly think, that his Virtue was ſo well ſecured, as that of thoſe, who live under this Covenant, whoſe Conditions are not unſinning, but ſincere Obedience, rendered eaſy and practicable by the Succours of Heaven, and the Grace and Strength of our Mediator. Under this Covenant indeed, [r] Sin may more eaſily make its Breaches upon us, by Reaſon of our preſent Infirmity, either through Ignorance or Surprize; but it cannot get Dominion over us, without our own deliberate Option: For it is an expreſs Goſpel-Promiſe againſt the Power of Sin, [s] that it ſhall not have Dominion over us; againſt the Power of the Devil, that greater is he, that is in you, than he, that is in the World; againſt the Power of Temptations, [t] that God is faithful, who will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able; againſt Diſcouragement from our Infirmities [u] that we may do all through Chriſt, that ſtrengthens us; and in caſe of falling, * that we have an Advocate with the Father, and a Propitiation for our Sins, by Means of which, the Favour of God may be regained, and that Principle of Grace recovered, to make us grow good again, and ſo find a new Acceptance.

3. To diſpute whether Adam, if he had not ſinned, ſhould, at ſome Period of his earthly Life, have been tranſlated into Heaven, and there united to God in his eternal Enjoyments, were only to be wiſe above what is written. If we will confine our Judgment to what we read in Scripture, nothing appears there, but that the Promiſe of Heaven was made in Chriſt alone; [x] and that, as our Impunity is the Effect of his his Satisfaction, our Title to Happineſs is the Purchaſe of his Blood, (which is therefore called the Blood of the New Teſtament) and the Fruit of his redundant Merit; with whoſe perfect Obedience God was ſo well pleaſed, that he promiſed to confer upon thoſe, that believed in him, all the glorious Privileges becoming the Sons of God; to make them Aſſociates with himſelf in his eternal Kingdom, and in thoſe celeſtial Abodes, whereof Paradiſe, with all its Pleaſures, was but a faint Shadow and Similitude.

* Rom. v. 15, 16. [n] Taylor, on the two Covenants. [o] Deut. xxvii. 26. [p] Hopkins, on the two Covenants. [q] Ecclus. xv. 14. [r] Young's Sermons, Vol. II. [s] Rom. vi. 14. [t] 1 Cor. x. 13. [u] Phil. iv. 13. * 1 John ii. 1. [x] Bates's Harmony of the Divine Attributes.

Why God made not the Covenant of Grace firſt.

THESE are the Advantages of the ſecond Covenant, that it is founded upon milder Terms, better Helps, and richer Promiſes; that it admits of Repentance after Sin; accepts of Sincerity inſtead of Perfection; aſſiſts the Infirmities of human Nature, and crowns its Services with Immortality. "But if this Covenant was ſo excellent, "why did not God eſtabliſh it at firſt, and place Man, as ſoon as he was created, "under the beſt Means of Perſeverance in his Duty?" Now, in Anſwer to this, it ſhould be conſidered, that as it would have been inconſiſtent with the Glory, and Wiſdom, and Power of God, to have had any Creature come out of his Hands, but what was perfect in its Kind; ſo would it have been a Diſparagement to that Perfection, not to have given it a Law commenſurate to its Abilities; and an Encouragement to Sin, not to have enforced that Law with Sanctions of the greateſt Severity. We, indeed, in this degenerate State of ours, live under eaſier Terms; we have an Indulgence given to our Infirmities; nor is every Tranſgreſſion irreparable, and threatened with immediate Death: But then we are to remember, that not only our Condition requires theſe Alleviations, but that, when we do amiſs, we have a Saviour's Propitiation and Interceſſion to flee to. But our firſt Parents, in their State of Integrity, ſtood upon their own Bottom, and had none to anſwer for them; for which Reaſon any Mitigation in the Covenant, or Hopes of Impunity in the Violation of it, muſt neceſſarily have impaired their Attention to the divine Command. For, let us ſuppoſe God concluding the Covenant, he made with them, in ſome ſuch Terms as theſe: "Thus I have given you a Law requiring the ſtricteſt Obedience; "have inveſted you with Powers to enable you to perform it; and have annexed a "dreadful Penalty to engage your Care and Aſſiduity; but be not diſcouraged at "this Severity, my Wiſdom ſhall find out an Expedient, in caſe you ſhould tranſ-"greſs, to puniſh the Sin, and yet to ſave the Sinner." This is expreſſly the Form of the Second, and yet it had been highly improper in the Tenor of the Firſt Covenant, [y] ſince a comfortable Proviſion againſt Sin had been a ſtrong Temptation to it: For, certainly, if our firſt Parents could break through thoſe Reſtraints of Threatening and Terror, wherewith God had guarded his Commandments; of how much lighter Account would it have been to have made a Sally, where there was ſuch an Avenue opened to a vain Curioſity, as might, of itſelf, have been Inducement enough, to have put them upon the Trial?

NOR was it for Man's Security only, but for the Manifeſtation of God's greater Glory, that the Covenant of Juſtice preceded that of Mercy. 'Tis darkening the Plot, that gives Beauty to the Diſcovery; and the deeper the Diſtreſs is laid, the more conſpicuous is the Deliverance. [z] Whether therefore we ſuppoſe, that the Incarnation of Chriſt was primarily in God's Intention, even when he made the World, or was only a Deſign ſubſequent upon the Proſpect of Adam's Fall, and the many Calamities attending it; yet ſo it is, that the Severity of the firſt Covenant did ſo far contribute to this Deſign, that there had not been that Neceſſity for a Redeemer, had not Sin, taking Occaſion from the Commandment, (as [a] the Apoſtle ſpeaks) deceived our firſt Parents, and, by it, ſlain them; not but that the Commandment was holy, juſt, and good; but Sin, that it might appear Sin, (i. e. very deſtructive) worked Death in them by that, which was good. Sin, indeed, in its own Nature, has no Tendency to Good, nor any proper Efficacy to promote the Glory of God: [b] But, as a black Ground in a Picture, which, in itſelf, only defiles it, when placed artfully, ſets off the brighter Colours, and heightens their Beauty; ſo the Evil of Sin, which, conſidered abſolutely, obſcures the Glory of God, by the over-ruling Diſpoſition of his Providence, ſerves to illuſtrate his Name, and make it more glorious in the Eſteem of all reaſonable Creatures; and therefore "O happy Fault, (as one of the Ancients "calls it) not in itſelf, but by the wiſe and merciful Counſel of God, which was

[y] Taylor, on the two Covenants. [z] Ibid. [a] Rom. vii. 11, 13. [b] Bates's Harmony, O fælix culpa, quæ tantum, & talem meruit habere Redemptorem!

" repaired in a Way ſo advantageous, that the Salvation of the Earth is the Won" der of Heaven, and the Redemption of Man the Joy of Angels!"

God's Deſign in the ſecond Covenant.

THIS agreeable Contraſt of Danger and Eſcape, of Miſery and Happineſs in Man, diſplays the wonderous Work of our Redemption, and ſhews forth [c] the Mercy of God in deſigning it; the Wiſdom of God in contriving it; the Power of God in effecting it; and the Holineſs of God, in the Manner wherein it was effected; [d] the Breadth, and Length, and Depth, and Height of the Love of Chriſt, which paſſeth all Knowledge, in being the great Inſtrument and Performer of it; none of which had appeared to ſo much Advantage, had it not been for the Violation of the firſt Covenant.

IN ſuffering this Covenant then to be violated, and by that Means introducing a new one, [e] God intended to glorify himſelf; his unſearchable Counſel, in finding out a Means to reconcile Juſtice and Mercy; his perfect Righteouſneſs, in the Remiſſion of Sins through the Propitiation of Chriſt; and his abundant Grace, in giving his Son to die for Rebels. He intended to glorify his Son; his free Love, in ſubjecting himſelf to a ſhameful Death for our Ranſom and Deliverance; his Almighty Power, in ſupporting human Nature under the Load of God's Wrath; his compleat Sacrifice, in fully perfecting thoſe, that are ſanctified; and his effectual Interceſſion, in procuring to his Church the Gifts and Graces of the Holy Spirit. He intended, laſtly, to glorify us; by the Precepts of the Goſpel purifying our Hearts and Hands from all Uncleanneſs, and by the Operations of his Spirit repairing his defaced Image in us; that ſo, being [f] made Partakers of the Divine Nature again, we might thereby [g] be made meet likewiſe to become Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light.

The Antiquity of it.

BUT though for theſe, and ſeveral other Reaſons, that might be produced, the firſt Covenant was not to be ſuperſeded; yet it is worth our Obſervation, that the ſecond Covenant, or Covenant of Grace, which was to ſucceed it, was determined in the Divine Counſel, and commenced, and continued all along, from the firſt Foundation of the World; for [h] God hath redeemed us (ſays one Apoſtle) with the precious Blood of Chriſt, as of a Lamb, without Blemiſh and without Spot, fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, but manifeſt in theſe laſt Times; and he hath ſaved us, (ſays [i] another) and called us with an holy Calling, not according to our Works, but according to his own Purpoſe, and the Grace given to us in Chriſt Jeſus, before the World began, but now made manifeſt by the appearing of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

[k] NOW, in order to a right Underſtanding of this important Point, we muſt remember, that, ever ſince the Fall of Man, and the original Promiſe of a Saviour to come, that Seed of the Woman alone, who was to break the Head, and deſtroy the Power of the old Serpent, the Devil; the Covenant, under which all Mankind was placed, was no other than the Covenant of Grace, or the Covenant of the Redemption and Salvation of the World, upon the Conditions of Faith and Obedience to the Meſſias, the Son of God. We muſt alſo remember, that, though this Covenant was revived, explained, and publiſhed more ſolemnly to the World by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, yet was it, from the Beginning of Things, made known and delivered down to all future Generations; partly, by ſuch expreſs Revelations, as the frequent Appearance of the Son of God upon Earth did then permit; partly, by the ſeveral Renewals of it to Noah, to Abraham, to David, and others; partly, by the clearer and clearer Intimations of it to the Prophets, as the Fulneſs of Time drew near; and partly by the Inſtitution of Propitiatory Sacrifices, derived down from Abel to all future Ages, as conſtant and ſtanding Monuments and Memorials of the Neceſſity of that great Propitiation, that one Sacrifice upon the Croſs, on which this New Covenant was founded and eſtabliſhed for ever. Under this Covenant both Jew and Gentile lived; and, if they lived well, were made Partakers of its Promiſes. [l] The Covenant of Moſes was but a Kind of little Codicil, annexed to this great Teſtament, made with all Mankind. It was, indeed, a ſpecial Proviſion, to ſeparate one Nation (of which the Meſſias was to come) from the Idolatry and Wickedneſs of the reſt of the World; but the Patriarchs and Prophets, looking beyond the Bounds of this Diſpenſation, [m] ſaw the Promiſes of the Goſpel afar off, and were perſuaded of them, and embraced them; they deſired a better, that is, an heavenly Country, and looked for a City, prepared for them, whoſe Builder and Maker is God: And that the Heathens, eſpecially the wiſeſt of them, had the like Notion, and expected the ſame Proviſion,

[c] Bates's Harmony. [d] Eph. iii. 18, 19. [e] Hopkins, on the two Covenants. [f] 2 Pet. i. 4. [g] Col. i. 12. [h] 1 Pet. i. 18, &c. [i] 2 Tim. i. 9, 10. [k] Whiſton, on the Antiquity of the Chriſtian Covenant. [l] Ibid. [m] Heb. xi. 10, &c.

Proviſion, appears by a remarkable Teſtimony in the moſt ancient Book of Holy Writ, I mean the Book of Job, where we find that noble Arab, in the midſt of his ſore Afflictions, and when he ſeems to have no longer preſerved any Hopes of a temporal Deliverance, profeſſing his Faith in his gracious Saviour, and in a joyful Reſurrection at the laſt Day; [n] I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he ſhall ſtand at the latter Day upon the Earth; and though, after my Skin, Worms deſtroy this Body, yet, in my Fleſh ſhall I ſee God; whom I ſhall ſee for myſelf, and mine Eyes ſhall behold, and not another, though my Reins be conſumed within me.

An Objection.

"BUT if the Covenant of Grace was all along, from the firſt Beginning, extant "in the World, why was the Law of Moſes, which, as the Apoſtle affirms, could "not convey Righteouſneſs, or [o] juſtify any Man in the Sight of God, inſtituted at all? "Of what Uſe or Purpoſe was it to the People, on whom it was impoſed? Or why "is it ſo frequently called [p] the firſt, and [q] the old Covenant, if there was another, "of ſo much Excellence, that preceded it?" To elucidate this Matter, the Apoſtle propoſes this Queſtion to himſelf, [r] wherefore then ſerveth the Law? And the Anſwer which he makes is this; it was added becauſe of Tranſgreſſion, until the Seed ſhould come, to whom the Promiſe was made. It was added becauſe of Tranſgreſſion; [s] for ſuch was the Blow given to human Underſtanding by our firſt Fall, and the Progreſſion of Degeneracy ever after, that even the natural Senſe and Diſtinction of moral Good and Evil was in a great Meaſure obliterated; and therefore, to repair this Decay, the Law of the Ten Commandments, which, in its ſpiritual Senſe, anſwers the pure Law of Nature, was promulgated, to give a clearer Perception of the Extent of Duty, and the Nature and Enormity of Sin; for ſo the Apoſtle ſeems to mean, when he tells us, [t] I had not known Sin, but by the Law; for I had not known Luſt, or the Sinfulneſs of coveting what belongs to another, except the Law had ſaid, thou ſhalt not covet. It was added becauſe of Tranſgreſſion; for ſuch was the general Prevalency of Idolatry, that few Nations were exempted from it. The Worſhip of the Gentiles conſiſted of many ſuperſtitious Rites and Ceremonies, which the Iſraelites being naturally addicted to, were in great Danger of falling into an Adoration of their Gods; and therefore frequent Injunctions were given them, [u] not to imitate the Manner of the Land of Egypt, from whence they came, nor of the Land of Canaan, whither they were going, but to keep the Statutes and Judgments of God, which if a Man do, he ſhall live in them. So that to employ their buſy Minds, and thereby prevent the Danger of Defection, God deſignedly appointed them a Worſhip, which conſiſted much in bodily Services, and inſtituted many Laws, * which ſtood in Meats and Drinks, and divers Waſhings, and carnal Ordinances, impoſed on them, until the Time of the Reformation. It was added becauſe of Tranſgreſſion; and that, not only to reſtrain the Iſraelites, but to reform all other Nations round about them, who, hearing of the Wiſdom of their Laws, and perceiving how proſperous they were, ſo long as they obſerved them, might then be induced to quit their idolatrous Practices, and join themſelves to the People of the God of Iſrael; even as it came to paſs in ſuch as were Proſelytes to their Religion. [x] To them were committed the Oracles of God, and from them it was expected, that they ſhould communicate Knowledge to ſuch as were ignorant of his Laws, by making their own Obſervance of them more conſpicuous; for [y] this is your Wiſdom, and your Underſtanding, ſays their great Lawgiver, in the Sight of the Nations, who ſhall hear all the Statutes, and ſay, ſurely this great Nation is a wiſe and an underſtanding People; for what Nation is there ſo great, that hath God ſo nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is, in all Things, that we call upon him for? Or what Nation is there ſo great, that hath Statutes and Judgments ſo righteous, as all the Law is, which I ſet before you this Day?

Anſwered, by ſhewing the Reaſons why the Law was inſtituted.

THE Apoſtle has ſuggeſted another Reaſon, why the Law of Moſes was inſtituted, even while the Covenant of Grace was in Being, by calling it [z] a Schoolmaſter to bring us unto Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by Faith. For, as Children are ſent to School to be taught the firſt Rudiments of Learning, but afterwards, as their Underſtanding advances, are initiated into higher Sciences; or, (to uſe another of the Apoſtle's Similitudes) [a] as an Heir, during his Minority, is under Tutors and Governors, until the Time appointed by his Father; [b] ſo God was pleaſed to deal with his Church, [n] Job xix. 25. [o] Gal. iii. 11. [p] Heb. viii. 7. [q] Ibid. ver. 13. [r] Gal. iii. 19. [s] Allen, on the two Covenants. [t] Rom. vii. 7. [u] Lev. xviii. 3, &c. * Heb. ix. 10. [x] Rom. iii. 2. [y] Deut. iv. 6, &c. [z] Gal. iii. 24. [a] Ibid. iv. 1. [b] Allen, ibid.

Church, beginning with ſuch Inſtructions, as were adapted to their Capacities, in the State of their Ignorance, and thence proceeding gradually to ſuch as were higher; till being come to a perfect Man, unto the Meaſure of the Stature of the Fulneſs of Chriſt, (as the Apoſtle words it) they were to be admitted [c] to all the Riches of the full Aſſurance of Underſtanding, to the Acknowledgment of the Myſtery of God, and of the Father, and of Chriſt. The Law, in the typical Nature of it, was of great Uſe to the Jews, to facilitate and ſtrengthen their Belief in Chriſt. The Predictions of their Prophets ſerved of old to raiſe their Expectation, as they do now to confirm our Faith in him, in whom they are all found to center. Their Ceremonies were moſt of them prefigurative of his Performances; and the Inſtitution of their Sacrifices, in particular, as Atonements for legal Guilt, was a ſufficient Indication of God's Willingneſs to accept of his own Son's offering himſelf, for the Expiation of ours; [d] For if the Blood of Bulls, and of Goats, (as the Apoſtle argues) and the Aſhes of an Heifer, ſprinkling the Unclean, ſanctifieth to the purifying of the Fleſh; how much more ſhall the Blood of Chriſt, who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without Spot to God, purge our Conſcience from dead Works to ſerve the living God?

THUS the Law was an Handmaid to lead us to Chriſt; ſomething preliminary, to a clearer Manifeſtation of God's Will, when he ſhould think fit to reveal it; and the People, who lived under that Diſpenſation, were both ſanctified and ſaved, (as † the Apoſtle argues) not ſo much by the Performance of its Ordinances, as by Faith in the Covenant made with their Forefather Abraham, (the ſame which was made with the Protoplaſt Adam) and by the Merits of the Meſſias to come, [e] who was all along the Mediator of the New Teſtament, that, by Means of Death, for the Redemption of Tranſgreſſions, that were under the firſt Teſtament, they which are called may receive the Promiſe of eternal Inheritance.

The Law and Goſpel, both one Covenant.

THE Truth is, if we would ſpeak ſtrictly and properly, the Covenant of God with his Church has, in all Ages, ever ſince the Fall of our firſt Parents, been but one and the ſame. [f] Its Terms, on God's Part, are, Forgiveneſs of Sins, Reſtoring Mankind to Holineſs and Immortality, for the Sake of his Son, and in View of his Sacrifice and Death for them: On Man's Part, Belief in that Son, Dependence upon that Sacrifice, Repentance for paſt Offences, and ſincere Obedience for the future; and theſe Terms have always been required by God, always expected and hoped for by ſuch, as had an Eye to the Promiſes, and carried their Contemplations to a due Extent; in which Senſe our bleſſed Saviour tells the Jews, [g] Your Father Abraham rejoiced to ſee my Day, and he ſaw it, and was glad. [h] The Promiſes made to Abraham and the Patriarchs were confirmed in Chriſt, [i] the Spirit, ſpeaking by the Prophets, was the Spirit of Chriſt; nay, even before the Flood, [k] it was Chriſt, that preached to the old World, while the Ark was preparing in the Days of Noah; ſo that Chriſt being the ſame, [l] under all Diſpenſations, the Covenants of the Law and the Goſpel are not two, with Reſpect to the Subſtance and principal Intent of them, but only in Regard of their different Adminiſtration, and the more or leſs Obſcurity in the general Promiſe of Salvation. [m] The Promiſes and Covenant of the Goſpel are declared better indeed, than thoſe of the Law, as they are propounded with greater Clearneſs, confirmed with ſtronger Evidence, and are, in ſome Meaſure, accompliſhed; for the Goſpel hath brought Life and Immortality to Light, of which Mankind before had but dark and doubtful Expectations. It teaches, in expreſs Terms, what the Law taught in Shadows and Types, and with an Obſcurity, under which carnal Minds ſeldom diſcerned the ſpiritual and heavenly Bleſſings, that were to be underſtood: It changes the Object of our Faith from the Meſſiah to come, to one already come; but ſtill the Meſſiah is the Saviour; ſtill the Joys of Heaven the Reward; ſtill Virtue, and Piety, and Faith, the Conditions of attaining it; whether the ſimpler Worſhip of the Patriarchs, or the Rites of the Moſaick Law, or the Faith and Sacraments of the Goſpel, diſburdened from theſe Rites, were the Method, which Almighty God, in his Wiſdom, thought fit, each in their proper Seaſon, to preſcribe, as a neceſſary Qualification for them, at that Time. So that, though the Law and the Goſpel, as to their Difference in Modes and Circumſtances, were perfectly diſtinct; yet, in Effect, and as to the Eſſentials of Obedience and moral Virtue, the Reward aimed at, and the Ground and Foundation of Men's Hope, they were one and the ſame Covenant; but under different Denominations, according to the Period of Time, Under different Denominations.

[c] Col. ii. 2. [d] Heb. ix. 13, 14. † Gal. iii. paſſim. [e] Heb. ix. 15. [f] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [g] John viii. 56. [h] Gal. iii. 17. [i] 1 Pet. i. 11. [k] Ibid. iii. 20. [l] Heb. xiii. 8. [m] Stanhope, ibid.

Time, wherein it was fully diſcovered.——I ſay fully diſcovered; for though the Covenant of Grace was certainly prior to the Giving of the Law, and (as we ſaid before) virtually included in it; yet, foraſmuch as it was not fully revealed, until the Preaching of Chriſt, which was about fifteen hundred Years after the Giving of the Law, the Apoſtles, in their Writings, call it the new and ſecond Covenant, in Conformity to the Manner of Diction obſerved among the Prophets; for [n] Behold the Days come, ſaith the Lord, that I will make a new Covenant with the Houſe of Iſrael, and with the Houſe of Judah; not according to the Covenant I made with their Fathers, in the Day that I took them by the Hand, to bring them out of the Land of Egypt; but this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make with them:——I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts; I will be their God, and they ſhall be my People; and they ſhall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, ſaying, Know the Lord; for they ſhall all know me, from the leaſt of them, unto the greateſt of them, ſaith the Lord; for I will forgive their Iniquity, and will remember their Sin no more.

Of the Conditions of the SECOND COVENANT.

IN the Beginning of this Work, we have diſcourſed, at large, of the Truth and Veracity of the Moſaick and Prophetical, Chriſtian and Apoſtolical Revelation; and (what more immediately concerns us here) from the Miracles and Predictions of Jeſus Chriſt, the Excellency of his Doctrine, and Wonderfulneſs of its Propagation; from the Atteſtation God gave of his being no Impoſtor, by many Signs and Tokens, eſpecially his Reſurrection from the Dead; and the undeniable Characters, concurring in his Apoſtles, to prove that they were true Witneſſes of what they relate concerning him; we have ſhewn, that God, who, at ſundry [o] Times and in divers Manners, ſpake in Time paſt, unto the Fathers by the Prophets, hath, in theſe laſt Days, ſpoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath made Heir of all Things, by whom alſo he made the Worlds: Who, being the Brightneſs of his Glory, and the expreſs Image of his Perſon, and upholding all Things by the Word of his Power, when he had by himſelf purged our Sins, ſat down on the Right-hand of the Majeſty on high. The firſt Condition is Faith. Its Neceſſity.

AND if God has been pleaſed to make ſuch a Revelation of his Will, and therein to declare the Covenant of Grace, by no leſs a Perſon, than his own beloved Son; the firſt and fundamental Duty, which this lays us under, is, (as the Apoſtle exhorts) to [p] take the more earneſt Heed to the Things, which we have heard, leſt at any Time we ſhould let them ſlip; to fix it indelibly in our Minds, and to give the utmoſt Conſent of our Hearts, without the leaſt Doubt or Reſerve, to this infallibly revealed Truth——* that the Man Jeſus Chriſt, who was ſo miraculouſly born, (as the Holy Evangeliſts relate) ſo wonderful in all the Works and Miracles of his Life, ſo ſurpaſſing all the Wiſdom of the World in the Excellency of his Doctrine, and by his own Choice (for the Sake of us miſerable Sinners) ſo ſhamefully treated, and put to Death upon the Croſs, was likewiſe no leſs than the eternal Son of God, and Saviour of the World, united, in one and the ſame Perſon, to our frail Nature, for this very Purpoſe, that he might redeem us from the Slavery of Sin and Satan, and ſatisfy the Juſtice of his heavenly Father for our Rebellion againſt him; without which gracious Interpoſition we muſt have lain under the Almighty's Diſpleaſure for ever, and finally periſhed in our Sins.

FAITH then, or a thorough Perſuaſion of the Truth of our holy Religion, together with a full Aſſent of the Mind to the great and fundamental Articles of it, is one Condition of the Covenant of Grace; and a Condition of ſuch Importance, that our Saviour himſelf aſſures us, [q] this is the Will of him that ſent me, that [r] whoſoever believeth in me, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting Life; that the Evangeliſt informs us, this was the Intent of recording his Actions, [s] that we might believe, that Jeſus is the Chriſt, the Son of God, and that, believing, we might have Life through his Name; and that the Apoſtle to the Romans puts the whole of our Salvation upon this Iſſue, [t] If thou ſhalt confeſs with thy Mouth the Lord Jeſus, and ſhalt believe in thine Heart, that God hath raiſed him from the Dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved; for which the Heart of Man believeth unto Righteouſneſs, and with the Mouth Confeſſion is made [n] Jer. xxxi. 31, &c. [o] Heb. i. 1, &c. [p] Ibid. ii. 1. * Slater's Conditions of the Covenant of Grace. [q] John vi. 40. [r] Ibid. iii. 15. [s] Ibid. xx. 31. [t] Rom. x. 9, 10.

Of Faith in general.

unto Salvation; † and therefore to explain the Nature and Neceſſity of our believing in Chriſt, or, what is all one, our believing the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion, we muſt obſerve, that Faith, in general, is the Aſſent of the Mind to any Propoſition upon the Credit of the Speaker; and herein it differs from other Sorts of Knowledge, becauſe in them we believe upon the Evidence, and apparent Reaſons of the Things themſelves, but in this, upon the Witneſs and Authority of the Perſons that declare them; we are then ſaid to know, when we aſſent upon the Authority of Things, but then to believe, when we aſſent upon the Authority of Perſons; when not the Evidence, in ſhort, of the Things diſcovered, but the Word and Teſtimony of the Diſcoverer makes us give Credit to what is ſaid. This ſhews the Difference between Faith and Science, properly ſo called; for whereas Science ariſes from the Light and Evidence of Things, and Faith, from the Authority of Perſons only, the Evidence which Faith begets, though it may be ſure and certain, cannot be ſo clear and perſpicuous, as that, which ariſes from Science; and accordingly, the Author of the Hebrews deſcribes it to be * the Subſtance of Things hoped for, and the Argument of Things not ſeen; [a] where by Subſtance and Argument he equals it with Science, in Regard to the Firmneſs and Certainty of Aſſent; but, by ſaying that it is of Things not ſeen, he makes it inferior to it, in Point of Evidence.

Whence it ariſes.

'Tis in the Authority of Teſtimony then that Faith has its Foundation, which will therefore be more or leſs ſtable, according to the Ability and Integrity of the Teſtifier; [b] his Ability in the Knowledge of what he declares, and his Integrity in declaring according to his Knowledge: For, in both theſe Ways, he that teſtifieth any Thing may deceive us, either when he is ignorant of the Truth, and ſo, for Want of better Knowledge, impoſes both on himſelf and us; or when he is diſhoneſt, and ſo aſſerts that for a Truth, which he knows to be falſe.

The different Kinds of it.
Human,

Now becauſe all Men are Lyars, i. e. [c] either may deceive, or be deceived, their Teſtimony partakes of their Infirmity, and ſo does the Degree of Perſuaſion, which it creates. But God, being both infallible and true, and conſequently, it being impoſſible that he ſhould either deceive, or be deceived, his Teſtimony begets the firmeſt Perſuaſion, and the higheſt Degree of Faith in its Kind. However, becauſe the only Way we have of proving any Teſtimony to come from God muſt be by rational Arguments, the Degree of Faith, or Perſuaſion wrought by ſuch a Teſtimony, will be according to the Strength of the Arguments, which we have to perſuade us that ſuch a Teſtimony is divine: So that it is the Nature of the Teſtimony, which differences and diſtinguiſhes our Faith. If we believe any Thing upon the bare Word of a Man, it is an human; if upon the bare Word and Teſtimony of God, it is a divine Faith: The general Nature of Faith is the ſame in both, ſince they both rely upon Teſtimony; only as human Teſtimony differs from divine, as much as fallible does from infallible, the ſame, in Proportion, will be the Difference between human and divine Faith.

and Divine.

Divine Faith then (if we will deſcribe it) is a full Perſuaſion of Mind concerning the Truth of what is teſtified, reported, or revealed by God himſelf, or by Perſons commiſſioned by him to reveal or bear Record to it. For, as human Faith is only the Perſuaſion of the Truth of what is told or teſtified by Man, ſo divine Faith muſt be a firm Perſuaſion of the Truth of what is teſtified or revealed to us by God: And from hence it will follow, that we may have a divine Faith of as many Things, as God has, any Way, atteſted or revealed to us. [d] Now the uſual Ways of God's revealing any Thing to Mankind have been either by his own immediate Voice or Inſpiration, whereof we have ſeveral Inſtances, eſpecially in the Lives of the Patriarchs, or by the Mediation and Meſſage of inſpired Men. In this Manner he revealed his Will to the People of Iſrael by the Mouth and Miniſtry of Moſes; and, becauſe both God and Man concurred in this Teſtimony, their Belief of his Meſſage was their Faith, not in God only, but, together with him, in his Servant Moſes; and, accordingly, is called the Moſaick Faith. But the cleareſt Revelation, that God ever vouchſafed Mankind was by the Meſſage and Mediation of his own Son Jeſus Chriſt; and the Belief of his Goſpel, or taking for certain Truth all thoſe Things, which he has declared to us in God's Name, is called the Chriſtian Faith. So that, in like Manner as the Moſaick Faith was a Belief of the Divinity of the Moſaick Law and Religion, upon † Allen upon the two Covenants. * Heb. xi. 1. [a] Norris's Diſcourſes, Vol. III.

Moſaick.

Chriſtian.

[b] Pearſon upon the Creed. [c] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. II. [d] Kettlewell's Meaſures.

upon the Authority of Moſes, the Chriſtian Faith is a Belief of the divine Inſtitution of our Chriſtian Religion, upon the Authority of Jeſus Chriſt.

The Object of it.

[e] WHILE Moſes lived, and ſpake as a Mediator between God and the Iſraelites, they believed his Words, and ſo they did the Prophets, while they preached: When Moſes was gone up to Mount Nebo, and there died; when the reſt of the Prophets were gathered to their Fathers, they believed their Writings, and the whole Object of their Faith was contained in them. When the Son of God came into the World to reveal the Will of his Father, and [f] made known to the Apoſtles, as his Friends, all Things, that he had heard of the Father; then did the Apoſtles believe the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets, as alſo the Words of Chriſt, and in theſe, taken [g] collectively, did the Object of their Faith conſiſt. When Chriſt was aſcended up to Heaven, and the Holy Ghoſt come down; when the Doctrine, which Chriſt delivered to the Apoſtles, had been taught to others, and many thouſand Souls converted to the Faith, they believed the Writings of the Prophets, and the Words of the Apoſtles, and in theſe two was comprized the Object of their Faith. When the Apoſtles themſelves departed this Life, and confirmed the Truth of the Goſpel by their Sufferings and Death, they left the Sum of what they had received, in Writing, for the Continuation of the Faith, in the Churches they had planted, and the Propagation thereof, in other Places; and ſo Chriſtians, that have lived ſince their Days, have believed the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets, of the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts, and in the Whole of theſe is comprehended the Matter of their Faith: From whence it follows, that the Belief of a Chriſtian, as the State of Chriſt's Church now ſtands, and ſhall continue unto the End of the World, conſiſts in this——that it is a firm Aſſent of the Mind to the Doctrines, both ſpeculative and practical, delivered unto us in the Writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and a full Perſuaſion that they are indubitably true, upon the Teſtimony that God gave of his Son, our Saviour Chriſt, who firſt revealed and publiſhed them.

The Evidence of it.

[h] To ſet before us then, in one ſhort View, the Teſtimony, which God gave of his Son, or (what is all one) the Evidence of our Chriſtian Faith, we are to remember, that the great Points of our holy Religion are not only moſt reaſonable, and excellent in themſelves, but moreover taught and inculcated by One, who has given us the moſt convincing Evidence, that could poſſibly be deſired, of his being ſent immediately from God. The Miracles, which our Saviour wrought, were, to his firſt Diſciples, who were Eye-witneſſes of them, a full Demonſtration of the Truth of his Doctrine; and the Hiſtory of his Life, Death, and Reſurrection, delivered down to us, upon the Teſtimony of thoſe Diſciples, is, to us, alſo a ſufficient Evidence of the ſame Truth. Their having converſed, from the Beginning, with our Saviour himſelf, their having heard, and having ſeen with their Eyes, their having looked upon, and having handled with their Hands the Word of Life, (as [i] St John expreſſes it) made it impoſſible, that they ſhould be deceived themſelves; and their whole Life and Converſation, their Sufferings and Deaths, were invincible Proofs againſt the Adverſaries of Chriſtianity, that they had no Deſign of impoſing upon others. They ſaw all the Propheſies of the Old Teſtament preciſely fulfilled in the Life and Doctrine, the Sufferings and Death, of our bleſſed Saviour; they ſaw him confirm what he taught, with ſuch mighty Works, as his bittereſt Enemies could not but confeſs to be above the Power of Nature, even while they were blaſpheming that Holy Spirit, which wrought them; they ſaw the whole Courſe of his Life to be ſuch, as, to all unprejudiced Beholders, loudly proclaimed his divine Commiſſion; they ſaw him ſo conſtantly deſpiſe all worldly Greatneſs, as once, when the People would have made him a King, even to work a Miracle to avoid that, which was the only Thing, that was poſſible to be the Aim and Deſign of an Impoſtor: In fine, they ſaw him [k] alive after his Paſſion by many infallible Proofs, converſing with him for forty Days together, and at laſt beheld him aſcend viſibly into Heaven: Theſe were ſuch Demonſtrations of his being a Teacher ſent from God, and conſequently, that his Doctrine was moſt certainly an immediate Revelation of the Divine Will, that nothing, but the moſt inveterate Malice and Obſtinacy, could withſtand them. And the ſame Reaſon, that theſe Diſciples of our Saviour had to believe his Doctrine, the ſame Reaſon the reſt of the World had to believe theirs. They confirmed, what they had taught, by Signs and Miracles; they lived according to the Doctrine they preached, though manifeſtly manifeſtly contrary to all the Pleaſures and Intereſts of this World; and (what no Deceiver could ever do) they died, with all imaginable Chearfulneſs and Joy of Mind, for the Teſtimony of their Doctrine, and the Confirmation of their Religion.

[e] Pearſon, on the Creed. [f] John xv. 15. [g] Ibid. ii. 22. [h] Clarke's Practical Eſſays. [i] 1 John i. 1. [k] Acts i. 3.

An Objection. THIS, in brief, is the Evidence of the Truth of the Chriſtian Inſtitution: And the only Exception that can be made to it is, the Difference, which ſome may ſuppoſe, the Diſtance of Time may occaſion, between primitive and traditional Faith. [l] "Bleſſed are the Eyes, ſays our Saviour to his Apoſtles, which ſee the Things which "ye ſee; for I tell you, that many Prophets and Kings have deſired to ſee thoſe Things "which ye ſee, and have not ſeen them; and to hear thoſe Things which ye hear, and "have not heard them. His Diſciples ſaw the undeniable Tokens of the Wiſdom "and Power of God manifeſting themſelves in all their Maſter's Words and Actions, "and could therefore have no Room for Diſtruſt. The firſt Converts to Chriſtianity "ſaw his Diſciples giving the like Proofs of their divine Miſſion, and were therefore "directly placed under the Power of Conviction; for what they ſaw, they could "not but believe: But we live ſo remote from the Age, wherein theſe Things were "done, and are every Day ſo liable to be impoſed on by falſe Reports; that, at "this Diſtance of Time, 'tis an hard Matter to ſay what we are to believe, eſpecially "when the Objects of Faith are made ſo full of Myſtery, if not of Contradiction."

Anſwered. IT muſt be owned indeed, [m] that, as the firſt Converts to Chriſtianity had greater Difficulties and ſtronger Prejudices to maſter, than thoſe, who were afterwards born in the Boſom of the Church, and educated under her Care; ſo it was agreeable to the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God, that their Attention to the Proofs of the Chriſtian Religion ſhould be excited, after a more powerful and affecting Manner. Thoſe, who lived in our Saviour's Days, attended to him, heard his Sermons themſelves, and ſaw his Miracles, the great Atteſtations of his Divinity; thoſe, who lived in the Apoſtles Days, had the Report and Teſtimony of Eye-witneſſes, confirmed by mighty Signs and Wonders to convince them; thoſe, who lived in After-ages, even down to our Days, have the Writings of the Apoſtles, and the univerſal Belief of all Ages, to aſſure them of the Truth of ſuch Matters; this indeed makes ſome Difference, as to the external Proof of the Thing, becauſe what I myſelf hear and ſee, ſtrikes and moves me more than what another only relates to me; but as to the internal Proof, which is properly the Evidence of Faith, it makes no Kind of Alteration.

The Evidence of Faith, not impaired by Diſtance of Time.

To make this in ſome Meaſure more obvious, we muſt remember what was ſaid before, viz. that a divine Faith is ultimately reſolved into the Authority of God; [n] but then the Authority of God is no more viſible, than God himſelf; and therefore to convince us, that the Perſon, who pretends to come from God, in order to reveal his Will to us, is really ſent by him, God muſt give Teſtimony to him by ſome divine and viſible Effects, by enabling him to work Miracles, or predict future Events. Theſe Predictions and Miracles, 'tis true, terminate in Senſe; but then the Evidence of Faith, which is built upon them, goes a great deal farther. [o] When the Apoſtles ſaw their Maſter raiſe up Lazarus, for Inſtance, their Eyes convinced them of the Reality of the Fact; but then, that this was an Atteſtation of his being ſent from God, of his being, what he pretended to be, the Son of God, and no Impoſtor; that, conſequently, all his Doctrines, all his Precepts, and all his Promiſes were true; this was not the Effect of Sight, but of Reaſon and Diſcourſe: And therefore whatever wonderful Things Men ſee, if they reſolve to reaſon perverſely, they may ſtill continue Infidels, in like Manner as the Jews did, who aſcribed our Saviour's Miracles to a diabolical Power, and entertained ſuch unreaſonable Prejudices againſt him, as precluded all Conviction. They had Ocular Demonſtration indeed to engage their Belief; but then it muſt be conſidered, [p] that their Minds were tinctured with wrong Notions, and poiſoned againſt him with early Prepoſſeſſions; whereas we, from our Childhood, have been trained up in an honourable Eſteem of Chriſt and his Goſpel, have lived to ſee his Propheſies, concerning the Jews, fulfilled, and, that other great Proof of the Truth of Chriſtianity, the miraculous Propagation of it; which, laid in the Balance together, will, at leaſt, be equivalent to their ſeeing the Wonders, that were wrought in Confirmation of it. The ſhort is, thoſe, who lived in the Time of Chriſt's Miniſtry, heard his Doctrines, and ſaw his Works; what they thus heard and ſaw, they recorded in a Book, which Book has, from Age to Age ever ſince, been handed down to us. This Book we have now in Poſſeſſion; ſo

[l] Matt. xiii. 17.
[m] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. II.
[n] Sherlock's Serm. Vol. II
[o] Sherlock, ibid.
[p] Taylor, of Faith in Jeſus Chriſt.

ſo that one Point of Enquiry, more than they had, is, to know whether this Book be genuine, and whether the Authors of it had, beyond all Controverſy, the Characters of honeſt Men; which, when once we are ſatisfied in, we argue then from what we read, in the ſame Manner as his Diſciples did from what they ſaw, that the Perſon, of whom ſuch wonderful Things are recorded, was certainly a Teacher ſent from God. Nor will the Diſtance of Time make any Alteration of the Caſe, ſince Traditional Truths, well atteſted, deſerve the Belief of one Age as well as another, and are ſo far from loſing their Credibility by being often told and repeated, that it ſhould rather be an Argument (the longer it has been ſince their Diſcovery, and the more they have been conſidered and examined) that their Original Evidence is ſo much the ſtronger.

Another Objection.

"BUT how ſtrong ſoever the Evidence may be, yet if the Revelation be repug-
"nant to Reaſon; if it croſſes our Conceptions, or tranſcends the Bounds of our "Underſtanding; how can we bring ourſelves to believe it? Knowledge is certainly "a great Ingredient of Faith; and therefore where we have no Notions, nor any
"competent Perception of the Thing, 'tis impoſſible for us to believe." It cannot be denied indeed, but that, in the Chriſtian Religion, there are many great Myſteries, or Doctrines of too much Sublimity for the Powers of Reaſon, unaſſiſted by Revelation, to find out, or, when diſcovered, fully to comprehend: But this is no more, than what we may reaſonably expect, conſidering the Nature and Quality of the Things, which it treats of. In its main Intendment indeed, it is a kind of Comment upon the Divine Nature, or an Inſtrument to convey right Conceptions of God into the Soul of Man, ſo far as it is capable of receiving them. [r] But now, God, we know, is an infinite Being, without any Bounds or Limitations of his Eſſence; wonderful in his Actions, inconceivable in his Purpoſes, and inexpreſſible in his Attributes; and how can ſuch vaſt and mighty Things be crouded in a little finite Underſtanding? How ſhall our poor ſhort Faculties be able to meaſure the Length of his Eternity, the Breadth and Expanſions of his Immenſity, the Height of his Preſcience, the Depth of his Decrees, and, laſt of all, that unutterable, incomprehenſible Myſtery of two Natures united into one Perſon, and again, of one and the ſame Nature diffuſed into a triple Perſonality. When a Man, that was born blind, (as [s] one expreſſes it) ſhall be able, on hearſay, to conceive in his Mind all the Varieties and Curioſities of Colours, or to draw an exact Scheme of ſome fine City, or Map of ſome large Province; then we may expect, in this degenerate State of our Underſtanding, to comprehend the Ways of the Almighty, and by ſearching to find out God: But, (to do Juſtice to the Argument on the other Side) as it would be extremely fooliſh and irrational for a blind Man to affirm, that there is no ſuch Thing as Colours, or Lines, or Pictures, becauſe he finds, that he cannot figure, in his Mind, any true Perception of them; ſo would it be equally, or rather ſuperlatively more unreaſonable, for us to deny the great Myſteries of our Faith, becauſe the Plummet of our Reaſon will not reach them.

Anſwered.

The Myſteriouſneſs of Religion, no Argument againſt its Credibility.

Myſteries the Commendation of Religion.

WISH therefore we may, that Religion were leſs difficult to us; but, at the ſame Time, we ought to remember, that we wiſh away that, which, in Reality, is Religion's preſent Commendation, as well as an Ingredient of our future Bliſs. 'Tis Eaſineſs of Acceſs, we know, [t] that, many Times, lays a Man open to Contempt, and a thorough Inſpection into the Secrets of any Object, that is apt to make us inſult over it; and therefore, to protect our Religion from rude Incroachments, by impreſſing an Awe and reverential Fear upon our Minds, God has thought proper to ſurround it (as it were) with a ſacred and majeſtick Obſcurity, and, in ſome Parts of it, to exhibit ſuch ſublime Truths, as tranſcend the Reach of human Wiſdom; thereby to humble the Pride and Haughtineſs of our Reaſon, and thereby to engage us in a cloſer and more diligent Search into ſuch Subjects, as will, every Moment, furniſh us with new Matter, to entertain the buſieſt Contemplation, even to the utmoſt Period of human Life. While therefore we continue in this State, we muſt be content [u] to know in Part: A full and adequate Perception of the Myſteries of our Religion is reſerved, as a principal Ingredient of our Felicity and Happineſs Above, when all the Heights and Depths, which we now ſtand amazed at, ſhall then be made clear and familiar to us; when God ſhall diſplay the hidden Glories of his Nature, the Wonders of his Providence, and the Wiſdom of his Counſels; and, withal, [q] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [r] South's Sermons, Vol. III. [s] Ibid. [t] Ibid.

[u] 1 Cor. xiii. 12.

withal, fortify the Eye of the Soul to such a Degree, as to make it able (so far as the Capacity of an human Intellect can be able) to behold and take them in: When Faith, in short, shall be swallowed up in Vision; and we admitted into that Place, where we shall see Face to Face, and know, even as also we are known.

A Distinction of Things above and against Reason.

To have a right Notion of the Mysteries of our Religion then, we must be careful to distinguish between those Things, that are above Reason, and incomprehensible; and those, that are against Reason, and utterly inconceivable: For * some Things are above Reason, because of their transcendent Excellency, and Distance from us; whereas those, that are against Reason, involve a Contradiction, and have a natural Repugnancy to our Understandings, which cannot conceive any Thing, that is formally impossible: And from hence it will follow, [x] that though we neither can, nor should believe those Things, that are contrary to our Reason; yet we both may, and ought to believe those, that are above it. Apprehend indeed every Thing we must, before we can believe it; we must have some consistent Notion of what is propounded to us, before we can assent to it; but to expect, that we should fully comprehend every Thing we believe, that we should have an adequate Notion of it, and be able to free that Notion from all Appearance of Difficulty and Abstruseness, is to suppose ourselves Gods, and not Men. If then we can but shew, that, in the Christian System, there are no Doctrines, but such as stand clear of all Absurdity and Contradiction; the more abstruse or mysterious they are, the more they deserve our Belief, for this very Reason, [y] because, if what is revealed concerning God, were every Way easy, and adapted to our Comprehension, it could never reach, nor with any Fitness represent that Nature, which we all allow to be incomprehensible.

No Contradiction in the Mysteries of Religion.

The holy Scriptures, for Instance, teach us, that in the Divine Nature (which can be but one) there are three distinct Persons, to whom are ascribed the same Attributes and Perfections, the same Worship and Adoration: This indeed is a Doctrine above our Comprehension, as to the Manner how three should be one, and one three; [z] but still we affirm, that there is no Contradiction in it, if we will but distinguish between Numbers and the Nature of Things. For three to be one indeed is a Contradiction in Numbers; but, whether an infinite Nature can communicate itself to three different Subsistences, without such a Division, as is among created Beings, must not be determined by bare Numbers, but by the absolute Perfections of the Divine Nature, which must be owned to be above our Comprehension. The holy Scriptures teach us, that the Son of God was made Flesh, and dwelt among us, and that therefore our Redeemer was both God and Man in one Person. This we own is, in its own Nature, one of the great Mysteries of Godliness, as St Paul calls it; but then we must remember, that, in Reality, it is not much more difficult, than the Union of the Soul and Body in all Mankind, which, how unaccountable soever it may be to our Reason and Imagination, yet it is too certain, in Fact, to be called in Question. Once more, the Holy Scriptures teach us, that our Saviour Christ, who was both God and Man in one Person, became the Redeemer of the World, offered himself a Propitiation for Sinners to his heavenly Father, and that, upon the Father's Acceptance thereof, depends the new Covenant, and all the great Benefits contained in it. This, in many Respects, is a Mystery too, and what we could not have known, had it not been revealed to us; but now, that it is revealed, 'tis far from deserving the Imputation of being absurd. [a] That all Mankind are Sinners, and fallen from their primitive Integrity, not only the Scripture, but the constant Experience of our own irregular Appetites, the Wickedness of the World in past Ages, and the known Complaints of the wisest Philosophers, are but too sad and too convincing Demonstrations. Now since this was our Condition, and God was minded to rescue us from it, but entirely at his Liberty, in what Method to effect it; since the Soul of our Saviour Christ was a free immaculate Being, that might voluntarily suffer for us, if he pleased, and, by the Dignity of his Nature, inhance the Value of his Sufferings to the full Pardon of our Sins, upon his Father's Acceptance of a vicarious Sacrifice; there appears nothing in this Doctrine of Christ's Satisfaction (now that we have it fully revealed to us) but what corresponds with common Reason, and all the judicial Proceedings among Mankind.

These are some of the principal Doctrines we profess; and being they are free (when rightly considered) from all Appearance of Contradiction, we may appeal to the

* Bates's Harmony. [x] Whiston's Essays. [y] Young's Sermons, Vol. II. [z] Stillingfleet's Sermons. [a] Whiston, ibid.

the Judgment of any conſiderate Perſon, [b] whether it be not for the Dignity and Advantage of Religion, that ſome Articles of it exceed the largeſt human Comprehenſion: Whether we ſhould entertain the ſame awful Impreſſions of the Divine Majeſty, if the Perfections of his Nature and Operations were only ſuch, as we could ſee to the End of: Whether it does not raiſe the Value of Man's Redemption, to have it brought about by Miracles of Mercy, not only without Example, but even beyond our preſent Underſtanding. Had all theſe Things been leſs, we ſhould indeed have known them better; but then, ſo much as we abate of their Myſteriouſneſs, to bring them down to our Capacity, ſo much we impair their Dignity, and weaken the Power of them upon our Affections. It is therefore the very Commendation (as we ſaid before) and Excellency of theſe Doctrines, that they are ſo far above us; and we ought to eſteem it an Inſtance of the Divine Goodneſs, no leſs than Wiſdom, ſo to have tempered his Revelations, that we want no Knowledge fit to engage our Piety and holy Wonder, and yet have not ſo much, as ſhould deſtroy our Humility and godly Reverence; and, upon the whole, have Reaſon to believe, it could not have been better, nay, probably not near ſo well, if either leſs had been diſcovered to us, or leſs concealed from us.

THUS we have conſidered the Nature, the Evidence, and the Reaſonableneſs of Faith; and ſhould now proceed to enquire into the Power and Efficacy of it; how it influences the Minds and Manners of Men, and, upon what Accounts, it is made the federal Condition of our Salvation; but that there is a ſeeming Repugnancy in the Sentiments of two great Apoſtles concerning this Doctrine, which (before we come to that) we ſhall endeavour to reconcile. St Paul, writing to the Chriſtians at Rome, concerning the Nature and Neceſſity of Faith, [c] that a Man is juſtified by it, without the Deeds of the Law: St James, writing to the Chriſtians, that lived among the diſperſed Jews, concludes quite the contrary, [d] ye ſee then how that by Works a Man is juſtified, and not by Faith only: The one affirms that Salvation is to be attained not by working, but by believing; the other as reſolutely affirms not by believing, but by working. St Paul proves his Doctrine by the Example of Abraham, [e] to whom Faith was imputed for Righteouſneſs; and St James makes uſe of the ſelf-ſame Argument to prove his likewiſe, for [f] was not Abraham our Foreſather, ſays he, juſtified by Works, when he offered up Iſaac his Son upon the Altar? Here indeed is a great Appearance of Contradiction, but this Appearance will poſſibly vaniſh, upon our conſidering the different Senſes of the Terms made uſe of by the Apoſtles, as well as the different Scopes, they might have in their reſpective Writings. St Paul and St James reconciled.

[g] 1. NOW the moſt obvious and uſual Signification of the Word Juſtify in holy Scripture, is to receive to Mercy, to abſolve, and acquit from former Tranſgreſſions; ſo that, when God juſtifies any Man, it is by forgiving him his Sins; by accepting, eſteeming, and rewarding him as a righteous Perſon, although, in Reality, he comes far ſhort of that Character. For, indeed, what other Juſtification is the beſt good Man among us capable of? We are all Sinners, and therefore, by a righteous God, cannot be acquitted as innocent; there is no other Way for us to be juſtified therefore, but by having our Sins forgiven, our Puniſhment remitted, and ourſelves graciouſly received to Mercy. Taking the Word in this Senſe then, we muſt farther obſerve, that there is a two-fold Juſtification; the firſt is, when we give up our Names to Chriſt, and take upon us the Profeſſion of his moſt holy Religion in Baptiſm; for then are our Sins waſhed away in the Laver of Regeneration, and ourſelves admitted into a Covenant of Grace and Pardon. This, however, is not a full Juſtification: Our Sins may afterwards be imputed to us, if either in Profeſſion, or Works, we deny that Faith, which we then took upon us: and therefore the ſecond, and indeed our compleat Juſtification is not till the Day of Judgment, when God will for ever acquit from Guilt, and free from all the Puniſhment of their Offences, thoſe, who continue faithful to that Covenant, which they entered into at their Baptiſm.

2. THE Word Faith, or Belief in Scripture, has many different Significations; three of which we need only here ſingle out, as the moſt uſual, and moſt applicable to the Caſe in Hand. The firſt is, when Faith is put to ſignify a bare Aſſent of the Mind to ſome revealed Propoſition. This, indeed, is the moſt genuine Senſe of the Word, and in this Senſe it is that St James uſes it, when he makes it unavailable to the Juſtification of any Man: But then, 2. There is a larger Signification, frequently occurring occurring in St Paul's Epiſtles, where it denotes, not only a bare Belief in the Goſpel-Truths, but likewiſe a Life led anſwerable to ſuch a Belief, and adorned with ſuch Virtues and Evangelical Graces, as are the proper Effects of it: And therefore,

[b] Stanhope's Sermons. [c] Rom. iii. 28. [d] James ii. 24. [e] Rom. iv. 22.
[f] James ii. 21. [g] Blackhall's Sermons.

3. When it is ſet in Contrapoſition to the Law, it generally means the whole Complex of Chriſtianity; viz. our believing the Revelation, and truſting in the Promiſes, and endeavouring to follow the Precepts of our holy Religion: In which latter Senſes are thoſe Paſſages to be underſtood, which make Juſtification the Effect of Faith.

3. THERE is the like Ambiguity in the Word Works; for ſometimes it is put to ſignify thoſe moral Doctrines of Piety, Juſtice, and Charity, &c. that are required under the Goſpel; ſometimes thoſe ritual Obſervances, that were in Force under the Law; ſometimes it is taken for a perfect and unſinning Obedience, ſuch as may challenge the Reward as a Debt; and at others, for a ſincere Endeavour only to pleaſe God, without any Notion of Merit, or Expectance of Reward (but through the Divine Grace and Beneficence) for what is done. Theſe Obſervations being premiſed, there may be ſeveral Ways of ſettling the Difference between the two Apoſtles; for,

1. WHEREAS we obſerved, that there is properly a twofold Juſtification, one when we are admitted to Baptiſm, and the other, when we are acquitted at the Day of Judgment: Suppoſe at preſent, that by Faith and Works both the Apoſtles mean the ſame Things; yet if they do not ſpeak of the ſame Juſtification; if St Paul, when he ſpeaks of Juſtification by Faith only, means the firſt Juſtification, which is diſpenſed to us in Baptiſm; and St James, when he ſpeaks of Juſtification by Works, in Conjunction with Faith, means the ſecond and final Juſtification at the laſt Day; there is plainly no Contrariety between them. They both ſpeak Truth, becauſe, to be admitted at firſt into the Covenant of Grace by Baptiſm, nothing more than Faith, or a full Perſuaſion of the Truth of Chriſtianity, is expected; but then, to be pronounced guiltleſs at the Bar of Heaven, a virtuous and godly Converſation, or a Life led anſwerable to ſuch a Perſuaſion, is certainly required.

2. AGAIN, Faith, as we ſaid, ſignifies ſometimes the Chriſtian Religion, ſometimes a Belief of the Goſpel-Truths, and, over and above that, ſometimes ſuch a Life and Converſation as becometh ſuch a Belief. Suppoſe then that both the Apoſtles uſe the Word Juſtify always in the ſame Senſe; yet if St Paul by Faith includes all, that St James would have us underſtand by Faith and Works too, then is there again no Contrariety in their Doctrines, for both aſſert the ſame Thing.

3. ONCE more, Works, as we ſaid, are known to ſignify ſometimes the Obſervance of legal Ceremonies, ſometimes the Merit of good Works, and ſometimes a ſincere Endeavour to pleaſe God in all Manner of holy Living. Suppoſe then that theſe two Apoſtles uſe theſe Words in different Senſes; St Paul, by the Works, which he rejects, means the Performance of legal Ordinances, or the Merit of good Works; and St James, by the Works, which he requires, means only an Evangelical Obedience to God's Precepts; though there be a Diverſity, yet is there plainly no Contrariety in what they affirm. They do not both indeed affirm the ſame Thing; but what they both affirm, is both conſiſtent and undeniably true. By Ritual Performances, ſays St Paul, we are not juſtified, becauſe they are uſeleſs and unneceſſary, they cannot make the Comers thereunto perfect, neither hath God required them of us now; or, (take him in the other Senſe) by the Merit of good Works we are not juſtified, becauſe our beſt Deeds are ſo full of Sin and Imperfection, that it is of God's gracious Mercy alone, that we are not condemned for them: But this hinders not, what the other Apoſtle aſſerts, from being true, by Works a Man is juſtified, always meaning not the Works of the Law, i. e. not the Obſervances of the Levitical Diſpenſation, or ſuch Works, as are ſuppoſed to be meritorious, and to need no Mercy, no Repentance, no Humiliation, and no Appeal to Grace and Favour; but always meaning Works, that are an Obedience to God by the Meaſures of a good Will, and a ſincere Endeavour, and Faith in the Lord Jeſus.

THUS, take the Words which Way we will, the Apoſtles cannot be ſaid to contradict one another. If St Paul, by the Faith, which he makes the ſole Condition of our Juſtification, means a lively and active Faith, which approves itſelf by a ready Obedience, he means thereby the ſame Thing, that St James does by Faith and Works both; and conſequently affirms the ſame, viz. that a virtuous Life, as well as a right Belief, is made the Condition of Man's Salvation. Or taking it otherwiſe, that the Works and Juſtification, here under Debate, in St Paul are of one Sort, and in St James of another; then, indeed, are the Concluſions different; they do not both affirm the ſame Thing, but what they both affirm implies no Fallacy, no Inconſiſtency, no Contradiction to each other. St James aſſerts, that the Works of Piety, Juſtice, and Charity, &c. are requiſite to our Juſtification; and St Paul aſſerts, that the Merit of theſe Works, or the Performance of the Jewiſh Ceremonies, is not: And, as to this, they are doubtleſs both in the Right, though in arguing on different Occaſions, and to different Perſons, they propoſe their Arguments not in the ſame Manner. St Paul, writing to Chriſtians, [k] among whom were ſeveral Jewiſh Converts, who ſtill retained a Veneration for the Moſaick Ordinances, and thought that ſome of them (Circumciſion eſpecially) were ſtill neceſſary to Salvation, even under the Diſpenſation of the Goſpel, and being minded to antidote them againſt the Infection of ſuch erroneous Opinions, was naturally led to frame his Diſcourſe againſt Juſtification by Works of the Law; and, on the contrary, to aſcribe it chiefly to Faith in Chriſt, in his Death, and in his Doctrine, without the Addition of ſuch Works: Whereas St James writing to Chriſtians, among whom were many Libertines, who denied the Neceſſity of a godly Life, and maintained, that the outward Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, and a bare ſpeculative Faith, was enough to ſave them, intended to caution them againſt ſuch dangerous Poſitions; and thereupon, in like Manner, was naturally led to declare himſelf againſt a Faith deſtitute of good Works; and, on the contrary, to maintain, that the great Thing neceſſary to Salvation was Chriſtian Obedience. In a Word, [l] the one ſpeaks profeſſedly of the Works of the Jewiſh Religion, and the other of the Works of the Chriſtian; and therefore there can be no Contradiction between them, ſince it is plain, that the Faith of the Chriſtian Religion may avail to juſtify a Man without the Works of the Jewiſh Religion, (which is the Aſſertion of St Paul) though it cannot do ſo, without the Works of the Chriſtian Religion; (which is the Aſſertion of St James;) and therefore where St James extols Works, he means the Moral and Evangelical; where St Paul decries them, he means the Jewiſh and Ceremonial; for otherwiſe, when he has to do with ſuch wicked and erroneous Chriſtians, as retain the Faith in Ungodlineſs, he tells them plainly (even in thoſe Writings, where he ſeems to depreciate Works moſt) that [m] in Jeſus Chriſt nothing will avail them, but Faith working by Love; for [n] tho' I have all Faith, ſo that I could remove Mountains, and have not Charity, I am nothing; and therefore, ſays he to Titus, [o] This is a faithful Saying, and theſe Things I will that thou affirm conſtantly, that they, who have believed in God, might be careful to maintain good Works.

The Sum of the whole Matter.

IF then, at laſt, it come to be enquired, why Faith ſhould ſo frequently be made the Condition, not of our Juſtification only, but [p] of our eternal Happineſs and Salvation; the Anſwer is——That as Faith firſt puts us in the Way of Salvation, by procuring our Admiſſion into the Church of Chriſt, and a Participation of the Privileges belonging to that Society; ſo it is the Spring and Foundation of all the Obedience, we afterwards perform, and, when lively and conſtant, never fails of its Effect. [q] That Faith in God is the Foundation of all the Services we perform to him, is a Propoſition of undoubted Authority, for [r] he that cometh to God (as the Apoſtle lays it down) muſt believe that he is a Rewarder of them, that diligently ſeek to pleaſe him; and, from this Principle, he ſhews that the Patriarchs, and holy People, before the Revelation of the Goſpel, [s] obtained Teſtimony, that they were righteous, and, in the moſt difficult Inſtances, [t] choſe rather to ſuffer Affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleaſures of Sin for a Seaſon. And that Faith in Chriſt is equally the Foundation of all our Obedience, is manifeſt from all thoſe Places in Scripture, where it is ſtiled [u] the Work of Faith, by Virtue of which we are enabled to [x] overcome the World, to mortify our inordinate Affections, and [y] to quench all the fiery Darts of the Devil.

Why Faith is made a Condition of Salvation.

[k] Allen, on the two Covenants. [l] Clarke's Eſſays. [m] Gal. v. 6. [n] 1 Cor. xiii. 2. [o] Tit. iii. 8. [p] Vid. Eph. ii. 8, 9. Rom. iii. 28. Tit. iii. 5. [q] Whitby, in his Preface to the Epiſtle to the Galatians. [r] Heb. xi. 6. [s] Ibid. ver. 4. [t] Ibid. ver. 25. [u] 2 Theſ. i. 11. [x] 1 John v. 5. [y] Eph. vi. 16.

As the Spring of our Obedience.

AND indeed, if we conſider the great Objects of our Faith, the Bleſſings promiſed to the Obedient, and the Evils threatened to the Wicked; that the Bleſſings allotted to the Obedient exceed vaſtly any Thing we here enjoy; the Puniſhments entailed upon the Wicked are far more laſting and intolerable, than any Thing we here can ſuffer; and if, at the ſame Time, we believe that Chriſt our Saviour, who promiſed theſe Bleſſings, and threatened theſe Puniſhments, was really a Divine Perſon, and could therefore reveal nothing, but what was true, nor promiſe or threaten any Thing, but what he both can, and will make good to the utmoſt; it will be impoſſible for us to prefer a leſs Good, before the greateſt Bleſſings, or to incur the worſt of Miſery, in order to eſcape a leſs Evil, ſo long as the Faith, or a full Perſuaſion of theſe Things, is preſent to our Minds. [z] It would be impoſſible for Men to value any Thing, in Compariſon to the Joys of Eternity, ſuppoſing that they had a diſtinct Sight and Feeling of them: It would be impoſſible for them not to flee Sin, and dread every guilty Approach towards it, more than they do Racks and Tortures; did but the ghaſtly Scene open, and ſet before their Eyes the Pains and Anguiſh, the inſupportable and everlaſting Wrath, which the Damn'd endure; no Temptation, though otherwiſe never ſo inſinuating, would be able to make its Way, and ſeduce us, with ſuch a Proſpect as this before our Eyes. Now Faith is the Evidence of Things not ſeen; when it is ſtrong and lively, it brings diſtant Things to view, and makes Futurity preſent to the Imagination: And therefore we may lay it down for a certain Truth, that when we neglect to do what our Lord has declared abſolutely neceſſary to obtain, and to ſecure our eternal Intereſt, and venture upon the Commiſſion of what he threatens with everlaſting Miſery, that we do not at that Time actually believe theſe Things; we have not a full and vigorous Perſuaſion of them upon our Minds; we are hurried away with the Impetuoſity of our Paſſions, and the Preſence of the Temptation, which blind the Eye of Faith, and remove the Conſideration of all diſtant Objects from its Sight.

Means to improve it.

'TIS not enough then, that we are convinced in our Judgment of the Truth of the great Doctrines of Religion. [a] We muſt, by conſtant Meditation, endeavour to fix them indelibly in our Hearts, that they may, with more Prevalency, than worldly Objects can, move our Paſſions, and excite our Affections. 'Tis not enough, that we ſlightly believe the Exiſtence of a God, but we muſt preſent him frequently to our Thoughts in the moſt lively Colours of Glory and Majeſty; conſider him, as that Supreme Being, [b] who hath meaſured the Waters in the Hollow of his Hand, and meted out Heaven with a Span; who hath comprehended the Duſt of the Earth in a Meaſure, and weighed the Mountains in Scales, and the Hills in a Balance: Conſider him, as that all-powerful Being, [c] before whom, the Pillars of the Earth tremble, and are aſtoniſhed at his Reproof; before whom [d] all Nations are as nothing, and are counted leſs than nothing and Vanity. 'Tis not enough, that we believe in general the Providence of God, but we muſt think of him always, as actually preſent, obſerving all our Words and Actions, and [e] underſtanding our Thoughts afar off; not enough that we believe a Judgment to come, but we muſt frequently repreſent to ourſelves the Solemnity and Terror of that great Day, and imagine that we ſee our Saviour ſitting in Judgment (as [f] in the prophetical Alluſion) with his Throne like the fiery Flame, and his Wheels as burning Fire; a fiery Stream iſſuing from before him, Thouſand Thouſands miniſtring unto him, and ten thouſand Times ten thouſand ſtanding before him; the Judgment ſet, and the Books opened. 'Tis not enough, laſtly, to believe ſlightly, and in general, a State of Reward and Puniſhment for Virtue and Vice, but we muſt meditate frequently on the Happineſs of thoſe, who ſhall be admitted [g] to the heavenly Jeruſalem, to the general Aſſembly of the Firſt-born, to an innumerable Company of Angels, to God the Judge of all, and to Jeſus the Mediator of the new Covenant: And, on the contrary, meditate ſeriouſly on the Miſery of thoſe, who ſhall be caſt [k] into the Lake of Fire and Brimſtone, where the Worm dieth not, and the Fire is not quenched; and where [l] they ſhall be tormented Day and Night, for ever and ever. Theſe Conſiderations, if ſo fixed in the Mind, as to be always preſent to our Thoughts, and influencing our Affections, cannot fail of being a ſtrong Preſervative againſt Temptations of every Kind, and (by the Aſſiſtance of Divine Grace) an effectual Means to make us [m] conſtant and immoveable, and always abounding in the Work of the Lord.

2. ANOTHER

[z] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV. [a] Clarke's Eſſays. [b] Iſa. xl. 12. [c] Job xxvi. 11. [d] Iſa. lx. 17. [e] Pſal. cxxxix. 2. [f] Dan. vii. 9, &c. [g] Heb. xii. 22, &c. [k] Mark ix. 44. [l] Rev. xx. 10. [m] 1 Cor. xv. 58.

2. ANOTHER Condition of the Covenant of Grace on our Parts is, Repentance, founded upon the Promiſe of Pardon and Forgiveneſs on God's; for ſuch was the Stipulation between God and Chriſt——[n] That, in Caſe God would engage to forgive the Sin of our firſt Parents, and from their Poſterity to remove the Imputation of Guilt; and, conſidering the State of their degenerate Nature, would be pleaſed to be merciful to their Tranſgreſſions, and ready, at all Times, to releaſe them from their Obligation to Puniſhment; he, on his Part, would undertake to fulfil the Law, which they were unable to do; to bear all the Penalty due to their Diſobedience; and, once for all, make a ſtanding Compenſation for what they, in all Ages, ſhould do amiſs; provided, that they, on their Part, whenever they found themſelves led away by Temptations, and deviating from the Path of God's Commands, ſhould, upon their firſt Recollection, return to their Obedience; and, by all the proper Indications of Sorrow and Repentance, make the beſt Reparation they could. For this is the Tenor of the Covenant on God's Part, that [o] he hath ſet forth Chriſt, to be a Propitiation, through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteouſneſs, for the Remiſſion of Sins, that are paſt, that he might be juſt, and the Juſtifier of them, that believe in Jeſus; and this is the Condition annexed on our's, that we ſhould [p] repent and be baptized every one of us, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for the Remiſſion of Sin; for God having promiſed [q] that Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins ſhould be preached in his Name among all Nations, the Promiſe is to us, and to our Children (as the Apoſtle tells us) and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God ſhall call. The ſecond Condition, Repentance.

[r] NOW, in order to ſtate the right Notion of Repentance, we muſt obſerve, that, the Apoſtles of our bleſſed Lord, preaching either to the Heathens, or unbelieving Jews, do conſtantly exhort them to repent, as a proper Introduction into the Chriſtian Diſpenſation; becauſe, without a due Senſe of the Wickedneſs of their former State, they could not poſſibly be induced to believe in Chriſt, and ſo initiated into a Religion, ſo contrary to their avowed Notions. We muſt obſerve farther, that as ſoon as Men complied with this firſt Condition, being ſenſible of their former Impieties, and thereupon admitted into the Church by Baptiſm; the Exhortations of the Apoſtles take another Turn, and inſiſt chiefly on the Newneſs of Life, and Perfection of Virtue, required in Chriſtians; on the Danger of relapſing, and the Neceſſity of working out their Salvation with Fear and Trembling: And from hence we may infer, that, as the frequent Mention of Repentance was made to thoſe chiefly, who were unconverted and Unbelievers, but to ſuch, as were become Believers and Chriſtians, the Practice of all Virtue, and the poſitive Improvement in all, that is good and praiſe-worthy, was recommended; ſo, to us, who are adult Chriſtians, and have our Senſes exerciſed to diſcern both Good and Evil, Milk does not ſo properly belong, as ſtrong Meat; or, (as the Apoſtle explains the Metaphor) the firſt Principles of the Doctrines of Chriſt, ſuch as Repentance from dead Works, and Faith towards God, are not ſo ſtrictly the Conditions we are under, as a Growth in Grace and Progreſſion to Perfection. The primitive Notion of Repentance.

THIS, however, muſt be owned with Grief of Heart, that, ſuch is the Weakneſs of our Nature to betray, and the Subtlety of the Tempter to ſupplant us, the Force of our Paſſions to blind, and the Agreeableneſs of Objects to allure us, that in many Things we offend all, and, in Strictneſs of Speech, there is none that doth Good, no not one. The Goſpel therefore would in vain profeſs to bring Salvation to mortal Men, if every wilful Deviation from the Rules of Virtue were ſo unpardonable, that no future Amendment would be ſufficient to entitle the Sinner to the Forgiveneſs of what is paſt. Repentance after Baptiſm.

IN the Primitive Church indeed, there was [s] a Sect of Men, who, upon a miſtaken Interpretation of ſome Paſſages of the Epiſtle of St Paul to the Hebrews, contended, that there was no more Place of Repentance allowed to thoſe, who, after Baptiſm, ſhould fall into any wilful and deliberate Sin. In Baptiſm, they agreed indeed, that all Sin and Wickedneſs was forgiven, and waſhed away by the Blood of Chriſt, but, Denied by the Novattans.

[n] Scott's Mediator. [o] Rom. iii. 25, 26. [p] Acts ii. 38, 39. [q] Luke xxiv. 47.
[r] Houdley's Terms of Acceptance. [s] The Novatians, ſo called from Novatus, a Prieſt of Carthage, denied Abſolution, not only to Apoſtates, and ſuch, as, in the Times of Danger and Perſecution, renounced the Chriſtain Religion, but to ſuch, as had been guilty of any notorious Crime, and withdrew from the Communion of the Church, as thinking it defiled by the Re-admiſſion of Sinners and Apoſtates; though this was not done, till after a long Separation, and ſevere Courſe of Penance, as appears by the Canons of thoſe ancient Councils of Eliberis, Arles, and Ancyra, as alſo the Writings of Tertullian, and others. Vid. Burnet on the Articles, and Payne on Repentance.

but, after that general Remiſſion, if Men ſinned any Way preſumptuouſly, they then affirmed, that there remained no more Sacrifice for Sin; or that, as the Death of Chriſt could not be repeated, ſo they could not obtain any farther Pardon: And therefore how ſincerely ſoever they might repent, there was nothing now to be expected, but a certain fearful looking-for of Judgment, and fiery Indignation. This Opinion, however, is far from comporting well with the Deſcription God gives of his Nature; [t] The Lord, the Lord God, merciful, and gracious, long-ſuffering, and abundant in Goodneſs and Truth, forgiving Iniquities, Tranſgreſſions, and Sins; with the ſolemn Declaration, he makes of his Will, [u] as I live, ſaith the Lord, I have no Pleaſure in the Death of the Wicked, but that the Wicked turn from his Way, and live; and, above all, with that amazing Inſtance of his Mercy, the ſending of his only Son, out of his Boſom, to [x] preach good Tidings unto the Meek, to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim Liberty to the Captives, and the Opening of the Priſon to them, that are bound, as the Prophet deſcribes the Bleſſings of the Evangelical State in a beautiful Variety of Metaphors. And therefore when our bleſſed Saviour makes this general Invitation to Sinners, [y] come unto me all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give you Reſt; when he gives his Apoſtles Commiſſion [z] to preach Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins among all Nations, [a] being willing that none ſhould periſh, but that all ſhould come to Repentance; when, purſuant to that Commiſſion, St Peter [b] exhorts Simon Magus, whoſe Sin was deteſtable enough in all Conſcience, to repent of that his Wickedneſs, and gives him Encouragement to hope, that he ſhould obtain Forgiveneſs; when St Paul reminds Timothy, [c] to inſtruct in Meekneſs thoſe that oppoſe themſelves, if God peradventure will give them Repentance to the Acknowledgment of the Truth, and that they may recover themſelves from the Snare of the Devil; and (to inſtance no farther) when he adviſes the Galatians, that [d] if any Man were overtaken in a Fault, they, who were ſpiritual, ſhould reſtore ſuch an one in the Spirit of Meekneſs, conſidering themſelves, leſt they alſo be tempted; when theſe, and ſuch like Paſſages every where meet us in the Goſpel, 'tis plain, that, neither our bleſſed Saviour, nor his Apoſtles, had any ſuch Perſuaſion of the Irremiſſibleneſs of Sins, committed after Baptiſm. The Truth is, * that none, who continue obſtinately in the Commiſſion of Sin, might delude themſelves with the vain Expectations of Pardon; St Paul hath warned them not to be deceived; [e] be not deceived, ſays he, neither Fornicators, nor Idolaters, nor Adulterers, nor Effeminate, nor Abuſers of themſelves with Mankind, nor Thieves, nor Covetous, nor Revilers, nor Extortioners, ſhall inherit the Kingdom of God. But on the other Side, that none, who have been guilty of the moſt abominable Iniquities, might, upon leaving their Sins, and applying themſelves to the Mercy of God, through the Merits of Chriſt, for Forgiveneſs, deſpair of Pardon, he immediately ſubjoins, and ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of our God.

Unjuſtly, as appears from Scripture.

[f] THE Primitive Chriſtians, indeed, thought no Promiſes too great, nor any Threatenings too ſevere, whereby they might engage ſuch, as had eſcaped the Pollution of Sin by Baptiſm, to preſerve their Innocence; but yet they did not immediately give up to Deſpair thoſe, who had unhappily violated it. [g] They enjoined them indeed ſtrict Penance, and, for ſome time, excluded them the Communion of Saints; but [h] after the Puniſhment, which was inflicted by many, had been ſufficient to reduce them to Repentance, they then put in Practice the Apoſtle's Direction, to receive them, and to comfort them, leſt peradventure they ſhould be ſwallowed up with over much Sorrow. They taught, that the Holy Word and Church of God always admitted of true Repentance; that to every one, who heartily and ſincerely repents, God ſets open a Door of Pardon, and the Holy Spirit returns again into a Mind purified from its Pollution; that, out of his Compaſſion, God will be patient and merciful, and keep the Invitation, which he made by his Son; and that therefore, as it will nothing avail a Man to have been formerly righteous, if he at laſt grows wicked; ſo he, that that has formerly lived wickedly, may afterwards, by Repentance and renewed Obedience, blot out his paſt Tranſgreſſions, and attain to the Crown of Virtue and Immortality.

And the Practice of the Primitive Chriſtians.

WHEN therefore the Author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews tells us, [i] that it is impoſſible for thoſe, who were once enlightened, and have been made Partakers of the Holy

Some Paſſages in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews explained.

[t] Exod. xxxiv. 6. [u] Ezek. xxxiii. 11. [x] Iſa. lxi. 1. [y] Matth. xi. 28. [z] Luke xxiv. 47. [a] 2 Pet. iii. 9. [b] Acts viii. 22. [c] 2 Tim. ii. 25, 26. [d] Gal. vi. 1.
* Biſhop Smalridge's Sermons. [e] 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10, 11. [f] Clarke's Eſſays. [g] Cave's Primitive Chriſtianity. [h] 2 Cor. ii. 6, 7. [i] Heb. vi. 4, &c.

Holy Ghoſt, &c. if they ſhall fall away, [k] and ſin wilfully, after they have received the Knowledge of the Truth, to renew them again unto Repentance; we muſt remember, 1. That [l] it is very uſual in Scripture to expreſs that by impoſſible, which is extremely difficult, or impoſſible for human Strength, unaſſiſted by divine Grace, to accompliſh. Thus, in the Caſe of [m] rich Men's entering into the Kingdom of God, our bleſſed Saviour explains himſelf, by ſaying, that, though the Thing be impoſſible, with Regard to the Temptations, ſuch Perſons are liable to, and their natural Inability to reſiſt them; [n] yet the Things, that are impoſſible with Men, are poſſible with God, i. e. he, by the prevailing Influences of his Grace, may wean their Hearts from the World, and enable them to overcome their darling Inclinations: And, in like Manner, though Men, who reject and quench the Holy Spirit by Sin, cannot renew themſelves, yet God can give them the Heart and Power of Repentance and Renovation: And therefore the Word Impoſſible here is not to be taken in a ſtrict and rigorous, but comparative Senſe only; even to denote the great Labour and Pains, the many Struggles and Conteſts, the frequent Mortifications and Self-denials, it muſt neceſſarily coſt the wilful and habitual Sinner before he can be born again, (as the Scripture expreſſes it) [o] put off the old Man, which is corrupt, according to the deceitful Luſts; and put on the new, which, after God, is created in Righteouſneſs and true Holineſs. To remove this Difficulty effectually, we muſt remember, 2. That theſe Texts to the Hebrews are meant, not of every Sort of wilful Offenders, but of ſuch only as revolt, and fly off entirely from the Faith of the Goſpel. For this Reaſon they are branded with the Name [p] of Adverſaries, of ſuch as crucify the Son of God afreſh, as trample him under Foot, count the Blood of the Covenant an unholy Thing, and do Deſpight to the Spirit of Grace; and theſe Men, to be ſure, it is impoſſible to renew, while they continue in their Apoſtacy, becauſe they have caſt off their only Remedy. Faith, we all know, is the indiſpenſable Condition of Pardon; but this they have rejected, and diſclaimed, and, conſequently, are not within the Covenant, nor under the Influence of Grace. They have denied the Lord that bought them; they have renounced the whole Religion of Chriſt; and therefore cannot poſſibly reap any Benefit from the Sacrifice of that Blood, which they eſteem common, and no Sacrifice at all; or from the Merits of him, whom they tread under Foot, as if he were ſtill dead, and lying in the Grave; and conſequently account him a vile Miſcreant and Impoſtor. [q] But the Caſe is far otherwiſe with thoſe, who are engaged in a ſinful Courſe, and yet have not made ſuch dangerous Defection, or thrown off the Profeſſion of Chriſtianity. They may ſee their Folly, and acknowledge the Merit of their Saviour's Atonement; they may comply with the good Motions of the Spirit, which they have too long reſiſted, though they have not formally done publick Deſpight to him. There is a mighty Difference between walking unworthy of the Chriſtian Profeſſion, and being open and avowed Adverſaries to it; between a Converſation unbecoming the Goſpel, and Principles, that profeſſedly overthrow it: And, conſequently, thoſe Paſſages in Scripture, which ſtrike at one of theſe, and declare it incapable of Forgiveneſs, need not, muſt not, be applied to the other, ſo as to exclude from all Hope and Comfort, a Caſe ſo very much unlike it. There is one Caſe indeed, that of Blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt, which (as the Scriptures teſtify) excludes from Repentance; and, yet, ſince ſome learned Men have mollified the Goſpel-Expreſſions, ſo as even to bring this Sin within the Compaſs of Forgiveneſs, it may not be amiſs to enquire a little into the particular Nature of it, and upon what Account the Scriptures have made it ſo peculiarly unpardonable.

NOTHING certainly can be plainer in Scripture, than that the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, which our Saviour mentions as exempt from Pardon, is to be underſtood of the Phariſees, imputing the Miracles, which he wrought by the Power of the Holy Ghoſt, to the Power of the Devil; and yet, I know not how, a great many learned Men have made Shift to miſtake it. [r] A Denial of Chriſt's Divinity, a Denial of his Religion for Fear of Suffering, a wilful Oppoſition to the Truth, a malicious envying other Men's Graces, groſs Relapſes into Sin, or final Impenitence, and Perſeverance therein, have, ſome by one, and ſome by others, been made the Characteriſticks of this Sin; and yet the very Occaſion of our Saviour's Diſcourſe concerning it cannot but give us quite different Conceptions. He had juſt now, [s] healed one poſſeſſed of a Devil, blind and dumb, whereat the People were much amazed, and and began to ſay among themſelves, Is not this the Son of David, i. e. the promiſed Meſſias? Which when the Phariſees perceived, they gave this vile and malicious Turn to the Miracle; this Fellow does not caſt out Devils, but by Belzebub, the Prince of the Devils: Which Calumny our Saviour undertakes to confute, by ſhewing how unlikely a Thing it was, that the Devil ſhould lend him his Power to uſe it againſt himſelf, and then proceeds to diſcourſe of this Sin; [e] Wherefore I ſay unto you, all Manner of Sin and Blaſphemy (which is of another Nature, and not aimed particularly againſt the Holy Ghoſt) ſhall be forgiven unto Men, but the Blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt ſhall not be forgiven unto them. The Phariſees therefore are the Perſons charged with the Sin, and the Sin is their attributing what was done by the Finger of God to a diabolical Power.

The Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, what.

[k] Heb. x. 26. [l] Payne, on Repentance, and Stanhope's Sermons. [m] Matth. xix. 23. [n] Luke xviii. 27. [o] Epheſ. iv. 24. [p] Heb. x. 27, 29. [q] Stanhope, ibid. [r] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. and Payne, on Repentance. [s] Matth. xii. 22.

The Heinouſneſs of it.

[f] OUR bleſſed Saviour, to ſhew that he was ſent from God, wrought Miracles, ſuch as did plainly evidence a Divine Power and Preſence accompanying him. Theſe Miracles (to which he frequently appeals) the Phariſees were Eye-witneſſes of, and therefore could not deny them; yet ſuch was their Hatred and Oppoſition to him, and his Doctrine, that, rather than allow his Divine Miſſion, they were reſolved to aſcribe all he did to the Power of the Devil: Hereby intending to deſtroy the whole Credit of Chriſtianity; and, by making him a Confederate with Satan, to repreſent his Religion as the Work and Contrivance of Hell, and ſuch as could tend only to the Miſchief and Deſtruction of Mankind. [g] To ſlander and calumniate the Son of Man was a great Sin, no doubt, but ſuch as might more eaſily be forgiven them, becauſe of his State of Humiliation, and poor Appearance, which might occaſion their Diſeſteem: But to repreſent the Spirit of God as an Apoſtate-Angel, and whatever he did for the Good and Salvation of Mankind, as the Work and Intrigue of the Devil, is a Sin of ſuch an horrid Nature, as may well deſerve a particular Exemption from the general Promiſe and Covenant of Pardon.

How it becomes unpardonable.

[h] GOD, no doubt, can, if he will, work ſo powerfully upon the Minds of Men, by his Grace and Spirit, as to convince the moſt Obſtinate; and, ſuppoſing them to be convinced and repent, it cannot be denied, but that they would be forgiven: And therefore, when our Saviour ſays, that ſuch, as blaſpheme againſt the Holy Ghoſt, ſhall not be forgiven, it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that he means, that, when Men are come to ſuch a Degree of inveterate Malice, God (as he juſtly may) will withdraw his Grace from them, and leave them to the Biaſs of their perverſe Minds, which will inſenſibly engage them in a farther Oppoſition to the Truth, and ſink them finally into Perdition; ſo that, being deſerted of God, and, for Want of the neceſſary Aid of his Grace, continuing finally impenitent, they become incapable of Forgiveneſs both in this World, and that which is to come. The ſhort then of all is this —— [i] That the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt is unpardonable, not becauſe there is not a Sufficiency of Merit in Chriſt to atone for it, or of Mercy in God the Father to forgive it, but becauſe thoſe, who commit it, are of ſuch a refractory and incorrigible Spirit, that they reſiſt the laſt and utmoſt Means of their Conviction and Amendment, and conſequently neither will, nor can, repent.

Whether it can be committed now.

WHATEVER Mollifications therefore [k] ſome learned Men may deviſe, yet our Saviour's Words are ſo expreſs, and repeated with ſo much Earneſtneſs, and the Nature of the Sin ſo heinous, and ſo repugnant to the Method of Man's Salvation, that it well may be judged a Caſe exempted from the general Act of Pardon: But then, whether this Sin may be committed now-a-days, or was peculiar to the Times of our Saviour's Miniſtry, is a Queſtion, that well deſerves our Conſideration. Now, ſince the Formality of this Sin lay in reſiſting the Evidence of Miracles, wrought in Confirmation of the Truth of Chriſtianity, and maliciouſly imputing the Things, which were done by the Power of the Holy Ghoſt, to the Power of the Devil, there ſeems not to be that Reaſon for confining it ſo ſtrictly to our Saviour's Days; ſince thoſe, who, at any Time, reſiſted the Evidence of Miracles, were chargeable with it, as long as Miracles laſted, which was a conſiderable Time after the Death, both of our Saviour, and of his Apoſtles. [l] The Power of the Holy Ghoſt was ſeen in working Miracles, whenever they were wrought; and therefore, at whatſoever Time this Power was attributed to an Evil Spirit, (as Julian and Celſus both aſcribed the Miracles, which the Apoſtles did, to their great Skill in diabolical Magick) or was any other [e] Matth. xii. 31. [f] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [g] Payne, on Repentance. [h] Tillotſon, ibid.

[i] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [k] Vid. Hammond, upon Matth. xii. and Payne, on Repentance.
[l] Edwards, ibid.

other Way ſpoken againſt, or derided by any, the Perſons, who did this, were chargeable with the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. But it does not therefore follow, that every one, who oppoſes Chriſtianity, or diſputes that Demonſtration of Divine Authority, which accompanies it, is therefore guilty of the ſame Crime. There is a great deal of Difference, in Point of Conviction, between reading an Account of Miracles wrought in Atteſtation of any Thing, and ſeeing them done before our Eyes: And therefore great Caution muſt be uſed, leſt we lay a Stumbling-block before our weaker Brethren, by extending this Sin too far.

What Sins come near it.

THIS, however, muſt be ſaid, for the Terror of thoſe, that dare venture upon the Confines of this dangerous Sin, that, tho' there are ſome particular Circumſtances, which make it peculiar to the firſt Ages of Chriſtianity; [m] yet, even among us, there are ſome great and daring Impieties, that have but too near a Reſemblance of it. Every wilful Act of Sin, eſpecially in a Chriſtian, is, in ſome Senſe, a Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt; 'tis a grieving, a quenching, a reſiſting, and doing Deſpight to the Spirit in Scripture Language; and, therefore, all ſinning againſt the clear Conviction of our Conſciences, and the Motions and Suggeſtions of God's Holy Spirit to the contrary; all Obſtinacy in a vicious Courſe of Living, notwithſtanding the Motives and Arguments of the Goſpel to perſuade Men to Repentance; all profane ſcoffing at Religion, and making a Mock of Sin; all Abuſe of the Scriptures, and ridiculing the holy Word of God; all perverſe Infidelity, and malicious Oppoſition of the Truth, when the Arguments for it are very plain and evident to every impartial Mind, are Crimes of an high Nature, and of a near Affinity to this great and unpardonable Sin; and tho' God, to encourage the Repentance of Men, has not declared them irremiſſible, yet, where they once get Poſſeſſion of a Man, they, by Degrees, ſo waſte the Conſcience, and corrupt the Mind, as to make it incurable. They are, in ſhort, great and grievous Provocations to Almighty God, and, if they be long perſiſted in, we know not how ſoon he may withdraw his Grace from us, and ſuffer us to be hardened through the Deceitfulneſs of Sin.

The Nature of Repentance.

THUS we have conſidered the Univerſality of Repentance, and in what Inſtances only it fails; and now (to enquire farther into the Nature and Qualifications of it) we muſt obſerve, that, in the conſtant and plain Notion of the Scriptures, it is ſuch a virtuous Alteration of the Mind and Purpoſe, as begets a like Change in the Life and Practice, which, beginning in our Thoughts and Reſolutions, is made perfect in our Works and Actions. And, accordingly, thoſe, that have treated on this Subject, have always laid the firſt Foundation of Repentance in the Mind, in the inward working of its Thoughts, and the Shame and Sorrow it conceives, upon the Reflection on its paſt Sins, and the Conſideration of its wretched Condition. So that, [n] when the Heart is ſmitten within, and bleeds (as it were) for thoſe inward Wounds it feels in its own Conſcience; when it vents itſelf in all the ſorrowful Expreſſions of inward Trouble, and mourns and laments for its grievous Wickedneſs; when it is afraid of the Anger and Indignation of that God, whom it has offended, and has a juſt Dread of thoſe Puniſhments, it knows it has deſerved; when it is under great Convictions of the Folly and Evil of its Sins; and is very ſenſible of the ſad Fruits and Conſequences of thoſe Things, whereof it is now aſhamed; when it conſiders how little Benefit and Advantage it ever got by the Commiſſion of them, and to what ſad Account they will turn at laſt, if the End of them proves eternal Death: This inward Senſe and godly Sorrow, if it continue upon the Mind, and goes not off like the Morning Dew, will bring it, not only to Confeſſion, and Humiliation, and afflicting its Soul by faſting, which may be Signs and Attendants ſometimes, but to (what are the proper Parts and Acts of Repentance) firm Purpoſes and Reſolutions of becoming better, hearty Wiſhes, that it had never committed ſuch Offences, and ſincere Vows and Intentions to forſake them all for the future.

Internal.

External.

2. BUT, beſides this Diſpoſition of the Mind, there is an outward Part of Repentance, the forſaking the Sins we are guilty of, and practiſing the contrary Virtues, without which all our Sorrow and inward Repentance will be of no Avail. For, if we conſider the Nature of God, [o] we cannot ſuppoſe that our Sorrow or Grief, which (in the Degree of it) is Miſery itſelf, can, for its own Sake, be acceptable to him. Bare Sorrow is what he rather diſlikes, than likes; but it is that Godly Sorrow only that worketh Amendment and Alteration, which he approves. If we conſider our own own Nature, we cannot but perceive, that all the Movements of our Minds were calculated to influence and govern our Actions; and, therefore, if we cannot but reflect with Sorrow and Concern upon ſome Part of our Conduct, which we find repugnant to the Laws of God, it is certain, that this very Power of Reflection was deſigned to influence our Behaviour for the Time to come; ſince to be ſorry for any Part of our Behaviour implies in it, that it was either unbecoming or ſinful; and to account it unbecoming or ſinful implies in it, that it ought never to be practiſed again: Or, laſtly, if we conſider the Nature of our holy Religion, we ſhall find, that the End and Deſign of it was not to beget in us a little Sorrow for Sin, or Conviction of Guilt, or Dread of Puniſhment, but [p] to teach us to deny Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſts, and to live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent World; that, [q] being made free from Sin, and become the Servants of God, we may have our Fruit unto Holineſs, and our End everlaſting Life.

[m] Payne, on Repentance, and Tillotſon's Serm. Vol. I. [n] Payne, ibid. [o] Hoadley's Terms of Acceptance.

Repentance a Goſpel Doctrine.

THUS, if we conſult the Nature of Things, our Chriſtian Repentance neceſſarily implies, not only Sorrow for having done amiſs, and Reſolutions for better Obedience for the future, but a putting thoſe Reſolutions likewiſe in Practice, by an actual relinquiſhing the Sins, that do beſet us, and an actual proceeding in all the Virtues of a godly Life. Heathens, indeed, might, in ſome Meaſure, have the ſame Notions of Repentance; for Natural Religion tells us, that, when we have offended God, we ought to be ſorry for it, and amend our Ways; but in this is the Doctrine of Repentance peculiar to the Goſpel, that the great Motive and Enforcement of it, the Aſſurance of Pardon and Remiſſion of Sins, through the Merit and Mediation of Jeſus Chriſt, is purely Evangelical. Before the Promulgation of the New Covenant, [r] wherein God has obliged himſelf to pardon us upon our Repentance, ſinful Men, though true Penitents, could never arrive to ſuch a Degree of Security of God's Reconciliation to them, as was neceſſary to ſet their Minds at Reſt, and free them from Anxiety. Some wavering Hopes, perhaps, a poor Penitent might have, upon the Conſideration of the infinite Benignity of the Divine Nature; but the utmoſt Comfort, that he could give himſelf, was that of the penitent King of Nineveh; [s] who can tell, if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce Anger, that we periſh not? But, alas! when a Man's Mind is racked with the Senſe of Guilt, and the Apprehenſions of Divine Wrath, who can tell is ſuch a poor Relief, as muſt neceſſarily leave it extremely anxious and deſponding? But now, upon the Foundation of the Covenant, which Chriſt procured for us, we all can tell, and that with as much Certainty, as that God is true, that, if we do repent, and turn from our evil Ways, God will turn, and repent of his Anger and Diſpleaſure againſt us; and therefore, whatever the Heathen World, living up, as far as they are able, to the Principles of Natural Religion, and, upon any Failure in their Duty, being heartily penitent, may do towards recommending themſelves to the pardoning Grace of God; or whether the Benefits of Chriſt's Death, by ſome ſecret Determination of the Divine Will, may not extend to them, (which are Queſtions wherein we can never come to a certain Reſolution) this muſt be acknowledged by all, [t] that there is a mighty Difference between an Article of Faith, and a Concluſion drawn from a mere probable Conjecture; between a fœderal Right to a Promiſe, and an arbitrary, uncovenanted Act of Divine Grace.

The great Privilege of it.

ALL the Light then, which Natural Religion can afford a Sinner, as to the Acceptance of his Repentance with God, muſt needs leave him in great Doubt and Perplexity: 'Tis the Privilege of Divine Revelation, (and an ineſtimable Privilege it is) which aſcertains us of theſe great Truths, that, upon every Tranſgreſſion, God is not ſevere to mark what is done amiſs; that, when we go aſtray, he is patient to wait our Return; that no Sins are too heinous for his Mercy to forgive, or for the great Propitiation of Chriſt's Blood to atone; that when, at any Time, [u] we have fallen by our Iniquity, we can take with us Words, and turn to the Lord, and ſay unto him, Take away all Iniquity, and receive us graciouſly, ſo ſhall we render thee the Calves of our Lips: Nay, even when our Provocations have been innumerable, in a long Courſe of Riot and Rebellion, that we have it in our Power to ſay to ourſelves, (and in full Aſſurance of Reception) * I will ariſe, and go to my Father, and will ſay unto him, Father, I have ſinned againſt Heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy Son.

The Conditions of it.

Only, that we may not abuſe his paternal Goodneſs, we muſt remember,

[p] Tit. ii. 12. [q] Rom. vi. 22. [r] Scott's Diſcourſes, Vol. II. [s] Jonah iii. 9.
[t] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [u] Hoſea xiv. 1, 2. * Luke xv. 18, 19.

remember, that there are ſome Qualifications in our Repentance neceſſary to recommend it to his Favour and Acceptance: And what we may reckon the firſt of theſe is the Earlineſs of it, i. e. a Forſaking of our Sins ſo timely, as to acquire, and live in the Habits of the contrary Virtues. 1. That is to be early.

THE plain and expreſs Condition of the Covenant eſtabliſhed by Chriſt is an holy Life, i. e. [x] a conſtant and perſevering Obedience to all the Commands of God (allowing for human Weakneſſes and Imperfections) from the Time of our Baptiſm, or our coming to the Knowledge of the Truth, to the End of our Lives; and the leaſt that can poſſibly lay claim to the Reward promiſed upon this Condition, is ſuch a Repentance, which produces the actual Obedience of, at leaſt ſome proportionable, Part of a Man's Life: And therefore, tho' God may poſſibly have Reſerves of Mercy, which, in the Event, he may exerciſe towards Men in their laſt Extremity; yet originally 'tis certain, that the Goſpel-Covenant gives no Aſſurance of Comfort, but, either to a conſtant and perſevering Holineſs, or to a Repentance, evidenced by actually renewed Obedience.

[y] AT Baptiſm indeed, or whenever we firſt come to the Knowledge of the Truth, all paſt Sins are ſo intirely forgiven, and waſhed away by the Blood of Chriſt, that Repentance, tho' it has no Time to evidence itſelf in the Fruits of Righteouſneſs, is, without all Controverſy, available to Salvation. But when thoſe, who, by Baptiſm, have covenanted ſolemnly with God for an holy Life, and confirmed that Covenant by other repeated Promiſes and Reſolutions, ſhall yet wilfully live in Sin, and, notwithſtanding the expreſs Threatenings of our Saviour and his Apoſtles, that they, who do ſo, ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God; notwithſtanding the earneſt Exhortations and Warnings of God's Miniſters, and notwithſtanding the perpetual Reproaches of their own Conſciences, will continue obſtinately to do ſo; ſuch Perſons have no Reaſon in the World to expect, that God will, at laſt, accept their late, unactive, and ineffectual Repentance. The penitent Thief was received by our Saviour, as any other Infidel may be, who, towards the End of his Life, is converted to the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion, and heartily embraces it; but there is nothing like a Promiſe in Scripture, that the unactive Repentance of a Chriſtian, who has lived all his Life in notorious Wickedneſs, ſhall be accepted at the Hour of Death. The Labourers, who were hired into the Vineyard, at the eleventh Hour, received indeed the ſame Wages with them, that had borne the Burthen and Heat of the Day; but our Saviour has no where promiſed, that baptized and profeſſed Chriſtians, who are hired into the Vineyard in the Morning, if they riot away all the Day in Idleneſs and Wickedneſs, ſhall, at Night, be accepted for profeſſing their Sorrow, that they have not worked.

THOSE, who argue for a late Repentance, place all the Efficacy of it in this Suppoſition,—— [z] That the Perſon, if he had Time and Opportunity, would ſtedfaſtly perſevere in his holy Purpoſes: But alas! how frequent Inſtances have we of the contrary? And who ſhall dare to preſume that to be his own Caſe, in which, if himſelf has not formerly failed, yet a Multitude of pretending Penitents fail daily? How many have we ſeen, who, if God had been pleaſed to take them away, while they ſeemed to be in a good Mind, had left behind them ſuch Hopes of their happy Condition, that it would have been thought uncharitable and unchriſtian to queſtion it; and yet all this was not the Man's Heart, but his Fright; a Violence upon his Nature, and ſettled Diſpoſition? The Fit of Sickneſs and that of Zeal abated and wore off together; and, as ſoon as the Smart of the Rod was over, all the Remembrance and good Effect of it was over with him too. Few Stomachs are ſo high and ſturdy, but that the Approach of Death, the Terrors of an incenſed God, and the near Proſpect of a gaping Hell will bring them down. When Men are juſt upon the Brink of Eternity, a new Scene opens upon them: Theſe Things will then be ſeen and heard: They intrude upon the Thoughts, whether they will or no, and make quite different Impreſſions, from what they did, when they were at a Diſtance; when Health and Strength, the Hurry of Buſineſs, and Variety of Pleaſures helped to divert and drive away the uneaſy Reflection. And when Matters are come to this Extremity, who is ſo nice, as truly to diſtinguiſh between the Hatred of Sin, and the Dread of Puniſhment; between the Love of God, and an anxious Care to preſerve one's ſelf; between the Sorrow of the Penitent, and the Amazement of his Fears, or Melancholy of his Diſeaſe; and conſequently, who can pronounce any Thing peremptorily con- The Invalidity of a late Repentance.

x Clarke's Eſſays. y Ibid. z Stanhope's Sermons.

cerning the dying Perſon's Condition? In ſhort, the Uncertainties of a late ance are ſo great, and the Dangers ſo many, and the Examples in Scripture ſo few, and, when nearly enquired into, ſo diſtant from our Caſe; the Pretences for Delay ſo vain, and the Sophiſtry, whereby Men delude themſelves in this important Affair, both ſo palpable and ſo fatal; that if ever we intend to approve our Repentance to God, and our own Conſciences, we muſt be careful both to begin, and perfect it in the Time of our Health, that, when we come to die, we may have the Comfort of a well-grounded Hope of a happy Eternity, to alleviate the Pain and Uneaſineſs of our Paſſage to it.

That it be great, and proportionate to Offences.

2. ANOTHER Qualification of a true and acceptable Repentance is, that it be great, and bear ſome Proportion, in its Sorrow and Humiliation, to the Nature and Heinouſneſs of the Sinner's Offences. For, though it be certain, that the Amendment of Life is the beſt Indication of a ſincere Repentance, [a] yet, whoever have lived in a State of Sin, ought to do ſomething to teſtify their Sorrow for their paſt Tranſgreſſions, and [b] to judge themſelves, that they may not be judged of their Lord. [c] They have to deal with a God, to whom they are in no Condition of bringing any Atonement; and therefore, the only Satisfaction they can make him is, their taking the Shame of their Faults to themſelves, and being unfeignedly afflicted for all their unworthy Behaviour; and this the rather, becauſe their Care to avoid Sin for the Future will naturally be proportionable to their Concern for having committed it heretofore: For behold this Self-ſame Thing (ſays the Apoſtle to the [d] Corinthians) that ye ſorrowed after a godly Sort, what Carefulneſs it wrought in you, yea what Clearing of yourſelves, yea what Indignation, yea what Fear, yea what vehement Deſire, yea what Zeal, yea what Revenge? For this Reaſon it was, that St James adviſes thoſe, who had ſinned, to be afflicted, and mourn, and weep; to let their Laughter be turned into Mourning, that he might exalt them in due Time: And for this Reaſon the primitive Church always taught,, that Sins, committed wilfully, after the Knowledge and Belief of the Truth, were to be done away with Labour and Sorrow; that the afflictive Duties of Repentance ought to bear ſome Proportion to the Greatneſs of the Sin; and that, by how much the more ſeverely any Man judged himſelf here, by ſo much the more might he hope, that God would ſpare him, and be merciful to him hereafter. The penitential Exerciſes, in thoſe early Times of Chriſtianity, were very ſevere; and thus far they are an Inſtruction to us, that we ought to afflict our Souls with ſad Remembrances, in Proportion to the Delight, and the Aggravations, with which we have offended, in order to increaſe our Hatred againſt Sin, which can never be too great, nor any Sorrow, that contributes to it, too intenſe, provided it be neceſſary to reclaim us more perfectly, and do not drive us to Deſpair, or Diſtruſt of God's Mercy.

IT muſt be remembered however, that God meaſures our Performances of this Kind, neither by the Quantity of our Tears, nor the Degree of our Contrition, but by the Sincerity of our Hearts, and the Amendment of our Lives: And therefore the beſt, the greateſt, and moſt effectual Repentance, that a Man can poſſibly exerciſe, is to endeavour to be ſo much the more careful in mortifying his Vices, and ſo much the more zealous in improving all Opportunities of doing Good, by how much he has once been more faulty in any Particular; to be more eminently conſpicuous in thoſe Virtues, which are moſt directly contrary to the Vices he formerly indulged; and, where he has been vanquiſhed by any Temptation, there to reſolve to ſtrengthen himſelf ſo much the more againſt it: He, that thus endeavours to appeaſe God, (ſays St Cyprian) and, by his Repentance, and Shame, and Sorrow, for his paſt Offences, is ſpurred on to exerciſe greater Faith, and Virtue, and Courage; ſuch an one, by the Aſſiſtance of God, may become a Joy to the Church, which he before made ſorrowful; and ſhall obtain, not only the Pardon of his Sins, but alſo the Crown of Righteouſneſs.

That it be conſtant.

3. ONE Qualification more in a true and acceptable Repentance is, that it be conſtant and perſevering in its Effects, i. e. it muſt put a Man into ſuch a State, as that he will not any more return to his Vices. 'Till it arrives at this Pitch, Repentance is not right, and (however Men may deceive themſelves with vain Imaginations) can never be effectual to Salvation. [e] The Condition, that our Saviour expreſsly requires in the Goſpel, is a continued Holy Life, from the Time of our knowing and embracing the Truth: But certainly he will never accept of any Thing leſs, than a Life

[a] Clarke's Eſſays. [b] 1 Cor. xi. 13. [c] Stanhope's Sermons. [d] 2 Cor. vii. 11.
[e] Clarke, ibid.

Life of Holineſs and perſevering Obedience from ſome Period of Reformation and Repentance. He therefore, that repents, ſhould be as fearful of relapſing into Sin, as one that is recovering out of a dangerous and almoſt mortal Sickneſs: Whenever he wilfully relapſes, he make his Caſe worſe, than it was at firſt, and his Diſeaſe more in Danger of being mortal: It becomes much harder for him to renew himſelf into Repentance, and much more difficult to procure Pardon. [f] Evil Habits, 'tis true, are not to be rooted out at once, nor vicious Cuſtoms overcome in a Moment: So long therefore, as a Man does not return wilfully, and deliberately into the Habit of Sin, many Surprizes and Interruptions, in the Struggle with a cuſtomary Vice, may be conſiſtent with the Progreſs of Repentance; but 'tis then only that it becomes compleat and effectual, when the evil Habit is ſo far extinguiſhed, that the Man, from thence forward, obeys the Commandments of God without looking back, and returns no more to the Sin, he has condemned.

To conclude this Argument then with ſome Motives and Encouragements to Repentance; let it be conſidered, that, when God calls upon us to relinquiſh our Sins, and perform the Duties of our Holy Religion, he only deſires us to be kind to ourſelves, [g] by abandoning that, which is ſo deceitful in its Appearances, and ſo deſtructive in its Effects, the Parent of Sorrow and Shame, and ſad Remorſe; that cheats us with imaginary Pleaſures of a Moment, but leaves real and laſting Pains behind, the Horrors of Conſcience, the Agonies of Guilt, Amazement, and Deſpair; and plunges us at laſt into the bottomleſs Pit, there to endure the Gnawings of a Worm that never dies, and the Burnings of a Fire, that can never be quenched; only deſires us, to be kind to ourſelves, by embracing a State, whoſe Ways are Ways of Pleaſantneſs, and all its Paths are Peace, the Parent of Eaſe, Happineſs and Health; that is attended with the ſweet Tranſports of a good Conſcience, the ſupporting Senſe of a reconciled God, the happy Experience of his Favour and Protection here, and the joyful Expectation of a bleſſed Eternity hereafter. Let it be conſidered then, [h] that there cannot be a more unaccountable Folly, than, by Impenitence, to loſe the Hopes of a certain and eternal Happineſs, for the Sake of thoſe Pleaſures, which are the Diſgrace, as well as Diſquiet of human Nature; that, to continue in Sin, with the Hopes to repent, is to ſtab ourſelves with the Hopes of a Cure; that, to delay our Repentance, 'till the Time of our Death, is to cripple ourſelves in order to run; and that the ſooner we ſet about it, the ſooner ſhall we find our Minds at Eaſe, and we enjoy ſuch Pleaſures in forſaking our Sins, as are far more noble and manly, than ever we found any in committing them. And, to engage us to ſet about the Work, let it be conſidered, laſtly, that we have all the Encouragement imaginable, a Covenant of Pardon and Forgiveneſs to plead; a ſtanding Satisfaction to appeal to; ſufficient Help and Aſſiſtance to rely on; the Bowels of an indulgent Father calling us; the Merits of a powerful Advocate interceding for us; the Examples of other ſucceſsful Penitents exciting us; the Judgment of our own Minds applauding us; and both holy Men and Angels viewing our Conflict, and rejoicing in our Conqueſt and Converſion.

4. THERE is one Condition more, purſuant upon God's Promiſe of Heaven and Happineſs, which the Covenant of Grace obliges us to perform, and that is, Obedience to the Divine Commands. For ſuch is the Purpoſe and Determination of God, that [i] to every Man he will render according to his Deeds, to them, who, by patient Continuance in well-doing, ſeek for Glory and Honour, and Immortality, eternal Life; but unto them that obey not the Truth, but obey Unrighteouſneſs, Indignation, and Wrath; Tribulation, and Anguiſh upon every Soul of Man that doeth Evil: For [k] I come quickly, ſays our Lord in the Revelation, and my Reward is with me, to give to every Man according as his Works ſhall be; when [l] not every one, that ſaith unto me, Lord, Lord, or makes Profeſſion of my Religion, ſhall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doth the Will of my Father, which is in Heaven. And therefore, to ſtate the true Nature and Neceſſity of our Chriſtian Obedience, we may not improperly reduce it to theſe three Qualifications: Obedience.

1. THAT it proceed from a religious Principle.
2. THAT it have reſpect to all God's Commandments. And,
3. THAT we perſevere in the Performance of it, even unto the End.

1. THE

[f] Payne, on Repentance. 6, &c. [g] Stanhope's Sermons. [h] Stillingfleet's Sermons. [i] Rom. ii. [k] Rev. xxii. 12. [l] Matth. vii. 21.

Its Qualifications.

1. THE firſt Qualification of our Chriſtian Obedience is, that it proceed from a religious Principle. For of ſuch Importance are the Motives, upon which any Thing is done, that there can be no juſt Diſtinction between Virtue and Vice without them.

Sincerity.

[m] A Man may be liberal to the Poor out of Charity, and he may be ſo, out of Oſtentation too. He may be temperate, in Obedience to ſome natural Antipathies, or in Favour of a weak Conſtitution; he may be juſt for Reputation; frugal and diligent for the Sake of Wealth; or devout, to be ſeen of Men: And, how highly ſoever he may deſerve to be commended for his Prudence, yet ſurely there is no Religion in all this, nor conſequently any Foundation for Reward. Our bleſſed Saviour, ſpeaking of ſuch as give Alms, and pray, and faſt, with a Deſign to be taken Notice of, tells us, with ſome Sort of Solemnity, that this is all they are to expect, [n] verily, I ſay unto you, they have their Reward: Their Reward, i. e. what they propoſed to themſelves, for the End of ſuch Actions, when they did them; and ſo are to look upon this as a full Payment, ſince they thought the Duties worth undertaking at ſo low a Price. The Caſe is much the ſame with thoſe, that are temperate, merely for their Health, or diligent, and juſt, for Reputation and Convenience: A ſound Conſtitution, a florid old Age, plentiful Fortunes, and Credit, and Countenance in the World, are properly the Rewards of theſe Men, and all that they have any juſt Pretence to: For, as to the Retributions of the laſt Day, there is a great deal of Reaſon to believe, that they will proceed upon the ſame eternal Rules of Equity, which our Returns to one another are founded upon now. If a Friend, for Inſtance, labours ſincerely in my Intereſt, and yet cannot be ſucceſsful, his Inclination and Endeavour hath, to me, the Merit of a Performance; but if a Man, in Proſecution of his own private Advantage, by ſome providential Turn of Affairs, finds it neceſſary, for his own Sake, to do me a Kindneſs, I rejoice in the Benefit indeed, but, ſtrictly ſpeaking, I owe him no Thanks. In like Manner, God has promiſed to reward our mere Diſpoſition and Good-will to ſerve him, though our Power of effecting it do not, in all Points, anſwer our Deſires; but the ſpecious Actions of Hypocrites ſhall meet with no Regard, becauſe, though they did, in ſome Degree, contribute to his Glory, and the Good of Men, and ſo may ſeem to have ſome Colour of a Plea; yet theſe Effects were purely accidental, and no Part of their Deſign, when they did them. Their Avarice, or Vain-glory, or whatever elſe it was, that moved them to affect ſuch Appearances of Virtue, hath already received Satisfaction in this World; and therefore, when they come to demand more Wages in the next, what ſhould hinder the great Maſter of the Vineyard from anſwering them, as he does the murmuring Labourer in the Parable, [o] Friend I do thee no Wrong; didſt thou not agree with me for ſo much? Take that is thine, and go thy Way.

Reſpect to our own Advantage, conſiſtent therewith.

THIS however is to be underſtood with ſome Reſtriction, becauſe the having Reſpect to our own Advantage, in our Obedience to God's Commands, is, upon many Accounts, not only an innocent Thing, but, in ſome Meaſure, neceſſary and unavoidable. [p] In itſelf it can neither offend God, nor exclude us from the promiſed Reward, becauſe the Neceſſity of our Nature requires it; our Faith is made effectual by it; God's Laws directly propoſe it; and the beſt Men, that ever yet lived, made it a Part of their Conſideration: To which Purpoſe, the Author to the Hebrews, recounting the Worthies of old, tells us expreſſly, that [q] they had all a Reſpect to the Recompence of Reward; and, in an higher Inſtance than any of them, even in that of Chriſt himſelf, he aſſures us, that his own Advantage, as well as the Glory of God, was the Motive of his Obedience, when, [r] for the Sake of the Joy, that was ſet before him, he endured the Croſs, and deſpiſed the Shame of it.

When culpable.

'TIS not barely the Intention then of our own Advantage, in the Service of God, that is culpable. To have Reſpect to the Eternal Advantages, which, in his Laws, are promiſed to our Obedience, is always lawful; and to have an Eye to thoſe temporal Advantages, which will accrue to us by obeying them, is not always ſinful: 'Tis then only, that the Deſign of our own Self-intereſt, in Conjunction with the Deſign of ſerving God, makes our Services inſincere, and cuts off our Hope of Reward, when together with our Deſign of ſerving God, we join a Deſign of ſerving Sin; or when we deſign ſome temporal Ends of our own, as much, or more, than we do the Service of God.

2. AN-

[m] Stanhope's Sermons. [n] Matth. vi. 2. [o] Ibid. xx. 13, 14. [p] Kettlewell's Meaſures of Obedience.
[q] Heb. ii. 2. [r] Ibid. xii. 2.

2. ANOTHER Qualification of our Chriſtian Obedience is, that it have an equal Reſpect to all God's Commandments. There is no Man ſo loſt to Reaſon and Virtue, but that he finds it for his Purpoſe to obſerve ſome of them; natural Modeſty, Self-Preſervation, and the promoting an Intereſt with others, perſuade the Practice of many commendable Things; Poverty and Sickneſs, publick Shame and publick Puniſhment, reſtrain Men from gratifying many corrupt Inclinations; nor will the Fear of God immediately ceaſe to have a Check upon the Conſcience, and to enforce other Conſiderations more powerfully; and theſe Impreſſions, People, that make any Pretenſions to Goodneſs, are, many Times, not averſe to ſubmit to: But ſtill, if there be any reſerved Caſe, any favourite Corruption, upon which Religion exerciſes its Power but feebly, though it be but one, yet if it continues Proof againſt all the Charms, and all the Terrors of the Goſpel, that ſingle Exception is a Blemiſh to the Whole, and renders all the reſt of a good Life ineffectual, though a Man ſhould labour never ſo zealouſly, in other Inſtances, to pleaſe God, and ſave his immortal Soul. Integrity.

THE Miſchief and Danger of ſuch favourite Corruptions is ſo much the greater, becauſe Men are apt to flatter themſelves with a vain Hope, that a few Spots will eaſily be overlooked, in the Multitude of good Actions, which give a Grace and Beauty to their Lives. They account it hard, that the Reward of ſo many Virtues ſhould be loſt, for the Sake of one Vice; and are therefore inclinable to think, that Almighty God will admit them to compound with him, and to buy off the Breach of one Command, by a punctual Diſcharge of another. But ſince the Law was eſtabliſhed with a Curſe [t] upon every one, that continueth not in all Things written therein, to do them: This cuts off all Hopes of Heaven, when grounded upon ſuch an Obedience, as ſhall preſume to diſpenſe with any particular Precept contained in it. The Goſpel, 'tis true indeed, was intended to abate the Rigour of the Law, by making Proviſion for Forgiveneſs upon Repentance, and uſing great Tenderneſs to the Infirmities of human Nature; but ſtill, as it gives no Man Licence to tranſgreſs wilfully, nor the leaſt Indulgence to any known Sin, in this Reſpect, the Curſe continues ſtill in full Force; and St James has proved it muſt needs do ſo by that remarkable Paſſage in his Epiſtle: [u] Whoſever ſhall keep the whole Law, and yet offend in one Point, he is guilty of all. For he that ſaid, do not commit Adultery, ſaid alſo, do not kill; now, if thou commit no Adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a Tranſgreſſor of the Law: Where the Apoſtle evidently ſhews, that the Authority of the Law-giver is that, which binds the Law upon us; that the Contempt of that Authority is the Thing to be accounted for; and if that be once violated, it matters very little, whether it be done in this or that particular Inſtance. For, though ſome Crimes be more heinous than others, yet Obedience or Diſobedience is not to be meaſured, ſo much by the Quality of the Actions, as by the Regard or Diſregard to the Will of our Superiors; and ſince our Lord's Pleaſure is ſignified by all his Laws, it is ſufficient to condemn us, that we wilfully neglect any. It will become us therefore to look upon every Command of his as armed with Thunder, and to remember, that, when he comes to Judgment, he will exact all, that he has required, whatever our Concern in it may be; becauſe he comes, in ſhort, not as a corrupt Party, to make his Laws bend to our Intereſt, and to diſannul ſuch, as make againſt us; but as a juſt and impartial Judge, to inflict, what his Goſpel threatens, and to make his Sentence conformable to what it ſays, and not what we can bear. The Danger of favourite Sins.

3. THE other Qualification of our Chriſtian Obedience is, that we ſhould perſevere in the Keeping of God's Commandments, all the Days of our Lives. For this is what he indiſpenſably exacts of us, that * having ſet our Hands to the Plough, we ſhould not look back, but [x] being faithful unto Death, and [y] holding the Beginning of our Confidence ſtedfaſt unto the End, we ſhould [z] be always abounding in the Work of the Lord, foraſmuch as we know that our Labour is not in vain in the Lord. And indeed the Scriptures, by comparing our Life to a Work, to a Race, to a Fight, and other Actions of a ſtated Period, do plainly enough imply, that, as there are no Wages to be looked for, without finiſhing our Taſk; no Prize to be had, without coming up to the Goal; no Triumph to be expected, without fighting it out to the laſt, and gaining a compleat Victory; ſo there is no future Reward to be hoped for, without Steadineſs and Perſeverance in well-doing: And therefore (to continue one of the Perſeverance.

[s] Stanhope's Sermons. [t] Gal. iii. 10. [u] James ii. 10, 11. * Luke ix. 62.
[x] Rev. ii. 10. [y] Heb. iii. 14. [z] 1 Cor. xv. 58.

Compariſons) ſince the Impediments in running the Race, that is ſet before us, are ſo many, the Corruptions of human Nature ſo prevalent, and the Temptations, that beſet it, ſo aſſiduous and ſo ſtrong, that good Men ſometimes feel dreadful Interruptions; [a] there will be greater Occaſion for us, at all Times, to keep up our Reſolution and Vigour, by remembering, that nothing leſs than running the whole Courſe can entitle us to the Prize; great Need often to take ourſelves aſide, and ſee, what Progreſs we have made, and whereabouts we are; what Length of the Field there is ſtill before us, and how ſhort a Time is left us to compaſs it in; that ſo, when the Race of Life comes to a Concluſion, and our Departure is at Hand, we may have it to ſay, with the bleſſed Apoſtle, [b] I have fought a good Fight, I have finiſhed my Courſe, I have kept the Faith; henceforth, there is laid up for me a Crown of Righteouſneſs, which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, ſhall give to me at that Day, and not to me only, but unto all them alſo, that love his Appearing.

THESE are the Terms of our Chriſtian Obedience; and, from the Conſideration of them, there are two Queſtions that naturally occur to our Thoughts.

1. WHETHER the Goſpel requires of us a perfect and unſinning Obedience. And,

2. BY what Signs we may perceive, whether our Obedience be ſuch, as God accepts.

The Goſpel requires not an unſinning Obedience.

1. THAT God Almighty requires an Obedience to all and every of his Commands, at all Times, and in all Places equally; and that there is likewiſe no Sin or Tranſgreſſion of his Law, in any one Inſtance, but what he diſapproves, and abſolutely forbids, is evident from the whole Tenor of the Goſpel; and therefore, in this Senſe, it may be juſtly ſaid, that he requires a perfect Obedience at our Hands; [c] as it is no more than reaſonable indeed, that the moſt wiſe and holy God ſhould enjoin every Law of his (which entirely agrees with Reaſon) to be conſtantly obſerved by reaſonable Creatures, and condemn every wilful Tranſgreſſion of it, as an abſurd and irrational Practice: But then, becauſe no ſuch Obedience was ever yet performed by any (our Saviour Chriſt only excepted); becauſe all Men in the World have found themſelves ſurrounded with Infirmities, and miſled by Temptations and Trials, in ſome Inſtance or other, ſo that they cannot but condemn themſelves for ſome wilful Deviations from the Rule of right Reaſon; it has pleaſed God (out of his abundant Goodneſs) at the ſame Time that he requires an entire Obedience, not only to excuſe the Imperfection of our Services, occaſioned by the Frailties and Infirmities of our Nature; [d] not only to overlook our involuntary Slips and Miſcarriages, occaſioned by our Ignorance and Inadvertency; but, for the Sake of Jeſus Chriſt, his Son, and our Saviour, to pardon our wilful and preſumptuous Sins, upon ſuch Conditions, as he has preſcribed; and ſuch, as are not inconſiſtent with his Exaction of our perfect Obedience. For, as the Father may command ſuch and ſuch Particulars, and yet admit his Son to Reconciliation, upon ſome Terms, after he has tranſgreſſed ſome of his Commands; ſo likewiſe may Almighty God require Obedience to every one of his Commands, at all Times, and in all Places, and yet, after his Creatures have been ſo unhappy, as to tranſgreſs any of his Commands, he may forgive them theſe Tranſgreſſions, upon ſome certain Terms and Conditions. In a Word, [e] the univerſal Obedience, which the Chriſtian Law requires, is the Obedience of the Penitent; and, though we have failed in our Duty, yet we may, with good Comfort, repair our Neglects for the future, being aſſured, that thereupon God will not impute to us our former Tranſgreſſions. This therefore is to be conſidered, together with the Strictneſs of the Rule, that Repentance will be accepted, that great and ineſtimable Grace of the Goſpel, without which, the beſt of Men can have no Hope, and with which, the worſt may have ſome.

SINCE therefore, it is certain, that Almighty God forbids every Sin always, and enjoins the Practice of every Virtue, at all Opportunities, and in this Senſe may be ſaid to require a ſinleſs Obedience; and ſince it is certain, that, by his own open Declarations, there is Room left for Favour and Mercy to ſuch, as have committed wilful Sin; it is evident, that the Perfection, which is ſo much required of Chriſtians, as a Condition, without which they ſhall not be finally happy, can be no other, than an Amendment and Reformation in thoſe Inſtances, wherein they have wilfully failed, failed, and a conſtant Progreſſion and Improvement in ſuch Virtues and Godlineſs of living, as they have already entered into: And from hence it will be no hard Matter to give a Reſolution to the

[a] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels. [b] 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. [c] Hoadly's Terms of Acceptance.
[d] Kettlewell's Meaſures. [e] Clagget's Sermons.

2. OTHER Queſtion, viz. how, or by what Signs, we may beſt perceive, whether our Obedience be what God will be pleaſed to accept. For if the Terms of Goſpel-Obedience be ſuch, as have been declared, then [f] he, who makes no other Uſe of its gracious Propoſals, than to encourage himſelf to recover from any Sin, of which he knows he has wilfully been guilty; and is ſo affected with any Inſtance of his paſt Weakneſs, as to keep a greater and ſtricter Watch over himſelf for the Time to come: He, who, at any Time, finds, upon a Review of himſelf, that tho' he be not abſolutely perfect, yet he gets Ground of his Imperfections, and proceeds, by a daily Courſe, farther and farther in the Paths of Virtue: He, who carefully avoids the Opportunities and Temptations, whereby, he knows, he has formerly fallen; and when, unavoidably, and without any Fault of his own, he meets with the ſame Trials and Temptations, which have formerly vanquiſhed him, finds Faith, and Senſe of God, and Strength of Mind enough to vanquiſh them, and reſiſt all their Inſinuations and artful Onſets, has good Ground to hope, that he is in a Way acceptable to God. Whereas, on the contrary, he, who takes Encouragement, from the Doctrine of Acceptance and Reconciliation delivered in the Goſpel, to venture ſtill farther in the Paths of Sin, with a fooliſh Hope of coming up to the Terms of Acceptance ſome Time or other: He, who finds himſelf led, by his ſinning at any Time, to love the Sin, rather than to deteſt, and guard againſt it; and to run to the Temptation, rather than to flee from it: He, who finds the Senſe of the Importance of Morality and Virtue diminiſhing, and the Power of the World, or the Fleſh, ſo far increaſing over him, as, every Day, by their Terrors or Allurements, to carry him into the Practice of Wickedneſs: In a Word, he who finds himſelf ſuch a Captive to any wilful Sin, that he has not yet got out of its Power; that his Faith in God, his Senſe of Religion, and his Belief of a future State are not all ſufficient to diſengage him from it; may be well aſſured, that he is not, as yet, in ſuch a Condition, as that he may entertain any rational and well-grounded Hopes of Salvation, upon the Terms of the Goſpel, which, notwithſtanding all its rich Promiſes of Pardon and Forgiveneſs, [g] teacheth us, that, denying Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent World; looking for that bleſſed Hope, and the glorious Appearing of the Great God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all Iniquity, and purify unto himſelf a peculiar People, zealous of good Works.

How to judge of our Acceptance with God.

SECT. I.

Of the Mediator of the NEW COVENANT.

THE Word Μεσίτης, which we tranſlate Mediator, ſignifies a Perſon, who interpoſes between two Parties, either to obtain a Favour from the one to the other, or to adjuſt ſome Difference, and make a Reconciliation between them. [h] The Perſon, who undertakes this Office, does it, either voluntarily, or by the Deſignation of both Parties: If voluntarily, he can act but precariouſly, and not ſo properly determine any Thing, as only intreat and perſuade; if by Deſignation, and both Parties are equal, he acts by the Authority of both, and conſequently has a full Power to determine the Matter in Debate, juſt as he thinks fit: But if it ſo happen, that the one Party be ſuperior to the other, even to ſuch a Degree, as Maſter and Servant, Sovereign and Subject, &c. 'tis enough then, that the Mediator be authorized by the Delegation of the Superior; and the Subject, or inferior Party, will be as much obliged by his Determinations, as if he himſelf had voluntarily appointed him. In the Caſe between the Sovereign and the Subject, the Mediator indeed is the Sovereign's Vicegerent, and the Subject's Advocate; and therefore, as the Sovereign has, at all Times, a Right to the Subject's Duty, and, what Favours he confers on him, confers ſpontaneouſly, and of his free Accord; he may (whether the other conſent to it or no) demand his Duty, by what Vicegerent, and beſtow his Favours by what Advocate, he pleaſes.

A Mediator, what.

Now,

[f] Hoadly's Terms of Acceptance. poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. ii.

[g] Tit. ii. 12, &c.

[h] Vid. Scott's Mediator, and Les Oeuvres

Of whoſe Appointment.

Now, ſince the Degeneracy of our Nature had made us unfit to converſe with God immediately, and yet his tender Mercy and Compaſſion was ſuch, that he would not utterly reject and abandon us; there was no Expedient (at leaſt within our Knowledge) wherein the Holineſs of his Majeſty could ſo fairly accord with the Tenderneſs of his Mercy, as in this of tranſacting with us by a Mediator; by whoſe Interagency, he, though a moſt holy Sovereign, may, without Debaſement, freely converſe with us; and we, though his guilty Subjects, may, without Terror or Anxiety, as freely draw near to him. But then, becauſe God's Sovereignty over us was abſolute, and the Bleſſings, he intended to beſtow on us, free and undeſerved; therefore was the Right of chuſing and appointing this Mediator entirely in him; and, accordingly, the holy Scripture has aſſured us, that as [j] there is one God, ſo there is one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Chriſt Jeſus, who [k] did not aſſume that Honour to himſelf, but [l] was appointed thereunto by God; and [m] therefore the Apoſtle lets all the Houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus, whom they had crucified, both Lord and Chriſt. Chriſt ſignifies anointed; and as anointing with Oil was anciently the viſible Sign, by which the Regal, Prieſtly, and Prophetick Offices were conferred; ſo, by this Application, St Peter meant to inform the Jews, that God had inveſted Jeſus with the Character of a Mediator, which included in it all theſe Offices.

When firſt appointed.

WHEN Chriſt was firſt of all inveſted with this Character, whether at the Beginning of the New Covenant, or not till the Time of his Incarnation, is a Queſtion, wherein the Learned are not ſo entirely agreed. This, however, can hardly be gainſay'd, [n] that, ſince the Scriptures aſſure us, he is now the Mediator of the new and better Covenant, he muſt have been ſo all along, from the Time of the Fall, upon which it commenced: Otherwiſe this New Covenant (upon which he now mediates) muſt have been four thouſand Years without a Mediator; which, conſidering the whole State and Condition of it, can by no Means be a reaſonable Suppoſition. For, beſides that the Fall of Man was the true Cauſe of God's withdrawing himſelf from all immediate Converſe with him; and conſequently, whatever Intercourſe he had with him afterwards, muſt have been carried on by a Mediator; there is nothing more evident from Scripture, than that this very Covenant, which is the ſtanding Medium of God's Converſe with Men, was granted to us, in Conſideration of Chriſt's Death and Sacrifice. Since therefore it was granted long before Chriſt died, even from the Time of Man's Apoſtacy, it muſt be granted, upon Chriſt's engaging himſelf to the Father, by his Death to atone for our Sins, when the Fulneſs of Time ſhould come; which Engagement was virtually, and, in Effect, an Oblation of himſelf as a Sacrifice for us; and accordingly was accepted by God in the ſame Manner, as if it actually had been offered: And ſince, in Conſideration of Chriſt's future Sacrifice, God firſt granted this Covenant to Men, it neceſſarily follows, that, upon the ſame Conſideration, he, at the ſame Time, appointed Chriſt to be the Mediator of it. In ſhort, Chriſt's Sacrifice was as certain in God's Account, and therefore as prevalent with him, before, as after it was offered; and therefore, ſince [o] his Mediatorſhip of the New Covenant is wholly owing to the Prevalence of his Sacrifice, there was the ſame Reaſon, why God ſhould admit him to be the Mediator of it before it was offered, as after. And, accordingly, long before he offered up his Sacrifice, he is called the [p] Angel or Meſſenger of the New Covenant, which Covenant (as St Paul aſſures us) four hundred and thirty Years before the Law of Moſes, was [q] confirmed of God to Abraham in Chriſt; and, if it was then confirmed by Chriſt, it is certain, that Chriſt was then the Mediator of it, though the full Exerciſe of that Office was not till the Days of his Incarnation.

The Manner of it.

THE Apoſtle, [r] in a Verſe or two following this Paſſage, ſpeaking of the Jewiſh Law, gives us to underſtand, that it was ordained or delivered by Angels in the Hand of the Mediator, i. e. in the Hand of Moſes, who was appointed to mediate, not only for God, with the People of Iſrael, but alſo for the People of Iſrael, with God: For this (as he argues) is implied in the very Notion of a Mediator, that he be a third Perſon acting between two others; but God is only one of the Parties, between whom this Mediation is made, and therefore Moſes muſt be ſuppoſed, not only to act for God with the People, as his Vicegerent, but likewiſe to act for the People with God, as

[j] 1 Tim. ii. 5. [k] Heb. v. 5. [l] Ibid. iii. 2. [m] Acts ii. 36. [n] Scott's Mediator. and Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. ii. [o] Vid. Phil. ii. 6, &c. [p] Mal. iii. 1. [q] Gal. iii. 17. [r] Ibid. 19, 20.

as their Advocate! In ſhort, he muſt act for both Parties, otherwiſe he is not a Mediator. And accordingly as Moſes, who was the Mediator of the Jewiſh Covenant, acted between God and the People; ſo Jeſus, who is the Mediator of the Chriſtian Covenant, acts between two oppoſite Parties, God and Man. As God's Vicegerent, he acts for him, with us, in order to reduce us to our Duty and Allegiance; and as our Advocate, he acts for us, with God, in order to induce him to be gracious and favourable to us; that ſo, having prevailed with us, to lay down our Enmity againſt God, and obtained of God, to remit his Diſpleaſure againſt us, he may effect an happy Reconciliation between us: And in this Senſe the Author to the Hebrews ſeems to have laid down both Parts of his Mediation; [s] wherefore he is able to ſave to the utmoſt, thoſe, who come unto God by him, who ſubmit to God upon his Intreaty, ſeeing he ever lives to make Interceſſion for them, or to plead with God the Merits of his Sacrifice in their Behalf.

THE vaſt Diſproportion between the Divine Nature and ours ſets us at an infinite Diſtance from God, and the Pollution of our Sins removed us ſtill farther from the Hopes of Communion with him: The Senſe of Guilt alienated our Hearts, and the Suſpicion, which it ingendered, made us averſe to God's Intreaties, and diffident of his Promiſes, in Caſe we ſhould lay down our Arms: God too, on his Part, had abundant Reaſon to hate us for our Sin and ſad Apoſtacy, and no Manner of Encouragement (conſidering our natural Averſion to Good) to depend upon our better Obedience for the future, in caſe he ſhould grant an Act of Indemnity. To remove therefore all theſe Obſtructions at once, the Son of God, by aſſuming the Human Nature, has tempered and qualified the Effulgency of his infinite Majeſty, and ſo made a nearer Approach to us; and by paying a full and adequate Satisfaction to God's Juſtice, has appeaſed his Wrath and Indignation againſt us. [t] In negotiating with us for God, he not only wooes, and intreats us to be reconciled; but, to engage our Obedience as much as poſſible, has laid ſolemn Injunctions upon us, and theſe ſtrengthened with every Thing that may affect our Hopes and Fears. [u] In negotiating with God for us, he not only prays and intreats him to be reconciled to us, but pleads our Right likewiſe, and prefers our Claim to the Bleſſings, he has purchaſed for us by his Blood, by the daily Preſentation of that ſame Blood before the Throne of Grace. [w] As God's Mediator with us, he calls us by his Word and Sacraments; he diſcovers to us the Secrets of the Will of God; he bleſſes, he ſanctifies, he ſtrengthens, he comforts, he protects, he conducts us in this Life; raiſes us from the Dead, and exalts us to Heaven; And, as our Mediator with God, he takes our Sins upon him; he atones for them with his Blood; he devolves his Merits upon us; he engages, with his Father, for the Performance of our Promiſes; for our Perſeverance in Faith, in Piety, in Sincerity; and, in Caſe of Failing, is always pleading for Mercy, and making Interceſſion for us, that, being renewed in the Spirit of our Minds, we at laſt may become his Rejoicing, by having our Fruit unto Holineſs, and our End everlaſting Life.

The Neceſſity of a Mediator.

THESE are ſome of the Acts of our Saviour's Mediation between God and Man; and from hence it appears, that the Perſon, who undertakes ſuch an Office, [x] ought to be ſo qualified, as to have an equal Power and Intereſt with both Parties; to be of ſufficient Dignity, to approach the Superior; of ſufficient Humility, to give Acceſs to the Inferior; and of ſuch Aſcendency over both, as to have nothing denied him, which he ſhould think proper to aſk. But, if he undertakes to make Satisfaction for the Offences of either Party, he ſhould (over and above all this) be a free and independent Maſter of himſelf; capable of ſuffering, that he may atone for the Delinquent; but uncapable of ſinning himſelf, that he may make his Atonement meritorious: All which is anſwered, by his partaking of the Nature of both. [y] That therefore this high and moſt important Office might more effectually be executed, the eternal Father thought fit to place it in the Hands of his eternal Son, to whom he communicated, from all Eternity, his own divine Eſſence, and whom, in due Time, he appointed to aſſume the human Nature into a perſonal Union with his Divinity, that ſo, being both God and Man in one Perſon, he might be the better accompliſhed to mediate between both.

IN mediating for God with Man, [z] he was to perform the Office of a divine King to rule and govern us, as God's Vicegerent, ſo as, either to reduce us by his Authority or or chaſtiſe us for our Rebellion. And this was a Sphere, ſo vaſt, and ſo ſublime, that nothing, but a Divine Intelligence, could inform it. The chief Seat and Subject of the divine Government is in the Soul of Man; But now, nothing leſs than an Omniſcient Being, can take Cognizance of all the Thoughts and Affections, of all the Purpoſes and Reſolutions, that are ſecretly tranſacted there, in order to reward or puniſh them: Nothing leſs than an Omnipotent Power can order and diſpoſe of all thoſe outward Accidents, whereby theſe Thoughts and Affections, theſe Purpoſes and Reſolutions are, in a great Meaſure, framed and regulated. To over-rule and manage ſuch infinite Numbers of Events, as concern ſuch infinite Numbers of Men, ſo vaſtly diſtant from one another, in Place, Condition, and Temper, requires a Power, that can [a] do whatſoever it pleaſes both in Heaven and Earth: And therefore, ſince our bleſſed Saviour was appointed to this Office, he could, in no Senſe, have been qualified to perform it, without partaking of the Perfections of the Divine Nature, and being, in Reality, what the Evangelical Prophet, ſpeaking of his Government, ſtiles him, [b] wonderful, Counſellor, the mighty God, the everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace.

And his partaking both of the divine and human Nature, 1. On God's Account.

[s] Heb. vii. 25. [t] Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. ii. [u] Scott's Mediator. [w] Claude, ibid. [x] Ibid. [y] Scott's Mediator. [z] Ibid.

AND as, to qualify him for this high Office of mediating with God for Men, it was moſt fit that he ſhould be God; ſo it was no leſs requiſite, that he ſhould be Man. God, we know, is an inviſible Spirit, and, living in Light, that is inacceſſible, can only be approached by our Imaginations; and our Imaginations are generally ſo groſs and ſenſual, that they cannot perceive ſpiritual Objects, and therefore, often form ſuch Miſconceptions of God, as incline them to Idolatry. In Condeſcenſion therefore to this deplorable Weakneſs of their Minds, God has all along vouchſafed to converſe with Mankind under ſome ſenſible Appearance of his Divine Preſence. When he conducted his choſen People through the Red-Sea and the Wilderneſs, he went before them in a Pillar of Cloud by Day, and in a Pillar of Fire by Night; when he gave them the Law from Mount Sinai, he deſcended in a bright and glorious Flame, overcaſt with thick and ſolemn Clouds; and, as ſoon as the Tabernacle was erected, in this Appearance, he made his Entrance into it, and, there conſtantly reſiding, did often exhibit himſelf, to the People's Eyes and Senſes, in a Body of viſible Light and Glory. In Alluſion to this Condeſcenſion to the Jews, St John, in the Beginning of his Goſpel, tells us that, [c] the Word was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us; or (as the Original ſignifies) pitched his Tabernacle in our Fleſh and Nature, from whence we beheld his Glory (viz. at his Baptiſm, and Transfiguration) as the Glory of the only Begotten of the Father; or as the Glory, wherein the Son of God was wont to diſplay himſelf from between two Cherubims. Since therefore, in Compliance with our Weakneſs, it was requiſite, that God ſhould addreſs to our Senſe in ſome viſible Appearance; and ſince, upon many Accounts, there was no viſible Appearance, ſo proper for this Purpoſe, as that of human Nature; it muſt evidently follow from hence, how neceſſary it was, that he ſhould aſſume our Nature to his Deity, that ſo they, whoſe Conceptions could reach no farther than a viſible Emblem of God, [d] might have one, to whom they might pay Divine Worſhip, without Danger of Idolatry, and without Injury to the Divine Nature; even a true and natural Image of God the Father, the Fountain of the Deity, or (as the Apoſtle to the Hebrews deſcribes the Son of God) the Reſplendency, or [e] Brightneſs of his Father's Glory, and the expreſs Character or Image of his Perſon.

2. On Man's. IN mediating for Men with God there were two Things, (as we ſhall have Occaſion to ſhew hereafter) that were requiſite for him to do: 1. To make Atonement for our Sins with his Blood; and, 2. To make Interceſſion for us in Heaven. [f] 1. Foraſmuch then, as the Children are Partakers of Fleſh and Blood, (as the Apoſtle argues in the former Caſe) he alſo himſelf took Part of the ſame, that, through Death he might deſtroy him, who hath the Power of Death, that is, the Devil. [g] His Divine Nature is purely impaſſable; and therefore, to make him capable of ſuffering, ſome other Nature was to be aſſumed, and the human, rather than any other, that Sin might be expiated in the ſame Nature, wherein it was committed: But then the Divine Nature was ſtill to be retained, to make his Sufferings ſufficiently meritorious, both to ſatisfy the Divine Juſtice for what was paſt, and to ſecure the Divine Authority for the future: And accordingly, we are ſaid to be [h] purchaſed with the Blood of God; not that the Divine

[a] Pſal. cxxxv. 6. [b] Iſa. ix. 6. [c] John i. 14. [d] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I.
[e] Heb. i. 3. [f] Ibid. ii. 14. [g] Scott's Mediator, and Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. ii.
[h] Acts xx. 28.

Divine Eſſence can any Way ſuffer, or bleed, but, being united into one Perſon with the human Nature, the Properties of the human, and the Actions and Paſſions thence proceeding, may not unfitly be attributed to the Divine. And therefore, ſince in the Perſon of Chriſt, God was united to Man, whatever his Humanity ſuffered, may be truly called the Suffering of God; and, in this Senſe, was a Suffering equivalent to the eternal Puniſhment of the whole World of Sinners.

BUT, 2*dly*, as he was to be our Advocate and Interceſſor, in all Things, [l] it behoved him (as the Apoſtle argues again) to be made like unto his Brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful High-Prieſt, in Things pertaining to God, to make Reconciliation for the Sins of the People; for in that himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. The ſenſible Experience he had of the Weakneſs and Infirmity of our Nature, while he was among us, will make him more nearly concerned, and more tenderly touched with Compaſſion for it; and conſequently, ſollicit its Cauſe and Intereſt, at the Right-Hand of God, with greater Zeal and Importunity. But then, to make his Sollicitations available, it was requiſite, that he ſhould retain his Divine Nature, thereby to preſerve his Intereſt in the Court of Heaven, that we, in his Name, might, at all Times, [k] come boldly to the Throne of Grace, and find Favour and [l] Acceptance in the Beloved.

THUS, to qualify Chriſt for the ſeveral Parts and Offices of his Mediation, it was highly expedient, that he ſhould be both God and Man in one Perſon. [m] To diſcharge his Prophetical Office, he muſt be God, that he might deliver his Rules and Doctrines with more Authority and Efficacy, than any mere Creature could; and he muſt be Man, that he might more familiarly converſe with us, and convey the Counſels of God, in ſuch a Manner, as Man could receive. To diſcharge his Prieſtly Office, both of Expiation, and Interceſſion; he muſt be Man, to make him capable of ſuffering; and God, to make his Sufferings meritorious; Man, to make him intercede with Compaſſion to us; and God, to give him Credit above, and make his Interceſſions prevalent: And to diſcharge his Kingly Office, he muſt be God, to appoint us Laws; and Man, to go before us in obeying them; God, to conquer and ſubdue our Enemies; and Man, to encourage us in our ſpiritual Warfare by his Example: For ſo the Apoſtle tells us, [n] that it became him, for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things, in bringing many Sons to Glory, to make the Captain of our Salvation perfect through Sufferings.

The ſeveral Offices of Chriſt's Mediatorſhip.

THE Wants, which the World laboured under, before the Coming of Chriſt, were chiefly theſe,——The Want of a ſufficient Teacher to inſtruct them in the Will of God, for which Reaſon he was ſent as a Prophet; the Want of a ſufficient Sacrifice, and Interceſſor with God, for which Reaſon he was conſtituted a Prieſt; and the Want of a Conqueror to ſubdue their Enemies, and a Law-giver to direct their Obedience, for which Reaſon he was appointed a King: And how excellently fitted and accompliſhed he was for theſe ſeveral Offices, as well as how fully and effectually he has diſcharged them, we ſhall now endeavour to make appear.

A PROPHET.

I. THO' the Word Prophet, according to its common Acceptation, denotes one who foretels future Events, yet, in a ſtrict Etymology, it ſignifies no more, than a Perſon, who ſpeaks from, or [o] in the Stead of another: And when that other is God, it means one, [p] that expounds and makes known his Will to us by a Divine Revelation. How well fitted and accompliſhed our bleſſed Saviour was for this Purpoſe, the holy Evangeliſt has taken Care to inform us; [q] No Man, ſaith he, has ſeen God at any Time, the only begotten Son, who is in the Boſom of the Father, he hath declared him. And indeed his being in the Boſom of the Father, i. e. his being ſo near and intimate to him, did perfectly qualify him to reveal his Will to Mankind, becauſe, in that Nearneſs and Intimacy, he could not but have a perfect Knowledge of him; not by the Inſtruction of Angels, or by Dreams and Viſions, as other Prophets had: Nay, nor merely by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt, but by an immediate Perſonal Intuition of his Father's Thoughts and Purpoſes, which, from all Eternity, were expoſed to his View and Proſpect. [r] No Man hath aſcended up to Heaven, (ſays the ſame Evangeliſt in another Place) but he that came down from HEAVEN, [l] Heb. ii. 17, 18. [k] Ibid. iv. 16. [l] Eph. i. 6. [m] Bates's Harmony. [n] Heb. ii. 10. [o] In which Senſe the Prepoſition περὶ is the ſame in Compoſition with ὑπὲρ. Thus God ſaid to Moſes, I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, and Aaron thy Brother ſhall be thy Prophet, i. e. he ſhall be thy Mouth, to deliver to Pharaoh what I ſhall deliver to thee. Exod. vii. 1. [p] In this Senſe the Poets were anciently called the Prophets of the Muſes; and St Paul, quoting a Paſſage out of Epimenides, (Tit. i. 12.) calls him a Prophet, though, if we may credit Ariſtotle, ὁ περὶ τῶν ἐσομένων μαντεύετο, he never propheſied of Things to come. Rhet. Lib. iii. c. 17. [q] John i. 18. [r] Ibid. iii. 13.

HEAVEN, even the Son of Man: [t] He might have come down from Heaven inrobed with Splendour and Light, and preached his Goſpel to the World, in the Midſt of a Choir of Angels, from ſome bright Throne in the Cloud; but, as he conſulted our Advantage, more than his own Majeſty, he knew very well, that it would be more for our Intereſt to conduct us by his Example, than to amaze us by his Appearance: And therefore he choſe to appear to us in our own Nature, that ſo, by going before, as a Man, he might, by his Example, ſhew us, what it became Men to do, and trace out the Way of Happineſs to us by the Print of his own Footſteps. Thus coming from the Boſom of his Father with a full and perfect Knowledge of his Will, and coming in the Form of the Son of Man, to make his Addreſſes eaſy and familiar to us, as well as conduct us by his Example, he was every Way accompliſhed for the Prophetick Office; and how well and effectually he has executed the ſame, we may beſt perceive, by conſidering the Excellency of the Revelation he has left us, in Reſpect of the Things neceſſary to be known and practiſed, in order to our Salvation.

The Excellency of Chriſt's Doctrines, in Relation to what we are to know concerning the Nature of God.

1. THE Things neceſſary for us to know, are, the Nature of God, and his Attributes; the Original and Demerit of our Sins; the Way of atoning for them; and the Methods of our being juſtified and ſanctified here in this World, in order to be glorified in the World to come. [t] That there is a God, and that there is but one God; that the only one God is incorporeal, inviſible, immortal, eternal, omnipotent, omniſcient, of Infinite Juſtice, Wiſdom, and Goodneſs, the Maker of Heaven and Earth, the Supreme Governor of the World, and of all Things therein, and a gracious Rewarder of thoſe, that ſeek him, is abſolutely neceſſary to be known by all, who would attain eternal Life; and it cannot be doubted, but that the Faithful, from the Beginning, had this Knowledge of God: But then, before the coming of Chriſt, they had not ſo certain, ſo clear, and ſo diſtinct a Knowledge of theſe Things, as we have now under the Goſpel. For, over and above the Knowledge of theſe Things, which the Pious before Moſes had, either from a ſerious Contemplation of the Works of God, or from the Tradition and Inſtruction of the Patriarchs, and which the Jews, in ſucceeding Ages, had from the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets; we Chriſtians have a more clear, more diſtinct, and evident Manifeſtation thereof, from the Books of the Evangeliſts, and Apoſtles. What was obſcurely delivered, and hidden under a Veil in the Old Teſtament, is diſcovered openly, and placed in a full Light by the New.

THE Doctrine of the ever-bleſſed Trinity may perhaps, by learned Men be traced, and ſome obſcure Footſteps thereof diſcerned in the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets; but it is ſo legibly written, and ſo clearly and plainly expreſſed in the Writings of the Apoſtles, that there is no Need of Learning to diſcover its being taught therein, though a great deal of Learning (falſely ſo called) has been uſed, to puzzle and perplex, and, by nice and metaphyſical Diſtinctions, to obſcure the Truths, that are there plainly and expreſsly delivered. The Faithful, under the Jewiſh Diſpenſation (not to mention the Wiſeſt among the Gentiles) did, without Doubt, believe God to be an inviſible, and omnipreſent Spirit; and yet his frequent Appearances, ſometimes under one Reſemblance, and ſometimes under another; the Building of an Ark, a Tabernacle, and Temple, whither he was pleaſed to call his People together into his immediate Preſence, and to talk with him (as [u] Moſes expreſſes it) Face to Face, muſt neceſſarily turn their Eyes and Minds towards the Mercy-Seat; make them apprehend God ſhut up, as it were, within the Holy of Holies, and conſequently, perplex and obſcure their Notions of his Spirituality and Omnipreſence: Whereas there is no Room now, under the Goſpel, for any groſs Conceptions of the Deity, when we are not called upon to turn our Eyes towards a viſible Tabernacle, but [*] to pray every where, in any Place, lifting up holy Hands; and are taught by Chriſt, [x] that God is a Spirit, and that they, who worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in Spirit and in Truth. The Philoſophers of old, as well as the Believers under the Law, were perſuaded, that all Things were ordered and governed by an all-wiſe and all-powerful Being; and yet the moſt ſagacious of them were not able to account for the Juſtice of Divine Providence, in ſuffering the Wicked to proſper, and the Righteous to be afflicted. But now, this Difficulty every common Chriſtian is able to ſolve, by the Help of what he has learned from the Goſpel, concerning the Retributions butions of a future State; and can apply to all ſuch Caſes the Reflection, made by Abraham on the rich Man's Deſire of ſome Relief from Lazarus, [y] Son, remember that thou, in thy Life-time, receivedſt thy good Things, and likewiſe Lazarus evil Things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented.

[t] Scott's Mediator. [t] Smalridge's Sermons. [u] Deut. v. 4. [*] 1 Tim. ii. 1.
[x] John iv. 24.

The Nature of Sin.

2. THE Nature and Obliquity of Sin is what Men, in all Ages, could not but perceive; but, how to account for its Cauſe and Origin they were at a ſtrange Loſs: And therefore ſome imagined a pre-exiſtent State, from whence they brought Depravity along with them, while others deviſed two contrary Principles, equally actuating the World, the one the Author of all the Good, and the other of all the Evil they did. [z] The Wickedneſs of Man (as Moſes tells us) was great in the Earth, and every Imagination of the Thoughts of his Heart was evil continually; but whether theſe Expreſſions are to be extended to the whole Race of Mankind, and ſo are a Proof of the general Depravation, has been doubted by ſome; whereas all ſuch Doubts muſt now be ſilenced by the plain Aſſertions of the New Teſtament, that † by one Man Sin entered into the World, and Death by Sin, ſo that [a] by the Offence of one, Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation; that all who are of the Race of Mankind, are Sinners, ungodly, Enemies of God, Children of the Devil, and by [b] Nature the Children of Wrath; that, [c] when they would do Good, Evil is preſent with them, having a Law in their Members warring againſt the Law of their Mind, and bringing them into Captivity to the Law of Sin; and that this is the State of depraved Nature, wherein Men are born, and wherein thoſe that live and die ſhall [d] be puniſhed with everlaſting Deſtruction, from the Preſence of the Lord, and from the Glory of his Power.

Its Atonement.

3. AND as the Goſpel gives us a more diſtinct Account of the Origin and Demerit of Sin, ſo does it furniſh us with a clearer Diſcovery of the Method, whereby the Guilt of it is atoned. Thoſe, who lived under the Law of Nature, as well as thoſe, who lived under the Moſaick Diſpenſation, were ſaved by the ſame Means of Redemption, as we, who live under the Evangelical; but the Myſtery of our common Redemption was not, in any Degree, ſo fully manifeſted to them, as it is to us; And hence it is, that the Apoſtle compares the Writings of the Old Teſtament (which yet far exceeded thoſe of the greateſt Sages in the heathen World) to a [e] Light, or (as the Original is) to a Candle, ſhining in a dark Place; but the Revelation, which was made by Chriſt in the Goſpel, to the Day-dawn, and the Day-ſtar ariſing in our Hearts. The Revelation, made to the Jews, was to them a Light, but a faint one; it ſhone, but in a dark Place. The Nativity, Life, and Death of Chriſt, the ſeveral Offices of his Mediatorſhip, the Remiſſion of our Sins through his Blood, the Sanctification of our Hearts by his Spirit, and the Glories of the World to come, were taught them, not in Words at Length, but in Figures; and a dark Veil was over the Writings, as well as over [f] the Face of Moſes, ſo that the Children of Iſrael could not ſtedfaſtly behold his Doctrine, any more than they could his Countenance. In a Word, [g] they were ſaved, as well as we, by the Blood of Chriſt; but there was as great a Difference between their Knowledge of the Myſtery of our Redemption by the Sacrifice of the Death of Chriſt, and ours, as there was between that dark Cloud, wherewith God led the People at one Time, and that Pillar of Light, wherewith he guided them at another.

Our Juſtification.

4. AND as the Goſpel gives us clearer Notions of the Expiation of Sin, ſo does it exhibit a fuller Aſſurance of our being juſtified, or having our Sins pardoned thereby. Religious Perſons, who lived before the Coming of Chriſt, knew that they were Sinners, and that they therefore had Need of the Favour and Mercy of God, for the Remiſſion of their Sins; but then, being not ſufficiently inſtructed in the Method of obtaining God's Favour, they could not but groan ſorely under the Weight of them. Severe Curſes were denounced in the Law againſt all, who ſhould, in any Caſe, tranſgreſs it; theſe Curſes were plain, and eaſy to be underſtood; but the Promiſes of a Pardon, through the Merits of a Saviour, were more intricate and involved: When therefore the Danger, which threatened them, was ſo apparent, and the Methods of their Eſcape ſo obſcurely notified to them, it is no Wonder, if their Fears did very much over-balance their Hopes. Hence it is, that the Spirit, by which they were governed, is, in the Goſpel, repreſented as a Spirit of [y] Luke xvi. 25. [z] Gen. vi. 5. † Rom. v. 12. [a] Ibid. ver. 18. [b] Eph. ii. 3.

[c] Rom. vii. 21, 23. [d] 2 Theſſ. i. 9. [e] 2 Pet. i. 19. [f] 2 Cor. iii. 7. [g] Smalridge's Sermons.

Bondage, but the Spirit, by which we Chriſtians are influenced, is a Spirit of Adoption: [h] Ye have not now, ſays the Apoſtle, received the Spirit of Bondage again to fear, but ye have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry ABBA FATHER, i. e. whereby we are as well aſſured of the Love of God, as a Child is of the Affection of an indulgent Father; as ſurely intitled to the Joys of Heaven, as an adopted Son is to the Inheritance of him, who therefore adopted him, that he might make him his Heir; for (as the Apoſtle goes on to diſplay the Privileges of the Chriſtian) the Spirit itſelf beareth Witneſs with our Spirit, that we are the Children of God, and if Children, then Heirs; Heirs of God, and Joint-Heirs with Chriſt.

And future Glory.

5. AND as the Aſſurances given us of this Inheritance, are greater; ſo, laſtly, is the Inheritance itſelf much more plainly revealed to us in the Goſpel, than ever it was before. Whatever could be learned of a future State from the Light of Reaſon, that, and much more, was known to the Jews: What, by Reaſon, and by Revelation was made known to the Jews, concerning an immortal Life, that, and much more, is revealed to us Chriſtians. The Texts, in which a future State is revealed to the Jews, are few, and here and there thinly ſcattered, in ſome particular Books of the Old Teſtament; but there is no one Book, ſcarce one Chapter, in which this Doctrine is not taught in the New. Thoſe, in the Old Teſtament, are not ſo clear of Ambiguity, but that they are capable of another Interpretation, and even are actually interpreted of temporal Promiſes by ſome pious and learned Chriſtians; thoſe in the New are ſo clear, that there is no Room for the moſt ignorant to miſapprehend, or the moſt impious to pervert them. Some in the Old Teſtament ſeem not more clearly to aſſert an immortal Life, than others do to deny it; and even the ſame Writer ſometimes delivers Things upon this Head, which, at firſt View, appear to be inconſiſtent; but, as a future State of Happineſs and Miſery is ſupported by many more Texts in the Goſpel, and thoſe much more clear, than in the Law; ſo can it not be pretended, that it is in the leaſt impugned by any ſuſpicious Paſſage, through the whole New Teſtament; and therefore it is with great Juſtice, that the Author of the Epiſtle to the Hebrews (who himſelf was excellently well verſed in the Knowledge of the Jewiſh Law) hath obſerved, that [i] the Law had only a Shadow of good Things to come, but not the very Image of the Things; i. e. it did, but obſcurely and faintly, typify the Glories of Heaven; not give us ſo bright an Image, and ſo lively a Repreſentation of the Rewards of another World, as is pictured out to us, and, in all its full Proportion and Lineaments, accurately deſcribed in the Goſpel; wherein the [k] Myſtery, (as the Apoſtle words it) which hath been hid from Ages, and from Generations, God hath now made manifeſt to his Saints.

The Excellency of Chriſt's Doctrine in Relation to what we are to do, in our Duty to God.

THESE are ſome of the Pre-eminences of the Chriſtian Revelation, in what we are to know; and, if we proceed now to the Conſideration of what we are to do, we ſhall perceive the like Excellency and Perfection in it. For, 1. with Relation to God, the full Diſcovery, which the Goſpel has made of his Nature and Attributes, [l] teacheth us, to place the true and acceptable Worſhip of him, not ſo much in poſitive and ritual Obſervances, as in approaching him with pure Hearts, and undefiled Bodies, with unfeigned Repentance for all paſt Miſcarriages, and ſincere Reſolutions of conſtant Obedience for the future; teacheth us, to pray to him for every Thing we want, and to return him our moſt hearty Thanks for every good Thing, we receive, with ſuch Submiſſion and Humility, ſuch Truſt and Reliance on him, as are the proper Affections of dutiful Children. All the great Men among the Heathens were defective, in Point of Piety, by Reaſon of their Ignorance of the Divine Nature: [m] Even Ariſtotle, who was ſo clear-ſighted in other Matters, when he comes to diſcourſe of God, not only in his Phyſicks, where he conſiders him as the firſt Cauſe, and Mover of all Things, but even in his Morals, where he was naturally led to treat of him, as an Object deſerving our moſt ardent Love and Affection, is far from making any ſuch Repreſentation of him, though the Love of God is that alone, which gives Price and Value to all moral Virtues. In the Platonick Philoſophy indeed, there are ſome Things, that have a Tendency this Way; but then they are ſo frigidly, and ſo obſcurely expreſſed, that, like the Inſcription on an ancient defaced Marble, they are hardly legible: 'Tis the ſingular Character of the Goſpel, and what diſtinguiſhes it from all human Inſtitutions, that it repreſents the infinite Amiableneſs of God, and his manifold Goodneſs to us, in ſuch a Manner, as to excite our our Affections, and enliven our Devotions with the moſt ſeraphick Love. For who can refuſe the Oblation of his whole Heart to God, who conſiders, that [n] God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only-begotten Son everlaſtingly to ſave it; or, who [o] beholds what Manner of Love the Father hath beſtowed upon us, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God? Thus a ſpiritual and internal Service, proceeding from a Principle of Love, and terminating in the Glory of God, it becomes the Duty of a Chriſtian; though an Heathen or Jewiſh Worſhipper might be excuſed, if, moved by no higher Principle than Fear and the Dread of Puniſhment, they intended no more than a bare Performance of outward Ceremonies in God's Service.

[h] Rom. viii. 15, &c. [i] Heb. x. 1. [k] Col. i. 26. [l] Clarke, on the Being and Attributes. [m] Bates's Harmony.

2. WITH Relation to our Neighbour, the Notice which the Goſpel gives us of his near Relation to us; that we are not only ſprung from the ſame Original, and Partakers of the ſame Nature, but are admitted into the ſame Fellowſhip, and Partakers of the ſame Grace; that, [p] by one Spirit, we are all baptized into one Body, whether we be Jew or Gentile, whether we be Bond or Free, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit; and that, [q] as we have many Members in one Body, and all Members have not the ſame Office; ſo we, being many, are one Body in Chriſt, and every one Members one of another: The ſtrict Union, I ſay, which the Goſpel diſcovers, in making us all Members of one and the ſame Body, whereof Chriſt is the Head, plainly teaches us, what endeavouring Love and Sympathy ſhould interfere between Chriſtians; that, [r] as when one Member ſuffers, all the Members ſuffer with it; or when one Member is honoured, all the Members rejoice with it; ſo ſhould we [s] be kindly affectioned one to another; rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep; [t] be pitiful, be courteous, not rendering Evil for Evil, nor Railing for Railing, [u] that there be no Schiſm in the Body, but, contrariwiſe, Bleſſing; being ready to aſſiſt, and willing to do good Offices, not only to Friends, but even to our bittereſt Enemies; tho' ſuch Inſtances of Kindneſs and Condeſcenſion, to People bred up under a ſeverer Diſpenſation, where Revenge was held glorious, and Retaliations tolerated, might ſeem Marks of an abject Spirit, and imprudent Provocations of future Affronts. Our Duty to our Neighbour.

3. WITH Relation to ourſelves, the Knowledge, which the Goſpel gives us of the Tendency of our Nature, † that, notwithſtanding the near Union and Commerce that is between Soul and Body, there are no two in the World at ſuch Enmity one with another, none that drive on ſuch quite different Intereſts, as they; that all our fleſhly Luſts are an Army, that war againſt the Soul, and the ſpeedieſt Way to Ruin is to hearken to the Whiſpers of our own Boſom; this Knowledge of ourſelves, I ſay, teacheth us, that Humiliation and Poverty of Spirit, the Mortification of our Paſſions and Inclinations; and, in order thereunto, ſuch voluntary Reſtraints and Inflictions, as the Goſpel calls taking up the Croſs, are neceſſary Parts of a Chriſtian's Duty, though they never came into the Catalogue of Heathen Virtues. And, laſtly, the Knowledge, which the Goſpel gives us of the World; that it is but a Paſſage, and not a Place of Abode; that here we are Strangers and Pilgrims, and muſt therefore expect croſs Accidents, and not every Thing accommodated to our liking; that we are deſigned for an happier Country, and muſt therefore look upon this, as a Place of Exerciſe, rather than Enjoyment; that our chief Intereſt is not here, but above, and therefore the Love of the World muſt needs be Enmity with God; becauſe to place our Affections here, is to vilify that better Proviſion, which he hath made for us: This Repreſentation, I ſay, which the Goſpel gives us of the World, teacheth us, that Patience under our greateſt Sufferings, and Abſtinence even in the moſt lawful Pleaſures; that Heavenly-mindedneſs, and Contempt of the World, and chuſing rather to die, than commit a moral Evil, are the neceſſary Offices of a Chriſtian, though a Jew might have been excuſed, if he had looked upon them as Indiſcretions. Our Duty to ourſelves.

IN a Word, [x] the Rules which Chriſt hath left us, for the Direction of our religious Services, for the governing our Paſſions, for ſuppreſſing the firſt Motions of unclean Deſires, for putting up Injuries, for enlarging the Object of our Charity to Strangers, to Enemies, to all Mankind; the Commands, ſo often repeated, of forſaking all, and laying down our Life for the Sake of Truth and our Duty, and the reſtraining his Followers from ſome Liberties, allowed the Jews, in Regard to Polygamy and Divorce: Theſe, and ſome other Inſtances, have not undeſervedly been thought Its Excellency above the old Moral Law.

[n] John iii. 16. [o] 1 John iii. 1. [p] 1 Cor. xii. 13. [q] Rom. xii. 4, 5. [r] 1 Cor. xii. 26. [s] Rom. xii. 10, 15. [t] 1 Pet. iii. 8, 9. [u] 1 Cor. xii. 25.

† Young's Sermons, Vol. I. Stanhope's Sermons, at Boyle's Lectures.

thought Commands perfectly new, and peculiar to the Goſpel. But ſuppoſe they are contained in the old moral Law, yet this muſt be allowed, that the Advantage is very great in the Goſpel-Promulgation of them: For, ſince the conſtituent Parts of a Law are its Precepts and its Sanction, there is no Doubt to be made, but that one Law may excel another, in either, or in both theſe Reſpects. In Reſpect of the former, the Law, that is full, and clear, and expreſs, is confeſſedly more perfect, than one that is dark, and perplexed, and involved in general Terms, which leave Men to find out the Meaſure of their Duty by remote Conſequences: And, in Reſpect of the latter, a Law is more or leſs perfect, according to the Encouragement it propoſes to the Obſervation, or the Penalty it threatens to the Tranſgreſſion of it. Since then the moral Law has, under the Chriſtian State, explained Men's Duty more fully, and if not extended it farther, yet expreſſed it in its juſt and utmoſt Extent; ſince it has cut off all Evaſions, from pretended Ignorance, in many Caſes of great Importance, which neither the common People, nor even the Teachers of the Jews held themſelves obliged to before; ſince it engages our utmoſt Diligence, by expreſs Promiſes of eternal Life, which the Law, under the old OEconomy, did no where poſitively covenant for; ſince it reſtrains the Sinner by Threatenings of certain and eternal Vengeance, whereas the other denounced only temporal Sufferings: In a Word, ſince the Goſpel-Compenſation is an Over-balance for all we can do, or endure, to attain it; and the Goſpel-Penalty ſuch, as no Pleaſure or preſent Profit can make us Amends for incurring it; but the Law, ſuppoſing it to require all that the Goſpel requires, (as Dying for Religion in particular) does not propoſe a valuable Conſideration for the Duties it enjoins; it cannot but be granted, that the moral Law is exalted by Jeſus and his Doctrine; and that, either by adding to the Matter of it, or, at leaſt, by adding to the Clearneſs and Strength, to the Efficacy and Obligation of it, he hath left it a more perfect Rule and Motive of Obedience, than he found it at his Coming.

Chriſt's ſecond mediatorial Office.

II. THE ſecond Branch of Chriſt's mediatorial Office is his Prieſthood, whereby he becomes both our Atonement for Sin, and our Advocate with Almighty God. In the firſt Ages of the World, it cannot be denied, but that, in Matters which concerned himſelf alone, every one was his own Prieſt. Thus, in ſacrificing to God upon their own Accounts, [y] Cain and Abel officiated for themſelves; but, in Sacrifices of a more general Nature, [z] the Inſtances of Noah and * Job make it manifeſt, that the Father of each Family was the Prieſt. In Proceſs of Time, when Families began to multiply into Tribes, and greater Societies, the Prince of each Country was alſo the ſupreme Prieſt of it; ſo that [a] the Sacerdotal Honour was, for a long while, annexed to the Regal. In the Days of Abraham, we find, that Melchiſedec was both [b] the King of Salem, and the Prieſt of the Moſt High God; and the Reaſon why the ſacred Hiſtory takes Notice of him more eſpecially, is not becauſe he was the only Perſon inveſted with this double Character, but becauſe all other Kings, that were contemporary with him, had, very probably, revolted to Idolatry, ſo that he only remained the Prieſt of the Moſt High God.

A PRIEST.

The Difference between the Prieſthood of Aaron, and that of Melchiſedec.

WHO this Melchiſedec was, and in what Senſe thoſe Characters are to be taken, wherein [c] the Author to the Hebrews has deſcribed him, in order to make his Prieſthood a more perfect Type of Chriſt's, is what we had Occaſion to take Notice of before; and need only obſerve farther, wherein the main Difference between the Aaronical and Melchiſedecal Prieſthood (which was prefigurative of that of Chriſt) may not improperly be ſaid to conſiſt. The Conjunction of the two Offices of King and Prieſt in one Perſon was undoubtedly continued until the Time of Moſes; for we find that Prince and Law-giver of Iſrael officiating likewiſe as their Prieſt, in [d] the ſolemn Sacrifice at the Foot of Mount Horeb, whereby he confirmed the Covenant between God and them. 'Tis very probable therefore, that the firſt Separation, which was ever made of theſe two Officers, was in the Perſon of Aaron, whom God appointed to [y] Gen. iv. 3, 4. [z] Ibid. viii. 20. * Job i. 5. [a] Thus Ariſtotle has obſerved, that μοναρχίᾳ καὶ ἱερατείᾳ, to rule and ſacrifice, were Offices conjoined in the ſame Perſon, Pol. Lib. iii. Rex Anius, Rex idem hominum Phœbique Sacerdos, is a Line in Virgil, (Æn. iii.) whereupon Servius has this Note, Sane majorum hæc erat conſuetudo, ut Rex eſſet etiam Sacerdos vel Pontifex. Which Cuſtom was, for a long while, continued in Egypt, and from thence derived to the Greeks, and from them to the Romans, as Plutarch (Quæſt. Rom. p. 279.) tells us, τὸ παλαιὸν οἱ Βασιλεῖς τὰ πλεῖστα καὶ μάλιστα τῶν ἱερῶν ἔδρων, i. e. of Old, Kings performed the moſt, and greateſt Parts of the ſacred Rites, and, together with the Prieſts, ſacrificed the Victims, &c. and therefore Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, ſpeaking of the Power of Kings, tells us expreſsly, πρῶτον μὲν ἱερῶν καὶ θυσιῶν ἡγεμονίαν ἴσχον, &c. i. e. They had the Government of Sacrifices and ſacred Rites, whatſoever was to be done to the Holy Gods, was done by them. [b] Heb. vii. 1. [c] Ibid. vii. [d] Exod. xxiv. 6, 7.

to the Prieſthood, but without any Regal Power, and ordered it ſo to continue ſucceſſively in his Family. During this Separation, none could be a Prieſt of the Aaronical Order, but ſuch as were deſcended from his Loins. Our Saviour therefore, being ſprung, not from the Houſe of Aaron, but from that of Judah, which was the Royal Line, could not be of the Aaronical Order; but re-aſſuming the Prieſtly Office from the Tribe of Aaron, and rejoining it to the Kingly Office, with which it was originally united, he thereby became a Royal Prieſt, after the ancient Order of Melchiſedeck, which was prior to that of Aaron. The Difference therefore between the Aaronical and Melchiſedecal Prieſthood does not, as ſome imagine, conſiſt in the Nature of their Sacrifices, as if Melchiſedeck had ſacrificed only inanimate Things, whereas Aaron ſacrificed Animals: Their Sacrifices, in this Reſpect, were certainly both alike; otherwiſe, how could Aaron's bloody Sacrifices be typical of our Saviour's Prieſthood (which was after the Order of Melchiſedeck) if Melchiſedeck's Prieſthood admitted of no bloody Sacrifices? And therefore the true Difference between the two Orders was this—That, whereas the Regal Power was united to Melchiſedeck's Prieſthood, it was wholly ſeparate from Aaron's, who, in all Probability, was the firſt High-Prieſt in the World, that was not a King, as well as a Prieſt.

Wherein the Prieſthood of Aaron and that of Chriſt both differ and agree.

THE Author to the Hebrews has made uſe of ſeveral Inſtances, thereby to ſhew, both the Difference, and Similitude, between the Prieſthood of Chriſt, and that of the Houſe of Aaron. They differ, in that the latter was repoſed in the Hands of frail Men; was deſtitute of all Regal Power; deſigned for no long Continuance; and incapable of making any effectual Atonement for Sin, and was therefore obliged to repeat, every Day, ſuch Sacrifices, as were only available to the purifying of the Fleſh: Whereas the former was committed to the Adminiſtration of the Son of God; was inveſted with ſovereign Power and Dignity; was effectual to Expiation of all Kinds of Sin; and deſigned to abide as long as the Sun and Moon endure, &c. but herein they agree; that, whereas every High-Prieſt is ordained for Men, in Things pertaining to God, i. e. to avert his Anger, and obtain his Favour and Bleſſings for them; there are two more eminent Acts, whereunto they were both appointed: Firſt, to offer Sacrifices for the Sins of the People; and then, ſecondly, to preſent ſuch Sacrifices to God, in order to make Interceſſion for them. To this Purpoſe we read, that the High-Prieſt under the Law (eſpecially on the great Day of Expiation, when he ſtood in his neareſt Reſemblance of Chriſt acting in his ſacerdotal Capacity) was appointed to bring the Beaſt, which was ſet apart to die for the Sins of the People, to the Door of the Tabernacle, and there to kill it with his own Hands; after which, he was to take the Blood of it, and, preſenting it before the Lord in the Holy of Holies, was to ſprinkle it, ſeven Times, with his Finger, upon, and before, the Mercy-Seat: Both which Offices the Author to the Hebrews plainly aſcribes to our bleſſed Saviour, and makes them typical of what he did; for [g] Chriſt, ſays he, being come an High-Prieſt of good Things to come, by a greater, and more perfect Tabernacle, not made with Hands, that is to ſay, not of this Building; neither by the Blood of Goats and Calves, but by his own Blood, he entered in once, into the holy Place, having obtained eternal Redemption for us.

The Neceſſity of Chriſt's Prieſthood, as to Sacrifice.

THAT Sacrifices are Acts of Religion addreſſed to God; [h] that they were of different Kinds, and deſigned for different Purpoſes; ſome, as decent Tributes and Significations of Gratitude, due to the Divine Bounty for Benefits already received; others, as Atonements for Offences committed, to avert that Diſpleaſure and Puniſhment, to which Men, conſcious of their Guilt, apprehend themſelves liable; all, as Means judged proper for procuring Favour and Bleſſing from the Fountain of all Goodneſs; are Truths ſo manifeſt, and ſo univerſally allowed, as not to need either Proof or Enlargement. Whence the Practice of expiating Sin by Sacrifice had its firſt Riſe; whether from human Diſcourſe, or (what ſeems more probable) from Divine Inſtitution, and was afterwards propagated from Age to Age by Tradition, is no Part of our preſent Buſineſs to enquire. That the Wages of Sin is Death, and that, without ſhedding of Blood, there is no Remiſſion of Sin; theſe two Notions (whence ſoever they came into the Minds of Men) ſeem to have ſuggeſted the Rite of offering up living Sacrifices at firſt. Sadly ſenſible they were that they had ſinned; their Lives they knew they had forfeited by their Sin; [i] but how to redeem them, and appeaſe the Wrath of God, this they were ignorant of. The beſt Expedient, that could be thought on, in this Exigence, was the ſacrificing Brutes, and ſubſtituting one [f] Scott's Mediator. [g] Heb. ix. 11, 12. [h] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [i] Scott, ibid.

Life in the Room of another? But, alas! This would not do: For what Proportion is there between the momentary Sufferings of a Beaſt, and the eternal Sufferings, which are due to Sin? The Death of a Beaſt is a Puniſhment far ſhort of the Death of a Man, but infinitely ſhort of that eternal Death, to which a Man's Sinfulneſs conſigns him. And therefore the Heathens, finding the Imperfection of theſe Sacrifices, in Caſes of great Extremity, and where they had highly offended God indeed, were accuſtomed to ſacrifice Men. But here likewiſe they were miſerably miſtaken: They never conſidered that the Men, whom they offered, were Sinners, as well as themſelves, and that it was a greater Flaw in an Expiatory Sacrifice, to be a Sinner, than to be a Brute.

And as to Interceſſion.

AND, as Mankind, before the Coming of Chriſt, ſtood in need of a ſufficient Sacrifice, ſo wanted they no leſs a powerful Advocate, to whom they might addreſs, and by whom they might find Acceſs to the Moſt High God. For this was the natural Effect of Sin in all Ages, that it, filling Mens Minds with dreadful Apprehenſions of God, and making them afraid to approach him of themſelves, [k] drove them to the Neceſſity, either of giving off all Intercourſe with him, or of finding out ſome other, to make Interceſſion for them; and this ſeems to have given Riſe to the firſt Inſtitution of Demon-worſhip among the Gentiles. Their Minds were ſo ſtung with the Senſe and Remembrance of their Guilt, that they could not approach God without Horror and Anxiety; and thereupon they caſt about to find out other Beings, that might interpoſe with him on their Account: And being informed by Tradition, that there were certain middle Beings, between God and Man, called Angels, or Demons; theſe they addreſſed with Petitions, and bribed with Sacrifices, to uſe what Intereſt they had with the Supreme God, in their Favour. However this be, 'tis certain, that the Jews, who had no explicit Revelation of a Mediator, were always tremulous in their Approaches to God, and, whenever they had gone aſtray, diffident of their Reception to Mercy; which is the beſt Reaſon, that can be given, why we meet with ſo many melancholy Expoſtulations from them, Wilt thou be angry for ever? Haſt thou forgotten to be gracious? Wilt thou turn away thy Face for ever, and remember thy loving Kindneſs no more? Thus deſtitute was the World both of a ſufficient Atonement for Sin, and of a competent Advocate with God, till Chriſt, whoſe Divine Nature derived an infinite Value upon the Oblation, and whoſe Oblation gives infinite Power and Efficacy to all his Requeſts, [l] appeared in the End of the World to put away Sin by the Sacrifice of himſelf, and is now at the Right-Hand of God making daily Interceſſion for us. Theſe are the great Acts of his ſacerdotal Office: And how well he has quitted himſelf herein, we ſhall now endeavour to evince, by conſidering,

I. THE Nature and Extent of the Sacrifice, he once offerd And,

II. THE Manner and Efficacy of the Interceſſion, he now makes.

Chriſt's Death a real Sacrifice for Sin.

I. THAT the Death of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt was really intended to be a Sacrifice for Sin, in order to pacify the Divine Wrath, and ſatisfy the Divine Juſtice, is manifeſt from thoſe various Texts in Scripture, wherein we are told, that, [m] he was made an Offering for Sin, and [n] brought as a Lamb to the Slaughter; that [o] he is the Lamb, which taketh away the Sins of the World, and [p] who gave his Life a Ranſom for all; [q] that God ſent him to be a Propitiation for our Sins, gave him [r] this Commandment to lay down his Life, and that [s] he loving us, and giving himſelf for us, an Offering and Sacrifice to God, [t] by his Death we have Remiſſion of our Sins, and Reconciliation with God. That Chriſt, this Expiatory Sacrifice, was ſubſtituted in our Room, to undergo the Puniſhment, which we, by our Offences, had incurred, is plain from ſundry Declarations, both in the Old and New Teſtament; that [u] he was cut off, but not for himſelf; that * he bore our Griefs, and carried our Sorrows; was wounded for our Tranſgreſſions, and bruiſed for our Iniquities; [x] was made Sin and a Curſe for us; [y] ſuffered for the Unjuſt, died for the Ungodly, was offered to be bear the Sins of many, and [z] taſted Death for every Man; that [a] through Death he might deſtroy him, that had the Power of Death, that is the Devil, and deliver them, who, through Fear of Death, [k] Scott's Chriſtian Life, Vol. I. [l] Heb. ix. 26. [m] Iſa. liii. 10. [n] Ibid. ver. 7. [o] John i. 29. [p] 1 Tim. ii. 6. [q] 1 John iv. 10. [r] John x. 17, 18. [s] Eph. v. 2. [t] Rom. v. 10. [u] Dan. ix. 26. * Iſa. liii. 4, 5. [x] 2 Cor. v. 21. Gal. iii. 13. [y] 1 Pet. iii. 18. Heb. ix. 28. [z] Heb. ii. 9. [a] Ibid. ver. 14.

Death, were, all their Life-Time, ſubject to Bondage: And that this Sacrifice of ours was allowed and accepted of by God, as a full, perfect, and ſufficient Oblation, and Satisfaction for the Sins of the whole World, is apparent from all thoſe Places wherein we are reminded of the bleſſed Effects of his Paſſion, viz. [b] to finiſh Tranſgreſſion, and make an End of Sin; to make Reconciliation for Iniquity, and to bring in everlaſting Righteouſneſs; wherein we are told, that, [c] the Chaſtiſement of our Peace was upon him, and with his Stripes we are healed; that [d] we are reconciled to the Father in his Croſs, and in the Body of his Fleſh through Death; that [e] we are ſanctified by the offering of his Body once for all, and [f] are redeemed with his Blood, as of a Lamb without Blemiſh, and without Spot. For ſuch is the Excellence of our High-Prieſt; that, whereas [g] every Prieſt, under the Law, ſtandeth daily miniſtring, and offering, oftentimes, the ſame Sacrifices, which can never take away Sins; he, after he had offered one Sacrifice for Sins, in Token of God's Acceptance of it, for ever ſat down on the Right-Hand of God: For by one Offering he hath perfected for ever them, that are ſanctified.

Some Obſervations upon the Cuſtoms in ſacrificing under the Law.

IN theſe and many more Paſſages, which lie diſperſed in all the Parts of the Holy Scriptures, it is as plain, as Words can make any Thing, [h] that the Death of Chriſt is propoſed to us, not only as a Pattern of holy and patient Suffering, but as our Sacrifice and Reconciliation, our Atonement and Redemption. And to confirm us in the Truth of this, as well as to illuſtrate the Force and Energy of ſome of theſe Expreſſions, which allude ſo plainly to the Manner of ſacrificing under the Law, we muſt obſerve, 1. That, in all Sacrifices of Beaſts, the Owner laid his Hand [i] upon the Head of them, not only to ſignify the Property he had in them, but to intimate likewiſe the Tranſlation of his Sin and Guilt upon them; more eſpecially [k] in the Caſe of the Scape-Goat, the Prieſt, as the People's Repreſentative, lays his Hands upon its Head, and, confeſſing their Iniquities over it, is ſaid to put them upon it, and ſends it away, ſuppoſed to be polluted therewith, into the Wilderneſs. 2. That the Bodies of thoſe Beaſts, which were offered with the greateſt Solemnity, were burnt without the Camp, during the Service of the Tabernacle; and without the [l] Gate of Jeruſalem, after the Building of the Temple: And that they conveyed a legal Impurity to thoſe, that touched them, as being in the Eye of the Law charged with their Sins, in whoſe Behalf they were offered. 3. [m] That all ſolemn Offerings were neceſſarily to be performed by the Prieſts, as a Branch of their ſacerdotal Function; and on the great Day of Atonement, even the moſt ſervile Offices of this Kind lay upon the High-Prieſt alone. 4. That, in all Sin-offerings for the People, the Prieſts were to carry the Blood within the Sanctuary, and ſprinkle it ſeven Times before the Veil of the Sanctuary; but, on the Day of Expiation, the High-Prieſt only was to carry it into the Holy of Holies, and there ſprinkle it ſeven Times before the Mercy-Seat. And, 5. That the Uſe of Blood in common Food was therefore prohibited the Jews, becauſe it was appropriated to God's Service; [n] for the Life of the Fleſh, ſays God, is in the Blood, and I have given it to you upon the Altar, to make an Atonement for your Souls; for it is the Blood that maketh an Atonement for the Soul.

Their Uſe in the Explanation of ſome Scripture-Paſſages.

[o] THESE few Obſervations, carried along with us, will, in ſome Meaſure, be a Key to let us into the Propriety and juſt Importance of many Phraſes and Scripture-Paſſages. By theſe we may plainly diſcover the mighty Force and Elegance of the Prophetick Stile, in which God is ſaid [p] to lay on Chriſt the Iniquity of us all; and of the Apoſtles expreſſing the ſame Notion, when they tell us, [q] that he bore our Sins, in his own Body, on the Tree; that [r] he ſuffered without the Gate, to the End that he might ſanctify the People with his own Blood; that [s] God made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin; that [t] being a Prieſt, he muſt of Neceſſity have ſomewhat to offer, and therefore God prepared him a Body, and that with his Blood (which is therefore called [u] the Blood of ſprinkling) he entered into the Holy Place, (i. e. into Heaven, the Antitype of the Holy of Holies) having obtained eternal Redemption for us. Theſe, I ſay, are all of them Terms of a peculiar Energy; and being uſed to Men, who worſhipped God by Sacrifices, they could not, upon their own Principles, but be underſtood to imply, that the ſame Perſon, who is thus declared to ſuffer and die for us, us, did not die only for our Benefit, but in our Stead; by a proper ſacrificial Subſtitution of his Life for ours, and by taking upon himſelf the Puniſhment of thoſe Iniquities, which belonged to us. Nothing leſs than this fills the Ideas of thoſe Terms of Art, thoſe Phraſes, which are otherwiſe jejune and mean; but, in their proper Senſe and due Extent, do prove his Death, in the ſtricteſt Senſe of the Word, to be a true piacular Sacrifice: A Sacrifice, * whoſe Merit and Influence was not confined to the Age, in which is was offered, but had a Retroſpect to Generations long ſince paſt and gone; for Chriſt is [x] the Mediator of the New Teſtament, that by Means of Death, for the Redemption of the Tranſgreſſions under the firſt Teſtament, they, which are called, might receive the Promiſe of eternal Inheritance: And a Sacrifice, which looks forward to all Generations yet unborn; for [y] the Promiſe (ſays St Peter) is to you, and to your Children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God ſhall call; who is [z] become (as St Paul tells us) the Author of eternal Salvation unto all them, that obey him, being able to ſave to the uttermoſt them, that come to God by him, ſeeing he ever liveth to make Interceſſion for them.

[b] Dan. ix. 24. [c] Iſa. liii. 5. [d] Col. i. 21, 22. [e] Heb. x. 10. [f] 1 Pet. i. 19. [g] Heb. x. 11, &c. [h] Burnet, on the Articles. [i] Lev. i. 4. Ch. iii. 2, 8, 10. [k] Lev. xvi. 21, 22. [l] Ibid. vi. 11. [m] Heb. v. 1. [n] Lev. xvii. 11. [o] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [p] Iſa. liii. 6. [q] 1 Pet. ii. 24. [r] Heb. xiii. 12. [s] 2 Cor. v. 21, [t] Heb. viii. and x. [u] Heb. xii. 24.

An Objection againſt Chriſt's Satisfaction.

THUS the whole Tenor of the Goſpel (if we may be allowed to underſtand the Propriety of its Diction) teſtifies, and proclaims aloud, that the Death of our bleſſed Saviour was really and truly a Sacrifice, expiatory of Sin, and ſatisfactory to Divine Juſtice. But here ſome may aſk us, "Why all this Expence for the Expiation of "Sin, when the Thing might have been compaſſed at a much eaſier Rate? Why "ſuch vaſt Pains taken in the Satisfaction of Divine Juſtice, when, once for all, "God might have paſſed an Act of general Indemnity, and cancelled the Tranſgreſ-"ſions of all Mankind, at one Word's ſpeaking? As he is the ſovereign Lord and "Maſter of the Univerſe, he could have forgiven the Iniquities of his People with-"out any penal Exactions; and it ſeems more conſiſtent with the Diſcoveries we "have of his Goodneſs and Clemency, ſo to have forgiven them, than to have "ſtood in need of any external Motive to oblige him. At leaſt, if any Compen-"ſation was requiſite, ſomething of leſs Moment (the Sacrifices, for inſtance, ap-"pointed under the Law, or Sufferings of ſome good Man, or mighty Angel) "might have been deemed more proper and convenient, than the Offering up of the "Son of God, the moſt innocent, and moſt excellent Perſon that ever was; beſides "the manifeſt Incongruity of a Divine Perſon's ſuffering for the Satisfaction of Di-"vine Juſtice.

Fully anſwered.

NOW though we preſume not to limit the Prerogative of the ſupreme Governor of the Univerſe, or to preſcribe to the Goodneſs, or Wiſdom of a Being infinite in all Perfections, and ſhall not therefore diſpute, whether God could not, either remit Sins without any Satisfaction at all, or accept any, that he thought fit, how mean and worthleſs ſoever in itſelf; yet conſidering God [a] (as he ought to be conſidered in the preſent Caſe) in the Quality of a Law-giver and Judge, as it was moſt reaſonable, that, in the firſt giving of the Law, he ſhould lay the ſtrongeſt Reſtraint upon Man, for the Prevention of Sin; ſo is it no leſs reaſonable, when the Command was broken by Man's Rebellion, that the Penalty ſhould be inflicted, either on his Perſon, according to the immediate Intent of the Law, or that Satisfaction, equivalent to the Offence, ſhould be made, that the Majeſty and Holineſs of God might appear in his Juſtice.

[b] THE Deſign of every wiſe Governor is to contain Men in their Duty, by enacting ſuch Laws, as may be a Rule for their Obedience, and enforcing thoſe Laws with ſuch Puniſhments, as ſhall render the Breach of them terrible and exemplary, that all may be deterred from doing the like, and that a juſt Reverence for the Conſtitution may be maintained. To theſe Purpoſes Almighty God having made Man immortal, gave him a Law, the Tranſgreſſion whereof he threatened with Death, the moſt terrible of all Puniſhments. That Law being broken by our firſt Parents, they, and, in them, human Nature became obnoxious to the Penalty of eternal Death. To preſerve his Workmanſhip, in ſo noble a Part of the Creation, from periſhing, it pleaſed God to accept of a vicarious Puniſhment: But, ſince he ſtill continues to rule us by Laws, it was requiſite, that this vicarious Puniſhment ſhould be ſuch an one, as might anſwer the abovementioned Ends of Government. [c] The Life of the Law depends upon the Execution of it; for Impunity occaſions a Contempt of Juſtice, and, by extenuating Sin in the Account of Men, encourages the free Commiſſion of it:

* Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [x] Heb. ix. 15. [y] Acts ii. 39. [z] Heb. v. 9. Chap. vii. 25. [a] Bates's Harmony. [b] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels. [c] Bates, ibid.

it: If therefore God had proclaimed a general Pardon of Sin to all Mankind, without any Teſtimony of his Wrath and Diſpleaſure againſt it, how highly ſoever we may think of his Generoſity, yet certainly it would either reflect upon his Wiſdom, as if he had not, upon juſt Reaſons, made the Offence and Penalty inſeparable; or upon his Power, as if he were not able to vindicate his own Authority; or upon the Sacredneſs of his Truth, if, after ſevere Threatenings to the contrary, he ſhould ſuffer the Sinner, at laſt, to go unpuniſhed.

The Difference between temporal Rulers, and God.

SOME Caſes there are indeed, wherein the Law-giver is obliged to diſpenſe with the Law, (as when the ſparing of an Offender is more Advantage to the State, than his Puniſhment;) and when ſome are too mighty to be brought to Juſtice, there is a ſuperior Tribunal, to which ſuch Offenders are obnoxious; and good Magiſtrates, when, through Weakneſs, they are forced to ſpare the Guilty, refer them to God's Judgment. But 'tis otherwiſe in the Divine Adminiſtration; for, as God is infinitely free from all Neceſſity of Compliance, ſo is there no Exigence of Government, that requires any Offenders ſhould eſcape his Severity, nor any Juſtice above his, to exact Satisfaction of them. And therefore, as the Majeſty of his Laws is more ſacred, than that of thoſe, which preſerve earthly States, and ought to be more inviolable, 'tis reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that (if even there were any other Motives pleading for Forgiveneſs) the Holineſs and Juſtice of his Nature, as well as Regard to the Sanction and Veneration of his Laws, would preponderate with him, to exact the Penalty, incurred by the Violation of them, and to call out the guilty Offender to Execution.

The Neceſſity of Chriſt's Satisfaction.

THUS, [d] to declare God's Hatred againſt Sin, which is eſſential to the Perfection of his Nature; to prevent the Commiſſion of Sin, by preſerving in Men an holy Fear of offending; and to maintain the Honour of God's Laws, which would otherwiſe fall under Contempt, it was expedient, that the Breach of his Commands ſhould not go unpuniſhed. But then, how, or on whom, this Puniſhment was to be inflicted, is the Queſtion. The Perſons, indeed, who were the Offenders, were the prime Objects of God's Indignation; but then, in this Method of Proceeding, all Mankind (for all had offended God) muſt have finally periſhed. By God's own Appointment, the Sacrifice of Beaſts was inſtituted under the Law; but, beſides the Imperfection of ſuch Atonements, what Apprehenſion of Divine Vengeance, what Terror, what Example can there be in the Death of a Brute? [e] To ſee a Creature die, when devoted to an holy Uſe, will not much affect them, who, every Day, kill the like for their own Suſtenance and Refreſhment: To purchaſe Pardon at ſo cheap a Rate would be a Means to encourage Wickedneſs, rather than produce a Reformation; and the Senſe of Divine Majeſty would not long continue, when ſo poor a Matter, as the Life of a Brute, ſhould come to be thought a ſufficient Reparation for the groſſeſt Affronts of it. A Creature of leſs Merit, than the eternal Son of God, may be ſuppoſed deputed to the Office of making Satisfactions for the Sin: But [f] admitting ſuch a Perſon to be, not only innocent, but able likewiſe to bear the heavy Wrath of God; yet, as the Obedience and Sufferings of no Creature could, from his own Worth and Excellency, be equivalent to the Obedience and Sufferings of all Mankind; ſo, not only the Performance of his Sufferings, but even his Innocence and Perſeverance in Righteouſneſs muſt be aſcribed to the Grace and Goodneſs of God, not to any Power of his own to ſuſtain himſelf; and conſequently, the Obedience and Sufferings of no created Being, how perfect, how excellent ſoever, could have been of that Value, as to merit for others, to make Satisfaction to the Divine Juſtice, or procure the Remiſſion of human Sins. For, ſince Death is ordained the Puniſhment of Sin, [g] the Effect of its Remiſſion muſt be immortal Life: But now, how can we imagine, that the Death of any Creature, not immortal itſelf, could procure for us a Right to Immortality? No, the Sacrifice, that takes away Sin, muſt not only die, but live again; muſt be able to give itſelf Immortality, before we can be immortal by Virtue of it: Which brings the Matter, at length, to this Concluſion, that ſuch a Sacrifice muſt neceſſarily be Man, muſt be an innocent Man, muſt indeed be much more than Man, muſt be God, God as well as Man; for the Scripture is expreſs, that [h] God only has Immortality; and it is evident to common Senſe, that a Being, which itſelf has not Immortality, cannot give it to others.

THE Office of making Atonement for Sin then redounds ultimately upon the Son of God; and as God, for the Vindication of his Honour, and the Reparation due to his Juſtice, was pleaſed to demand of his Son all that human Nature, in its higheſt [d] Bates's Harmony. of Chriſtianity, Vol. II.

[e] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.
[g] Stanhope, ibid.
[f] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs
[h] 1 Tim. vi. 16.

State of Innocence and Righteouſneſs, could undergo; ſo he, by the Aſſumption of that Nature, fully qualified himſelf for that great Work. [l] 'Human Nature had the ſuffering Part, which was to be compleat in its Kind, and then to receive the utmoſt Perfection, and become fully meritorious and expiatory, by Virtue of the Union between the Human and the Divine Nature; in which Senſe we are ſaid [k] to be purchaſed with the Blood of God, and to [l] be redeemed, not with corruptible Things, as Silver and Gold, but with the precious Blood of Chriſt; for the Sufferings of the Son of Man, tho' in themſelves great beyond Conception, and valuable beyond Compariſon, are of infinite Merit and Efficacy, for this Reaſon, becauſe he is the Son of God. Nor need we add, how well the Ends of Government are anſwered by this Method of our Redemption; for [m] when the Son of God became a Sacrifice for Sin, the World may ſoon perceive, how fully God has vindicated the Honour of his Laws, how highly he is offended at, and how effectually he has diſcouraged the Commiſſion of all Kind of Wickedneſs; there being the ſame Terror, though not the ſame Rigour in this Diſpenſation, as if all Mankind had been finally condemned.

THE Sum of this Argument, thus far purſued, is this——That ſince no wiſe and good Governor either pardons Crimes, committed againſt the End and Order of his Government, upon ſlight Terms, nor omits any due Care to provide, both that Satisfaction may be made for the Violation of his Laws, and that thoſe, who have been guilty of the Breach of them, may be deterred from the like Provocations; God, the great Governor of the World, was, for theſe Reaſons, determined, not to remit the Sins of Mankind without an equivalent Satisfaction: And ſince, among the whole Order of created Beings, none was found ſufficient to make ſuch a Satisfaction, the Buſineſs of Atonement (if it was to be done at all) was to be performed by the Son of God. But here, if it be aſked, "How God could receive this "Satisfaction, ſince himſelf was the Party that gave it? Or, how the Saviour of "Mankind, ſuppoſing himſelf to be God, could make Satisfaction to himſelf?" The Anſwer is, farther anſwered.

The Objection,

1. [n] THAT the infinite Goodneſs of God, in giving us a Redeemer, does not diveſt him of the Office of Supreme Judge, nor hinder him from receiving a Ranſom, to preſerve the Rights of Juſtice inviolable. To help us to illuſtrate this Matter, we have a memorable Inſtance, not unlike it, in the Caſe of Zaleucus, the Prince of the Locrians, who paſſed a Law, that Adulterers ſhould loſe both their Eyes; and, when his Son was convicted of that Crime, the People, who reſpected him for his excellent Qualities, came and interceded for him. ‖ Zaleucus, in a Conflict between Zeal for Juſtice, and Affection for his Son, took but one Eye from him, and parted with one of his own, to ſatisfy the Law; and in this Action he both paid and received the Puniſhment; paid it, as a Father; and received it, as a Conſervator of publick Juſtice. In like Manner, when guilty Mankind, by Reaſon of their Poverty, could not pay the Forfeiture of the Law, God, the Father of Mercies, was pleaſed to give it from the Treaſures of his Love, i. e. was pleaſed to give the Blood of his Son for their Ranſom, which he, nevertheleſs, as the Supreme Judge, received from Chriſt upon the Croſs, and declared it an Offering of a ſweet-ſmelling Savour unto him, or a ſufficient Compenſation for the Sins of the whole World.

2. NOR is there any Inconſiſtency with Reaſon, that the Son of God, cloathed with our Nature, ſhould, by his Death, make Satisfaction to the Deity, i. e. to himſelf. [o] 'In a Difference between two Parties, a Perſon, that belongs to one of them, may certainly interpoſe for Reconciliation, provided he diveſts his own Intereſt, and leaves it with the Party, from whom he comes. When a Father and Son, (for Inſtance) both poſſeſſed of imperial Power, have been offended by rebellious Subjects, it may not be improper for the Son to interpoſe, as Mediator, to reſtore them to the Favour of their Prince; and yet, at the ſame Time, he reconciles them to himſelf, and procures them the Pardon of an Offence, whereby his own Majeſty was violated. Juſt in the ſame Manner, all the Perſons of the ever-bleſſed Trinity are equally provoked by our Sins, and, to obtain our Pardon, the Son, with the Conſent of the Father, depoſits his Intereſts in his Hands, and, as Mediator, intervenes between us and him; and ſo, having performed what Juſtice required, reconciles the World to God, i. e. to the Father, himſelf, and the Eternal Spirit: But in all this Tranſaction his Perſon is the ſame, tho' his Capacity be different; for he makes Satisfaction as Mediator, and receives it as God; which is Diſtinction enough to clear the the Words of the Apoſtle from any fancied Impropriety, when he tells us, that [p] God was, in Chriſt, reconciling the World to himſelf, not imputing their Treſpaſſes unto them.

[l] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs of Chriſtianity, Vol. II. [k] Acts xx. 28. [l] 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.
[m] Bates's Harmony. [n] Bates, ibid. ‖ Ælian. Var. Hiſt. Lib. XIII. [o] Bates, ibid.

" BUT why ſhould not God impute their Treſpaſſes to the Perſons that are guilty? Another Objection, " Why ſhould he transfer their Penalty upon the Innocent? [q] Since the Juſtice of " the Puniſhment muſt ariſe from the Demerit of the Delinquent, the Puniſhment " can in Juſtice be inflicted only there, where the Demerit is; and therefore, if our " Saviour was no Sinner (as certainly he was not) neither ought he in Juſtice to " have been a Sufferer." We muſt be careful however, upon this Occaſion, to re- fully anſwered. member the Difference there is between the ſame Perſon, when abſtractedly conſidered, and by himſelf, and when ſuſtaining the Character and Repreſentation of others; ſince ſuch an one's Innocence, though it renders him incapable of ſuffering, ſtrictly ſo called, in the former of theſe Reſpects, yet hinders not at all, why he may not be a juſt and proper Object of it, in the latter. The Reaſon is, becauſe then the Law no longer looks upon his private, but altogether upon his repreſentative Capacity; conſequently, if they, in whoſe place he ſtands, be guilty, the Penalty, due to their Guilt, is now devolved upon their Proxy: And therefore the whole Matter in Debate turns, at laſt, upon this, whether, in the Nature of the Thing, it be juſt to admit of ſuch Proxies, and to deal with them in the ſame Manner, as their Originals would have been dealt with.

Now the general Practice of Mankind has agreed in this, that, in ſome Caſes, one Man may become a Surety for another, and that, if the Principal fail in the Performance of his juſt Obligation, the Surety (ſo far as he ſtands bound for him) is concerned in Juſtice to anſwer, and make good ſuch Obligations. [r] Nay, the Law of Nations makes no Scruple of putting Hoſtages in War to Death, whoſe Lives were ſtaked down, as a Pledge for the Fidelity of their Countrymen, though the Breaches of Faith, for which they ſuffer, be neither their own Act, nor ſo much as done with their Knowledge or Conſent. Theſe Inſtances make it plain, that both in pecuniary and capital Caſes, 'tis no uncommon Thing for one Perſon to be reſponſible for another; only to make it in like Manner equitable, there ſeem to be three Conditions neceſſary. 1. That the Party, thus bearing the Puniſhment of others, do it by his own Conſent. 2. That he have a Right thus to diſpoſe of himſelf. And, 3. That the Ends of Puniſhment be as fully anſwered, by ſuch a Tranſfer of it, as they could have been by inflicting it upon the Principals themſelves. Suppoſe full Conſent, and the Party ſuffering cannot receive Wrong; ſuppoſe the Ends of penal Laws as effectually ſerved by ſuch an Expedient, and the Publick receives no Wrong. Now, that our bleſſed Saviour did voluntarily ſubmit to the Puniſhment of our Sins, and ſuffered, merely becauſe he choſe to ſuffer, is evident from hence, that, being Lord of the Univerſe, he had no ſuperior Authority to command, or Power to compel him; and therefore, when he cometh into the World, [s] he ſaith, Sacrifice and Offering thou didſt not deſire, but a Body haſt thou prepared me: In Burnt-Offerings and Sacrifices for Sin thou haſt had no Pleaſure; then ſaid I, lo, I come, in the Volume of thy Book it is written of me, I delight to do thy Will, O my God, yea thy Law is within my Heart. That he was entirely free, and Maſter of himſelf, ſo as to be able to diſpoſe of his Life, and all his Actions, juſt as he pleaſed, is manifeſt from his own Declaration; [t] No Man taketh my Life from me, but I lay it down of myſelf; I have Power to lay it down, and I have Power to take it again; this Command I received of my Father. That his Father was conſenting to this Commutation of Puniſhment, and willing to accept the Satisfaction for our Sins from his Hands, is plain from all thoſe Paſſages, where it is ſaid, that he gave his only begotten Son that we might not periſh; [u] that he ſent him to be a Propitiation for our Sins; and [x] made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin, that we might be made the Righteouſneſs of God in him, &c. And laſtly, that by ſuch Commutation the End and Intereſt of God's Government is preſerved, the Horror of Sin diſplayed, and the Laws of Righteouſneſs become more ſacred and inviolable, is manifeſt both from the Severity of the Puniſhment, and the Excellency of the Perſon ſuſtaining it. [y] For how could God expreſs his Hatred and Indignation againſt Sin more ſenſibly, than, firſt, by threatening it with eternal Torments, then, by not pardoning it without Satisfaction tisfaction to his Juſtice, and afterwards, when Goodneſs and Compaſſion moved him to remit it, accepting no leſs a Compenſation, than the Sufferings, and Agonies, and Death of his own Son? How could he receive ſo full a Satisfaction for the Affronts done to his Honour, and our Obnoxiouſneſs to the Severity of his Laws, as by a Reparation ſo ample, and a Ranſom ſo ineſtimably precious? And what could conſtrain us to our Duty with ſuch an holy and irreſiſtible Violence, as that Mixture of Gratitude, and godly Zeal, that Fear, that Indignation, that Sorrow to Repentance not to be repented of, which the Contemplation of a ſuffering Saviour, ſo dearly purchaſing the Pardon of Sin, when ſtanding only in the Place of Sinners, under every View, ſuggeſts?

[p] 2 Cor. v. 19. [q] *Stayno*e's Salvation by Jeſus Chriſt. [r] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures.
[s] Heb. x. 6, 7. [t] John x. 18. [u] 1 John iv. 10. [x] 2 Cor. v. 21. [y] Stanhope, ibid.

To ſum up all then, [z] if our bleſſed Saviour might become Surety for the Diſcharge of that Debt, which, by our Violation of the Divine Laws, was originally ours; if, upon our Inability to pay this Debt, ſo as to obtain our Acquittance, he was willing and fully impowered to lay down his Life, in order to our Relief and Diſcharge; and if God, the great Ruler of the World, might in Juſtice accept the Offering of ſuch a Life, for ſo gracious and merciful a Purpoſe, eſpecially when the wiſe Ends of his Government were ſerved and promoted thereby, (all which we have ſufficiently proved) then does this great and popular Objection againſt the Juſtice of Chriſt's ſuffering in our Stead, and for our Sake, vaniſh and come to nothing.

Another Objection.

"BUT though it be granted, that Chriſt had Power over his own Life, that he "was willing to lay it down for us, and that God for wiſe Ends was ready to accept "it; yet, ſince the Sins of Mankind are innumerable, and the Death which our "Saviour underwent, was but the Death of One; ſince the Death, which we de"ſerved for our Sins, was eternal, and that, which our Saviour underwent, was "but tranſient and temporal; there is ſtill a Defect in the Propitiation, even tho' "we admit of the Vicarioufneſs of it. Chriſt did not ſuffer the ſame in Kind that "ſinful Men were liable to; and therefore the Sacrifice, which he offered, was not "adequate."

Anſwered.

He did not ſuffer the ſame indeed, becauſe he could not. The Reproaches of a ſinful Mind, the killing Anguiſh of Deſpair, with ſeveral other Aggravations of Miſery and Sorrow, which go to making up the Sinner's Hell, cannot, in the Nature of the Thing, fall upon an innocent and divine Perſon; they are the Reſult of a guilty Conſcience only: But then it ſhould be conſidered, that, in the ſad and doleful Moments of his Paſſion, the Saviour of the World had Horrors and Agonies of another Kind, the heavy Weight, though not the Guilt of univerſal Sin, the fearful Apprehenſions of a painful and ignominious Death, the buſy Powers of the Prince of Darkneſs, the ſmoaking Wrath and Indignation of Almighty God, and the unrelenting Strokes of his vindictive Juſtice all united againſt him, to ſuſtain; while the Divine Nature withdrew, as it were, from his Relief, and, though adding infinite Merit to his Sufferings, would not remove, or abate him one Pain. † But whatever the Ingredients of this bitter Cup were, which God, that mixed them, and himſelf, that drank them, only knew; yet we have abundant Reaſon to think, that it was no ordinary Infliction, which could overwhelm his Soul with ſuch a Flood of Sorrow, diſſolve his Body into a Sweat of Blood, and, at laſt, extort that ſtrange Exclamation from him, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me! This, and the farther Conſideration of his being [a] in the Form of God, [b] the Brightneſs of his Glory, and the expreſs Image of his Perſon, [c] in whom the Fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt bodily, may make it no inconceivable Strain to imagine, that the infinite Dignity of the Perſon ſuffering muſt needs add an immenſe Value to his Sufferings, and by ſo doing make them equal to the Guilt, and more than adequate to the Sufferings of all Mankind. And this will lead us to conſider,

The Extent of Chriſt's Satisfaction.

2. THE Extent of the Atonement and Satisfaction, which Chriſt has made for us. Nothing certainly can be plainer in Scripture, than that the Redemption of the World, in the Divine Intention, is univerſal. [d] The Love of God, which was the impulſive Cauſe of his ſending his Son into the World, is equally inclined to all Mankind: [e] With him there is no Reſpect of Perſons; for is he (ſays the Apoſtle, aſſigning the Reaſon for that Aſſertion) the God of the Jews only, and not of the Gentiles? No, there is no Difference of Jew and Greek; for there is the ſame Lord of all, who is rich, in Mercy and Bounty, unto all that call upon him. The Undertakings and Performances of our Saviour Chriſt are repreſented, in general, as bearing Proportion [z] Staynoe's Salvation by Chriſt alone. † Norris's Diſcourſes, Vol. IV. [a] Phil. ii. 6.

[b] Heb. i. 3. [c] Col. ii. 9. [d] Barrow's Works, Vol. III. [e] Rom. ii. 11.—iii. 22.—x. 12.

tion to the Tranſgreſſion of our firſt Parent Adam; this the Apoſtle proſecutes at large, and then cloſes his Diſcourſe in theſe Words; [f] As therefore, by the Offence of one Man, Judgment came upon all Men to Condemnation; ſo by the Righteouſneſs of one, the free Gift came upon all Men to Juſtification of Life. Declarations in Scripture every where meet us, that [g] God ſent his Son into the World, not to condemn the World, but that the World by him might be ſaved; that the Son accordingly, deſirous that [h] all ſhould be ſaved, gave himſelf a Ranſom for the [i] whole World, and [k] died for all, that they who live, might not live to themſelves, but to him that died for them: And to exclude all Limitation, that he even died for ſuch as periſh, for ſuch [l] as denied him, for ſuch as were in the Way to Deſtruction, and for ſuch as [m] trampled him under Foot, and counted the Blood of the Covenant an unholy Thing, and did Deſpite to the Spirit of Grace.

The Opinion of ſome Calviniſts.

So boundleſs are the Expreſſions, wherein the intended Benefit of Chriſt's Propitiation is exhibited in Scripture; nor is there the leaſt Intimation of any Reſtriction or particular Deſignation of it for the Sake of the Elect only; and yet there have not been wanting ſome, who have endeavoured to reduce what is of ſo general and univerſal Extent, to a very narrow Compaſs; [n] by aſſerting, "That thoſe, whom, from "all Eternity, God in his gracious Purpoſe had ſeparated from the reſt of Mankind, "and pre-ordained for Salvation, are the only Perſons, for whom Chriſt died; for "whom the Remiſſion of Sins, and other Graces, requiſite to entitle them to the Be- "nefits of his Paſſion, are reſerved; while the reſt of Mankind that are not thus elected, "reap no Advantage by his Death, and, at the Time of its Oblation, were entirely "ſecluded from the divine Purpoſe and Conſideration." Whatever Texts in Scripture they therefore find of a more extenſive Signification, they uſually refer to an Univerſality of Kinds, not of Particulars, pretending that Chriſt did not die for all in general, and for every one in particular, but only for ſome of all People, Nations, and Languages, in Contra-poſition to the Narrowneſs of the Law of Moſes, which was confined to the Iſraelites only.

Anſwer'd.

THE Doctrine of Predeſtination, as it relates to the Election of ſome, and Preterition of others, [o] has been largely conſidered already, the Weight of each Argument ſtated, and on what Side the Merit of the Controverſy lies, in ſome Meaſure determined; and therefore we need only add, that though there are ſome Expreſſions in Scripture, relating to this Matter, of a ſeemingly wide Signification, which are to be confined to a narrower Compaſs; yet there are an infinite Number of others, which ſet forth the Deſign of Chriſt's Death in ſuch a Manner, as cannot poſſibly admit of any Reſtriction. Thus, when we read, that [p] in Adam all die, even ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive; that [q] God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only begotten Son, to the Intent that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting Life; that [r] Chriſt was made a little lower than the Angels, that, by the Grace of God, he might taſte Death for every Man; and ſo [s] became a Propitiation, not for our Sins only, but for the Sins of the whole World: It is impoſſible, but that theſe and ſuch like Words, taken in their eaſy and uſual Senſe, muſt, to any ſober and impartial Readers, ſignify the whole Community of Mankind, comprehending Perſons of all Sorts and Qualities, good and bad, Believers and Unbelievers alike.

That Chriſt died for all.

AND indeed, if we once reflect on what has been ſaid before, viz. that our bleſſed Saviour was the common Proxy and Repreſentative of all Mankind, and that his Death had in it all the Properties of a true Propitiatory Sacrifice, we cannot but conclude, that, as Sacrifices of this Kind were offered for the Sins of all the People, his Death was commenſurate to the Number of the Perſons he repreſented; and therefore, when the Baptiſt ſaith, [t] Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the Sins of the World, he not only ſpeaks in Alluſion to the Lambs, daily offered up for the Sins of the whole Jewiſh Nation, but plainly enough intimates, that, as they were offered up to expiate the Sins of the whole Nation, ſo was the Lamb of God offered to expiate the Sins of the whole World in general. And, that our High-Prieſt, in making this Oblation, had no private Reſpect to any particular Number of Perſons, but intended it equally for the Benefit of all, is evident from this obvious Reaſon, † that he offered the ſame Sacrifice, ſuffered one and the ſame Death, and ſhed the ſame Blood for all, for whom he died; and conſequently, that if this Sacrifice was offered for all, it was offered equally for all, becauſe it is the ſame Oblation, [f] Rom. v. 18. [g] John iii. 17. [h] 1 Tim. ii. 4. [i] Ibid. ver. 6. [k] 2 Cor. v. 15. [l] 2 Pet. ii. 1. [m] Heb. x. 29. [n] Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude. [o] Vid. p. 151, &c. [p] 1 Cor. xv. 22. [q] John iii. 16. [r] Heb. ii. 9. [s] 1 John ii. 2. [t] John i. 29. † Whitby, of the Extent of Chriſt's Redemption.

the ſame Body crucified, and the ſame Blood ſhed; and, as they cannot be diſtributed into Parts, that one may have one Share of them, another a ſecond, and another a third, but whoſoever has an Intereſt in them, has a Title to the whole Benefit procured by them; ſo the Scriptures, which ſay expreſsly, that Chriſt died for all, afford not the leaſt Intimation, that he ſuffered more, or ſhed more of his Blood for one than for another.

Upon what Conditions.

BUT though Chriſt died equally for all, yet he did not die abſolutely and unconditionately for any: Faith, and Repentance, and Obedience to the Laws of the Goſpel, are (as we have ſeen) the expreſs Conditions upon which the Bleſſings of Chriſt's ſalutary Paſſion are ſuſpended, and therefore he did not, he could not, die, but with Intention to confer theſe Bleſſings only upon true Believers, true Penitents, and ſuch as would obey his righteous Laws; it being impoſſible, in the Nature of the Thing, that he ſhould die to ſave the Unbeliever, i. e. the Perſon who will not own him as a Saviour, of whom it is ſaid, that [x] he ſhall not ſee Life, but is condemned already; or to reconcile God to the Impenitent, i. e. to thoſe who ſtill continue in their Sins, and their Rebellions againſt God, of whom it is ſaid, [y] that they ſhall ſurely periſh, and that [z] he will come in a Flame to take Vengeance of all, that obey not his Goſpel. And therefore, when we ſay, that Chriſt died for all, we do not mean, that he hath purchaſed actual Pardon and Reconciliation for all; but only, that he put all Men in a Capacity of being pardoned and juſtified, and ſo of being reconciled to God, upon their turning to him, and believing in his Son. And in this Senſe it is, that we underſtand that Article of our Creed, concerning Forgiveneſs of Sins, wherein we profeſs to believe, not that Sin is already pardoned by the Death of Chriſt, (for there is no Foundation for ſuch a Belief) but only that Chriſt has, by the Merits of his Croſs, opened a Way for Pardon and Reconciliation, and made them poſſible and attainable by Faith and Repentance.

A two-fold Reconciliation.

FOR the full Completion of the Pardon of Sin there is therefore, properly ſpeaking, a two-fold Reconciliation, or, if you pleaſe, a two-fold Degree of it, one on Chriſt's Part, and the other on ours. The firſt is previous to our Repentance, and indeed wholly preventive of any Thing we can do; the ſecond follows it, and is grounded upon it. That, which is previous to Repentance, conſiſts in a bare Remiſſibility of Sin, and is purely the Work of our Redeemer; that, which follows it, conſiſts in the full and actual Remiſſion of Sin, wherein we ourſelves are active, and muſt come in for our Part. The firſt of theſe is wholly abſolute and unconditionate, (there being nothing required of us to make Sin pardonable to us;) the ſecond is ſuſpended upon Conditions, till the Performance of which, Sin, though pardonable, is not however actually pardoned. Nor is this Diſtinction deſtitute of Foundation in Scripture: For, when St John ſays, [b] if any Man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous; and he is a Propitiation for our Sins, and not for ours only, but for the Sins of the whole World; the Univerſality of the Character ſhews it plainly to be meant of the firſt Reconciliation, reſulting immediately from the Death and Satisfaction of Chriſt: And, when he ſays, in another Place, [c] if we walk in the Light, as he is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, his Son, cleanſes us from all Sin; the Conditionality of the Character ſhews it to be meant of the ſecond Reconciliation, reſulting from our own Performances: And from hence it follows, that the Forgiveneſs of Sins does not conſiſt in actual Pardon and Juſtification, but only in laying the Foundation of it; in procuring for us, not the Poſſeſſion, but the Capacity and Poſſibility of it, which is then reduced to Act, and made compleat, when we put the Conditions, whereon it is ſuſpended, in Execution, and comply with thoſe Terms, upon which it is purchaſed by our Saviour's Blood, and offered to us in his Goſpel.

TO illuſtrate this by a plain Similitude. [d] Suppoſe a Prince, whoſe Subjects had rebelled againſt him, and ſo lay under the Sentence of Condemnation, through the Interceſſion of his beloved Son, ſhould vouchſafe Mercy to as many of them, as ſhould profeſs Sorrow for their Guilt, aſk Pardon in his Son's Name, and promiſe to be obedient Subjects for the future; would this procure an actual Pardon to any of them, till they had performed theſe Conditions? Or would it ever do it for them, who wilfully refuſed, or even ſcorned and neglected to perform them? The Caſe is the ſame in the Matter now before us. Chriſt by his Death obtained of his Father a new new Covenant, in which he promiſes to pardon, and to be reconciled to all, upon their Faith and Repentance, and to make them Partakers of Salvation, upon their Perſeverance in Well-doing: But he has not procured an actual Pardon, Reconciliation, or Salvation to any, who have not performed theſe Conditions, nor can they lay any juſt Claim to them, by Virtue of his dying for them, ſo long as they continue in their Impenitence or Unbelief.

[x] John iii. 18, 36. [y] Luke xiii. 3, 5. [z] 2 Theſſ. i, 8. [a] Norris's Diſcourſes, Vol. IV. [b] 1 John, ii. 1. [c] Ibid. i. 7. [d] Whitby, on the Extent of Chriſt's Redemption.

An Objection anſwered.

IN this Senſe, and under theſe Conditions, we ſay, that Chriſt's Death and Satisfaction is univerſal; but then, if it ſhould be aſked, how it comes to paſs, that a general Deſign has only a particular Effect, or (in Scripture-Terms) for what Reaſon it is, that ſo many are called, and ſo few are choſen; our bleſſed Saviour has ſtated the whole Proceſs, both on God's Side and Man's, with Relation to this Event, in a very lively Similitude. The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a King, ſays he, which made a Marriage for his Son, and ſent forth his Servants, ſaying, Behold I have prepared my Dinner, my Oxen and my Fatlings are killed, and all Things are ready, come unto the Marriage: But they made light of it, and went their Ways, one to his Farm, another to his Merchandize, &c. Again he ſent forth other Servants, ſaying, Go ye into the Highways, and, as many as ye ſhall find, bid to the Marriage: Which the Servants accordingly did, and gathering together all, as many as they could, both bad and good, the Wedding was furniſhed with Gueſts. Thoſe that undertake to explain this Parable, tell us, that, by the King here, we are to underſtand God the Father; that the Marriage made for his Son is the Salvation of the World; that the Gueſts invited, and occaſionally brought in, are the whole Race of Mankind, both Jews and Gentiles; and that his killing his Oxen and Fatlings, and making Preparation for Dinner, anſwer, in the Application, to his ſending his Son in our Fleſh, to die for our Sins, and make all proper Proviſion for our eternal Happineſs: And, upon the Foot of this Interpretation, we may obſerve farther, that the Multitude of the Gueſts denotes the Deſign of our Redemption to have been of univerſal Benefit to Mankind; that the different Qualities of the Gueſts ſignify God's having no Reſpect to Perſons, in his Invitation of Mankind to the Means of Salvation; that his earneſt and repeated Invitations ſhew his ſincere Deſires, that all, who are called, and have heard the good Tidings of the Goſpel, ſhould partake of its Salvation; and that the Excuſes, which the Gueſts alledge for their Refuſal of the King's Invitation, diſcover wherein the true Cauſe of the Ineffectualneſs of Man's Redemption lies; viz. not in any Want of Mercy in God, or of Virtue in Chriſt's Paſſion; not in any ſecret Purpoſe of the Divine Mind, or fatal Decree, predetermining it ſhould be ſo; but in the Depravity of the Man's own Heart and Affections, his Love of Riches, and Indulgence of ſenſual Delights, which occaſion it to be ſo: [m] I have bought a Piece of Ground, and I muſt needs go and ſee it; I have bought five Yoke of Oxen, and I go to prove them; I have married a Wife, and therefore cannot come.

The Nature of God's Decrees.

[n] WE readily acknowledge indeed, that the Counſels of Almighty God are a vaſt and dark Deep, and think it unbecoming poor feeble Mortals too buſily to intrude into them, or to pronounce any Thing peremptorily concerning them: But ſtill, there are ſome plain Principles ſo obvious to Man's Reaſon, that he cannot but admit of them. That the Judge of all the Earth cannot but do Right, and he, whoſe Truth is like the ſtrong Mountains, cannot falſify or prevaricate, are Things univerſally allowed; and, though the Juſtice and Truth in God may proceed upon Meaſures, not underſtood by us, yet, ſince true and falſe, juſt and unjuſt, are not arbitrary and alterable Things, we have no Reaſon to ſuppoſe, that Juſtice and Veracity in God are contrary to what we eſteem juſt and true among Men; and may therefore be allowed to conclude, that whatever the Decrees of God are, they cannot but be ſuch, as conſiſt very well with the Temper of his Covenants, with his Invitations, his Promiſes, his Threatenings, his vehement and affectionate Expoſtulations, his laying the Sinner's Ruin and Rejection of Salvation entirely at his own Door, ſo frequently, ſo manifeſtly recorded in Scripture.

As ſome explain them, deſtructive of Piety and Juſtice.

HOW far the ſacred Attributes of God are concerned in this Queſtion, we had Occaſion [o] to take Notice before, and ſhall now only obſerve, what Influence it muſt needs have upon our Piety and Virtue. [p] I will, ſays St Paul, that Men ſhould pray in every Place, lifting up pure Hands, without Wrath or Doubting; [q] but how can any Man obſerve this Precept? How can any Man pray with Calmneſs and Confidence

[l] Bragge on the Parables, and Stanhope's Sermons. [m] Luke xiv. 18, &c. [n] Stanhope, ibid. [o] See page 154, &c. [p] 1 Tim. ii. 8. [q] Whitby, on the Extent of Chriſt's Redemption.

dence of Mind, who is not assured, that Christ is his Saviour, or that God, for Christ's Sake, is disposed to grant his Request? Give Thanks always, says the same Apostle, for all Things unto God, and the Father, in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ; but how can we perform this Duty? How can any Man give Thanks unto God, in the Name of Jesus, or heartily resent his great Love and Kindness in sending his Son into the World, who knows not that this Kindness was ever designed for him? Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy Heart, is a Duty required both of Jew and Gentile; but how can any Man do this, who is persuaded, that God, who is the Creator of Souls, has excluded from his Care the greatest Part of them; and his perhaps among the rest? How can any Man apply himself chearfully to serve that God, whose favourable Inclination towards him, and whose Readiness to accept of his Service, he doubts of? 'Tis partly the Benefits we have received, and partly the Advantages we hope to receive from a Superior, that are the prevailing Motives of our Love and Service: If therefore God never intended any Benefit for the greatest Part of Mankind; if, through Want of an Interest in Christ, they are for ever debarred from reaping any Advantage by him; the Sense of this must necessarily damp their Affections, and relax the Sinews of their Obedience. Nor can it well be said, for what Reason we are so frequently called upon in Scripture, to imitate the Goodness and Compassion of our God, [r] to be merciful, as our Father is merciful; to [s] love our Enemies, and do them good, that we may be Children of our heavenly Father; to abound in Love, and [t] to be tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's Sake, has forgiven us: Why we should be bound, I say, to this extensive Mercy and Charity by God's Example, and enjoined to exercise it, that we may be like unto him, is a Thing unaccountable, if so be the Bowels of the Divine Love and Compassion are confined to a few, and all Christ's Sufferings and Performances were only intended for the Benefit of a small Remnant of Mankind: Whereas, if God be truly willing to have Mercy upon all, and if he delivered up his Son for the Benefit and Salvation of all, our Love and Mercy (if we would be Followers of him, as dear Children) must, according to the Terms wherein it is enjoined, be truly general, and comprehend all.

The Difference between the two Doctrines.

" But admitting the Redemption of Mankind, in God's Intention, to be uni- " versal; yet since, in Event, it proves but partial, where is the mighty Difference, " whether we are saved by God's Pre-election, or by our own Performance of the " Conditions of the Gospel, so long as the Persons, that are saved, are the same, both
" in Number and Quality?" This is the last Objection, we think ourselves concerned to take Notice of upon this Subject; and, for a Solution, we may ask those that make it,——Is it the same Thing, to say, that Salvation was, by God's gracious Purpose, intended even for those, that perish, so that, without being deaf to the Calls of Grace, and the Motives of the Gospel, and without acting in plain Contradiction to the Reason, and Conscience, and natural Desires of Mankind, they could not have missed of it; and to say, that no Salvation was ever designed, or Grace afforded them to rescue them from Perdition? Is it the same Thing, to say, that the greatest Part of the World cannot be saved, because the Saviour of Mankind died not for them, and God never intended their Salvation; and to say, that therefore they cannot be saved, because they would not come to that Jesus, who died for them, that, through the Merits of his Death, they might have Life; nor obey that God, who, out of his tender Affection to them, sent his Son into the World, that the World by him might be saved? Is it the same Thing, to say, that Men are not saved, because they want sufficient Means, on God's Part, to render their Salvation possible; and to say, that therefore they are not saved, because, when they have Salvation freely tendered to them, and Means and Motives sufficient to engage them in the Pursuit of it, they wilfully despise, and wickedly neglect this great Salvation?

Is it the same Thing, to represent the God of Love, as an Hater of the greatest Part of Mankind; as one, who has determined, before he made them, to with-hold his Compassions from them; and to represent him, as extending his rich Goodness and Mercy to all the Souls that he has made? Is it the same Thing, to represent the God of Truth, as full of Guile and Dissimulation, pretending one Thing, and designing another; as to represent him truly declaring, that he would have all Men to be saved, and sincerely promising Salvation, upon such Terms, as are both reasonable for him to require, and possible for them to perform? And lastly, is it the same Thing [r] Eph. v. 20. [s] Luke vi. 36. [t] Matth. v. 44, 45. [u] Eph. iv. 32.

Thing, to advance a Doctrine, which visibly destroys all the Acts of Piety and Virtue, of Prayer and Thanksgiving, of Fear and Love, and Obedience towards God; as to assert one, which manifestly encourages, and lays the greatest Obligation on Men to the Performance of these Duties? If not, then, tho' the Persons eventually saved will be the same, the Doctrine, which is clogged with so many Incongruities, can never be the same with that, which stands entirely free from them. And so we proceed, Christ's Intercession.

II. To the other Part of Christ's Sacerdotal Office, viz. his Intercession, which is an Act subsequent upon his having offered himself a Sacrifice for our Sins. For, as the High-Priest, under the Law, after he had offered the Sacrifice, without, upon the Altar, went into the Holy of Holies with the Blood of it, and there sprinkled it before the Mercy-Seat, in order to make Intercession for the People; so Christ, our High-Priest (as the Apostle * draws the Similitude) is entered within the Veil into the Holy Place (which is Heaven itself) with his own Blood, there to appear in the Presence of God; there [x] to sit at the Right-hand of God, making Intercession for us for ever. In the Presence of God he appears, not as a Supplicant upon his Knees, offering up Tears and strong Cries, as in the Days of his Flesh; but as an Advocate pleading with Authority for what has been the Purchase of his Blood: And therefore he is represented as Sitting (a [y] Posture which denotes Dominion and Sovereignty) [z] on the Right-hand of the Throne of the Majesty in the Heavens. Upon this Account his Intercession may not improperly be defined, "† A solemn Address to God the Father in our Behalf, wherein, by presenting to him his own sacrificed Body, and "by continuing and perpetuating the Presentation of it, he obtains of him Power "and Authority to grant unto us the Pardon of our Sins, the Acceptance of our "Prayers, the Supply of our Wants, the Assistance of Grace, and the Collation of "all the other Blessings and Benefits, which are made over to us in that Covenant, "which he hath ratified by his Blood;" I say, obtains Power and Authority of God to grant these Blessings to us: For tho' it be certainly true, that [a] every good and perfect Gift cometh down from above, even from the Father of Lights, yet it is no less certain, that they come not down to us from the Father immediately, but are all derived to us thro' the Hands of his Son, who, by his continual Intercession, obtains continual Power and Authority to derive and confer them on us. For as the High-Priest, [b] after he had presented the Blood of the Sacrifice in the Holy of Holies, was authorized to bless the People; even so our blessed Saviour, by presenting his meritorious Sacrifice in Heaven, and in Virtue thereof interceding for us with the Father, is continually authorized by him effectually to bless us, i. e. to confer on us the Blessings of the New Covenant, upon such Conditions as are therein proposed; for which Reason he is said [c] to be able to save those to the uttermost, that come unto God by him, seeing he ever lives to make Intercession for us.

God's Blessings come by Christ's Intercession.

THAT, by his Intercession, Christ has obtained of God the Power of bestowing on us all the Blessings of the New Covenant, is plainly enough intimated by all those Passages in Scripture, wherein we are said [d] to have Access to the Father through him; [e] by him to have Access to the Divine Grace; [f] in him to have Boldness with Confidence; for in him, and by him, and through him (as the Apostles testify) are all the Graces and Favours of God conferred on us. Our Supplications are accepted, because he is the [g] Angel of the Covenant, who, at the Golden Altar, before the Throne, offers up the Prayers of the Saints, incensed with the Merits of his Sacrifice. Our Sins are forgiven us, because he [h] has the Keys of Hell and Death, i. e. the Power to bind or loose, to pardon or condemn. The Gift of God's Spirit is imparted to us, because (as St Peter tells the Jews) [i] Jesus, being raised up, and exalted at the Right-hand of God, has received of the Father the Promise of the Holy Ghost: And, lastly, Eternal Life is consigned to us, because (as he himself assures the Church of Laodicea) [k] to him that overcomes, will I grant to sit with me on my Throne, even as I have overcome, and am sat down with my Father on his Throne. By all which it is abundantly evident, that tho' the Blessings of the New Covenant do originally come from God the Father, yet are they mediately derived to us through God the Son; and that whatever God bestows upon us, he bestows by the Hand of Jesus, whom, upon his first Presentation of his Sacrifice in Heaven, and continual Intercession with it, he constituted, and continues the general Distributer of all his Graces and Favours to Mankind.

* Heb. vi. 19, 20. [x] Rom. viii. 26. [y] Ipsum Verbum sedere Regni significat potestatem. S. Hier. Com. ad Eph. c. i. v. 19. [z] Heb. viii. 1. † Scott's Mediator. [a] James i. 17. [b] See 1 Chron. xxiii. 13. [c] Heb. vii. 25. [d] Eph. ii. 18. [e] Rom. v. 2. [f] Eph. iii. 12. [g] Rev. viii. 3. [h] Ibid. i. 18. [i] Acts ii. 32, 33. [k] Rev. iii. 21.

The Wisdom and Goodness of God herein.

[l] How much this Method of God's communicating his Favours to Mankind, through our Saviour's Intercession, tends to excite in us a profound Awe and Reverence of his Divine Majesty, upon this Consideration, that we are not allowed to have Access to him, even by our Prayers and Supplications, without the Interposition of a Mediator, who is greater than the greatest of all the Kings on Earth, or Angels in Heaven: How much it tends to give us a strong Conviction of God's Hatred and Abhorrence of our Sins; since, notwithstanding the Kindness and Benevolence of his Nature, upon their Account he keeps us at so great a Distance, that, without some powerful Intercession, he will not be prevailed with so much as to hear our Prayers, or to have any kind of Communion with us: How much it tends to secure us from presuming upon God's Mercy, while we continue in our Sins, since our very Repentance, which is the best Thing we can do to make him propitious to us, is insufficient without Christ's Intercession, and yet Christ is resolved never to intercede for those, that are impenitent: On the other Hand, how much it tends to encourage us, if we will but repent and amend, to draw near unto God with Chearfulness and Freedom, upon this Consideration, that the highest Favourite he has in Heaven or Earth is our Advocate; one, who not only is infinitely concerned for us, as being a-kin to us by Nature, and having a compassionate Sense of our Infirmities, but who employs, likewise, in our Behalf, all the Favour and Interest he has with God, as he is the Son, of his Essence, and the Object of his Love: And, lastly, how much it tends to assure us, if we will but persevere in Goodness, of God's gracious Intentions to perform all his Promises, since we have not only his Word to depend on, but the Suretiship likewise of a Mediator, in whose Hands he has actually deposited all the Blessings he has promised us, and made him Executor in Trust for the Performance of his Bequests to the Heirs of Promise: How much this Dispensation of God's Favours, I say, through the Intercession of our Saviour, tends to create in us reverential Thoughts of God, a dreadful Sense of Sin, a Sense of the Danger of Impenitence, Freedom in our Addresses to God, and Assurance in his gracious Promises; consequently, how much it contributes to our Reformation and Amendment, and thereby to the Illustration of the Riches of God's Mercy to Mankind, the Arguments, but just hinted at, will be sufficient to convince us.

The Benefits of Christ's Intercession.

For a Conclusion then, let us always bear in Mind, [m] of what mighty Advantage it is, to have a perpetual Patron and Advocate at the Right-hand of God, to plead our Cause, and sollicit our Concernment; so good a Friend in the Court of Heaven, in such high Power and Favour with the Great King of the World: Of what singular Comfort it is, in every trying Circumstance, in every pensive Hour, in the Distress of Fortune, in the Decays of Age, in the Languishings of Sickness, in the Agonies of Death, that [n] we have not an High-Priest, who cannot be touched with a Sense of our Infirmities, but was in all Points tempted as we are: Of what Life and Vigour it is in our Prayers, that they are offered up by so powerful and prevalent an Hand; and of what Encouragement in all our spiritual Conflicts, that he, who hath all Power both in Heaven and Earth, is on our Side, the Captain of our Salvation, and who has the Succours, we want, under his Direction and Command: [o] Seeing then we have a Great High-Priest, that is passed into the Heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us (as the Apostle exhorts us) hold fast our Profession; and let us come boldly unto the Throne of Grace, that we may obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help us in the Time of Need.

Christ's Kingdom.

III. THE third and last Branch of Christ's Mediatorial Office, is that of his being a King. That the Messiah was, all along, down from the Time of David, foretold and expected under the Character of a King, is evident from so many Passages in the Old Testament, that it would be almost endless to recite them. The Truth is, when we read such pompous Descriptions as these, [p] Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee; desire of me, and I will give thee the Heathen for thine Inheritance, and the uttermost Parts of the Earth for thy Possession; thou shalt bruise them with a Rod of [l] Scott's Mediator. [m] Tillotson's Sermons, Vol. III. [n] Heb. iv. 15. [o] Ibid. ver. 14, 16.

[p] Psal. ii. 7, &c.

of Iron, and break them in Pieces like a Potter's Veſſel: For [a] unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government ſhall be upon his Shoulders, and his Name ſhall be called Wonderful, Counſellor, the mighty God, the everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the Increaſe of his Government and Peace there ſhall be no End; upon the Throne of David, and upon his Kingdom, to order it, and to eſtabliſh it with Judgment, and with Juſtice, from henceforth even for ever: Such magnificent Expreſſions as theſe, I ſay, are by the Enemies of Chriſtianity made a popular Objection, (which we ſhall have Occaſion to ſatisfy hereafter) that our Jeſus could not be the promiſed Meſſiah, becauſe the Figure, in which he appeared, was ſo different to the Pomp and Grandeur, wherein the Prophets have deſcribed the Glories of his Kingdom.

[t] THAT our bleſſed Saviour, in the New Teſtament, is affirmed likewiſe to be a King, in a Manner ſuperior to any other, is plain from the good Tidings, which the Angel brings at his Conception, [u] he ſhall be great, and ſhall be called the Son of the Higheſt, and the Lord God ſhall give unto him the Throne of his Father David, and he ſhall reign over the Houſe of Judah for ever, and of his Kingdom there ſhall be no End; is plain from the Confeſſion of Nathaniel, * Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael; plain from the Acclamations of the People, [x] Bleſſed is the King of Iſrael, that cometh in the Name of the Lord; from his own Declaration, [y] all Power is given unto me in Heaven and in Earth; and from the Teſtimony of his Apoſtle, telling us, [z] that he muſt reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet: For † worthy is the Lamb, that was ſlain (ſay the Angels in the Revelation) to receive Power, and Riches, and Wiſdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Bleſſing, for ever and ever, Amen.

THE better therefore to underſtand the Nature and Conſtitution of Chriſt's Kingdom, it will be neceſſary to obſerve, [a] that, as he is the Creator of the World, he has one Dominion, and as the Redeemer of it, another: As Creator, his Regality is eſſential to his Nature; as Redeemer, 'tis annexed to his Office: The one is in common with the other Perſons in the Godhead, and what he had from all Eternity; the other is peculiarly aſſigned him, and what he entered upon, when he undertook his Mediatorſhip; ſo that the one he holds by Right of his eternal Generation, the other, as a Reward of his great Performances in our Fleſh; [b] becauſe he humbled himſelf (ſays the Apoſtle) and became obedient to Death, even the Death of the Croſs, therefore has God highly † exalted him, and gave him a Name, which is above every Name, that at the Name of Jeſus every Knee ſhould bow, of Things in Heaven, and Things in Earth, and Things under the Earth; and that every Tongue ſhould confeſs, that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord, to the Glory of God the Father; [c] who raiſed him from the Dead, and ſet him at his own Right-Hand, in heavenly Places, far above all Principalities, and Powers, and Might, and Dominion, and every Name, that is named, not only in this World, but that alſo which is to come, and hath put all Things under his Feet, and hath given him to be Head over all Things to the Church. Not but that Chriſt, as he is the Son of God, co-equal and co-eſſential with him, had all along a Communion in the ſame Might and Dominion, which admits of no Increaſe; and, from Eternity, was infinitely above all other Principalities and Powers whatever; but then, as, to effect our Salvation, he humbled himſelf, and became the Son of Man, in

The Nature of it.

[a] Iſa. ix. 6. [t] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III. [u] Luke i. 32, 33. * John i. 49. [x] Ibid. xii. 13. [y] Matth. xxviii. 18. [z] 1 Cor. xv. 25. † Rev. v. 12. [a] Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. iii. [b] Phil. ii. 8, &c.

† Moſt of the Ancients, who underſtand this Text of a proper Exaltation, have interpreted it of Chriſt's human, and not of his Divine Nature; but if to exalt will ſignify to manifeſt, or diſplay to a greater Degree, in which Senſe it frequently occurs in Scripture, (Exod. xv. 2. 2 Sam. xxii. 47. Pſal. xxi. 13, &c.) then may we apply it to his Divine Nature, as the Humiliation, here ſpoken of, ſeems properly to direct us. The abſolute eſſential Dignity of our Lord indeed, in Reſpect of which he was ever equal with God, will admit of no Advancement, or Exaltation; it was always the ſame; but his Relative Dignity towards us, founded in the Obligation, we have received from him, in that amazing and aſtoniſhing Inſtance of Condeſcenſion and Goodneſs, his becoming Man, and dying for us; this may be exalted, i. e. proclaimed aloud, and made more publick: And therefore, when God the Son had humbled himſelf to this Degree, and, by an unparallelled Work of Mercy, had redeemed Mankind, and thereby acquired a new and ſpecial Title to be their Lord and Sovereign; it pleaſed God the Father, in the moſt ſolemn and pompous Manner, to proclaim the high Dignity of his Son; to re-inforce his rightful Claim of Homage; and to command Heaven and Earth, Angels and Men, to pay him all Honour, Reverence, and Adoration, ſuitable to the Dignity of ſo Great, ſo Good, ſo Divine a Perſon, as the Son of God. And thus we may underſtand the Words, Wherefore God alſo hath highly exalted him, i. e. on Account of the great Work of Redemption, ſo full of Love and Goodneſs, ſo aſtoniſhing, and ſo endearing, God hath remarkably proclaimed his Dignity, and ſet forth his Glory, commanding all Men hereupon to acknowledge him their God and Lord; their Lord always, but now more eſpecially, by a new and diſtinct Claim; as their Saviour, and Deliverer, and only Redeemer. Waterland's Sermons at Lady Moyer's Lectures.

[c] Eph. i. 20, &c.

in this Senſe he was capable of being advanced; and accordingly God is ſaid to ſet him at his Right-Hand, as the Kings of the Eaſt were wont to place the Perſon, they appointed to preſide over their Dominions.

[e] THOUGH therefore the eſſential Kingdom of Chriſt is co-eternal with himſelf, and inſeparable from his Being; yet his Mediatorial Kingdom is not ſo. A Time there was, when it had no Exiſtence, and a Time will come, when it ſhall be diſſolved: The Time, when Chriſt entered upon it was, at the Commencement of the Covenant of Grace; the Time, when he was ſolemnly inaugurated to it, was at his Aſcenſion into Heaven; and the Time, when he ſhall deliver it up to God, even the Father, ſhall be at the End, or Conſummation of all Things. This is the Kingdom, which falls under our preſent Conſideration, and how well our bleſſed Saviour is known to adminiſter it, will beſt appear by enquiring into his Regal Acts.

Chriſt's Regal Acts.

To conquer his Enemies.

[f] I. THAT there are two great Powers in the Univerſe, contending againſt each other, under their reſpective Heads and Leaders, whereof Jeſus Chriſt is the one, and the other the Devil, or Satan; and that theſe two Chiefs have two ſeparate Kingdoms, the one repreſented under the Notion of a Kingdom of Light, and the other under that of a Kingdom of Darkneſs, is manifeſtly the Apoſtle's Meaning, when he [g] gives Thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be Partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light, and hath delivered us from the Power of Darkneſs, and tranſlated us into the Kingdom of his dear Son: And that between theſe two Kingdoms there is a perpetual and an unwearied Oppoſition, is the received Interpretation of that Paſſage in the Revelation; [h] and there was War in Heaven; Michael and his Angels fought againſt the Dragon, and the Dragon fought and his Angels, and prevailed not, neither was their Place any more found in Heaven. And the great Dragon was caſt out, that old Serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole World; he was caſt out into the Earth, and his Angels were caſt out with him.

WHAT Number of Spirits the Devil drew into his Party and Intereſt, is a Matter unknown to us, ſince the Scripture has not thought fit to reveal it; but our own Obſervation will give us too ſad a View of the Extent of his Kingdom among Mankind, where he gradually enlarged his Empire, 'till, at length, the whole Earth was covered with Ignorance and Darkneſs; and eſpecially at the Time of our Saviour's Coming, the Generality of Mankind was ſo blinded with him, that they had almoſt loſt all true Notions of God, and were ſo far ſunk into Idolatry, that, in many Places, they worſhipped the Devil himſelf as God, [i] being dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins (as the Apoſtle repreſents them) they walked according to the Courſe of this World, according to the Prince of the Power of the Air, and the Spirit, that worketh in the Children of Diſobedience. But now when our Saviour came into the World, he erected his Kingdom among Mankind, by the Propagation of his Goſpel enlarged his Dominions over the moſt diſtant Regions of the World, and, wherever his Religion came, there put a Period to all idolatrous Worſhip, and utterly deſtroyed the Power and Empire of the Devil. While he was on Earth, him he ſubdued in all his Temptations and perſonal Conflicts with him; Sin he took away, the Guilt of it by the Laver of his Blood, the Puniſhment of it by his ſuffering in our Stead, and the Dominion of it by the Efficacy of his Grace; and Death he has vanquiſhed by dying himſelf, riſing again, and opening the Way to eternal Life: [k] For this Purpoſe the Son of Man was manifeſted, that he might deſtroy the Works of the Devil; and [l] having ſpoiled Principalities and Powers, he made a Shew of them openly. triumphing over them on the Croſs, [m] leading Captivity captive, as he aſcended up to Heaven; and when he ſhall return from thence, [n] O Death! he will be thy Plagues; O Grave! he will be thy Deſtruction; for he will ranſom his Subjects from the Power of the Grave, and when each Repoſitory of the Dead ſhall be opened, and all the Sons of Men return to Life again, then ſhall [o] Death be totally ſwallowed up in Victory.

To appoint proper Miniſters.

2. AFTER the Erection of his Kingdom, Chriſt's next Regal Act is, to appoint proper Miniſters, by whom he is to rule it. For being himſelf about to leave the Earth, and to aſcend into Heaven, it was neceſſary that he ſhould ſubſtitute ſome, to ſupply his Room, that the Kingdom, which he had gained from the Prince of Darkneſs, might be continued in good Order, and ſecured from the Danger of relapſing into the Enemy's Hand. [p] The firſt Miniſter of this Kind is the Holy Ghoſt, [e] Scott's Mediator. [f] King's Critical Hiſtory of the Apoſtles Creed. [g] Col. i. 12, 13. [h] Rev. xii. 7, &c. [i] Eph. ii. 12. [k] 1 John iii. 8. [l] Col. ii. 15. [m] Eph. iv. 8. [n] Hoſ. xiii. 14. [o] 1 Cor. xv. 54. [p] Scott, ibid.

Ghoſt, the third Perſon in the ever-bleſſed Trinity, whom, upon his Acceſſion to his heavenly Kingdom, he ſent down to preſide, in his Abſence, as his Vicegerent in his Kingdom here below; to furniſh his Apoſtles with ſuch miraculous Gifts, as were neceſſary for the firſt Propagation of his Goſpel, and all ſucceeding Chriſtians with ſuch Graces, as are conducive to the Illumination of their Minds, and the Sanctification of their Wills and Affections. Next under him are Angels of different Kinds and Orders, who, by the Appointment of Chriſt, are to attend the Affairs of his Kingdom; good Angels to guard and protect his Subjects, not only againſt outward Dangers, but againſt the Rage likewiſe and Fury of evil Spirits; to ſupport and comfort them under ſore Calamities, and difficult Undertakings; to further and aſſiſt them in their religious Offices; and, when Life is done, to conduct their ſeparate Souls into the Manſions of Bliſs: And evil Angels, to try and exerciſe the Virtues of his Subjects; to chaſten and correct their Faults and Miſcarriages, and to execute his Vengeance, in the other World, on ſuch, as will not ſubmit to his Government in this. Next to theſe are the Kings and Governors of the World, who being ordered by Chriſt to be [q] nurſing Fathers to his Church, in Analogy to that Name, are to protect and defend it in the Profeſſion and Exerciſe of the true Religion; to ſecure its Peace and good Order by wholeſome Laws; to chaſten and correct its irregular Members; and to make proper proviſion for the Decency of its Worſhip, and the Maintenance of its Miniſters: And, laſt of all, are theſe ſpiritual and eccleſiaſtical Miniſters, whoſe appointed Office it is, to preach the Goſpel of Chriſt, to adminiſter his Holy Sacraments, to offer up the publick Prayers and Interceſſions of Chriſtian Congregations; and, when raiſed to be Rulers in the Church, to confirm ſuch as have been inſtructed in Religion, to ordain fit Perſons to eccleſiaſtical Offices, to make Laws for the Preſervation of Peace and good Order, and to execute that ſpiritual Juriſdiction, which Chriſt has eſtabliſhed for Edification, and not for Deſtruction.

3. AFTER the Appointment of proper Miniſters, Chriſt's next Regal Act is, to preſcribe Laws for the Government of his Kingdom; and this he did in thoſe Sermons and Diſcourſes, which are recorded in the Goſpel, [r] wherein he performed the Part of a Legiſlator, as well as a Teacher; and by his own Authority, as he was a King, ſtamp'd thoſe Doctrines, which he taught and delivered as a Prophet, into Laws; Laws, that are of a ſpiritual Nature, and extend their Obligation to the Wills and Affections of his Subjects; that reſtrain our Thoughts and Deſires, as well as our Words and Actions, and give Direction to our inward Intentions, as well as our outward Performances: Laws that not only forbid the Commiſſion of evil Actions, but even blame, and account criminal the very Affection and Inclination to them, making [s] Hatred to be Murther; [t] Covetouſneſs, Robbery; and [u] the inordinate luſting after a Woman, Adultery: Laws laſtly, that are bound upon us by ſuch Sanctions, as no earthly Prince can give to his Ordinances, everlaſting Happineſs, or everlaſting Miſery, according as our Obedience or Diſobedience ſhall appear, at the great Day of Examination. To preſcribe Laws.

4. AFTER the Preſcription of proper Laws, Chriſt's next Regal Act is, to protect and defend his Kingdom againſt the outrageous Attempts of its numerous Enemies. For this End, the Father, as the Apoſtle tells us, has put all Things in Subjection under him, and given him to be Head over all Things to his Church, that, having the univerſal Government of all Events in his Hand, he might, by his over-ruling Providence, order and direct them to the Intereſt and Advantage of his Church: And accordingly now that he is in Heaven, the Defence and Preſervation of his Church is the great Buſineſs which he intends upon Earth. There he now ſits looking down from his Throne with a watchful Eye, to obſerve all the Motions, and trace out all the dark Deſigns of its Enemies; and from thence he ſtretches forth his Almighty Arm to guard and defend it againſt them, to over-rule their Malice, and make their wicked Machinations redound to its greater Proſperity. Nor is it for his Church in general, but for all the faithful and obedient Subjects of it, that he exerciſes ſuch a vigilant Providence. They are the dear Purchaſe of his Blood, and muſt therefore be ſuppoſed to deſerve his Care: They are the Jewels of his Kingdom, and are therefore kept, in his Treaſury, under the ſtrongeſt and moſt inviolable Security: They are the living Members of his Body, and, as he feels their Pains with the moſt To protect his Subjects.

[q] Iſa. xlix. 23.
[r] Scott's Mediator.
[s] 1 John iii. 15.
[t] Mark vii. 22.
[u] Matth. v. 28.

tender Sympathy, his Providence is as much concerned for their Defence, § as his Eye-lid is to defend the Apple of his own Eye. Sometimes indeed he corrects them with his own Hand, and permits them to be oppreſſed and afflicted by others; but ſtill he does this with a moſt gracious Intention, either to excite and exerciſe their Graces, or to cure or prevent ſome Diſeaſe in their Minds, or to wean them from the Love of this vain World, and fit and prepare them for a bleſſed Eternity; and, whatever Evils happen to them in the Courſe of his Providence, ſtill he takes Care to extract Good out of them, and to contrive and order the whole Scene of Affairs ſo that, in the Iſſue, * all Things may work together for Good to them, that love God, and are the called according to his Purpoſe.

To puniſh and reward.

5. AFTER the Defence and Protection of his Kingdom, one Act more of Chriſt's Regal Authority is, to puniſh his wicked and rebellious, and to reward his faithful and obedient Subjects. For, as he mediates for his Father, in ruling and governing us, he muſt be the Miniſter of his Father's Providence; and conſequently, whatever divine Puniſhments are inflicted upon Offenders, are to be looked upon as the Strokes of his Hands. [y] I gave her Space to repent of her Fornications, (ſays he of Jezebel, and her Followers) and ſhe repented not; behold, I will caſt her into a Bed, i. e. into a bed-rid and irrecoverable Condition, and them that commit Adultery with her into great Tribulation, and I will kill her Children with Death; and all the Churches ſhall know, that I am he, which ſearcheth the Reins and Hearts; and I will give unto every one of you according to his Works. And though, for wiſe and gracious Ends, he oftentimes ſpares bad Men in this Life, and ſometimes ſhines upon them a continued Day of Proſperity, without any Cloud or Interruption; yet he always overtakes them with the fearful Storms of his Vengeance, in the Life to come. For no ſooner are their Souls departed from their Bodies, but they are immediately conſigned, by his Warrant, into the Hands of evil Angels, by them carried into ſome diſmal Abode, and there made to ſuffer all the Torments and Agonies, that the Wrath and Malice of Devils, together with their own awakened Conſciences, and furious and unſatisfied Affections, are able to inflict. On the contrary to him that overcometh, ſays our Saviour, will I give to eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the Midſt of the Paradiſe of God, i. e. I will admit him to a Participation of the bleſſed Immortality of Heaven. For whenever any faithful and obedient Souls depart from their Bodies, he preſently ſends forth his Angelick Meſſengers, to conduct them ſafe to the immortal Regions, and there to lodge them in ſome one of thoſe bliſsful Manſions in his Father's Houſe, which he went before to prepare for them, where, free from a vexatious and tumultuous World, they live in a continued Fruition of their utmoſt Wiſhes; all their Happineſs is eternal, and all their Eternity nothing elſe, but one continued Act of Love, and Praiſe, and Joy, and Triumph; where there are no Sighs or Tears, no Intermixtures of Sorrow or Miſery, but every Heart is full of Joy, and every Joy is Quinteſſence, and every Moment crowned with ſome new and freſh Enjoyment.

THESE are ſome of the Regal Acts, which Chriſt has already performed, and which he continues conſtantly to perform, in the Government of his mediatorial Kingdom; but others there are of a more extraordinary Nature, which, in the Fulneſs of Time, he is ſtill to perform, before he ſurrenders up this Kingdom, and theſe are reducible to three Heads; 1. The Enlargement of his Empire. 2. The Reſurrection of the Dead. And, 3. The Judgment of the World, at the laſt Day.

The Enlargement of Chriſt's Kingdom,

1. IF we conſult the antient Propheſies concerning the vaſt Extent of our Saviour's Kingdom, that [z] the Stone cut out without Hands (by which all agree the Kingdom of Chriſt is ſignified) ſhould become a great Mountain, and fill the whole Earth, and that it ſhould break in Pieces and conſume all other Kingdoms; that [a] the Lord ſhould be King all over the Earth; that [b] he ſhould have Dominion from Sea to Sea, and from the River to the End of the Earth; that all Kings ſhould fall down before him, and all Nations ſerve him; and [c] that all the Ends of the Earth ſhould remember, and turn to the Lord, and all the Kindreds of the Nations worſhip before him, becauſe the Kingdom ſhall be the Lord's, and he ſhall govern the Nations: If we conſider theſe, and ſeveral other Propheſies of the like Import, I ſay, we ſhall find, that there a are great many of them, which, as yet, were never accompliſhed; and thereupon muſt conclude, that there is a Time to come, before the Conſummation of all Things, wherein our Saviour will, once more, diſplay the glorious Banner of § Zech. ii. 8. * Rom. viii. 28. x Scott's Mediator. y Rev. ii. 21, &c.

z Dan. ii. 34, 35, 44, 45. a Mich. v. 4. b Pſal. lxxii. 8. c Ibid. ver. 11.

of his Croſs, and like a mighty Man of War, march on conquering, and to conquer, till he has either confounded, or converted his Enemies, and finally compleated his Victory over all the Powers of Earth.

By the Converſion of the Gentiles

I AM not inſenſible, that ſome Expoſitors are of Opinion, that the Prophetick Expreſſions of this Nature have Reference only to Chriſt's coming in the Fleſh; and the Progreſs, which his Goſpel afterwards made, and even to this Day, is ſtill making, in the Converſion of the World; [d] but, upon a diligent comparing of Things, we ſhall find, that they muſt of Neceſſity have a more extenſive Meaning, if we intend, that the Interpretation ſhould anſwer, either the Height and Greatneſs of the Words, or the Weight and Dignity of the Matter ſpoken of. Many indeed of the Heathen World were converted in the Days of the Apoſtles, but that Converſion was not general: Thoſe who were then called, were but the Firſt-fruits of that compleat Calling of Pagans to Chriſtianity, which is to be a little before the Converſion of the Jews; [e] for I would not, Brethren, ſays the Apoſtle to the Gentiles, that ye ſhould be ignorant of this Myſtery, that Blindneſs in part is happened to Iſrael, until the Fulneſs of the Gentiles be come in, and ſo all Iſrael ſhall be ſaved. The Blindneſs of the Jews, and the Salvation of the Gentiles, the Apoſtle here calls a Myſtery, and in this he intimates, that the Perſons, he wrote to, did not comprehend the Deſign of God in this Matter; and therefore he unfolds this Secret of Providence, by acquainting them, that God took Occaſion, from the Obduration of the Jews, to communicate the Goſpel to the Gentiles, in order to convert them to the Faith; and ſo, by calling of them, to provoke the Jews afterwards to accept of the Goſpel, that they, in like Manner, might be ſaved. But then, whether this be ſpoken of a general Converſion, towards the End of the World, or only of the great Numbers converted by Chriſt and his Apoſtles, at the firſt Publication of the Goſpel, (as ſome are apt to imagine) comes now to be conſidered.

AND, in order to a right underſtanding of this Matter, we muſt obſerve, that the Scripture acquaints us with a two-fold Calling, or Converſion of the Gentiles, [f] the one partial, and the other total; the former of theſe was, when the Jews were rejected, viz. in the Time of our Saviour and his Apoſtles, and when the Gentiles were called in to ſupply their Room; the latter, which is here named the Fulneſs of the Gentiles, denotes a full Body of them, which is to come in, ſome time or other, before the Concluſion of the World. This is ſet forth in the Parable [g] of the great Supper, where the Jews were the Gueſts that were bidden, but, upon their Refuſal, the Servants were commanded to go into the Streets, and the Lanes of the City, and to bring in the Poor, the Maimed, the Halt, and the Blind: Theſe were the Gentiles, who, in the Apoſtles Times, and ever ſince, have been converted to the Chriſtian Faith. But after this is done, it is ſaid, there is ſtill Room, viz. for more Converts to Chriſtianity; and therefore the Servants are bid again to go out into the Highways, and Hedges, and to compel them to come in. Here is a plain Diſtinction between the former and latter Converſion of the Gentiles: After the firſt Invitation and Entertainment, there was more Room, which intimates at leaſt, that there was a ſecond Calling; and (what makes very much to our preſent Purpoſe) this ſecond Company is compelled to come in to the Supper of the Lord, that his Houſe may be filled; that the Church may be compleated, and made entire, which it could not be, without the Converſion of the Gentiles at laſt.

and Jews.

THAT, ſoon after the Converſion of the Gentiles, the Jews, who (notwithſtanding their frequent Diſperſions over the Face of the Earth) have ſtill remained a diſtinct and ſeparate People, ſhall be converted likewiſe to Chriſtianity, and ſo become one Fold under one Shepherd and Biſhop of their Souls, is plain from all thoſe Paſſages, which aſſure them of God's remembering the Covenant made with their Forefathers; which promiſe them an happy Reſtoration and Eſtabliſhment in their own Land; and foretel a glorious and flouriſhing State of Religion, that will then ſucceed among them. [h] When they are in the Land of their Enemies, I will not caſt them away, neither will I abhor them, to deſtroy them utterly, and to break my Covenant with them; for I am the Lord their God: [i] There ſhall come therefore out of Zion a Deliverer, and ſhall turn away Ungodlineſs from Jacob; for [k] the Lord ſhall ſet his Hand a ſecond Time to recover the Remnant of his People, and ſhall aſſemble the Outcaſts of Iſrael, and gather together the Diſperſed of Judah, from the four Corners of the Earth: [l] In that Day

[d] Edwards's Survey of Religion, Vol. II.
[e] Rom. xi. 25, 26.
[f] Edwards, ibid.
[g] Luke xiv. 16, &c.
[h] Lev. xxvi. 44, 45.
[i] Iſa. lix. 20.
[k] Iſa. xi. 11, 12.
[l] Ibid. ver. 10.

Day there ſhall be a Root of Jeſſe, which ſhall ſtand for an Enſign to the People; to it ſhall the Gentiles ſeek, and his Reſt ſhall be glorious; for [m] if the Fall of the Jews (as the Apoſtle argues) be the Riches of the World, and the Diminiſhing them be the Riches of the Gentiles, how much more their Fulneſs?

[n] 'TIS not to be denied indeed, but that ſome of the Texts, uſually cited out of the Old Teſtament to prove the general Converſion of the Jews, are to be underſtood of the temporal Deliverance of that People from Captivity; and that others of them relate to their Converſion, in our Saviour's Time, when Multitudes of them renounced their own Religion, and acknowledged Jeſus to be the true Meſſiah: All this cannot be denied; and yet any unprejudiced Perſon may take Notice of other Places, both in the Old and New Teſtament, which point at the national Converſion of the Jews, before the Concluſion of the World; [o] nor can he forbear obſerving, that ſome of thoſe Texts, which foretel their Return from Babylon to their own Land, and others, which ſpeak of their turning from Judaiſm to Chriſtianity, at the firſt Propagation of the Goſpel, are alſo to be underſtood of this Univerſal Recovery of them, at the Time of this Enlargement of Chriſt's Kingdom: It being no uncommon Thing, in the prophetical Writings of the Bible, to have a two-fold hiſtorical Meaning in the ſame Paſſage, one primary, and chiefly intended; the other ſecondary, and included.

How this will be effected.

[p] THUS, by the Acceſſion of both Jew and Gentile, the whole World will be Chriſtendom, and all the Kingdoms of the Earth become the Kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Chriſt: And how this great Event will be brought about (by comparing the ſeveral Propheſies together) we may be allowed to conjecture——That, when, in the Revolution of Ages, the Time appointed for this mighty Work ſhall come, [q] the Scene will probably open with ſome ſuch miraculous Effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt, as was at the firſt Beginning of Chriſtianity, but far more general and extenſive: The Miſſionaries, and ſuch as are employed in the Converſion of Infidel-Countries, ſhall then perhaps be endowed with the ſame Powers, that were beſtowed upon the Apoſtles and firſt Chriſtians, the Gift of Tongues, of curing Diſeaſes, working Miracles, and ſpeaking the Word of God with all Boldneſs: Chriſt will then open unto them a Door of Utterance, will give them the ſame Zeal and Fervency of Love, the ſame Patience and Perſeverance in Labour, the ſame Innocence and Exemplarineſs of Life (which was ſo conſpicuous in the primitive Ages) to recommend his Religion; and, as he has the Hearts of Princes in his Hand, and the Iſſues of Providence at his Command, by the kindly Operations of his Spirit, and an happy Conjunction of national Affairs, he will diſpoſe them to a favourable Reception of that Doctrine, which, beſides its intrinſick Worth, has the Advantage of ſo good a Recommendation: By theſe, and ſundry other Means in the Secrets of the Divine Counſel, [r] the Gentiles ſhall come to his Light, and Kings (in the Phraſe of the Prophet) to the Brightneſs of his Riſing: He ſhall lift up his Eyes round about, and ſee; all they gather themſelves together, and come unto him; his Sons ſhall come from far, and his Daughters ſhall be nurſed at his Side.

WE may be allowed to conjecture farther, that this wonderful Converſion of the Gentiles ſhall raiſe the Inquiſitiveneſs of the Jews, and (as the Apoſtle expreſſes it) [s] provoke them to Jealouſy. They ſhall begin (what they have long neglected) to examine into the Merits of a Religion, which has made ſo great a Revolution in the World; and, laying aſide their Prejudice againſt it, (without [t] the preaching of Enoch and Elias, and without the [u] perſonal Appearance of Chriſt in the Clouds) ſhall happily receive Conviction from the Labours of holy Men, animated by a Spirit of godly Zeal, and unfeignedly endeavouring to promote the Welfare of their immortal Souls: And being once convinced of the Error and Wickedneſs of their Infidelity, with one Heart and Mind they ſhall return to the Lord, and with penitent Tears waſh off the Guilt of the Blood of their Saviour; for this is the Senſe of the Propheſy, where Chriſt himſelf is introduced as ſpeaking, [x] I will pour upon the Houſe of David, and upon the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, a Spirit of Grace, and of Supplication; and they ſhall look upon me, whom they have pierced, and mourn, as one mourneth for his only only Son, i. e. they ſhall heartily bewail the execrable Wickedneſs of their Forefathers, who put the bleſſed Jeſus to death, and as ſincerely grieve, that they themſelves crucified him by their Sins.

[m] Rom. xi. 12. [n] Edwards's Survey of Religion, Vol. II. [o] Scott's Mediator. [p] Iſa. lx. 3, 4. [q] Rom. xi. 11. [r] It was the Opinion of Tertullian, Chryſoſtome, Theodoret, and ſeveral other Fathers, (in which they are followed by the Doctors of the Roman Church) that the Calling of the Jews, before Chriſt's coming to Judgment, ſhall be chiefly effected by the Preaching of Enoch and Elias. [s] It is the Opinion of ſome, that, in order to the Jews Converſion, Chriſt will make a viſible Appearance, in a bright and glorious Manner, ſeated upon the Clouds; but the Texts on which this Opinion is founded, relate rather to his coming to Judgment. [t] Zech. xii. 10.

THE Jews, being thus converted by the Power of Chriſt, ſhall return into the Holy Land, and be repoſſeſſed of their native Country, where (as the Prophet expreſſes it) they ſhall dwell in a peaceable Habitation, and in ſure Dwellings, and in quiet Reſting-places; while the reſt of the Chriſtian World (for the World ſhall be all then Chriſtian) ſhall enjoy an univerſal Peace, and a Concurrence of all temporal Bleſſings, in this happy State: [a] They ſhall come to Sion with Songs, and everlaſting Joy upon their Heads; they ſhall obtain Joy and Gladneſs, and Sorrow and Sighing ſhall flee away. * All angry and miſchievous Paſſions, that now ſet the World in a Flame, ſhall then be extinguiſhed, and a quiet and peaceable Temper interfere, not only among rational Creatures, but even the moſt ſavage Brutes; for [x] the Wolf ſhall dwell with the Lamb, and the Leopard lie down with the Kid, and the Calf, and the young Lion, and the Fatling together, and a little Child ſhall lead them, &c. All Antipathies ſhall then ceaſe, and they ſhall be reſtored to that Harmleſſneſs and Innocence they had at the firſt Creation. In this happy Period of Time, Righteouſneſs, as well as Peace, ſhall abound, and Virtue and Godlineſs become the Habit of every Mind. Religion ſhall then be reſtored to its ancient Purity, and Piety and Goodneſs be received as the prevailing Faſhion. All Lying and Falſhood, all Guile and Diſſimulation ſhall then diſappear, and the true Faith, the ſincere Sanctity, the generous and unaffected Virtue, which Chriſtianity teaches and preſcribes, ſhall be the univerſal Livery and Cognizance of the Chriſtian World. Thus fraught with every Bleſſing, both ſpiritual and temporal, with Peace and Righteouſneſs, with Joy and Triumph, external Proſperity, and internal Sanctity, ſhall the latter End of the Meſſiah's Reign be: And (what will conſummate his Subjects Bliſs) this happy State of Things ſhall, ſome Way or other, (though we cannot define the preciſe Manner of it) be enlivened and enlightened by his own Divine Preſence; for ſo we read in the Apocalyptick Viſion, that, [y] upon the New Jeruſalem's coming down from Heaven, a great Voice was heard, ſaying, Behold the Tabernacle of God is with Men, and he will dwell with them, and they ſhall be his People, and God himſelf ſhall be with them, and be their God. The Happineſs of this State.

WHEN this proſperous State of Chriſt's Kingdom will commence, is neither ſo eaſy, nor ſo ſafe a Matter to determine, ſince thoſe, that have attempted the Computation, have hitherto miſcarried, and, perhaps, have given ill-minded Men an Occaſion to diſbelieve all the other Propheſies in the Apocalypſe; becauſe the Period of this, which was ſtated with ſo much Confidence, is eventually found to be untrue. In the general, we know that the Reſtoration of Chriſt's Kingdom will begin when the ſeventh and laſt Angel ſoundeth his Trumpet, for then ſhall [z] the Kingdoms of the World become the Kingdoms of the Lord, and of his Chriſt; but when this laſt Angel ſhall perform that Office, we are utterly ignorant; only we may ſurmiſe, that if the Exaltation of Chriſt's Kingdom is to enſue upon the Deſtruction of the four general Monarchies, (as we have Grounds from the Prophet Daniel [a] to believe it will) then is the fourth Monarchy, i. e. the Roman, which is now tranſlated to the Germans, and become but a mere Name and Title, ſo wearing off, that we have room to ſuppoſe the Time of Chriſt's enlarging his Kingdom, i. e. of making a more illuſtrious Manifeſtation of Chriſtianity, and a more viſible and glorious Diſplay of its Power and Virtue, than was ever yet in the World before, is at a nearer Diſtance, than what the preſent Face of Affairs may ſeem to promiſe. For who knows, [b] but that Impiety and Irreligion are now making their laſt Efforts, before that glorious Day arrives; that an univerſal Profaneneſs may uſher in an univerſal Holineſs and Purity; and the When it ſhall begin.

[a] Iſa. xxxv. 10. * Vid. Burnet's Theory, Vol. II. and Edwards's Survey, Vol. II. [x] Iſa. xi. 6. I am very ſenſible, that theſe Words are, by moſt Commentators, underſtood of that inward Change, which ſhall be made in Men's Minds and Hearts, by the powerful Influence of the Goſpel: But I ſee not much Foundation for ſuch an Interpretation; nor is there any Reaſon to fly to a metaphorical Senſe of a Text, when it appears that there is a literal one. The Prophet here gives us an Account of the peaceable Kingdom of Chriſt, which ſhould happen in the Cloſe of the World; and (among other Things) he tells us, that this is a Part of it, viz. That there ſhall be a Change in the very Nature and Qualities of brute Animals; that the Wolf, the Leopard, the Lion, the Bear, the Serpent, the Adder, Creatures remarkable for their Fierceneſs, ſhould become as tame as Lambs, Kids, or Calves; ſhould lie down, and dwell, and feed together; neither prey upon one another, nor do any Hurt to Men. Nothing could be ſaid more plainly, to expreſs the great Bleſſing and Privilege of theſe laſt Days, when the Earth ſhall be full of the Knowledge of the Lord, as the Waters cover the Sea; which, being the very next Words, do manifeſtly ſhew, what Period of Time they relate to. Edwards, ibid. [y] Rev. xxi. 3. [z] Ibid. xi. 15. [a] Dan. ii. [b] Edwards, ibid.

Diviſions and Contentions in Churches and States may be Forerunners of a general Quiet and Repoſe.

That it is not yet paſt.

THAT this happy Period is not paſt, we may ſatisfy ourſelves, by conſidering, that, from the Birth of Chriſtianity to this preſent Age, there never yet were a thouſand Years, which deſerve the Name, or anſwer the Character of this pure and pacifick State. The firſt Ages of Chriſtianity, as they were the moſt pure, ſo were they the leaſt peaceable. Being continually, more or leſs, under the Perſecution of Heathen Emperors, they were ſo far from being the Reign and Empire of Chriſt, and his Saints over the Nations, that Chriſtians were then, every where, in Subjection and Slavery, a poor helpleſs People, thruſt into Priſons, or thrown to the Lions, at the Pleaſure of their Princes or Rulers. When the Empire, indeed, (much about the IVth Century) became Chriſtian, under Conſtantine the Great, there was, for a Time, Peace and Proſperity in the Church, and a good Degree of Purity and Piety; but that Peace was ſoon diſturbed, and that Piety ſoon corrupted. The growing Pride and Ambition of Eccleſiaſticks, and their Eaſineſs to admit, and introduce ſuperſtitious Practices, deſtroyed the Purity of the Church; and, as to the Peace of it, their Conteſts, about Opinions and Doctrines, tore Chriſtians themſelves into Pieces, and, ſoon after, an Inundation of barbarous People fell into Chriſtendom, and put it all into Flames and Confuſion. After this Eruption of the Northern Nations, Mahometaniſm roſe in the Eaſt, and Swarms of Saracens, like Armies of Locuſts, invaded, conquered, and planted their Religion in ſeveral Parts of the Roman Empire, and of the Chriſtian World. In following Ages they over-ran the Eaſtern Empire, and the Greek Church; and, to this very Day, hold that miſerable People in ſad Slavery and Subjection. Thus Providence ſeems to have ordered Affairs, that the Chriſtian World ſhould never enjoy a perfect Reſt, ſhould never be without a Woe upon it, leſt it ſhould fancy itſelf already in thoſe happy Days of Peace and Proſperity, which are reſerved for future Times.

But, when begun, will laſt a thouſand Years.

FROM this ſhort Account of the State of Chriſtendom, we may learn, that this happy Term of Chriſt's Reign, when Satan ſhall be impriſoned, and Virtue and Innocence on the Throne, is not yet begun, tho' we cannot determine when it will; but, from a ſure Word of Prophecy, we may inform ourſelves, that, whenever it ſhall begin, its Duration ſhall be a thouſand Years: For, 'I ſaw an Angel come down from Heaven, ſays St John, having the Key of the bottomleſs Pit, and a great Chain in his Hand, and he laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thouſand Years, and caſt him into the bottomleſs Pit, and ſhut him up, and ſet a Seal upon him, that he ſhould not deceive the Nations any more, till the thouſand Years ſhould be fulfilled. I ſaw the Souls of them, that were beheaded for the Witneſs of Jeſus, and for the Word of God——and they lived, and reigned with Chriſt a thouſand Years. Bleſſed and holy is he, that hath Part in the firſt Reſurrection; on ſuch the ſecond Death hath no Power; but they ſhall be Prieſts of God, and of Chriſt, and ſhall reign with him a thouſand Years.' [f] In all which, and ſeveral other Places, that might be produced, no Reaſon can be given, why a preciſe and determinate Number of Years ſhould be ſo often mentioned, unleſs that the Holy Spirit's Deſign was, to inſtruct us, that this happy and glorious Scene was to continue a thouſand Years.

The Doctrine of the Millennium.

[g] I AM very ſenſible, what Uſe learned Men, in ſeveral Ages of the Church, have made of the foregoing Paſſage, to eſtabliſh the Doctrine of a Millennium, or Perſonal Reign of Chriſt and his Saints upon Earth, for the Space of a thouſand Years, ſome Time or other before the Concluſion of the World. 1. Here, ſay they, is Mention of the firſt Reſurrection, antecedent to the general Reſurrection of the Dead. 2. This Reſurrection is proper to thoſe, that were ſlain for the Teſtimony of Jeſus, and were not Worſhippers of the Beaſt. 3. And that this Reſurrection is not metaphorical, but a proper Reſurrection, we are told, that the Souls, i.e. the Perſons

[f] 'Tis, nevertheleſs, the Opinion of many learned and pious Men, that this Period of Chriſt's Reign is expired; the Cauſe of which I apprehend to be this:——That, being prejudiced againſt the Doctrine of the old Millenarians, and looking upon it (and that juſtly) as a groundleſs and ſcandalous Opinion, they were willing to reſolve the thouſand Years into ſome paſt Time, rather than into any that is to come, and thereby utterly quaſh that fond Conceit of Chriſt's Perſonal Reign upon Earth. This was an ill Method they took, but their great Diſlike of the other Opinion occaſioned it, and, in ſome Meaſure, pleads their Excuſe: Whereas, had they rejected what is amiſs in the Doctrine of the Millenaries, and retained what is true in the general, viz. That there ſhall be a future State of the Chriſtian Church, more glorious than what has hitherto befallen it, they had taken the right Courſe, and aſſerted a Truth, that is founded in the ſacred Scriptures. Edwards's Survey, Vol. II. [d] Burnet's Theory, Vol. II. [e] Rev. xx. 1, &c. [f] Edwards, ibid. [g] Whitby's Treatiſe of the true Millennium.

ſons of them, that were ſlain, live again. 4. Since therefore they are to reign with Chriſt a Thouſand Years, their Reign, they infer, muſt be upon the Earth, becauſe the whole Scene (as appears by the Context) is laid there: From which Poſitions they raiſe this Doctrine, — "That, after ſix thouſand Years in this World are com-
"pleated, all the Saints (ſome ſay, only Martyrs) ſhall ariſe, their Bodies come out "of their Graves, or wherever elſe they were, and their Souls come down from "Heaven to re-inform them; that Chriſt alſo ſhould deſcend from thence, and keep
"a Jubilee with them, reigning in inconceivable Splendor, and ſubjecting all other "Kingdoms to his Empire; that, in this State, the Righteous enjoying an Abund"ance of good Things of this World, ſhall, in order to fit and prepare them for "the Beatific Viſion, ſpend their Time in Devotion and Contemplation, till a thou-
"ſand Years be run out; and then (after ſome Space of Time) all the reſt of Man"kind ſhall riſe from the Dead, and proceed to Judgment."

IT cannot be denied, indeed, but that this Doctrine has its Antiquity, and (as an ancient Father acquaints us) was once the general Opinion of all Orthodox Chriſtians; and yet, upon a cloſe Enquiry, it ſeems not ſo very conſiſtent with what the Scriptures affirm concerning our Saviour, [k] that the Heavens muſt receive him, until the Times of the Reſtitution of all Things; nor does it at all comport with the received Notions of the happy State of Souls departed. For how can it rationally be ſuppoſed, that [l] thoſe Spirits of juſt Men made perfect, which are now with Chriſt, and, [m] being abſent from the Body, are preſent with the Lord, ſhould ever leave thoſe bleſſed Manſions, and quit that happy State, to live on Earth a Thouſand Years? That they, who are already entered into Reſt, and enjoy all the Delight and Satisfaction, which Paradiſe itſelf affords, ſhould relinquiſh that Station, in order to enjoy Peace and Plenty upon Earth? Can they expect to be more righteous and holy, to have more divine and heavenly Speculations, or a more full Fruition of their Lord on Earth, than they enjoyed in Paradiſe? If not, who can ſuppoſe, that God ſhould thus degrade them, after ſo long Enjoyment of theſe happy Regions, or that they themſelves ſhould voluntarily quit thoſe bleſſed Abodes for any temporal Enjoyments whatever; much leſs to fight and wage War, as they neceſſarily muſt, when [n] Gog and Magog gather them to Battle, and compaſs the Camp of the Saints and the beloved City. [o] And if theſe Things ſeem not conſiſtent with the State of happy Souls in general, much leſs will they comport with theſe eſpecial Privileges, and high Prerogatives, ſuppoſed by ſome Fathers to belong to the Souls of Martyrs, viz. that they inſtantly receive their Crowns, and are admitted to a fuller Viſion, and a more intimate Enjoyment of God in Heaven; for the higher their Advancement is, the greater muſt their Degradation be, when they return again to live in this ſublunary World. If this intermediate Space, between their Reſurrection and full Fruition of Heaven, be thought neceſſary, [p] that, by Degrees, they may enlarge their Capacities, and fit and accuſtom themſelves to receive God, [q] it ſounds not ſo well, that the Martyrs ſhould want Capacity to enjoy the Beatifick Viſion, without employing their Contemplations and Devotions upon Earth a thouſand Years; nor can it be imagined, how coming down from thoſe Celeſtial Regions to this dull Earth can be a Way to elevate the Soul to Heaven; or putting on a corruptible Body, a Body needing Plenty of earthly Things, and finding Pleaſure in the Fruition of them, can be any tolerable Expedient to quicken and invigorate her heavenly Flights and Aſpirations.

In ſome Senſe confuted.

SINCE

[k] The Original of the Millennary Opinion is commonly imputed to Cerinthus, and its Refinement to Papias, who is mentioned by Irenæus, as having received it from St John, but without any juſt Grounds. If we would be exact in its Pedigree, we may trace it up to the Jews, long before Chriſt's Time; for it was an ancient Tradition and Perſuaſion amongſt them, that the Meſſias ſhould reign a Thouſand Years on Earth in all Pomp and Grandeur. [Vid. Talm. Babyl. in Cap. Helec; R. Eliezer in Midraſh Tillim; and Lightfoot in Harm. Rev. xx.] "The Opinion of Chriſt's "Perſonal Reign, in the Affluence of all ſenſual and worldly Delights, was an old Jewiſh Error, ſays St Jerom, and "hence the Chriſtians, converted from Judaiſm, borrowed and retained the Notion:" And, indeed, it was retained a conſiderable while in the Church, and, for the firſt three hundred Years after the Apoſtles, was almoſt univerſally believed. At length the Credit of Papias, who was thought to be the firſt Broacher of it, was called in Queſtion; and, as he was a Man of weak Judgment and ſmall Learning, Euſebius tells us, that he reported many ſtrange and fabulous Things, and not rightly underſtood the Apoſtles Arguings. St Jerom and St Auguſtin were the firſt, who wrote againſt this Millennary Reign, which was ſoon after condemned by the Fathers of the Greek and Latin Church, and has ever ſince been looked upon as an heterodox Opinion; till about a Century ago, ſome Anabaptiſts revived it, and, ſince that Time, ſeveral learned Men, both in our own and foreign Churches, have taken great Pains to maintain it.

[l] Juſtin Martyr, Dialog. cum. Tryph. [k] Acts iii. 21. [l] Heb. xii. 23. [m] 2 Cor. v. 8, Phil. i. 27. [n] Rev. xx. 8, 9. [o] Whitby's Treatiſe of the true Millennium. [p] Burnet's Theory, Vol. II. [q] Whitby, ibid.

SINCE therefore the Doctrine of Christ's Personal Reign upon Earth is loaded with so many Inconsistencies, there is a Necessity for understanding that Passage in the Revelation in a figurative Sense; and, if we reduce it to a literal Meaning, it will denote no more than this—— "That though Christians, in preceding Ages, "were cruelly and inhumanly treated by their merciless Persecutors; though Christ's "Kingdom, in those Times, laboured under great and unspeakable Miseries; yet, "upon the Entrance of the joyful Millennium, (for there shall be, on Earth, such a "Millennium, though not of that Nature, which either ancient or modern Chiliasts "assert) all those troublesome and afflictive Things shall cease; the Faithful shall be "put into the Possession of an undisturbed Repose and Serenity; the Christian "Church, after its sore Troubles and Mortifications, shall revive; shall, as it were, "rise out of its Grave; and (as our excellent Hammond paraphrases on the Place) "there shall be such an universal Profession of Christianity, as if all the departed "good Christians were alive again, and come upon the Stage of this World once "more:" For it is no uncommon Thing in Scripture, to represent the Restoration of the Church, and her Return from a low afflicted State, under the Metaphor of a Resurrection from the Dead; for so, speaking of the Jewish Nation, [x] I will open your Eyes, says God, and cause you to come out of your Graves, and bring you into the Land of Israel.

THE other two Regal Acts, which Christ has still to perform, are the Resurrection of the Dead, and the Judgment of the World; but of these we shall have Occasion hereafter to treat at large, and shall only take Notice at present, [t] that, when our blessed Lord shall have finished this last and most glorious Act of Royalty, viz. judging the World, and hath finally condemned to everlasting Fire the irreclaimable Enemies of God, and crowned all his faithful Servants with eternal Glory and Beatitude; then will the whole Business of his mediatorial Kingdom be at an End; then will the Covenant, of which he was the Mediator, be compleatly executed, and, consequently, his Mediation cease, as being of no farther Use, and having no farther Part to act. For, as our beatifick Vision will supersede the Necessity of his Prophetick Office, to teach and instruct us; and, as our Perfection and entire Fuition will supersede the Necessity of his Priestly Office, to offer and intercede for us; so the Security of our Possession of both will supersede the Necessity of his Kingly Office, to protect and defend us; and therefore when our Affairs are once reduced to this happy Issue, his Kingly Office, as well as all other Parts of his Mediatorship, shall for ever cease; [u] Then cometh the End, when he shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, when he shall put down all Rule, and all Authority, and all Power; for he must reign till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet, &c. and when all Things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him, which did put all Things under him, that God may be all in all.

The surrendering up his Kingdom.

IN the mean Time, * that God might govern us in a Way more accommodated to this degenerate State of our Nature; that he might more effectually prevent the Danger of Idolatry, more powerfully encourage our Obedience, oblige us to himself by a stronger Tie of Gratitude, and give us a more ample Assurance of that inestimable Reward, which he hath provided for us, his Wisdom and Goodness is very remarkable, in constituting his eternal Son to be our King, and his Vicegerent here on Earth; so that, of all other People, Christians have the greatest Reason to take up the Words of the Psalmist, and say, [x] The Lord is King, the Earth may be glad thereof, yea the Multitude of the Isles may be glad thereof; for Righteousness and Judgment are the Habitation of his Seat. Of all others, Christians have the greatest Reason to bear up under Adversities of what Kind soever, those especially, which they suffer for his Name's Sake, being assured, that our Jesus, our Saviour, is in Heaven; not only a merciful High-Priest, sensible of our Wants, and compassionate of our Infirmities, but a King likewise, invested with all Power, and all Authority, and, consequently, both able and willing to save to the uttermost those, that by Faith implore his Assistance, and, holding fast their Profession, flee to his Throne, in any pressing Juncture, that they may [y] obtain Mercy, and find Grace to help them in the Time of Need.

SECT.

[t] Edwards's Survey, Vol. II. [u] Ezek. xxxvii. 13, 14. [1] Scott's Mediator. [u] 1 Cor. xv. 24, &c. * Scott, ibid. [x] Psal. xcvii. 1, 2. [y] Heb. iv. 16.

SECT. III.

Of the Sacraments of the New Covenant.

THE Word Sacrament, though not to be met with in the holy Scriptures, became of early Uſe in the Chriſtian Church; and, being taken, moſt probably, from among the Romans, [a] is generally ſuppoſed to denote theſe three Things, 1. A military Oath, which Soldiers took, in order to aſſure their Officers of their Courage and Fidelity. 2. A Badge, or Token, whereby Soldiers were diſtinguiſhed, according to the Commanders they ſerved under. And, 3. A Pledge, or Pawn, depoſited by the Party impleaded, in order to oblige him to anſwer the Plaintiff, upon the Peril of forfeiting ſo much Money. And, in all theſe Senſes, ſome have thought the Word very proper, to denote thoſe ſacred Ceremonies, which are uſed in the Chriſtian Service; ſince by them (as by a ſolemn Oath) we engage ourſelves to become the faithful Soldiers and Servants of Chriſt, the Captain of our Salvation, unto our Lives End; by them (as by a viſible Badge) are diſtinguiſhed from all Societies of Men, that are not Chriſtian; and by them (as by an holy Pledge) are aſſured of God's Grace, and all the other Benefits of the Covenant, which Chriſt has purchaſed for us with his Blood, whenever we ſue to him for the Performance of his Promiſes. The Meaning of the Word Sacrament.

IT cannot be denied, indeed, but that the Word Sacrament, as it is uſually tranſlated from the Greek Μυσ]ήριον, is, [b] by the Latin Fathers, ſet to ſignify almoſt any Thing, that carries with it an hidden Meaning, or ſome ſacred Repreſentations; and from this lax Signification of the Word, thoſe, who multiply the Number of Sacraments, have taken Occaſion to infer——that becauſe Confirmation, by the laying on of the Hands of the Biſhop, implies the conveying of Grace, to enable us to perform our baptiſmal Vow; becauſe holy Orders, by the ſame Ceremony, import the conferring of the Holy Ghoſt; Matrimony repreſents the myſtical Union between Chriſt and his Church; Penance is a Sign and Help to Repentance; and Extreme Unction ſignifies and ſeals the Remiſſion of Sins; they are therefore all to be reckoned in the Number of Sacraments: Whereas the ſame Fathers, when they expreſs themſelves with more Caution upon this Subject, confine the proper Sacraments to the definitive Number of Two only; [c] for, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſays St Auſtin, has united Chriſtians together by Sacraments, few in Number, eaſy of Obſervance, and excellent in Signification, Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper. The Number of them.

AND, indeed, if we conſider the Nature of a Sacrament, as it is deſcribed to be an outward and viſible Sign, which Chriſt inſtituted to exhibit and aſſure us of thoſe Graces and Benefits, which he, by his meritorious Blood-ſhedding, has procured for us, we ſhall ſoon perceive, that the other ſupernumerary Rites or Offices are, in a great Meaſure, deſtitute of the Character, which are required in a Sacrament. [d] Confirmation, we own, is an Apoſtolick Inſtitution, all along continued in the Church, and of ſingular Uſe to ſuch as were baptized in their Infancy; but yet we cannot allow it to be a proper Sacrament, becauſe it was neither of Chriſt's own Appointment, nor has it any outward and viſible Sign, to which an inward and ſpiritual Grace may be ſuppoſed to be annexed. Ordination indeed, or the calling and ſeparating proper Perſons for the Work of the Miniſtry, is an Inſtitution of Chriſt, and, in the ſame Manner, continued by us, as he and his Apoſtles ſettled it in the Church; but in this we ſee nothing adequate to a Sacrament. The laying on of Hands is only a Geſture in Prayer, which denotes the Deſignation of the Perſon ſo pray'd over, and the Grace, which is therein conferred, is only the Bleſſing of God upon a particular Employ, not common to all Chriſtians, (as we preſume all Sacramental Graces ſhould be) nor, conſequently, any Part of that federal Bleſſing, which our Saviour has purchaſed for us. Marriage, we grant, is an honourable Eſtate, inſtituted by God in Paradiſe, and capable to ſignify the myſtical Union between Chriſt and his Church; yet, wanting an outward Sign, to which, by Chriſt's Promiſe, a Bleſſing is annexed, What are not Sacraments.

[a] Newcombe's Sermons. [b] Thus we read of the Sacrament of the Croſs, in St Auſtin; the Sacrament of Martyrdom, in St Jerom; the Sacrament of Virginity, in Leo; and the Sacrament of Prayer, of Weeping, of Faſting, in St Hilary; for, Signa, (ſays St Auſtin) cum ad res divinas adhibentur, Sacramenta vocantur, Lib. iii. c. 6. de Doct. Chriſt. [c] Dominus noſter leni jugo ſuo nos ſubdidit, & ſarcinæ levi; unde Sacramentis, numero pauciſſimis, obſervatione facillimis, ſignificatione præſtantiſſimis, ſocietatem novi populi colligavit, ſicut eſt Baptiſmus Trinitatis nomine conſecratus, Communicatio corporis & ſanguinis ipſius, & ſiquid aliud in Scripturis canonicis commendatur. Epiſt. ad Jan. 118. [d] Burnet, on the Articles.

and being not generally neceſſary to Salvation, (ſince thoſe, who affirm it to be a Sacrament, inhibit ſome Sort of Perſons the Uſe of it, and account ſuch as make Vows againſt it, more holy than other Chriſtians) it cannot come under the Denomination of a Sacrament. To be humble and contrite under the Senſe of our Offences; to make Confeſſion of them to God; in Caſe of Injury, to Men; and ſometimes, in Caſe of Doubt or Trouble of Conſcience, to a Miniſter likewiſe; and to have open and ſcandalous Offenders [e] rebuked before all, that others may fear the like Chaſtiſement, and reform, is what we own and practiſe, as neceſſary Parts of Chriſtian Diſcipline; but, ſince in all this there is no Sign eſtabliſhed by Chriſt, to which Divine Grace belongs, we dare not pronounce ſuch Penance ſacramental; nor can we believe, but that a contrite Sinner, who has made a proper Acknowledgment of his Sins, and, by the Aſſiſtance of Grace, reformed his Life, may receive an effectual Pardon from God, whatever becomes of the Doctrine of Auricular Confeſſion. [f] To call for the Elders of the Church, in Caſe any was ſick, and to let them pray over them, anointing them with Oil in the Name of the Lord, we acknowledge, was a Practice in the Days of the Apoſtles, and proper enough at that Time, when a miraculous Power of healing all Diſeaſes attended the Apoſtolick Function; but ſince this Anointing was not of Chriſt's Inſtitution, nor had any Relation to the Good of the Soul; ſince the Apoſtles made Uſe of it, not as a Sacramental Conveyance of any Benefit, but only as a Symbol, accompanying a miraculous Power peculiar to their Age; we have ſufficient Reaſon for rejecting Extreme Unction, and for accounting the Euchariſt (as the Ancients always accounted it) the only Viaticum of Chriſtians in their laſt Paſſage.

The two Sacraments.

THE two Ordinances then, wherein the Characters of a true and proper Sacrament meet, are Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper; the one, the Sacrament of Initiation, to receive us into Chriſt's Church, and entitle us to the Privileges of it; and the other, the Sacrament of Confirmation, to keep and preſerve us in it, and to convey to us the Benefits, to which we are entitled: And 'tis no ſmall Prejudice againſt enlarging the Number of them, [g] that, till the XIIth Century, they were never reckoned ſeven, nor till the XVth, was their Number eſtabliſhed by any Council; and it ſeems no improbable Conjecture, that the Thing, which gave Occaſion to the Innovation, was that myſtical Expreſſion of the [h] ſeven Spirits of God in the Revelation, from whence there aroſe a Conceit of the ſevenfold Operation of the Spirit, whereof to aſſert ſeven Sacraments might be fancied a good Illuſtration.

Their Original.

WHENCE the true Sacraments of the Chriſtian Religion had their Original, it will be no hard Matter to perceive, if we do but conſider, that, as our bleſſed Saviour was himſelf a Jew, and born under the Jewiſh Oeconomy, 'tis reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that he ſhould imitate the Uſages of his Countrymen, and adopt many of the Rites and Ceremonies into Chriſtianity, the more eaſily to induce them to embrace his Doctrine and Diſcipline. That the Jews never received any Perſon into their Covenant, as a Proſelyte, i. e. one, who had come over from Pagan Idolatry to their Religion, without a Baptiſm, [i] is manifeſt from the Teſtimony of ſuch, as are beſt converſant in their Writings: That Prieſts and Levites, entering upon their Office, were to be ſanctified by waſhing with Water, and new-born Children, and ſuch as had contracted any legal Defilement, were to be purified by the ſame Ceremony, [k] we ſee plainly preſcribed by their Law: And that it was uſual for Perſons, who were conſcious to themſelves of having tranſgreſſed God's Laws, upon the Invitation of any one commiſſioned by God to Repentance and Amendment of Life, to be waſhed by him, in Teſtimony of their ſtedfaſt Purpoſe ſo to do, and in Hopes of regaining the Favour of God, appears very probable from the Undertaking [l] of John the Baptiſt, which ſeems to have been no novel and uncommon Thing. This Practice then of Waſhing, in ſo many Caſes, and to ſo many Purpoſes, cuſtomary among God's People, [e] 1 Tim. v. 20. [f] James v. 14. [g] Peter Lombard, a Writer of that Age, is the firſt that reckons ſeven of them, and the Council of Trent was the firſt that confirmed that Number; for ſo their Decree is, [Seſſ. vii. Can. 1.] If any one ſhall ſay, that the Sacraments are more or fewer than ſeven, or that any one of theſe ſeven is not truly and properly a Sacrament, let him be Anathema. [h] Rev. i. 4. and iv. 5. [i] That the Gentiles, converted to Judaiſm, were baptized, after they were healed of their Wound in Circumciſion, is manifeſt from what the learned Buxtorf ſays in his Synagoge: From the Writings of Scaliger, (de Emend. Temporibus) Ludovicus Capellus, Thorndike, Lightfoot, and others, who were well ſkilled in the Hebrew Cuſtoms, it is evident, that the Jews uſed Baptiſm, or Waſhing, in initiating both the Native Jews, and the Heathen Proſelytes into their Congregation; and that the Chriſtian Baptiſm was borrowed from the like Uſage among the Jews, the learned Selden particularly proves, in his Treatiſe De Synedriis, Lib. I. c. 3. [k] Exod. xxix. 4. Numb. viii. 6. Lev. xv. 8, 16, 18, 27, &c. [l] John i. 25, 33.

People, [n] our bleſſed Saviour (who never favoured Innovations) was pleaſed to aſſume, and impoſe upon the Diſciples and Followers of this Religion: And, in like Manner, that the Sacrament of the Lord's-Supper had its Riſe from the Poſtcœnium, uſed by the Jews, in the Cloſe of their Paſſover, is evident from ſeveral chief Circumſtances, wherein they agree. For as, when the Paſchal Lamb was eaten, it was uſual for the Company to riſe and waſh their Feet, in order to ſit down to a freſh Collation, or ſecond Courſe; whereupon the Maſter of the Family takes unleavened Bread, and bleſſes it, and breaks it, and gives to every one a Piece; after which, he takes a Cup, and bleſſes it, and ſo drinks to one of the Company, that he may ſend it round; and in Concluſion all ſing ſome Pſalms, which they call the great Hallel: So, in the Inſtitution of the Euchariſt, we find our bleſſed Saviour, after eating the Paſchal Lamb, riſing from Supper, waſhing his Diſciples Feet, and then beginning a new Entertainment; breaking Bread, and diſtributing it; ſending the Cup of Wine round the Company, and in the Concluſion ſinging an Hymn: Which Actions ſo nearly reſemble the Cuſtoms of the Jews, that there is no Queſtion to be made, but that our Saviour borrowed this Ordinance likewiſe from them; only improving to ſpiritual Purpoſes, and exalting the Effects and Virtue of it, far above what it was in its Original.

The Reaſonableneſs of them.

Now one of the Purpoſes, for which Sacraments were inſtituted, [o] was to be outward and viſible Signs of our Entrance into Covenant with God, and of renewing that Covenant with him. For if Covenants between Man and Man be made with all the Formality of Witneſſes, of Hands and Seals, and Delivery in ſolemn and expreſs Words; if Men know themſelves too well to truſt one another without this Solemnity, it may well be expected, that, when God is pleaſed to permit them to enter into Covenant with himſelf, he ſhould not receive them under leſs Obligations of Caution and Security for their Integrity, than Men are wont to uſe among one another; ſince every Breach of Covenant with him is infinitely more affronting and ſinful, than any Breach of Covenant with Man can be. And as theſe outward Signs ſerve to raiſe our Attention, and fix our Minds, and to put us in Remembrance, that Heaven and Earth, Angels and Men are Witneſſes againſt us, if we prove treacherous and unfaithful in this Covenant; ſo they are as Tokens and Pledges to us of God's Love and Favour, and give us ſenſible and viſible Aſſurances of that Grace, which is inviſible and ſpiritual. 'Tis not a little in the Nature and Temper of Man, to be better pleaſed and contented with ſomething preſent and in Hand, though of ſmall Value, and inſignificant in itſelf, as a Token and Pledge of what is made over to him, than with the greateſt Promiſes and Proteſtations, without any Thing as Earneſt to confirm them. Now what is inward and inviſible is abſent as to Senſe, and what is future, ſtands in need of ſomething preſent, to repreſent it to us; and therefore God, who was pleaſed to bind himſelf by an Oath, that he might be wanting in nothing, which might help our Infirmities, and aſſiſt our Faith, has been pleaſed, for our farther Comfort and Truſt in him, to appoint viſible Signs and Pledges of that which is inviſible; and to give ſuch Aſſurance to our very Senſes, as they are capable of, that all the Promiſes of his ſpiritual Bleſſings ſhall as certainly be fulfilled to us, as the outward Signs and Pledges, which he hath appointed, are duly received by us.

Their Effects.

NOR are theſe Sacraments only Signs and Tokens of ſpiritual Bleſſings, which God will confer on us; but they are appointed as Means likewiſe and Inſtruments of Grace and Salvation to us, that, as the Body partakes in the moral Actions of Virtue or Vice, ſo it might concur in the religious Acts ordained for our Sanctification; that the Soul, even in this Caſe, where it is more immediately concerned, might not be wholly independent on the Body; but, ſince both muſt be happy or miſerable in the next World, both might be aſſiſtant in the Way and Means of Salvation in this. In a Word, that Sacraments are not mere Ceremonies, only to maintain Order and Unity in the Church of Chriſt, but Means inſtituted for the Conveyance of Grace and ſpiritual Benediction to well-diſpoſed Receivers, is evident from the Teſtimony of the Scriptures, which attribute ſuch Effects to them, as are the immediate Iſſues of the Graces, they are ſet to ſignify, [p] the Waſhing of Sin by Baptiſm, and [q] the Communion of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, by the Lord's Supper.

WE are not however to imagine, that the Sacraments work phyſically, or neceſſarily and infallibly confer Grace; 'tis in our own Diſpoſition, that their Efficacy lies; and [n] Acts xxii. 16.

[o] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs of Chriſtianity, Vol. II.
[p] 1 Cor. x. 16.
[q] Burnet, on the Articles.

and [r] to pretend that they operate any other Way, is, in effect, to introduce the Doctrine and Practice of Charms into the Chriſtian Religion, to diſſolve all Obligations to Piety and Devotion, to Holineſs of Life, and Purity of Temper, when the being in a paſſive, and perhaps inſenſible State, while the Sacraments are applied, is thought a Diſpoſition ſufficient to give them Virtue. 'Tis our Comfort and Conſolation indeed, that the Efficacy of theſe Ordinances depends not upon the Intention or Worthineſs of the Perſon, that adminiſters them; but then we are to remember, that neither does it depend upon the bare Application of them. They operate in a moral Way; are intended to raiſe and quicken our Affections, not ſupply our Defects; and therefore become the Means and Inſtruments of Grace only to the worthy Receiver; for the Baptiſm 'which ſaveth us, ſays St Peter, is the Anſwer of a good Conſcience towards God; and they, who communicate in the other Sacrament unworthily, ' ſays St Paul, not diſcerning the Lord's Body, purchaſe to themſelves Damnation.

Of BAPTISM.

The Inſtitution of Baptiſm.

HOW well ſoever the Jews might be accuſtomed to the Rite of Baptiſm, [u] yet the Inſtitution of it, as it is a federal Act of the Chriſtian Religion, muſt be taken from the Commiſſion, which our Saviour gave his Diſciples; * go ye and teach, or make Diſciples to me of all Nations, (for ſo the Original is to be rendered) baptiſing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; where he authoriſes his Diſciples to adminiſter this Sacrament, and conſequently obliges all Perſons to make uſe of it. This he repeats again; [x] go ye into all the World, and preach the Goſpel to every Creature; he that believeth, and is baptiſed, ſhall be ſaved; where he enjoins this Sacrament as a Condition of Salvation, and lets all Men know, that, unleſs they make open Profeſſion of the Chriſtian Faith, and join themſelves to the Church by this Ordinance, they exclude themſelves from Life and Happineſs: [y] Except a Man be born of Water, ſays he again, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God; where he makes the ordinary and appointed Way of entering into the Evangelical at leaſt, if not the Celeſtial State, to be Baptiſm, made effectual by the Spirit of Regeneration.

The Difference between John's Baptiſm and Chriſt's.

AND here, in our Way, we may perceive the Difference (though [z] ſome are unwilling to perceive any) between the Baptiſm of John, and that of our Saviour's Inſtitution. The Stipulation of John's Baptiſm was Repentance, but Chriſt's, the Belief of the whole Chriſtian Religion: In John's, a Profeſſion was made in the Belief of a Meſſias ſoon to appear; in Chriſt's, a Declaration, that Jeſus was the Meſſias: Thoſe [a] who were baptiſed unto John's Baptiſm, received no Effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt, nor any Inſtruction in the great Myſtery of Chriſtianity, the Doctrine of the Trinity; whereas thoſe, that were baptiſed into Chriſt's, were vouchſafed both. In a Word, the Baptiſm of John was preparative to that of Chriſt; a Dawning, as it were, and imperfect Beginning to the other; even as he, who adminiſtered it, was like the Morning-Star before the Sun of Righteouſneſs.

The Quakers Notion confuted.

UPON this Inſtitution and Commiſſion given by Chriſt, the Apoſtles, we find, went up and down preaching and baptiſing: And ſo far were they from conſidering Baptiſm only as a carnal Rite, or low Element, above which an higher Diſpenſation of the Spirit was to raiſe them; that, even when St Peter ſaw the Holy Ghoſt had deſcended upon Cornelius and his Friends, he nevertheleſs thought proper to baptiſe them: [b] Can any Man forbid Water, ſaith he, that theſe ſhould not be baptiſed, which have received the Holy Ghoſt, as well as we? Where he plainly teaches us, that the Baptiſm of Water is not to be excluded by the Baptiſm of the Spirit, for when this latter had fallen upon Cornelius and his Friends, why was the other to be ſuperadded, but that, in the Apoſtle's Eſteem, it was an Ordinance of ſacred Inſtitution, and [r] Sacraments are to be conſidered as the publick Acts of the Church: And though the Effect of them, as to him that receives them, depends upon his Temper, his Preparation and Application, yet it cannot be imagined, that the Virtue of thoſe federal Acts, to which Chriſtians are admitted in them, the Validity of them, or the Bleſſings that follow them, can depend on the ſecret State or Temper of him that officiates. Burnet, on the Articles. [s] 1 Pet. iii. 21. [t] 1 Cor. xi. 29. [u] Burnet, ibid. * Matth. xxviii. 19. [x] Mark xvi. 15, 16. [y] John iii. 5. [z] Calvin, and ſeveral others of his Sentiments. [a] Vid. Acts xix. 2, &c. [b] Ibid. x. 47.

and not to be ſuperſeded upon the Account of any Gifts or Illuminations whatever? [c] It muſt therefore be a ſad Perverſion of the Senſe of the Words, to ſay, becauſe the Baptiſt declares, [d] I indeed baptiſe you with Water unto Repentance, but he that cometh after me, ſhall baptiſe you with the Holy Ghoſt and with Fire, that therefore there is no need of Water-Baptiſm under the Goſpel, ſince the only Baptiſm of Chriſt's Inſtitution is that of the Spirit. The Words are no more than a plain Prediction of a miraculous Event, which was literally fulfilled on the Day of Pentecoſt, when the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Apoſtles in the Shape of fiery Tongues. To this Event they [e] are expreſsly applied; as indeed to apply them to any other would put us under ſome Difficulty to interpret what can be meant by baptiſing with Fire: And though they may give ſome Grounds for diſtinguiſhing between Spiritual and Water-Baptiſm, yet they afford none at all for ſeparating them. They teach us indeed, that, after Chriſt's coming, the Gifts and Graces of God's holy Spirit ſhould attend the Ordinance of Baptiſm; but that theſe Gifts ſhould vacate the Ordinance itſelf, of this they give us no Manner of Intimation; and the Man muſt be extremely partial to his own Opinion, who can read, [f] in the Book of the Acts, no leſs than fourteen or fifteen Times of the Adminiſtering of Baptiſm, and find it therein diſtinctly ſet down, who were the Perſons, in what Manner, and with what Matter, they were baptiſed; and yet continue his Perſuaſion, that external Baptiſm, thus founded on the Precepts of Chriſt, confirmed by the Example of the Apoſtles, and eſtabliſhed by the conſtant and univerſal Practice of the Church ever ſince, is no Evangelical Ordinance, nor of any Significancy under the ſpiritual Diſpenſation of the Goſpel.

BUT enough has been ſaid to ſhew this Sacrament to be a Divine Ordinance: The next Things we are to conſider are, 1. The Perſons, by whom: 2. The Perſons, to whom: And, 3. The Manner, in which it is to be adminiſtered: And ſo proceed, 4. To enquire into the Privileges and Benefits, which we receive thereby, and the Duties we promiſe to perform.

The Perſons by whom Baptiſm is to be adminiſtered.

THAT the eleven Apoſtles were the Perſons, to whom our bleſſed Saviour gave the original Commiſſion of Baptiſing, is plain from the Account we have of it in Scripture. [g] Then the eleven Diſciples went away into Galilee, unto the Mountain where Jeſus had appointed them: And Jeſus came, and ſpake unto them, ſaying, all Power is given unto me in Heaven and Earth; go ye therefore and teach all Nations, baptiſing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; teaching them to obſerve all Things, whatever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the End of the World. That the Apoſtles gave Commiſſion to Biſhops, Preſbyters, and Deacons, (for Philip, who was but a Deacon, [h] we read, baptiſed the Eunuch, and much more may we ſuppoſe it of the two ſuperior Orders) is evident from the Hiſtory, which records their Tranſactions: [i] That the Biſhops, as their immediate Succeſſors, were inveſted with the ſame Authority, and, in the following Ages of the Church, communicated the like Power of Baptiſing to Perſons admitted to the like Offices; and, in ſhort, that the Chriſtian Miniſtry was, all along from the Apoſtles Time, conveyed in Epiſcopal Hands only, we ſhall hereafter have an Occaſion to evince, both from the Conſent of all Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, and the conſtant and uninterrupted Practice of the univerſal Church of Chriſt, in all Ages and Places, for one thouſand five hundred Years together, from the Apoſtles Days. What we are chiefly concerned in at preſent is to know, "Whether any Perſons, but ſuch "as are Epiſcopally ordained, have a Right to adminiſter Baptiſm in the Chriſtian "Church; and, in caſe of any uſurped and unauthorized Adminiſtrations, whether "they are of any Efficacy to entitle the Receivers to the ſame Benefits, which re"gular Adminiſtrations do, or are not rather null in themſelves, and of no Signifi"cancy at all." Theſe are Queſtions, that, of late, have been revived and agitated with more Heat, than Perſpicuity; but to give them the beſt Reſolution that we can, we ſhall firſt produce the Strength of the Arguments on both Sides, and then conſider to which of them it is, that the Evidence of Truth ſeems moſt to incline.

[c] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [d] Matth. iii. 11. [e] Acts i. 5. [f] Vid. Acts ii. 14. viii. 12, 13, 16, 36, 38. xviii. 8. xix. 5. xxii. 16. and 1 Cor. i. 13, 14, 15, 16. [g] Matth xxviii. 16, 18, &c. [h] Acts viii. 38. [i] Laurence's Lay-Baptiſm invalid.

Arguments against Lay-Baptism, from Scripture and Reason.

I. THOSE, who deny the Validity of Lay-Baptism, make the Divine Authority of the Administrator (consisting, they say, in Episcopal Ordination) one of the essential Parts of the Sacrament itself, and no more to be omitted, than either the Matter, or Form of the Administration; because every essential Part of a Divine Institution is of equal Obligation and Necessity: And hereupon they argue—That since God, under the Mosaick Dispensation, made the Divine Authority of the Administrator an essential Part of his positive Institutions, so as not to accept the Performance of them from any Hands, but such, as were appointed to the Office, as is evident in the Case of Corah and his Company; since Christ himself, notwithstanding his many personal Excellencies and Perfections, would not leave his private Station of Life, wherein he continued above thirty Years, to take upon him so great an Office, until he received his Commission and Inauguration thereunto by the Hands of John the Baptist; since, in the very Words of the Institution of Baptism, our Lord commissioned none else, but his eleven Apostles, and their Successors and Substitutes, to baptise all Persons capable of Baptism, even unto the End of the World; since the very Form of Administration, in the Name of the Father, and by the Authority of the Trinity, requires, and supposes the Divine Authority of him, that administers; since the Benefits of Baptism are so great and supernatural, that none can be presumed capable of conveying them, but such as are authorized by him who appointed it; and, lastly, since, in Reality, it is Christ himself, who baptises us by the Ministry of those, whom he has delegated to that Office, which nevertheless he cannot be said to do, if he does by one, whom he never sent: Since all these Premisses are true, say they, and not to be denied without manifest Inconsistences and Contradictions, it must necessarily follow, that the Divine Authority of the Administrator of Baptism is an essential Part of that holy Institution, and constantly to be observed, wherever the Institution takes place; and from hence they infer, that whoever is destitute of such Authority, has no Right to administer about holy Things; and consequently, that all his Offices of this Kind are of no more Force or Validity, than if a bold pragmatical Person should pretend to administer the great Affairs of the Kingdom, without any Commission or Designation from his Prince. For[1] when every other Office of Trust and Power, whether in a civil or military Capacity, is conveyed unto Men by some Form of Admission, and solemn Investiture; it is scarce to be supposed, say they, that the great and weighty Offices of sending up the Prayers of the People, of blessing the Congregation, of administering the Word and Sacraments, absolving the Penitent, ejecting the Criminal, and of working together with God for the Salvation of Souls, should be left to the Direction of every one, that has Pride and Presumption enough to assume them.

From the Practice of the Primitive Church.

FROM the Sense of the Scriptures, they proceed to the Practice of the Primitive Church; and, to this Purpose, they produce the Apostolick Constitutions, (as they are called) ([m] "prohibiting all Laymen to perform any sacerdotal Office,) as the Sacri-" fice of the Eucharist, or Baptism, or Imposition of Hands, &c. For no Man taketh " this Honour to himself, but he that is called of God; which Call is, by the lay-" ing on of the Bishop's Hands; but he, that taketh it to himself without Com-" mission, shall sustain the Punishment of Uzzias." In extraordinary Cases of great Necessity, and where a publick Minister could not be procured, they deny not indeed, but that Laymen were sometimes permitted to baptise; but then they affirm, "that it was always done in Subordination to a legal Power, by Persons living in Communion with the Church, and having the Consent and Approbation of their Bishop for so doing; otherwise the Act was declared null and invalid, and the Party, on whom the unwarrantable Baptism passed, whenever he became a Convert to the Church, was certainly re-baptised. About the Middle of the third Century, there arose a Dispute in the Church, concerning the Validity of Baptism, administered by such

[1] Vid. Laurence's, Lay-Baptism invalid, and Brett's Sermons against Lay-Baptism. * 'Tis in the very Nature of a Commission, to be exclusive of all others, but those, to whom it is given; for 'tis well known, that when a Prince gives a Commission to any one of his Subjects for the Execution of some great Office, it is with a Design to appropriate that Office to that particular Subject, that none may act in it, but he, and those, whom he shall appoint. Laurence, ibid. [l] Cumber, on the Ordination-Office. [m] Vid. Const. Apost. Lib. ii. c. 27. Lib. iii. 16, &c. [n] "Thus the Council of Eliberis [Anno 305. Can. xxxviii.] declares, that any Christian, who is "neither penitent, (i. e. under Penance) nor a Bigamist, may baptise, in Case of Necessity, those who are on a Jour-"ney, being at a great Distance from the Church, upon Condition, that he present them to the Bishop, if they survive, to "be perfected by the Imposition of Hands." But here it is to be observed, that this Canon is plainly to be restrained to such, as were in Communion with, and lived in Subjection to their Bishops; and therefore, supposing this ancient Council had been a General one, (which certainly it was not) yet the Lay-Baptisers among us, who act in Opposition to Episcopacy, can receive no Authority from this Canon. Laurence, ibid.

ſuch as were then Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, wherein St Cyprian, with the reſt of the African, and not a few of the Eaſtern Biſhops, maintained, "That Catholick "Biſhops were obliged to condemn all ſuch Baptiſms, and to account them null "and void; conſequently, they were not immediately to confirm, but firſt to "baptiſe ſuch, whenever they came over to the Catholick, and only ſalutary "Communion." But allowing, that, in Caſes of Neceſſity, Laymen may be tolerated to baptiſe, and that the Baptiſm of Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, returning to the Communion of the Catholick Church, might be confirmed by the Impoſition of the Biſhop's Hands, becauſe theſe, even in the Time of their Defection, always acknowledged Epiſcopal Authority; yet when Perſons, ſay they, purely in Oppoſition to ſuch Authority, and in Countries abounding with regular Miniſters, where no Plea of Neceſſity can be urged, ſet themſelves up to adminiſter this ſacred Ordinance, that ſuch Adminiſtration is of no Effect, we have the Opinion of [o] St Baſil, Biſhop of Cæſarea, that thoſe, whom a Laick baptiſes, are to be re-baptiſed; the Teſtimony of [p] St Chryſoſtom, Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople, that Baptiſm can no more be adminiſtered by a Laick, than the Euchariſt; and the Canonical Injunction of one, who lived very near the Days of the Apoſtles, the glorious Martyr and Biſhop of Antioch, St Ignatius; [q] "Let the Sacrament, ſays he, be judged firm and effectual, which is "diſpenſed by the Biſhop, or him, to whom the Biſhop has committed it. It is "not lawful, without the Biſhop, to baptiſe, or celebrate the other Offices, but "what he approves, according to the good Pleaſure of God, that is firm and ſafe."

The Practice and Doctrine of our own.

FROM the Cuſtoms and Opinions of the ancient Church, they paſs to the Doctrine and Practice of our own; and hereupon they argue —— That ſince, in her 23d Article of Religion, ſhe affirms, That it is not lawful (whereby ſhe means ſinful, and contrary to the very Inſtitution of Sacraments) for any Man to take upon him the Office of adminiſtering them, before he be lawfully called and ſent to execute the ſame; ſince, in the Preface of her Form and Manner of Making, Ordaining, and Conſecrating of Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons, ſhe manifeſtly confines this lawful Calling and Sending to Epiſcopal Ordination; ſince, in her 26th Article, when ſhe teaches, That the Miniſter, diſpenſing the Sacraments, does it in Chriſt's Name, and by his Commiſſion and Authority, ſhe plainly calls this Epiſcopal Ordination Chriſt's Commiſſion and Authority; ſince ſhe will not admit any Diſſenting Teachers, deſirous to join in her Communion, into the Number of her lawful Miniſters, until they be divinely authoriſed by the Impoſition of Epiſcopal Hands, thereby ſignifying her Senſe of the Invalidity of their former Miniſtrations; ſince, laſtly, ſhe requires every one (without any Exception for Caſes of Neceſſity) to be baptiſed by [r] a lawful Miniſter, and has provided no Office of Confirmation for thoſe, who have received Baptiſm from Lay-Baptiſers; but, on the contrary, [s] a very proper one, for their Admiſſion into her Communion, viz. the Miniſtration of Baptiſm to ſuch as are of riper Years, and able to anſwer for themſelves: Since theſe, they ſay, are the Doctrines and Declarations of our Church, the Divine Authority of the Adminiſtrator of Chriſtian Sacraments is, in her Opinion, an eſſential Part of their Inſtitution, and thoſe that pretend to diſpenſe them, wanting ſuch Authority, are both unqualified for the Office themſelves, and unable to confer upon others thoſe great and ſupernatural Bleſſings, which God has annexed to the regular Performance of it. For if the Effect be ſpiritual, (as our learned [t] Taylor expreſſes it) the Agent muſt be ſo too.

The Conſequences of each Opinion.

FROM the Doctrine and Practice of our Church, they come at laſt to enquire into the Conſequences of each Opinion; and hereupon they obſerve —— That to allow the Validity of Lay-Baptiſm, is, in Effect, to deſtroy the whole Miniſtry of the Chriſtian Prieſthood, and to open a Door of Licentiouſneſs to all Intruders into that ſacred Office. For, if the Baptiſms of the Laity be thought valid, then may their Adminiſtration of the Lord's Supper, and much more their Teaching, and Preaching to ſuch Congregations, as they can gather to themſelves, be thought ſo too; and if this be the Conſequence, then farewel all Rule, Order, and Authority in the Chriſtian Church; the Diſtinction of Perſons is at an End; and Chriſt's ſetting therein ſome

[o] Epiſt. 1. ad Amphiloch. c. 1. [p] De Sacerdot. Lib. iii. [q] Epiſt. ad Smyrn. [r] Vid. Rubricks in the Miniſtration of private Baptiſm. [s] Hicks's Letter to Mr Laurence. The Occaſion of making this Office, in the Preface before the Common Prayer, is declared to be the Growth of Anabaptiſm; but there are many other Caſes, in which it is equally uſeful, and ought to be applied, as in the Caſe of thoſe adult Perſons, who had the Misfortune to be baptiſed, but not in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; or, if in their Names, yet not in their Names as a real, but nominal Trinity, as I ſuppoſe the Bedelliſts, who were a numerous Sect at the Reſtoration in ſome Parts of this Kingdom, did; and the Socinians now do. Ibid. [t] Ductor Dubitantium.

ſome Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Evangeliſts, ſome Paſtors and Teachers, for the Work of the Miniſtry, and the perfecting of the Saints, is become a fruitleſs Deſign. 'Tis in vain to preach to ſuch, as diſſent from our Communion, the Danger of Schiſm, or cauſeleſs Separation, when, by allowing the Validity of their uncommiſſioned Teachers Miniſtrations, we give them an Argument to confound all that we can ſay for their Conviction: Nay, it will be in vain to ſay, that ſuch Lay-Adminiſtrations muſt be confirmed by the Biſhop, before they can be valid Sacraments. For if it be demanded, by what Authority the Biſhop requires ſuch Adminiſtrations to be confirmed, and he cannot produce ſufficient Teſtimonials from the Scripture to this Purpoſe, (as 'tis much to be feared he cannot) his pretending to the Thing will be a Jeſt, and the Separatiſts conclude themſelves as much in the Church, as the Biſhop himſelf, while they adminiſter, and receive as good Sacraments as he, and he cannot prove their Lay-Adminiſtrations neceſſary to be confirmed or rectified by the Impoſition of his Hands. But now, on the contrary, to maintain, "That, in the Sa-"craments of the Chriſtian Church, the Divine Authority of the Adminiſtrator is "an eſſential Part; that the Prieſt is as much the Repreſentative of God the Giver, "as the outward Elements are of the Graces given; and that conſequently, theſe "latter are no Chriſtian Sacraments, when ſeparate from God's authorized Repre-"ſentative, the Prieſt:" This is the moſt probable Way to make Men tender of the Unity of the Church, and cautious how they ſeparate from her; when, how far ſoever a vain Curioſity may prompt them to follow Lay-Teachers, the Conſideration of their being deſtitute of Chriſtian Sacraments will be a powerful Means to deter them from withdrawing from the Communion of the Chriſtian Prieſthood.

Arguments for Lay-Baptiſm from Scripture.

THOSE, on the other Hand, who maintain the Validity of Lay-Baptiſm, place all the Weight of their Argument, not on the Quality of the Adminiſtrator, but on the Matter and Form of the Adminiſtration: They ſuppoſe, that if the Party be baptiſed with Water, and in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, it deſtroys not the Efficacy of the Sacrament, though the Perſon officiating be a mere Lay-Man; and, for the Proof of this, they ſuppoſe a ſtrict Analogy between Chriſtian Baptiſm and Jewiſh Circumciſion, and thereupon they argue —— That, ſince the original Commiſſion, given the Jews to circumciſe, did not excuſe the Laity from the Right of Circumciſing, or appropriate it to any diſtinct Order of Men; ſince Chriſt, in the Words of the Inſtitution, does not, in expreſs Terms, confine Baptiſm to the Adminiſtration of his Apoſtles and their Succeſſors, ſo as that none can diſpenſe true Baptiſm, but they, and ſuch only, as they ſhall authorize; ſince the Divine Authority of diſpenſing Orders, and, together with them, a Power of adminiſtering Sacraments, is ſtill in Diſpute, whether it be veſted in the Epiſcopate only, or not equally in the Preſbytery, which makes the Foundation of Baptiſm precarious; ſince the Neceſſity of Baptiſm is ſo great, that there is no obtaining Salvation without it, and any Expedient may be made uſe of, rather than ſuffer a Perſon to go unbaptized; ſince God deſires Mercy rather than Sacrifice, and will not permit a Defect in ſome ſmall Circumſtance to cancel an Action, when the great Eſſentials of his Inſtitutions are obſerved; ſince what ought not to be done, may be valid, when done, and every Uſurpation in the Adminiſtrator may not deſtroy the Effect of his Adminiſtrations, [u] as is evident in the Caſe of Caiaphas, the ſacrilegious and uſurping High-Prieſt, * whoſe Authority our Saviour nevertheleſs owned, and whoſe Oblations the People nevertheleſs relied on: Since theſe Things are ſo, ſay they, we ſee no Reaſon, why the Character of the Perſon officiating ſhould be eſſential to this Sacrament, or why the Baptiſms of our Anti-Epiſcopal Diſſenters, and of ſome foreign Churches, who are deſtitute of Epiſcopal Ordination, ſhould not be eſteemed good and valid; for, are not all Chriſtians, in the Apoſtle's Opinion, [x] an holy Prieſthood, to offer up ſpiritual Sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jeſus Chriſt? And may not our Saviour's Words concerning the Man, who caſt out Devils in his Name, and yet did not follow him, in ſome Meaſure, be applicable in this Caſe, [y] forbid him not; for he that is not againſt us, is for us.

The Practice of the Primitive Church.

FROM the Senſe of the Scripture, they proceed to the Practice of the Primitive Church; and herein, though they grant, that, in ordinary Caſes, Laymen were always debarred from meddling with the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm, [z] yet, that in Caſes of extraordinary Exigence, and where no publick Miniſter could be procured, they were [t] Eph. iv. 11, 12. [u] Burnet, on the Articles. * John xviii. 22, 23. [x] 1 Pet. ii. 9.

[y] Luke ix. 50. [z] Bingham's Hiſtory of Lay-Baptiſm.

were permitted to do it, is evident, ſay they, from the Teſtimony of Tertullian [a], St Jerom, St Auſtin [b], and ſeveral other ancient Fathers; the Determination of the Council of Eliberis in the Weſt, and of the Church of Alexandria in the Eaſt; all agreeing [d] in this Poſition, "That, in Time of Neceſſity, when a Biſhop, a Preſ-"byter, or other Miniſter could not be found, and a Man deſired Baptiſm, who "was in Danger of Death, in that Caſe, Laymen were uſed to give them that Sa-"crament, which they themſelves had received, rather than that he ſhould die "without it." The Baptiſms of ſuch Hereticks, as denied the Doctrine of the Trinity, (wherein the very Form of the Ordinance conſiſted) they own indeed, were accounted null; but whoſoever preſerved the Form entire, and baptiſed into the Faith of this holy Myſtery, their Baptiſms were always accounted valid, even tho' they ſeparated from the Communion of the Church, and held Principles of a dangerous Nature in other Reſpects. Nay, [e] even jocular and ludicrous Baptiſms, when adminiſtered in their proper Form, though unauthorized and irregular in the Adminiſtrator, were accounted effectual to the Perſons baptiſed, and accordingly ratified by Epiſcopal Hands; if the Credit of ſome very ancient Hiſtorians may be relied on. "For 'tis the Name of the Trinity, [f] ſays Optatus, and not the Work of the Agent, "that ſanctifies the Myſtery, and Miniſters of Baptiſm are Labourers only, not "Lords of the Action."

FROM the Practice of the Primitive Church, they proceed to that of our own; and here they alledge, that in the old Liturgy, in the Time of King Edward, and Queen Elizabeth, the Rubrick of primitive Baptiſm running in theſe Words, "Firſt "let them, that be preſent, call upon God for his Grace, and ſay the Lord's "Prayer, if the Time will ſuffer: And then one of them ſhall name the Child, "and dip him into the Water, or pour Water upon him, ſaying theſe Words, I "baptiſe thee in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt;" that the Rubrick, I ſay, running in ſuch general Terms, gave Toleration to Laymen to baptiſe Children privately, without a publick Miniſter: And though, after the Conference at Hampton-Court, this Office was reſtrained to the Miniſter of the Pariſh, or ſome other lawful Miniſter, to preſerve better Order and Regularity; yet, that Baptiſm, even when adminiſtered by illegal and unauthorized Perſons, ſuch as diſſent from our Communion, and ſet themſelves up in Oppoſition to Epiſcopacy, is not abſolutely null and void, and as ſuch to be repeated by a lawful Miniſter, in order to obtain Salvation, is evident from the Practice of our Church, which not only holds Communion with Churches abroad, deſtitute of Epiſcopal Ordination, but even receives ſchiſmatical Converts (on whom the true Form of Baptiſm has paſt, notwithſtanding the Default of the Adminiſtrator) into her Boſom, without any Thoughts of Rebaptization: For, "though the Defect of the Baptiſer, [g] ſays our "learned Hooker, may make the Sacrament without Fruit, as well, in ſome Caſes, "to him that receiveth, as to him that giveth it; yet no Diſability of either Part "can ſo far make it fruſtrate and without Effect, as to deprive it of the very "Nature of true Baptiſm, having all Things elſe, which the Ordinance of Chriſt "requireth."

The Practice of our own.

AND indeed, if the Being and Efficacy of a Sacrament depended upon Man, ſo that none, but a Prieſt, every Way qualified without Exception, might be allowed to baptiſe, [h] how dreadful would the Conſequence be? How many foreign reformed Churches, which have no Epiſcopal Ordination, would be effectually unchurched, as

The Conſequences of the contrary Opinion.

[a] De Bapt. c. 17. [b] Cont. Lucif. 4. [c] Apud Gratian. de Conſecrat. Diſt. 4. c. 2. [d] Can. 38. [e] Whilſt Alexander, Biſhop of Alexandria, on a certain Day, being the Feſtival of Peter the Martyr, after the ſolemn Service of the Church was over, was entertaining himſelf with a Proſpect towards the Sea, he chanced to eſpy a Company of Boys at Play, whereof Athanaſius acted the Biſhop, others Prieſts, and ſo proceeded to baptize ſeveral Children, who repreſented Catechumens and Competents in Form. Alexander, obſerving them for ſome Time, ſent at laſt for the Boys to be brought before him, and underſtanding, from their own Relation, that this ludicrous Baptiſm of theirs was performed according to the Rites and Orders of the Church, was of Opinion, with other Biſhops preſent with him, that the Children, ſo chriſtened, were not to be re-baptiſed; whereupon he confirmed them with Chriſm, and Impoſition of Hands. This Story is related by Socrates, [Lib. i. c. 15. Sozomen, [Lib. ii. c. 17.] and Ruffinus, [Lib. i. c. 14.] who ſays, he had it from the Mouth of thoſe, who converſed with Athanaſius himſelf: Of later Years, it is confirmed by Whitgift, Abbot, Cotelerius, Page, and many other learned Men, that might be named; though Dr Cave, in his Hiſtoria Literaria, Du Pin, in his Notes on Athanaſius, in his Nouvelle Bibliotheque, and the learned Benedictin, in the Life printed before Athanaſius's Works, in ſome Mens Opinion, are thought to have exploded it. Vid. Bingham's Hiſtory, and Hickes's Letter to Mr. Laurence. [f] His Words are theſe: Non dixit (nempe Jeſus) Apoſtolis, vos facite, alii non faciant. Quiſquis in Nomine Patris, Filii, & Spiritus Sancti baptizaverit, Apoſtolorum munus implevit. —— Ergo Nomen eſt quod ſanctificat, non Opus, &c. Cont. Parmen. Lib. v. [g] Eccleſ. Polit. Lib. v. [h] Abbot, Prælect. 2. de Bapt.

being deſtitute of a Chriſtian Miniſtry, and conſequently, of Chriſtian Baptiſm? How great a Part of faithful and pious Chriſtians would, in this Caſe, want the Seal of their Chriſtianity? Or, who could be certain, that himſelf was baptiſed, in every Reſpect, as he ought to be? One, who was never ordained, may take upon him the Perſon of a Prieſt; one, who was never baptiſed, may be admitted to holy Orders: Or, if he was baptiſed and ordained, he may be conſecrated by a Biſhop, that was no lawful Biſhop, nor had any Authority to give the Power of Impoſition of Hands to others: In all which Caſes, how great muſt the Doubt and Perplexity be, which will attend the Generality of Chriſtians, if the Being and Efficacy of this Sacrament depend upon the Perſon that adminiſters it: And therefore to conclude with an Illuſtration of this Matter, taken from the Example of Preaching; "He that "ſpeaketh the Words of the Scripture, (ſays [l] a learned Divine of our Church) and "expoundeth them, may be ſaid to preach, though he be not thereunto called; "which likewiſe holds good in the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments. For, as the "Word of God is the Word of God, by whomſoever it is preached, Miniſter, or "no Miniſter; ſo the Sacrament of Baptiſm is true Baptiſm, by whomſoever it be "celebrated; the Uſurper of the Office hath to anſwer for his Intruſion, but the "Sacrament is not thereby defiled."

The Determination of the whole.

IF this may be thought a good Deciſion of the Controverſy, (as indeed in ſuch a Silence of Scripture, and Contrariety of Opinions on both Sides, it will be no eaſy Matter to find out a better) then will the Reſult be, that, though every one, who uſurps the Office of Baptiſing, which belongs not to him, is a great Tranſgreſſor in the Sight of God, and all his Acts are vain, as to what concerns himſelf; (for they ſhall never be accounted to him as an acceptable Service, worthy of a Reward, but rather expoſe him to Divine Wrath and Puniſhment) yet are they not therefore utterly null and void, in Reſpect of the Receiver alſo; he ſhall not be ſo far a Sufferer as to become no Chriſtian by Reaſon of the other's Default; though it will be thought no Breach of Charity, I hope, to place him in the ſame Rank and Capacity with thoſe ancient Schiſmaticks and Hereticks, [k] whoſe Baptiſm, if done in due Form, intitled them to ſome Privileges, but not all, that might have been expected from it in the Church; made them Members indeed of Chriſt's viſible Body, but did not convey to them internal and inviſible Grace, particularly, [l] the Grace of Unity, and Charity, which compleats all other Graces, and which Men of their Diſpoſitions were not ſuppoſed qualified to give, nor they, who deſired Baptiſm at their Hands, qualified to receive, till they returned, with Repentance, to the Boſom of the Church, and had the Defect of their Baptiſm ſupplied by (the only Method made Uſe of in the Primitive Church) the Impoſition of the Biſhop's Hands.

The Perſons to whom Baptiſm is to be adminiſtered.

[m] AT the firſt Preaching of the Goſpel, the main Body of Chriſtians conſiſted of thoſe, who had, by the Apoſtles Preaching, been converted from the Jewiſh, or from the Gentile Religion, to the Chriſtian; and theſe were conſequently baptiſed into the Name of Chriſt, after they were come to riper Years; but afterwards, when the Chriſtian Religion had ſpread itſelf over whole Countries and Nations, the Church conſiſted chiefly of ſuch, as were born of Chriſtian Parents, and educated, from the Beginning, in the Chriſtian Religion, and theſe were generally, even in the Primitive Times, admitted into the Church by Baptiſm in their Infancy: But becauſe the Baptiſing of Infants, which our Church defends, has been a Diſpute of ſome Continuance, and, of late eſpecially, on both Sides, managed with a great deal of Art and Dexterity; it may not be improper, firſt, to ſtate the Arguments, which oppoſe this Practice, in a fair Light, and then, endeavour to give them a ſatisfactory Solution.

Arguments againſt Infant-Baptiſm.

THOSE, who reject the Baptiſm of Infants, are earneſt to maintain, "That "there is no ſuch Analogy between Circumciſion in the Jewiſh, and Baptiſm in the "Chriſtian Church, as to draw a Parallel between them; [n] and that the Cuſtom of "baptiſing Proſelytes, and, together with them, their Wives and Children, into "the Communion of the Jews, has no Manner of Relation to us, nor ſhould be "any Rule for our Procedure. The only Direction of our Behaviour in this Particular, ſay they, is the Inſtitution of Chriſt, but in it we find no Mention made of "little Children, nor in any other Portion of Scripture; on the contrary, all thoſe "Paſſages, wherein Baptiſm is commanded, do immediately relate to adult Perſons, "ſince

[l] Whitgift's Defence of the Anſwer to the Admonit. Tract. 9.
[l] Bingham, ibid.
[m] Clarke's Practical Eſſays.
[n] Vid. Gale's Reflections on Wall's Hiſtory of Infant-Baptiſm, and Stennett's Anſwer to Ruſſen, paſſim.
[k] Bingham's Hiſtory of Lay-Baptiſm.

" ſince they only can be ſuppoſed capable of that Repentance, and Faith, and In- " ſtruction, which are the neceſſary Qualifications for the Reception of this Ordi" nance. Inſtances of Baptiſms, indeed, there are ſeveral in the Hiſtory of the " Apoſtles, but no one can be produced, from whence it may clearly be gathered,
" that Infants were the Subject of that Sacrament; and if we deſcend to the Senſe
" and Practice of the ancient Church, tho' it could be proved, that the Doctrine of " Pædo-baptiſm was univerſally maintained, yet even would not that be of Autho" rity enough to bear down the plain Inſtitution of Chriſt: Whereas, on the con" trary, it is manifeſt, that this Doctrine is ſo far from pretending to Antiquity, that,
" in the earlieſt Times, there are ſeveral Authors who make no Mention of it, ſome
" that utterly reject it; nor was it ever aſſerted by any Council, till that of Carthage, " which was almoſt 400 Years after Chriſt. It is no hard Matter then to conceive,
" how the Practice of Pædo-baptiſm came to be introduced, when once the Doctrine " of the abſolute Neceſſity of Baptiſm, in general, began to prevail: For if none but " the Baptized were to be ſaved, 'tis no Wonder, that Parents, led by the Tender-
" neſs of their Affections, were willing, upon very ſlender Grounds, to be perſuaded " to a Practice, which might put them out of Pain, in a Matter ſo near to them,
" as the Salvation of their Childrens Souls."

THIS is the Subſtance of what the Antipædo-baptiſts have to ſay; and (to give them a proper Anſwer) it is to be conſidered, [n] that tho' Baptiſm and Circumciſion do not, in every Particular, come up to a Parallel, yet there are two Things, wherein they manifeſtly agree; the one is, that both were the Rites of Admiſſion into their reſpective Covenants, and to the Bleſſings and Privileges, which aroſe out of them; and the other is, that in them both there was an Obligation laid on the Perſons [o] to the Obſervance of that whole Law, to which they were ſo initiated. Parents had (by the Jewiſh Conſtitution) an Authority given them to include their Children under this Obligation; ſo that the Will of the Child was ſo far put in the Power of the Parents, that they could bring them under federal Obligations, and thereby procure to them a Share in federal Bleſſings: And hence, very probably, it was, that, when the Jews made Proſelytes, they conſidered them as having the like Authority over their Children, and therefore, upon their Requeſt, firſt circumciſed, and then baptized them, though they were but Infants.

Fully anſwered.

[p] THAT it was a Cuſtom of the Jews, before our Saviour's Time, (and as they themſelves affirm, from the Beginning of the Law) to baptize, as well as circumciſe any Proſelyte, that came over to them from other Nations; and in caſe ſuch a Perſon had any Infant-children then born to him, that they, at their Father's Deſire, were, in like Manner, circumciſed, and baptized, and admitted as Proſelytes, [q] is manifeſt from the inconteſtable Evidence of their Writers. The Incapacity of the Child, to declare or promiſe for himſelf, was not looked on as a Bar againſt his Reception into the Covenant, but the Deſire of his Father to dedicate him to the True God was accounted available, and ſufficient to juſtify his Admiſſion: And the Reaſon they give is, becauſe the Things, they were admitted to, were undoubtedly for their Good; for, one may privilege a Perſon, ſay they, though he be incapable of knowing it, but one ought not to diſprivilege any one, without his Knowledge and Conſent.

Proſelytes baptized in the Jewiſh Church;

NOW this gives great Light for the better underſtanding the Meaning of our Saviour, when he bids his Apoſtles, Go, and teach all Nations, baptizing them: For when a Commiſſion is given in ſuch ſhort Words, and there is no expreſs Direction, what they ſhall do with the Infants of thoſe, who become Proſelytes; the natural and obvious Interpretation is, that they muſt do, in that Matter, as they, and the Church, in which they lived, always uſed to do. [r] Since therefore our bleſſed Saviour took Baptiſm, and appointed it to be the federal Admiſſion to his Religion, as Circumciſion had been in the Moſaick Diſpenſation; it is reaſonable to believe, that, except where himſelf declared a Change, in all other Reſpects, it was to go on, and continue continue as before. [t] Had Infants, indeed, never had the Seal of the Covenant applied to them, it had been, not only expedient, but neceſſary, that our Saviour ſhould have particularly named them, and thereby declared his Intentions of enlarging his Mercy and Loving-kindneſs towards them; but Infants being ever included in it, and the Seal of the Promiſe being always applied to them, there could be no Reaſon for giving them a new Title to what they were inſtated in before. On the contrary, had it been Chriſt's Deſign, that Children ſhould no longer be received into the Church, he ſhould, by an expreſs Order, have excluded them; for they having a former Grant of being admitted into Covenant, and being in actual Poſſeſſion of the Sign and Seal of it, there was a Neceſſity of an expreſs and direct Command to deprive them of it; and our Saviour muſt have declared, "That whereas "Children were formerly received into the Covenant by Circumciſion, he now or-"dered the contrary, and would have none admitted into the Church by Baptiſm, "but grown Perſons, capable of underſtanding the Nature and End of it." But ſince we meet with no Declaration of this Kind, and know, that it would have been inconſiſtent with the Mercy of the Goſpel, which was not to ſtraiten, but widen the Gates of the Church, and make it more capacious to receive People of all Nations, Sexes, and Ages, we may ſafely conclude, that if Infants were admitted by the Old Diſpenſation, they are not to be excluded by the New.

Which illuſtrates the Words of the Inſtitution.

[n] Burnet, on the Articles. [o] Gal. v. 3. [p] Wall's Hiſtory of Infant-Baptiſm. [q] I ſhall here add ſome Authorities to what were mentioned before. In all Ages, when an Ethnic is willing to enter into the Covenant, and gather himſelf under the Wings of the Majeſty of God, and take upon him the Yoke of the Law, he muſt be circumciſed, and baptized, and bring a Sacrifice; or, if it be a Woman, be baptized, and bring a Sacrifice. Maimonides Iſuri Bia, c. xiii. When a Proſelyte is received, he muſt be circumciſed, and then, when he is cured, (of the Wound of Circumciſion) they baptize him in the Preſence of two wiſe Men, ſaying, Behold, he is an Iſraelite in all Things. Talmud. Babyl. Maſs. Jevamoth, Fol. 47. If, with a Proſelyte, his Sons and his Daughters be made Proſelytes, that which is done by the Father redounded to their Good. Gemara Babyl. Chetuboth, c. i. fol. 11. If any one is deſirous of more Authorities of this Nature, he will find Plenty, in Ainſworth, on Gen. xvii. and Hammond, on Matth. iii. xix. xxiii. John iii. In Selden, de Jure Nat. & Gent. Lightfoot Hor. Hæbr. and in the learned Author of the Diſcourſe concerning Lent. Pt. II. c. ii. [r] Burnet, on the Articles.

Childrens Right to the Covenant.

THAT, in the Church of the Jews, [u] Infants were a Part of thoſe, who entered into Covenant with God, is evident from that memorable Paſſage in Deuteronomy, where Moſes tells the Iſraelites, [u] Ye ſtand this Day, all of you, before the Lord your God, your little Ones, and your Wives, and the Stranger that is in thy Camp, that thou ſhouldſt enter into Covenant with the Lord thy God, and into his Oath, which the Lord thy God maketh with thee: And that, in the Chriſtian Church, Children, in like Manner, are under the Covenant of Grace, is more than intimated in St Peter's Exhortation to ſuch Perſons, as he had converted, that they would receive Baptiſm, in order to make their Children likewiſe capable of it; becauſe * the Promiſe was made to them, and to their Children, i. e. the Promiſe of Remiſſion of Sins, and of receiving the Holy Ghoſt, (mentioned immediately before) which appertained to the Covenant, belonged both to them and their Children. Now, [x] if the Promiſe and Covenant belonged to theſe latter, then is there no Queſtion to be made, but that Baptiſm, which is the Seal of the Covenant, and the viſible Confirmation of the Promiſe, belongs to them likewiſe: And, if Infants have a covenanted Right to Baptiſm, we may ſafely infer, that Chriſt never intended to debar them of it; and, conſequently, though they are not expreſſly named, yet they are certainly implied, in the Commiſſion of Baptizing all Nations. For, [y] ſince the Univerſal includes all Particulars, and Children make up a very conſiderable Part of all Nations, the Words of the Commiſſion may reaſonably be ſuppoſed to comprize them; nor can we forbear concluding, when we read [z] of whole Families baptized, but that there muſt, of Courſe, be ſeveral Children among them, eſpecially when it is conſidered farther, that Children are no improper Objects of Baptiſm.

They are capable of the Ends of Baptiſm.

THEY cannot, indeed, underſtand the Nature and End of that Inſtitution; but neither were the Jewiſh Children, at eight Days old, able to know what the Purpoſe of Circumciſion was. They have no actual Faith of their own, but the Faith of thoſe, who preſent them in the Congregation, is imputed, and themſelves are ſanctified by being born of believing Parents. They have no Manner of room for Repentance, but then they have Innocence, which is a much better Qualification; and tho' they cannot ſtipulate for themſelves, yet have they Proxies and Sureties (of early Inſtitution, [a] both in the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Church) to contract in their Names, whoſe Act is looked upon, and accepted by God, as theirs. In the mean Time, that Infants, and young Children (tho' inſenſible of what is done for them) may have Favours conveyed to them, and are capable of receiving ſpiritual Advantage to their Souls, is plain from that Paſſage in the Evangelical Hiſtory, where, when [b] young Children were brought to Chriſt, he took them up in his Arms, laid his Hands on them, and bleſſed them; them; namely, [c] by praying for a Bleſſing, by pronouncing a Bleſſing, and by actually conferring a Bleſſing on them; and if they are capable of being bleſſed, why ſhould they be thought incapable of being baptiſed; ſince Baptiſm, in the main, is but a ſolemn Benediction, as it inſtates us in the Privileges and Benefits of the Goſpel, ſuch as Adoption and Grace, the Pardon of our Sins, and the Acceptance of our Perſons?

[t] Holt's Expoſition of the Church-Catechiſm. [u] Hopkins's Doctrine of the two Sacraments. [u] Deut. xxix. 10, &c. * Acts ii. 39. [x] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [y] Hole, ibid. [z] The Word בית, which, in this Senſe, is rendered Houſhold, without Doubt, is of a very large Signification, and takes in every individual Perſon of the Family, Women as well as Men, Children as well as grown Perſons; and therefore we have Reaſon to believe, that when this Word is uſed, Perſons, not only of both Sexes, but of different Ages, are contained in it, and are to be underſtood by it. Edwards, ibid. [a] Wall's Infant-Baptiſm, Introduction, Sect. 34. and P. I. c. 4. P. II. c. 9. [b] Luke xviii. 15.

3

IN ſhort [d], the Covenant of Grace is a Deed of Gift, made to us by Chriſt, wherein he promiſes to beſtow upon us eternal Life and Happineſs: And, as it would be abſurd to ſay, that a Child's Name ought not to be put into any Deed or Legacy, until he came of Age to underſtand it; ſo it is equally abſurd, and far more injurious, to exclude our Children from the heavenly Legacy, which Chriſt, out of the Riches of his Goodneſs, hath bequeathed to them; eſpecially conſidering, [e] that the Primitive Church did all along, and [f] every National Church, at this Day, in the World does admit their Children into the Chriſtian Covenant by this Ordinance; that [g] many of the moſt ancient Writers plead the Neceſſity of it, in order to the Expiation of Original Guilt, and [h] ſpeak of it as a great Sin in Parents, or others, that have Opportunity, to ſuffer any Child under their Care, or any other Perſon, to die unbaptiſed. [i] 'Tis plain, from what we read, that theſe Writers had conſidered the Reaſons, which the Antipædo-baptiſts now alledge as Objections againſt baptiſing Infants, that they have no Senſe, no Faith, no actual Sin, &c. and yet they did not account them of Validity enough, to with-hold their Children from this ſalutary Inſtitution; and though, for the more orderly Adminiſtration of this Sacrament, it was enacted, that none ſhould be baptiſed, but at certain Times of the Year; [k] yet they always excepted Infants, and ſick Perſons, and for this Reaſon [l] many of them allowed Laymen to baptiſe, in Caſe of Neceſſity.

The Practice of the Primitive Church.

NAY, ſo univerſal was the Practice of Infant-Baptiſm, that for the firſt four hundred Years after Chriſt, (as [m] a very good Judge has drawn up the Account) there appears but one Man, namely Tertullian, who ſeems to diſcountenance it; and that, not upon Account of its being any Way unlawful, [n] but merely becauſe he thought it more expedient to have it deferred, till Children had attained to ſome Meaſure of Knowledge. Hereby, however, he confirms us in the Opinion, that this Kind of Baptiſm was the received Practice of the Church; (becauſe we find him arguing againſt it, and pretending to give Reaſons for its Delay) and, conſequently, that there is a great deal of Truth in what St Auſtin [o] tells us, viz. that he never heard, nor read of any Chriſtian, Catholick, or Sectary, but what always held that Infants are baptiſed for the Forgiveneſs of Sins; and therefore we need leſs wonder, that we find ſo little Mention of it in ſeveral ancient Books, and ſo little Notice taken of it in the Decrees of Councils, when the Thing was ſo practiſed, and allowed on all Hands, that there was [p] never any Controverſy ſtarted about it, but what has ſprung up within theſe few Years.

Infant-Baptiſm univerſal.

IT is a wrong Suggeſtion then to ſay, that the Opinion of the abſolute Neceſſity of Baptiſm (which never prevailed till after the Pelagian Hereſy [q] aroſe) gave Occaſion to the Practice of baptiſing Infants, which, from the Beginning, was never intermitted in the Chriſtian Church; but, that it was the Tenderneſs of the Parents Love, which conſtrained them to dedicate their Children to God ſo very young, is a true Aſſertion: And well it were, that the like tender Affection would provoke ſome among us to conſider ſeriouſly the Nature of this ſacred Rite, and ſo endeavour to overcome the Prejudices, which they unhappily have conceived againſt it. It may ſeem a mean Thing, perhaps, for an Infant to be ſprinkled with a little Water; but

And for what Reaſon.

[c] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [d] Hopkins's Doctrine of the two Sacraments. [e] Vid. Wall's Hiſtory, P. I. paſſim. [f] P. II. c. viii. [g] P. I. paſſim. [h] Ibid. c. iv, vi, xv, xviii, &c. [i] Ibid. c. xiv, xv, xix. [k] Ibid. c. xvii. [l] Ibid. c. iv. [m] Ibid. ad finem. [n] Ibid. P. I. paſſim. [o] Contra Pelag.

[p] About the Year 1130, there aroſe a Sect among the Waldenſes, (a Nick-name given to the firſt Reformers) which declared againſt the Baptiſm of Infants, as being incapable of Salvation. But the main Body of them rejected that Opinion, and they, who held it, quickly dwindled away, and diſappeared; nor was there any more heard of that Tenet, till the Riſing of the German Antipædo-baptiſts, Anno 1522. Wall, P. II. c. vii.

[q] This Hereſy was not broached till the Year of Chriſt 410: And their principal Tenet, relating to Baptiſm, was—— That the Doctrine of Original Sin, and Natural Corruption, by which Perſons are ſuppoſed to be born under a Neceſſity of ſinning, did caſt a Reflection on the Honour and Juſtice of God, who gives us our Being; and therefore they ſaid, ——That the Baptiſm of Infants was not for any Sin they had, but to gain them Admittance into the Kingdom of Heaven. For they ſuppoſed that Children, though they were not baptiſed, were to have an eternal and happy Life, not in the Kingdom of Heaven indeed, becauſe our Saviour (John iii. 5.) had determined the contrary; but in ſome other Place, though they could not define where: And this engaged their Adverſaries (and among the reſt St Auſtin) to carry the Neceſſity of Baptiſm, in order to Salvation, to a Degree of Abſoluteneſs a little too ſevere. Wall's Hiſtory, P. I. c. xix.

let us look on the Author and Institutor of this Sacrament; remember his Design in it, and then it will no longer appear low and contemptible: For with Christ's Appointments there goes a special Power and Virtue; his Institutions and Ordinances are accompanied with a Blessing, yea with a Multitude of inestimable Blessings: And therefore why should any of us be such Enemies to those, whom we pretend to love unfeignedly, and so negligent of their Safety, as not speedily to deliver them from the Guilt and Danger of Original Sin, rescue them from the Power of the Prince of this World, and place them under the Guardianship of God and good Angels? Why so regardless of their true Honour and Interest, as to delay our adopting them into the Family of God, in order to have them translated into the Kingdom of his beloved Son? Can the Christian be thought so much a better, and more gracious Covenant, than that of Moses, supposing it to exclude so many Millions of Souls, which this other readily received, nay, peremptorily demanded? And is it not enough, that these are not positively refused, to satisfy us, that though the Ordinance be changed, yet the Subjects and Privileges of it continue still the same? Why then do any of us undertake to make the Gates yet straiter, to shut up the Mercies, and lessen the Family of God? Why represent the blessed Jesus less kind than Moses? No, let us rather lose no Moment's Time of impressing on our Offspring the Seals of the new Covenant: Let us make the best Reparation we can, for the Stain and Guilt we conveyed to them, by seeing them immediately washed in that Fountain, opened by Jesus Christ, for Sin, and for Uncleanness, even the Laver of Regeneration, the Sacrament of Baptism. Let us deliver them up to his Care, who is gracious to all Ages, and cannot but embrace, and adopt the tender Innocence of those, who are propounded as a Pattern to all, that enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. And are those, to whom all, who enter in, must be like, not capable of entering in themselves? Never let such a Thought harbour in our Breasts: Only, withal, let it be our constant Business, to second and confirm these good Beginnings by timely Instruction, and a virtuous Education. For dreadful will their Condemnation be, whose own Bowels shall rise up against them at the Day of Judgment, and upbraid them with that cruel Fondness, which laid the Foundation of their Vices, and their Torments: But blessed are those pious Souls, who increase the Kingdom of God with every Addition to their own Family, and double every Joy in Heaven to themselves, by those of the Children, whom they have led, or sent before them thither; by a Race of good Men here, and glorified Saints hereafter. And so we proceed to consider,

An Exhortation to Parents.

The Pre-requisites to Baptism.

3. THE Manner, in which Baptism was used to be administered. And to this Purpose we must in the first Place observe, [s] that the two Things, which were indispensably necessary (we speak now of the Baptism of the adult) to prepare them for this Solemnity, and to qualify them to be Partakers of this holy Sacrament, where Faith and Repentance, i. e. a Declaration of their firm Belief of the great Doctrines of the Christian Religion, and of their Resolution to live suitably to that Belief.

IN the Times of the Apostles, when the Miracles, wrought by those first Preachers of Christianity, were so convincing, and the extraordinary Grace of God, poured down upon Men, so effectual, as to convert them to the Faith of Christ, as it were in a Moment; a single Declaration of their Faith and Repentance seems to have been accounted sufficient to prepare them to receive Baptism immediately; for [t] so Philip baptised the Eunuch, and [u] St Paul the Gaoler, upon the first Indication of their Conversion: But, afterwards, when these mighty Operations of the Spirit grew less common, and Men began to be convinced, more gradually, by the ordinary Means of the Preaching of the Word, it was not thought sufficient, in most Churches, for Men, upon their Conversion, barely to profess their Faith and Repentance, but they were obliged to give some Evidence of the Sincerity of both, before they were admitted into the Church by Baptism.

IF they had formerly been great and grievous Sinners, they were to evidence their Repentance [*] by Prayers, and Watchings, and Fastings, and Confessing of Sins: They were to demonstrate, by the real Change of their whole Course of Life, that they had actually renounced all the Rites and Practices of their former Profession, and would, for the future, conform their Lives to the Rules of the Christian Institution: They were to endeavour to purge their Consciences from every evil Work, that their Baptism might be, [x] not the putting away the Filth of the Flesh, but the Answer of a good Conscience towards God. They, who were willing thus to make Proof of their Repentance,

[s] Clarke's Essay on Baptism. c. xx. [t] Acts viii. 38. [u] Ibid. xvi. 33. [*] Tertul. de Baptis. [x] 1 Pet. iii. 21.

Repentance, and of their ſincere Deſire to be admitted into the Church of God, were catechiſed in all the neceſſary Articles of the Chriſtian Faith, which they were to make publick Profeſſion of at their Baptiſm, and were fully inſtructed in the moral Precepts of that Divine Religion, which they were to practiſe the remaining Part of their Lives, and then they were thought prepared for the Waſhing of Regeneration, and the Renewing of the Holy Ghoſt.

The Manner of Baptiſm.

WHEN the Perſon to be baptiſed was thus prepared, and [y] the Time appointed come, he was brought by the Prieſt to [z] a convenient Place, where there was Plenty of Water, and, [a] being ſtript of his Cloaths, in the firſt Place, [b] he renounced the Devil, and all his Works, the Pomps and Vanities of this wicked World, and not only all the ſinful, but even all the lawful Deſires of the Fleſh, ſo far as to keep within the moſt ſtrict Bounds, and the moſt exact Obedience to the Laws of Reaſon and Religion. After this, he made Profeſſion of his Faith in one God the Father Almighty, &c. in Jeſus Chriſt his only Son our Lord, in the Holy Ghoſt, &c. and in the Catholick Church, &c. and then was baptiſed in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, being three Times immerſed in the Water, as each Perſon in the ever-bleſſed Trinity was named. This being done, [c] he was ſigned on the Forehead with the Sign of the Croſs, and then coming out of the Water, and being anointed with Oil, (as the Cuſtom of ſome Churches was) he was cloathed with [d] a white Garment, and ſo admitted to the Communion of the Saints, with this Form of Words pronounced by thoſe that put it on: Receive this white and immaculate Cloathing; and bring it with thee unſpotted before the Tribunal of Chriſt, and thou ſhalt inherit eternal Life.

THIS is the Form and Manner, wherein adult Perſons, converted to Chriſtianity, were baptiſed in the Primitive Church: Nor was there any great Difference in the Baptiſm of Infants, ſaving, that they had Sponſors or Godfathers, (for [e] there is no Time or Age of the Church, in which there is any Appearance, that Infants were uſually baptiſed without them) who anſwered for them, and made the ſame Renunciation and Profeſſions in their Names, which Perſons of Maturity made for themſelves. But here a notable Objection will ariſe: For, [f] "if Immerſion, ſay ſome, be the Pri- "mitive Form of adminiſtering this holy Rite, how comes Sprinkling to be ſubſtituted "in its Place? When neither the Senſe of the Word, nor the Significance of the Act, "nor the Cuſtom of the Church give Countenance to this Practice, but require the "very contrary, upon what Preſumption can we think a Sacrament valid, that deviates "ſo groſsly from its Original Form?" Now, in order to a right Reſolution of theſe Queſtions, we muſt be careful to diſtinguiſh between what is neceſſary and eſſential to Baptiſm, and what is only accidental and circumſtantial to it. [g] As for the former, the Element of Water, the Form of Words in the Adminiſtration, and, (as ſome think) the Perſons, duly qualified and authoriſed thereunto, are made neceſſary to the Sacrament by the Command of our Saviour, which Things muſt therefore be conſtantly obſerv'd, and kept in the Adminiſtration of it: But as for the latter, viz. the Quantity of Water, and the Manner of uſing it, whether it be by dipping or ſprinkling, theſe Things, being under no Command, nor any where determined in holy Scripture, are left indifferent.

An Objection againſt Sprinkling.

THAT

[y] The uſual Time was at Eaſter, or Whitſuntide, the Commemoration of our Saviour's Paſſion and Reſurrection, and of the great Effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt; Things principally reſpected in this Sacrament. Clarke's Eſſays. [z] Before the Chriſtian Religion was ſo far encouraged, as to have Churches built for its Service, they baptiſed in any River, Fountain, or Pond; [Tert. de Baptiſmo, c. 4.] but when they came to have Churches, one Part of the Church, or Place nigh the Church, called the Baptiſtery, was employed to this Uſe; wherein was a Ciſtern, Font, or Pond, large enough for ſeveral to go into the Water at once; and this was divided into two Parts by a Partition, one for the Men, and the other for the Women. Wall's Hiſtory of Infant-Baptiſm, Vol. IV.

[a] Though the ancient Chriſtians were baptiſed ſtark naked, yet great Care was taken to preſerve the Modeſty of any Woman; for, till ſhe was undreſſed, and her Body under Water, none but Women came within Sight of her, and then the Prieſt putting her Head under Water, and uſing the common Form of Baptiſm, went his Way, and left her to the Care of the Women, to take her out of the Water, and cloath her again with the white Garment. Wall, ibid. [b] In the Church of Jeruſalem, the Form, as we read in St Cyril, was, I renounce thee, O Satan, and all thy Works, all thy Pomps, and all thy Service; where, under the Name of the Devil's Works, as he explains himſelf, is comprehended all Kind of Sin. Wall, ibid. c. ix. [c] What they intended by this Sign was, to declare, that they would not be aſhamed of the Croſs of Chriſt; never be abaſhed at the Flouts of the Heathens, who objected to them, that the Perſon, in whom they truſted as their God, had been executed for a Malefactor; never to be ſcandalized, if it came to be their Fortune to ſuffer it themſelves: On the contrary, they voluntarily owned it as their Share and Allotment in the World, and were willing to undergo it, whenever God ſhould think fit. Wall, ibid. [d] By this was ſignified, that, being now waſhed from their Sins in the Blood of the Lamb, they had put on Chriſt, were become Children of Light, and of the Day, and were reſolved to keep themſelves unſpotted from the World. Wall, ibid. [e] Ibid. Part ii. c. 9. [f] See Stennet's Anſwer to Ruſſen, and Gale's Reflections on Wall's Hiſtory. [g] Hole's Expoſition, Vol. II.

THAT the Manner of Baptiſing was, by the Ancients, accounted no more, than a mere Circumſtance, no Way eſſential to the Ordinance itſelf, is evident from their uſing either Immerſion, or Effuſion, as Occaſion required. For [h] though the general and ordinary Way was to baptiſe by Immerſion, or dipping the Perſon, whether it was Infant, or grown Man or Woman, into the Water; yet, that, in caſe of Sickneſs, Weakneſs, Haſte, Want of Water, or other ſuch extraordinary Occaſions, Baptiſm was performed by Effuſion of Water on the Face, and ſuch Baptiſm eſteemed valid, we have the Practice of the Apoſtles and Primitive Chriſtians to evince. For when we read of whole Families baptiſed in their Houſes, particularly [i] of the Gaoler and his Houſhold baptiſed at home, and at Midnight too, we can hardly ſuppoſe, that a ſufficient Quantity of Water, and other Conveniencies proper for a decent Immerſion, could be procured upon ſo ſudden an Occaſion; nor can we well conceive, how the [k] three thouſand Converts, upon St Peter's Sermon, could be baptiſed in the ſame Day, in the ſame Place, where they were aſſembled, unleſs we have Recourſe to Aſperſion. The Quantity of Water, on ſuch Occaſions as theſe, is of no Conſideration; for, "the Contagion of Sin (as a very ancient Father [l] expreſſes it, ſpeaking "of Effuſion, or Sprinkling) is not, in the Sacrament of Salvation, waſhed off in "the ſame Meaſures, that the Dirt and Defilements of the Skin and Body are waſhed "in a common Bath. —— It is after another Way, that the Breaſt of a Believer is "waſhed; after another Faſhion, that the Mind of a Man is by Faith cleanſed: "And therefore, in the Sacrament of Salvation, when Neceſſity compels, the ſhort-"eſt Ways of tranſacting Divine Matters do, by God's gracious Diſpenſation, conſer "the whole Benefit."

NOW, ſince among the ancient Chriſtians, Profuſion and Aſperſion were uſed in Baptiſm, eſpecially in Caſe of Weakneſs and Indiſpoſition of Body, the Climate has the ſame Conſideration with us, that Sickneſs and Infirmity had with them; and ſince the Words Βάπτω and Βαπτίζω do undoubtedly ſignify ſprinkling, as well as dipping, and are equally applied to either; there is plainly no particular Deſignation from God; and the Church, conſequently, is left to her Diſcretion to embrace which Form of Baptiſm ſuits beſt with her Convenience: Only it is the private Wiſh of [m] many good Men: —— As there is Preſumption to believe, Immerſion is of more [n] ancient Date, and [o] univerſal Uſage, more ſupported by Scripture-Evidence, more ſymbolical of the Things repreſented by Baptiſm, [†] and not prejudicial to human Conſtitutions, (as ſome imagine) that, for the Peace and Tranquillity of the Church, and the Recovery of thoſe, who diſſent from her in this Particular, this Cuſtom were revived and [p] reſtored to a general Uſe, and Aſperſion only permitted (as it was of old) in the Caſe of Sickneſs, Infirmity, or imminent Danger of Death. And, with this Wiſh, we go on to conſider,

The Benefits and Privileges of Baptiſm.
1. Pardon.

4. THE Privileges and Benefits, we are intitled to enjoy, and the Duties, we are engaged to perform, by Virtue of our Baptiſm: And what I account the firſt Benefit of this Kind is, the Remiſſion of our Sins and paſt Offences. For, [q] ſince the Deſign of our Saviour's coming into the World was, by the Merit of his Death and Suffering, to purchaſe Pardon and Remiſſion for all thoſe, who ſhould believe in his Name, and obey his Goſpel; the Means, by which this Pardon is applied, and the Seal, by which it is ſecured to all ſuch, as perform theſe Conditions, is Baptiſm: And for this Reaſon we find the bleſſed Apoſtles exhorting the firſt Converts to Chriſtianity immediately to receive this Sacrament: [r] And now why tarrieſt thou? (ſays Ananias to St Paul) Ariſe, and be baptiſed, and waſh away thy Sin; and ſo St Peter to the converted Jews, [s] repent, and be baptiſed, every one of you, in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, for the Remiſſion of Sins, and ye ſhall receive the Holy Ghoſt. For another [h] Wall's Hiſtory of Infant-Baptiſm, Vol. II. [i] Acts xvi. 32, 33. [k] Ibid. ii. 41.

[l] Cyprian. ad Fidum, Epiſt. 76. [m] Biſhop Taylor, in his Rule of Conſcience; Mr. Rogers, in his Treatiſe of the Sacraments; Mr. Walker, in his Doctrine of Baptiſms; Towerſon, in his Explication of the Catechiſm, &c. [n] See Wall, ibid. Part ii. c. 9. how the Cuſtom of Immerſion, which was certainly firſt in Uſe in all ordinary Caſes, came to be ſuperſeded by that of Effuſion, in France, then in Italy and Germany, and laſt of all in England. [o] If we take the Diviſion of the World, from the three main Points of it, all the Chriſtians in Aſia, all in Africa, and about one third Part of Europe are ſuch, as uſe Immerſion; for none but thoſe Nations, which do now, or did formerly ſubmit to the Authority of the Biſhop of Rome, do ordinarily baptiſe their Children by ſprinkling, as the Hiſtorian makes his Obſervation. Wall, ibid. [†] Sir John Floyer, in his Book of Cold Baths, has evinced by Reaſons, taken from the Nature of our Bodies, from the Rules of Medicine, from modern Experience, and from ancient Hiſtory, that waſhing or dipping Infants in Cold Water, is, generally ſpeaking, not only ſafe, but very uſeful. Wall, ibid. [p] Whitby's Commentary on Rom. vi. [q] Clarke's Eſſays.
[r] Acts xxii. 16. [s] Ibid. ii. 38.

another Benefit of our Chriſtian Baptiſm, is, 2dly, The Influence and Aſſiſtance of God's bleſſed Spirit. At the firſt Preaching of the Goſpel, this Influence of the Spirit frequently diſcovered itſelf in thoſe extraordinary Gifts of ſpeaking with Tongues, working Miracles, &c. as appears in the Hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles: But, theſe by Degrees ceaſing, it afterwards continued to evidence itſelf in the ſtrange, and almoſt miraculous Change, which it made in the Minds of Men, from the moſt corrupt and vicious, to the moſt virtuous and heavenly Diſpoſition, almoſt in an Inſtant, upon their being baptized. And when this Effect alſo grew leſs frequent, as the Zeal and Purity of Chriſtians declined, it yet continued (and to this very Day ſtill continues) by its ſecret Power and Operation, to renew and transform Men's Minds, to inſtruct them in their Duty, and to enable them to perform it; to purify their Hearts from vicious Inclinations and Deſires, to beget holy Diſpoſitions and Affections in their Souls, to direct them in Difficulties, and to encourage and eſtabliſh them in all the Courſe of Chriſtian Piety: For theſe, we are informed, are its bleſſed Effects, [t] to be waſhed, to be ſanctified, to be juſtified in the Name of our Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of our God; [u] which Spirit beareth witneſs with our Spirit, that we are the Children of God. And this ſuggeſts another Privilege of Baptiſm; 2. Grace.

3dly, Our Admiſſion into the Church and Family of God. St. Paul, deſcribing the State of the Gentiles, at the Time when they were without Chriſt, tells them, that [*] they were Aliens from the Commonwealth of Iſrael, and Strangers from the Covenants of Promiſe, having no Hope, and without God in the World; but now, in Jeſus Chriſt, ſays he, ye, who were ſometimes far off, are made nigh by the Blood of Chriſt, having, in Baptiſm, [x] received the Adoption of Sons. [y] Now, Adoption (as it appears by the Laws and Cuſtoms of Countries where it has obtained) is an Act of Favour, whereby the Maſter of an Eſtate takes Perſons of another Family, and receives them as his natural-born Children. The Perſons thus received, if Slaves before, are hereby made free, and then, as Freemen, they take the Name, and ſucceed to the Right of the Inheritance of the Adopter. And in like Manner, how diſtant ſoever we may be from God, Aliens and Strangers to him, and Slaves and Captives to the Enemy of Souls before our Baptiſm; yet (upon the due Performance of that Ordinance) we commence [z] Fellow-citizens with the Saints, and are enrolled in the Number of thoſe whom God hath choſen to be his peculiar and elect People; [a] whom he intends to govern with the ſame Tenderneſs, that an affectionate and merciful Father has for his beloved Son, and for whom he deſigns a more ample Proviſion, than the greateſt Monarchs upon Earth can confer on their adſcititious Children; a Proviſion, of which all the Crowns and Kingdoms, and Glories of the Earth are but a faint Shadow and Repreſentation, and an [b] Inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away, reſerved in Heaven for them. For, if we are Children, then (according to that happy Climax) are we Heirs, Heirs of God, and Joint-Heirs with Chriſt, to the Intent that we may be glorified with him. 3. Adoption. And, 4thly, Glory.

THESE are the Privileges of our high Calling, which God, on his Part, has conſigned to us in the Ordinance of Baptiſm: But then we are to remember, that there are ſundry Duties, which we, on our Parts, then engaged to perform. For therein we [c] profeſs our ſincere Belief in the Truth of that Doctrine, which God the Father revealed by his bleſſed Son, and confirmed by the miraculous Operation of the Holy Ghoſt; therein we declare our humble Acceptance of the Overtures of Mercy and Grace, purchaſed for us by our Saviour's meritorious Performances, and in this Sacrament tendered to us; and therein we avow our Reſolution to forſake all wicked Courſes of Life repugnant to the Doctrine and Laws of Chriſt, and to conform ourſelves entirely to his Will, living thenceforward in all Piety, Righteouſneſs, and Sobriety, as loyal Subjects, faithful Servants, and dutiful Children to God. In a Word, therein renouncing all erroneous Principles, all vicious Inclinations, and all other Engagements whatever, we devote ourſelves to the Faith and Obedience of God the Father, our great and glorious Maker; of God the Son, our good and gracious Redeemer; and of God the Holy Ghoſt, our bleſſed Guide, Aſſiſtant, Advocate, and Comforter. The Duties we engage to perform.

THESE are the Duties, which precede and attend on Baptiſm, eſpecially when the Perſons baptized are of riper Years; and what is ſubſequent hereupon, and incumbent cumbent on all, is to make good the Engagements they contain. [a] Having then had our Bodies waſhed with pure Water, let us often review our Baptiſmal Vow, and (as the Apoſtle exhorts) hold faſt the Profeſſion of our Faith without wavering; remembering always, that Apoſtacy, either in Profeſſion or Practice, from God and Goodneſs, adds to our Diſobedience the Charge of Perfidiouſneſs and Ingratitude; and that, upon the Whole, it [c] would have been much better for us never to have known the Way of Righteouſneſs, than, after we have known it, to turn from the holy Commandment delivered to us.

[t] 1 Cor. vii. 11. [u] Rom. viii. 16. [*] Eph. ii. 12, 13. [x] Gal. iv. 5. [y] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. I. [z] Eph. ii. 19. [a] Clarke's Eſſays. [b] 1 Pet. i. 4. [c] Barrow, on the Sacraments.

Of the Lord's-Supper.

HOW much ſoever the Supper of our Lord may be thought to reſemble the Poſtcœnium, uſed by the Jews, in the Cloſe of the Paſchal Supper; yet that it was deſigned for greater and more noble Purpoſes, and to repreſent Things of a more weighty Conſideration, than the Jews ever had to commemorate, is manifeſt from the Form of its Inſtitution, which (as [f] the Apoſtles relate it) was, In the ſame Night in which Chriſt was betrayed, he took Bread, and bleſſed it, and brake it, and gave it to his Diſciples, ſaying, Take, eat, this is my Body, which was given and broken for you; this do in Remembrance of me: And in the ſame Manner alſo he took the Cup, and gave Thanks, and gave it to them, ſaying, Drink ye all of it; for it is my Blood of the New-Teſtament, which was ſhed for you, and for many, for the Remiſſion of Sins; this do ye, as oft as you drink it, in Remembrance of me; for as oft as you eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, ye do ſhew the Lord's Death till he come.

The true Senſe of the Words of the Inſtitution.

BUT, before we proceed to the Conſideration of the Nature and Ends of this Ordinance, it may not be amiſs to ſettle the right Senſe of the Words of the Inſtitution: And, in order to this, we muſt obſerve,——That when the Scripture treats of Sacramental Matters, it is not unuſual to have the Sign or Repreſentation of a Thing expreſſed by the Name of the Thing ſignified, and to ſpeak of a Thing, not yet done, in the ſame Manner, as if it were already done. Thus God, ſpeaking to Abraham of Circumciſion, ſays, [g] This is my Covenant, when Abraham, as yet, was not actually circumciſed; and even when he was ſo, it is evident from [h] St Paul, that Circumciſion was never the Covenant itſelf, but only the Evidence and Seal of it: And, in like Manner, Moſes calls the Paſchal Lamb, [i] the Lord's Paſſover, even before God, paſſing over the Iſraelites, had ſmitten the Egyptians, and when, after all, that Lamb could be no more than a bare Memorial of this miraculous Event. Upon this Occaſion therefore we need leſs wonder, that we find our Saviour calling the Bread his Body, and the Wine his Blood, [k] ſince this is a Figure common in any Caſe, but extremely natural, and in a Manner neceſſary, where a Sacrament is the Subject of Diſcourſe. [l] Nor could this Manner of Speech either ſeem harſh or unintelligible to his Diſciples, who had, even then, been eating the Paſchal Lamb, which was uſually ſtiled, the Body of the Paſſover, and the unleavened Bread, which was called, the Bread of Affliction, (i. e. the Repreſentation and Memorial of that Bread) which their Fathers did eat in the Land of Egypt: So that, being accuſtomed to ſuch Sacramental Phraſes, they could ſcarce underſtand the like Expreſſion of our Saviour, this Bread is my Body, any otherwiſe, than as it was to be the Repreſentation and Memorial of it. [m] The Prohibition of eating Blood was given the Jews in ſuch ſevere Terms, as [n] that God would ſet his Face againſt him, that did it, and cut him off from among his People; and theſe were ſo often repeated in the Books of Moſes, that, beſides the natural Horror which human Nature has at the Mention of drinking Man's Blood, it was a ſpecial Part of their Religion, to make no Manner of Uſe of it. Yet, after all this, the Diſciples, we find, were not ſtartled at our Saviour's Words, which is a plain Argument, that they underſtood him not in a literal, but figurative Senſe, and ſuch as was agreeable to the Laws and Cuſtoms of their Country. It was impoſſible, indeed, for them to ſuppoſe, that they did eat Chriſt's Body, or drink his Blood, when they ſaw, before their Eyes, his Body whole and untouched, and knew that his Blood was ſtill in his Veins: And therefore ſince the Figure

[a] Heb. x. 22, 23. [c] 2 Pet. ii. 21. [f] Vid. Matth. xxvi. 26. compared with Mark xiv. 22, &c. Luke xxii. 19. and 1 Cor. xi. 23, &c. [g] Gen. xvii. 10. [h] Rom. iv. 11. [i] Exod. xii. 11. [k] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [l] Whitby, on Matth. xxvii. [m] Burnet, on the Articles. [n] Lev. vii. 26, 27.

Figure of Eating and Drinking was uſed, [o] among the Jews, to denote Wiſdom and Learning, and all intellectual Apprehenſions, it was no Wonder, that the Diſciples, accuſtomed to their Maſter's figurative Way of Inſtruction, underſtood his Diſcourſe to proceed in that Senſe.

From the Teſtimony of the Fathers.

AND as this, at the firſt Inſtitution of the Sacrament, was the true Senſe of our Saviour's Words, ſo may we happily obſerve farther, that, for above 500 Years afterwards, they were never taken in any other. [p] The Primitive Fathers do indeed (and with great Reaſon) very much magnify the wonderful Myſtery and Efficacy of this Ordinance; they frequently ſpeak of a great ſupernatural Change made by the Divine Benediction; and tell us, that the Elements of Bread and Wine, to every worthy Receiver, become the Body and Blood of Chriſt: But then they likewiſe affirm, that the Names of the Things ſignified are given to the Signs; that the Bread and Wine do ſtill remain in their proper Nature and Subſtance, and are turn'd into the Subſtance of our Bodies; that the Body of Chriſt, in the Sacrament, is not the natural Body, but the Sign and Figure of it; not that Body, which was crucified, not that Blood, which was ſhed upon the Croſs; and that it is impious to underſtand the Eating of the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and Drinking his Blood literally. To this Purpoſe [q] Juſtin Martyr tells us, that our Blood and Fleſh are nouriſhed by the Converſion of that Food, which we receive in the Euchariſt; and [r] Ireneus affirms that, when the Cup, that is mixed, (viz. of Wine and Water) and the Bread that is broken, receive the Word of God, they become the Euchariſt of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, of which the Subſtance of our Fleſh is increaſed and conſiſts. Tertullian, arguing againſt Marcion, the Heretick, that the Body of our Saviour was not a mere Phantaſm and Appearance, has theſe Words; [s] The Bread, which our Lord took, and diſtributed to his Diſciples, he made his own Body, ſaying, This is my Body, i. e. the Image and Figure of my Body; but it could not have been the Figure of his Body, if there had not been a true and real Body: And St Auſtin, laying down ſome Rules for the right Underſtanding of Scripture, gives us this for one; [t] If the Speech, ſays he, be a Precept, forbidding ſome heinous Crime, or commanding us to do Good, it is not figurative; but, if it ſeem to command any heinous Wickedneſs, or forbid that, which is profitable and beneficial to others, it is figurative: For Inſtance, except ye eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye have no Life in you; this ſeems to command an heinous Wickedneſs, and therefore is a Figure, enjoining us to communicate of the Paſſion of our Lord, and, with Delight, and Advantage, to lay up in our Memory, that his Fleſh was crucified and wounded for us. [u] So that, according to St Auſtin's beſt Skill of interpreting Scripture, the literal Eating of the Fleſh of Chriſt, and Drinking his Blood, would have been a great Impiety, and therefore the Expreſſion is to be underſtood figuratively.

AFTER ſo full a Teſtimony of the fourth Age of the Church, out of the many which ſucceeding Ages afford us, we ſhall but produce two; that of Theodoret, who ſays, that Chriſt honours the Symbols with the Name of his Body and Blood, not changing their Nature, but adding Grace to Nature; for the myſtical Symbols, after the Sanctification, do not depart from their own Nature, but continue their former Subſtance, Figure, and Form, and may be ſeen and handled as before: To which we ſhall add that of Pope Gelaſius, who tells us, that the Sacraments of the Body and Blood of Chriſt are a divine Thing, ſo that by them we are made Partakers of a divine Nature; and yet the Subſtance of Bread and Wine, which are the Image and Reſemblance of Chriſt's Body and Blood in this Myſtery, does not ceaſe to exiſt. In ſhort, [x] ſince nothing is more common among the Fathers, than to call the Elements, even after their Conſecration, the Figures, the Signs, the Symbols, the Types, the Antitypes, the Commemoration, the Repreſentation, the Myſteries, and the Sacraments of Chriſt's Body and Blood; it is demonſtrable, that they could not think, that they were the very Subſtance of his Body and Blood; and therefore it may be a Matter of no vain Curioſity to enquire a little, how this figurative Senſe, which, for ſo many Ages, was the only received Interpretation of our Saviour's Words, came, by Degrees, [o] Maimonides obſerves, that whenſoever Eating or Drinking are mentioned in the Book of Proverbs, they are to be underſtood of Wiſdom, and the Law; and, after he has brought ſeveral Places of Scripture to this Purpoſe, he concludes, that becauſe this Acceptation of Eating occurs ſo often, and is ſo manifeſt, as if it were the primary and moſt proper Senſe of the Word, therefore Hunger and Thirſt ſtand for a Privation of Wiſdom and Underſtanding, More Nevoch. [p] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [q] Apol. 2. [r] Lib. v. c. 21. [s] Adverſus Marcion. Lib. iv. [t] De Doctrinâ Chriſti. [u] Tillotſon, ibid. [x] Burnet, on the Articles.

Degrees, to be laid aſide, and the Doctrine of a real and corporal Preſence introduced into this holy Sacrament.

How the Doctrine of real and corporal Preſence came to be introduced.

[y] NOW it cannot be denied, but that ſome godly Fathers of the Church, apprehenſive of the Profanation of this Sacrament, from the Unworthineſs of thoſe who came to it, and being deſirous to beget a due Reverence for ſo ſacred an Ordinance, and Serioufneſs in the Performance of it, did urge all the Topicks, which ſublime Figures and warm Expreſſions could help them; and, though they took Care to maintain, that the Subſtance of Bread and Wine, even after Conſecration, did ſtill remain, yet ſeveral of them ſuppoſed a certain Union of the Elements to the Body of Chriſt, much like that of his Human Nature to the Divine. It is to be obſerved farther, that not long after this, the Goths and Vandals in the Weſt, and the Turks and Saracens in the Eaſt, made Havock of all that was polite and learned; by which Means, the chief Writings of the beſt and firſt Times were loſt; and inſtead of them, many ſpurious ones afterwards produced, which, in dark and ignorant Ages, eaſily paſſed for Genuine. The Popes too, at this Time, were ſuch an infamous Succeſſion of Men, as cannot be parallell'd in all Hiſtory; and their Clergy (which were very numerous) entering into Combinations to ſubject the temporal Power to the ſpiritual, were fond of any Opinion, that would raiſe their Character, and render their Perſons ſacred, as the Power of making a God, with a few Words, could not fail to do. Add to this, that the Doctrine of corporal Preſence in the Euchariſt had never been condemned in any former Ages: For, as none condemn Errors by Anticipation, ſo the Promoters of it had this Advantage, that no formal Deciſion had been made againſt it, and agreeing (as it did) in outward Sound, with the Words of the Inſtitution, and the Phraſe, generally uſed, of the Elements being changed into the Body and Blood of Chriſt, it is leſs Wonder, that it found ſo ready a Reception in Ages of Ignorance, when Sound and Appearance might paſs for good Arguments.

FROM theſe, and other Cauſes, that might be mentioned, the People were generally brought to believe, that Chriſt was in the Sacrament, and that the Elements were his Body and Blood, without troubling themſelves to enquire in what Manner this was done; and, in After-Ages, when the Doctrine of extirpating Hereticks began to prevail, it is no ſtrange Matter, if this other gained Ground, when both the Prieſts ſaw their Intereſt in promoting it, and all People felt the Danger of denying it. Thus the going off from the Simplicity, in which Chriſt did deliver the Sacrament, and the Church at firſt receive it, into ſome ſublime Expreſſions about it, ſet Men at firſt wrong in their Notions, and, when they were once out of the Way, ſome unhappy Incidents of the Ages they lived in carried them ſtill farther and farther from it. Pious and Rhetorical Figures, purſued by Men of heated Imaginations, and inflamed Affections, were followed by Explanations invented by colder and more deſigning Men afterwards; and theſe, enforced with the Anathema's of the Church, and the Terrors of Perſecution, were enough, in ſome Places, to ſilence Contradiction; tho' conſidering their many monſtrous Abſurdities, their Contradiction to the Evidence of our Senſes, and Oppoſition to the received Maxims of Philoſophy, and known Properties of a Body, together with the long Train of their cruel and idolatrous Conſequences, it is much to be queſtioned, whether, from any diligent and judicious Enquirer, they ever yet gained a ſincere Aſſent.

This Sacrament not a Real Propitiatory Sacrifice.

FROM this different Interpretation of our Saviour's Words in this Inſtitution, there has proceeded another Controverſy concerning this Sacrament, viz. whether it be a Real, Propitiatory Sacrifice, or only a Commemorative and Euchariſtical one. Thoſe, who maintain the Doctrine of Corporal Preſence, and even ſome, who reject that Maſs of Contradictions, contend that it is truly Propitiatory: But the greater Part of Divines (and with better Reaſon, I conceive) ſeem to be of the contrary Opinion. The Truth is, the Word Sacrifice is frequently uſed, in Scripture, to ſignify [y] Burnet, on the Articles. The firſt Controverſy about this Matter was ſtarted in the Greek Church, upon Occaſion of a Diſpute concerning the Worſhip of Images, wherein the Council of Conſtantinople decreed, That the Sacrament was the Image of Chriſt's Body and Blood, in which the Subſtance of Bread and Wine remained: But, in Anſwer to this, the ſecond Council of Nice declared peremptorily, That the Sacrament, after Conſecration, is not the Image and Antitype of Chriſt's Body and Blood, but is properly his Body and Blood. In the Latin or Roman Church, Paſchaſius Radbertus, Abbot of Corbey, in France, was the firſt, who wrote, to any Purpoſe, in Defence of the Reality of Chriſt's Body and Blood in the Euchariſt; but as he had ſeveral Followers, ſo ſome of the moſt learned Men of that Age wrote againſt his Doctrine, as a groſs Innovation. The tenth Century was the blackeſt and moſt ignorant of all the Ages of the Church, ſo that we have no Writer in that Time, that gives us any tolerable Account of its Doctrine. About the Middle of the eleventh Century, however, Berengarius, Archdeacon of Angiers, began to oppoſe the Doctrine of Real Preſence, but was compelled to recant twice, firſt by Pope Nicholas, and then by Pope Gregory VII. about twenty Years afterwards. Tillotſon, againſt Tranſubſtantiation.

Anno 705.

Anno 787.

Anno 1059.

Anno 1079.

ſignify almoſt any Act of religious Worſhip: [z] Our Prayers, [a] our Alms, [b] our Affections, [c] nay, even our Bodies are called by that Name; and, in this extended Senſe, it cannot be denied, but that the Euchariſt is a Sacrifice of Praiſe and Thankſgiving. [d] Nay, as there is an Oblation of Bread and Wine made in it, which, after Conſecration, are conſumed in an Act of Religion, and as there is a Commemoration, and Repreſentation to God, of the Sacrifice which Chriſt offered for us on the Croſs, on theſe Accounts we allow, that it may be called a Sacrifice: But, ſtill, though it be a commemorative, yet, that it is not a true, real, and propitiatory Sacrifice, we have a full Proof in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews, where the Apoſtle, after a long Diſcourſe concerning the Prieſts and Sacrifices under the Law, endeavours to ſhew, that, under the Evangelical Diſpenſation, our only Prieſt and Sacrifice (in a ſtrict Senſe of the Words) is Chriſt. For, ſpeaking of thoſe of the Levitical Order; [e] they truly, ſays he, were many Prieſts, becauſe they were not ſuffered to continue by reaſon of Death; but this Man, becauſe he continueth ever, hath an unchangeable Prieſthood: [f] He needeth not, therefore, as thoſe High-Prieſts, to offer up Sacrifice daily, firſt for his own Sins, and then for the People; for this he did once, when he offered up himſelf: Whereupon the Apoſtle makes the concluſive Difference between thoſe Prieſts and Chriſt to conſiſt in this,——That whereas [g] every Prieſt ſtands daily miniſtering, and offering ſometimes the ſame Sacrifices, which can never take away Sins; this Man, after he had offered up one Sacrifice for Sins, for ever ſat down at the Right-Hand of God: So that, according to the full Tenor of the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe, ſtrictly ſpeaking, we have but one Prieſt, and one Sacrifice, under the Goſpel; and therefore how largely ſoever theſe Words may, in ſome Places, be taken, yet, according to the true Idea of a propitiatory Sacrifice, and of a Prieſt, that reconciles Sinners to God, they cannot be applied to any Acts of our Worſhip, or to any Order of Men upon Earth.

The Virtue and Nature of it.

ALL the Virtue then, that can, with any Juſtice, be imputed to this Sacrament, is,——That therein we gratefully commemorate the Sacrifice of Chriſt's Death, and, by renewed Acts of Faith, preſent That to God as our Sacrifice, in the Memorial of it, which he himſelf hath appointed; hereby confirming our Covenant with God, and ſharing in the bleſſed Effects of that Death, which our Lord ſuffered for us. This is the whole Intendment of the Inſtitution: And that the firſt Chriſtians had no farther Notion of it, is evident from this remarkable Inſtance, that, when the Heathens objected to them their Irreligion and Impiety in having no Sacrifices, they readily owned, that [h] they had no Sacrifices, but Prayers and Praiſes; no Oblations, [i] but a pure Heart, clean Conſcience, and a ſtedfaſt Faith, which they hardly would have done, had this Sacrament, at that Time, been looked upon as a Sacrifice of ineſtimable Value to God.

THIS being ſufficient to ſhew the true Senſe of our Saviour's Words, and, in ſome Meaſure, the true Nature of the Ordinance itſelf; what we have farther to do is, to obſerve,

I. THE ſeveral Ends and Deſigns of its Inſtitution.
II. THE ſeveral Benefits, which we receive from thence.
III. THE Obligations, that lie upon us, to the frequent Obſervance of it. And,
IV. THE Qualifications, that are neceſſary thereunto. Now the

The Ends of this Sacrament.

I. AND only Deſign, that our Saviour mentions in this Inſtitution is, that we ſhould obſerve it in Remembrance of him. Whether our bleſſed Saviour might (as [k] ſome imagine) intend, by this Injunction, any Conformity to a Cuſtom, then prevalent among the Diſciples of ſeveral Sects of Philoſophers, who uſed to have an annual Feaſt or Collation in Rememberance of their reſpective Founders, is not ſo material for us to enquire. This only we may infer from the common Acceptation of the Word, that ſince to remember one, is not barely to call to Mind, that there was once ſuch a Perſon in the World, but to reflect likewiſe on the particular Quality and Relation wherein he ſtood to us, the Benefits he did, and the Obligations he laid upon us; our bleſſed Lord undoubtedly intends, when, in this holy Feaſt, he deſires us to remember him, that we would think of him in all his Capacities and Relations,

To remember Chriſt.

[z] Pſal. cxli. 2. and Heb. xiii. 15. [a] Heb. xiii. 16. [b] Pſal. li. 17. [c] Rom. xii. 1.
[d] Burnet, on the XXXIX Articles. [e] Heb. vii. 23, 24. [f] Ibid. ver. 27. [g] Ibid. x. 11, 12. [h] Juſtin Martyr, Apol. 2. [i] Minut. in Octav. Lib. VIII. [k] Iſ. Caſaub. ad Loc. Animadv. c. i.

(ſuch as a faithful Teacher, a gracious Governor, an entire Friend, and generous Benefactor, doing the higheſt Kindneſſes, and working the greateſt Deliverances for us, and for all Mankind) wherein he deſerves ſo infinitely to be remembered. [l] We may reaſonably preſume then, that he would have us remember him; 1*ſt*, As our faithful Teacher, and to call to Mind thoſe excellent Things, which he hath revealed unto us; as, namely, that, for the Sake of his Death, and through the Merits of his Blood, all Mankind, who were utter Enemies before, ſhall be put in a Way of Reconciliation with God, and have the Benefit of a new Covenant, which proffers Pardon to all, who truly repent of their Sins; Grace and ſpiritual Help to all, who are careful to endeavour therewith; and the Bleſſing of Heaven and everlaſting Happineſs to all, that are entirely obedient. 2*dly*, He would have us remember him, as our gracious Governor, and to bear in Mind thoſe Commands, which he, as our Sovereign Lord and Maſter, has laid upon us; as, namely, That we ſhould love God, and truſt in his Goodneſs, and ſubmit to his Providence, and worſhip him with Prayers and Praiſes; but, above all, with an Holy and God-like Life; that we be humble and heavenly-minded, chaſte, temperate, and contented; that we be dutiful to our Governors, reſpectful to our Superiors, courteous to our Equals, condeſcenſive to our Inferiors, loving and obliging to our Enemies, and juſt, charitable, and peaceable towards all Mankind. 3*dly*, He would have us remember him, as our moſt entire Friend, and generous Benefactor, who loved us (without any Thing of our Deſerts, and in Spite of the higheſt Provocations) to ſuch a Degree, as made him forego the Pleaſure, which he might have held, without any Interruption, in heavenly Places; to become a Man of Sorrows, lead a perſecuted and neceſſitous Life, and at laſt die a painful and ignominious Death for our Sakes; in order to ranſom us from the greateſt Miſery, the Slavery of Sin and Satan, and to procure for us the moſt valuable Bleſſings, that our Nature is capable of, Grace, Pardon, and eternal Life.

To confirm the New Covenant.

2. ANOTHER End in the Inſtitution of this Sacrament is, to confirm [m] the New Covenant, which Chriſt has purchaſed and procured for us by his Death. What the Nature of this Covenant is, we have ſufficiently explained before, and need only now take Notice, [n] that, as we firſt entered into this Covenant, when we were baptized, ſo are we called to renew and confirm it, every Time we are invited to ſup with our bleſſed Lord in this holy Sacrament; he having wiſely provided, that we ſhould never want an Opportunity of renewing our Engagements; of making up the Breach, whenever it ſhould happen, between us and God; of giving freſh Security and Strength to our Obligations; and of devoting ourſelves, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, to a more conſtant Love and Service of our gracious Maſter, in Spite of all thoſe ſpiritual Enemies, that would ſeduce us from him. And, in this Reſpect, the Euchariſt ſupplies the Deficiency of Baptiſm, which, tho' it devote us to God at firſt, is no Means to reconcile us to him, upon our having offended afterwards; becauſe it is but once adminiſtered, and cannot be repeated: And therefore is the Inſtitution of this other Sacrament intended to guard and maintain the Covenant between God and Man, that our baptiſmal Vows may be kept in Force, and we continue, by his gracious Acceptance of the Renewal of our Engagements in this Ordinance, his faithful Soldiers and Servants unto our Lives End.

And a League of Love with our Brethren.

3. ONE End more, for which this Sacrament was inſtituted, is, to ratify a League of Love and Friendſhip with thoſe Brethren, that communicate with us, and with all others. Eating and drinking together at the ſame Table, and partaking at the ſame Feaſt, hath always been eſteemed a Note of Friendſhip, and a Profeſſion of Love and Kindneſs among Men: It is the common Way of the World to compoſe Differences, to keep up Friendlineſs in Neighbourhoods, and to beget Endearment and mutual Love in all Fraternities. [o] To this Purpoſe the Paſchal Supper, among the Jews, was celebrated at one Time, and in one Place, with an entire Lamb aſſigned to each Family; not a Bone of it was to be broken or divided; and with Bread not ſoured with any Leaven, the better to ſignify that Love and Unity, and Sweetneſs of Temper, which was to be among them. And, in Alluſion to this, the Apoſtle exhorts us, now that [p] Chriſt our Paſſover is ſacrificed for us, to keep the Feaſt, not with the Leaven of Malice and Wickedneſs, but with the unleavened Bread of Sincerity and Truth; and that the rather, becauſe this Feaſt is in Remembrance of the higheſt Inſtance of Love, ſhewed to us by our Lord's laying down his Life for our Sakes, and therefore therefore obliging us never to forget the Return of Love again to him, by his appointed Proxies, who are our Brethren, Servants of the ſame Lord, and Members of the ſame Body with ourſelves. This then was our Lord's Intention, in appointing this Sacrament, and inviting us to eat at the ſame Table, that we might mutually embrace as Friends, and love as Brethren, and be knit together in the ſame Fellowſhip and Communion. And accordingly we may obſerve, that the Primitive Chriſtians were careful to make this Uſe of it; for Pliny, in his Letter to the Emperor Trajan, wherein he gives an Account of the Chriſtian Meetings, tells us, that their communicating in the Euchariſt [q] was a religious Compact and Combination among themſelves, that they would do no Hurt to one another, but love as Brethren, and live as Friends together.

[l] Kettlewell, on the Sacraments. [m] 1 Cor. xi. 25. [n] Kettlewell, ibid. [o] Newcombe's Sermons, Vol. II. [p] 1 Cor. v. 7.

II. THESE are the Ends for which this Sacrament was inſtituted, and anſwerable to theſe Ends are the Benefits, which we receive thereby; 1. The Pardon of our Sins. 2. The Increaſe of Grace. And, 3. The Confirmation of our Title to eternal Life. 1. [r] Whenever we repent indeed, we have God's Promiſe of Forgiveneſs, (which may comfort our Hearts, and cure our Deſpondency after any Sin) not only in this bleſſed Sacrament, but even in every penitential Prayer and Confeſſion. In this holy Ordinance however, the Promiſe of Forgiveneſs is again repeated, and, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, ſealed and confirmed, to ſhew us, that God is ſtill in the ſame Mind, and to give us a renewed and ſenſible Aſſurance of it. So that, if, after any Offences committed againſt God, we can but make ſure of our own Repentance, the Euchariſt may be ſaid to do That in an ordinary Way, which an Angel from Heaven, or a ſpecial Revelation, would do in an extraordinary, i. e. let us know, that our Sins are remitted, and God become our Friend: For therein we receive from him the Blood of Expiation, a plain Proof that our Sins are atoned for, and forgiven; and therein we renew a ſolemn Covenant of Peace and Reconciliation with him, confirmed by a Prieſt of his own preſcribing.

The Benefits of it.
Pardon of Sin.

2. [s] 'TIS not without very good Reaſon then, that our Lord made uſe of the Elements of Bread and Wine, as proper and fit Emblems of this Divine Myſtery, and the Benefits conferred by it: [t] For, as Bread and Wine convey a vital Nouriſhment to the Body, ſo the Sacrifice of Chriſt's Death, by this Sacrament in Commemoration of it, conveys ſomewhat to the Soul that is vital, that raiſes its Faculties, and fortifies all its Powers: But, in what Manner this is done, there is a Diverſity of Opinions among Divines. Some think, that this Memorial of the Death of Chriſt, when ſeriouſly and devoutly performed; when it animates our Faith, increaſes our Repentance, inflames our Love and Zeal, and ſo unites us to God, and to our Brethren; draws down the Returns of Prayer, and a farther Increaſe of Grace in us, according to the Nature and Promiſes of the new Covenant; and in this they ſuppoſe, that the Virtue and Efficacy of this Sacrament conſiſts: But others imagine, that this belongs only to the inward Acts of the Mind, and is not properly Sacramental, and therefore they think, that the Euchariſt is a federal Act, in which, as, on one Hand, we renew our baptiſmal Engagement with God, ſo, on the other, we revive, in the Sacrament, a viſible Conſignation of the Bleſſings of the new Covenant, which are ſomething ſuperadded to the Return of our Prayers, and the inward Acts of our Minds. This, they think, anſwers the Nouriſhment, which the Body receives from the Symbols of Bread and Wine, and fills up the Idea, which theſe Words of St Paul convey, [u] The Cup of Bleſſing, which we bleſs, is it not the Communion of the Blood of Chriſt? And the Bread, which we break, is it not the Communion of the Body of Chriſt; i. e. a communicating to us thoſe Benefits and Graces, which his Death was deſign'd to purchaſe for all Men? And therefore they conclude, [w] that this Sacrament does not only confer Grace by its natural Tendency, as other Means do; but, by Virtue of God's Promiſe and immediate Concurrence with it, conveys ſpiritual Strength and Refreſhment to the worthy Receivers of it, as it is an Inſtrument in his Hands: For ſuch has been the Opinion of the Church in all Ages, that * they, who partake of the Euchariſt by Faith, are thereby ſanctified both in Body and Soul; that [x] in it we receive the Similitude of the Body of Chriſt; but, together with that, all the Grace and Virtue, that the true and real Body obtained; and that [y] this ſacramental Food, though in outward Appearance a bodily Subſtance, yet, by an inviſible Efficacy, works all the Effects of a Divine Power and Preſence.

Increaſe of Grace, and how.

3. WHAT-

[q] Plin. Ep. Lib. X. Ep. 97. [r] Kettlewell, on the Sacrament. [s] Burnet, on the XXXIX Articles. [t] 1 Cor. x. 16. [u] Kettlewell, ibid. [w] Clem. Alex. Pædag. Lib. II. c. ii. [x] Ambroſ. de Sacram. Lib. VI. c. i. [y] Cypr. de Cœnâ Dom. ſub. init.

A Title to eternal Life.

3. WHATEVER then becomes of the Conceit of ſome of the Antients, that this Sacrament has a peculiar Efficacy to prepare our Bodies for an immortal State; yet, ſince our bleſſed Saviour has ſo poſitively declared, that [z] whoſo eateth his Fleſh, and drinketh his Blood, hath eternal Life, and he will raiſe him up at the laſt Day, the leaſt that we can infer is —— That, as it ratifies the Evangelical Covenant between God and us, it confirms our Right, and renews our Title to that eternal Happineſs, which Chriſt, the Mediator of this Covenant, has purchaſed and prepared for us: And, in this Senſe, it may not improperly be called, in the Phraſe and Stile of the Antients, [a] the Medicine of Immortality, which is an Antidote to preſerve Men from dying, and to give them a Life that is everlaſting.

Our Obligation to obſerve it.

III. SINCE the Benefits then, which are derived and ſecured to us by this Sacrament, are all the Bleſſings of the new Covenant, the Forgiveneſs of our Sins, the Aſſiſtance of Grace, the Comfort of God's holy Spirit, and the glorious Reward of eternal Life; [b] in Point of Intereſt we are obliged to frequent it, unleſs we judge ourſelves unworthy of the Bleſſings of the Goſpel, and are minded to be deprived of one of the beſt Means and Advantages of confirming and conveying theſe Bleſſings to us. Since this was the Charge of our beſt Friend, (nay of the greateſt Friend and Benefactor of all Mankind) when he was preparing to die in our Stead, and to offer up himſelf a Sacrifice for us, to undergo the moſt grievous Pains for our Sakes, and to ſuffer the worſt of temporal, that he might deliver us from eternal Death; and an Injunction, ſo eaſy, as only to meet at his Table, and there remember what gracious Things he hath done for us; we are bound in Point of Gratitude to the Obſervance of it, unleſs we will incur the Charge of neglecting our dying Saviour, the great Friend and Lover of Souls, in a Command ſo reaſonable, and ſo full of Bleſſings and Benefits to the worthy Performers of it. [c] Since this Sacrament, in all the Offices of Religion, is a moſt excellent Means to recommend our Prayers, and make them powerful, to fortify us in all the Trials that befal us, and to [d] preſerve us invulnerable againſt all the fiery Darts of our ſpiritual Enemy; we are obliged in Point of Safety to a frequent Obſervance of it, unleſs we are minded, by relinquiſhing our Guard, to become his Prey, and ſo be led Captive by him at his Will. Since, finally, this is the ſolemn Injunction of our great Law-giver, who is able to ſave and to deſtroy, in Point of indiſpenſable Duty we are bound to perform it, unleſs we will abide the Expreſſes of his Wrath, which all muſt allow to be inſupportable: For, [e] if he, that deſpiſed Moſes's Law, [f] by a Non-obſervance of the Paſſover, died without Mercy; of how much ſorer Puniſhment, ſuppoſe ye, ſhall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under Foot the Authority of the Son of God, and counted the Blood of the Covenant, wherewith he was ſanctified, an unholy Thing, or a Thing not worthy his Regard and Conſideration? Since then the Obligations incumbent upon us for the frequent Obſervance of this Ordinance are ſo many, what ſhould be the Cauſe of all this Backwardneſs, which we ſee in Men, to ſo plain, ſo neceſſary, and ſo beneficial a Duty?

Some Hinderances.

The Apoſtle, ſpeaking of this Sacrament, has inſerted a Caution or two; [g] whoſoever ſhall eat this Bread, and drink this Cup of the Lord unworthily, is guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord: And again, he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh Damnation to himſelf: And from hence ſome infer—That "if the Danger "of unworthy Receiving be ſo great, and the Preparation neceſſary for a worthy "Receiving coſts ſo much Pains, the ſafeſt Way ſeems to be, wholly to refrain from "this aweful Sacrament, and never receive it at all."

Now, to ſhew the Fallacy of this Inference, by ſtating the true Occaſion of the Words, it will be neceſſary to obſerve,—— [h] That, in the Primitive Church, it was uſual to bring to their religious Aſſemblies (every one, as he was able and diſpoſed) Proviſions for a common Entertainment. Out of theſe Proviſions, a convenient Quantity was ſet apart, to be conſecrated for the bleſſed Sacrament: This Sacrament was, in ſome Churches, celebrated before, in others, after this Feaſt of Love, (as that Entertainment was uſed to be called) but, in all Places, they were both celebrated in Company with each other. The Deſign of theſe Feaſts was to expreſs Friendſhip and Concord, and to ſhew, that Chriſtians eſteemed themſelves one Family, and one Body;

[z] John vi. 54. [a] Ὃς ἐστι φάρμακον ἀθανασίας, ἀντίδοτος τοῦ μὴ ἀποθανεῖν, ἀλλὰ ζῆν Ἰησοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ διὰ παντὸς. Ignat. ad Eph. [b] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [c] Kettlewell, on the Sacrament. [d] Σπουδάζετε συνιόντες, &c. Give all Diligence, ſays Ignatius, to the Epheſians, to aſſemble often in the Euchariſt, for the oftener you meet thereat, the more your Standing is ſecured, and the Power of Satan is deſtroyed. [e] Heb. x. 28, 29. [f] Exod. xii. 15. [g] 1 Cor. xi. 27, 29. [h] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.

Body; to be a Comfort to the Poor, whoſe Neceſſities were thus relieved at the publick Expence; and to ſpeak the Charity and Condeſcenſion of the Rich, who thus declared their meaner Brethren, in all Chriſtian Privileges, Fellow-Members, and equal with the greateſt. Theſe voluntary Contributions were ſtiled Oblations, becauſe every Contributor was underſtood to devote, what he brought, to a religious Uſe, and to diveſt himſelf of all Manner of Property in it: And therefore, as theſe Entertainments were deſigned for the whole Body of Believers, every one, who came to the Communion, had a Right to ſhare alike, tho' all did not contribute alike; nay, tho' the Circumſtances of ſome were ſo ſtrait, that they could not contribute any Part at all.

The Paſſages to the Hebrews explained.

Now, when this Parity was broken in upon; when every one would take upon him to eat at his own Time, in ſeparate Company, and in Proportion to his own bringing; [i] the Rich met, and, excluding the Poor from what ſhould have been the common Entertainment, after much Riot and Exceſs, they went to the Sacrament in no ſmall Diſorder; [k] one was hungry, having eaten nothing at all; and others drunken, having feaſted intemperately; and ſo the Poor were deſpiſed and neglected. This the Apoſtle condemns, as a groſs Profanation of that ſolemn Inſtitution of the Sacrament, at the Participation whereof they behaved themſelves with as little Reverence, as if they had been at a common Meal. This is [l] the Eating and Drinking, which he calls unworthy, for which he pronounces them guilty of the Body and Blood of the Lord, and tells them, that they did incur the Judgment of God. For, that the Word Κρίσις (which our Tranſlators render Damnation) does not here ſignify eternal Miſery, or that which is elſewhere termed the Damnation of Hell, but only a temporal Judgment and Chaſtiſement, in order to the Prevention of eternal Condemnation, is evident from what follows; [m] For this Cauſe many are weak and ſickly among you, and many ſleep, i. e. for this Irreverence of yours, God hath ſent among you ſeveral Diſeaſes, of which many have died. [n] Wherefore, my Brethren, ſays he, concluding with this Advice, when ye come together to eat, [viz. in theſe Love-Feaſts] tarry for one another; and if any Man hunger, let him eat at home, that ye come not together unto Judgment: Where he plainly intimates, both what the Crime of unworthy Receiving was, and the Puniſhment of it: Their Crime was, their irreverent and diſorderly Participation of the Sacrament; and their Puniſhment was, thoſe temporal Diſeaſes and other Chaſtiſements, which God inflicted upon them for this their Irreverence and Contempt.

Danger of Unworthineſs, no ſufficient Plea.

AND now, is it not as clear as the Light, that in a Church, like ours, where the conſecrated Elements are furniſhed at the publick Expence, and a Diſtribution of them made equally, decently, devoutly, and as nigh to the Primitive Inſtitution, as can well be imagined; the Unworthineſs, charged upon the Corinthians, neither is, nor poſſibly can be ours? And if ſo, it muſt follow, that thoſe Texts of St Paul are perverted to a very wrong Uſe, when they are made a Pretence of keeping from the holy Table the Perſons, whoſe preſent Circumſtances have no Manner of Affinity to them.

[o] DID but Men conſider, (what is moſt certainly true) that every Act of Religion, publick or private, requires the very ſame Diſpoſition of Mind, with the Sacrament; that no Man is fit (for Inſtance) to ſay the Lord's Prayer, who is not fit to eat and drink at his Table; that reading, and hearing, and praying unworthily, (i. e. without due Reverence, or in Love or Indulgence to any wilful Sin) is damnable, as well as unworthy communicating; they would ſoon perceive, that the Excuſes uſually alledged for the Neglect of this, if purſued through their juſt Conſequences, would hold every whit as ſtrongly for caſting off every Branch of ſolemn Worſhip, enjoined by the Chriſtian Religion: And yet there is not one of all theſe, but what requires, to the due Performance of it, the ſame Sorrow for our paſt Sins, the ſame ſtedfaſt Purpoſes of Amendment, the ſame Faith in Chriſt, and the ſame Charity to our Brethren, as the Communicating in that ſacred Ordinance; nor is any Man accepted by God in any of theſe, who is not fit and qualified to come to the other. To ſay all in one Word, no Man, who leads a good Life, can ever be unprepared for the Lord's-Supper; and no Man, who leads a bad one, can come prepared to that, or to any other Chriſtian Ordinance whatever.

[i] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [k] 1 Cor. xi. 21. [l] Ibid. ver. 29. [m] Ibid. ver. 30.
[n] Ibid. ver. 33, 34. [o] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.

Nor Want of Preparation.

AND this, I think, may ſerve to ſhew the Vanity of another Sort of Unpreparedneſs, commonly alledged, viz. the Want of Leiſure to retire ſo many Hours, and to ſay ſo many Prayers before each Communion. [p] Theſe, doubtleſs, are very proper Exerciſes, when Men have Opportunities for them, and no Man can take too much Pains with himſelf, to afflict his Soul with Remorſe, and to raiſe his Affections and Devotion on ſuch Occaſions: But then, to think that, by theſe Meditations and Prayers, we are, and that, without them, we cannot be prepared, is no leſs than Superſtition, and an Error, which draws a World of ill Conſequences after it. Even theſe Prayers (if we hold faſt any darling Luſt) are an Abomination, an Hypocriſy, that mocks God, and deludes our own Soul; and therefore it is much to be wiſhed, that People could be made duly ſenſible, that, although a Week's Preparation (when ſuch extraordinary Addreſſes are added to a Conſcience void of Offence) may be exceeding well, yet nothing can be depended upon, but communicating frequently, and reverently; and living, as if we were every Day to communicate, between one Opportunity and another. To ceaſe to do Evil, and learn to do well; to love God, and keep his Commandments; to follow the Works of our Calling with Induſtry, and to provide for our Families with Honeſty; to truſt in God's good Providence, and to be content with our Condition; to preſerve Unity in the Church, and Peace and good Order in the State; to ſtudy to be quiet, to do our own Buſineſs, and the Duty of the Capacity and Relations, we ſtand in; to abhor Uncleanneſs, and Evil-ſpeaking, and all Uncharitableneſs; this is true Preparation, and he that thus communicates, though at a Minute's Warning, will never be rejected by God, nor deſerve to be condemned by Men.

Actual Preparation.

4. THIS we may call an habitual Preparation: But, becauſe there is a Decency to be obſerved, and, on ſolemn Occaſions more eſpecially, the Wedding-Garment is to be put on, before we reſort to this Feaſt; therefore is an actual Preparation peculiar to this Ordinance (which is the higheſt Act of Chriſtian Worſhip, and a Complication of the moſt ſpiritual Performances, ordinarily incumbent on all Communicants.

Before,

[q] Before we addreſs ourſelves then to a Participation of this venerable Myſtery, we ſhould conſider, whither it is that we are going, and what the Nature and Importance of that Action is, we are ſetting ourſelves about: That we are approaching to our Lord's Table (as the [r] Apoſtle calls it) to come into his more immediate Preſence, to be entertained by him with the kindeſt Welcome, receive the fulleſt Teſtimonies of his Mercy, and the ſureſt Pledges of his Love: That we are going to behold him offering up himſelf a Sacrifice to God, therein undergoing the ſoreſt Pains, and the fouleſt Diſgrace for our Salvation; and that therefore we ought to bring with us Diſpoſitions of Mind ſuitable to ſuch an Intercourſe with our gracious Lord: And, in Preparation hereunto, we ſhould, with our utmoſt Power, endeavour to cleanſe our Souls from all Impurity of Thought and Deſire, from all Iniquity and Perverſeneſs, from all Malice, Envy, Hatred, and ſuch evil Diſpoſitions, as are offenſive to God's all-ſeeing Eye, and unbecoming his moſt glorious Preſence. On the contrary, we ſhould dreſs our Souls with all thoſe comely Ornaments of Grace, with Purity, Humility, Meekneſs, and Charity, which will render us acceptable to him: We ſhould compoſe our Mind into a Frame of Reverence, and awful Regard to the Majeſty of God; into a calm and ſerene Diſpoſition of Heart, apt to expreſs all Reſpect due to his Preſence, fit to admit the gracious Illapſes of his bleſſed Spirit, and ſuſceptive of all ſuch holy and heavenly Affections, as are ſuitable to ſuch a Communion. And therefore we ſhould abandon, not only all vicious Inclinations and evil Purpoſes, but even all worldly Cares, Deſires, and Paſſions, which may diſtract or diſcompoſe us, may cauſe us to behave indecently or unworthily before God, and ſo bereave us of his intended Benefits. Nor ſhould we forget, according to the Apoſtle's Advice, to try and examine ourſelves; conſidering our paſt Actions, and preſent Inclinations, and accordingly by ſerious Meditation, and fervent Prayer to God, for his gracious Aſſiſtance therein, working our Souls into an hearty Remorſe for our former Miſcarriages, and a ſincere Reſolution to amend for the future.

At,

THESE are the Duties which are previous to our receiving this holy Sacrament; and thoſe, which are proper to accompany it, are —— An awful Senſe of Mind, anſwerable to the Greatneſs and Holineſs of him, with whom we converſe, and to the

[p] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels. Vol. II. [q] Barrow, on the Sacraments. [r] 1 Cor. x. 21.

the Sacredneſs of thoſe Myſteries, which are exhibited to us; an hearty Contrition for our Sins, which expoſed our Saviour to ſuch Pains and Agonies, as are therein remembered, and a firm Reſolution of forſaking them intirely, as injurious and diſpleaſing to him: A fervent Love to our dear Redeemer for his wonderful Goodneſs and Charity to us; a ſincere Thankfulneſs for his inconceivably great Expreſſions of Kindneſs; the deepeſt Humility upon the Senſe of our Unworthineſs to receive ſuch Teſtimonies of his Grace and Favour; a pious Joy, in Conſideration of the excellent Fruits accruing to us from his Performances; a comfortable Hope of obtaining the Benefits of his Paſſion, by the Aſſiſtance of his Grace; and, laſtly, an enlarged Good-will and Charity to all our Brethren, as being, by his Appointment, made Heirs of the ſame Hope, Sons of the ſame Family, Members of the ſame Body, and not only waſhed in the ſame Baptiſm, but fed at the ſame Table with ourſelves.

And after Sacrament.

THESE are the Duties which ſhould attend our Participation in this holy Sacrament; and thoſe, which are properly ſubſequent to it, are——An Increaſe of all thoſe pious Inclinations and Affections, which were then kindled at the Altar of the Lord; a Cheriſhing thoſe Influences of Grace, which deſcended upon our Hearts in this Communion; a watchful Care and Endeavour in our Lives to approve ourſelves, in ſome Meaſure, worthy of the great Honour and Favour of being admitted to ſo near an Approach to God; a Purſuance of the Reſolutions, and a Performance of the Vows and Engagements, which we made on that ſolemn Occaſion; and, finally, a fixed and permanent Conſideration, that, by the Breach of ſuch Reſolutions, and the Violation of ſuch Engagements, our Sins will be aggravated, and our Guilt increaſed; and that, by the Relapſe of our Souls into ſo grievous a Diſtemper, our ſpiritual Strength will be ſadly impaired, and, conſequently, our Comforts abated, ſhaken, and our eternal State very much endangered.

Frequent Receiving.

THESE are moſt of the Duties ſubſequent to our Participation of the Lord's-Supper; only there is one more, which, upon this Occaſion, muſt not be forgot, and that is, our gladly embracing every Opportunity, which preſents itſelf, of communicating herein; always remembering, that, [s] beſides the Obligation of the Divine Precept and Command, there is no Office of Religion, ſo immediately deſigned for our ſpiritual Strength and Refreſhment, as our partaking of this Bread of Life, and Wine of elect Souls, which nouriſh and exhilarate the inward Man, and convey into us a Principle of living well, and of living for ever; that, without it, we can hardly deſerve the Character of Chriſtians, and run a great Danger of being excluded from what it finally repreſents, the everlaſting Feſtival of the Faithful, and the Marriage-Supper of the Lamb of God.

An Exhortation to it.

To conclude then with a Word or two of Exhortation. [t] The Obligation, which Chriſt hath laid upon us, is ſo vaſtly great, not only beyond all Requital, but beyond all Expreſſion, that, if he had commanded us ſome very grievous Thing, we ought, with all the Readineſs and Chearfulneſs in the World, to have done it; how much more, when he hath impoſed upon us ſo eaſy a Commandment, a Thing of no Burthen, but of immenſe Benefit? When he hath only ſaid to us, Eat, O Friends, and drink, O Beloved? When he only invites us to his Table, to the beſt and moſt delicious Feaſt, that we can partake of on this Side Heaven? [u] Since therefore this holy Ordinance is not only the Remembrance of our Lord's Death, but alſo the ſure Pledge of his Love; how barbarous are we to our own Souls, in denying them the beſt and moſt laſting Comfort, of frequently rejoicing in thoſe raviſhing Hopes and Aſſurances, which are here exhibited and confirmed? If not for Chriſt's Sake, then (which yet were moſt unthankful and baſe) at leaſt for our own, (which not to do were moſt inhuman and ſtupid) let us beware of affronting ſo good a Lord, by refuſing his Invitations to ſo much Mercy, and of drawing upon ourſelves the Puniſhment of thoſe unworthy Wretches in the Goſpel, who [x] went one to his Farm, and another to his Merchandize, one to the Pleaſures, and another to the Buſineſs of Life, till at laſt they were finally excluded all from the Marriage-Feaſt of the great King.

[s] Stanhope's Sermons. [t] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. I. [u] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [x] Vid. Matth. xxii. 5. and Luke xiv. 18.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

Of CHRIST's Humiliation.

The Nature of Chriſt's Humiliation.

IN treating of the Nature of the Second Covenant, and therein of its Mediation by the Man Chriſt Jeſus, we were led to conſider him (in the Execution of that Office) under the different Capacities of Prophet, Prieſt, and King: But come now to enquire into what relates to his perſonal Character, and Tranſactions, in the two oppoſite States of his Humiliation, and Exaltation here on Earth. But, before we apply to that, it will be neceſſary, for the better underſtanding what is to follow, to premiſe, [a] 1. That, in this Humiliation of Chriſt, his Divine Nature could not poſſibly ſuffer any Change or Diminution, either in its Eſſence, or Attributes, nor he loſe any Part, either of that internal Glory and Greatneſs, which reſult from the Dignity of his Nature, or that of external Glory and Honour, which are ſubſequent upon his Works of Creation, Conſervation, and Providence. For beſides the Arguments, that might be drawn from the Simplicity of the Divine Nature, the Scriptures have given us ſuch an Idea of God, when they tell us, that [b] the Heavens ſhall periſh, yet he ſhall endure; though they ſhall wax old, as does a Garment, yet he, to all Eternity, ſhall be the ſame; as quite excludes all Suſpicion of Mutability. When therefore they declare, [c] that Chriſt Jeſus, being in the Form of God, and equal with God, made himſelf of no Reputation, and took upon him the Form of a Servant; and being found in the Faſhion of a Man, humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto Death; the Meaning muſt be, not that he, in his Divine Nature, ſuffered any Manner of Abaſement; but that, being minded to manifeſt himſelf to Mankind, he put on the Veil of our Fleſh, liable, as it was, to Frailties and Infirmities, to Pains and Sorrows, and Death itſelf. So that the Seat, or Subject of Inherence (as ſome term it) of theſe Miſeries and Infirmities, wherein Chriſt's Humiliation conſiſted, was only his human Nature, though the Subject of Denomination, to which theſe Sorrows and Frailties may be imputed, is his whole Perſon, as he is both God and Man: Upon which Account (by a Communication of Idioms) we may apply that to his Divine, which, in Strictneſs of Speech, belongs only to his Human Nature, and with Propriety enough ſay, that the Son of God (taking in the whole Complex of his Perſon) ſhed his Blood, and the eternal Word underwent many Indignities here on Earth; though we cannot, with any Poſſibility of Truth, affirm, that God, as God, could any Way be liable to ſuch-like Sufferings.

And Exaltation.

2. AND, in like Manner, we may obſerve, that [d] the Glory, or Exaltation of Chriſt, could not poſſibly conſiſt in any real Augmentation of Dignity or Excellence, or any advantageous Change to his Divine Nature, which, being infinite, and immutable, can admit of no Increaſe or Diminution; but only in its ſhedding a more abundant Influence upon his Humanity, to which it was conjoined, and in making a more bright and viſible Diſplay of the Rays of its Excellencies and Perfections, than it had done before; that, in this Exaltation, I ſay, the Glory of his Divine Perſon lay not in a real Acquiſition of Honour and Dignity, but merely in this —— That the Cloud of the Meanneſs, of the Infirmities and Sufferings, under which he choſe to appear, being now wholly diſperſed, the native Glory and Brightneſs of his Perſon, like the Sun from behind a Cloud, broke forth in its former Luſtre; that the Glory of his Human Nature lay not in its Converſion into, or intimate Union with his Divinity, (ſince the one was impoſſible, and the other was done at the Moment of his Incarnation) but in its being freed from Infirmities and Sufferings; its entering upon an immortal and incorruptible State, a new, ſpiritual, celeſtial and eternal Life; and participating in ſuch Divine Worſhip and Honours, as the Son of God (to whom it was ſo nearly allied) had an undoubted Right to receive.

3. THE

[a] Les Oeuvres poſthumes de M. Claude, Tom. III. 6, &c. [b] Pſal. cii. 26, &c. [c] Phil. ii. [d] Claude, ibid.

3. THE Humiliation of the Son of God, indeed, may, at firſt Sight, appear to be a Thing not ſo becoming his Perſon, nor ſo conſiſtent with his Honour; yet, if we conſider the great Ends, for which he humbled himſelf, and the bleſſed Effects, which his Pains and Sufferings produced, we ſhall be conſtrained to acknowledge, that the Afflictions and Hardſhips, which he underwent, tended to his own Honour and Renown, as well as our Comfort and Felicity. For by theſe Sufferings it was, [e] that he opened unto us an Entrance into Paradiſe, and merited for us a Reſurrection and eternal Life; by theſe, that he repaired the Honour and Glory of the Divine Juſtice, which before was violated by the Sins of Mankind; that he republiſhed the eternal Laws of Righteouſneſs, which are grown obſolete and quite forgot; reſtored Virtue and Holineſs to the Luſtre and Reputation they had long loſt in the World; diſſipated and deſtroyed Superſtition, Error, Idolatry, Corruption, and all that wild Confuſion, which the Fraud and Malice of the Devil had introduced, and, in the Room thereof, introduced Truth, Peace, Joy, Comfort, and Hope, and re-eſtabliſh'd them in Mens Hearts. Upon theſe Accounts, the Sufferings of Chriſt are ſo far from being inglorious to him, that they ſupply Matter for his eternal Praiſe; and are the Tenor of the Song, in the Service of the Church, both militant and triumphant; for [f] worthy is the Lamb, that was ſlain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wiſdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Bleſſing. Theſe Things being premiſed, we come now to conſider the perſonal Character and Tranſactions of Chriſt, in the State of his Humiliation.

His Humiliation not inglorious.

I. THAT our bleſſed Lord is really and eſſentially a Divine Perſon, might be argued and inferred (had we not in ſome Meaſure done this [g] already) from ſuch Attributes as belong only to God; ſuch Worſhip, as is due only to God; ſuch Acts as can be done by none but God; and ſuch Titles and Appellations, as can agree with none but God, every-where meeting us in the Scriptures. That he is truly Man, as well as God, will appear, not only from [h] the Promiſes, Propheſies, and Predictions concerning him in the Old Teſtament, but from ſeveral remarkable Teſtimonies in the New. To this Purpoſe, we are informed, that, [i] when the Fulneſs of Time was come, God ſent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law, to redeem them, that were under the Law; for [k] he took not on him the Nature of Angels, but he took on him the Seed of Abraham; upon which Account, we find the Title of the Son of Man ſo frequently, ſo emphatically given him in the Evangeliſts. In ſhort, the Conception and Birth, the Life and Death of our bleſſed Saviour, ſo largely deſcribed and inſiſted on by the Penmen of the Goſpels, do abundantly manifeſt, that, in the Subſtance of his Body, he was truly Man, and not merely the Shape and Shadow of Humanity, as ſome [l] old Hereticks imagined.

Of the Perſon of Chriſt.

His Body.

[m] FORASMUCH then as the Children are Partakers of Fleſh and Blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took Part of the ſame, that, through Death, he might deſtroy him, that had the Power of Death, i. e. the Devil, and deliver them, who, through Fear of Death, were, all their Life-time, ſubject unto Bondage: And certainly, if the Son of God vouchſafed to aſſume the Frailty of our Fleſh, he would not omit the nobler Part, our Soul, without which he could not be a perfect Man. Wiſdom, we know, belongeth not to the Fleſh, nor can the Knowledge of God, which all allow to be infinite, admit of Increaſe; and therefore he [n] whoſe Knowledge did improve together with his Years, muſt have a Subject proper for it, which could be no other than an human Soul. This was the Seat of his finite Underſtanding, and reſigned Will, diſtinct, we perceive, from that of his Father, and conſequently, that of his Divine Nature, as appears by that known Submiſſion, [o] not my Will, but thine be done: This was the Subject of thoſe Paſſions and Affections, which manifeſtly appeared in him, when, before his Sufferings, he ſaid, [p] My Soul is exceeding ſorrowful,

His human Soul.

[e] Les Ouvres poſthumes de M. Claude, Tom. III. [f] Rev. v. 12. [g] Page 118.
[h] Vid. Gen. iii. 15. Ibid. xii. 3. Deut. xviii. 18. Iſa. vii. 14. Ibid. ix. 6, &c. [i] Gal. iv. 4, 5.
[k] Heb. ii. 16. [l] Theſe were the Valentinians, who held, that Chriſt's Body was framed in Heaven, and paſſed through the Virgin Mary, as Water does through a Pipe; which Notion was likewiſe eſpouſed by Marcian: For he, as Athanaſius aſſures us, was of Opinion, that God came down from Heaven, and dwelt, or ſojourned in the Virgin, without participating of her Subſtance, being incapable to receive any Thing from the Nature of Man, that was fallen under Sin, and ſubjected to the Ruler of Wickedneſs. Beſides theſe, there was another Sect, called Apelleans, from Apelles, a Scholar of Marcian's, who own'd indeed, that Chriſt had a real and material Body, but denied it to be formed in the Virgin's Womb, or to have participated of any Part of her Subſtance: For they ſuppoſed, that when our Saviour came down from Heaven, (as Epiphanius adv. Apel. Hæret. relates it) he framed unto himſelf a Body of the four Elements, or (as Tertullian de carne Chriſti reports it) of the Stars and Subſtance of the ſuperior World, wherein he truly ſuffered and died. King's Critical Hiſtory of the Creed. [m] Heb. ii. 14, 15. [n] Luke ii. 52.
[o] Ibid. xxii. 42. [p] Matth. xxvi. 38.

ful, even unto Death; and this was the Thing, which, before its Departure out of the Body, while he was yet upon the Croſs, he recommended to the Father, [q] Father, into thy Hands I commend my Spirit; and having thus ſaid, he gave up the Ghoſt. So that there is no Queſtion to be made, but that he, who was perfect God, was alſo perfect Man, of a reaſonable Soul, and human Fleſh ſubſiſting; though ſome [r] ancient Hereticks, who allowed of his Aſſumption of human Fleſh, did, nevertheleſs, maintain, that the Word, or his Divinity, ſupplied, in his Body, the Place of an informing Soul.

The Union of the two Natures in Chriſt.

THAT it was highly expedient at leaſt, if not abſolutely neceſſary, for our bleſſed Saviour, as he was deſigned to be the Mediator between God and Man, to partake of the Nature of both, is what we had Occaſion to ſhew in treating of his Mediatorial Office: That both theſe Natures, united in our Saviour, do but conſtitute one Perſon, is evident from his being repreſented in Scripture, not as two, but one Chriſt, and all along ſpoken of and addreſſed to, as one Perſon; and that in this Union (how great ſoever the Myſtery be) there is no Contradiction, or Impoſſibility, may, in ſome Meaſure, be gathered from the Union of the Soul and Body, which, though conſiſting of two different Subſtances, do but conſtitute one Man. How this Union of the two Natures in Chriſt is effected, and wherein it does conſiſt, is the great Queſtion in our Religion, which we can only reſolve by the Negation of any Poſſibility for ſuch Union to conſiſt either in the Converſion, or Confuſion of theſe two Natures. That the Divine Nature ſhould be changed into the human, implies a Repugnancy in the very Notion; and that the human Nature ſhould be converted into the Divine, is abſolutely impoſſible. [s] The Creature can no more be made God, than God, bleſſed for ever, can ceaſe to be God, and become a Creature. To ſuppoſe then, that the human Nature were turned into the Divine, is to deſtroy all Union between the two Natures: For the human Nature, upon this Suppoſition, ceaſing to be, or being, as it were ſwallowed up by the Divine, there would be plainly, in the Perſon of Chriſt, only one Nature, i. e. the Divine, and no other; and to ſuppoſe that the two Natures were blended and mixed together in the Perſon of Chriſt, is, in Effect, to deſtroy them both; ſince Chriſt, upon this Suppoſition, would [t] be ſo far from being both God and Man, that, in Reality, he would be neither God nor Man, but a Perſon, as different from both, as all mixed Bodies are from the Elements, which concur to their Compoſition.

And their Diſtinction.

THOUGH therefore we cannot poſitively account, in what Manner this Union is effected, yet that, after this Union, the two Natures remain entire and diſtinct in their reſpective Properties, may, in ſome Meaſure, be conceived again from the Union of our Souls and Bodies. [u] The Body, it muſt be owned, after its Union with the Soul, does not move, or act, in the ſame Manner, that it would have done in a ſeparate State. The Soul, by which it is now informed, modifies it a thouſand different Ways, and gives it quite another Courſe of Operations; and yet, notwithſtanding this, it preſerves all the Qualities and Affections, that properly belong to a Body; from whence we may ſuppoſe, that the human Nature may ſtill retain all its natural Powers and Properties, though ſo intimately united to the Divine, and acting after ſuch a Manner, in Subordination to it, that they both conſtitute but one individual Perſon.

The two Natures united for ever.

THUS the Unity of the Perſon takes not away the Diſtinction of the Natures, but the Godhead and Manhood retain their own Properties ſeverally; neither does the Diſtinction of Natures hinder the Unity of the Perſon, but one and the ſame Chriſt is perfect God, and perfect Man, and ſo ſhall abide for ever. For though, after the Day of Judgment, when the Number of God's Elect ſhall be completed, Chriſt's mediatorial Office ſhall be at an End; yet the Glory, which he obtained, as the Reward of his meritorious Performances, ſhall never ceaſe. * The Saints, we are told, ſhall inherit an everlaſting Kingdom; and much more then ſhall he, who procured this Exaltation for them, be himſelf for ever poſſeſſed of his Glory; they ſhall come to Sion with a Song, and, in the heavenly Jeruſalem, praiſe and magnify him, that ſitteth [q] Luke xxiii. 46. [r] The moſt remarkable Sects of this Kind were the Arians, and the Apollinarians. Arius taught, Chriſt had nothing of Man, but the Fleſh, with which the Word was joined: But Apollinarius diſtinguiſhed between the Soul and the Mind, the Ψυχὴ and the Νοῦς; and acknowledged, that the Word aſſum'd the Body, and Soul or Ψυχὴ of Man, but not the Mind or Νοῦς; for the Word itſelf, he ſaid, was in the Place of that. This was then the true Difference between the Arian and the Apollinarian Hereſy, as Fœcundus ſtates it, Lib. ix. Apollinariſtæ quidem carnis & animæ naturam, ſine mente, aſſumpſiſſe Deum credunt; Ariani vero, carnis tantummodo. Pearſon on the Creed. [s] Conant's Sermons. [t] Pearſon, ibid. [u] Burnet, on the Articles, and Fiddes's Body, Vol. I. and Barrow, on the Creed. * Burnet and Fiddes, ibid.

ſitteth on the Throne, and the Lamb for ever and ever; and how great ſoever the Illumination of their Minds may be, yet it is not unreaſonable to ſuppoſe, that they will ſtill be more ſenſibly affected with all the proper Motions of Love, Veneration, and Gratitude towards him, from the viſible Appearance of his Human Nature in Union with the Divine, which cannot but ſuggeſt the Thought, that to his great Performances in that Nature, ſupported by the Divine Aid and Benediction, all their preſent Glory and Felicity is to be aſcribed.

The Conception of Chriſt.

II. THIS being ſufficient to be ſpoken in general concerning the great Myſtery of the Hypoſtatical Union of the Divine and Human Natures, in the Perſon of our bleſſed Saviour; we proceed now to the particular Formation of his Human, which, (as the Angel acquainted the bleſſed Virgin) was to be effected in this Manner: [x] The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the Power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee; therefore alſo that holy Thing, which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God: In which Words (agreeable to the uſual Modeſty and great Decency of Scripture-Language) is implied all that Action of the Holy Ghoſt, whereby the Virgin was enabled to become fruitful, and the Place of ordinary Generation, in this Caſe, ſupplied. [y] For that there was no Concurrence of any ordinary Cauſe, not only ſhe herſelf in the preceding Words, but the Angel, by whom ſhe was viſited, teſtifies; when, in order to ſtrengthen her Belief in a Production ſo ſtrange and aſtoniſhing, he declares it the Work of God, with whom, ſhe ought to remember, † that nothing is impoſſible.

Why by the Holy Ghoſt.

Now, when this Action is, in Scripture, repreſented as entirely the Work of God, and yet attributed to the Holy Ghoſt in particular, we are not to underſtand it ſo peculiarly his, that the two other Perſons, ſubſiſting in the Godhead, ſhould have no Concern in it; but it is therefore more eſpecially aſſigned to the Holy Ghoſt (tho' common to both Father and Son) becauſe fructifying and ſanctifying are, in the ſacred Stile, generally aſcribed to his Influences. As therefore he began the firſt Creation, by moving, or brooding (as it were) upon the Face of the Waters; ſo did he here begin the new Creation, by conveying a Principle and Power of Fruitfulneſs into a Perſon, otherwiſe incapable of it: And as it was requiſite, that the Saviour and Sanctifier of the World ſhould himſelf be [z] holy and undefiled, without Blemiſh, and without Spot; hence grew an abſolute Neceſſity, that he ſhould ſpring from the immediate Operation of that Spirit, who is the Fountain of all Holineſs and Purity; and, laſtly, as it was requiſite, that, to enable him to perform the Work of the World's Redemption, the Divine and Human Nature ſhould be conjoined in his Perſon; hence grew a Neceſſity again for the Intervention of an Agent, [a] to whom we find, that all the great and magnificent Things of God, thoſe ſignal Works of Providence, the Revelation of Divine Truth, the Prediction of future Events, the Performance of Miracles, the Renovation of Mens Minds, and the Reformation of their Manners, are, in a peculiar Manner, aſcribed.

Chriſt's Human Nature taken from his Mother.

BUT though, to accompliſh the Conjunction of the Divine and Human Nature in the Perſon of our Saviour Chriſt, to ſupply the Defect of a plaſtick Power in the Subſtance of the Virgin, to rectify the corporeal Matter, which he took from her, and to clear it from that Stain and Corruption, which in an ordinary Propagation, adheres to Human Nature, the Intervention and Agency of the Spirit of God was required, in this miraculous Conception; yet, ſince the holy Scripture, with great Significance calls him, [b] the Seed of a Woman, the Son of God, made of a Woman, and the like, (none of theſe Titles could, in any Senſe, have been proper, had this Virgin contributed nothing more, upon this Occaſion, but carrying this Burthen, and bringing into the World a Body thus miraculouſly framed) what we are farther to believe concerning his Conception is this — That Chriſt's Human Nature was entirely taken from his Mother; that, by a wonderful Efficacy of Almighty Power, his Body was formed, not only in her, but of her; that thus he truly became (what otherwiſe he could not have been) [c] the Seed of Abraham and David, according to the Fleſh; and that Mary, conſequently, upon all Accounts, was ſtrictly and literally his Mother; nay, upon ſome Accounts, more ſtrictly ſo, than any other Woman can be the Mother of her Child; ſince, in the uſual Courſe of Nature, Children partake of the Subſtance of both Parents, whereas the Whole of Chriſt's human Subſtance was derived from her alone.

THOUGH

[x] Luke i. 34, 35. [y] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. I. † Luke i. 37. [z] 2 Cor. v. 21. Heb. vii. 26, 27. i. 1. Rom. i. 3. [a] Barrow, on the Creed. [b] Gen. iii. 18. Gal. iv. 4. [c] Matth.

Why.

THOUGH therefore [d] we may eaſily conceive, that God could immediately have created a Nature, in Kind and Properties, like ours, and ſo aſſumed it to his Divinity; yet this would not have ſo fitly ſerved the Deſign of our Redemption, ſince to effect that, in the moſt congruous Way, not only a Reſemblance in Nature, but a Proximity in Blood was required; that the Dignity, we had loſt by our Rebellion, might be recovered by the ſatisfactory Merits of One, who was of our own Race and Kindred; and that the Devil, who, by the Weakneſs of a Woman, had ſeduced Man from his Duty to God, by the Strength and faithful Obedience of One proceeding from a Woman, might be defeated and debaſed: But then, to diſtinguiſh the Birth of this Saviour of the World from the ordinary Births of other Men, it was expedient likewiſe (according [e] to the Propheſies, which had gone before concerning him) that he ſhould be born of a Virgin, to give us a full Conviction of his Divine Original.

Whether, after his Birth, ſhe ſtill continued a Virgin.

THAT the Mother of Jeſus was a Virgin, at the Time of her Conception, neither is, nor can be queſtioned by thoſe, who believe the Scriptures; and that ſhe ſhould continue ſo, until ſhe had brought forth her Firſt-born Son, is pious to believe, (even though we had not the Teſtimony of the Scriptures to this Purpoſe) in Honour both to the Manner of his Conception, and the Sacredneſs of his Perſon. Whether, after the Birth of Chriſt, this holy Mother continued ſtill in a perfect State of Virginity, has been a Queſtion under ſome Debate among learned Men. [f] The peculiar Honour and Privilege vouchſafed that Mother, the Regard and Deference ſhe always ſhewed to her Son, the Awefulneſs of the Power of the Higheſt, which overſhadowed her, and the preſumed Goodneſs and Piety of Joſeph, who eſpouſed her, made the Perſuaſion pretty general, that, even after the Birth of our Saviour, ſhe ſtill continued in a perpetual State of Virginity. As it is ſufficient however to the Myſtery of the Incarnation, that at the Time, when our Lord was conceived and born, his Mother was a Virgin, there can be no Impiety in maintaining the contrary Opinion; if ſo be, that the natural and unconſtrained Interpretation of Scripture do but warrant it.

Some Reaſons againſt it.

WHEN therefore we find the Royal Prophet bringing in the Meſſias, in a Pſalm, which has a manifeſt Reference to him, complaining in this Manner; [g] I am become a Stranger to my Bretbren, and an Alien unto my Mother's Children; [h] when, purſuant to this Propheſy, we find [i] St Matthew plainly preparing the Way for our Belief of other Children by the bleſſed Virgin, by intimating to us, that Joſeph was her Huſband, and ſhe his Wife, and that they cohabited as ſuch, all along after the Birth of our Saviour; when, to confirm this Intimation, we find [k] the Evangelical Hiſtory telling us, that our Lord had Brethren and Siſters, and theſe not a few; that his Brethren were four, James, and Joſes, and Simon, and Judas, and his Siſters perhaps as many; when we perceive, that theſe Brethren of Chriſt were always ſo called by the Evangeliſts, and ſo reputed by the Jews; nay, that one of them is expreſſly ſo ſtiled [l] by St Paul, is frequently made mention of [m] in the Apoſtolick Conſtitutions, and [n] by Joſephus, the famous Jewiſh Hiſtorian, without the leaſt Sign of any other Senſe imaginable; and laſtly, when we conſider, that there is not the leaſt Intimation of Joſeph's being ever married before, and having other Children, who might improperly be called the Brethren of Jeſus; and that, though the bleſſed Virgin had Nephews, yet were they never called the Brethren of Chriſt in the whole New Teſtament: When theſe Conſiderations are put together, I ſay, they will make it more than probable, that the Mother of our Lord did not continue a perpetual Virgin, notwithſtanding it be granted, that, in the Jewiſh Language, it was no unuſual Thing to call any collateral Kindred, ſuch as Couſins, or Couſins-German, by the Name of Brothers. But this we advance, only as the eaſieſt Acceptation of ſome Texts of Scripture, which make mention of our Saviour's Family, without any Deſign to oppoſe the contrary Opinion, [o] which is ſupported by a great Body of learned Men;

[d] Barrow, on the Creed. [e] Iſa. vii. 14. Jer. xxxi. 22. [f] Pearſon, on the Creed. [g] Pſal. lxix. 8. [h] Whiſton's Sermons and Eſſays. [i] Matth. i. 18. [k] Ibid. xiii. 55, 56. Mark iii. 31. Luke viii. 19. [l] Gal. i. 19. [m] Conſtit. Apoſt. Lib. VI. c. lv. Lib. VI. c. xii, &c. [n] Antiq. Lib. XX. c. 8.

[o] A very learned Man of our Church has produced one of the beſt Arguments, I have met with, for the perpetual Virginity of the bleſſed Mother. Spanhemius, ſays he, in his Dubia Evangelica, concludes againſt the Opinion of Helvidius, who denied this Perpetuity, merely upon the Account of Decency and Congruity, as judging it more ſuitable and agreeable to that honourable Eſteem, we ought to have of our bleſſed Saviour's Mother, to hold, that, after his Birth, ſhe remained a perpetual Virgin. But I add, ſays he, to aſſert ſo, ſeems not only decent, but of as abſolute Neceſſity, as that Jeſus Chriſt, the Meſſias, was to be of Right King of the Jews. For, upon Suppoſition, that Joſeph had any Children, either by Mary, or any other Wife, they, as coming from the elder Line of Abiud by Joſeph, their Father, muſt have claimed the Inheritance of the Kingdom in his Right, and not Jeſus, the Men; but ought not however to be made an Article of Divine Faith, ſince there is no viſible Foundation for it in Divine Revelation.

THERE are other Queſtions which fall under this Head, ſuch "as [p], Whether "our bleſſed Saviour, while he was in his Mother's Womb, was ſubject to the "ſame Infirmities with other Infants; [q] and whether his Mother felt any Pain and "Uneaſineſs, and was liable to the Diſorders, which attend other Women in the like "Circumſtances, &c." but inſtead of treating on theſe, and ſuch-like Queſtions, which afford Matter for vain Curioſity, rather than anſwer any Purpoſe of Religion and Morality, we ſhall rather chuſe to refer our Reader to what is ſaid under the Page concerning theſe Subjects; and ſo proceed,

III. To the Conſideration of our Saviour's Nativity; and herein, 1. of the Time, when; 2. the Place, where; 3. the Family, from which our Saviour was born; and ſo make ſome proper Obſervations from this Part of his Hiſtory. The Time of Chriſt's Birth.

1. NOW there are three Periods more eſpecially, when it was foretold by the Prophets, that the Saviour of the World ſhould be born: The firſt Period was to happen, upon the Accompliſhment of that Propheſy of Jacob, [r] the Scepter ſhall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his Feet, until Shiloh come, i. e. (as [s] we explained the Text before) the Jews, who were ſo denominated from Judah, ſhall not ceaſe to be a political Body, and to exerciſe a regal, or, at leaſt, a judicial Power and Authority, till the Time that the Meſſiah (for ſo the Word Shiloh was always interpreted) ſhall appear. For the Scepter or Rod does not only denote Royal Power, but any judicial, or legiſlative Authority, under what Form of Government ſoever; and this the Jews did certainly retain, even during all the Breaches, which were made in their Government, [t] until the Time of our Saviour's Coming. The Expiration of the [u] ſeventy Weeks, mentioned by the Prophet Daniel, is another Note of Time, when the Meſſiah ſhould appear. * For here, by Weeks underſtanding (as the Jews uſed ſometimes to compute) Weeks of Years, the whole Number of When the Prophecies were fulfilled.

the Son of Mary, who deſcended from Rheſa, the younger Son of Zorobabel, and ſo could not legally inherit, but upon Default of Iſſue from Joſeph, the only remaining Heir of the Elder. For this being the Law of the Jews, which, in this Caſe, would have debarred Jeſus from a Title to their Kingdom, and our Saviour, coming to fulfil the Law in every Part and Tittle of it, would never have owned himſelf King of the Jews, contrary to the expreſs Injunctions of it, had Joſeph had any Heirs of his own, to ſucceed to the Title: Whereupon he concludes, that Joſeph had no Children after Chriſt's Birth; and that Mary, conſequently, was a perpetual Virgin. South's Sermons, Vol. III. But this deſtroys the Solution of another great Man, who, making Mary, the Mother of Jeſus and St John, to be the ſame Perſon with the Mother of James and Joſes, in St Matthew and St Mark, ſuppoſes Joſeph to have had theſe by a former Venter, and Mary to be their Step-mother. See Whitby, on Matth. xiii. 55.

[p] "En Effet, le Fil de Dieu, ayant voulu ſe faire Chair, a revetu toutes nos infirmites, entre leſquelles, celles de "l'enfance, & des prémiers Mois aprés la Conception, doivent être conteſtées. Il ne faut donc pas douter, que "Marie, ſa mere, n'ait été expoſée à toutes les incommoditez des Groſſeſſes ordinaires, & que le divin Enfant, qu'elle "portoit dans ſon ſein, n'eut ſa part de ces Incommoditez." M. Claude, de Jeſus Chriſt, Liv. V. c. ix.

[q] "Ab hac ſententiâ excipitur virgo, Mater Dei: Quæ, quia ſine peccati colluvione, & ſine virilis admixtionis "detrimento, Chriſtum ſuſcepit, ſine dolore genuit, & ſine integritatis violatione, pudore virginitatis integro, per"manſit." Auguſt. in Johann. "Ceux de l'Egliſe Romaine s'imaginent, que, quand Jeſus Chriſt eſt né, il ne "s'eſt fait aucune Ouverture dans le Corps de la Vierge, mais qu'il eſt né par, ce qu'on appelle, la Pénetration des "dimenſions. Mais tout cela ſe dit ſans néceſſité, & ſans aucune Témoignage de l'Ecriture. ——— L'opinion con"ſtante des anciens Peres a été, que Jeſus Chriſt eſt ſorti du Corps de la Vierge avec Ouverture de Matrice, & l'E"criture même le dit en termes formels; car elle applique à Jeſus Chriſt cette parole de la Loy, tout mâle, ouvrant la "Matrice, ſera appellé ſaint au Seigneur: Surquoy pluſieurs Peres ont fait cette Rémarque, que Jeſus Chriſt eſt le ſeul, "à qui proprement cette parole appartienne, puiſque lui ſeul, entre tous les Enfans, a fait l'Ouverture de la Matrice "de ſa mere. Les adverſaires diſent au contraire, que ſi cela étoit vray, Marie n'auroit pas demeuré Vierge dans "l'Enfantement. Mais à cela la je répons, que l'Idee, qu'ils ſe forment de la Virginité, eſt abſurde. Car l'Ouver"ture de la Matrice peut arriver par pluſieurs accidens, comme par Maladie, ſans pourtant que la Virginité ſoit per"duëe. La Virginité conſiſte à n'avoir eu aucun commerce d'homme; Marie donc a été Vierge avant l'Enfantement, "dans l'Enfantement, & aprés; puiſque ſon Fruit a été conçu dans ſon ſein, par la virtue du Saint Eſprit, ſans l'In"tervention de l'homme." M. Claude, de Jeſus Chriſt, Liv. V. c. ix.

[r] Gen. xlix. 10. [s] See page 351. and Prideaux's Connection, Part II. Lib. IX.

[t] The Scepter, and Law-giver remained among the Jews, till both began to be taken from them by the Romans, on their reducing Judea into the Form of a Roman Province; and then Chriſt, the promiſed Shiloh, began his Coming, as the Meſſiah, by then firſt entering on his Father's Buſineſs, for which he was ſent. And that this actually fell in with the Time of this Charge plainly appears: For Chriſt was then in the twelfth Year of his Age, and the twelfth Year from Chriſt's Birth was that, wherein Coponius entered upon his Government: For Herod lived one Year after the Birth of Chriſt, and, after the Death of Herod, Archelaus reigned ten Years, and, the next Year after, the Romans ſeized Judea, and made it a Province of their Empire. Chriſt therefore firſt appeared in the Temple, as the Meſſiah, at that very Time, when the Scepter and the Law-giver firſt began to depart from Judah; and, ſixty-two Years after that, this Departure was fully completed, in the Deſtruction of the Temple and City of Jeruſalem, and the utter aboliſhing of the whole Jewiſh Policy, and Conſtitution of Government in that Land, which hath, never ſince, either there, or any where elſe, been again revived. Prideaux's Connection, Part II. Vol. II.

[u] Dan. ix. 24, &c. * Prideaux, ibid. Part I. Vol. II.

ſeventy Weeks will contain four hundred and ninety Years; at the Expiration of which Time, the Jews were no more to be the peculiar People of God, nor Jeruſalem his holy City; becauſe then the OEconomy, which he had eſtabliſhed among them, was to ceaſe, the Worſhip which he had appointed at Jeruſalem, was wholly to be aboliſhed, and the Chriſtian Church and Chriſtian Worſhip to ſucceed in its Stead. 3. Another Note of Time, when the Meſſiah, according to the Prophet Haggai, was to be born, was during the ſtanding of the ſecond Temple: For [x] I will ſhake all Nations, ſays God, and the Deſire of all Nations ſhall come, and I will fill this Houſe with Glory; the Glory of this latter Houſe ſhall be greater than the Glory of the former. But how came this latter Temple (which both on Account of its Structure and external Ornaments, as well as the ſpecial Manifeſtations of the Divine Preſence and Power in it, was ſo much inferior) to be accounted more glorious than the former? For no other Reaſon, but becauſe the Angel of the Covenant, the Delight of the Iſraelites, and the Deſire of all Ages (which Characters ſeem plainly to deſcribe the Perfections of our Saviour) was to grace and adorn it with his Preſence.

WHEN therefore theſe Predictions were going to be fulfilled, the ſecond Temple was yet ſtanding; Daniel's ſeventy Weeks were expiring; and the Scepter was upon the Point of departing from Judah; then was the Fulneſs of Time, or the ſtated and prefixed Time for Chriſt to appear. And, from the Strength of theſe Propheſies, very probably it was, that, about the Time of our Saviour's Birth, there was ſo ſtrong a Tradition (as [y] ſeveral Hiſtorians tell us) through all the Eaſt, that a great and mighty Prince was then to ariſe out of the Jewiſh Nation. When Mens Neceſſities However this be, 'tis certain, that the Neceſſities of Mankind, and the particular Temper and Diſpoſition of the Age, wherein Chriſt was born, ſeemed then to call for him, when he came. For (not to mention the Superſtition and Idolatry of the Gentile World) even in Judea, the Seat of the once beloved People of God, all Licentiouſneſs, Lewdneſs, and Villainy prevailed. [z] The Hypocriſy of the Phariſees, the Subtlety of the Herodians, the Hereſies of the Sadducees, and the impertinent Traditions of the Doctors of the Law, had quite ſpoiled and defaced all Religion and Morality; [a] ſo that the greateſt Jews were Atheiſts and Epicureans; they both profeſſed, and lived like Perſons of that Character; and the meaner Sort were ſunk into Ignorance and Brutality. When therefore the World was thus out of Order, and, every Day, like to be worſe, God ſent forth his Son, to bleſs us with greater Diſcoveries of his Will, to give us Rules of exact Holineſs, to recommend Religion and Virtue by his own Example, and ſo [b] to call us out of Darkneſs into his marvellous Light.

And the Temper of the Age required it. BUT what might induce God, more eſpecially, to pitch upon this Point of Time, for the Manifeſtation of his Son, was the particular Diſpoſition of that Age; when, the temporal Power of the Jews being broken by the Romans, they were unable to make that vigorous and effectual Oppoſition to Chriſt, and his Religion, which they otherwiſe would have done; when a great Part of the Earth being under one Government, and a Communication kept up between different Countries, did promote and facilitate the Propagation of Chriſt's Goſpel; [c] when the Roman Empire was in its full Glory, and, together with it, Learning and Wit, as well as all the Arts and Sciences flouriſhed; when the World enjoyed a profound Peace, and was at Liberty to examine into the Truth of any Prophet or Profeſſion, that ſet up with high and uncommon Pretenſions. [d] And, as Men at this Time were ſufficiently qualified to diſcover an Impoſture; ſo, conſidering the prevailing Depravity, they muſt be ſuppoſed unwilling to embrace any Truth, which put a Check to all Licentiouſneſs, and reſtrained them from their beloved Luſts. Vice would be ſure to make a ſtrong Defence, and an eager Plea; and nothing would be difficult for it to diſcover, when it had ſo great a Number of ſuch ſubtle and devoted Advocates. It is no ſmall Argument therefore of the Divine Authority of our moſt holy Religion, that the Providence of God ſent the great Author and Publiſher of it into the World, in a Time, the moſt unlikely for an Impoſture to paſs undiſcovered, and therefore the moſt ſeaſonable for Truth to manifeſt itſelf; ſince that muſt needs be true, which neither Learning, [x] Haggai ii. 7, 9. [y] Percrebuerat oriente toto vetus & conſtans opinio, eſſe in Fatis, ut, eo tempore, Judææ profecti rerum potirentur. Sueton. de vitâ Veſpaſiani. Pluribus perſuaſio inerat, antiquis ſacerdotum literis contineri, eo ipſo tempore fore, ut valeſceret Oriens, profectique Judææ rerum potirentur, Cornel. Tacit. Hiſt. L. V. which agrees very well with what Joſephus tells us of a current Propheſy, that one of their own Country ſhould, at that Time, have Dominion over the World. And this, as he tells us, was one Means of exciting the Jews, to make War with the Romans. De Bello Judaic. L. VII. c. xii. [z] Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. III. [a] Edwards's Survey, Vol. I. [b] 1 Pet. ii. 9. [c] Atterbury's Sermons, Vol. I. [d] Jenkin's Reaſonableneſs of the Chriſtian Religion.

Learning, nor Prejudice, nor Vice, nor Intereſt could impair the Credit of, nor any Way prove to be falſe.

The Place of Chriſt's Birth.

2. ANOTHER conſiderable Circumſtance, relating to our Saviour's Birth, was the Place where it came to paſs, which, according to the expreſs Prediction [f] of the Prophet, was Bethlehem, in the Tribe of Judah: For, thou, Beth-lehem, Ephratah, though thou be little among the Thouſands of Judah, yet out of thee ſhall come forth unto me one, that is to be Ruler in Iſrael, whoſe Goings forth have been of old, from everlaſting. And here we cannot but obſerve, how the ſpecial Providence of God was viſible in the Diſpoſition made for the Birth of Chriſt, in the very Place, where he was born: For Auguſtus having publiſhed a Decree, that all the World ſhould be taxed, i. e. have their Names and Conditions of Life ſet down in Court-Rolls, according to their Families; Joſeph and Mary were obliged to go up, from the Place of their Abode, to this City of David, to be taxed there, as being of the Houſe and Lineage of David; where while they continued, the Days were accompliſhed, that Jeſus ſhould be born. [g] Had it not been in Obedience to this Decree, it is highly improbable, that Joſeph and Mary would have taken ſuch a Journey, in the Condition ſhe was, and at ſo unſeaſonable a Time of the Year: But God, who can effect his Deſigns by by what Inſtruments he pleaſes, ſo ordered the Matter, that, by the Command of an Heathen Prince, they ſhould, at that Time, repair to Bethlehem, to the End that, not only the Accompliſhment of the Propheſies, concerning this Circumſtance, might become more conſpicuous; but that the Birth of our Saviour Chriſt might be recorded in the publick Acts of the Empire, for his Followers to appeal to (as we find Juſtin Martyr and Tertullian expreſſly do) when called upon to make Proof of the Reality of his Incarnation.

Highly honoured hereby.

IT is deſervedly counted a great Honour to any Place, that famous and excellent Perſons have been born in it: [h] For this Reaſon, Cities and Nations have, in all Ages, been wont to ſtrive and contend with one another, to draw and appropriate to themſelves the Glory of having given Birth to ſuch and ſuch eminent Perſons. Nor is this merely a vain Humour of the World, but what the holy Scriptures repreſent as a great Bleſſing to a Place, when Men of Renown and beneficial Qualities happen to receive their firſt Breath in it. For ſo, promiſing his People a Reward upon the Performance of their Duty, [i] they that ſhall be born of thee, ſays God, ſhall build the old waſte Places: Thou ſhalt raiſe up the Foundation of many Generations, the Foundations, that for many Ages, have been demoliſhed and ruined, and thou ſhalt be called, i. e. thou, in thine Offſpring, and in thoſe that ſhall deſcend from thee, ſhall be called the Repairer of the Breach, and the Reſtorer of Paths to dwell in. If then, even in God's Account, it be a great Honour and Privilege to a Place, to have eminent and worthy Perſons born in it; whether we conſider our bleſſed Saviour, in the Dignity of his Perſon, as he is [k] over all, God bleſſed for ever; or in the Greatneſs of his Atchievements, as he is the [l] Vanquiſher of Satan, and of all the Powers of Hell; or in the beneficial Effects of them, [m] as he is the Author of eternal Salvation, to all that obey him; under which of theſe Notions ſoever we conſider our Lord and Saviour, I ſay, we ſhall perceive the Reaſon [n] of the Evangeliſt's Variation from the Words of the Prophet; [o] and thou, Bethlehem, in the Land of Judah, art not the leaſt among the Princes of Judah; for out of thee ſhall come a Governor, that ſhall rule my People Iſrael. For, though it might be little, in Reſpect of its Extent, and the Number of its Inhabitants, in Micah's Senſe; yet, in the Senſe of St Matthew, it was eminently great, by giving Birth to the Saviour of the World, the Son of God. Hither it was, that the holy Angels ſent the Shepherds to declare the [p] good Tidings of great Joy, which they brought from Heaven: And hither it was, that a Star directed the [q] Wiſe Men of the Eaſt, to come and pay their Homage and Adoration to their God incarnate. But who theſe Wiſe Men were, whence they came, and what the Nature of the Star was, by whoſe Conduct they were directed to Chriſt, may perhaps be no improper Digreſſion here to enquire.

I. THE

[e] Mich. v. 2. [f] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [g] Conant's Sermons. [h] Iſa lviii. 12.
[i] Rom. ix. 5. [k] Heb. ii. 14. [l] Ibid. v. 9. [m] The Prophet Micah ſpeaks of Bethlehem, as a little City, whereas St Matthew calls it not the leaſt, i. e. a very conſiderable one among the Princes, or Cities of Judah; and, to reconcile this ſeeming Difference, ſeveral learned Men have affirmed, that the original Word ſignifies indifferently either little or great; and with great Emphaſis (ſays our learned Pocock) ſeems that Word here put, to ſhew, that, as ſome other Things, which are little in Bulk and Quantity, are, in other Regards, of great Eſteem and Value, ſo was it with Bethlehem. Vid. Pocock on Micah v. 2. Whitby on Matth. ii. 6. and Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſiah. [n] Matth. ii. 6. [o] Luke ii. 10, 14. [p] Matth. ii. 2, 9.

The Wiſe Men of the East, who.

1. THE Word which we render Wiſemen, in its Original, ſignifies Magicians; which, however now it may bear not ſo good a Character, was nevertheleſs heretofore a Name of very innocent and honourable Signification. [q] The Studious and Inquiſitive, whoſe Buſineſs and Profeſſion led them to ſearch into Nature, its moſt abſtruſe Cauſes and Effects, and more particularly into the Motions and Diſpoſitions of heavenly Bodies, were diſtinguiſhed by this Title: And, in what Veneration and profound Reſpect they were held, appears from the moſt important Matters, both ſacred and civil, being committed to their Adminiſtration. They were the Counſellors, the Judges, the Prieſts, the Princes, in a Word, the Oracles of the Eaſtern Countries. But, as the beſt Arts are ſometimes perverted to ill Purpoſes, ſo it happened to theſe, that, falling into the Hands of bad Men, who met with People ignorant and credulous, and not only eaſy, but even glad to be deluded, they degenerated into the common Cheats of judiciary Aſtrology; and theſe Abuſes grew ſo general, as, at laſt, to fix an ill Senſe upon the Word, and a Scandal on the Science itſelf.

IT were a Wrong, and great Indignity to the Perſons now before us, not to believe them of the nobler and better Sort; but we can hardly be perſuaded (though ſome would endeavour to do it) that they were Perſons of Royal Dignity; [r] becauſe we cannot reaſonably ſuppoſe, that the Evangeliſt would have omitted a Circumſtance of ſo great Moment, both for their Honour and our Lord's: We can hardly think, but that ſome Account would have been given of their Royal Train and Equipage, and that all Jeruſalem would have been moved, as much to ſee their Entry, as they were to hear their Queſtions: Nor can we imagine, that it would have been decent in Herod to have received them with no more Reſpect, and to have diſmiſſed them without any Attendance to Bethlehem, much leſs to have laid his Commands upon them to return back, and to bring him an Account of the Child, as ſoon as they had found him, had they been Perſons of equal Rank and Dignity with himſelf. Upon theſe Conſiderations, we may not unjuſtly deny them the Title of Kings, tho' we cannot but allow them to be Perſons of great Wiſdom, Learning, and Integrity, [s] of which, ours, and ſome other Tranſlations of the Bible, have been ſo ſenſible, as very prudently to decline the odious Name of Magicians, and to call them the Wiſemen from the Eaſt; but then, what, and where this Eaſt was, is a Queſtion, wherein the Body of Interpreters have very much divided.

The Country whence they came.

2. SOME conceive, that theſe Travellers came out of Perſia, others from Chaldea, others from Arabia Felix, and others again from Meſopotamia. Theſe Countries all lay Eaſtward from Jeruſalem, and the Holy Land; and in each of theſe ſome antecedent Notions of the Meſſiah's Advent may be accounted for. In Chaldea and Perſia, the Captivity of the Jews, and the Book of Daniel, might be a Means to inform them of it: In Arabia, they might learn it from the Nearneſs of their Neighbourhood, and frequent Commerce with the Jews; and in Meſopotamia, beſides thoſe common Helps, they had the Propheſy of their Countryman Balaam, concerning [t] a Star, that ſhould come out of Jacob, to direct them. [u] But as we know of no Record, wherein this Propheſy was preſerved, but the Book of Moſes, which the People of Meſopotamia neither read nor believed; ſo it ſeems evident, that Balaam's Words do not refer us to a Star, that ſhould ariſe, at any Prince's Birth, but to a King, who ſhould be as glorious and ſplendent in his Dominions, as the Stars are in the Firmament. So that, upon the whole, it ſeems moſt likely, that theſe Wiſemen came out of Arabia; not only becauſe the Gifts, which they offered, were the natural Product of that Country, (which was famous likewiſe for its Magi) but becauſe its Neighbourhood to Judea might give them the Advantage of diſcerning the Star, better than any other Nation had.

The Nature of the Star, which led them.

3. * FOR, that this was no common Star, its Motion contrary to the ordinary Courſe of Nature, its performing the Part of a Guide to theſe Travellers, and that probably by Day, as well as by Night, its accommodating itſelf to their Neceſſities, and diſappearing and returning as they could beſt or leaſt be without it; and (what is a Circumſtance, as remarkable as any) its pointing and ſtanding over the very Place, where the young Child was, is a ſufficient Demonſtration: And therefore the moſt probable Opinion is, that what the Evangeliſt calls a Star, [x] was a certain Inminous Body, formed on Purpoſe, and hanging in the Air, in the Manner of a Meteor, [q] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. I. and Whitby's Annotations on Matth. ii. 1, &c. [r] Whitby, ibid. [s] Stanhope, ibid. [t] Numb. xxiv. 17. [u] Whitby, on Matth. ii. [*] Stanhope, ibid. [x] Whitby, ibid.

Meteor, over the Centre of the Land of Judea, to give Notice to the neighbouring Nations, of the Birth of the Prince of Glory; which the Wisemen of Arabia perceiving, and (according to the Tradition then prevailing) taking it to be an Indication of this eminent Person's Birth, came to Jerusalem, and there enquired, [x] Where is he, that is born King of the Jews? For we have seen his Star in the East; or from the Place of our Abode, which is in the East. [y] For it seems the better Expedient, to give them Notice hereof, by setting this Light vertically over the Place, where the King, which it betokened, was born, than by placing it in any Eastern Part of the Heavens, where it might seem to denote something among the Indians, and other distant Nations, rather than among the People of the Jews. But, to return:

4. ANOTHER remarkable Circumstance, in the Birth of our Saviour Christ, is the Family, and Lineage, from whence he descended. To Abraham, indeed, God had promised, in general Terms, that [a] in his Seed should all the Families of the Earth be blessed; but to David he had given a particular Assurance, that [b] of the Fruit of his Body (as the Apostle expresses it) he would raise up Christ, to sit upon his Throne. The Promise, which God made to David in this Behalf, himself introduces in this solemn Manner; [c] I have made a Covenant with my Chosen, I have sworn unto David my Servant; thy Seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy Throne to all Generations: [d] Which Words are too great, to have their Completion in Solomon, or any of the succeeding Kings of Judah, descended from David. And therefore we may observe, that the Psalmist distinguishes between David's Seed, and David's Sons; by his Seed, he means the Messiah; by his Sons, his Descendants and Successors; to the latter, the Promise is conditional; but to the former, absolute: Of his Sons it is said, [e] If his Children forsake my Law, and walk not in my Judgments; if they break my Statutes, and keep not my Commandments, then will I visit their Transgression with a Rod, and their Sin with Scourges; but of his Seed it follows, [f] Nevertheless, my Loving-Kindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my Faithfulness to fail. My Covenant will I not break, nor alter the Thing that is gone out of my Lips: Once I have sworn by my Holiness, that I will not lye unto David; his Seed shall endure for ever, and his Throne, as the Sun before me; it shall be established for ever, as the Moon, and as a faithful Witness in Heaven. And as this was the solemn and unalterable Promise made to David, so we may observe, that the Prophets, which came after him, speak of the Messias in the same Strain, viz. That he should [g] sit upon the Throne of David for ever; that he should be [h] a righteous Branch, raised up to David, and a King that should reign and prosper; and that the People of the Lord [i] should have one Shepherd, and David be their Prince for ever: For which Reason, the Jews, who well understood the Language of the Prophets, taking our Saviour to be the promised Messiah, pray to him thus, [k] Jesus, thou Son of David, have Mercy on us; and making their Acclamations in these Words, [l] Hosanna to the Son of David.

Christ's Descent from David.

IT is not to be doubted then, but that our Saviour Christ was to be of the House and Lineage of David; but then, how to adjust his Pedigree to that Purpose, and to reconcile the two Evangelists, St Matthew and St Luke, who seem to differ so widely in the Genealogies, they have given us of him, is a Matter of some Difficulty; and, in order to resolve it, we may observe, 1. [m] That the Designs of the two Evangelists, in their respective Deductions of our Saviour's Pedigree, are very different; for St Matthew intends only to set down his [n] Political, or Royal Pedigree, by which he had a Right to the Crown of the Jews; but St Luke shews his natural Descent, thro' the several Successions of those, from whom he took Flesh and Blood. And, to this Purpose, we find St Matthew beginning his Reckoning only from Abraham, to whom [o] the first Promise of the Kingdom was made; but St Luke runs his Line up to Adam, the first Head and Fountain of human Nature; which plainly shews, that one deduced only his Title to the Crown, the other the natural Descent of his Humanity.

[x] Matth. ii. 2. [y] Whitby on Matth. ii. 2. [a] Gen. xii. 3.—xxii. 18. [b] Acts ii. 30.
[c] Psal. lxxxix. 3, 4. [d] Kidder's Demonstration. [e] Psal. lxxxix. 30, &c. [f] Ibid. ver. 33, &c.
[g] Isaiah ix. 7. [h] Jer. xxiii. 5, 6. [i] Ezek. xxxvii. 24, 25. [k] Matth. ix. 27.—xv. 22.
—xx. 30. [l] Ibid. xxi. 9. [m] South's Sermons, Vol. III. [n] That Matthew uses the Word (begat) only in a political Sense, is clear from hence,——That he applies it to him, who had no Child, even to Jeconiah, of whom it is expressly said (in Jer. xxii. 30.) that God wrote him Childless: Whereupon, being deposed by the King of Babylon, Zedekiah, his Uncle, was made King; and afterwards, upon the Removal of him likewise for his Rebellion, (there remaining no more of the Line of Solomon) Salathiel, being next of Kin, was declared King of the Jews. Which Salathiel, upon that Account, is said, by St Matthew, to be begotten by Jeconiah, not because naturally he was his Son, but only legally or politically so, as succeeding in the Kingdom, during his Captivity. South, ibid.
[o] Gen. xvii. 6.

2. WE may obſerve farther, that as David had ſeveral Sons by former Wives, ſo, by Bathſheba likewiſe, he had three beſides Solomon, whereof the eldeſt, next to him, was Nathan; and that Chriſt deſcended naturally from David, not by Solomon, but by Nathan. For tho' it be frequently ſaid in Scripture, that the Meſſias ſhould ſpring from David, it is never ſaid, that he ſhould deſcend from Solomon; for which Reaſon St Luke deduces only Nathan's Line, which came into the Poſſeſſion of the Throne, upon Jeconiah's Captivity, and Want of Iſſue, in the Perſon of Salathiel.

3. WE may obſerve again, that the Crown of Judah, being now come into the Line of Nathan, in the Perſon of Salathiel, and, after him, in the great and renowned Zorobabel; foraſmuch as the two Evangeliſts agree, from Jeconiah to Zorobabel, and, after him, divide (each aſcribing to him a different Succeſſor, viz. one of them Abiud, and the other Rheſa); we may rationally ſuppoſe, that theſe two were the Sons of Zorobabel, and that from Abiud, the elder Brother, lineally deſcended Joſeph, according to the Calculation of St Matthew; and from Rheſa, the younger Brother, deſcended Mary, of whom Jeſus was born, according to the Deſcription of St Luke.

4. ONCE more we may obſerve, that it was a Cuſtom of the Jews, not to reckon the Woman by Name in her Pedigree, but to reckon the Huſband in Right of his Wife; for which Reaſon we are not to think it ſtrange, that we find Joſeph twice reckoned; firſt in his own Right, by St Matthew, and then in his Wife Mary's Right, by St Luke: For it is certain, that Mary was properly the Daughter of Eli, and that Joſeph, who is there reckoned after him, is ſo reckoned, not as his natural Son, but as his Son-in-Law, inſtead of his Wife Mary, as the Manner of the Jews was. And accordingly it is remarked, by ſome learned Men, that St Luke does not ſay of Joſeph, that he was the Son of Eli, but only τῦ Ἡλί, that he was of Eli, i. e. related to him, and belonging to his Family, viz. as his Son-in-Law.

NOW, to ſum up the Amount of theſe Obſervations, it is, in ſhort, this —— [p] That the Royal Line of David, by Solomon, being extinct in Jeconiah, the Crown and Kingdom paſſed into the next younger Line of Nathan (another Son of David) in Salathiel and Zorobabel; which Zorobabel having two Sons, Abiud and Rheſa, the Royal Dignity deſcended, of Right, upon the Line of Abiud, of which Joſeph was the laſt; and he marrying the Virgin Mary, who ſprang from the Line of Rheſa, the younger Son of Zorobabel, and (as ſome imagine) having no Iſſue himſelf, his Right paſſed into the Line of Mary, being next of Kin, and, by that Means, upon Jeſus her Son; whereupon he was both naturally the Son of David, and legally the King of the Jews, the latter of which is accounted to us by St Matthew, as the former is by St Luke.

The Evangeliſts right herein.

THIS ſeems to be a pretty clear and manifeſt Deduction of our Saviour's Pedigree from David; but [q] perhaps Interpreters might ſave themſelves the Trouble of giving a Reaſon for ſeveral Difficulties occurring herein, by ſaying, that St Matthew (concerning whom the main Diſpute is) recites it, as he found it in the authentick Copies of the Jews, who doubtleſs had preſerved ſome known and approved Genealogy of their Deſcent from Abraham, the Father of their Nation, in whom they ſo much gloried, and from whoſe Loins they expected the promiſed Meſſiah. That, even in our Saviour's Time, the Jews had Genealogical Tables, wherein they kept an Account of their Families and Tribes, is evident from what Joſephus ſays, [r] That he gave the Succeſſion of his Family, as he found it written in the publick Books; nor need we queſtion, but that the like, or greater Care, was employed to preſerve the Stems of the Royal Family of David. Since then the Jews, who lived in the Time, when the Goſpels were publiſhed, (tho' exactly curious in Things of this Nature, and withal maliciouſly bent againſt Chriſt and Chriſtianity) never once attempted to invalidate the Account, which theſe Evangeliſts give, this ſeems to be a ſufficient Proof, that theſe Genealogies, when firſt they came abroad, were neither thought [s] erroneous, nor inconſiſtent, but agreeable to the publick Records, then in Uſe; and that, if any Difficulties now ariſe in them, they are not to be attributed to any real and intrinſick Cauſe, but accidentally to the Ignorance of Interpreters, for Want of proper Helps, at this Diſtance of Time, to explain them by.

BEFORE

[p] South's Sermons, Vol. III. [q] Whitby on Matth. i. 2. [r] Τὴν μέν ὐν τῦ γένες ἡμῶν διαδοχὴν, ὡς ἐν ταῖς δημοσίαις δέλτοις ἀναγεγραμμένην εὗρον ὕτως παρελήφεμαι, De vitâ ſuâ. [s] The Reader, that is deſirous to ſee a fuller Vindication and Reconciliation of theſe Genealogies, may look into Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſias, Part II. where he treats this Argument at large, from Chap. vi. to Chap. xv. and there, with great Accuracy, ſolves all the Difficulties, which either Jews or Deiſts have alledged.

I

BEFORE we dismiss our Observations concerning the Pedigree and Parentage of our Saviour Christ, it may not be improper to make a more particular Reflection upon the State and Condition of the blessed Virgin, and the peculiar Favours, which God vouchsafed to her, in order to perceive what Honour and Respect is due unto her, upon the Account of her being the Mother of our Lord. [t] How nearly soever she was related to the Royal Tribe, and Family of David, yet we find her in no better Circumstances, than to be espoused to a poor Carpenter; in the Time of her greatest Necessity, forced to make use of a Stable for a Lodging-Room; and, at the Day of her Purification, able to bring no better Offering, than (what [u] the meanest Sort were appointed to do) a Pair of Turtle-Doves, and two young Pigeons. And yet, observe the Wonder of the Divine Condescension! This Woman, so poor, so mean, so destitute, of all the Virgins of Israel, is chosen and elected to be the Instrument of bringing into the World the long desired Messiah; the Instrument of repairing and making Amends for the Loss and Damage, brought upon Mankind, by the Transgression of the first Mother Eve, and a Temple consecrated for the Inhabitation of the Son of God. What then is the Nature and Measure of that Honour and Respect, which we ought to pay her upon this Account? Shall we give her lavish and excessive Epithets, and (as some are wont to do) * call her a Goddess, and ourselves her Suppliants; stile her the Queen of Heaven, and Mother of Divine Grace; the Sovereign Lady of Angels, Arch-Angels, Patriarchs, Prophets, Apostles, &c. the Refuge of Sinners, and Advocate of all Christians? This, we think, is carrying the Compliment too far: We have no Instance of such Attributes given to the blessed Virgin in the holy Scriptures; nor can we help thinking, that this is a Strain, much fitter for some Poetical Heathen Goddess, than for a Christian Saint.

The Condition of the Virgin Mary.

How we are to honour and respect her.

1. What we may not do.

SHALL we give her the Honour of our Prayers, and trust upon her for the Returns either of temporal or spiritual good Things? † The Word of God remonstrates against this; nor can the Piety of the blessed Virgin herself be presumed to bear it. For the more highly she is exalted in Heaven, the more sensible she is of God's Bounty, the more engaged in his Love, and the more zealous of his Honour; and therefore she cannot but the more detest and abhor any Acts of Worship done to her, which may any Way invade the incommunicable Rights of God.

SHALL we give her the Honour of Invocation, and pray to her, to pray for us, as we sometimes desire the Prayers of our Friends here on Earth? Though we have no diminishing Thoughts of her Prevalence this Way, and think that the Charity of her Prayers is more spontaneous and free, than to stay for the Motive of our Sollicitations; yet so long as this Text remains in our Bible, There is one God, and one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Christ Jesus, we can never be perswaded to betake ourselves to the Mediation of the blessed Virgin, nor of any other Saint whatever. For though to desire the Prayers of our Brethren here below is a Duty commanded, because it is an Office in itself necessary for the Improvement of human Charity, Humility, and Edification; yet, in desiring the Prayers of any of the Saints above, we are not secure of any Issue so much as this, viz. Innovating in the Rule of Worship, losing our Pains by not being heard, laying in a Stock for Superstition to grow upon, and alienating our Minds from their immediate Love, and Dependence on God.

SINCE then into these Errors we are forbid to run, what is the proper Measure of Honour and Esteem, that we may safely pay to the Mother of our Lord? [y] We may believe her to have been a most pure, and holy, and virtuous Creature: That her Virgin Mind was clean and spotless, as her Body was chaste and immaculate; and that, upon the Account of both, she was the most fit, of any among her Race or Sex, for the Holy Ghost to overshadow, or for the Son of the Highest to inhabit. When we consider the Firmness of her Faith, the Fervor of her Devotion, and the Excellence of her Humility, we cannot but acknowledge a Grace extraordinary in her, working all these Eminent and Divine Qualities; and accordingly, we always speak of her with Respect, and never mention her Name, without some Preface, or Epithet of Honour. In the daily Service of our Church, we sing, or repeat her excellent Magnificat, and thereby testify our Joy and Complacency in those singular Favours, which God vouchsafed to her; by the Appointment of our Church, we celebrate two Festivals, that of her Annunciation, and that of her Purification, in her Memorial; and without dishonouring God the Father, and his eternal Son, can think

What we may.

[t] Bull's Sermons, Vol. I.
† Young's Sermons, Vol. II.
[u] Lev. xii. 6, &c. compared with Luke ii. 24.
[y] Wake, ibid.
* Wake's Sermons.

think no other Honour fit to be paid her, except it be the Imitation of that Purity and Holineſs, and of that Faith and Humility, which were ſo conſpicuous in her, as to induce God [b] to regard the low Eſtate of his Handmaiden.

IV. THUS we have finiſhed the Circumſtances which relate to the Incarnation and Birth of our bleſſed Saviour, and come now to raiſe ſome proper Obſervations from this Part of his Hiſtory: And,

The divine Attributes manifeſted in Chriſt's Incarnation.

1. IN this Myſtery of Godlineſs, God's Manifeſtation in the Fleſh, we may happily perceive the Concurrence and Harmony of the Divine Attributes: For here is the Wiſdom of God conſpicuous, [c] in contriving ſuch an Expedient to reconcile the Divine Juſtice and Mercy together, when our Iniquities had ſet them at Variance; when Mankind had alienated themſelves from God, in finding out a Method of approaching and regaining them, by ſtooping ſo low as to take the Manhood into God; and when the whole Race of Adam ſtood in Need of a Propitiation for Sin, in putting himſelf in the Capacity of offering one, that muſt needs be ſufficient for the Atonement of all Sin, ſince the Oblation, the Oblator, and the Deity appeaſed, are all one. That God ſhould exalt himſelf beyond all Meaſure, beyond all Imagination, is no more, than what we account agreeable to the common Conceptions we have of his Greatneſs and Immenſity; but that he ſhould humble, and, as it were, go out of himſelf; that he ſhould make himſelf of no Reputation, and appear in the Faſhion of a Man; that he, who is the Antient of Days, and whoſe Out-goings are from Everlaſting, ſhould be born in Bethlehem, a Child not an Hour old; that he, who fills Heaven and Earth, ſhould be wrapped in Swaddling-Clothes, and the Majeſty of the High and Holy One laid in a Manger: In a Word, that the immortal and impaſſible Creator ſhould take upon him the Paſſions and Frailties, the Sufferings and Mortality of his own Creatures; ſhould begin to live and grow, ſhould hunger and thirſt, be weary and ſleep, and bleed and die, in all Points be tempted and afflicted like one of us; this is ſomewhat ſo exceedingly foreign to the Manifeſtations, God hath uſed to make of himſelf, that it quite croſſes our common Apprehenſions of him; and [d] yet, when we look nearer to it, we cannot but acknowledge it the ſtupendious Work of his Omnipotence, thus to unite infinitely diſtant and different Natures, to join Heaven and Earth, God and Man in one Perſon; to confine Immenſity, and exhibit a Virgin-Mother, and an Infant-God.

BUT of all the Attributes of God, that which ſhines out with a particular Luſtre, in the Contrivance of this Myſtery, is this unſpeakable Goodneſs and Mercy, condeſcending to take Pity on our low Eſtate, and to lay our Caſe ſo much to Heart, as to think of redeeming and reſtoring us from that Depth of Miſery, into which we had plunged ourſelves; and to this Purpoſe, ſending not an Angel, (the leaſt of which he had no Reaſon to ſpare out of his Train for our Sakes) but his own beloved Son, out of his Boſom, to effect our Recovery and Reſtoration. It deſerves to be acknowledged, as a diſtinguiſhing Mark of the Divine Favour, that we were at firſt created in the Likeneſs of God; but what Proportion is there between this, and reſtoring to us that Likeneſs (when moſt unhappily loſt) by a Kindneſs ſo amazing, as that of God's being made in the Likeneſs of Man? To his putting on our Paſſions and Frailties, that we might riſe to his Perfections; ſubjecting himſelf to our Neceſſities and Wants, that we might partake of his Fulneſs; promoting us to Honour by ſuffering Indignities; and opening to us a Way to Happineſs, and Life, and a Kingdom everlaſting, by a Life of Afflictions, a Death of exquiſite Torture, and the voluntary Scandal of an ignominious Croſs? And all this done for Creatures, who, as ſuch, could add nothing to their Creator's Glory; for Sinners, who, as ſuch, had done their utmoſt to impair it: For Rebels and Traitors, falſe to all their Obligations of Duty, diſloyal to the beſt of Lords, and unthankful to their only Benefactor; Wretches, that had incurred his Wrath, and merited Ruin; that were undeſerving of Grace, and yet unwilling to accept it. Herein is Love, not that we loved God, but he loved us, and gave himſelf for us! And this ſurely, of all others, is a [e] faithful Saying, and worthy of all Acceptation, i. e. fit to be embraced and entertained with all poſſible Joy and Thankfulneſs, redounding to the Glory of God, that Chriſt Jeſus came into the World to ſave Sinners.

Teach us a true Eſtimate of the World.

2. IN the Birth of our Saviour Chriſt, who was not only by Nature the Son of God, but by Human Deſcent the King of the Jews, we learn a true Eſtimate of the World; and may poſſibly gueſs at ſome Reaſons, why he choſe to make his Appearance

[b] Luke i. 48. [c] Vid. Bates's Harmony of the Divine Attributes, and Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. I. [d] Newcombe's Sermons, Vol. I. and Stanhope, ibid. [e] 1 Tim. i. 15.

Appearance, not in any ſplendid and pompous, but in ſuch low and debaſing Circumſtances. The Jews indeed, whoſe ambitious Deſires made them wreſt thoſe Places in Scripture to the firſt, which were only meant of the ſecond Coming of Chriſt, expected that his Kingdom would have been of this World; that he would have gone forth with his Armies, delivered them from the Roman Yoke, made them a great and glorious People, and [f] given them the Heathen for their Inheritance, and the uttermoſt Parts of the World for their Poſſeſſion. But it being determined in the Divine Counſel, that the Meſſias ſhould make a quite different Appearance, the Prophets accordingly foretel of him, that there ſhould be [g] no Form or Comelineſs in him, nor any Beauty for which we ſhould deſire him; that he ſhould be deſpiſed and rejected, be accounted the [h] very Scorn of Men, and the Out-caſt of the People, be oppreſſed and afflicted, taken from Priſon, and from Judgment, and cut off, at laſt, from the Land of the Living. And, to prevent all Expectations of his reigning in this Life, where-ever Mention is made of his Kingdom, [i] there is added, that he ſhould be meek, and poor, and lowly, ſubject to the Inſult of Enemies, and deſtitute of the State and Ornaments of Majeſty. And, indeed, conſidering the Deſign of the Errand, he came upon, (which was to teach the World a new Religion) a mean and afflicted Condition was more agreeable to his true Character. For whereas Mankind was over-run with an immoderate Deſire of the Riches and Honours of this World, the Deſign of his Religion was to rectify our Apprehenſions, to diſengage our Affections, and to raiſe them to the Purſuit of a more noble and laſting Happineſs. It is, indeed, intended to give us the fulleſt Conviction, that a Man's Life does not conſiſt in the Abundance of thoſe Things, which he poſſeſſes, and that the Value of thoſe Honours and Advancements, which ſo buſily employ the Thoughts of the Ambitious, conſiſt more in Fancy, than in any real Worth. It teaches us, that the moſt deſirable Exerciſe of Power is to govern ourſelves; that Godlineſs with Contentment is the greateſt Gain; that Juſtice, Generoſity, and Charity are more honourable, than the moſt magnificent Titles without them; and ſo far it is from encouraging a Martial Spirit, from making it a glorious Thing to kill, and deſtroy, and ſet the World on Fire about Empire and Dominion, that, were its Precepts followed, Men might, in Reality, [k] beat their Swords into Plow-ſhares, and their Spears into Pruning-hooks, that Nation might not riſe againſt Nation, or learn War any more.

The Deſign of the Chriſtian Religion.

Now what could be a more proper Expedient to effect this excellent Deſign, than an obſcure and afflicted Condition in our Saviour? Or what could be a more authentick Proof of the Meaning, and Diſintereſtedneſs of his Laws, than to make them the Rule of his own Actions? His Contempt of the World, his Patience, and Meekneſs, and Reſignation, the Practice of his own Beatitudes upon himſelf, and exact Uniformity between his Life and Doctrine, is now a powerful Recommendation of his Inſtitution; whereas, had he choſen a plentiful Condition, he had not only brought his Doctrine into Diſgrace, but given Mankind a new Temptation to overvalue worldly Honour and Greatneſs, to which they were too prone already. [l] Had our bleſſed Saviour, I ſay, taken the State of a King upon him, and wrought thoſe temporal Deliverances, the Jews expected, this would have made them more eager after That, which the Apoſtle calls [m] the Luſt of the Eyes, and the Pride of Life. Men of enterprizing and incroaching Spirits would have been glad of the Colour of ſo great an Example, in Gratification of their ambitious Views; would have thought themſelves authorized to fill the World with Blood and Slaughter, and, for the Enlargement of their Dominion, to carry Fire and Deſolation wherever they went, to depopulate whole Countries, and * lay waſte defenced Cities into ruinous Heaps. And, in like Manner, had he appeared in the Character of a Man of much Learning, [n] as one, that had been brought up at the Feet of the Jewiſh Rabbins, inſtructed by Athenian Philoſophers, and well acquainted with the Roman Orators; there is Reaſon to believe, that the Strength and Uncommonneſs of Thought, the Clearneſs and Majeſty, which appear in his Sermons and Diſcourſes, would have been leſs ſurpriſing. His ſilencing the Scribes and Phariſees, his reſolving the profoundeſt Doubts, and diſengaging himſelf from the captious Queſtions of the Herodians, would, in ſuch a Caſe, have been looked upon as Human Acquiſitions; nay, the miraculous Deeds, which he performed, might poſſibly have been imputed to his Skill in natural Cauſes, his underſtanding the Laws of the Elements, the Conſtitution Chriſt's Appearance anſwerable to it.

[f] Pſal. ii. 8. [g] Iſa. liii. 2, &c. [h] Pſal. xxii. 6. [i] Zech. ix. 9. [k] Micah iv. 3. [l] Collier's Sermons. [m] 1 John ii. 16. * Iſa. xxxvii. 26. [n] Collier, ibid.

ſtution of Human Bodies, the Progreſs and Waining of Diſeaſes, and the like; whereas the Meanneſs of his Parentage and Education gives a noble Sanction and Recommendation to what he ſaid and did: For [o] Is not this the Carpenter? Is not this the Son of Mary, ſay the People one to another? Whence then hath this Man theſe Things? Or, what Wiſdom is this, which is given unto him, that even ſuch mighty Works are wrought by his Hands?

Teaches us Humility, and other Virtues.

THESE are the wiſe and gracious Ends of the obſcure Appearance of the Son of God; that the ancient Prophecies might be fulfilled; that a new Religion might be inſtituted; that Pride and Ambition might be diſcountenanced; that the Doctrine and Miracles, which he came from Heaven to exhibit, might receive their Confirmation: And (what muſt not be forgotten in this Place) that he might [p] leave us an Example of Kindneſs and Condeſcenſion, of Humility and Meekneſs, of Reſignation to Providence, and committing ourſelves to him, that judgeth righteouſly, in all our Sufferings and Afflictions. [q] If therefore there be any Conſolation in Chriſt, (for we cannot conclude this Head better, than in the Apoſtle's moſt pathetick Exhortation) if any Comfort of Love, if any Fellowſhip of the Spirit, if any Bowels and Mercies, let nothing be done through Strife, or Vain-glory, but, in Lowneſs of Mind; let each eſteem other, better than themſelves; and let this Mind be in you, which was alſo in Jeſus Chriſt; who, being in the Form of God, thought it not Robbery to be equal with God; but made himſelf of no Reputation, and took upon him the Form of a Servant, and was made in the Likeneſs of Men; and being found in Faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto Death, even the Death of the Croſs.

SECT. I.

Of the chief Acts and Incidents of Chriſt's Life, from his Birth, to a little before his Crucifixion.

The End of Circumciſion.

AFTER the Birth of Chriſt, the firſt Inſtance of his Humiliation and Suffering, that we meet with, is his Circumciſion. 1. Circumciſion, in its primary Inſtitution, (which was ſome hundred Years before the Promulgation of the Law) was intended as a viſible Mark of Diſtinction, whereby the holy Seed, in Covenant with God, ſhould be known, as his choſen Generation, his peculiar People, from the reſt of the Nations, who were Aliens to the Promiſe, and Strangers to the Commonwealth of Iſrael; and in this Reſpect it was a political Inſtitution, to diſtinguiſh the Jews from the reſt of Mankind. 2. It was a Note of Commemoration, to put thoſe, who bore it, in Mind, whoſe Offspring they were, and what Advantages they were intitled to, provided they took Care not to degenerate from the Glories of that Stock, from whence they ſprang; and, in this Reſpect, it was a religious Inſtitution, to remind them of the Privileges they enjoyed, as a ſpiritual Society. 3. It was a Sign (as the Apoſtle [r] expreſſes it) of that Reghteouſneſs, which is by Faith, and what was intended to remind thoſe, upon whom it paſſed, of the Fame and Renown of Abraham, the Founder of their Nation, of his generous Truſt in God, and ready Obedience to his Command; and, withal, of that noble Emulation of his Virtues, which ſuch a Pattern ought to inſpire. 4. It was a Figure and Repreſentation of that inward Holineſs and Purity, which all, who were admitted into Covenant with God, were to profeſs. And, 5. It was a Sacrament of Initiation into the Service of God, and (as ſome imagine) an Expedient to remove the Guilt of Original Sin then, in Proportion to what Baptiſm does now.

Why our Lord was circumciſed.

NOW, though ſome of theſe Ends, in the Rite of Circumciſion, could not, with any Reaſon, be applied to Chriſt, (foraſmuch as he was originally Holy, and always in Favour and Communion with God) yet if we look upon it, 1. As a Mark of Diſtinction between the Jews and other Nations, [s] we ſhall ſoon perceive, that thus it became Jeſus to be circumciſed, in order to qualify himſelf for a free Converſation with his Countrymen, to whom he was primarily ſent, [t] as himſelf teſtifies, and to render his Miniſtry more acceptable among them. For ſince the Jews were ſo rigid, in the Obſervance of this Diſtinction, which God had eſtabliſhed between them and other other Nations, as to exclude from their Temple, their Synagogues, and all Manner of civil and religious Commerce, ſuch People, as were not of their Communion; the Errand, for which Chriſt came to them, had been abſolutely loſt; no Audience at all given to it; no Opportunities allowed of preaching, or conferring publickly, nay, not even of Eating and Drinking with them, and ſo inſinuating his Doctrine privately, had not this Ceremony paſſed upon him. 2. If we conſider Circumciſion, as a commemorative Sign of Abraham, and the Covenant made with him, it was highly requiſite that Chriſt ſhould undergo it: For as he was the Seed, of whom the Promiſe was made, that in him all the Nations of the Earth ſhould be bleſſed, he was obliged to give the World this Teſtimony of his being truly and rightly deſcended from that renowned Patriarch. 3. If we conſider it as a Seal of the Covenant between God and Man, it was very expedient that he ſhould be circumciſed, not upon his own perſonal Account indeed, but for the Sake of others, whoſe Perſons he came to repreſent, and whoſe Cauſe he undertook. Or, 4. Laſtly, if we conſider it as Part of the Ceremonial Law, it was convenient for him to undergo it, not only becauſe (as himſelf declares) he came to fulfil all Righteouſneſs; but, being to contract for a perfect Obedience, by this initiating Ceremony he obliged himſelf to the Performance of the whole Law, which none, before him, was ever able to accompliſh.

[o] Mark vi. 3, 2. [p] 1 Pet. ii. 21, 23. [q] Phil. ii. 1, &c. [r] Rom. iv. 11. [s] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. I. [t] Matth. xv. 24.

The Import of his Name.

THESE are the Reaſons, that may be ſuggeſted, for the Circumciſion of our bleſſed Saviour; and the Name, which was given him on that Occaſion, according to the Direction of [u] the Angel, before he was conceived in the Womb, was Jeſus; a Name of comfortable Import, becauſe it is ſaid of him, * that he ſhould ſave his People from their Sins. Now, if we reflect a little upon what the Nature of Sin unpardoned and predominant is, viz. an Offence againſt a righteous Law, and a Contradiction to our Intereſt and our Duty; a Stain to our Nature, a Wound to our Conſcience, and the Corruption of our Principles, which brings us under the Tyranny of unruly Paſſions and vicious Habits; together with an heinous Provocation of a juſt and holy God, whoſe Power enables him, and whoſe Truth obliges him to puniſh our Diſobedience with inexpreſſible and everlaſting Torments both of Body and Soul: If we look upon Sin under this View, I ſay, we ſhall ſoon perceive the ineſtimable Bleſſing and Value of that Saviour and Deliverer, who has waſhed away the Stain and Guilt of our Sins by his Blood; has releaſed the Puniſhment due to them, by becoming our Sacrifice, and ſuffering in our Stead; by his Obedience has appeaſed the Anger of God, and reconciled us to his once offended Father; and is continually ſubduing the Power of Sin, by the Doctrines of the Goſpel, by the Aſſiſtance of his Spirit, and by all thoſe Means, and wiſe Methods, in ſhort, that are neceſſary to our Condition; all, that our Circumſtances want, conſidering us frail and ſinful Creatures; and all, that our Circumſtances can bear, conſidering us free and rational Creatures.

To whom applicable.

THIS is the Salvation which Chriſt procures, and in this Manner he ſaves his People from their Sins: But then we are to remember, that they are his People, whom he thus ſaves; thoſe, who believe his Word, obey his Precepts, devote themſelves to his Service, and deſire and endeavour (as far as in them lies) to ſave themſelves from them. Leſs than this had not fulfilled the Importance of his Name, and more had defeated the Deſign of it: For to ſave thoſe from Puniſhment, who are ſtill fond of their Guilt, had not been to take away, but rather to promote the Dominion, and encourage the Practice of Sin. If then the Proud and Ambitious, the Unjuſt and Covetous, the Peeviſh and Revengeful, the Profuſe and Riotous, the Profane and Impious; in ſhort, if Men, of whatever Denomination, continue in Sins unrepented of; if they love and like the Fault, how much ſoever they may abhor and dread the Shame or Puniſhment; if they perſuade, entice, or any Way encourage others in the Commiſſion of Sin, either by their Diſcourſe or Example; to every ſuch Man our bleſſed Lord is no Jeſus at all, nor does there any one of the innumerable Benefits, implied in that endearing Name, belong to him: But, on the contrary, to the penitent Sinner, to the devout Worſhipper, to the juſt and honeſt Dealer, to the bountiful Almſgiver, to the Sober and Pure, to the Meek and the Peaceable, to the humble and the mortified Chriſtian, to the diligent Worker out of his own, and zealous Promoter of other Mens Salvation, the Safety and Defence, the Support and the Joy of a Jeſus is inconceivable: Becauſe they feel already his powerful Operation on their Hearts; they know, that Temptations cannot hurt, where he ſhields; nor Sins

[u] Luke ii. 21. * Matth. i. 21.

Sins condemn, where he pardons; nor Adverſity oppreſs, where he ſuſtains; and, in the Language of the Apoſtle, [x] are perſuaded, that neither Death, nor Life, nor Angels, nor Principalities, nor Powers, nor Things preſent, nor Things to come, nor Heighth, nor Depth, nor any other Creature, can be able to ſeparate them from the Love of God, which is in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord.

The Maſſacre of the Children at Bethlehem.

NOT long after our Saviour's Circumciſion, he was forced to remove into Egypt, to avoid the wicked Deſigns of Herod, who, finding himſelf deluded by the Wiſe Men, (whom [y] we made Mention of before) reſolved upon a Courſe, which he thought could not fail of eaſing himſelf of any Apprehenſion from this new-born King of the Jews; and that was, to ſend and murther all the Children, in, and about the Place, where it was agreed Chriſt muſt have been born, and (according to the Computation of the Time, when the Star denoted his Birth) much about his Age. God, however, by the Meſſage of an Angel, provided for his Son's Eſcape; yet, ſince his Providence did not interpoſe for the reſt, but ſuffered ſuch a Number of innocent Babes to be maſſacred upon this Account, there is ſomething in this Tranſaction, that ſeems to reflect upon the Divine Goodneſs and Juſtice, which deſerves to be cleared up.

IT ought to be remembered then, what we ſaid before [z], in Vindication of the Providence of God,—— [a] That he is no farther concerned in any Sort of Crimes, than barely as he permits the Commiſſion of them: And, if (as we there argued) it be no Imputation upon his Juſtice and Goodneſs, to ſuffer Men to go on in the Sin of deſigning, and acting the worſt, the baſeſt, the cruelleſt Villainies; then the next, and only remaining Enquiry will be, whether the Providence of God will be concerned to hinder the Calamity, i. e. whether it be any reaſonable Reflection upon the Wiſdom, the Juſtice, and Goodneſs of God, (who certainly could prevent them) to ſuffer ſuch Deſigns to take Effect, as are levelled againſt the Innocent.

God's Permiſſion of it vindicated.

Now, here a mighty Difference muſt be made, between Mens ſuffering unjuſtly, with Regard to Men, who are the next Agents and Inſtruments, and with Regard to God, who is the remote Cauſe of theſe Events. Men may afflict, cruſh, or murther thoſe, who have given them no Provocation, and over whom they have no Manner of Right or Controul: But God has an univerſal Dominion over us, as Creatures, and we have ſtill ſtrengthened that Title farther, by forfeiting our Lives, and all the Comforts of them, as Sinners: Conſequently, how unjuſt ſoever any of our Sufferings may be, in reſpect of Men, who are the immediate Inflictors; yet, in reſpect of God, of whoſe deſerved Vengeance theſe Men are the Executioners, the extreameſt Sufferings of the very beſt People never are, never can be, unjuſt.

BUT this is not all: For we are to conſider the preſent Life, not as our laſt and final State of Being, but as one, whoſe principal Tendency is to another: So that there is no certain Meaſure to be taken, nor any Right or peremptory Judgment made of God's Juſtice or Goodneſs towards us, without taking in the Diſtributions of that other Life, which is the main End, indeed, of our living at all. But now the Scriptures have expreſſly declared, that Sufferings are a Part of our Diſcipline and Trial, and that all the Afflictions of our mortal Condition ſhall therefore be recompenſed with immortal Happineſs and Glory. Since temporal Death then is the acknowledged Puniſhment of Original Sin, and God has an undoubted Right to inflict this Puniſhment, when, and in what Manner he pleaſes; there is certainly the ſame Reflection upon his Providence, in ſuffering ſuch Innocents to die by Convulſions, a Fever, or any other Diſeaſe incident to that tender Age, as in permitting them to fall by the Sword, a Sacrifice to the Rage of a mercileſs Tyrant. But then, for a frail, a ſhort, a troubleſome, a dangerous Life, God gives them the Recompence of an immortal, a ſecurely happy, and compleatly glorious one, which not only vindicates, but magnifies his Goodneſs and Liberality to them. He conſiders their Infancy, and the noble Fruit, which might have ſprung from theſe tender Plants, had they been allowed to grow to full Maturity, and accordingly rewards them. For tho' they wanted the Will of Martyrdom, which riper Years may have, yet it muſt be allowed, that they were clear of that voluntary and actual Guilt, which thoſe riper Years would have contracted. And therefore, as (in the moſt literal Senſe) [b] they were not defiled with ſenſual Pleaſures, but left the World in Virgin Innocence; as they were moſt truly redeemed from among Men, whoſe early Tranſlation to a State of Bliſs

[x] Rom. viii. 38, 39. [y] See Page 636. [z] See Page 92—251. [a] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels. Vol. I. [b] Rev. xiv. 4.

Bliſs prevented the Hazards and Temptations of a wicked World; and as they were (ſtrictly ſpeaking) the Firſt-Fruits unto God and the Lamb, who began to ſhed their Blood in the Cauſe of a new-born Saviour; ſo God hath been pleaſed to vouchſafe them a peculiar Honour, [c] to ſing, as it were, a new Song before his Throne, and to follow the Lamb, whitherſoever he goeth; becauſe in their Mouth was found no Guile; for they were without Fault, before the Throne of God.

The Uſe to be made of it.

WHAT then has been argued in Vindication of the Divine Juſtice and Goodneſs, with Regard to the Death of theſe Children, ſhould diſpoſe us to entertain, with Patience and much Meekneſs, not only the Sufferings, laid upon us by God's immediate Hand, but thoſe likewiſe, which proceed from the wrongful Dealings of wicked and unreaſonable Men: Their Injuſtice cannot, in this Caſe, be greater, than Herod's, nor can our Innocence be more, than that of theſe Infants. Since then we have been taught by this Example, that Perſons, the moſt inoffenſive and undeſerving, may be perſecuted even to Death, without any juſt Reflection, either upon their own Virtue thus oppreſſed, or that Providence, which permits it; our Method, in this Caſe, ſhould be, to take Sanctuary in the Peace of a good Conſcience; to look up, with an holy Reſignation of Mind, to the wiſe Diſpoſer of every Event; and to truſt his Mercy and Goodneſs, for the neceſſary Comfort, and abundant Compenſation of all the Hardſhips, his wiſe Providence ſees fit to bring upon us.

Chriſt's Confirmation in the Temple.

AFTER our Saviour's Return from Egypt, upon the Death of the Tyrant Herod, the Evangelical Hiſtory mentions nothing particular concerning him, only that he dwelt in Nazareth, in his reputed Father's Houſe, waxing ſtrong in Spirit, and filled with Wiſdom, and the Grace of God; until, in the twelfth Year of his Age, and at the Time of the Paſſover, we find him [d] in the Temple, ſitting in the Midſt of the Doctors, both hearing them, and aſking them Queſtions.

AND this, very probably, he might do, not merely out of Curioſity, but to acquit himſelf of a Duty, expected from all, who had attained to a certain Age among the Jews. At the Age of thirteen, their Youth was uſually brought before ſome of the Maſters of the Synagogue, to render an Account of their Proficiency in Religion; and, having paſſed their Examination, were ſent away, with the Prayers and Benedictions of the Church, and thenceforward accounted reſponſible for their own Sins. This, [e] as ſome learned Men imagine, was the Occaſion of our Saviour's being found in the Temple, ſitting among the Doctors. He was then under the Examination of the Doctors; and, though the Age, appointed for that Purpoſe, was uſually thirteen, yet this did not hinder Children of extraordinary Parts and Capacities from doing it ſooner, when they were competently prepared, and had a Genius (in the Phraſe of the Jewiſh Language) outrunning the Command. If this Suppoſition be juſt, here ſeems to be a probable Foundation for the Chriſtian Rite of Confirmation, wherein our young People, having anſwered to the firſt and neceſſary Rudiments of their Religion, do, in the Preſence of the Fathers of the Church, (at that Time imploring the Bleſſing of God upon their future Endeavours) take the Charge of their baptiſmal Vow upon themſelves, as being preſumed ſufficiently inſtructed to be anſwerable for their own Duty, the remaining Part of their Lives.

HOWEVER this be, (for I am content to leave it as a probable Conjecture only) yet thus much is certain, that our bleſſed Saviour, in theſe Conferences, behaved himſelf, not only to the Satisfaction, but the Wonder of the whole Aſſembly; [f] for all that heard him, were aſtoniſhed at his Underſtanding and Anſwers. Not that we are to imagine, that the Fulneſs of his Divine Knowledge diſplayed itſelf upon this Occaſion, but only ſuch a Brightneſs of Parts and Apprehenſion, as beſpake an uncommon Pregnancy. For, though the Divine Nature was always preſent with him, yet it ſeems to have communicated its Powers to the human by diſtinct and gradual Illuminations, declining induſtriouſly the publick Manifeſtation of itſelf to the World, till (according to the common Courſe of Things) Ripeneſs of Years and Judgment had carried him up to the Perfections of a Man, and the Execution of his Miniſtry called for ſuch Evidence to aſſiſt him.

His Subjection to his Parents.

'TILL the Fulneſs of Time was come, the Evangeliſt has taken Care to inform us, that he [g] dwelt with his Parents at Nazareth, and was ſubject to them: For whether he wrought with Joſeph at the Carpenter's Trade (as [h] ſome of the Antients have delivered their Opinion) is not ſo material to enquire; this we are ſatisfied of, that, whether his Life was a Life of Labour, or not, it was certainly a Life of Modeſty, and Meekneſs, and exemplary Obedience; which is enough to know how indiſpenſable the Duty of Children to their Parents is, and how inexcuſable their Stubbornneſs and Contempt, when he, who was God, as well as Man, in all his Deportment, was full of Reſpect to them, whoſe Son, though he was in one Capacity, yet was he their Father, their Lord, their King, their Creator, in another; and how ſacred the Obligation is, which Blood and Nature have tied, when even the Name and Character alone is venerable, though the Relation be wanting? For ſuch our Lord hath proved it, by the Obſervance, which he paid, not to her only, of whoſe Subſtance he was made Fleſh, but to him likewiſe, who was no otherwiſe his Father, than by Reputation and common Acceptance; entitled to this Honour, only as the Huſband of Mary, and by a Miſtake of the World, which was not, at that Time, let into the myſterious Secret of a Virgin made a Mother.

[c] Rev. xiv. 3, 4, 5. [d] Luke ii. 46. [e] Vid. Grot. in Locum, and Buxtorf Jud. Synag. c. iii.
[f] Luke ii. 47. [g] Ibid. ver. 51. [h] 'Tis the Opinion of ſome, that he not only wrought at the Carpenter's Trade, but that, when Joſeph died, (which happened before his entering upon his Miniſtry) he wrought alone, and was no more called the Carpenter's Son, but the Carpenter, as we may obſerve from Mark vi 3. Howell's Hiſtory of the Bible.

His Baptiſm, by John.

IN this private Condition our Saviour lived, until he was thirty Years old, when, being about to take upon him his prophetick Office, we find him coming [i] from Galilee to Jordan, unto John, to be baptized of him. The Singularity of the Baptiſt's Character, his Contempt of the World, his auſtere Courſe of Life, as well as an excellent Zeal and Spirit in Preaching, created ſo great an Opinion of him among the People, that all held him for a Prophet, eſpecially when, by his Baptiſm, he added a greater Solemnity to his Office. His Office, indeed, (as the Prophet foretels it of him) was [k] to prepare the Way of the Lord, and to make ſtraight an High-way for our God: Which Words, as they allude to Harbingers, and ſuch other Officers, as, upon the Journies of Princes, are employed to take Care, that the Ways ſhould be levelled, and all ſuch Obſtructions removed, as might make their Paſſage leſs commodious; ſo, upon the Approach of the King of Glory, the Preaching and Baptiſm of John put Mankind into a Poſture of receiving him, and greatly facilitated the Deſign of his Coming. His Preaching was intended to bring Men to a due Senſe of their Sins, and to foretel the dreadful Effects of God's Anger againſt all, who did not apply themſelves to true Holineſs: And his Baptiſm (as St Paul [l] expreſſes it) was the Baptiſm of Repentance, wherein he propounded the Meſſias, who was ſhortly to appear, for the Object of Faith to all, who received this Ordinance at his Hand; ſaying unto the People, that they ſhould believe on him, which ſhould come after him, i. e. on Jeſus Chriſt. And, for this Reaſon, ſome of the Ancients have repreſented this Miniſtry of the Baptiſt's, as a Sort of middle Partition between the Law and the Goſpel; of the Law, as a Thing already paſt, and come to a Period; and of the Goſpel, as what, upon the Manifeſtation of the Meſſias, was then juſt beginning to take Place. [m] For this is he, (as the Baptiſt openly declares) of whom I ſaid, after me cometh a Man, who is preferred before me; for he was before me: And I knew him not, but that he might be made manifeſt unto Iſrael, therefore am I come baptizing with Water.

OUR Saviour, however, could not ſtand in need of John's Baptiſm, as it was a Baptiſm of Repentance; but therefore he ſuffered it, becauſe it [n] became him to fulfil all Righteouſneſs. Since this was appointed an Inſtrument of Purification to the Jews, it was not fit, that he, who came to be a Pattern of Perfection, ſhould neglect any Ordinance inſtituted by his Father, or any Mark and Profeſſion of Sanctity. He, indeed, himſelf was no Sinner; yet, ſince he was made Sin for us, it was proper enough for him to perform the Sacrament of Sinners, who was to undergo the Shame and Puniſhment of Sin for them: And ſince this was to be a Sacrament of perpetual Uſe in the Chriſtian Church, it was highly expedient, that, by his own Baptiſm, he ſhould ſanctify Water to the myſtical waſhing away of Sin, that in all future Ages his Followers might look upon the holy Ordinance with Reſpect, and receive it with Joy, upon this Account, that the Author and Finiſher of our Faith did not himſelf diſdain to ſubmit to it.

His Temptation in the Wilderneſs.

IMMEDIATELY after our Saviour's Baptiſm, the Evangelical Hiſtory informs us, that he was [o] led by the Spirit, into the Wilderneſs, to be tempted by the Devil: And here perhaps it may be of ſome Inſtruction to us to conſider a little, 1. The Time when; 2. The Place where; 3. The Manner how; and, 4. The Ends, for which our Saviour came to be ſubmitted to the Aſſaults of this Prince of Darkneſs.

1. No-

[i] Matth. iii. 13. [k] Iſa. xl. 3. [l] Acts xix. 4. [m] John i. 30, 31. [n] Matth. iii. 15. [o] Ibid. iv. 1.

1. NOTHING is more common, than to find Men complaining, and even wondering with themſelves, that they ſhould be purſued with Temptations, at the Time, or after the Diſcharge of holy Duties. [p] Now, I hope, it may be of Uſe to ſatisfy ſuch Perſons, to remember, that our bleſſed Maſter was baptized, not becauſe he wanted, but becauſe he meant to honour and recommend that ſanctifying Ordinance; that he was [q] filled with the Holy Ghoſt; that he was, by a Voice from Heaven, declared the beloved Son of God, in whom he was well pleaſed; and, yet, the very next Thing we hear of him is, that he was tempted; nay, that the Spirit led him into the Wilderneſs, to the Intent that he might be tempted by the Devil: Conſequently, we are not to look, that Sacraments, or any other holy Duties, ſhould procure us an abſolute Freedom from Temptations; conſequently, again, our being tempted in, or after the Performance of ſuch Duties, is no reaſonable Cauſe to conclude, that our Services are not accepted by God, or that they have not had their proper Efficacy. For as theſe Conſequences are plainly contrary to the Example of our bleſſed Saviour, ſo are they no leſs repugnant to the Reaſon and Nature of the Thing. The Time when.

[r] THE Sacrament and other Offices of Piety and Devotion are Weapons of our ſpiritual Warfare; they fit and prepare us for more vigorous Actions; they are Means of conveying to us ſuch Strength, as may enable us to withſtand in the Day of Trial; they repair our Breaches, and heal our Wounds: But they are ſo many Acts of Hoſtility, ſo many Attempts to reſcue ourſelves out of the Snare of the Enemy, and therefore ſo many freſh Provocations, which he will not fail to make his Advantage of, in order to reduce us again. And can we wonder that he ſhould double his Diligence, in Proportion to ours, and then labour to recover his Prey, when he is in moſt Danger of loſing it? If wicked Men feel not the ſame Conflicts, it is becauſe they would be needleſſly repeated upon thoſe, who are his Captives already, and take no Pains to make their Eſcape: But there is great Reaſon, why he ſhould not ſuffer good Men to enjoy the like Eaſe and Quiet, who are continually ſtruggling with him, and labouring to get Ground. As therefore we may rationally expect the Service hotteſt, when we are moſt careful to diſcharge our Duty; ſo our finding it ſuch ought rather to be accounted a good, than a bad Sign, a Matter of Satisfaction, not of Diſcomfort; and the Advice of the wiſe Man ſhould be always ſettled in our Hearts; [s] My Son, if thou come to ſerve the Lord, prepare thyſelf for Temptation; ſet thine Heart aright, and conſtantly endure; cleave unto him, and depart not away, that thou mayeſt be increaſed at thy laſt Hour.

THE Uſefulneſs of Retirement, when we ſet ourſelves apart to the Buſineſs of Religion, is confirmed by every Man's Experience, that makes the Trial. By withdrawing from the World, we ſhut out infinite Diſtractions, and are better qualified to collect our Thoughts, and to fix them upon God and a future State. But even here we muſt not flatter ourſelves with an Imagination of an abſolute Security: In ſuch Circumſtances the Tempter aſſaulted our bleſſed Maſter, (for he ſet upon him in the Wilderneſs) and in ſuch ſhall we frequently find him attacking us. Our Cloſets and Retirements may ſeparate us from the Snares of Buſineſs and Company, but they cannot diveſt us of the Corruption of our Nature, which, in all Places, gives him an Opportunity of infinuating his Temptations. Our Paſſions and Affections, our Ignorance and Infirmities, and all the neceſſary Conſequences of our original Weakneſs and Depravation, theſe we cannot run away from; and, becauſe we carry theſe about us every-where, he can never want a fit Place and Opportunity to aſſail us. The Place where.

'TIS the general Opinion of the Ancients, that the Devil, at this Time, was ignorant how great a Perſon our Saviour was; for, had he known that, 'tis hardly credible he would have made ſo vain and fruitleſs an Attempt upon him. 'Tis likely enough he accounted him ſome extraordinary Perſon. By the ancient Propheſies he might know, that the Meſſias was to appear; and, from the Prophet Daniel collect, that the Time of his Appearance was already come; nay, it is not improbable, that he was acquainted with all the Circumſtances of his Birth, and heard the Teſtimony, God gave him at his Baptiſm, This is my beloved Son; but ſtill he was a Man, tho' an extraordinary Man, and he might not ſuppoſe him any Thing more. Having therefore formerly foiled our firſt Parents in Paradiſe, in the State of Innocence, he hoped for the like Succeſs again; and, accordingly, in the firſt Attempt, takes Occaſion The Manner how.

[p] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.
[q] Matth. iii. 16, 17. and Luke iv. 1.
[r] Stanhope, ibid.
[s] Ecclus. ii. 1, &c.

Occaſion from our Lord's Hunger, to perſuade him to work a Miracle, in order to ſatisfy it, [t] If thou be the Son of God, command theſe Stones to be made Bread; in the Second, he puts him upon an unneceſſary Experiment of God's preſerving Providence, If thou be the Son of God, caſt thyſelf down from this Pinacle of the Temple; and, in the Third, he entices him to an unlawful Act, with Promiſe of worldly Honours and Advantages: * All theſe Things, viz. the Kingdoms of the World, and the Glory of them, will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worſhip me. In all which he viſibly forms his Attack upon thoſe natural Appetites and Affections, which God hath put into Mankind, and which (as this Example ſhews) are not the Cauſes, but only the accidental Occaſions of Sin.

'TIS impoſſible for any Man living to deſcribe all the ſubtle Arts of this Lier-in-wait to deceive; but, from the Inſtance now before us, we may diſcover, in general, that he ſtrikes in with Mens Wants and Neceſſities, with their different Tempers and Circumſtances in the World, with their governing Paſſions and darling Objects; that from theſe he labours to ſuggeſt ſuch Ideas, to kindle ſuch Deſires, to raiſe ſuch Affections, and to carry thoſe, he finds in our Hearts, to ſuch Exceſſes, as may put us upon Thoughts, and Words, and Actions, that are exorbitant and ſinful. Mean while, it is no leſs plain, that he only ſuggeſts, he only puts us upon theſe; that there can be no Sin without our Conſent; that he, who tries us, cannot compel us; that there is no Hurt done till the Temptation is allowed to prevail; and, in a Word, that Tempting is the Devil's Act, but Yielding or Reſiſting, when we are tempted, is our own; the former is our Sin, and the latter our Virtue; conſequently, Temptations are capable of becoming Occaſions to either. Danger, indeed, there is, and this ſhould awaken our Care: But God, who ſuffers us to be tempted, has, withal, given us this Declaration and Aſſurance, that [u] he will not ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, but will, with the Temptation alſo, make a Way to eſcape, that we may be able to bear it. For,

The Ends for which.

IN that Chriſt himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, ſays the Apoſtle, [x] he is able to ſuccour thoſe that are tempted; and this he makes the Encouragement of all good Chriſtians in the like Circumſtances. As he was the Captain of our Salvation, who came to fight our Battles, it was fit that he ſhould firſt engage, and try the utmoſt Strength of the Enemy of Souls; but, as he fought, ſo did he conquer likewiſe, not for himſelf, but for thoſe, whoſe Duty it is to fight under him. And what can be more effectual to animate ſuch in all their ſpiritual Encounters, than the Contemplation of their victorious Leader, and their vanquiſhed Foe? What more effectual to inſpire them with Hope, and an holy Confidence of being ſuccoured in all their Straits and Exigencies, than the Conſideration of their Captain's being, in [y] all Points, tempted like as they, and retaining, now that he is in Heaven, (and, conſequently, in a Condition to ſupply their Weakneſſes and Wants, by pouring the Recruits of Grace and ſupernatural Strength from above) a Feeling of their Infirmities, and a ready Diſpoſition to relieve them?

2. AND as the Temptations of Chriſt were deſigned to encourage us under Trials of the like Nature, ſo were they intended to inſtruct us, that no Degree of Virtue can ſet Men above them. For, when we find the Chriſtian Life ſo often compared to a Warfare, we have fair Warning given us what we are to expect. Frequent Action and continual Danger, we know, is the Lot of Soldiers: Experience in theſe is ſo neceſſary to their excelling in that Art, that all the Diſcipline in the World will not not ſuffice to make them Maſters of it, who were never engaged: And therefore no Man (leaſt of all good Men) ſhould flatter himſelf with a Freedom from Temptation, which (to continue the Alluſion) were in Effect as abſurd, as to look for a profound Peace in the Field of Battle. [z] Count it all Joy therefore, my Brethren, (ſays the Apoſtle) when ye fall into divers Temptations, knowing this, that the Trying of your Faith worketh Patience, and if Patience have its perfect Work, it will make you perfect, and entire, wanting nothing.

[t] Matth. iv. 3, 5, 6. * 'Tis a great Queſtion, among Divines, how the Devil, in his Temptation of our Saviour, could poſſibly ſhew him all the Kingdoms of the World, and the Glory of them. "It looks very add, (ſays "Mr Le Clerc, in his Note upon the ivth Chapter of St Matthew) that an evil Spirit ſhould be permitted to have "ſuch Power over our bleſſed Saviour, as to carry him through the Air, and ſet him upon an exceeding high Mountain. "But, even ſuppoſing this, the Proſpect of the Kingdoms of the whole World could no more be ſhewn from a Moun-"tain, than from a Plain. For, what can be ſeen from a Mountain, beſides Woods, Fields, Rivers, Villages? &c. "which in no Language can denote the Kingdoms of the World, and the Glory of them; for this conſiſts rather in their "Guards and Attendants, their ſplendid Attire, and coſtly Edifices, &c." whereupon he concludes, that all this happened to our Saviour in a Dream only, and was not really preſented to his Sight. But this ſeems to be a dangerous Conjecture, and what robs us of all the practical Improvement of our Lord's Temptation: It allows the Devil an abſolute Power over his Phanſy, to raiſe ſuch Imaginations, and ſuggeſt ſuch Dreams, as he ſhould think fit; which, we think, is a worſe Suppoſition, than to give him that Power over his Body, which neither did, nor could do him any Hurt. And therefore the more ſafe, and, indeed, more probable Opinion is——That as God cauſed Moſes to ſee the whole Land of Promiſe from the Top of Mount Nebo, either by ſtrengthening his Eyes to ſee it thence, or by repreſenting it to him, as it were, in a large Plan or Map, in all the Vallies round about him; ſo might the Devil, in the Vallies round about the high Mountain, on which Chriſt ſtood, make a large Draught of all the Beauties and Glories of the World, of the ſtately Edifices, of the Guards and Attendants of Kings, &c. appearing in their Splendor, and viſible to the Eyes of Chriſt: Which Appearance could not have been ſo well made unto him, nor ſo advantageouſly ſeen by him, had he been on a Plain. Whitby, on Matth. iv. 8. [u] 1 Cor. x. 13. [x] Heb. ii. 18. [y] Ibid. iv. 15.

3. THERE is another End, which Providence perhaps might have in View, in permitting this Temptation to befal our Saviour, and that is, to inſtruct us, by his Example, in what Manner we may beſt repel this Enemy of Souls, whenever he makes his Attempts upon us; which is, by having in Store a good Supply of Scripture-Truth, to oppoſe againſt his Allurements and Inſinuations. There is a peculiar Elegancy in that Expreſſion of St Paul, where he calls the Word of God [a] the Sword of the Spirit, meaning thereby, that it is an Inſtrument of Defence, which does not only ward off the Blows, but cut to Pieces any Arms, with which the Enemy can poſſibly aſſail us. For here we meet with ſuch full and plain Directions for our Duty, as all the Sophiſtry of the Devil cannot perplex; here ſuch great and precious Promiſes, in Caſe of Obedience, as all his boaſted Proffers cannot come up to; here ſuch dreadful Threats, in Caſe of Diſobedience, as all his ſevereſt Inflictions cannot compare with; here ſuch Aſſurances of Spiritual Aid and Aſſiſtance to thoſe, who do their Parts, as all the Diſcouragements, he can lay in our Way, cannot withſtand: [b] In ſhort, this is a Weapon quick and powerful; it is ſuited to all Occaſions, and all Capacities, and is edged with an Authority ſo ſacred, and Reaſons ſo convincing, that nothing can reſiſt its Force. Let every Man therefore enquire into his own Circumſtances, and obſerve the Way, whereby the Tempter moſt uſually does aſſail him; the Sin, that doth moſt eaſily beſet him; the Paſſion he finds hardeſt to be conquered; the Temptations, to which his Condition or Buſineſs moſt expoſe him; the Infirmities and Frailties peculiar to his Age, or Temper, or Complexion; and be ſure to loſe no Time for laying a Fund (as out of ſo rich a Treaſure he quickly may) proper for theſe Exigencies; that none of theſe may any ſooner ſtart up, but ſome Portion of Scripture, well digeſted, may inſtantly come up with it, and effectually bring it under again.

THESE, among others, are the Ends, which might be ſerved by our Saviour's Temptation in the Wilderneſs. But from this Paſſage of his Life ſome have endeavoured to raiſe an Objection againſt his Divinity, which muſt not paſs unobſerved: [c] "If Chriſt, as is pretended, was God, (ſay they) why ſhould he be thus tempted? "Was it to ſhew, that God was able to ſuſtain and overcome the Temptations of "the Devil? This muſt be ſuperfluous: Or, was it to ſhew, that the human Nature, "when perſonally united to the Divine, was able to reſiſt and baffle his Aſſaults? "Under the Divine Strength and Aſſiſtance, how could it do otherwiſe? But then, "how will his doing this, by a Divine Aſſiſtance, afford us any Comfort, when "we grapple with the Tempter, and are deſtitute of that Armour, which in him "was impenetrable?" It muſt be confeſſed indeed, that our Lord's Divinity ſet him above the utmoſt Oppoſition of any created Power; [d] but then it muſt be acknowledged withal, that his Divinity did not exert itſelf upon all Occaſions, but ſuſpended its Operations very frequently, and withdrew. That the Divinity of Chriſt was quieſcent (as the Ancients call it) for the Space of thirty Years; and very rarely manifeſted itſelf, until he entered upon the publick Execution of his Prophetick Office, moſt of the Orthodox do allow: That it ceaſed to act at the Time of our Lord's Paſſion, ſeems very evident, not only from the Hiſtory of his Sufferings, and Death, but even from his own Words, when he tells the People, who came to apprehend him, in the Garden, This is your Hour, and the Power of Darkneſs: And that this was the Caſe of our Lord's Temptation in particular, we are obliged to believe, becauſe the Ground of Comfort, in the like Trials which befal us, will be utterly taken from us, if Chriſt did only overcome him by Virtue of that Nature, which was invincible. So that, in this Conflict, the Divine Perfections lying by, as it were, and forbearing to engage, he is to be conſidered abſtractly as a Man, though much more perfect than any other Man; and then the Inference will be this —— That, though his being God and Man both made it impoſſible for him to ſin, when he was tempted; yet, in Regard he was attacked as Man only, this Example ſhews,

An Objection againſt Chriſt's Divinity.

Anſwered.

[z] James i. 2, &c.
[a] Eph. vi. 17.
[b] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.
[c] Whitby, on Matth. iv.
[d] Stanhope, ibid.

that it is poſſible for us not to ſin, when we are tempted; and then the Conſideration of his Almighty Power, as God, which enables him to ſuccour thoſe, that are tempted, is our Security for thoſe ſpiritual Aſſiſtances, upon the ſeaſonable Acceſſions of which, that Poſſibility of not ſinning, in the preſent State of Things, does entirely depend.

The Nature of our Saviour's Preaching.

AFTER the Temptation of our bleſſed Saviour was over, the ſacred Hiſtory repreſents him as entering upon his Miniſtry, [e] going about Galilee, teaching in their Synagogues, preaching the Goſpel of the Kingdom, and healing all Manner of Sickneſs, and all Manner of Diſeaſes among the People. But, becauſe we have conſidered our bleſſed Saviour before [f] in the Capacity of a Prophet, and, under that Title, diſcourſed at large on the Excellency of his Doctrine; it will here be neceſſary only to obſerve in general, that the main Drift, and Topicks of his Preaching, were, [g] to enforce Repentance and Amendment of Life; to reſcue the Law from the falſe and impious Gloſſes, which the Scribes and Phariſees had put upon it; to explode their ſuperſtitious Traditions: To rebuke their Pride, Hypocriſy, and other Vices; and to let his Hearers into the Knowledge of the Myſteries of his Kingdom; ſo far as the State and Condition of his Church did then require. But, becauſe there is ſomething peculiar in our Saviour's Manner of Preaching, at leaſt to us, living at this Diſtance of Time, and accuſtomed to another Method of Diſcourſe; it may not be improper to ſay ſomething concerning the Parables, wherein we find him ſo often addreſſing himſelf to the People; and to aſſign ſome Reaſons, why he might chuſe this Method of Inſtruction, rather than any other.

Why he made uſe of Parables.

Now, of the many Reaſons, which might induce our bleſſed Saviour ſo frequently to deliver himſelf in Parables, none ſeems to have been more in his View, than that of gaining hereby an Opportunity of inſinuating unwelcome Truths in the moſt inoffenſive Manner. [h] To this the figurative Stile of Parables very much contributes. It naturally engages Attention; it avoids all * the Harſhneſs of Reproof, which plain and ſimpler Language would occaſion; it appeals to, and leaves the Matter with, the Senſe of the Hearers: and it turns off the invidious Part of drawing the Parallel, and making the Application, upon the Parties themſelves: And therefore [i] Hiſtory has ſupplied us with ſome Inſtances, wherein ſuch Parabolical Diſcourſes have had more Efficacy to perſuade Men, than the moſt ſtrenuous Argumentation of another Kind. But our Saviour might have a farther Reaſon for making uſe of Parables, ſince it was a popular Way of Inſtruction [k] among the Jewiſh Doctors, (as well as other Sages of the Eaſt) and what his Countrymen were very well accuſtomed to. What therefore is the Wiſh [l] of ſome, that our Saviour had taught his Religion in the Way of the Heathen Philoſophers, is highly incongruous and impertinent. The Eaſtern Way of Reaſoning was ſo different from that of the Weſt, that the ſoundeſt Philoſophy of Greece or Rome would have been but mere Jargon, if propoſed in a plain perceptive Way to the People of Jeruſalem. The only Method of Reaſoning, which agreed with their Taſte, was to introduce an handſome Simile or Story, appoſite to the Matter in Hand; to apply a ſmart Saying of ſome ancient Worthy; or to bring good Proofs from their Law, or ancient Tradition: But to go about to prove Morality to them, as Plato or Tully do, from the eternal Rules of Juſtice, from the Rectitude and Honourableneſs of Virtue, and the Pravity and Turpitude of Vice, would have been ſuch a Way of Talking, as the wiſeſt Men of their Manner of Education would have utterly deſpiſed. Our bleſſed Saviour therefore, who well underſtood the Genius and Temper of the People he preached to, and who

[e] Matth. iv. 23. [f] Vide Page 571. [g] Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude. [h] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III.

* A fine Writer, and eloquent Preacher, has expreſſed this in ſuch elegant Terms, that I cannot forbear citing him: "Offenders of Magnitude, more eſpecially, are exceeding difficult of Acceſs, and ſo tender, that it requires "the fineſt Turn, and Delicacy of Hand, to lance the Impoſthume without Offence, and to wound them to a Cure. "The Prophet Nathan ſeems to have been a mighty Maſter of Addreſs in this Way of Parable; and, by ſheathing "his Correction in artful Apologue, reduced the erring Prince to Confeſſion and Amendment; whereas ungilded Re"proof, or plain bitter Truth, might have been diſtaſteful to Majeſty, and provoked even David beyond the Power "of Reflection. Reeves's Sermons.

[i] 'Twas by one of theſe, that Menenius perſuaded the Commonalty of Rome, which was all then in an Uproar, to be reconciled to the Senate; and by another of the like Kind, that Demoſthenes eſcaped being delivered to Alexander. [k] The Jewiſh Books, at this very Day, are full of ſuch Parables, as our Saviour made uſe of, and they are oft uſhered in with the ſame Phraſe, Whereunto ſhall I liken ſuch a Thing? As our Saviour introduces his. In the Talmudical Treatiſes, there are the Parables to be found of the Rich Glutton, and the Fooliſh Virgins; and, in the Treatiſe Killaim, there is a Diſpute of ſowing upon Rocks and Stones, and of mixing Wheat and Tares together. Vid. Nicholls's Conferences, Vol. I. and Whitby, on Matth. xiii. [l] Celſus apud Orig. & Julian apud Cyril.

who himſelf always induſtriouſly avoided the leaſt Affectation of Singularity, took Care, that his Method of inſtructing them ſhould be agreeable to their Education, and of better Tendency to their Edification, than any regular Lectures of Philoſophy poſſibly could be; becauſe ſuch figurative Alluſions, as he employed, are certainly beſt remembered, when once their Senſe is attained, and will ſtick cloſer to us; becauſe the Time ſpent in unfolding them makes the Idea more fixed and laſting in the Brain.

Why ſome Parables are obſcure.

'TIS allowed, indeed, that there is ſome Obſcurity in ſuch allegorical Diſcourſes, and that the Doctrine, contained under the Covert of theſe Parables, is not ſo eaſy to be apprehended, as if it were delivered in a more plain and familiar Way: But then it muſt be obſerved, that, where this happens in our Saviour's Parables, it is the Perverſeneſs and Captiouſneſs of his Hearers, which compelled him to it; for [m] therefore ſpeak I to them in Parables, ſays he, becauſe ſeeing, they ſee not, and hearing, they hear not, neither do they underſtand. [n] Had they underſtood all he meant by the Parable of the Vineyard planted by the Huſbandman, wherein he upbraided their Obſtinacy and Diſobedience; by the Parable of the vaunting Phariſee, wherein he taxed their Pride and Self-conceit; by the Parable of the Leaven and Grain of Muſtard-Seed, wherein he foretold the Propagation of the Goſpel among the Heathens; by the Parable of cutting down the unfruitful Fig-Tree, wherein he foretold the Ruin and Deſtruction of the Jewiſh Nation; or had the Things, couched under theſe Parables, been delivered with greater Plainneſs, there is no Doubt to be made, but that they would have enraged the leading Jews, and ſtirred them up to a more violent Oppoſition to his Doctrine, or a more quick Endeavour to deſtroy his Perſon; and therefore, when he undertook to reprove and catechize the Jews, and to lay before them ſuch Truths and Doctrines, as were unacceptable to Fleſh and Blood, he choſe to do it in this Parabolical Way, as the moſt engaging Method to win over the well-diſpoſed to hear and apply, and to print his Leſſons, in the moſt lively and laſting Characters, upon their Minds; and, at the ſame Time, to ſcreen himſelf from the Malice of his Enemies, and to leave them to their beloved Darkneſs: "For Parables (as * one expreſſes it) are a Touchſtone to diſcriminate the Ingenious and "Teachable, from the Conceited and Obſtinate, and ſerve as the Pillar of Fire and "Cloud, to lighten the one, and blind the other."

THO' therefore the great and fundamental Precepts of the Goſpel, as well as the Parables, which repreſented the Duties of Morality, were delivered, in the Audience of the People, with all imaginable Clearneſs; [o] yet, when the Myſteries of Chriſtianity, the Rejection of the Jews, the Vocation of the Gentiles, or any other offenſive Truths were the Subject of Diſcourſe, our Lord, in Point of Prudence, thought proper to make Uſe of obſcure Similes, which thoſe, who followed him out of no good Deſign, might not underſtand, and which he afterwards took Care to explain to his Diſciples in private: And in this he did no more, than what is reported of Pythagoras, viz. [p] That he ſaid many Things in an hidden and covert Manner, which thoſe, who came to learn of him with a pure Mind, might underſtand; but others, tho' they heard him, could not perceive his Meaning.

Chriſt's Miracles, their Number and Quality.

ANOTHER Part of Chriſt's Miniſtry was the Miracles, which he wrought, in Confirmation of the Doctrine, which he publiſhed to the World. For, upon all extraordinary and new Diſcoveries of God's Will to Mankind, recorded in Scripture, it appears to have been his conſtant Uſage, to ſtrengthen the Authority of the Perſons, whom he employed as Inſtruments for publiſhing theſe Diſcoveries, by a Power of working Miracles. That our Lord was inveſted with ſuch a Power, and this Power a ſure Evidence of his Divine Miſſion, is what we had Occaſion to prove [q] in the Beginning of this Work; and need only now take a ſhort Review of the Number and Nature of the Miracles, which he did. [r] When therefore we behold, by our bleſſed Saviour, natural Defects [s] ſupplied, accidental Infirmities [t] repaired, the moſt [u] malignant and * inveterate Diſeaſes, ſuch as no Length of Time, no Skill, no Remedies, no Expence could aſſwage, perfectly cured; [x] Winds and Seas reſtrained and quieted; the [y] Malice of Men awed and eluded; the Rage [z] of Devils ſubdued; and Perſons [a] at Death's Door, nay, [b] even actually dead, commanded back to [m] Matth. xiii. 13. [n] Whitby, on Matth. xiii. 10. * Reeves's Sermons. [o] Nicholls's Conference, Vol. I. [p] Jamblicus, in Vitâ Pythag. [q] See Page 34. [r] Stanhope's Sermons, at Boyle's Lectures. [s] John ix. 6. [t] John v. Mark iii. [u] Mark i. 31. * Ibid. v. 25, 26. [x] Matth. viii. 26. [y] Luke iv. 29, 30. Johnv iii. 59. [z] Matth. xii. 22. Mark ix. 25. Luke viii, 29. [a] John iv. 47. [b] Luke vii. 15. John xi. 44.

to Life and Health: When we behold these Miracles done in a Moment, sometimes without any [e] outward Application at all, always without such [f] as could have any natural Efficacy to serve such mighty Purposes; with a [g] Touch, nay, with the Touch [h] of a Garment; with a [i] Word, nay, with a Word, that operated effectually upon [k] the Absent, and at a Distance: When we consider this, I say, we cannot but be convinced of the Number and great Variety of Christ's Miracles. And, in like Manner, when we behold him giving [l] Sustenance to the Hungry, Supplies [k] to those in Want, Safety to them that were [l] ready to perish, Speech to the Dumb, Hearing to the Deaf, Eyes to the Blind, Understanding to the Disturbed, Strength to the Impotent, Limbs to the Maimed, Health to the Sick, Life to the Dead, and Release to Souls and Bodies held in Bondage by the Devil; we cannot but acknowledge the blessed Quality of such Miracles, as captivate our Affections, at the same Time that they raise our Astonishment: And, from the Number and Quality of them, both put together, cannot but conclude, that the Person must be from God, to whom was committed such a prodigious Extent of Power, all terminating in Wonders of Gentleness and Pity, of Beneficence and Love.

SECT. II.

The Preparatory Incidents before CHRIST*'s Crucifixion.*

Christ's Entry into Jerusalem.

IN this Course of his Ministry our Lord went about, preaching the Word, and working Miracles, and doing all Manner of Good, for three Years and upwards; till, the Time of his Return to his heavenly Father approaching, the Evangelists represent him, as assuming the Part of a King, and making his publick Entry into Jerusalem, but in a Pomp and Solemnity somewhat singular. For, [m] instead of numerous Guards, and triumphal Chariots, and costly Preparations, we find only the Attendance of a vulgar and despised Croud; the Person, for whom these Honours were designed, riding, in humble Poverty, upon a borrowed Ass [n]; and the Way before him, not covered with Tapestry, or rich Furniture, but strowed [o] with Branches, hastily cut down from Trees, and the Garments of them, who made up the Train. The Songs and Acclamations, applied to this Occasion, did not tell of bloody Battles fought, of Victories obtained at the Expence of his infinite Toil and Treasure, of Countries miserably harrassed, and reduced by Fire and Sword; but rehearsed the Mercies of God, long expected, and now fulfilled in the peaceful Reign of the Messiah, that Son of David, who should turn Mens [p] Swords into Plow-shares, and their Spears into Pruning-hooks, by establishing such Laws, as (if duly observed) would effectually curb and quiet those great Disturbers of Mankind, Envy, and Avarice, and Ambition; and settle the World in profound and perfect Tranquillity, upon Principles of Justice and Contentedness, Meekness and mutual Love.

At

[e] Mark ii. 11. [f] Mark i. 31. John ix. 7. [g] Matth. ix. 25. [h] Ibid. ix. 22.
[i] Luke vii. 14. [k] Matth. viii. 13. John iv. 50, 53. [l] Matth. xv. 31. [k] Ibid. xvii. 27.
[l] Ibid. xiv. 30, 31. [m] Stanhope, on the Epistles and Gospels, Vol. I.

[n] To ride upon an Ass may, in these Countries, be thought a very odd Thing: We reckon an Ass to be a contemptible Creature, and a Man, especially a Man of Character, riding upon an Ass to be a ridiculous Figure. These are Prejudices of our Time and Country: And when they, who look no farther than the Manners and Customs which are before them, examine this Part of sacred History by the Standard of modern Prejudices; they see, or think they see something, quite inconsistent with the Gravity or Dignity of the Person pretending to be King of the Jews, when Christ is represented entering in Triumph into Jerusalem mounted on an Ass. But as contemptible as an Ass, or a Man riding on an Ass, may be at present, from the Beginning it was not so. In many Countries, and particularly in Judea, Persons of the highest Distinction were usually so mounted. The Governors of Israel are described, in the Song of Deborah, as riding on white Asses, Judg. v. 10. The thirty Sons of Jair, who was Judge and Prince over Israel twenty Years, are said to ride on thirty Asses, Judg. x. 4. And another Judge of Israel is recorded to have had forty Sons, and thirty Nephews, that rode on seventy Ass-Colts, Judg. xii. 14. For the Matter of Fact is, that, in most Eastern Countries, Asses were generally made Use of for this Purpose, and Horses seldom or never mounted, but in Order of Battle. Bishop Sherlock's Dissertation iv, annexed to the Use and Intent of Prophesy.

[o] At the Feast of Tabernacles, it was the Custom of the Jews, not only to sing Hosannas with the greatest Joy, but also to carry Branches in their Hands, desiring (as the Jews still wish at this Feast) that they may thus rejoice at the Coming of the Messiah: For which Reason it is, that the Multitude, acknowledging Jesus to be the Messiah, used Hosannas, and the Rites observed in that Feast, wishing Prosperity to him and his Kingdom, from him that dwelleth ἐν τοῖς ὑψίστοις in the highest Heaven. Whitby, on Matth. xxi. 8.

[p] Isaiah ii. 4. and Micah vi. 3.

AT a former Paſſover, when the People, in Admiration of his Miracles, would have paid him Kingly Honours, he withdrew, and refuſed the unſeaſonable Teſtimony of their Zeal; becauſe his Acceptance of it then might have obſtructed the Efficacy of his Preaching: But now, that the Courſe of his Prophetic Office was finiſhed, and the Time of his Departure was at Hand, he permitted the People to proclaim his Regal Dignity, that their free and ſolemn Acknowledgements thereof might be a Ballance againſt the Shame and Scandal of his Croſs. And more than a Ballance they certainly will be to every impartial Conſiderer, when it is obſerved, that his Death was the Contrivance of a reſtleſs Party, prejudiced by ſecular Intereſt, and jealous of his growing Greatneſs in the Eſteem of the People; whereas theſe Acclamations and Acknowledgments were the Effect of Sincerity, and an honeſt Reverence to One, who (they verily believed) had fully anſwered all the Predictions concerning the Meſſias, and muſt of Neceſſity be that very Perſon, ſo long promiſed, ſo impatiently expected, and ſo punctually deſcribed by the ancient Prophets. The Deſign of it.

AND, as this ſolemn Entry was a Declaration of Chriſt's Kingdom, [q] ſo the Circumſtances, attending it, were ſignificant Intimations, that it was not to be of this World, ſince its Pomps and Proceſſions were ſo different from thoſe of earthly Princes. Our bleſſed Lord, indeed, could not have taken a more effectual Courſe, to confute that vain Imagination of the Meſſiah's temporal Dominion at his firſt Coming, than by ordering Matters ſo, as, in this only Inſtance of his receiving Princely Honours, to go counter to the cuſtomary Forms and Solemnities; [r] and, even in the Manner of his Triumph and Inauguration, to teach us Humility and Contempt of the Pride and Glories of this Life. But, how mean and deſpicable this Pomp and Appearance might be, it certainly drew upon him the Malice and Indignation of the Jewiſh Rulers, quickened them in their Meaſures againſt him, and confirmed them in the Expediency of his dying for the People, in that wicked Senſe intended by Caiphas. And therefore we may ſuppoſe that our Lord, who foreſaw every Conſequence diſtinctly, ſuffered the officious Reſpects of a well-meaning Multitude, to draw on his Paſſion, by exaſperating his bloody Enemies, and making them more vigorous, and impatient in the Execution of their wicked Deſign. Nor is their Conjecture to be found Fault with, who ſuppoſe that our Saviour intended this Pomp and Solemnity for a Type and Prelude of his triumphant Advent to the general Judgment; when, inſtead of a vulgar Train, he ſhall deſcend from his celeſtial Throne, with Troops of Angels and bleſſed Spirits innumerable, in a Figure, as becoming an univerſal Lord and Conqueror then, as this other was ſuitable to the Character and Condeſcenſion of a ſuffering Saviour now.

UPON our Saviour's triumphant Proceſſion to Jeruſalem, we find him, near the Mount of Olives, ſadly lamenting the Fate of the City, and all the diſmal Circumſtances, which he punctually foretels, as a Puniſhment determined by God, to avenge the Jews, for their obſtinate Infidelity, and affected Blindneſs; [s] If thou hadſt known even thou, at leaſt in this thy Day, the Things, which belong unto thy Peace; but now they are hid from thine Eyes: In the Temple, juſtly reſenting the Profanations of the Place, and, with a noble Zeal, driving out thoſe, who kept a publick Mart in the Court of the Gentiles; [t] ſaying unto them, It is written, my Houſe ſhall be called an Houſe of Prayer, but ye have made it a Den of Thieves: In the upper Room, celebrating his laſt Paſchal Supper, and inſtituting that bleſſed Sacrament (whereof we have treated [u] before) to be a conſtant Memorial of his meritorious Blood-ſhedding, and obliging all his Followers to obſerve the ſame in Remembrance of him: And (what deſerves a particular Conſideration) in the Garden of Gethſemane, expreſſing a Sorrow and Heavineſs of Soul, even unto Death; ſweating out large Drops of Blood, by Reaſon of the Pain and Agony, which he felt; and, through the amazing Proſpect of what he ſaw approaching him, ſending up his earneſt and importunate Prayer to God, [*] O my Father, if it be poſſible, let this Cup paſs from me.

IN opening this ſad and tragical Scene therefore, we ſhall, 1ſt, obſerve the Height and Bitterneſs of his Agony, and from what probable Cauſes it might ariſe; and then, 2dly, conſider what the Ingredients of this Cup might be, and, upon what Account, our Saviour might deprecate it with ſo much Importunity. His Agony in the Garden.

[q] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. I. 42. [r] Nicholls's Conference, Vol. I. [s] Luke xix. [t] Matth. xxi. 13. [u] See page 618. [*] Matth. xxvi. 39.

1. Now that this Agony, which our Saviour ſuffered in the Garden, was very grievous and exceſſive, not only [x] the ſtrong Expreſſions, whereby the Scriptures repreſent it, ſignify the utmoſt Horror and Amazement, Dejection of Mind, and Anxiety of Spirit; but the Earneſtneſs of his Petition, which he thrice repeats upon his Knees, and proſtrate on his Face, to ſhew the Vehemence of his Deſires; [y] his ſweating large Drops of Blood, which ſhewed the Extremity of his Fear and Conſternation; and the Appointment of an Angel, to ſtrengthen and ſupport him, which ſhewed the great Weight of what lay upon him, are ſufficient Indications: But then, from what Quarter all this Sorrow and Dejection, all this Amazement and Conſternation ſhould ariſe, is not ſo eaſy a Matter to determine. [z] Thoſe, who impute it only to a natural Dread and Abhorrence of Pain, and Torments, and Death, have this Difficulty to contend with, that, how grievous ſoever the Apprehenſion of theſe Things be, eſpecially to ſinful Fleſh and Blood; yet they are ſuch, as have been corrected by Reaſon, and, in their moſt tremendous Shapes, borne, not only by Chriſt's faithful Servants, the Martyrs, but even by many wiſe Men and Philoſophers of old: And therefore we can hardly imagine, that the Proſpect of the Pain and Ignominy of his Crucifixion could give this Exceſs of Sorrow and Conſternation to his Soul; eſpecially conſidering, that in the Space of three Days he knew he was to be releaſed, and for ever afterwards glorioufly rewarded, for what he then ſuffered.

Whence, occaſioned different Opinions.

IT is the Opinion of [a] others therefore, that this exquiſite Senſe of Pain and Dejection of Mind were occaſioned by the perfect and penetrating Light, which then diffuſed itſelf in his Mind all at once, concerning the Guilt and Demerit of Sin, and the Wrath of an incenſed God. They ſuppoſe, that the Image of all the Iniquities of the World (for which he was to ſuffer) did then appear clear, and lively, and expreſs to his Mind; and that all the vile and horrid Circumſtances of them ſtood (as it were) particularly ranged before his Eyes, in all their diſmal Colours: That he ſaw, for Inſtance, how much the Honour of the great God of Heaven and Earth was abuſed by them, and how many Millions of poor Souls they muſt inevitably have caſt under the Preſſures of a Wrath infinite and intolerable, had not he turned the Blow upon himſelf: That the Horror of this filled and amazed his vaſt apprehenſive Soul; and that thoſe Apprehenſions could not but affect his tender Heart, full of the higheſt Zeal for God's Glory, and the moſt relenting Compaſſion for the Souls of Men; till it fermented and boiled over with Tranſport and Agony, and even forced its Way through all his Body in thoſe ſtrange Ebullitions of Blood. "For, [b] if "the true Contrition of one ſingle Sinner, ſay they, bleeding under the Sting of the "Law only for his own Iniquities, cannot be performed without great Bitterneſs of "Sorrow and Remorſe; what Bounds can be ſet to that Grief, what Meaſures to "that Anguiſh, which proceeded from a full Apprehenſion of all the Tranſgreſſions "of ſo many Millions of Sinners?"

THIS is the common Solution: And yet there is ſomething in the Force of the Words, as well as other Paſſages in Scripture, which has induced [c] others to think, that, on this Occaſion, the Devil and his Angels had collected all their Force, in order to fill our Saviour's Mind with the moſt diſmal, terrifying Scenes of Horror, thereby to divert him from his intended Enterprize. For, 1. we may obſerve, that before he entered the Garden, where this Agony ſeized him, he expected ſome terrible Aſſault from theſe infernal Powers; and therefore he tells his Diſciples, [d] Hereafter I will [x] The Words in the Original, are three, λυπεῖσθαι, ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, and ἀδημονεῖν. The firſt, λυπεῖσθαι, is of a known and ordinary Signification, but, in this Caſe, it is to be raiſed to the higheſt Degree of its Significancy, as appears by the Words, which follow, περίλυπός ἐστιν ἡ ψυχή μου. So that it does not only denote an Exceſs of Sorrow, ſurrounding and encompaſſing the Soul; but alſo ſuch, as brings a Conſternation and Dejection of Mind, bowing the Soul under the Preſſure and Burthen of it. The ſecond, ἐκθαμβεῖσθαι, in the vulgar Latin, is pavere; but, according to the Greek Idiom, bears a much ſtronger Senſe, and ſignifies, indeed, the higheſt Degree of Fear, Horror, and Amazement. The third, ἀδημονεῖν, denotes the Conſequences of exceſſive Fear and Sorrow, i. e. Anxiety of Mind, Diſquietude, and Reſtleſſneſs. Pearſon, on the Creed.

[y] Our Saviour's ſweating Blood is not ſpoken by Way of Compariſon, or Hyperbole, but was really That, which Phyſicians call διαπήδησιν, when the ſerous Blood is grown ſo thin and hot, as to find a Paſſage out at the Pores of the Body, as in an extraordinary Sweat it may do, by rarifying the Tunicles of the Veſſels, which contain the Blood: And to this Purpoſe Maldonate tells us of one at Paris, in his Time, who had Drops of Blood mingled with his Sweat, at the hearing the Sentence of Death pronounced againſt him, though he was a Perſon of a very ſtrong Conſtitution. Stillingfleet's Sermons.

[z] See Stillingfleet's Sermons. Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. and his Sermons on ſeveral Occaſions. [a] See Pearſon, on the Creed, and South's Sermons, Vol. III. [b] Pearſon, ibid. [c] See Scott's Mediator. [d] John xiv. 30.

I will not talk much with you; for the Prince of this World cometh, and hath nothing in me; as if he had said, "give me leave now to discourse freely with you; because "within a little while I shall be so engaged, that I shall not be at Leisure to discharge "my Mind to you: For the Prince of the Devils is just now mustering up all his "Legions, and coming to make his Effort upon me; but this is my Comfort, he "will find nothing in me; no sinful Inclination to take part with him, no guilty Re-"flection to expose me to his Tyranny." And accordingly, when the Jews apprehended him, he expostulates with them, why they did not lay Hands on him before, when he was daily with them in the Temple, and then answers himself, [e] but this is your Hour, and the Power of Darkness. 2. We may observe, that, when the Disciples enter the Garden with our Saviour, he gave them a Caution, what extraordinary Danger they were in, and therefore bids them [f] pray, and [g] watch and pray, that they enter not into Temptation. Now this plainly implies, that, in that Time and Place, there was some Occasion requiring a more than ordinary Application to these Duties, which cannot so well be imputed to any Thing else, as those Numbers of evil Spirits, who had furiously assaulted their Master, and not altogether spared them: For, 3. we may observe, that, before our Saviour went into the Garden, he expressly told his Disciples, that his Hour was come, and, when he was in it, earnestly intreated them to watch with him. One would have thought therefore, that the dear Love which they bore him, and the infinite Concern they had in him, might have kept them awake for some Hours at least; and yet we find them suddenly asleep, and no sooner awoke, but asleep again and again; for the Text tells us, that [h] their Eyes were heavy: Heavy indeed, that could not hold up, for a few Hours, upon such an awakening Occasion: Now to what Cause can we impute this prodigious Drowsiness of theirs so well, as to a preternatural Stupefaction of their Senses, by some of these infernal Spirits, then conflicting with our Saviour; who, perhaps, to deprive him of the Solace of his Disciples Company, did, by their diabolical Art, produce that extraordinary Stupor, which oppressed them; that so, having him alone, they might have the greater Advantage to tempt, and terrify him?

THESE Observations make it reasonable to imagine, that this last Agony of our Saviour was occasioned by a mighty Struggle and Conflict with the Powers of Darkness, who having, by God's Permission, mustered up all their Strength, intended once more to try their Fortune against him; and, to this Purpose, surrounding him, very probably, with a mighty Host, exerted all their Power and Malice, in persecuting his innocent Soul, in distracting it with horrid Phantasms, in afflicting it with dismal Suggestions, in vexing and tormenting it with dire Imaginations, and dreadful Spectacles; and, in short, in practising all the Arts and Machinations, their Subtlety could invent, to tempt or deter him, if possible, from his gracious Design of redeeming the World.

2. I SEE no Reason, however, why all these terrifying and distracting Things, which Interpreters are so apt to separate, viz. the Apprehension of a cruel and ignominious Death, the Sense of the Guilt, and heinous Nature of Sin, the Prospect of God's Wrath, and the Combination of Devils, all approaching him, like a black and angry Cloud, fraught with Thunder, and ready to break over his devoted Head, might not be united in our Saviour's View; and, meeting together, make up the several Ingredients of that bitter Cup, which we find him, with such [k] strong Crying and Tears, imploring his Father to remove. This will account for our Saviour's Conduct, the Expressions of his Dread, and the Deprecation of his Doom, as he saw the Cloud advancing; whereas to make any one of these singly, much more the Apprehension, that he was shortly to die, and his Soul, for some Time, to be separated from his Body, the Cause of his excessive Sorrow and Uneasiness, [l] is, in Effect, to disparage the Constancy of the Captain of our Salvation, and to give a Preference (as we said before) to the Behaviour of some Soldiers of his, that have since fought under his Banner, in the Confirmation of that Truth, which they gladly sealed with their Blood.

The Cup, what.

"BUT

[e] Luke xxii. 53. [f] Ibid. ver. 40. [g] Matth. xxvi. 41. [h] Ibid. ver. 43, &c.
[i] Scott's Mediator. [k] Heb. v. 7.

[l] If there had been nothing in this Cup, but what is commonly incident to human Nature, as to the Apprehensions of Death or Pain, it seems strange, that he, who had the greatest Innocency, the most perfect Charity, the freest Resignation of himself, the fullest Assurance of the Reward to come, should express a greater Horror of his Sufferings, than Thousands did, who suffered for his Sake. Stillingfleet's Sermons.

Why Chriſt declined it.

" BUT, how bitter ſoever the Ingredients of this Cup were, why ſhould our Sa" viour, who came into the World for this Purpoſe, that he might ſuſtain the Wrath " of God, and taſte Death for all Men, endeavour to decline it? He certainly knew " what God had decreed, and himſelf had conſented to it, before his Incarnation;
" and therefore, when he came to the Point, for what Reaſon was it that he altered
" his Purpoſe, and deſired a Releaſe from his former Engagements?" Now in Anſwer to this, it muſt be obſerved, 1. [m] That, in Regard our bleſſed Saviour had the divine and human Nature both united in one Perſon, great Caution muſt be uſed in obſerving his Actions, that we do not miſtake in aſſigning any of them to a wrong Principle. For, as thoſe Works of Wonder, which exceeded, or controuled all the Powers of created Nature, muſt be attributed to a Principle omnipotent and divine; ſo in thoſe others, which relate to Subjection and Suffering, he muſt be underſtood to proceed upon a Principle purely human, and that the Faculties of the Divine Nature were, in ſuch Caſes, totally ſuſpended. 2. That, the Efficacy and Myſtery of Man's Redemption conſiſting in this Union, it was neceſſary, that there ſhould be a clear and undoubted Demonſtration given of the Reality of both theſe Natures in Chriſt; which had not been done, unleſs, as our Lord's Miracles evidenced him to be truly God; ſo all the eſſential Properties and Affections of our Nature had appeared in him too viſibly, to leave any Doubt of his being truly Man. Now, ſince the diſtinguiſhing Marks of human Nature lie chiefly in the Soul, there had not been that Demonſtration given of our Saviour's perfect Humanity, unleſs he had diſcovered, in his Conduct, an exact Reſemblance to us in all the natural Paſſions and Inclinations of our Souls. 3. That in this Soul of ours there is a twofold Principle, Reaſon and Senſe; that Senſe catches at the preſent, purſues Eaſe and Safety, and induſtriouſly conſults the Preſervation and Advantage of the Body: Whereas Reaſon enlarges our Proſpect, takes into Conſideration diſtant and future Objects, and perſuades the foregoing ſome Satisfactions, the running ſome Hazards, and enduring ſome Difficulties, in the Diſcharge of our Duty, and the Expectation of a greater Good in Reverſion. So that under the former are comprehended all our Natural Paſſions, which are the ſecret Springs, that move us in what we do; under the latter are the Underſtanding and Judgment, which direct, and regulate, and bound, and over-rule thoſe Paſſions: But ſtill both theſe are conſtituent Parts, and as neceſſary to make a perfect Soul, as the rational Soul and human Body are to make one perfect Man. And from hence it follows, 4. That the Weakneſs and Corruption of our Nature, as it ſtands depraved by Sin, does not conſiſt in our being tenderly touched with the Fear of preſent Evil, or the Deſire of preſent Good, but only in ſuffering thoſe Fears and Deſires to prevail, and take Place, againſt the Dictates of Reaſon and Duty. Averſion to Pain and Conflict, to Sorrow and Death, and whatever is ſhocking and frightful to human Nature, are Affections interwoven with our original Frame and Conſtitution: Adam in his State of Innocence felt them; and therefore it is no juſt Reflection upon the ſecond Adam, that he, in like Manner, felt them too. Infirmities, indeed, theſe Averſions may be called, in Compariſon of theſe Perfections, which belong to God and unbodied Spirits; but then they are ſuch Infirmities, as all, who partake of Bodies, muſt have, and which, if our Saviour was deſtitute of, he could not have been truly Man. Now, 5. If Chriſt, as Man, could not be altogether indifferent, and unconcerned at ſuch ſevere Trials, as the Impoſition of the Burthen of our Sins, the Infliction of Pain and Torment, and his approaching Combat with the Powers of Darkneſs, muſt neceſſarily bring upon him; then ſurely it could not miſ-become him to uſe all poſſible Means for declining them, and, conſequently, to expreſs his Concern, by praying againſt them, with ſuch Reſerve and Limitation, as we find he does; [n] Father, if thou be willing, remove this Cup from me; nevertheleſs, not my Will, but thine be done. For it was no Diſparagement of his Love to Mankind, to deteſt Death, and Pain, and Sufferings; but, in Truth, an higher Commendation of it, that, notwithſtanding ſo quick a Senſe, and ſo paſſionate a Regret, he offered himſelf to undergo whatever God, for their Benefit and Salvation, ſhould think proper to lay upon him. The more vehemently he wiſhed for a Releaſe, the more meritorious was his Submiſſion; and the ſtronger his Averſions were, the more he renounced his own Will, and, conſequently, the more acceptable was his Compliance with that of his heavenly Father.

AFTER

[m] Stanhope's Sermons on ſeveral Occaſions. [n] Luke xxii. 42.

AFTER the Jews had reſolved, in Council, to put our Saviour to Death, the Evangeliſt acquaints us, that no Man laid Hands on him for Fear of the People. [o] Such was his Eſteem among all thoſe, who envied him not, that they could not ſeize him publickly, without the Hazard of a Tumult; and therefore they concluded it the ſafeſt Method to ſeize him by Night, in his Retirement, where none ſhould be aware to reſiſt their Attempt. Judas, in all Probability, was a Man of commendable Manners, and inoffenſive Carriage; had he been otherwiſe, our Saviour would have ſcarce taken him into the Number of his Apoſtles, nor would he have eſcaped the Cenſure and Reproach of the Jews, for having ſuch a Blot in his Train. Nay, in the very Night of his Treaſon, and while it was enquired, among themſelves, who might poſſibly be the Traitor, Judas, we find, lay no more under the common Suſpicion of ill Deſigns againſt his Maſter, than any of the twelve: And therefore we may ſuppoſe, that he was a Perſon of a ſober and regular Converſation, plauſible in his Addreſs, and full of ſeeming Reſpect to his Lord; though he was certainly an Hypocrite, and had another latent Sin, which put him upon the moſt deteſtable Meaſures. Whether it was his own Option, or our Saviour's Order and Appointment, that he ſhould carry the Bag, or common Purſe, and ſo, in the Manner of a domeſtick Steward, give Alms to the Poor, and provide Things neceſſary for the Maintenance of our Lord and his Attendants; but ſo it was, that his Employment in this Office adminiſtered Matter to his Covetouſneſs, and gave him frequent Opportunities of purloining not a little to himſelf; till, having gone on ſome Time [p] in robbing the Poor, and defrauding his Maſter, Satan, at length, ſuggeſts to him another Way of ſatisfying his Avarice, even the betraying him for a Sum of Money: And when this Suggeſtion prevailed with him to go to the High-Prieſts with this Queſtion, What will ye give me to betray him? Then [q] Satan fully entered into him, and carried him, without Remorſe, to the Performance of that horrid Enterprize. For, having received a vile Reward for the Hire of his Conſcience, and finding, ſoon after, a convenient Opportunity, he fetches a Band of Soldiers, and conducts them to the Garden, where the Sorrows of our Lord were propitiating for the Sins of Eden; and there, by a ſhameleſs Addreſs, and perfidious Kiſs to diſtinguiſh him, delivers up his Maſter into the Hand of his Enemies.

Judas's Treachery.

His Character.

'TIS no ſmall Aggravation then of this Man's Crime, that he was a Diſciple, One, who had given up his Name and Faith to our Lord, and not only heard his Doctrine, and ſeen his Miracles, but himſelf likewiſe preached the Goſpel, and wrought Miracles, in the Power of his Commiſſion: And that his Wickedneſs was not the Effect of a ſudden Surprize, or Want of Recollection, but the Work of Deliberation, and long Contrivance, and ſolemn Debate. He conſulted with the High-Prieſts and Elders, concerning the Time, the Place, and every Circumſtance for the moſt convenient Execution of his Villainy; he ſet his own Soul and his Maſter's Life to ſale [r] at a vile Price; he continued his Attendance upon that Maſter ſtill, that ſo, under the Diſguiſe of Friendſhip, and by much laboured Hypocriſy, he might the better carry on his Deſign of deſtroying him; and, when his Project was thus formed, he had many broad Hints given him, that his Deſigns were detected, many Warnings of the Sin and Danger he was running into, and that it [s] had been better for him he had never been born; and yet none of theſe altered his Purpoſe. So that, in this Act of Judas there was a Complication of Ingratitude, Perfidiouſneſs, Hypocriſy, prepenſe Malice, and a ſettled inflexible Reſolution to do wickedly, beyond the Power of Advice and Warning, and the moſt awful Menaces to controul it; a ſeared Conſcience, and hardened Infidelity; and a formed avowed Deſign to ruin the Cauſe of Chriſtianity, in the Deſtruction of its Author; and therefore we need leſs wonder, that we find the Repentance, which he afterwards expreſſed, ſo inavailable to his Pardon and Salvation.

The Nature and Aggravation of his Crime.

HE expreſſed great Sorrow for what he had done, and condemned himſelf ſeverely for his wicked Treachery; [t] he brought again the thirty Pieces of Silver, for which he had ſold his Maſter's Life, and not only took the Shame of his Fault to himſelf, but in ſome Degree made Satisfaction to his injured Maſter, by a publick Declaration of his unblemiſhed Innocence. When he found Matters grow to ſo deſperate an Height, that there was no Probability of our Saviour's eſcaping the Malice of the Jews, he began to reflect, very likely, on the Prediction of our bleſſed Lord concerning the dreadful Vengeance, which ſhould overtake the Perſon that betrayed him to Death: Theſe, and probably many other Reflections working together, with all that Horror and Confuſion, which Fear and Guilt are known to create in Mens Minds, ſeem to have made up the Concern, which the Evangeliſt calls repenting himſelf; a Concern reſulting from a Principle of Self-Preſervation, in the moſt carnal Senſe of the Word; but we find not any due Senſe in him of the Villainy of the Fact, nor any condemning himſelf, as the baſeſt, the moſt ungrateful, moſt abandoned Wretch alive; one, that had violated the Laws of God, and Society, and Nature, and caſt all Fidelity, and Gratitude, and common Humanity, behind his Back. All which, and a great deal more, were not only Aggravations due to his Crime, but the very propereſt Occaſions of Remorſe. He felt, indeed, ſome Regret for what he had done, (as an awakened Conſcience cannot fence off ſuch Reflections) and he wiſhed, perhaps, he had never done it; but the Regret, which he felt, ſeems rather to have been the Effect of Confuſion and Rage, than any godly relenting; the Agonies of Frenzy, and Amazement, and Deſpair, which are the moſt diſtant Things in the World from that ſober and regular Sorrow, which worketh [a] Repentance unto Salvation, not to be repented of.

His Repentance.

[o] Young's Sermons, Vol. II. [p] John xii. 6. [q] Luke xxii. 3. [r] Thirty Pieces of Silver is the ſame with thirty Shekels, which, of our Money, according to Dr Hammond, is 3 l. 15 s. [s] Matth. xxvi. 24. [t] Ibid. xxvii. 2, 3.

Wherein it was defective.

HEREIN then lay the Defect of Judas's Repentance, that the Horror of his Sin ran him into Depair. [*] For Repentance, we muſt know, does not barely conſiſt in Sorrow for Sin, but in ſuch a Sorrow, as is tempered and ſupported with Hope; not in a mere Confeſſion of our Tranſgreſſions, but in ſuch a Confeſſion as depends on Forgiveneſs. It imports the Change of our Manners; but if there be not a firm Perſuaſion, that our ſincere Endeavours, for the future, will be kindly received, and our former Iniquities graciouſly paſſed over, all Ground and Encouragement for ſuch a Change is taken away. It requires, that we chuſe new Objects for our Affections, draw them off from the World, and its treacherous Allurements, and ſettle them on God, and heavenly Things; but he that loves God muſt, of Neceſſity, conſider him under ſome other Character, than thoſe of a ſtern Judge, and implacable Avenger: He muſt have ſome Notions of his Clemency and Goodneſs; for nothing but what is good, can be the Motive of our Love; nor does it work upon our Affections, but in Proportion to what we apprehend it: And therefore no Man can fix his Affections on Heaven and God, who is the Fountain of all Felicity there, who has no Proſpect, no Hope of ever having a Part in the Joys of that bleſſed Place.

REASON, indeed, cannot lead us to infer, that Sorrow for the paſt, and Amendmend for the Time to come, can be any equivalent Satisfaction for our Offences: But Revelation aſſures us, that God may be appeaſed, and it hath told us withal in what Manner he is appeaſed, even by the precious Blood of his Son, who came to give his Life a Ranſom for many. In this Matter God hath declared himſelf ſo fully, that the very Heinouſneſs of our Sins is not a greater Provocation, than the Diſtruſt of Mercy (which, in Effect, is making God a Lyar, and diſparaging the Merits of Chriſt's Sacrifice) after we have committed them. So that Hope of Mercy and Faith in the Promiſes and Satisfaction of Chriſt are the very Life and Spirit of true Repentance, eſſential, and indiſpenſably requiſite to quicken and recommend every Part of it; and therefore no Wonder if Judas's Repentance proved ſo ineffectual, which was plainly deſtitute of theſe neceſſary Qualifications. [x] If it be enquired, how Judas came to be wanting in this Point; the immediate Cauſe, no Queſtion, was, that God had forſaken him, and withdrawn his Grace from him; but then, if we purſue the Enquiry, the Matter will fall, at laſt, upon Judas himſelf, as the proper and original Cauſe of his own Miſery and Deſtruction.

An Objection.

"BUT if this Fact of Judas was foretold, as we find it was [y] in a Propheſy, as "high as the Pſalmiſt, wherein was he ſo mightily to blame? What was foretold, "was likewiſe pre-ordained, and made neceſſary to come to paſs by an irreſiſtible "Decree: Now, where there is a Fatality of acting, there can be no Choice, and "where there is no Choice, there can be no Guilt." The Fallacy of ſuch Arguments as theſe, which, from the Notion of Divine Preſcience, charge God with the Sins of Mankind, is what we had Occaſion to conſider, in treating of [z] the Doctrine of Predeſtination; and we ſhall only take Notice, in this Place, that miſerable Judas was not aware of any Power in this Argument to ſuſtain his Mind, when he came to reflect on

Anſwered.

[a] 2 Cor. vii. 10. [*] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [x] Ibid. [y] Pſal. xli. 9.
[z] Vid. Page 151.

on what he had done. He could not interpret, that the Foreknowledge of God had any Cauſality, or Influence upon his Sin, being conſcious, that there was Cauſe enough for that, ariſing from his own Deportment. For having given Way to a covetous Deſire, and hardened his Heart, by a ſinful Indulgence, againſt all Impreſſions of wholeſome Counſel, he was convinced, that the Propheſy of his Treaſon could not fail of its Event; becauſe, when the Temptation offered, he found himſelf under a Neceſſity to comply: But then he knew withal, that it was a Neceſſity, not fatal, but natural, not of God's decreeing, but of his own procuring. [a] Under the juſter Apprehenſions of his Crime, he is ſaid to have repented, i. e. he grieved, he deſpaired, and then hanged himſelf; and, though we allow, that his Paſſions tranſported him too extravagantly in theſe latter Violences, yet, even from what is rational in his Grief, we may learn this Leſſon, —— "That, when an awakened "Conſcience comes to eſtimate the Nature of its Guilt, there will be found but "poor Shelter in all thoſe Palliations, that can be formed by human Subtlety and "licentious Wit."

A Caution againſt Covetouſneſs.

ONE very ſucceſsful Artifice, made uſe of by the Devil for our Deſtruction, is to dreſs up his Temptations to ſuch Advantage, that all the Profit, all the Pleaſure, all we promiſe to ourſelves as the End of our ſinning, ſhall be ſet in its beſt Light, and appear in Proportion larger than the Life; but all the Difficulty, all the Danger, the Troubles, and ill Effects of it ſhall be infinitely leſſened, or altogether concealed from our Sight. This Deceit is one Cauſe, why we find ourſelves ſo very different Men, while we are preſſing forward, heated with Deſire, and big with falſe and flattering Expectations, from what we are, when looking back upon the Thing done, and ſtung with Reproaches and Self-condemnation. Now this was exactly the State of Judas: His Greedineſs of Gain blinded his Eyes, and quite diverted his Thoughts from conſidering the Horror of his Treachery: But then the Reflection fell upon his Mind with a terrible After-blow; and he, who brought again the thirty Pieces of Silver, would have given ten thouſand Worlds, had he been Maſter of them, never to have yielded to this villainous Suggeſtion. [b] The Pieces looked dazzling and pleaſant to him at the firſt Sight; but, by that Time he had had them a little in his Hands, ſuch a loathing Regret grew upon his Mind, that he could not in the leaſt enjoy what he had ſo ſtrongly coveted. Let this Example therefore teach us to [c] take Heed, and beware of Covetouſneſs; becauſe [d] the Love of Money is the Root of all Evil, and they who will be rich, who reſolve, and make it their Buſineſs, and ſtick at nothing to make them rich, fall into Temptation, and a Snare, and into many fooliſh and hurtful Luſts, which drown Men in Deſtruction and Perdition.

Chriſt's Sufferings.

As ſoon as Judas had betrayed our Saviour Chriſt, the Soldiers immediately ſeize him, and bind him, and carry him away to the High-Prieſt's Palace. [e] Caiaphas was High-Prieſt, at that Time; but Annas, having formerly borne that Office, and being a Man of great Authority in the Sanhedrim, they bring him firſt of all before him, and, as he was upon his Examination, [f] an Officer ſmote him on the Face, and ſhamefully inſulted him. From Annas he was ſent to Caiaphas, who having convened the Council, pretended to proceed againſt him in a judicial Way; but, finding no Evidence ſufficient to convict him, he adjured him by the living God to tell him whether he was Chriſt, the Son of God; to which our Saviour anſwering in the Affirmative, the High-Prieſt, in the Name of the Aſſembly, accuſed him of Blaſphemy, and ſo, declaring him guilty of Death, for the preſent diſmiſſed the Council.

THE Jews, at this Time, were [g] under the Juriſdiction of the Roman Governor; and, having no Power to condemn any Man to Death, the next Morning they led him

[a] Young's Sermons, Vol. I. [b] Young, ibid. [c] Luke xii. 15. [d] 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.

[e] Annas and Caiaphas are both called High-Prieſts; Annas being a Man of principal Authority among the Jews, and Caiaphas placed by Pontius Pilate, the Procurator, in the Pontificate. For the Succeſſion of the High-Prieſt was now changed, the lineal Deſcendant of Aaron being poſtponed, and ſome other, whom the Procurator pleaſed, named to that Office every Year, or removed, as oft as he thought fit.

[f] The Injury done the holy Jeſus in this Blow, was heightened in this Reſpect, that the Perſon, who ſtruck him, was one Malchus, an Idumean Slave, and the very Man, for whom he had wrought a Miracle a little before in curing his Ear. Howell's Hiſtory.

[g] About threeſcore Years before our Saviour's Birth, the Jews, by Pompey the Great, were made tributary to the Romans; And although, during the Life of Hyrcanus, the High-Prieſt, the Reign of Herod, and his Son, Archelaus, the Roman State ſuffered the Jews to be ruled by their own Laws and Governors; yet, when Archelaus was baniſhed by Auguſtus, they received their Governors from the Roman Emperor, being made Part of the Province of Syria, which belonged to his Care. In the Life of Auguſtus, there was a Succeſſion of three, Caponius, Ambivius, and Rufus. At the Beginning of the Reign of Tiberius, they were governed by Valerius Gracchus, and, at his Departure, by Pontius Pilate. The Office which this Pilate bore, was the Procuratorſhip of Judea; but what this Office was is not ſo eaſy to determine, becauſe it was newly introduced into the Roman Government. For, him away to Pilate, in Hopes of prevailing with him to ratify their Sentence. And, to this Purpoſe, they brought ſeveral Accuſations againſt him, pretending that he perverted the Nation, forbad Tribute to be paid unto Cæſar, and ſet himſelf up for a King. But our Saviour diſclaiming all ſecular Power, and the Governor underſtanding that he was a Galilean, took Occaſion from thence to diſcharge himſelf of the Jews Importunity, and immediately ſent him to Herod, the Governor of Galilee, who was then at Jeruſalem, upon the Occaſion of the Feaſt. Herod was glad to ſee Jeſus; for he had long deſired it; and, having heard much of his Fame, expected to have beheld ſome Miracle done by him; but, being diſappointed in that, he, in Revenge, delivered him up to his Attendants, who treated him with all poſſible Contempt and Ridicule, and ſo ſent him back to Pilate. [h] Pilate was a Man of Pride and Cruelty enough: Philo, who has given us his Character, chargeth him with ſelling of Juſtice, and giving any Sentence for Money; with Rapines, with Injuries, with Murthers, with unjuſt Tormentings, with putting Men arbitrarily to Death, and with much exceſſive Cruelty, during his whole Adminiſtration. But ſo apparent was our Saviour's Innocence, that even this Governor profeſſes he can find no Fault in him, and labours with the People to have him acquitted. When this would not do, he endeavours to ſave his Life, by propoſing ſome lighter Puniſhment to be inflicted on him; but, when this was rejected too, he mentions him as the fitteſt Perſon to be releaſed, in Honour of the Feſtival. When this they refuſed, and another was made choice of, in hopes of moving their Compaſſion, he had him brought out, diſguiſed, and miſuſed as he was by the Soldiers, and offered to ſcourge him, and let him go: But this exaſperated the People to that Degree, that, adding Threats to their Clamours, they prevailed with the Governor, contrary to his own Conviction, as well as his Wife's Sollicitation, to releaſe Barabbas unto them, [i] and to deliver Jeſus [k] immediately to be crucified.

Pilate's Character.

The Aggravations of Chriſt's Sufferings.

THIS is a plain Narrative of the Fact. And now to obſerve ſome Aggravations of it: To have his Blood ſet to Sale at a Price, and that but a poor one too; that Blood, which was a Purchaſe, more than equivalent for the whole World, rated at thirty Pieces of Silver; to be betrayed, and ſold by one of his own Servants, his Friend, and conſtant Companion; to be aſſaulted with Swords and Staves, and apprehended as a common Robber, and Peſt of Mankind; to be hurried from one High-Prieſt to another, and there blind-folded, buffeted, ſpit upon, and inſulted; to be expoſed to the mercenary Tongues of falſe Witneſſes, and in the Midſt of all his Diſtreſs left alone, not one Friend, not one Diſciple to ſtand by him; but betrayed by One, forſaken by the reſt, and ſolemnly diſowned and denied by the Chief of them; to be dragged from one Judgment-Seat to another, and, when neither Pilate nor Herod could find any Fault in him, to have an unjuſt Sentence of Death pronounced againſt him; to have a known Robber and Murtherer, one who ſtood convicted of Sedition and Blood, preferred before him; to be made a Spectacle to the People, and a Laughing-Stock to thoſe, that were about him; to be arrayed ridiculouſly in Purple, as if he pretended to a Royalty, which belonged not to him; to have a mock Crown and Scepter given him, and Obeyſance made to him in Jeſt and Wantonneſs; Royal Salutations, together with Spittings in his Face, and his Scepter broke about his Head, to make him more contemptible: Theſe are all of them Circumſtances of ſuch Horror, and Inſolence, and Cruelty, as render this a Caſe without Parallel, and a Wickedneſs beyond Example: And yet obſerve, with what invincible Patience he bore this Contradiction of Sinners againſt himſelf. He did not

For, before the Dominion of that City was changed from a Commonwealth into an Empire, there was no ſuch publick Office, in any of the Provinces, and, particularly in Judea, none, till after the Baniſhment of Archelaus, ſome Years ſubſequent to our Saviour's Birth. When Auguſtus divided the Provinces of the Empire into two Parts, (one of which he kept for his own Care, and left the other to the Inſpection of the Senate) he ſent, together with the Preſident of each Province, a Procurator, whoſe Buſineſs it was to take an Account of the Tribute, and whatever elſe was due to the Emperor, and to order and diſpoſe of the ſame to his Advantage. Neither was there, at the firſt Inſtitution of this Office, any other Act belonging properly to their Juriſdiction, but ſuch a Care and Diſpoſal of the Imperial Revenue, which they exerciſed, as inferior, and ſubordinate to the Preſident, who was always ſupreme Provincial Officer. Now Judea, being made Part of the Province of Syria, and, conſequently, under the Care of the Preſident of that Province, according to this Inſtitution, a particular Procurator was aſſigned unto it, for the diſpoſing of the Emperor's Revenue; and, becauſe the Nation of the Jews was always ſuſpected to be of a rebellious Diſpoſition againſt the Roman State, and the Preſident of Syria, who had the Power of the Sword, was forced to attend upon the other Parts of the Province; therefore the Procurator of Judea was inveſted with a Power of Life and Death, and the whole Power of Judicature left in the Hands of the Reſident-Procurator. Pearſon, on the Creed. [h] Prideaux's Connection, Lib. IX. [i] Mark xv. 15. [k] This was contrary to the Tiberian Law, which, about twelve Years before this Time, decreed in Favour of condemned Priſoners, that, after Sentence paſſed, Execution ſhould be deferred ten Days. Howell's Hiſtory.

not impeach the Righteouſneſs of God, for ſuffering ſuch Indignities to befal a blameleſs and innocent Perſon; [l] he was wounded, not for his own, but for our Tranſgreſſions; he was bruiſed, not for his own, but for our Iniquities; he was oppreſſed, he was afflicted, yet he opened not his Mouth; for, [m] when he was reviled, he reviled not again; when he ſuffered, he threatened not; but committed himſelf to him that judgeth righteouſly, leaving us an Example, that we might follow his Steps.

St Peter's Fall.

WHEN our bleſſed Saviour was taken by the Jews, and carried away to the High-Prieſt's Palace, St Peter, we are told, [n] followed afar off, and went in, and ſat with the Servants, in order to ſee the End. From the ſeveral Paſſages, wherein this Apoſtle is concerned, we may learn, that he was a Perſon of a ſanguine Complexion, and great Courage: His making ſo many Profeſſions of a fixed Adherence to his Maſter's Cauſe, let the Conſequence be what it would; his drawing his Sword in his Vindication, and adventuring his ſingle Reſiſtance againſt a ſtrong Body of Men, which came armed and prepared to apprehend him, may ſufficiently juſtify this Part of his Character. However, when he came to the High-Prieſt's Palace, he found Matters there in ſuch Confuſion; the Pomp and Solemnity of the Council met together, the ſevere and dreadful Face of Juſtice, the Spite and Malice of every Perſon in Authority, and the Inſults and Indignities, the Forgery and falſe Evidences thrown upon his Maſter, ſo terrified and ſhocked his Courage, that the bold St Peter, who, but a little before, had ſingly engaged a whole Band of armed Men, to reſcue his Maſter, upon the Accuſation of a poor Servant-Wench, now ſhamefully abjures him.

The Occaſion of it.

Circumſtances.

[o] FEAR, we know, is a Paſſion ſo interwoven in human Nature, and ſo immediately conſequent upon the Principle of Self-Preſervation, that, in ſome Circumſtances, it may befal the beſt and braveſt Minds. In theſe Conjunctures we pity Mens Failings, and God, no Doubt, makes favourable Allowances, when human Nature is ſurprized, and unable to withſtand an unexpected Shock. This, however, was not St Peter's Caſe entirely. The bitter Things, that were come upon his Maſter, had been foretold over and over again, and he himſelf ſharply rebuked for not giving a ready Credence to them. He had been taught, that Hatred, and Perſecution, and Contempt was to be the Lot of the firſt Planters of the Goſpel; that the Diſciples were not above their Maſter, but appointed by God to follow him in his Sufferings, as well as his Virtues; and, in ſuch their Diſtreſs, ordered [p] to fear, not them, who could kill the Body only, but him alone, who, after he had killed, had Power to caſt into Hell. All this, firmly believed, was certainly enough to prepare his Mind, and inſpire him with Courage, had he been called to ſuffer in his own Perſon. But this he was not: He only ſaw his Maſter ſuffer, and ſuffer no more, than what had been frequently foretold. No Man had yet laid Hands on him, nor any Perſon in Power and Authority given him the leaſt Moleſtation; only a few inferior Servants officiouſly put the Queſtion, and he, with a ſhameleſt Falſehood, labours to clear himſelf of it; [q] I know not the Man, neither underſtand I what thou ſayeſt. Had the Denial been but once, it might have been deemed ſome ſudden Lapſe of Mind, and gone off with a better Conſtruction; but the Denial is twice repeated, and every Time with more Vehemence; till, at laſt, not content to back one Lye with another, he flies to Oaths and Curſes, profanely calls God to witneſs, and imprecates his Judgment upon his own Head, in a Thing that he knew utterly falſe and baſe.

Aggravations.

THESE are ſome of the ſad Circumſtances of our Apoſtle's Fall: And theſe Circumſtances are all aggravated by the many Advantages he had to do better: [r] A Perſon, who, for the Space of three Years and more, had the Honour of our Saviour's Converſation, the Conviction of his Miracles, and the Inſtruction of his Doctrine; who had been let into a full and diſtinct Knowledge of thoſe Myſteries, which, for wiſe Reaſons, were delivered to the Multitude in Terms ſometimes ambiguous; had been admitted to his Tranſfiguration on the Mount, his Converſe with Moſes and Elias, and the hearing of that Voice from God's excellent Glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed, [s] as himſelf teſtifies: A Perſon, that hereupon had made Confeſſion of his Maſter's Divinity, and received his Commendations for it; had been choſen a Companion of his Agonies and Sufferings, and forewarned frequently of the great Danger of denying him; who, in a due Senſe of this, had,

[l] Iſa. liii. 5.
[m] 1 Pet. ii. 21, 23.
[n] Matth. xxvi. 58.
[o] Stanhope's Sermons on ſeveral Occaſions.
[p] Luke xii. 5.
[q] Matth. xxvi. 70, 72.
[r] Stanhope, ibid.
[s] 2 Pet. i. 17, 18.

that very Evening, profeſſed himſelf ready to go with him [t] into Priſon, and to Death; and, to diſtinguiſh his Affection and Conſtancy above any of his Brethren, declared, that "though all ſhould be offended becauſe of his Maſter's Sufferings, yet would not he; and though he were to die with him, yet would he not deny him: A Perſon, I ſay, placed in that Rank and Elevation, to fall off in the Time of Trial; to deny and abjure that very Maſter, to whom he had made ſuch large Profeſſions; to diſclaim all Relation to, and all Knowledge of him, and that with the bitterеſt Oaths and Imprecations; this implies a Guilt ſtill more heinous, the more his Knowledge and former Conviction, the more his Warning and long Experience, the more his Profeſſions and boaſted Firmneſs of Mind were conſpicuous; and we read this Paſſage to ſmall Purpoſe, if it does not convince us of the miſerable Frailty even of the beſt Men, and effectually overthrow all thoſe vain Confidences, which are apt to riſe in our Hearts from our own ſuppoſed Strength and Virtue.

And Uſes of it. WHAT a lamentable Inſtance have we here of one of the greateſt Men, that ever was, falling in the moſt ſcandalous Manner? And who ſhall hereafter dare to depend upon the higheſt Degrees of Knowledge, when one ſo well inſtructed, ſo perfectly ſatisfied in the Chriſtian Truth, was yet, in Deſpite of the fulleſt Convictions of his own Conſcience, driven to deny the Lord that taught, and the Lord that bought him? Who ſhall preſume upon the beſt Reſolutions, when he, who declared ſo firm a Purpoſe of adhering to Jeſus, even to the Loſs of his own Life, ſhamefully retracted, and diſclaimed all Relation to him? And, if ſo great a Champion ſo ſoon gave Ground, how ſhall we be able to ſtand in the Day of Battle? We, who are Men as well as he, but not near ſo well appointed for this ſpiritual Combat; we, who have the ſame Principle of Corruption to betray us, and the ſame Paſſions to bear us down; but few, very few, the ſame Knowledge and Wiſdom, the ſame Courage and Reſolution, the ſame Zeal and Affection for our Maſter, that this Apoſtle had, and yet he was foiled. Blame therefore, we may, the Conduct of St Peter, and pity his Infirmity, when we pleaſe to overlook ourſelves; but, certainly, if we conſider the general State of human Nature, the Leſſon, which this Example teaches us, is properly this—That Reliance upon our own Strength is Folly, and the Iſſue of it, Defeat; that, in all our ſpiritual Encounters, our beſt and ſafeſt Way is to flee unto God by Supplication and Prayer, becauſe (as the Apoſtle himſelf learned by ſad Experience) they, who * are kept unto Salvation, are not ſupported by their own Strength, but are kept through Faith, and by the Power of God.

His Repentance, WE ſhould be injurious, however, to the Memory of St Peter, not to take Notice of his Repentance, as well as his Fall; who, upon the crowing of the Cock, and our Saviour's [x] turning, and looking upon him, remembered the Word that Jeſus had ſaid, and found, by comparing his Behaviour with it, how ſhamefully he had fallen from his boaſted Courage and Conſtancy, how frail and unſtable his ſtrongeſt Reſolutions had proved; how eaſily he had been betrayed into a Crime, that he thought himſelf not capable of; how baſe he had been to ſo kind a Maſter, how falſe to his Promiſes, how regardleſs of Truth, how peremptory in the moſt notorious Falſhood, how profane and profligate in his Oaths and Curſes; and when his Offence was thus ſet before him in its proper Colours, and loaded with all the Aggravations, which belonged to it, the Spectacle proved ſo frightful, that he could no longer refrain from Tears; he went out, and wept bitterly. And ſufficient Reaſon he had to weep: For, beſides the many particular Circumſtances, which heightened his Guilt, and embittered the Rememberance of ſo foul an Offence; the very Kindneſs of his Maſter, who, in the Midſt of his Contumelies and Sufferings, ſhewed a greater Concern for his Servant's Sin, than for any Thing that himſelf endured; and, by a ſilent, but ſignificant Rebuke of his Eye, upbraided his Baſeneſs and Ingratitude to him, could not but cut him to the Quick, and fill him with Confuſion. This, very probably, was one of the bitterеſt Ingredients of St Peter's Sorrow, and what confirmed him in his Duty ever after: For we muſt remember, that, in his future Behaviour, the Apoſtle abundantly ſhewed the Sincerity of his Converſion, and made an ample Amends for the Scandal of his Offence.

And Reformation, and Zeal. IT was the ſame St Peter, that, after our Saviour's Reſurrection, returned to his former Fervor of Affection; that [y] caſt himſelf into the Sea, out of Impatience to haſten to his Maſter on Shore; that exerted himſelf on the Day of Pentecoſt, and proved, proved, by irrefragable Arguments, [a] that Jesus Christ was the Son of God; that maintained his Point against the Jewish Rulers, [b] despising their Rebukes, and angry Menaces, and telling them plainly, that God was to be obeyed, rather than Man; that confirmed his Brethren, by his resolute Behaviour, and made it a Matter of [b] rejoicing, that he was counted worthy to suffer Shame for the once abjured Name of Christ. In a Word, it was he, who, after a long Labour of Preaching and Persecution, at length finished his Course, and glorified God by the same Kind of Tortures and Death which his Master condescended to undergo. So that St Peter was not more different from himself, when trembling at the Voice of a silly Damsel, than the same St Peter, afterwards, the glorious, the invincible Apostle, before the Council, in Prison, and upon the Cross, was from the cowardly and infamous Renegade in the High-Priest's Palace. This settled and deliberate Fidelity was a noble Compensation for the Infirmity and Transports of his Fall. This shewed what the Man was, when perfectly himself, and supported by the Grace of God; as the other did, what he was, when naked, and destitute of heavenly Succours, depending upon his own Strength, and left in the Hands of his own Passions; which is enough to convince us, that of ourselves we can do nothing, but all our Safety, and [c] all our Sufficiency is of God.

[t] Luke xxii. 33. [u] Matth. xxvi. 33, 35. * 1 Pet. i. 5. [x] Luke xxii. 61.
[y] John xxi. 7.

SECT. III.

Of CHRIST's Crucifixion and Death.

Christ's Crucifixion,

AFTER Pilate had given Sentence against our blessed Saviour, and the military Men and Rabble had wearied themselves with their blasphemous Merriment, they stripped him of all his Ensigns of Royalty, and, putting on him his own Raiment, hurried him away to the Place of Execution. [d] The Jews had four Kinds of capital Punishments, Burning, Beheading, Strangling, and Stoning; but here they make Choice of Crucifixion [e], because they accounted it the most painful and the most ignominious Death. Painful it needs must be, [f] because the Hands and the Feet, which, of all the Parts of the Body, are most nervous, and, consequently, the most sensible, being extended to their utmost Dimensions, and pierced through with Iron Pins, could not but give exquisite Torture, when the Weight of the Body, thus stretched out, was left hanging upon these Fastenings; and yet, as the Wounds were in the extreme Parts, and so immediately affected none of the Vitals, the Pain must necessarily have been long and lingering, as well as sharp and dolorous. For which Reason, the Romans themselves, who made Use of this Punishment, were frequently so compassionate, as to strangle the Party first, and so content themselves with having his dead Body fixed upon the Cross; though in our Saviour's Case there was no relenting, no Remains of Humanity for his Ease and Relief. And as this was a very painful, so was it a most ignominious Kind of Death, peculiar to the meanest Condition, and the most heinous Offences, [g] the Punishment of Robbers and Murtherers, provided they were Slaves; otherwise if they were free, and had the Privileges of the City of Rome, it was then thought a Prostitution of that Honour, and too infamous a Penalty for such to suffer, let their Misdemeanors be what they would. Nay, so very odious and abominable was this Punishment, that when they had a Mind to brand the Memory of any flagitious People, Traitors to the State, and common Enemies to Mankind, the most effectual Way to fix an indelible Infamy upon a painful and ignominious Death.

[a] Acts ii. 14—36. [b] Ibid. iv. 19, 20. [b] Ibid. v. 41. [c] 2 Cor. iii. 5. [d] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

[e] Crucifixion was a Roman Punishment, in Use in the Empire, as long as it continued Heathen; but, when the Emperors embraced Christianity, this Punishment was forbidden by the supreme Authority, out of a due Respect and pious Honour to the Death of Christ. The Form of a Cross, according to the Custom of the Romans, was that of a straight and erect Piece of Wood, fixed in the Earth, towards the Top of which, another transverse Piece was fastened, in such a Manner, that they cut one another in right Angles. The erected Post extended itself above the Transverse, and, towards the lower Part of it, another Piece of Wood was fastened, and standing out. To the erected Post our Saviour's Body was applied; his Head to that Part of it, which was above the transverse Beam, and above his Head was the Table of his Accusation fixed; to the transverse Beam his Hands were nailed, and upon the Piece, which came from the lower Part of the erected Post, his Body rested, and his Feet were transfixed. Pearson, on the Creed.

[f] Pearson, ibid. [g] Stanhope, on the Epistles and Gospels, Vol. II.

upon them, [h] was, in their Opinion, to hang up their Pictures thus, and to crucify thoſe in Effigie, whoſe Perſons were out of their Reach. And as this Kind of Puniſhment was ſhameful and odious among the Romans, ſo the Jews carried their Deteſtation of it to an higher Degree. For though they never inflicted it on any Criminal, when alive, yet, when notorious Offenders had ſuffered another Way, their Bodies were ſometimes hung up to be ſeen, which, according to their Notion, was accounted an accurſed Thing, becauſe it deprived them of the Privilege of Burial. The Care of funeral Rites indicated a Life to come, and that the Body and Soul ſhould be rejoined after Death; but this lifting up of Men from the Earth, and hanging them in the Air, (where they were to rot and periſh) ſeemed to be treating them like Brutes, the cutting off the Hopes of a future Life, and a Kind of defeating the Immortality of their Souls, and the Reſurrection of their Bodies; and therefore the Senſe and Denunciation of their Law was, that [i] he who hanged on a Tree, was accurſed. In this painful, this ſhameful, this accurſed Manner, did our bleſſed Lord, for the Space of ſix long Hours [k], ſuffer the moſt exquiſite Torments both of Body and Mind, until Nature being quite worn out, and the Work of Man's Redemption finiſhed, into God's Hand he commended his Spirit, or human Soul, and, having done that, he bowed his Head, and gave up the Ghoſt.

The Manner of it.

DEATH conſiſts in a Diſſolution of the principal Parts or Organs of the Body, ſo that neither they, nor any of the leſs noble Parts, in Dependence on them, can any longer perform their reſpective Functions: In Conſequence of which, according to the Laws of Union between the Soul and Body, the Soul can no longer inform the Body, but departs, and retires elſewhere. That the Torments, which Chriſt ſuffered, were of ſufficient Force and Intenſeneſs to cauſe ſuch a Diſſolution of the Body, cannot be diſputed; and that they had their Effect, and Chriſt did actually die under them, was the conſtant Concluſion both of Enemies and Friends, before whoſe Eyes he was executed in the moſt publick Manner. Pilate indeed is ſaid to wonder, when he heard, in the Evening, that he was dead ſo ſoon; but to us it can ſeem no ſtrange Thing, that his Spirit ſhould be then waſted, who know what a ſad Variety of Pains and Miſeries he underwent. The wonderous and unſpeakable Agony in the Garden, the Violence of the Jews, the Buffetings of the Servants, the Harraſſing him from one Court of Judicature to another, the thorny Crown, and mercileſs Scourges; theſe, I ſay, and (what was worſe than all theſe) that inconceivable Anguiſh of Heart, which, before any outward Violence befel him, did, with its own Weight, depreſs his Soul, and make it exceeding ſorrowful, even unto Death, all conſpired to ſpend his natural Strength, and force his Life away: Though (properly ſpeaking) it was not forced away; for as he [l] had Power to lay down his Life, ſo nothing could have taken it from him, without his own Permiſſion and Conſent. For he, who [m] ſtruck his Enemies down to the Ground with his Majeſtick Preſence, and afterwards gave them leave to apprehend him, could likewiſe, if he had pleaſed, have come down from the Croſs; he could have continued inſenſible in all the Pains of it; he could have ſurvived the ſharpeſt Anguiſh; and had he not ſuſpended his Divine Power, Death itſelf could not have taken hold of him, nor have bound this ſtrong Man, this infinitely more than Man, in thoſe Chains, which he therefore ſubmitted to, that, ſhortly after, he might break and burſt them aſunder, in a Manner more glorious and triumphant. And from hence it will follow, that the Death of Chriſt was not a Caſual Event, but a Deſign, from all Eternity, contrived by Divine Wiſdom, and reſolved upon by Divine Goodneſs, for the Illuſtration of God's ſacred Attributes, the [h] Thus they uſed Celſus, one of the thirty Tyrants of Rome, as Trebellius Pollio teſtifieth. Novo injuriæ genere, Imago in crucem ſublata perſultante vulgo, quaſi Patibulo ipſe Celſus videretur affixus. Pearſon, on the Creed.

[i] Deut. xxi. 23.

[k] The Jews divided their Day, not only into twelve Hours (as is evident from John xi. 9. and many other Places) but likewiſe into four Quarters, (in the ſame Manner as they divided the Night) allowing to every Quarter three Hours. The firſt Quarter was from ſix a-Clock in the Morning until nine; and the laſt of theſe three Hours was called by them the third Hour: The ſecond Quarter was from nine in the Morning until twelve; and the laſt of theſe Hours was called the ſixth Hour: The third Quarter reached from Mid-Day to three a-Clock in the Afternoon, and the laſt of theſe Hours was known by the Name of the ninth Hour: The fourth and laſt Diviſion was into three more Hours, which began at three a-Clock in the Afternoon, and ended at ſix, or Eventide. Now, from this brief Account of the Diſtribution of the Hours of the Day, it is eaſy to gather the Beginning and End of our Saviour's ſuffering on the Croſs. For, as to the former, it is ſaid, that it was the third Hour when they crucified him, Mark xv. 25. i. e. they faſtened him to the Croſs at nine a-Clock in the Morning, according to us; and as to the latter, St Matthew relates, that, about the ninth Hour, Jeſus cried with a loud Voice, and yielded up the Ghoſt, Chap. xxvii. 50. wherewith St Mark agrees, Chap. xv. 34. which is at three a-Clock in the Afternoon. So that it is manifeſt from the whole, that Chriſt was ſix Hours on the Croſs in all. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

[l] John x. 18. [m] Ibid. xviii. 6.

the Exaltation of our Saviour's Glory, and the Procuration of Man's Redemption and Felicity; of which we have treated at large in the Doctrine of Chriſt's [n] Sacerdotal Office.

The Wiſdom of God herein.

HERE then we cannot ſufficiently admire the Wiſdom of Almighty God, who thus ordered the great Work of Man's Redemption, in Deſpite of all the Malice and Subtlety of the Devil, and his wicked Inſtruments to the contrary. [o] The Envy and Malice of the Chief Prieſts and Phariſees, the Eagerneſs and Fury of the common People, the profligate Conſciences of falſe Witneſſes, the Treachery and Avarice of one of his Diſciples, the Timorouſneſs of a corrupt and time-ſerving Judge, the Barbarities of thoſe, who ſcourged and crucified him, and inſulted over his dying Agonies; all theſe were made uſe of by the Enemy of Mankind to deſtroy Jeſus, and to overthrow his Kingdom, to root out his Name, and all the Honour of it from among Men: But obſerve the Wiſdom and Power of Providence in bringing Good out of Evil, and the moſt excellent and beneficial Events out of the moſt unlikely, the moſt ungodly, the moſt malicious Intentions! Had not theſe Men been ſo exceedingly barbarous and wicked, the holy Jeſus, ſo great a Teacher, ſo innocent a Liver, and ſo generous a Benefactor to the Diſtreſſed, could never have been taken off by ſo ignominious a Death: Had he not been put to ſuch a Death, he could not have ſuffered the Shame and Torment, which the Divine Juſtice required, as a Satisfaction for the Sins of Men; had not the Proceedings againſt him been injurious and unreaſonable, that Death had not bore the Merit of a Sacrifice, and Expiation for the Guilty, whoſe Perſons he repreſented: In a Word, had he not died, he had not conquered Death, nor led Captivity Captive; but now, by Virtue of his Death, which theſe wicked Inſtruments procured, having, as St Paul tells us, [p] ſpoiled Principalities and Powers, (all the principal Powers of Darkneſs) he made a Shew of them openly, triumphing over them upon his Croſs.

The Triumphs of the Croſs.

[q] No Conqueror, ſeated in his triumphant Chariot, did ever yield ſo glorious a Spectacle: No Tree was ever adorned with ſuch glorious Trophies. To the outward Eye, and carnal Senſe, our Saviour was expoſed to Shame and Scorn; but to the Eye of Faith, and ſpiritual Diſcernment, all his and our Enemies hung upon his Croſs, Objects of Contempt, undone, and overthrown: The Devil, [r] that ſtrong and mighty one, hung there, bound and fettered, ſpoiled and diſarmed, quite baffled and confounded: Death hung there, gaſping and expiring, with its Sting plucked out, and all its Terrors quelled: The World, with all its vain Pomps, its counterfeit Beauties, and bewitching Pleaſures, hung there, all defaced and diſparaged: Our Sins, thoſe Sins, which [s] he bare in his own Body on the Tree, hung there expoſed as Trophies of his Victories, and Objects of our Hatred and Horror: In ſhort, thoſe manifold Enmities between God and us, between Man and himſelf, between one Man and another, did all hang there together, aboliſhed in his Fleſh, and ſlain upon his Croſs, [t] by the Blood of which he made Peace, and reconciled all Things in Heaven and Earth.

Our Glory.

[u] LET it then to the Jews, prepoſſeſſed with falſe Notions of a Meſſiah appearing in great Secular Pomp, be a Stumbling-Block, and to the Greeks, puffed up with Conceit, and Maxims of worldly Wiſdom, Fooliſhneſs, * that God ſhould put his Son in ſo ſad and deſpicable a Condition; that Salvation from Miſery ſhould be procured by ſo miſerable a Death; that eternal Joy, Happineſs, and Glory ſhould iſſue from ſuch Springs of extreme Sorrow and Shame; that a Perſon, in outward Appearance, ſo contemptible, and expoſed to ſuch infamous and injurious Uſage, ſhould be the Son of God, the Lord and Redeemer of Mankind, the King and the Judge of all the World: Let this, I ſay, be diſtaſteful to ſome prejudiced, and incredible to ſome ſelf-conceited Perſons; to us, who diſcern by a clearer Light, 1. That God could not, in a fitter Method, illuſtrate his glorious Attributes of Goodneſs and Juſtice; and, 2. That Virtue could not be taught, and exemplified in a Way more advantageous; the Sufferings and Death of Chriſt muſt be always grateful and glorious.

God's Goodneſs herein.

[x] THAT God, who is by Nature incapable of Sufferings and Death, ſhould condeſcend to become mortal Man, to qualify himſelf to endure the bittereſt Afflictions; that he ſhould do this for Enemies and Rebels, for ſuch are wretched Sinners; that the Miſeries of thoſe, who had provoked, and injured him, and merited his utmoſt

[n] See page 576, &c.
[o] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.
[p] Col. ii. 15.
[q] Barrow, on the Creed.
[r] Matth. xii. 29.
[s] 1 Pet. ii. 24.
[t] Col. i. 20.
[u] 1 Cor. i. 23.
* Barrow, ibid.
[x] Stanhope, ibid.

Indignation and Wrath, ſhould move his Pity to ſave their Souls, at the Expence of his own Life; that, in the Midſt of Sorrows and Agonies, of Pains and Torture, he ſhould ſtill perſevere in his moſt gracious Purpoſe, and not accept a Deliverance, till he had finiſhed this laborious Undertaking; that he ſhould embrace Poverty and Hardſhip, Reproach and Ignominy, bodily Anguiſh and Death, with a ready and chearful Mind, when all the Powers of Hell could not have compelled him to one ſingle Pang; this is ſuch an Inſtance of Compaſſion and Friendſhip, as no Tenderneſs ever yet did, or can compare with. [y] Greater Love hath no Man, ſays our Saviour, than this, that a Man lay down his Life for his Friends; but herein [z] God commendeth his Love towards us, in that, while we were yet Sinners, and, conſequently, his Enemies, Chriſt died for us.

And Juſtice, and Severity againſt Sin.

BUT, at the ſame Time that Chriſt's dying for us ſhews us the Riches of God's Goodneſs, it ſets before us a dreadful Image of his ſevere Juſtice and Indignation againſt Sin. [a] For, if God, in Conſideration of our Pardon, would admit of no meaner Sacrifice, than the precious Blood of his own eternal Son; and, when that Son undertook to propitiate for us, would not ſo much as abate him one Degree or Circumſtance of a moſt ſhameful and tormenting Death, where ſhall Sinners ſtand, when he is angry? [b] How be able to bear his Wrath and Indignation, ſmoking againſt them, when the Heat of it was ſo violent againſt him, who ſuſtained the Repreſentation only of Sinners, but himſelf had never done any Sin? How exquiſite muſt be the Amazement, how ſharp and raging the Pangs of Offences unpardoned, when he, whoſe Mind had nothing to reproach him with, trembled, and ſunk under the Apprehenſion of that Fury, which others had provoked? And can we read the doleful Story of our Saviour's Paſſion, and at the ſame Time reflect, that our Sins and Iniquities were, in a great Meaſure, the Occaſion of it, without a deep and ſincere Remorſe? Can we think, that we contributed to his Agonies and Griefs, that the malicious Jews [c] and barbarous Soldiers were only the Inſtruments of Cruelty, but every ſinful Man, in Part, the Cauſe of what he ſuffered, and think it without aking Hearts, and a Multitude of ſelf-condemning Reproaches? Can we behold our dear Lord's Temples pierced with Thorns, his holy Face beſmeared with Blood, his Body torn with Scourges, nailed to the Croſs, hanging there in Convulſions, thirſting, fainting, bleeding, dying, in Pity to us; and yet ſuffer ourſelves to be fond of thoſe Luſts, which injured, diſgraced, tormented, and ſlew our beſt Friend, and moſt generous Benefactor? Surely, if Men have any Gratitude, if any Bowels, this Proſpect, livelily repreſented to their Minds, muſt needs check their wildeſt Career, and reſtrain them from thoſe wicked Practices, which, we are told, do even now [d] crucify afreſh the Son of God, and again expoſe him to open Shame.

The Virtue of Patience and Reſignation learnt from hence.

[e] FORASMUCH as Chriſt hath ſuffered for us in the Fleſh, ſays the Apoſtle, we muſt arm ourſelves likewiſe with the ſame Mind: For, be the Troubles, we complain of, in Number never ſo many, be they in their Kind and Meaſure never ſo afflictive, they are few, in Proportion to that innumerable Train of Evils, which Chriſt went through; they are light and trivial, in Compariſon of that exceſſive Weight, which our Saviour bore. [f] Do we complain that others live in great Plenty and Affluence, while we are ſo oppreſſed with Poverty, that we want many of the Comforts, and perhaps ſome of the Neceſſaries of Life? But know we not the mean and low Condition [g] of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that for our Sakes he became ſo poor, as to have no Place where to lay his Head? Do we, at any Time, find our Actions miſrepreſented, and our Perſons treated with Scorn and Contempt? The ſame happened to our Lord and Saviour, who, though [h] he went conſtantly about doing good, was, by the Tongue of Malice, ſtiled a Blaſphemer, a Sabbath-breaker, a Deceiver, an Incendiary, a Madman, a Demoniack, and one [i] who caſt out Devils by Beelzebub, the Prince of the Devils. Are we touched to the Quick, when we are treated with Diſgrace, or do we cry out for Anguiſh, when we are afflicted with Pain? What Shame was ever like that, to which our Saviour was expoſed, when, beſides other notorious ill Uſage, he was poſtponed to a vile Thief and Murtherer, crucified between two Malefactors, and reviled as a greater Malefactor, than either of them? What Gout, what Stone, what Melancholy, could be ſo hard to bear, as the Tortures he underwent, the acute Pangs of his dolorous Crucifixion, and the cutting Sorrows, that wounded his Soul even unto Death? So far are our moſt ſenſible Afflictions

[y] John xv. 13. [z] Rom. v. 8. [a] Scott's Mediator. [b] Stanhope's Sermons on ſeveral Occaſions. [c] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [d] Heb. vi. 6. [e] 1 Pet. iv. 1. [f] Smalridge's Sermons. [g] 2 Cor. viii. 9. and Matth. viii. 20. [h] Acts x. 38. [i] Matth. xii. 24.

ſlictions ſhort of that, wherewith it pleaſed God to bruiſe this Son of his Love, in the Day of his fierce Anger! But, could we ſuppoſe them equal, yet does not this make a mighty Difference, and ought it not to compoſe our Spirits to Submiſſion, that his Obedience was an Act perfectly free, his Sufferings choſen for ours, and not his own Benefit? But we, alas! as Creatures, are entirely at the Mercy of our common Maſter and Maker; and, as Sinners, bound to acknowledge the Righteouſneſs of God in every Thing he ſends upon us: And [h] doth a living Man complain for the Puniſhment of his Sins? Can Impatience, and Diſcontent, and hard Accuſations of that Providence, which diſpoſes all Events, become one, who, in the Courſe of Juſtice, hath brought Miſery upon himſelf, by his own Fault? Can he murmur at what is laid upon a Principal, when ſo much more was laid upon a Proxy; eſpecially, when he remembers, [i] that tho' no Chaſtening, for the preſent, be joyous, but grievous; nevertheleſs, afterward, it yieldeth the peaceable Fruit of Righteouſneſs unto them, that are exerciſed thereby? Inſtead of fretting, and being uneaſy, and diſcontented then, the proper Reflection for a Man in ſuch Circumſtances is, [k] I will bear the Indignation of the Lord, becauſe I have ſinned againſt him. "My Saviour, who had done no Sin, ſuf-
"fered chearfully the ſevereſt Diſpleaſure of his Father, on Account of my Sins
"imputed to him, and ſhall not I patiently bear the Chaſtiſement of God for my "own Sins, whereby I have juſtly provoked his Wrath, and have deſerved all thoſe "Torments, which infinite Juſtice can inflict, and from which nothing leſs, than
"the infinite Satisfaction made by Chriſt, could have delivered me?".

[l] THUS may we be able to learn the difficult Leſſon of ſubmitting to God's Will in all his Diſpenſations, if we do but duly attend to the Example of Chriſt; we may, [m] with Patience run the Race, that is ſet before us, if, when we find ourſelves weary, and ready to faint, we re-invigorate our Spirits, by [n] looking unto Jeſus, the Author and Finiſher of our Faith, who, for the Joy that was ſet before him, endured the Croſs, deſpiſing the Shame, and is ſet down at the Right-Hand of God; remembering always, that, whatever our Condition of Life be, [o] we are not to live to ourſelves, but to him that died for us; for [p] we are not our own, but are bought with a Price, and therefore muſt glorify God in our Body, and in our Spirits, which are God's.

The Caſe of the penitent Thief.

DURING the Time of our Saviour's Crucifixion, the Evangeliſt informs us, that two Malefactors, one on his Right-Hand, and the other on his Left, were put to the ſame Kind of Death; that one railed on him, while the other, reproving his Companion, declared his Innocence, and profeſſed his Belief of his Divinity, and Reliance on him for Salvation; [q] Lord, remember me, when thou comeſt into thy Kingdom: A Declaration ſo full of Faith and Integrity, that our Saviour accepts it with this gracious Promiſe, To-day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe. Paradiſe is allowed, on all Hands, to be the Place, into which pious Souls, when ſeparated from the Body, are immediately admitted: From whence ſome have inferred, that ſince, in all Probability, this Thief began his Repentance on the Croſs, and yet was received into Paradiſe, they too may be received into the Arms of God's Mercy, be their Repentance never ſo late. But, to ſhew the Precariouſneſs and Danger of this Suppoſition, we ſhall, 1ſt, State the Caſe of this penitent Thief on the Croſs; and then, 2dly, Obſerve, what is the proper Uſe, that any Chriſtian may be allowed to make of it.

I. [r] Now, in examining any of the ſurpriſing and unuſual Acts of Divine Mercy, we muſt always be ſure to bring this Rule along with us, viz. That Almighty God, in the Inſtances of Love and Compaſſion, is perfectly void of all that Biaſs of Humour, and Paſſion, and partial Fondneſs, which oftentimes are a Blemiſh to the Proceedings of eaſy and good-natured Men; that he conſtantly acts with ſuch Steadineſs, as becomes infinite Goodneſs, regulated, and duly tempered with infinite Wiſdom, and infinite Juſtice; and, conſequently, that all his Dealings are ſtrictly agreeable to Equity and Reaſon, though we cannot enter into the Grounds of them; that, as he is the Searcher of all Hearts, he has a diſtinct Knowledge of Mens Intentions and Qualifications, and from theſe is induced (whenever he does ſo) to make a Difference in Favour of ſome above others; and that the Worth and Efficacy of ſuch Qualifications is not always to be meaſured by the Length of Time, or by the Number of Acts produced by them, becauſe it may ſo happen, that a very few,

[h] Lament. iii. 39. [i] Heb. xii. 11. [k] Micah vii. 9. [l] Smalridge's Sermons.
[m] Heb. xii. 1. [n] Ibid. ver. 2. [o] 2 Cor. v. 15. [p] 1 Cor. vi. 20. [q] Luke xxiii. 42, 43. [r] Stanhope's Sermons on ſeveral Occaſions.

few, or but one single Inſtance may be ſo circumſtantiated, as to give Teſtimony of a Man's Sincerity and Zeal, equivalent to a Multitude of others. From theſe Things thus premiſed, it plainly appears, that, in order to a right Underſtanding, and a fair Application of the Example now before us, we muſt enquire a little into the good Diſpoſitions of the Penitent upon the Croſs, ſuch as we may preſume recommended him to Mercy: And of theſe we may obſerve in him,

His willing Diſpoſition,

I. A GREAT Ingenuity of Temper, and Readineſs of Mind to embrace the Faith of Chriſt, as ſoon as ſufficient Means of Conviction were afforded him. 'Tis highly probable, that this Man had never known any Thing of Jeſus before, otherwiſe, than by common Fame; nay, according to [t] the Conjecture of ſome, he was prepoſſeſſed againſt him, as an Impoſtor, and joined with his Companion in reviling him at firſt. The greater then was his Virtue, to overcome theſe Prejudices ſo ſoon, and to ſuffer the Meekneſs and Patience, the Charity and Piety of our Lord's miraculous Death, to diſabuſe him. This is ſo far from making him a late Penitent, that it gives him the Glory of an early Convert; one, whoſe Heart was open to the firſt Impreſſion of Grace, and wanted not ſo much the Inclination, as the Opportunity of being brought over to the Truth before. And, what is yet more for his Commendation, we may obſerve in him, and ſtrong Faith.

2. A MOST noble and vigorous Faith, ſuch as confeſſed our Lord in his loweſt, moſt afflicted, and ignominious Condition: [t] 'When his hardened Companion reviled him; when his Enemies mocked, and inſulted over him; when one of his Diſciples had betrayed him, another had denied him, and all of them had forſook him: Such, as acknowledged him to be the Son of God, and the Lord of Life, when he was hanging on the Croſs, ſuffering the Pangs of Death, and ſeemingly deſerted by his Father: Such, as publiſhed his Innocence in the Face of triumphant Malice, and, through the thickeſt Cloud of Shame and Sufferings, that ever intercepted the Glories of the Son of God, diſcovered his Divine Power, and placed his Hope in a ſpiritual Kingdom, which Fleſh and Blood and human Reaſon could never have diſcovered; a Kingdom, which no Eye, but the Eye of Faith, could have ever perceived; and which even they, who had enjoyed the Advantage of three Years Inſtruction and Converſation, never yet perfectly underſtood, and now utterly deſpaired of. This was a Confeſſion ſo reſolute, ſo ſingular, ſo illuſtrious, that no Preacher, no Apoſtle, no Martyr ever came up to the heightening Commendations of it; none gave ſo ample a Teſtimony to the bleſſed Jeſus, becauſe none had this peculiar Excellence, of giving it under ſo many diſadvantageous and diſcouraging Circumſtances.'

No Encouragement to a late Repentance.

II. [u] AND now, with what Colour of Reaſon, can any late and Death-bed Penitent pretend to draw this Example into a Precedent, for his own Support and Advantage? What Affinity, what Shadow of Reſemblance is there between a Man, ſubmitting to the firſt Impreſſion, and one, who hath wilfully hardened his Heart againſt all the Methods of Inſtruction and Amendment? Between a Man, accepting Offers, as ſoon as they were made, and one, who hath refuſed Salvation, and ſtopped his Ears againſt the moſt affectionate Importunities? We ſhould be exceedingly blind, and corrupt Advocates for Sin, to bring this unexpected Honour, paid to our Saviour, in his loweſt and moſt deſerted Eſtate, to the wretched Level of thoſe Men, who, notwithſtanding his Reſurrection from the Dead, and Exaltation to Glory, notwithſtanding the Conqueſt made by his Goſpel, and the Infamy of denying him, continue ſtill to injure and affront, to deſpiſe and defy him, in his moſt proſperous and triumphant Condition.

The proper Uſe to be made of it.

IN a Word, no Chriſtian, who hath lived under the Diſpenſation of the Goſpel, can, at the End of his Days, plead the ſame ready Compliance to the Calls of Grace; and no Man whatever can have an Opportunity of exerting the ſame noble Faith; becauſe Chriſt could die but once, and 'twas his Shame and Suffering only, that could have made this penitent Thief's Confeſſion ſo peculiarly glorious. If then we are allowed to make any Uſe, or draw Conſolations from this Example, they muſt be no more than theſe —— That it ſupports Men with an Inſtance of a great and grievous Malefactor, received into Grace, juſt at his leaving the World, and thereupon teaches us, that no Impurities of Life, though never ſo foul, no Crimes, though never ſo black, though never ſo numerous, ſhut us out from Mercy, provided we ſincerely repent; that the Grace of God can recover Wretches, even when they are are at the laſt Gaſp, and juſt dropping into everlaſting Torments: But, as to actual Repentance itſelf, and ſuch Grace being extended to thoſe (when they come to Death's Door) who have been profligate and habitual Sinners all their Days) the moſt that can be inferred from hence is, that ſuch a Thing may be; but it gives us no Manner of Security, nor ſo much as one poſſible Argument, that it certainly ſhall be. The Concluſion of the Whole is, Repentance, when true, is never too late, and therefore the Thief upon the Croſs is a ſovereign Antidote againſt Deſpair: But Men may outſtay the Day of Grace; they may not go about this Work, 'till it be too late, 'till they have loſt both the Will and the Power to repent; and therefore this Example, when truly conſidered, is an excellent Preſervative likewiſe againſt Preſumption.

[t] St Chryſoſtome, and St Jerome. [t] Whitby's Annotations on Luke xxiii. [u] Chryſoſt. Tom. V. Orat. VII.

SECT. IV.

Of CHRIST's Burial, and Deſcent into Hell.

IT [x] is very obſervable, that the Evangeliſts are not more circumſtantial in any Particular, relating to our bleſſed Saviour, than in that Part, which concerns his Burial; and this ſeems to be done, not ſo much for the Sake of any Conſequence there is in the Action conſidered apart by itſelf, as for the Service it does to the Proof of the Truth of his preceding Death, and the Reality of his ſubſequent Reſurrection: For which Reaſon, I ſuppoſe, it is, that St Paul mentions our Saviour's Burial, as a Point, which, among other Articles of Religion, he did uſe to preach and inculcate, as a Matter of Faith: [y] I delivered to you, firſt of all, that which I alſo received, that Chriſt died for our Sins, and that he was alſo buried. But before we come to treat of that, conſidering Chriſt in a State of the Dead, and his Body ſeparated from his human Soul, the Queſtion may ariſe, "Whether, during that Separation, the Divine "Nature was ſtill united, in any particular Manner, to his Body?"

Whether Chriſt's Divinity was united to his dead Body.

THAT the two Natures of Chriſt did ſtill continue united after his Death, is evident from the Teſtimony of the holy Scriptures, wherein the ſame individual Perſon, Chriſt, is ſaid to be crucified, dead, and buried; that Chriſt's Divine Nature was conjoined to his human Soul, after its Separation from the Body, is clear from the Promiſe he makes the penitent Thief, This Day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe; and that there was ſuch a general Union of the Divine Nature with Chriſt's dead Body, as that, whereby he ſupports and conſerves all other Creatures, is not to be queſtioned; but that there was the ſame particular Union of his Divinity with his Body in the Grave, as when it was alive, is not allowed by ſome, for this Reaſon; "[z] That ſup-"poſing the Divinity united, after a ſpecial indiſſoluble Manner, to the Fleſh of "Chriſt, it muſt have been united after a Manner more powerful, with Reſpect to "all the Functions of Life, than that, whereby an human Soul is united to an "human Body: And if it be the Union of the Soul that prevents the Death of the "Body, much more would the Death of it be prevented by any ſpecial Union of the "Divine Nature, unleſs we can ſuppoſe ſuch an Union of it, as has no Manner of Ef-"fect or Operation; which in a Divine Principle is hardly within the Compaſs of Sup-"poſition." It is no eaſy Matter to imagine then, according to theſe Mens Sentiments, how Chriſt's Body could ever have died, and been laid in the Grave, if his Divinity had, at that Time, any vital Communication with it: Nor is it leſs difficult to conceive, [a] ſay others, why the Divinity ſhould not ſtill continue, even after Death, united to both Body and Soul, ſince no Power has any Force againſt Omnipotence, nor can any finite Agent work an Alteration in that Union. A Separation there was made indeed between Chriſt's Soul and Body, but no Diſunion of them with his Deity: For though Chriſt was more than Man, yet it is not to be ſuppoſed, that he died any more, than Man can die; and therefore, though his Soul and Body were diſjoined from one another, yet were they not diſjoined from him, who took them both together; [b] but, by Virtue of that remaining Conjunction, were rather united

[x] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. Divinity, Vol. I. [a] Pearſon, on the Creed. [y] 1 Cor. xv. 3, 4. [z] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. To whoſe Opinion St Auſtin [Trac. in John 47, 48,] and Greg. Nyſſen. [Orat. i. de Reſur.] ſeem to accede. [b] Tam velox incorruptæ Carnis vivificatio fuit, ut major ibi eſſet ſoporis ſimilitudo, quam mortis; quoniam Deitas, quæ ab utrâque ſuſcepti hominis ſubſtantiâ non receſſit, quod poteſtate diviſit, poteſtate conjunxit. Leo, Serm. de Reſurr.

united again after their Separation. In this Manner Men have argued on both Sides, but on which the Presumption of Truth lies, it is not so easy to determine. The Question is abstruse in itself; but perhaps it may be of Use to reconcile the contending Parties, to remind them of the ancient Notion of the Godhead's being quiescent, and not exerting its Power and Efficacy in such Instances, where the Humanity is known to have suffered. In this Manner it confessedly withdrew at his Death; and, by Parity of Reason, might continue its Quiescence during the whole Space of his Interment, and until its Power and Operation were necessary, in order to effect his Resurrection. But this we suggest but as a probable Expedient; and so proceed to consider in what Manner the two separated Parts of our Lord's Humanity were disposed of. And,

The Circumstances of Christ's Burial.

1. To take Notice of some Circumstances, relating to the Burial of his Body. His Body, as we said, was now upon the Cross, submitted to the Custom of the Roman Laws, which ordered such as were crucified, to hang upon the Gibbet, exposed to all the Injuries of Weather, and a Prey for ravenous Beasts, and Fowls of the Air. The Jewish Institution, however, did not allow of this Severity to the Dead: It required, that [c] the Bodies of such, as were hanged up, should not remain all Night, but be buried on the Day of their Execution: And therefore, in Obedience to the Command, as well as in Respect to the Sanctity of the Day approaching, the Jews themselves besought Pilate, that his Body, together with those of the Malefactors, might be taken away: But, it being a farther Custom among the Jews to bury their Malefactors in some publick and ignominious Place, our Saviour's Body must have undergone the same Fate, had not Joseph of Arimathea, [d] a rich Man, and honourable Counsellor, i. e. a Member of the Jewish Sanhedrim, (that very Assembly of Chief Priests and Rulers, which laid wait for Jesus, which charged him with Blasphemy, which used him with so much Cruelty and Contempt) applied himself to the Governor, in whose Disposal were the Bodies of Persons executed, and begged it of him, that he might rescue it from the contemptuous Usage of common Malefactors; and, by the Help of [e] Nicodemus, another Ruler of the Jews, who contributed a great Quantity of Spices and Ointments towards its embalming, (as the Custom of the Jews was) might give him an honourable Interment, [f] in a new Sepulchre, wherein never Man was laid, and which he had hewn out of a Rock, for his own Tomb.

[g] By many Passages in the Old Testament, the Jews appeared to have been, in all Ages, extremely sollicitous concerning the Place of their Burial, and to esteem it a Curse not to sleep with their Fathers; (as we often find it phrased) i. e. not to lie among those of their own Race and Family. The Care of Abraham, [h] in buying a Field for this Purpose from the Children of Heth, seems to have proceeded from a Desire, that the Bodies of those, who worshipped the one true God, might not be mingled with Idolaters. As the Jewish People increased, they not only distinguished themselves from other Nations, but even from one another, in their Burying-Places; insomuch, that every Family of Distinction, purchasing some Piece of Ground near their respective Cities, (for within the Cities none might be buried) and making it convenient for the Purpose, had Sepulchres appropriated to themselves. Such was the Tomb of Joseph in a Garden, and here he deposited the Body of Jesus, where he designed to lay his own, and theirs, whom Nature and Affection had made dearest to him: A Mark of his great Veneration for our Lord, and, at the same Time, an Evidence of the Reality of his Death. For, since Joseph was his Disciple, and his Friend, he would not have treated the Body of one (whom he honoured, and loved) in such a Manner, as must needs have destroyed all Remains of Life, had there been any in it: Nay, a strong Confirmation of the Truth of his Resurrection too; for, since it was a new Tomb, in which no Man had lain before, [i] if any one rose from it, it must be our Lord; since it was a Tomb hewn out of a Rock, there could be no digging through it, to convey Christ's Body away; and lastly, since its Enterance was shut up with a [k] large Stone, fastened with a Seal, and watched by a strong Guard of Soldiers, the Centry, to be sure, would not suffer the Body to be conveyed out by this, or the Nature of the Place, by any other Way. And therefore we are told, that a Divine Power burst all these Bars asunder; that an Earthquake and an Angel rolled away the Stone, by an Operation so amazing, that the Keepers

[c] Deut. xxi. 23. [d] Matth. xxvii. 57. [e] John iii. 1. and xix. 39. [f] Matth. xxvii. 60. [g] Stanhope, on the Epistles and Gospels, Vol. II. [h] Gen. xxiii. [i] Whitby's Annotations on Matth. xxvii. 60. [k] Ibid. ver. 60.

Keepers could not withſtand, could not ſuſtain it: For they became [l] as dead Men, trembling for Fear, and running affrighted into the City, to tell what was done; as we ſhall have Occaſion to take Notice of by and by.

An Inference from thence concerning our own Burials.

IN the mean Time, the Deſcription of the Perſons, who interred Chriſt, and the Enumeration of Qualities and Virtues, as well as the Account of the Spices and Ointments expended at his Burial, have been thought a ſufficient Reaſon and Encouragement for the careful and decent Sepulture of Chriſtians. [m] For, as natural Reaſon will inſtruct us to give ſome Reſpect to the Body, though dead, becauſe an human Soul once inhabited it; ſo much more will it teach us, that a greater Care and Reſpect is due to the Bodies of Chriſtians, which once entertained a more glorious Inhabitant, and were living Temples of the Holy Ghoſt: [n] Thoſe Bodies, which were conſecrated to the Service of God, which bore their Part in the Duties of Religion, and fought the good Fight of Faith and Patience, of Self-denial and Mortification, for the Sake of Piety and Virtue: Thoſe Bodies which we own ſtill to be under the Care of Divine Providence, which ſhall one Day be faſhioned like unto Chriſt's glorious Body, and made Partakers of the ſame Happineſs with their immortal Souls, as once they were of their Sufferings, and good Works: Thoſe Bodies, in fine, which, as Members of Chriſt, are already, in him, their Repreſentative, exalted to the Throne of God on high. Theſe Conſiderations prevailed with the Primitive Chriſtians, to bury their Dead with much Solemnity; to commit them to the Ground with Prayers for their Reſtitution; with Praiſes of the Virtues, they had exerciſed, while living; and with ample Recommendations of their good Example, to the Imitation of thoſe that ſurvived. And this they might do with the greater Chearfulneſs, conſidering, that Chriſt, by his own Vouchſafement to be buried, hath changed our Graves, from Seats of Rottenneſs and Corruption, into Beds and Chambers of Reſt; where, after his Example, we retire and lie down for a while; but, having taken a ſhort Repoſe, are ſure to be awakened again, and to riſe up, more freſh than from our Beds, to Life, to Vigour, and Immortality.

Chriſt's Deſcent into Hell.

2. THE Royal Pſalmiſt, as he is [o] cited by St Peter, ſpeaking of our bleſſed Lord, has theſe remarkable Words; [p] I have ſet God always before me; for he is on my Right-Hand, therefore I ſhall not fall; wherefore mine Heart was glad, and my Glory rejoiced, my Fleſh alſo ſhall reſt in Hope: For, why, thou ſhalt not leave my Soul in Hell, neither ſhalt thou ſuffer thine holy One to ſee Corruption. From which Concluſion, not only the Reſurrection of our Saviour's Body, but that famous Article of our Chriſtian Faith, his Paſſage, or Deſcent into Hell, may, in this Manner, be fairly deduced, "[q] If the Soul of Chriſt was not left in Hell at his Reſurrection, then was "his Soul in Hell before his Reſurrection: But it was not there before his Death; "therefore, upon, or after his Death, and before his Reſurrection, the Soul of "Chriſt deſcended into Hell. For as his Fleſh did not ſee Corruption, by Virtue of "this Promiſe or Prediction, and yet it was in the Grave, the Place of Corruption, "where it reſted in Hope, until his Reſurrection; ſo his Soul, which was not left in "Hell, by Virtue of the like Promiſe or Prediction, was in that Hell, (where it was "not left) until the Time, that it was to be united to the Body, in order to ac-"compliſh its Reſurrection."

The different Senſes of it.

SOME by the Word Hell underſtand no more than the Grave, and ſo [r] make the Deſcent of Chriſt to import the ſame with his Burial. But this, in a Summary of Faith, would be very improper, to have a redundant Repetition of the ſame Thing, by an Expreſſion much more obſcure and perplexed, than that which it is deſigned to illuſtrate. Others, by Hell, underſtand no more than a State of Death, and that Chriſt's Deſcent, conſequently, denotes no more, than his Stay or Continuance in that State: But, beſides [s] that the original Word is always thought to ſignify not a State, but a Place, this again would be a needleſs Repetition of the ſame Senſe, and highly incongruous in a ſhort Form of Belief. Some modern Authors have thought, [l] Matth. xxviii. 4. [m] Pearſon, on the Creed. [n] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II.

[o] Acts ii. 25. [p] Pſal. xvi. 9, &c. [q] Pearſon, ibid.
[r] This Expoſition has a double Advantage, viz. that Ruffinus, who firſt mentioned Chriſt's Deſcent in the Creed, did interpret it of his Burial, and where this Article was expreſſed, there that of the Burial was omitted. But, notwithſtanding theſe Advantages, there is no Certainty of this Interpretation. 1. Becauſe Ruffinus, who thus firſt interprets it, acknowledges, at the ſame Time, the Deſcent of the Soul of Chriſt into Hell; and thoſe other Creeds, which did likewiſe omit the Burial, and expreſs the Deſcent, did ſhew, that, by the Deſcent, they underſtood, not that of the Body, but that of the Soul. 2. Becauſe the Roman Creed, having added the Deſcent, in Contradiſtinction to the Burial of Chriſt, and expreſſed that Deſcent by Words of a ſtronger Import, it cannot but be ſuppoſed, that the Creed, as it now ſtands, ſhould ſignify ſome other Object of our Belief, beſides that of his Burial. Pearſon, ibid. [s] Pearſon, ibid.

thought, that, in a figurative Senſe, the Word [t] might well enough import thoſe infernal Pains due to Sinners, which Chriſt ſuffered upon the Croſs; and that therefore he might, in a large Way of Expreſſion, be ſaid to deſcend into Hell. [u] But, beſides that the Word is not to be found in any other Place of Scripture, nor among any of the ancient Fathers, in this Senſe; the Pains, which our Saviour felt, were antecedent to his Death, Part of them in the Garden, Part on the Croſs, but all before he commended his Spirit into the Hands of his Father, and gave up the Ghoſt. And though, without all Controverſy, they were very ſevere, and heavy to be borne, yet it is incongruous to ſuppoſe, that they were of the ſame Kind or Degree, with what the Wicked ſuffer in Hell. * For there is a Worm, that never dies, which could not lodge in his innocent Spirit; there is a Fire, which feeds upon them, and is never to be extinguiſhed, but could not ſeize upon his righteous Soul; the Damned are under a conſtant Apprehenſion of God's everlaſting Diſpleaſure, and under an utter Impoſſibility of ever obtaining Favour, which could not affect him, who was never at Variance with the Almighty; who looked upon the Reward, that was ſet before him; knew the Beginning and End of his Sufferings; and was, all along, conſcious, [x] that the Pleaſure of the Lord was proſpering in his Hand, who, in due Time, would ſee of the Travel of his Soul, and be ſatisfied.

[y] SOME of the ancient Fathers took the Word in its literal Signification, for the Seat of the Damned; and, accordingly, were of Opinion, that the Soul of Chriſt, when ſeparated from his Body, went down into thoſe lower Parts, which are the proper and peculiar Habitations of Devils, and deviliſh Spirits, either to triumph over Satan, or to [z] preach to the Spirits in Priſon, or to releaſe ſome Souls, and carry them along with him into Glory. But, [a] beſides that the Days, which follow after Death, were never made for Opportunities to a better Life, and human Souls were never caſt into infernal Torments in order to be releaſed, and delivered from them; the Triumph of Chriſt over Principalities and Powers is aſcribed, [b] by St Paul, to his Croſs: It was the Effect and Reſult of his Death; and therefore leaves no Reaſon for his going down to preach unto them, who, dying in Diſobedience, and being in Torments for their Sins, could, in no Senſe, be proper Objects of ſuch a Diſpenſation. [c] The Phraſe therefore of preaching to the Spirits in Priſon, though confeſſedly abſtruſe, muſt certainly refer to ſome other Thing, and may well enough bear this Signification—— "That Jeſus Chriſt, after he was returned to Life again, "did, by the Spirit of God, which he communicated to his Apoſtles, preach his "Doctrine to the Gentiles, who were ſhut up in Idolatry, as People in a Priſon:" For, of what Uſe, what Advantage would it have been, to preach the glad Tidings of the Goſpel to Perſons under an irreverſible Doom? [d] The rich Man, whom we find in this Condition, deſired that one might be ſent from the Dead, to preach to his Brethren, then alive, leſt they alſo ſhould come into that Place of Torment; but we find no Hopes he had, that any ſhould come from them, who were alive, to preach to him; for, if the Living, who heard not Moſes and the Prophets, would not be perſuaded, though one roſe from the Dead, ſurely thoſe, who had been diſobedient to Moſes and the Prophets, could never have been perſuaded, after they were dead.

The moſt probable Senſe.

ONCE more, by Hell may be meant [e] that unſeen Place, to which departed Souls are carried, after their Separation from the Body. For though the Greek Word [ᾅδης]

[t] Si ad inferos deſcendiſſe dicitur, nihil mirum eſt, quum eam mortem pertulerit, quæ ſceleratis ab irato Deo infligitur. Calv. Inſtit. Lib. ii. c. 16. [u] Burnet, on the Articles. * Pearſon, on the Creed.
[x] Iſa. liii. 10, 11. [y] Athanaſius, Epiphanius, Clemens of Alexandria, Origen, and ſome other Greek Fathers.
[z] 1 Pet, iii. 19. [a] Pearſon, ibid. [b] Col. ii. 15. [c] It muſt not be concealed however, that, in the fourth Year of Edward the VIth, this Article was received with this Explication; "That the Body of Chriſt lay "in the Grave until his Reſurrection, but his Spirit, which he gave up, was with the Spirits, which were detained in Priſon, and preached to them, as the Place of St Peter teſtifieth:" But in the Synod, ten Years after, in the Days of Queen Elizabeth, the Articles, which continue ſtill in Force, deliver the ſame Deſcent, but without any the leaſt Explication, or Reference to any particular Place of Scripture, in theſe Words: As Chriſt died for us, and was buried, ſo alſo it is to be believed, that he went down into Hell. Pearſon, ibid. [d] Pearſon, ibid.

[e] Though we have nothing in our modern Engliſh, nor, by what I could ever underſtand, in any other of the preſent European Tongues, to expreſs the Word ᾅδης by; yet, in the old Engliſh Dialect, the Word Hell came up to its Signification, viz. "That of an inviſible Place, wherein all ſeparated Souls, whether good or bad, were received "and contained." For it is derived from the old Saxon Word Hel, which ſignifies to hide, or from the Participle thereof Helled, which is hidden, or covered, as in the weſtern Parts of England, at this very Day, to Hele over any Thing, ſignifies, among the common People, to cover it; and he that covereth an Houſe with Tile or Slate, is called an Hellier. From whence it appears, that the Word Hell, according to its primitive Notion, anſwers exactly to the Greek Word ᾅδης; ſo called quaſi ἀϊδὴς τόπος, becauſe it is an unſeen Place, removed from the Sight and View of the Living; and very fitly ſo called, becauſe of our Uncertainty of the Places, where departed Souls go, and of their Inviſibility to us. Lord King's Critical Hiſtory of the Apoſtles Creed.

[ᾅδης] ſo rendered, does now commonly ſignify the Place of the Damned, and, for ſome Ages, has been ſo underſtood; yet that, both among [f] Greek, [g] Latin, [h] Jewiſh, and [i] Chriſtian Authors, it was uſed indifferently for the general Receptacle of all departed Souls, whether good or bad, needs no large or curious Proof; [k] ſince the leaſt Peruſer of their Writings muſt, without doubt, have obſerved this to have been their general Opinion; —— That, as, upon the Death of all Men, whether juſt or unjuſt, their Bodies were committed to the Grave; ſo their Souls were tranſlated into Hell, or a Place appointed for their Reception; which Tranſlation, in Compliance to the common Form of Speech, is called a Deſcent, becauſe it was the generally received Opinion, that the Manſions of departed Souls were under the Earth, or in the Bowels of it: An Opinion, which might probably receive ſome Confirmation from our Saviour's Words, that are generally applied to his Soul, during its Separation from the Body; [l] as Jonas was three Days and three Nights in the Whale's Belly, ſo ſhould the Son of Man be three Days and three Nights in the Heart of the Earth.

2. If this Interpretation (which ſeems to be the beſt, as grounded upon [m] the general Opinion of the Church, and the moſt natural Expoſition of the Propheſy of the Pſalmiſt) be admitted, then will the Meaning of our Lord's Deſcent into Hell be no other than this; "That his Soul, being ſeparated from his Body, did, by a real "Tranſition, and local Motion, go into the inviſible Region of Spirits, where, ac- "cording to the Laws of Death, it remained, among other pious and religious "Souls, till the Reſurrection of his Body." [n] Hereby our Lord ſubmitted to the Condition of a dead Man, as well as of a living; for, as his Body was laid in the Grave, as ordinarily the Bodies of dead Men are; ſo his Soul was conveyed into ſuch Receptacles, as the Souls of other Perſons uſed to be: For, ſince he [o] became our High-Prieſt, to redeem and ſave us, it behoved him, in all Things, to be made like unto us, Sin only excepted. [p] Hereby he performed a principal and neceſſary Part of his Humiliation; for, though his Soul was, as the Souls of all good Men are, in a Place of Bliſs and Happineſs; yet, ſo long as they continue in their State of Separation, they are ſuffering under the Effects of Sin, and have the Mark of God's Diſpleaſure on them, the Want of their Bodies, from which they ſhall not be delivered until the Reſurrection-Day. Hereby he ſanctified and ſweetened the State of our Separation; to abate its Dread and Terror, and to make it more comfortable to us, in that our Head and Saviour endured it before: And hereby he gave an Earneſt and Aſſurance to all his Followers, that, as himſelf looſed the Bands of Death, [q] becauſe it was impoſſible for him to be holden of it; ſo, at the appointed Time for their Reſurrection, their Souls ſhall be reſcued by his Almighty Power, and, in a joyful

The Ends of Chriſt's Death,

[f] Thus Homer, in the eleventh Book of his Odyſſey, brings in Ulyſſes, giving an Account of his Deſcent into Hades, or Hell, which he repreſents as the common Place of Souls ſeparated from the Body, and where he met with ſeveral of his own Acquaintance, and others, of whom he had heard both a good and a bad Character.

[g] Thus Virgil, in Imitation of Homer, makes his Hero Æneas go down to Hell, or the Habitation of departed Souls, where he ſaw, not only the proud Giants, who attempted to pull Jupiter from Heaven, and many other great and abominable Sinners, in the moſt inconceivable and tremendous Torments, but a Multitude of worthy Souls, recreating themſelves amidſt a full Confluence of every Thing, that could make them happy.

——— Pulcherrima Proles, Magnanimi Heroes, nati melioribus Annis. Æn. VI.

[h] From the Jews, and the Books of the Old Teſtament, (as St Ambroſe [de bono mortis] affirms) the Pagans ſtole the Notion of the State of departed Souls, and he wiſhes, that they had not mingled other ſuperſtitious and unprofitable Conceits therewith, but would have been contented with that ſingle Opinion, ——— That Souls, delivered from their Bodies, go to Hades, or Hell, i. e. a Place not ſeen, called by the Latins, Infernum. And therefore, the modern Jews (as we are told by the learned Huetius, in his Notes upon the Commentaries of Origen) diſtinguiſh between the ſuperior Paradiſe or Heaven, which is prepared for the glorified Souls, and Bodies of the Saints, after the Day of Reſurrection; and the inferior Paradiſe, which is uſually called by them, the Garden of Eden, and appointed to be the Habitation of holy Souls, during the Time of their Separation from their Bodies.

[i] That the Primitive Chriſtians were of the ſame Opinion with the Heathen, and Jews, in this Particular, accounting Hell the common Receptacle of all departed Souls, we have the Teſtimony of Irenæus, who, in this Manner, relates the Order of the Reſurrection and Glorification of all Chriſtians,—That, upon the Diſunion of their two eſſential Parts by Death, their Souls ſhall go to Hell, or to an inviſible Place, appointed them by God, where they ſhall tarry, till the Reſurrection, in a continued Expectation of it: After which, receiving their Bodies, and riſing perfectly, they ſhall come into the Preſence of God. And not much unlike to this is that, which Juſtin Martyr [Dial. cum Tryphone] affirms, ——— That all Souls did not die, but that thoſe of the godly remained in a better Place, and thoſe of the ungodly in a worſe, expecting the Day of Judgment. King's Critical Hiſtory of the Apoſtles Creed.

[k] King, ibid. [l] Matth. xii. 40. [m] The learned Biſhop Pearſon has proved this to be the general Opinion of the Church, by a copious Introduction of the Teſtimonies of thoſe ancient Writers, who lived ſucceſſively, and wrote in ſeveral Ages, and delivered this Expoſition in ſuch expreſs Terms, as are not capable of any other Interpretation. On the Creed, p. 262. [n] Pearſon, on the Creed. [o] Heb. ii. 17.

[p] King, ibid. [q] Acts ii. 24.

Re-union with their Bodies, tranſlated together into heavenly Places, have their perfect Conſummation and Bliſs.

and Uſes of it. [r] THERE is no Notion, under which we contemplate Death with more Fear and Reluctance, than as it is an Enterance upon a new and unknown State of Life. The Scene, we conceive, upon our Diſſolution, muſt needs be ſurpriſing: What Company we ſhall find, what Company we ſhall make, when we ſtep into the World of Spirits, we cannot tell; and it even confounds and amazes us, to think of going out of our Bodies, we know not whither. Now, it may be of ſome Uſe, I hope, to allay the Immoderation of any ſuch Fear, to conſider, that though it be appointed for all Men once to die, [s] yet we are only to go to that Place, where our Saviour hath been before us, hath ſecured our Paſſage, and will preſerve us in Safety, until the Reſtitution of all Things; that we are not to travel in a Path, that is dark and deſolate, and through which none of our Friends have paſſed before, but ſhall go in the ſame, which our dear Redeemer has viſited, and in which his Diſciples, and all good Men, in all Ages before us, have followed; and that we are to arrive at a Place, where Patriarchs, Prophets, Martyrs, and the Spirits of all juſt Men, waiting for their Lord's Return from Heaven, and the Glories of their own Reſurrection, pleaſe themſelves with the Memory of a well-ſpent Life, which gives them Aſſurance of a joyful Eternity; where Enjoyments ſhall be commenſurate to our Faculties; every Thing, that can give Pleaſure to our ſeparate Souls, ſet before them; and every Pleaſure and Joy of this Kind continually augmented with a ſure and certain Expectation of greater Joys to come. When therefore our Souls are ſhivering upon the Brink of Eternity, and ready to take their Flight into the inviſible World of Spirits, here is a Proſpect, (if preſented duly to the Eye of Faith) that will overcome the Reluctance of Nature, and make us, [t] with St Paul, deſire to depart. The Hope that is ſet before us on the farther Shore, founded upon the Conſciouſneſs of an holy and religious Life on this, will allay the Terrors of our Paſſage, make us with Chearfulneſs reſign our laſt Breath, and therewith [u] commit the Keeping of our Souls to God, as into the Hands of a faithful Creator.

[r] Sherlock, on Death. [s] Boyſe, on the Articles. [t] Phil. i. 23. [u] 1 Pet. iv. 19.

CHAP. III.

Of CHRIST's Exaltation.

Chriſt's Reſurrection. HITHERTO we have beheld our Mediator and Redeemer in the low Eſtate of his Humanity, through the ſeveral Steps of his Humiliation, Home to the laſt and moſt abaſing Inſtance of it, viz. the Separation of his Soul and Body by Death, and the Detention of one in the Manſions of departed Souls, and of the other in the Grave. [a] His Exaltation follows next; and that Sun of Righteouſneſs, which ſet in ſo much Obſcurity, ariſes now with Light and Splendor: For, the Earth being not able to detain his Body, nor Hell, his Soul, they both, after a determinate Time, are re-united, and conſtitute the ſame compleat Man and Perſon, that he was before. This I take to be the true Notion of a proper Reſurrection: And becauſe our Saviour's Reſurrection is the great and fundamental Article of the Chriſtian Religion, that, which himſelf appeals to, and that, whereon we lay the main Streſs of his Divine Miſſion and Authority, it may not be improper,

I. To evince the Truth and Certainty of it by ſuch Arguments as the Nature of the Thing requires; and then,

II. To obſerve in what Manner, and for what Purpoſes it was effected.

I. [b] Now,

[a] King's Hiſtory.

The Nature of its Proof.

I. [b] NOW, our Saviour's Reſurrection being a Matter of Fact, which happened ſo many hundred Years ago, it cannot be ſuppoſed, either that the Teſtimony of Senſe, or ſtrict and proper Demonſtration (as Demonſtration is underſtood by Logicians and Mathematicians) ſhould be produced in Confirmation of its Truth. All that can be expected in this Caſe is moral Evidence, and moral Evidence is what, upon the Principles of Reaſon, we are bound to aſſent to. For, ſince one great Uſe of Reaſon is to examine and aſſent to Truth, when the Arguments, or Objections, which are for or againſt any moral Truth, being both impartially weighed and conſidered, our Reaſon does not only more powerfully perſuade us to the Truth of the Thing propoſed, than the Objections can poſſibly diſſuade us from it, but alſo produces a Kind of pleaſing Tranquillity and Satisfaction in our Minds, when we acquieſce in it, and, on the contrary, cannot diſſent from it, without Reluctancy, and oppoſing the univerſal Opinion of Mankind; if we ſhut our Eyes againſt ſo clear a Light, and refuſe our Aſſent, becauſe the Thing is not capable of a ſtrict Demonſtration, we ſin againſt the Law of Reaſon in our Minds, and endeavour to depoſe that ſovereign Faculty, which God has made a Judge and Ruler over us. Now, ſince a great Part of moral Evidence conſiſts in the Teſtimony of others, there are ſome infallible Rules, whereby we may be morally certain of the Truth of all ſuch Matters of Facts, as are recommended to us by ſuch Teſtimony; and theſe may be reduced to three:

The Conditions of a proper Teſtimony.

1. A SUFFICIENT Number of credible Witneſſes.

2. A MORAL Aſſurance, that they could not have offered to impoſe a Falſhood upon us, without being detected. And,

3. A TACIT, or expreſs Acknowledgment of Enemies, that they do teſtify the Truth.

1. [c] WHEN therefore a great Number of Men, of unqueſtioned Virtue and Probity, unanimouſly agree to teſtify a Thing to be true, which they ſaw with their own Eyes; when they declare it in the moſt publick and ſolemn Manner, and appeal to God for the Truth and Veracity of what they ſay; when they aſſert Things which are contrary to the Prejudice of their Education, and the known Laws of worldly Intereſt; when they expoſe themſelves to ſuch Sufferings, in Support of their Teſtimony, as Fleſh and Blood would carefully avoid; and when the Religion, which they endeavour to prove and recommend by it, expreſſly condemns all Lyars to everlaſting Puniſhments in the World to come; it is evident, that ſuch a Teſtimony is ſo circumſtantiated, as to give us a very good moral Security of the Truth of that Action.

2. [d] WHEN a few deſpiſed and illiterate Men ſet themſelves up as Witneſſes of a ſurpriſing Event, in Oppoſition to a wiſe and powerful Nation, and even a whole World of inquiſitive Men; when the Account, they give, is of ſo great Importance to Mankind, that their eternal Happineſs or Miſery are to depend upon their believing or denying the Truth of it; when all the Precautions, which human Wiſdom or Malice could deviſe, have been made uſe of to diſcover and find out the Fraud, if any ſuch had been uſed, or, if true, to hinder the Belief of it; but when, notwithſtanding all the Oppoſition, which the Learning, and Wiſdom, and Power of this World could make againſt it, the Fact was believed by the beſt and wiſeſt Part of Mankind then living, who, after the moſt diligent Search and Inquiry, could find no Flaw or Defect in it; it is plain to a Demonſtration, that the Thing was ſo, as it is repreſented to be, and ſucceeding Ages can have no Manner of Pretence for the leaſt Doubt or Scruple about it.

3. [e] ONCE more, when two Parties of Men ſtand in the higheſt Degree of Oppoſition to each other, and the one aſſerts and publiſhes a Matter of Fact, which is abſolutely deſtructive of the Intereſt of the other; when the one openly and publickly accuſes the other of Injuſtice, Cruelty, and Murther, naming the Time, the Place, the Manner, and other Circumſtances of its being committed; and the Party accuſed does not as publickly refute the Charge, or do ſomething in their own Vindication, more material than bribing falſe Witneſſes, to ſtifle the Story, or threatening their Accuſers, if they pretend to perſiſt in it; they then tacitly acknowledge the Truth of what the accuſing Party alledge againſt them; and ſo, by Conſequence, give up the Cauſe. And now to apply theſe Obſervations to the Teſtimony of the Apoſtles concerning the Reſurrection of our Saviour Chriſt.

1. THAT

[b] Ditton, on the Reſurrection of Chriſt. [c] Cotes's Sermons. [d] Cotes, ibid. [e] Ditton, ibid.

Applied to the Apoſtles.

1. THAT the Apoſtles were Men of Truth and Probity, void of Ambition and Self-deſign, uniform in their Teſtimony, and unable to deviſe an Impoſture, is what we had Occaſion to prove [f], when their Characters and Qualifications fell under Conſideration before: And, [g] though the Number of Perſons, who are the Witneſſes of a Matter of Fact, abſtracted from all other Conſiderations, is not, of itſelf, abſolutely convincing and concluſive; yet it carries this Perſuaſion along with it, that, though an Impoſture may lie concealed for a while in a few Hands, it is next to impoſſible, that it ſhould lie undiſcovered in a great many. Now, to what a Number of Witneſſes our Saviour appeared after his Reſurrection, the Apoſtle to the Corinthians has given us this Enumeration: [h] I delivered unto you, firſt of all, ſays he, that which I alſo received, how that Chriſt died for our Sins, according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he roſe again the third Day, according to the Scriptures; and that he was ſeen of Cephas [i], then of the Twelve [k], after that, he was ſeen of above five hundred [l] Brethren at once, of whom the greater Part remain at preſent: Beſides this, he was ſeen of James [m], then of the Apoſtles [n]. And, laſt of all, he was ſeen of me [o], as of one born out of due Time.

A ſufficient Number of Witneſſes.

Had proper Opportunities.

HERE is a competent Number of Witneſſes; and that they had ſufficient Means and Opportunities to know, and to be informed of the Truth, of what they reported to the World, is undeniable. They converſed with him familiarly, though not perpetually, for forty Days; they eat and drank with him; they ſaw him do many wonderous Works, and received Orders and Inſtructions from him about the Inſtitution and Government of his Church: They declare that, to convince them of the Truth of his Reſurrection, he ſhewed them his Hands, and his Feet, and, to one, more incredulous than the reſt, he indulged the Liberty of feeling the very Prints, that the Nails had made in them; that he upbraided them with Unbelief, in not giving Credence to a Matter ſo well atteſted; ſhewed them the Reaſons of his Reſurrection, and expounded the Scriptures to them concerning this very Article, with ſo peculiar an Energy, that they felt their Hearts ſet on Fire, even when they did not perceive that it was he. In ſhort, they declare that, at his Departure, he bleſſed them, and comforted them, and took his Leave of them; and that, after they had received his laſt Commands and Directions, they ſaw him actually taken up from them, and aſcend into Heaven. Here was no Room for any Dream or Deception. Men could never fancy, that they ſaw a Perſon, for ſo many Weeks together; that he

[f] See page 39. [g] Ditton, on the Reſurrection of Chriſt. [h] 1 Cor. xv. 3, &c.

[i] St Paul takes no Notice here of Chriſt's firſt Appearance to the devout Women, who brought Spices and Ointments to the Sepulchre, Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary, the Mother of James, and other Women, (as we have it in Luke xxiv. 10.) The Reaſon of which ſeems to be this, —— That theſe Women, being not to be Witneſſes of their Saviour's Reſurrection to the World, but only to carry the firſt News of it to his Apoſtles; this Appearance, in Conſideration of their Piety and Affection to him, was only for the private Confirmation of their Faith, and therefore not particularly taken Notice of by St Paul, among the publick Evidences of Chriſt's Reſurrection. Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III.

[k] The College of Apoſtles, becauſe their Number was twelve by our Saviour's Inſtitution, are moſt frequently called the Twelve, though, at ſome Meetings, ſome one, or more of them might chance to be abſent. By the Miſcarriage of Judas, there was a ſhort Interruption, from the Time of our Saviour's Apprehenſion to his Aſcenſion, and then they are called the Eleven; and are called ſo [Mark xvi. 14.] though Thomas, one of the Eleven, was abſent. And indeed in this Text of St Paul, both St Ambroſe, and the vulgar Tranſlation, which certainly follows a very ancient Copy, inſtead of Twelve, render it Eleven. Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III.

[l] This was the moſt ſolemn Appearance of all, mentioned Matthew xxviii. 10. and John xxi. 1. But then there is this Difficulty concerning the Greatneſs of this Number, viz. that, at our Saviour's Aſcenſion from Mount Olivet, the Number of the Names together was but an hundred and twenty, whereas, at this Meeting, they are computed five Hundred; and yet we can hardly conceive, that any of the Number, who had ſeen him after his Reſurrection, had revolted from him. Now, for the clear Solution of this, it is to be conſidered, that the great Meeting of five Hundred was in Galilee, the Place of our Saviour's Reſidence, and moſt conſtant Preaching, and where, very probably, the Number of his Diſciples was greateſt; for which Reaſon he might appoint that Place for their general Meeting: After which, the Apoſtles, who went thither by our Lord's Appointment, together with others, who accompanied them from Jeruſalem, returned back, but his Followers, who lived in Galilee, remained there. So that there might very well be five Hundred at the Meeting in Galilee, and but an Hundred and twenty at Jeruſalem. Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III.

[m] This particular Appearance to St James, the Brother of our Lord, is no where mentioned in the Evangeliſts. St Paul probably had it from the common Tradition, mentioned by St Jerom, out of the Hebrew Goſpel of the Nazarenes, in which are ſeveral Paſſages, omitted by St Matthew; and this for one, "That our Lord, "immediately after he had riſen, went and appeared to James: For James had vowed, that Hour that he drank of "the Cup of the Lord (viz. in the Sacrament) he would not eat Bread, until he ſaw him riſen from the Dead. The "Lord, when he appeared to him, ſaid, Bring hither Bread and a Table; and he took the Bread, and bleſſed it, "and brake it, and gave it to James the Juſt, and ſaid to him, My Brother, eat thy Bread; for the Son of Man is "riſen from among them that ſleep."

[n] i. e. By Thomas, as well as the reſt, as this was the ſecond Appearance to the Apoſtles together, whereof St Luke gives us an Account, Chap. xxiv. 5. and St. John, Chap. xx. 19. [o] This he ſpeaks of our Lord's Appearance to him, in his Way to Damaſcus, whereby he was in a very powerful and extraordinary Manner, on a ſudden, converted to Chriſtianity. Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III.

[p] Ditton, on the Reſurrection of Chriſt.

he eat and drank in their Preſence; that he argued and expounded the Scriptures to them; convinced them of ſeveral Errors and Miſtakes; gave them Promiſes, Rules, and Inſtructions for their own Comfort, and the Government of a Church; and, after all, went up into Heaven in their Sight, whilſt Angels ſtood by, and told them, [q] that he, who was taken up into Heaven, ſhould come in like Manner again, as they had ſeen him go into Heaven: This, I ſay, could not be a Dream or Deception of their own, and therefore if their Teſtimony was falſe, it muſt have proceeded from a malevolent Deſign to abuſe Mankind with a downright Forgery.

Could not impoſe a Fraud without Detection.

2. BUT now, ſuppoſing them wicked enough to engage in ſo villainous a Deſign, yet where would they have had Abilities to execute it? [r] They were not bred up in Courts, or engaged in ſuch a Way of Living, wherein the Arts and Intrigues of the World were either taught or practiſed; they were no Men of polite Converſation, that, by the Helps of Philoſophy, and Elegance of Speech, were able to inſinuate a Fondneſs, and raiſe an Eſteem of themſelves in the reſt of Mankind; but their Diſcourſes were plain and homely, as well as their Education and Condition in the World ſuch, as could neither prompt their Ambition, nor qualify them for great Attempts: They were, in ſhort, poor, illiterate Fiſhermen, and therefore not in much Likelihood to entertain ſo great a Thought, as putting an Impoſture upon the whole World. But, admitting they had Cunning and Courage enough to ſet about it, yet how could they poſſibly promiſe themſelves Succeſs, when the profeſſed Enemies of Chriſt's Reſurrection had ſo many urgent and weighty Reaſons to induce them to uſe their utmoſt Efforts to prove it falſe; when they had as much Time and Opportunity, as they could deſire, in order to diſcover the Impoſture; and had Power in their Hands to enable them to examine ſuch Perſons and Things, as might conduce to the Diſcovery? Nay, put the Caſe, that they were ſo ſubtle, as to contrive, and ſo fortunate, as to conceal the Impoſture; yet ſtill we are to conſider them as Men, and conſequently, of the ſame Paſſions and Deſires with other Men; and being ſo, [s] that they ſhould relinquiſh all the darling Pleaſures, Profits, and Accommodations of Life, and voluntarily expoſe themſelves to Scorn, to Tortures, to Perſecutions, and even Death itſelf, only to propagate a Story, which they themſelves knew to be a Lye, and that an abſurd, inſipid, incredible Lye, (if a Lye at all) is a Thing natural, and morally impoſſible.

'Tis abſurd to believe they could.

THE Truth is, [t] he, who can believe, that, without any Kind of human Means, or the Divine Aſſiſtance, they could impoſe upon all Mankind, in an Affair of the higheſt Importance to them; that ſo notorious an Impoſture could encounter, vanquiſh, and triumph over Truth, in ſpite of all the Oppoſition, which Heaven and Earth could make againſt it; that Perſons, otherwiſe ſtrictly blameleſs in their Lives, and rigidly virtuous, ſhould ſo zealouſly labour to maintain a Lye, and freely expoſe themſelves to the Fury of Earth, and Flames of Hell, for the ſake of it; that they ſhould ſacrifice their Lives and Souls themſelves to the Ghoſt of a crucified and reputed Malefactor; and, laſtly, that God, who is Truth itſelf, ſhould, by enabling them to perform miraculous Works, give authentic Teſtimony to Error and Falſhood. He, I ſay, who denies the Reſurrection, and can believe ſuch Abſurdities as theſe, refuſes his Aſſent to the beſt-atteſted Fact in the World, and yields it to another, which, of all Legends, is the moſt unlikely and improbable. For (to continue the Thread of theſe Abſurdities) [u] he muſt believe, that Men, otherwiſe ſtrict in their Lives and Converſations, whom we find appealing to their Proſelytes, how holily, how juſtly, how uprightly they had behaved themſelves among them, ſhould nevertheleſs, againſt the cleareſt Dictates of Conſcience, be guilty of ſuch an enormous Villainy as this Impoſture implies: That Men, who, in all their Speeches and Actions, ſeemed to aim at nothing ſo much, as the Advancement of God's Glory, and the Promotion of Goodneſs, ſhould, in their Hearts, defy God, and deteſt all Goodneſs, as they needs muſt do, if they were wilful Cheats; and that Men, who, both in their Writings, and in the Succeſs of their Attempt, ſhewed no Want of Wiſdom, ſhould drive on a vain and ſenſeleſs Project, and, with more unwearied Induſtry, labour to maintain and diſperſe a Lye, than any Men beſides did ever employ for the Confirmation of the greateſt Truth. [x] He muſt believe, that a deſpicable Company of wilful Impoſtors, of an hated Nation and Religion, without Learning or Diſcipline, without Skill or Experience, without any of the Arts of pleaſing, or recommending themſelves to Mankind, ſhould run down all the Wit, and Power, and [q] Acts i. 11.

[r] Ditton, on the Reſurrection of Chriſt.
[s] South's Sermons, Vol. V.
[t] Cotes's Sermons.
[u] Whitby's General Preface, Vol. I.
[x] Ditton, ibid.

Policy of the World, and, preaching an incredible, and ſeemingly ridiculous Doctrine, directly contrary to all the worldly Intereſt and Humours of Men, to their Religion and Cuſtoms, and to their Reaſon and Philoſophy too, ſhould be able to propagate the Belief of it far and wide through the Earth. Nay he muſt believe, that a few rude untaught Mechanicks were not only able, without any Sort of Aſſiſtance, to compaſs that vaſt Deſign of making the World ſtoop to the Laws, which they impoſed; but alſo that they laid their Plot ſo deep, that the Effect of it was permanent and laſting; ſo very deep, that none of all the penetrating and inquiſitive Heads in the World, for a Succeſſion of ſo many Centuries, and after the deepeſt Reſearches and Examinations, ſhould find it poſſible to diſcover the leaſt Fault or Flaw in the Contrivance. He muſt believe, that theſe Men, cunning as they were, had nevertheleſs diveſted themſelves of all the Principles of Self-Love and Tenderneſs, of Care and Regard to their own Preſervation; that they deſpiſed all the Comforts and Enjoyments of Life; that they ventured upon Poverty and Miſery, upon Shame and Obloquy, upon Perſecution and Torments, upon Death and Damnation itſelf in the next World, and all for nothing, for no End or Purpoſe, that can be imagined or thought on; but bid Defiance to all that human Nature dreads and ſhuns, without having any Deſign in View, or any Grounds and Reaſons for what they did. And, laſtly, he muſt believe, that theſe Cheats and Impoſtors, as vile and wicked, as ſilly and ſenſeleſs as they were, did, notwithſtanding, furniſh Mankind with the moſt exact Syſtem of Morality that ever was, and taught ſuch Rules of Living, as were never to be expected from all the Schools of Philoſophy: That they, whoſe Purpoſe it was to abuſe the World, laid the ſureſt Foundations of Peace and Happineſs; they, who were notorious Hypocrites, took indefatigable Pains to make other Men upright and ſincere; they, who themſelves believed nothing of a God, did impart the moſt rational and becoming Notions of him to the reſt of Mankind; and by no other Principles, but thoſe of pure Atheiſm and Irreligion, kindled a Flame of Deſire in the Hearts of Men to ſerve and obey, to worſhip and adore him. But theſe are Abſurdities too groſs to be ſwallowed; and yet every one, who diſbelieves the Veracity of the Apoſtles aſſerting our Lord's Reſurrection, muſt, in Conſequence, believe all this.

The Apoſtles far from being credulous.

[y] MEN indeed are often very poſitive in Things, that afterwards prove falſe, and might have been detected ſooner, had they but had either Judgment or Patience to examine them more ſtrictly; eſpecially too, if there be any Intereſt depending; for a great Step towards the believing a Thing to be true is the wiſhing it were ſo: But, in the Caſe now before us, the Diſciples were ſo far from being over-eager, that we may juſtly wonder, how they could poſſibly be ſo backward to believe, did we not know, that God, in his great Wiſdom, ſo ordered the Matter, that their Incredulity ſhould be our Confirmation. The Certainty of a Reſurrection in general our Lord had frequently foretold, and that [z] all, who were in the Grave, ſhould one Day hear his Voice, and come forth. The Neceſſity of his own Reſurrection, and the ſtated Time of it, he had expreſſly declared; and when he gave them Warning, at any Time, of his approaching Death, he never failed to ſupport them withal by an Aſſurance, that he would riſe again the third Day; and yet, notwithſtanding all theſe Warnings, [a] the Women who returned from the Sepulchre, and related their Viſion of Angels, were but indifferently received: [b] Mary Magdalen, who brought the News that ſhe had actually ſeen him, was not believed: The two Diſciples, who had a long Converſation with him, in their Way to a Village in the Country, met with no better Credit; nay, even when he appeared to the Apoſtles aſſembled together, [c] they were terrified and affrighted, ſuppoſing that they had ſeen a Spirit: When, to remove this Fear, he commanded them to handle him, and ſo ſatisfy themſelves, that he was no empty Apparition, they ſtill ſeem to be amazed, rather than convinced; and one carried his Cautiouſneſs to ſuch a Degree, that, without [d] thruſting his Hand into his Side, which the Spear had pierced, and his Fingers into the Print of the Nails, that faſtened him to the Croſs, he would not believe, and in this our Saviour gratified him. Now, when the Diſciples were ſo far from inclining to the Belief of our Saviour's Reſurrection, as to be rather obſtinately bent againſt it; when they would neither credit one another, nor their own ſelves, but cavilled at every freſh Inſtance, and raiſed new Scruples and new Difficulties perpetually; and yet, [y] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [z] John v. 28, 29. [a] Luke xxiv. 11.

[b] Mark xvi. 10. [c] Luke xxiv. 37. [d] John xx. 25.

yet, when afterwards, these very Men were so firmly persuaded of this Matter, that they staked down their Lives in Attestation of it; these must needs be Considerations of great Weight to establish their Credit; they free them from all Imputations of Easiness and Partiality, since they proceeded so warily, and doubted every Circumstance, till their Conviction was full, and no Pretence left for their doubting any longer.

3. THERE is a further Consideration, not to be neglected in the Case now before us, and that is [e] the Testimony of others, as well as his Disciples, to confirm the Truth of our Saviour's Resurrection. The Soldiers, who watched at the Sepulchre, to secure his Body from the Hands of the Apostles; they, who felt the Earth trembling under them, who saw the Countenance of [f] an Angel like Lightning, and upon that Sight did shake, and became as dead Men; even some of these came into the City, and shewed unto the Chief Priests all the Things that were done. Nay, the very Jews themselves, by advancing so incredible a Story, as that of his Disciples stealing him away, do, in Effect, confess and corroborate a Truth, which they so very weakly endeavour to destroy. For can we imagine that the Romans, whose military Discipline was so exceedingly strict, should neglect their Post, upon so extraordinary an Emergency? Can we imagine that the great Stone, which lay at the Door of the Sepulchre, could be rolled away without any Noise or Disturbance? Or that a Company of Men should enter the Place, strip our Saviour of his Grave-Cloaths, take up his Body, and carry it away, (all which must require some considerable Time) and in the Interim not one of the Watch awake? But, supposing them all asleep, can we suppose that his poor dejected Disciples would ever undertake so bold an Attempt? Are not these the very Men, that, upon the first Assault in the Garden, all forsook him and fled? * They durst not stand by him even then, when he declared it in his Power to call for twelve Legions of Angels to his Rescue; and have they now the Confidence to come in a Body, and bear away his Corps? They had but two Swords among them all before, and he, who had the Courage to make Use of one of them, durst not afterwards so much as own any Knowledge of his Master? And is the Case now so mightily changed, that these poor, naked, and dispirited Creatures should attempt a Detachment of armed Men, whose Order and Business was to expect, and be provided for them? Is this a likely Thing, that they, who durst not so much as appear in Publick, but assembled themselves privately, and shut up their Doors, for Fear of the Jews, should, all on a sudden, grow valiant, or rather fool-hardy to this Degree, when he, in whom they trusted, was dead, and when the stoutest of them all trembled at the Voice of a silly Maid, and abjured him shamefully, while he was alive, to avoid the Danger of an inquisitive Tongue? These are Difficulties never to be got over; such as will never suffer any Man, who considers them, to believe that crude and idle Pretence, which the Jews made Use of, to disprove our Saviour's Resurrection; and these are such Arguments, as are commonly produced to illustrate the Account, which the Apostle gives us of this great Article of our Christian Faith; † whom they slew, and hanged on a Tree, him God raised up the third Day, and shewed him openly, not to all the People, but unto Witnesses, chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him, after he rose from the Dead.

The Testimony of Enemies.

" BUT if the Resurrection of Christ was so necessary to prove the Truth of his " Divine Mission, why was it not attested after such a Manner, as to leave no pos- " sible Room for Doubt and Scruple concerning the Certainty of it? Why did not " he, [g] instead of leaving his Persecutors and Crucifiers to be satisfied by the Testi- " mony of his Apostles, make an open and triumphant Entry into Jerusalem, after " he was risen; appear in the Temple, and every Place of publick Concourse, that " every Eye might see him, and every Heart receive full Conviction? Herod and " Pilate, Annas and Caiaphas, the Priests and Elders of the Sanhedrim, &c. had " been the irrefragable Witnesses of his Resurrection; and indeed more fit and cre- " dible, than the Apostles themselves, who were his Friends and Followers: For " who would not have been satisfied with the Testimony of his Enemies? Since " then this Way of convincing the World would have been most effectual, it seems " reasonable to suppose, that, had Jesus been Christ, and risen from the Dead, he " would, without Controversy, have made it his Option, but since we find he did " not,

An Objection,

[e] Pearson, on the Creed. [f] Matth. xxviii. 2, &c. * Stanhope, on the Epistles and Gospels, Vol. II.
† Acts x. 39, &c. [g] Clagget's Sermons, Vol. I.

Answered. "not, we have some Reason to suspect him." Now, [h] though the Will and good Pleasure of God be a sufficient Reason to us for all his Actions, yet there is something peculiar in this Dispensation of his Resurrection, which made it not so proper for him to appear commonly, after he was risen from the Dead. For being now to act according to the Majesty of the Divine Nature, and not according to the Infirmities and Condescension of the Human, it did not so well comport with the Dignity he had assumed, to converse publickly, or to submit himself to the Censures and fresh Affronts of his Enemies. But suppose it had been consistent with his Honour and Dignity, yet [i] the unbelieving Jews, especially the Chief Priests and Rulers, were of all Men most unworthy, to whom God should afford so extraordinary a Way of Conviction. They had already despised the Evidence, that was given them; and not only so, but maliciously imputed the plainest Miracles, that ever were wrought, to the Power and Operation of the Devil. Now, if any Thing can render Men incapable of the Favour of farther Conviction, such a malicious Resistance of the Evidence, which our Saviour's Miracles carried along with them, would probably do it; especially if we consider, that the greatest of all the Miracles, which he wrought in his Life-time, (I mean the raising Lazarus from the Grave, after he had been dead four Days) was so far from convincing them, that, though they could not deny the Thing, yet from thence [k] they took Occasion to resolve to put him to Death. And therefore what Reason was there, that Christ should appear to them for their Conviction, who had conspired to compass his Death, even because they knew that he had raised one from the Dead?

Such a publick Appearance inconsistent with Christ's Honour.

What the Jews deserve not.

What would not have convinc'd them,

[l] HAD Christ, after he was risen, appeared so publickly to the Jews, as the Objection here requires, it is not to be questioned, but that they would have offered to lay violent Hands upon him, as they had before designed to kill Lazarus, and that for the same Reason. In which Case, had our Saviour vanished out of their Sight and Hands, (as doubtless he would) what would the Jews have concluded from hence, but that they had seen a Ghost, a Spectre, or Apparition? And what Conviction would that have wrought in them; but that their Senses had been imposed upon by some magical Illusion? And what Effect could this have had upon their Minds, towards bringing them to a Belief, that Christ was truly risen, and much less, that he was the true Messiah? None at all. Many of the Jews (among whom we may suppose the Chief-Priests and Elders, who hired the Soldiers to stifle the Belief of Christ's Resurrection with a false Story of their own Invention) were given up to Hardness of Heart, and would not have believed, or, if they believed, would not have testified, that they had ever seen Christ after his Resurrection.

nor help the Cause of Christianity.

[m] THEY, that are wicked enough to deny what they believe, will, at a Pinch, deny also what they know to be true. Supposing then, that our Lord had shewed himself to all his Enemies, and to all the People, and but some of them, especially of the great Men in Authority, had denied that ever they saw him after his Resurrection, this would have exceedingly weakened the Testimony of those, that had vouched and confessed it. For he, that appeals to the Knowledge of another for the Truth of a Matter of Fact, is so far from gaining, that he loses Credit by the Appeal, if that other Person denies that he knows any Thing of it. If therefore our Lord had appeared to his Persecutors, (it being likely that his Disciples would have appealed to their Knowledge) his Persecutors, by protesting the contrary, would have made a terrible Advantage against the Christians upon that Appeal. So that the Wisdom of Christ Jesus, our Lord, in making Choice of particular Witnesses, viz. such Persons only, as would be so far from dissembling their own Knowledge, that they would always be ready to seal their Testimony with their Blood, is very conspicuous; inasmuch, as he hath settled the Christian Faith upon a better Foundation this Way, than if he had appeared in the Temple, or in the Midst of Jerusalem, to the whole People of the Jews. [n] It is not the Number of the Witnesses, but the Character, and Qualifications of the Persons, and the Evidence itself, in its full Force and Circumstances, which are chiefly to be regarded in Matters of this Nature. If but a few Men can, as the Apostles did, by undeniable Miracles, make it sufficiently appear, that what they can say is true, and that God himself confirms the Truth of it, they can appeal to every Man's own Senses, before whom they work work Miracles, and make every one, that ſees them, a Witneſs to the Truth of their Doctrines. In this Caſe, God himſelf bears Witneſs to it, and what the High-Prieſt ſaid upon a very different one, every Stander-by finds himſelf conſtrained to declare, [p] What Need have we of any farther Witneſſes? For we ourſelves have heard, out of their own Mouths, (in the miraculous Gift of Tongues) or ſeen with our own Eyes the many wonderful Works, which were wrought, in the moſt publick Manner, in Teſtimony of Chriſt's Reſurrection.

[h] Jenkins's Reasonableness of the Christian Religion, Vol. II. [i] Tillotson's Sermons, Vol. III. [k] John xi. 47, 53. [l] South's Sermons, Vol. V. [m] Clagget's Sermons, Vol. I. [n] Jenkins, ibid.

The Subſtance of the Anſwer.

IF then it was not ſo conſiſtent with the Dignity of Chriſt, after his Reſurrection, to converſe publickly, and the Jews, leaſt of all, deſerved ſuch a Favour and Vouchſafement for their Conviction: If, in all Probability, they would not have been convinced by this Method; or, if convinced, would not have made open Declarations of what they knew to the World, but perhaps prejudiced the Cauſe of Chriſt, by an obſtinate Denial of it; the Caſe is plain, that in chuſing a ſmaller Number of proper Witneſſes, and in ſupporting them with miraculous Gifts, to aſſert the Truth of their Teſtimony, God provided better for the Manifeſtation of his Son's Reſurrection, as the firm Eſtabliſhment of his holy Religion, than if he had collected never ſo many of the greateſt, the wiſeſt, the ſubtileſt Heads in all Judea, for that Purpoſe; ſince the weaker and more contemptible the Inſtruments were, the more conſpicuous was the Power and Wiſdom of God, in bringing about an Event ſo ſtupendous. For herein is the Wiſdom of God magnified, when [q] he chuſes the fooliſh Things of the World to confound the Wiſe, and herein his Power made viſible, when he chuſes the weak Things of the World to confound the Things that are mighty. And ſo we proceed,

The Manner of Chriſt's Reſurrection.

II. TO obſerve in what Manner, and for what Purpoſes, this Reſurrection of Chriſt was effected. And here [r] it will be of no great Uſe to enquire, whether our Saviour's Body, from the Time of his Death to his Reſurrection, was kept in a compleat Organization, that ſo, by this Miracle, it might be preſerved in a natural State for his Soul to re-enter; or whether, by the Courſe of Nature, the vaſt Number of inward Veſſels, that are in the Body, were ſtopped, and, all on a ſudden, when the Time of the Reſurrection came, put into a vital State again, in order to be animated by his Soul: Either Way there muſt be a Miracle; though, in the former, the Words of the Pſalmiſt ſeem to be better anſwered, thou wilt not ſuffer thy Holy One to ſee Corruption. To as little Purpoſe is it to enquire, how our Saviour's new Body was ſupplied with Blood, ſince the greateſt Part of it was loſt upon the Croſs; whether, by the Power of God, it was brought back again into his Veins, or a Supply of new Blood made and injected by a Miracle: Or, to inquire, whether his Body, that was then in the Nature of a glorified Body, though yet on Earth, needed the Supplies of Blood, to furniſh new Spirits for the Service of the natural Functions. This in general is certain, that the ſame Soul returned back to the ſame Body, ſo that the ſame Man, who actually died, actually roſe again; that this was effected by a Divine Power, which Power was in himſelf; [s] for as the firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul, ſo the laſt was made a quickening Spirit; and, laſtly, that this was effected, [t] at a convenient Diſtance of Time; for Chriſt continued in [p] Matth. xxvi. 65. [q] 1 Cor. i. 27. [r] Burnet, on the Articles. [s] 1 Cor. xv. 45.

[t] Barrow, on the Creed. Ἐν τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, in the third Day, ſays the Creed, and not after the third Day: For, as St Auſtin remarks, our Lord was not three whole Days in the Grave, but only the entire ſecond Day, and Part of the firſt and laſt. Now, according to the Language of the Scriptures, if Chriſt was ſlain, and roſe the third Day, the Day in which he died is one; and the Day on which he roſe is another; and, conſequently, there could be but one Day and two Nights between the Day of his Death and his Reſurrection, The ſame is to be obſerved in the Caſe of Circumciſion. The Male Child of eight Days old was to be circumciſed: In which eight Days, the Day, wherein the Child was born, was one, and that, wherein it was circumciſed, was another; and ſo, there was but ſix compleat Days between the Day of his Birth and the Day of his Circumciſion. If then it ſhould be aſked, how our Saviour could ſay of his own Reſurrection, that, as Jonas was three Days and three Nights in the Whale's Belly, ſo ſhould the Son of Man be three Days and three Nights in the Heart of the Earth: There is nothing more uſual, we muſt know, both in the Greek and Hebrew Languages, than, by the common Figure Synecdoche, to uſe Part of the Day or Night to denote the whole Day or Night, as our learned Pearſon abundantly ſhews, where he produces Leo the Great, [de Reſurrect. Domini, Ser. 1.] giving this Reaſon for our Savjour's abbreviating the Time of his Interment; Ne turbatos Diſcipulorum animos longa Mœſtitudo cruciaret, denunciatam tridui moram tam mirâ celeritate breviavit, ut dum ad integrum ſecundum diem pars primi noviſſima, & pars tertii prima, concurrit, & aliquantum temporis ſpatio decideret, & nihil dierum numero deperiret. Vid. Pearſon, on Art. V. Though therefore Chriſt foretold, that he ſhould be in the Heart of the Earth three Days and three Nights; yet, if he was pleaſed to be there a ſhorter Time, it was no Violation of his Word, but rather is to be accounted a ſingular Kindneſs done to his Diſciples, that they might the ſooner be comforted and refreſhed by his Return to them. It is apparent from Scripture, that God hath ſhortened the Time of ſome Propheſies and Predictions, to comfort and encourage his People; nay, that this ſhall be true of the very Day of Judgment, and that, for the Elect's Sake, as our Saviour himſelf tells us; and therefore, if our Saviour roſe ſooner, than what the Words may ſeem to import, his Promiſe is certainly made good, nay bettered by this early Riſing: For, if a Friend acquaints me, that, in his Grave ſo long, that all People might be certain he was really dead, beyond all Poſſibility of Recovery by natural Means; and he deferred his Reſurrection no longer, becauſe it was fitting, that, while Mens Memories were freſh, their Paſſions warm, and their Mouths open in Diſcourſe of his Death; while the Watch was ſet, and the Witneſſes preſent, and both Friends and Enemies attending the Event; it was then moſt fitting, I ſay, that he, who was made of the Seed of David, according to the Fleſh, ſhould declare himſelf to be the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holineſs, by the Reſurrection from the Dead: And this ſuggeſts one Purpoſe ſerved by this great Event, viz.

The Purpoſes of it. A Vindication of Chriſt's Perſon and Performances.

1. THE Vindication of the Dignity of our Saviour's Perſon, as well as the Efficacy of his Performances. [u] For, if the Meanneſs of his Birth and Parentage, the low Eſtate and Condition of his Life, and the bitter Sorrows and Diſgraces of his Death, ſhould breed any Suſpicion concerning the Man Chriſt Jeſus, whether he were indeed (as he pretended to be) the Son of God, the Saviour of Mankind, and the Judge of all the World; if ſuch homely Circumſtances, as attended him, I ſay, and ſuch ſad Accidents as befel his Perſon, ſhould, in the Eyes of thoſe, who look not beyond outward Appearances, tend to his Diſparagement; the wonderful Power and Favour of God, demonſtrated in his Reſurrection, not only wipes off this Diſgrace, but adds a freſh Luſtre and Glory to the Sacredneſs of his Perſon. For if God's yielding him to Death looked like a Diſregard, his raiſing him to Life again much more denotes a tender Relation and Affection to him; ſince That might proceed from different Grounds, but This can admit of no other Interpretation. [*] For if God raiſed him up from the Dead, who was condemned and put to Death for calling himſelf the Son of God, this is a Demonſtration, beyond all Contradiction, that he was in Reality what he pretended to be; unleſs we could ſuppoſe, (what is mental Blaſphemy to ſuppoſe) that God would countenance an Impoſtor, and ſet the broad Seal of Heaven to a Falſhood.

AND as the Reſurrection of Chriſt ſhews the great Worth and Divinity of his Perſon, ſo is it of great Service to confirm our Faith in the Efficacy of his Performances. [x] When Man had, by tranſgreſſing the Laws of his Maker, forfeited that Life, which was, at firſt, beſtowed upon him by the free Gift of God, and which he held upon the Tenure of his Obedience; Chriſt was pleaſed to lay down his own Life, in order to reſcue him from the Power and Dominion of Death. This was a Work of the laſt Conſequence to Mankind, [y] but wherein they could have no Satisfaction, ſo long as they ſaw Death (the known Wages of Sin) maintain its full Force and Power over him, who pretended to conquer it, and holding him, like an obnoxious Perſon, in Durance and Captivity. But now that they ſee their Saviour riſen, and the Price which he paid for their Redemption, declared by his Reſurrection, to be accepted by God; [z] ſince he hath acknowledged a full Satisfaction done to his Juſtice, by diſcharging their Surety from Priſon, [a] who ſhall lay any Thing to the Charge of God's Elect? It is God that juſtifieth: Who is he that condemneth? It is Chriſt that died, yea, rather that is riſen again.

The Proof of the Truth of his Religion.

2. ANOTHER End and Uſe, ſerved in our Saviour's Reſurrection, is to prove and aſcertain the Truth and Divine Authority of his moſt holy Religion. [b] If Chriſt had not riſen from the Dead, but for ever been detained in the Grave, notwithſtanding all that might be urged from the Goodneſs of his Doctrine, the Innocence of his Life, and the Multitude of his Miracles, for the Proof of the Truth of Chriſtianity, (though very ſtrong and concluſive Proofs they be) I very much queſtion, whether it would have met with the ſame ready Entertainment in the World, that we find it has. His Doctrine might have been thought a Compilation from ancient Syſtems, and not beyond the Reach and Invention of other Philoſophers: His many great Works and Miracles might have been imputed to his Skill in Magick, or a Familiarity with the Devil: And the Virtue and Innocence of his Life accounted nothing more than a ſtale Trick and Artifice to impoſe upon the eaſy and credulous World. But now, when it appears, that this Jeſus, who taught this holy Religion, who did thoſe miraculous Works, and lived that virtuous Life, after he was put to a cruel Death, that, after three Days are paſſed, he will beſtow ſuch a Favour upon me, and yet ſhall think fit to do it within a Day after his Promiſe; it would be unreaſonable to complain, that my Friend kept not his Word, when I had ſo much Reaſon to thank him for haſtening his Courteſy. The Similitude is very eaſy to be applied to the preſent Purpoſe. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

[u] Barrow, on the Creed. [*] Cotes's Sermons. [x] Smalridge's Sermons. [y] South's Sermons, Vol. III. [z] Barrow, ibid. [a] Rom. viii. 33, 34. [b] Sharpe's Sermons.

Death, did riſe to Life again, and converſed upon Earth for forty Days together, and, after that, in the Preſence of many Spectators, did viſibly aſcend into Heaven; here is no Room left for any Suſpicion of this Nature, but all Pretences of Impoſture do perfectly vaniſh: Inſomuch, that, it is impoſſible for any Man to believe Chriſt's Reſurrection, and, at the ſame Time, harbour any Doubt of the Truth of his Religion.

FOR let us thus reaſon. Chriſt over and over again told his Apoſtles, [a] that he ſhould be put to Death; but that, within three Days, he would riſe again: Nay, this he told, not only to his Diſciples, but to all the People; and [b] gave it as a Token, whereby they might know, and be convinced, whether he was (what he pretended to be) the Son of God, and that Great Prophet, which was to come into the World: Nay, he gave it as the laſt and greateſt Evidence, he had to give; and ſuch, as if it failed of convincing them, they were to expect no other from his Hands. Our Saviour now laying ſuch a Streſs upon this Point of his Reſurrection, and putting his whole Cauſe (as it were) upon this Iſſue, I aſk, how is it poſſible to imagine, that God Almighty ſhould make theſe Predictions of his good, if he was not really what he pretended to be?

IF Chriſt had been an Impoſtor, it had been the eaſieſt Matter in the World to have ſtifled all his Pretences for ever. It had but been to have let him mouldered away to Duſt in his Grave, as all other Men do, and as he, without the Help of Omnipotence, would have done; and then all the World would have ſeen that he was a Deceiver. But now, when, inſtead of periſhing in the Grave, he was, after three Days, reſtored to Life again, as he had foretold the People; what are we to conclude from hence? Did not God, in this, appear with a Witneſs as a Voucher and Approver of his Cauſe? Was not this a Demonſtration to all the World, that Jeſus Chriſt was no Deceiver, but that he came from God, and that whatever he delivered, was the Truth of God, and to be received as the Oracles of God? Certainly it was. For that any Man ſhould be raiſed from the Dead, by any other Power, than the Power of God, all the World knows to be impoſſible: But then, to ſuppoſe, that God ſhould employ his Power to give Teſtimony to a Falſhood, is ſuch a Thing, as no Man, who has any Notion of the ſacred Attributes of God, and thinks it inconſiſtent with his Faithfulneſs and Truth to lay an invincible Temptation and Snare before all Mankind to believe an impious Lye, can poſſibly imagine.

THUS the Reſurrection of Chriſt reſolves itſelf into God's Veracity, and may very juſtly be eſteemed the Baſis and Foundation, on which the whole Fabrick of our Religion ſtands, the Sum and Abridgment of the Chriſtian Faith, and the one Thing neceſſary to be believed by us in order to our Salvation; for [c] if thou ſhalt confeſs with thy Mouth, ſays the Apoſtle, the Lord Jeſus, and believe with thine Heart, that God hath raiſed him from the Dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved.

3. ANOTHER Deſign of our Saviour's Reſurrection was to confirm our Faith and Hope, by giving us a certain Pledge of our own. [f] The Reſurrection of any one Man proves a Reſurrection to be poſſible; but the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt proves the Reſurrection of all Men to be infallible. For Chriſt did affirm of himſelf, that he would raiſe the Dead; and, in Proof of the Truth of that Aſſertion, he raiſed himſelf from the Dead: There cannot therefore remain any Room to doubt, whether he can make good that Promiſe to us, after he hath already accompliſhed, in his own Perſon, what he hath promiſed to fulfil in ours. Hath he raiſed up his own Body out of the Grave, and ſhall he not raiſe up ours alſo? Hath he effected what is more difficult, and can he want Ability to do what is far eaſier? Were there no Mention made in Scripture of his raiſing the Dead; were the Exerciſe of this Act of Omnipotence no where in direct Terms aſcribed to him; yet, ſince whatever Powers belong to the Father, do alſo belong to the Son, we might, from the Identity of the Father and Son both in Attributes and Operations, ſafely infer the Efficacy of the Son, in raiſing the Dead: But now, when the Scriptures affirm, that [g] as the Father raiſeth up the Dead, and quickeneth them, ſo the Son of Man quickeneth and raiſeth whom he will; when they exhibit him as the common Repreſentative of Mankind, and thereupon declare, that [h] as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all be made alive; when they ſtile him [i] the Head of the Body, the Church, and the

A Pledge of our own Reſurrection.

[a] Matth. xvi. 21. John xvi. 16. [b] John ii. 19. [c] Matth. xii. 39, 40. [d] Cotes's Sermons. [e] Rom. x. 9. [f] Smalridge's Sermons. [g] John v. 21. [h] 1 Cor. xv. 22. [i] Col. i. 18.

the Firſt-Born from the Dead; and thereupon give us Aſſurance, that we, who are his Members, are to follow; and that ſince [k] our Life is hid with him in God, when he, who is our Life, ſhall appear, then ſhall we alſo appear with him; and laſtly, when they call him [l] the Firſt-Fruits of them that ſleep, in Alluſion to a Cuſtom among the Jews, where a little Quantity of Corn, be it but a Sheaf, or Handful, conſecrated, i. e. offered to God, as the Firſt-Fruits of the Year, derived a Bleſſing upon the reſt, and was the Earneſt of a compleat Harveſt: When theſe, and ſuch-like Alluſions and Compariſons, theſe, and ſuch-like Declarations and Promiſes, do everywhere meet us in Scripture, we have all the Aſſurance imaginable, that the Reſurrection of our Saviour is a certain Pledge of the Reſurrection of all Mankind; that his is the firſt and leading Step toward that univerſal Triumph over Death and the Grave, which ours, in due Time, will compleat; and that, [m] if the Spirit of him, who raiſed up Jeſus from the Dead, dwelleth in us, he, that raiſed up Jeſus from the Dead, will alſo quicken our mortal Bodies, [n] that they may be made like unto his glorious Body, according to the mighty Working, whereby he is able to ſubdue all Things to himſelf. And therefore [o] bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who, according to his abundant Mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively Hope, by the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt from the Dead, to an Inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, that fadeth not away, reſerved in Heaven for us.

An Obligation to Virtue and Godlineſs.

4. ANOTHER Deſign of our Saviour's Reſurrection is, to lay Chriſtians under a ſtrong Obligation to Virtue and Holineſs: For this we may obſerve, that the Writers of the New Teſtament do all along deliver the Doctrine of Chriſt's Reſurrection, as a practical Doctrine, and make it an Emblem of our ſpiritual riſing from the Grave of Sin. [p] Their Manner of arguing is thus: —— "If Chriſt was crucified for our "Sins, then ought we to crucify them in our Members; and if Chriſt roſe again the "third Day, then are we engaged, in Conformity to him, to riſe again to Newneſs "of Life, and to lead a ſpiritual, divine, and heavenly Life, ſuch a Life as he now "lives with God." The Apoſtle to the Romans, in a very appoſite and elegant Similitude, taken from the Form of Baptiſm, has taught us this Uſe of our Saviour's Reſurrection: [q] We are buried, ſays he, with Chriſt by Baptiſm into Death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the Dead by the Glory of the Father, even ſo we alſo ſhould walk in Newneſs of Life. For, if we have been planted together in the Likeneſs of his Death, we ſhall be alſo in the Likeneſs of his Reſurrection: And therefore reckon ye yourſelves to be dead indeed unto Sin, but alive unto God, through Jeſus Chriſt, our Lord. And, indeed, if we conſider the Nature of the Thing itſelf, nothing can ſupply us with more powerful Motives to live well, than the Contemplation of our Lord's Reſurrection. [r] For, when we reflect upon the full Satisfaction which he hath made for Sin, what can be a greater Encouragement to a virtuous Life, than the Senſe of a pacified God, looking graciouſly upon us, and accepting our ſincere, though imperfect Endeavours, for the Sake of his Son's prevailing Merits? When we reflect on our own Weakneſs and Inability to do good, and perceive, at the ſame Time, that, by our Saviour's riſing from the Grave, he is able to aſſiſt us, and we may do all Things through him, that ſtrengthens us; this gives us great Courage and Reſolution in our ſpiritual Warfare. When we reflect, that Chriſt, having overcome Death, is ſeated at the Right-Hand of God, and there offers up his own Merits, joined with the Prayers of all Believers; this ſurely ſhould engage us to draw near to the Throne of Grace, with full Aſſurance of Faith, and to take great Heed, that all our Supplications and Prayers proceed from a pure and upright Conſcience. Once more, when we reflect on Chriſt's Reſurrection, and fix this Contemplation in our Minds, that our Proxy, our Head, our Redeemer, our Saviour, has left Earth for Heaven, and is there incircled with ineffable Glory; how can it be, but that this Conſideration ſhould prevail with us to deſpiſe the World, and breathe after Heaven, and to deſire to depart, and to be with Chriſt, who is inthroned there already? For, can we have ſo mean an Affection for our Saviour, as to be content to ſtay behind him? Can we think of Happineſs, and of the Author of it, both in Heaven, and not earneſtly deſire to be there, loſt and ſwallowed up in the Contemplation and Fruition of our Lord? Theſe are ſome of the Conſequences of this Doctrine: And therefore, to conclude with the Apoſtle's Exhortation; [s] If then ye be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe Things which are above, where Chriſt ſitteth on the Right-Hand of God:

[k] Col. iii. 3, 4. [l] 1 Cor. xv. 20. [m] Rom. viii. 11. [n] Phil. iii. 21. [o] 1 Pet. i. 3, 4. [p] Sharpe's Sermons. [q] Rom. vi. 4, &c. [r] Edwardi's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [s] Col. iii. 1.

God, and ſet your Affection on Things above, and not on Things on the Earth, for ye are dead, and your Life is hid with Chriſt, in God.

OUR bleſſed Saviour, after his Reſurrection from the Dead, took great Care to give his Diſciples a ſpeedy Information of it, by the Women, who ſaw the Viſion of Angels; by Mary Magdalen, who ſaw our Lord himſelf; by the two Brethren, with whom he travelled and converſed; and by his own appearing to ten of them, and giving them all the Demonſtrations, they could deſire. So full and authentick a Teſtimony, from ſo many different People, at ſo many different Times, might have been enough, one would think, to convince any one, that was not unreaſonably ſcrupulous. But Thomas, who happened to be abſent at the Time of our Saviour's Appearance, was ſo far from crediting the Report of his Brethren, that he declares his Reſolution not to be convinced, without the utmoſt Evidence, that all his Senſes, capable of judging of ſuch a Matter, could receive; [t] except I ſhall ſee in his Hands the Print of the Nails, and put my Finger into the Print of the Nails, and thruſt my Hand into his Side, I will not believe. Thomas's Unbelief.

1. TO find out the Character of this Apoſtle, we muſt take a little Notice of the ſeveral Paſſages, wherein Mention is made of him in the Goſpel. [u] Our Saviour, forewarning his Diſciples of his approaching Death, tells them very kindly, * In my Father's Houſe are many Manſions — I go to prepare a Place for you, and whither I go, you know, and the Way you know: To which Thomas anſwers very peremptorily, Lord, we know not whither thou goeſt, and how ſhould we know the Way: As if he had ſaid, "Lord, thou ſayeſt, thou art going to thy Father's Houſe, to provide Man-"ſions for us: Now we know thy Father's Houſe, according to natural Generation, "is that of Joſeph and Mary, in which many Manſions are not to be had: But if "thou meaneſt a Father of any other Kind of Generation, or any other Inheritance, "to which thou haſt a Title to recommend us, this is what we do not underſtand, "and what we do not underſtand, it is impoſſible for us to believe." The Nature,

WHILE our Saviour was in Galilee, and, upon the News of Lazarus's Sickneſs, propoſed to go into Judea, and viſit him, his Diſciples endeavoured to divert him, by telling him; [x] Maſter, the Jews of late ſought to ſtone thee, and goeſt thou thither again? But he ſtill perſiſting in his Reſolution, and telling them withal, that Lazarus was dead, Thomas turns to his Fellow-Diſciples, and ſays, Let us alſo go, that we may die with him: As if he ſhould ſay, "Lazarus is dead, and all his Pains and Fears are "at an End, and better it were for us, if ours were ſo too. The Jews Malice is "bent upon the Deſtruction of us all, and if our Maſter could not ſave his princi-"pal Friend from Death, what Hope is there of his ſaving us? Let us go then, and "meet our Doom as patiently as we can."

THE laſt Mention of this Apoſtle is in the Inſtance of the Reſurrection. [y] He had been told that our Saviour was riſen from the Dead, and the Truth of it had been atteſted to him by Evidences beyond Exception. Several Companies had ſeen him, and converſed with him ſeveral Times, to whom he had expoſed the Sight and Feeling of his Wounds; to whom he had expounded the Scriptures concerning himſelf, and with whom he had broken the Sacramental Bread, &c. All theſe People, with all theſe convincing Tokens, had told Thomas that Chriſt was riſen; and yet Thomas (in pure Wiſdom) would not believe, and might perhaps reaſon himſelf into this Conduct, by ſome ſuch Arguments as theſe; [z] "Jeſus of Nazareth was put to Death upon the "Croſs; and, being dead, was laid, and ſealed up in his Sepulchre, ſtrictly watched "with a Guard of Soldiers: But I am told, and required to believe, that, notwith-"ſtanding all this, he is riſen, and is indeed alive. Now ſurely Things, ſuitable to "the ſtated Courſe of Nature, ſhould be believed, before ſuch, as are quite beſide "it: For a dead Man to return to Life is preternatural; but that thoſe, who report "this, may be miſtaken, is very natural and uſual. Dead I ſaw him; but that he is "riſen, I only hear: In what I ſee with mine Eyes, I cannot eaſily be deceived; but "in what I only hear, I may, and often am. Here being two Things then propo-"ſed to my Belief, my Reaſon tells me, that I ought to chuſe that, which is more "credible: But it ſeems more credible, that a ſmall Number of Witneſſes, fright-"ened and diſturbed as they are, may be deceived, or (as honeſt as once they were) "may be drawn into Confederacy to deceive me, than that one ſhould riſe from the "Dead: Becauſe this cannot be done without a Miracle, and wiſe Men will never "have Recourſe to Miracles, ſo long as Nature can ſolve the Appearance."

[t] John xx. 25. [u] Young's Sermons, Vol. II. * John xiv. 2, &c. [x] Ibid. xi. 8, &c.
[y] Young, ibid. [z] South's Sermons, Vol. V.

THIS ſeems to have been the ſilent Reaſoning of Thomas's Mind, when called upon by his Brethren to believe the Report of their Lord's Reſurrection; and, from theſe ſeveral Paſſages put together, we may conclude, that he was a Man of a ſlow and timorous Temper; free enough indeed in arguing, but extremely nice and ſcrupulous in believing; full of Doubts and Heſitations, and loth to embrace any Thing for a Truth, that he did not rightly underſtand, without the fulleſt Conviction and Demonſtration. This is what is called his Unbelief, or Hardneſs to be perſuaded; and how culpable it was, in the Caſe before us, we ſhall, in the next Place, endeavour to ſhew.

and Aggravations of it.

2. A [a] RESURRECTION from the Dead, it is confeſſed, was new and a ſtrange Event, which the Generality of Mankind held altogether incredible; but, in th Caſe of Jeſus, and the Circumſtances of Thomas, the Diſbelief of it ſeems incapable of Excuſe. The ancient Propheſies concerning the Meſſias had ſpoken ſo fully to this Point, [b] That thus it behoved Chriſt to ſuffer, and to riſe from the Dead the third Day, that our Lord, in his Converſation with the two Travellers to Emmaus, charges them with Folly and Slowneſs of Heart, for not being convinced upon this Teſtimony alone. He had frequently, during his Abode upon Earth, given the Apoſtles Warning of it: He had told the Jews, that, whenever they ſhould [c] deſtroy the Temple of his Body, in the Compaſs of three Days he would raiſe it up again. He never [d] mentioned the Sufferings, appointed for him to accompliſh at Jeruſalem, without remembering to cloſe that melancholy Subject with the comfortable Promiſe of returning to Life again; and this Promiſe, great and ſurpriſing as it was, Thomas could not but be ſatisfied, that he was able to perform, by the many Miracles, which he ſaw daily wrought by him; his reviving Jairus's Daughter, which he could not but know, and eſpecially his raiſing Lazarus ſo lately, of which himſelf was an Eye-Witneſs. What more now could be expected in Reaſon, but competent Evidence, that a Thing, ſo often promiſed, ſo clearly foretold, and what Jeſus had proved himſelf ſo capable of doing, was actually performed? And were not the Women, who had ſeen him, and the Viſion of Angels; the two Travellers, who had heard him diſcourſe, and expound the Scriptures to them; and [e] the unanimous Aſſertions of the ten Brethren, recounting to him all the Paſſages of our Saviour's Appearance to them, ſufficient for this Purpoſe? What reaſonable Suſpicion could he have of their being under any Temptation to deceive him, or under any Infatuation to be deceived themſelves? Their long and Intimate Acquaintance with Jeſus was ſufficient to diſtinguiſh him from any other Perſon, and abundant Care was taken to ſatisfy them, that this was not an airy Form in his Shape, by having his Hands and his Feet handled. Nay, his very Diſcourſe denoted what he was, the calling his own former Sayings to Remembrance, the opening their Underſtandings, the expounding and arguing out of Scripture, ſavoured of that peculiar Authority, with which he always taught; and [f] the breathing upon them, giving them the Holy Ghoſt, and Commiſſion to preach and act in his, and his Father's Name, were Characters as plain, that this Perſon was their own Maſter, the very Chriſt of God.

THESE are the Aggravations of Thomas's Unbelief, which are ſtill heightened by this Conſideration, that, when he refuſed to admit Conviction from the Senſe and Atteſtation of ſo many credible Witneſſes, he at the ſame Time declared it reaſonable to be determined by the Verdict of his own Senſe; never conſidering what an haughty Piece of Injuſtice it was, to ſuppoſe that his own ſingle Senſe was leſs fallible, than the joint Experience of ſuch a Number. But, to do Juſtice to the Memory of this Apoſtle, it muſt not be forgot, that, after our Saviour had vouchſafed him the Conviction he deſired, (which he did not do, becauſe the former Evidences had been inſufficient, or to warrant the Rejection of them in others, but out of infinite Goodneſs, and particular Condeſcenſion to his preſent Infirmity) we find him making an ample Compenſation for his former Diſtruſt, by a moſt noble Confeſſion; [g] for he anſwered and ſaid, My Lord, and my God: I call it a noble Confeſſion, becauſe the beſt Interpreters of Scripture have underſtood by it, that Thomas did not only recognize Jeſus for the Meſſiah, the very ſame Lord, to whom he had been a Servant and Companion during the Space of his Miniſtry; but that he moreover owned his Divine

[a] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV. [b] Luke xxiv. 46. [c] John ii. 19, 21.
[d] Matth. xvi. 21. xx. 19. [e] John xx. 25. [f] Ibid. ver. 22. [g] Ibid. ver. 28.

Divine Nature, and, from the Power exerted in his Reſurrection, drew this Conſequence, that he muſt neceſſarily be the Son of God. So mighty, ſo ſudden a Change do we find in this Apoſtle, that the Perſon, who ſo lately he could not be prevailed upon to account any other, than a dead Man, loſt to all Hopes and Poſſibility of returning, he now adores and admires, as the Almighty and Ever-living God.

3. AND from hence we may poſſibly conjecture right, that the chief Reaſon, why God permitted this Apoſtle to be ſo ſcrupulous and doubtful, in the Point of his Son's Reſurrection, was for the fuller Confirmation of our Belief of it. It might indeed be urged before, that our Lord had not given all the Proofs of his Reſurrection, that the Nature of the Thing was capable of: * But now, when nothing was left unaſked, that the moſt ſceptical Doubts could pretend to deſire; when the very Apoſtles themſelves had one of their Number, that held out a conſiderable Time, and then preached not his Doctrine, till his Scruples were entirely removed; when even this Doubter himſelf was no leſs vigorous and poſitive afterwards, in aſſerting the Truth of a Point, which nothing but a Demonſtration could make him believe; this takes off all Imputation of Credulity and Eaſineſs: It ſhews, that the Apoſtles proceeded with great Caution, before they embarked in the Cauſe of Chriſtianity; but at the ſame Time it makes the Doubts of others more inexcuſable. This Diſciple doubted, and was ſatisfied for us all: His former Unbelief adds ſuch Strength to the Cauſe he pleads, and makes him a Witneſs ſo much above Exception, that the Scruples, which in him were Weakneſs, in thoſe that follow him, and know his Story, will be Wilfulneſs and reſolved Infidelity. Let us then obſerve, and thankfully admire the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of our God and Saviour, who converted the Failings of an eminent Servant to ſuch excellent Advantage, that not only his own Mind was better eſtabliſhed from his Doubts, but even Gainſayers likewiſe are more effectually put to Silence, and, out of his Weakneſs, all ſucceeding Believers are made ſtrong; learning, from his Example, to lay aſide our Scruples upon ſufficient Conviction; and to make ſome Amends, by our After-Acts, for any Offence, which theſe Scruples might have given, while we continued in them.

The Reaſons of God's permitting it.

SECT. I.

Of CHRIST's Aſcenſion.

THE Space from our Saviour's Reſurrection to his Aſcenſion into Heaven, at leaſt, that laſt and ſignal Aſcenſion, at which ſo great a Number of his Diſciples were preſent, we are told in the ſacred Records, was forty Days; but whether he continued all that while on Earth, in the Company and Converſation of his Diſciples, or more conſtantly reſided in Heaven, and appeared to them occaſionally only, and as oft as was neceſſary for their Conviction and Inſtruction, i. e. whether, at the End of theſe forty Days, he aſcended once for all, or, during the Space of that Time, had ſeveral Removes to Heaven, is of late become a Matter of Diſpute among the Learned. The common Notion indeed has been for a conſtant Stay upon Earth, and a ſole Aſcenſion after forty Days: And, for the Support of this Opinion, ſome are apt to ſuppoſe, [h] that Chriſt intended to keep a Proportion between the Goſpel and the Law of Moſes; that, as he ſuffered at the Time of the killing of the Paſſover, ſo the Effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt, being fixed to the Day of Pentecoſt, whereon the Law was given, he determined to ſtay on Earth, until that Time was near, that he might not put his Apoſtles upon too long an Expectation without his Preſence, which might be neceſſary to animate them, till they ſhould be endued with Power from on High. They produce likewiſe the Authority of the Apoſtle to the Hebrews, who tells us expreſſly, that [i] neither by the Blood of Goats or Calves, but by his own Blood, Chriſt entered in ONCE into the Holy Place, having obtained eternal Redemption for us; and, from the immenſe Diſtance between Earth and Heaven, they are at a Loſs, they ſay, to conceive how frequent Aſcents and Deſcents could be practicable. Our Saviour indeed cautions Mary Magdalen, falling at his Feet, in order to worſhip

Whether Chriſt aſcended more than once.

Arguments for the Negative.

* Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV.

[h] Burnet, on the Articles.

[i] Heb. ix. 12.

worſhip and embrace him, as we may preſume; [k] touch me not; for I have not yet aſcended to my Father: But theſe Words may not imply, that he was then going to aſcend; on the contrary, [l] by a Figure, common enough among Grammarians, who frequently change one Tenſe for another, they may denote, that he was not then about to aſcend, but to ſtay many Days upon Earth; ſo that Mary might have Space and Opportunity enough to pay her Acknowledgements and Adorations to him.

Arguments for the Affirmative.

NOW though it cannot be denied, that there are Inſtances enough, both in ſacred and profane Writers, where one Tenſe may be put for another, and make a great Alteration in the Senſe of the Words; yet, that in this Place there is no Neceſſity for ſuch Mutation, but, on the contrary, a very great one, that the Words ſhould abide in their natural Signification, is evident from hence; "That we can hardly de-"viſe any Reaſon, why our bleſſed Saviour ſhould ſo ſtrictly forbid Mary to touch "him, becauſe he was not yet aſcended; and yet, that very Evening, [m] walk, and "diſcourſe, and eat with the two Diſciples, travelling to Emmaus, and [n] ſhew to the "Aſſembly of his Apoſtles his Hands and his Feet, deſiring them to handle him; un-"leſs his firſt Aſcenſion was intermediate, and preſently after this Interview with "Mary." To make this more obvious, we muſt remember, that, a little before his Paſſion, our Saviour foretold his Apoſtles his ſudden Aſcent to his Father, and as ſudden Deſcent to them again: [o] Yet a little while, ſays he, and ye ſhall not ſee me, and again a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me; becauſe I go to my Father: And afterwards, upon his Diſciples Surmiſe and Diſputation about the Meaning of the Expreſſion; [p] Jeſus ſaid unto them, Do ye enquire among yourſelves of what I ſaid, a little while, and ye ſhall not ſee me, and again a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me? Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, that ye ſhall weep and lament, but the World ſhall rejoice; and ye ſhall be ſorrowful, but your Sorrow ſhall be turned into Joy, &c. Now if we compare this Prediction with the Event, [q] how ſad and diſconſolate the Diſciples were upon our Saviour's Death, and how refreſhed and joyful they were, ſoon after his Reſurrection, and conſider withal, that this Sorrow was to laſt till Chriſt had been with the Father, and then their Joy to commence; we ſhall be inclined to believe, that what our Lord would be underſtood to ſay, is, that he was to go to his Father immediately after his Reſurrection, and then, very ſoon, to return to his Apoſtles again, even the very ſame Day in the Evening.

That Chriſt aſcended the Morning of his Reſurrection.

AND indeed, conſidering that Chriſt was our High-Prieſt, it was neceſſary for him to aſcend into Heaven, as ſoon as his Sufferings were finiſhed. [r] For, as the Prieſt under the Law was not only to ſlay the Sacrifice, but to carry the Blood that Moment within the Sanctuary, and there preſent it before God, to complete the Atonement, and make Interceſſion for the People; ſo Chriſt, having ſhed his Blood, and offered his Body on the Altar of the Croſs, was immediately to aſcend into the heavenly Sanctuary, and there obtain for us the Remiſſion of our Sins, and all other Benefits of his Paſſion. Nor is this all. That our Saviour is inveſted with a regal, as well as a ſacerdotal Character, is what the Scriptures teach us, and what [s] we have ſufficiently explained already: But now, [t] if he could not exerciſe any ſupreme Authority, until he was exalted to his heavenly Kingdom; if he could not [u] give Gifts unto Men, until he had aſcended on high; nor [x] ſend his Holy Spirit upon his Diſciples, until he was glorified, and had, by his Interceſſion, [y] obtained that great Promiſe of the Father: If he could not, I ſay, adminiſter the Affairs of his mediatorial Kingdom, until he had conquered Death and the Devil by his Reſurrection, and preſented himſelf, as a ſlain Sacrifice, and Propitiation for the Sins of the World, before the Preſence of the Divine Majeſty; then is it evident, that, on the very Day of his Reſurrection, he muſt have aſcended up to Heaven; becauſe, in the Evening of that Day, we find him [z] giving a Commiſſion and Inſtruction to his Apoſtles; promiſing them the Miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt; [a] bleſſing them in a ſolemn Manner; [b] ſending them as his Father had ſent him; [c] giving them the Power of remitting and retaining Sins; and afterwards, in Galilee, aſſerting that [d] all Power was given him, and that in Heaven, as well as Earth; and therefore commanding his Apoſtles to go, and teach, and baptize all Nations, promiſing his powerful Preſence with them, till the End of the World. Certainly theſe Exerciſes of royal and ſupreme Power, according according to the Scripture-Account of Things, could hardly belong to our Saviour, until his Exaltation: And if ſo, then have we Reaſon to ſuppoſe, that, in the Morning of his Reſurrection, he aſcended privately up to Heaven; and that, in the Evening of the ſame Day, he likewiſe aſcended viſibly, we have ſtill ſtronger Preſumption to believe.

[k] John xx. 17. [l] Whitby, on John xx. [m] Luke xxiv. 13. [n] Ibid. ver. 39. [o] John xvi. 16. [p] Ibid. ver 19, &c. [q] Whiſton's Eſſays. [r] Whitby, on John xx. 17. [s] Vid. Page 597. [t] Whiſton, ibid. [u] Eph. iv. 8. [x] John vii. 39. [y] Acts ii. 33. [z] Mark xvi. 15, &c. [a] Luke xxiv. 50. [b] John xx. 21. [c] Ibid. ver. 23. [d] Matth. xxviii. 18, &c.

St MARK, who is the firſt of the Evangeliſts, who makes Mention of any of our Lord's Aſcenſions, having inſtanced in ſeveral Perſons, to whom he had appeared on the Day of his Reſurrection, comes at laſt to the Apoſtles, and tells us, that [f] afterward he appeared to the Eleven, as they ſat at Meat, and upbraided them with their Unbelief, becauſe they believed not them, who had ſeen him after he was riſen. The very Words plainly imply, that the Apoſtles had not, as yet, been aſſured by their Senſes, which yet, we are told, they were on the Evening of his Reſurrection. So that this muſt be the firſt Interview, that paſſed between Chriſt and them; and yet the Evangeliſt informs us, that, after he had given them ſome Directions concerning their future Preaching of the Goſpel, &c. [g] he was received up into Heaven, and ſat on the Right-Hand of God, that very ſame Evening, as it will appear by what follows. St Luke, who is the next, and indeed the only Evangeliſt beſides, who mentions our Lord's Aſcenſion at all, [h] having given us the Hiſtory of his Reſurrection, of the Angels appearing to the Women, of the Women relating it to the Apoſtles, and of two of the Apoſtles running to the Sepulchre, to ſatisfy themſelves, [i] goes on with a more particular Account of the two Diſciples, travelling [k] the very ſame Day to Emmaus; how our Lord appeared and diſcourſed to them; how they came to know him, and in what Manner he diſappeared; whereupon he tells us, that [l] they aroſe, the ſame Hour, and returned to Jeruſalem, and came to the Aſſembly of the Apoſtles, and told them the Particulars of what they had juſt before heard and ſeen; [m] and, as they were ſpeaking of theſe Things, Jeſus ſtood in the Midſt, and diſcourſed with them; and, as ſoon as his Diſcourſe was over, [n] he led them out as far as Bethany, where, while he was bleſſing them, he was parted from them, and carried up to Heaven. Nothing certainly can be plainer, and more convincing, than this Narration. Let us now ſee what Account it is, that the ſame Author gives us of our Saviour's final Aſcenſion.

and the Evening.

Now the Circumſtances, in which he clothes his Account, are theſe; [o] When the Apoſtles were come together, they aſked him, ſaying, Lord, wilt thou, at this Time, reſtore again the Kingdom to Iſrael? And he ſaid unto them, it is not for you to know the Times, or the Seaſons, which the Father hath put in his own Power; but ye ſhall receive Power, after that the Holy Ghoſt is come upon you: And ye ſhall be Witneſſes unto me, both in Jeruſalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermoſt Parts of the Earth. And when he had ſpoken theſe Things, while they beheld, he was taken up, and a Cloud received him out of their Sight; and while they looked ſtedfaſtly toward Heaven, as he went up, behold two Men ſtood by them in white Apparel, which alſo ſaid, Ye Men of Galilee, why ſtand ye gazing up into Heaven? This ſame Jeſus, which is taken up from you into Heaven, ſhall ſo come in like Manner, as ye have ſeen him go into Heaven. Here we may perceive different Actions, different Diſcourſes, different Circumſtances, from what we find in St Luke's Goſpel; and therefore can hardly imagine, that Accounts, ſo little alike, wrote by the ſame Perſon, can have any Manner of Relation to one and the ſame Event. In his Goſpel, the Place, from whence Chriſt is ſaid to aſcend, [p] is Bethany, fourteen Furlongs from Jeruſalem; in his Book of Acts, [q] Mount Olivet, no more than five. In the Goſpel, the Company, which ſaw him aſcend, [r] ſeem to be the Apoſtles, and not many more; in the Acts, [s] the Number of the Names together were about an hundred and twenty. No Mention is made in the Acts of his lifting up his Hands, and bleſſing them; no Notice is taken in the Goſpel of the Cloud which received him out of their Sight, or of the two Angels, which aſſured them, that he was to come down, in the laſt Day, in the ſame viſible Manner, that they ſaw him aſcend.

THESE Things make it reaſonable to believe, that the different Relations of St Luke deſcribe two different Aſcenſions: And if we can fairly prove two, there is no Reaſon why we may not ſuppoſe many more; as many indeed, as his Reſidence in Heaven, and the neceſſary Affair of his inſtructing his Apoſtles on Earth, alternately and frequently at other Times.

[f] Mark xvi. 14. [g] Ibid. ver. 19. [h] Luke xxiv. 1, &c. [i] Ibid. ver. 13, &c.
[k] Vid. Luke xxiv. 13. compared with John xx. 19. [l] Ibid. ver. 33. [m] Ibid. ver. 36.
[n] Ibid. ver. 50, 51. [o] Acts i. 6, &c. [p] Luke xxiv. 50. [q] Acts i. 12.
[r] Luke xxiv. 33. [s] Acts i. 15.

might require; ſince the Diſtance of Place, be it what it will, (conſidering the Power and Purity of Chriſt's celeſtial Body, to which the Divine Spirit is united) can be no Manner of Objection. But then, if we ſuppoſe, with ſome learned Men, (and as the Scripture-Language in many Inſtances gives us Reaſon to ſuppoſe) that the Place, which we call Heaven, where God's majeſtick Preſence appears, and Chriſt's Humanity is aſcended, where Thrones, Dominions, Principalities, Powers, Arch-angels, and Angels, have their Abodes, every one, in their ſeveral Degrees and Orders, is no other, than the vaſt Expanſion of the Air; and that the utmoſt Height of this Air, as appears from the beſt Obſervations, is but about 45 or 50 Miles from the Earth; it will appear no ſtrange Thing, that our Lord ſhould aſcend and deſcend more than once, during that forty Days Interval between his Reſurrection and final Aſcenſion; which, in ſome Meaſure, accounts for the Manner, in which was ſpent the intermediate Time, whereof the Evangeliſts, putting them all together, give us but a ſlender Detail.

The Matter of our Saviour's Diſcourſes after his Reſurrection.

THE Evangeliſts however have acquainted us in general, that the Conferences, which he then had with his Diſciples, turned chiefly upon theſe two Points: 1. His expounding unto them, [u] out of the Prophets, and all the Scriptures, the Things concerning himſelf: And [*] his ſpeaking of the Things pertaining to the Kingdom of God; and therefore we may not improperly conjecture; 1. What were the moſt material Paſſages in the Prophets, relating to his Paſſion and Reſurrection, which Chriſt might explain to his Diſciples. And, 2. What were the moſt material Topics, relating to his Kingdom, that he may be ſuppoſed to have inſiſted on, at this Time. The Scripture indeed has not told us what Propheſies our Saviour explained to his Diſciples; [x] but I cannot think it unreaſonable to preſume, that the Diſciples endeavoured to convince others by the ſame Scriptures, to which they owed their own Conviction; and therefore ſuch, as we find them, either relating to, as quoted from our Saviour before his Death, or elſe urging upon the Jews, in their own Perſons afterwards; ſuch, I think we may preſume, had a Place in our Lord's Expoſition; ſince it is not to be doubted, but that, in the Explications of the Old Teſtament, they followed the Interpretation, which he had given them.

1. As to the Sufferings and Death of Chriſt then, the Propheſies produced in Scripture are ſo very many, that they reach every material Circumſtance of them. His being betrayed by a particular Friend [y] David foretold, as [z] Jeſus himſelf remarks: That Traitor's miſerable End, and Loſs of his Apoſtleſhip, [a] St Peter has obſerved from [b] the ſame Author: The Fear and Confuſion of his Diſciples [c] our Lord refers to a Paſſage in [d] the Prophet Zechariah: The infamous Manner, and profligate Companions of his Death, [e] St Mark collects from another [f] in Iſaiah: The Barbarity of his Enemies, in taunting and reviling him, even in his dying Agonies, [g] St John has produced out of [h] the Royal Pſalmiſt: And the invincible Meekneſs and Patience, wherewith he bore it all, [i] St Peter has quoted out of the [k] Evangelical Prophet.

IN like Manner, as to the Reſurrection of Chriſt, God having promiſed to Abraham, that [l] in his Seed all the Nations of the World ſhould be bleſſed; [m] This Seed, St Paul affirms to the Galatians, is Chriſt, who redeemed us from the Curſe of the Law, being made a Curſe for us, that the Bleſſing of Abraham might come upon the Gentiles, through Jeſus Chriſt. David, magnifying the Mercy of God in his Son's Exaltation to the Throne, has theſe Words; [n] Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee; which [†] St Paul, in his Sermon in the Synagogue at Antioch, [o] applies to Chriſt's Reſurrection. The ſame Royal Prophet, in a Rapture of Truſt, and holy Hope, expreſſes himſelf thus; [p] Thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, neither wilt thou ſuffer thine holy One to ſee Corruption; which [q] St Peter, in his Sermon on the Day of Pentecoſt, refers to the ſame Purpoſe; and [r] Iſaiah having mentioned the ſure Mercies of David, by which is underſtood a ſpiritual and eternal Kingdom, [s] St Paul makes makes the Application of them to Chriſt's Reſurrection, who is now become a King, and no more to return to Corruption.

[t] Whiſton's Eſſays. [u] Luke xxiv. 27. [*] Acts i. 3. [x] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. II. [y] Pſal. xli. 9. [z] John xiii. 18. [a] Acts i. 16. [b] Pſal. lxix. and cix. [c] Matth. xxvi. 31. [d] Zech. xiii. 7. [e] Mark xv. 27. [f] Iſa. liii. 12. [g] John xix. [h] Pſal. xxii. [i] 1 Pet. ii. 24. [k] Iſa. liii. [l] Gen. xii. 3. [m] Gal. iii. 13, &c. [n] Pſal. ii. 7. [†] Acts xiii. 32, 33. [o] When the Apoſtle applies theſe Words, This Day have I begotten thee, to our Saviour's Reſurrection, he does but ſpeak the Language of the Hebrew Writers, who call the Earth our Mother, the Grave her Womb, and Mens riſing from it being born again: And the Jews, who own that this Pſalm belongs to the Meſſiah, have no Reaſon to complain, that thoſe Words ſhould be applied to his Reſurrection. Kidder's Demonſtration. [p] Pſal. xvi. 10. [q] Acts ii. 29, &c. [r] Iſa. lv. 3. [s] Acts xiii. 34.

THESE are ſome of the principal Prophecies, which relate to our Lord's Paſſion and Reſurrection, the two great Points, he was to clear up to his Diſciples; and what very probably he made the Subject of his Conferences, for the Time he was with them after his Reſurrection. And, in like Manner,

2. THE Things pertaining to the Kingdom of God may not unlikely be reſolved into ſuch Topics, as theſe — [t] "That ſince he had choſen them to be Witneſſes of "his Doctrine, Death, and Reſurrection, they were to preach the Goſpel over the "Face of the whole Earth, and uſe all Diligence, that no Nation might be unac- "quainted with it: That ſuch Perſons, as liſtened to their Preaching, and were "willing to embrace their new Religion, they were to admit into the Church by "the appointed Form of Baptiſm; and ſuch, as ſhould chance to fall from their "Integrity at any Time, and through the Deceitfulneſs of Sin, or Violence of any "ſudden Temptation, be induced to violate their Baptiſmal Vow; theſe they ſhould "renew and confirm by the other Sacrament of his Supper: That the Benefits to "ſuch, as believed and obeyed their Doctrine, ſhould be infinite; the Condemna- "tion to thoſe, who ſlighted the kind Offers of God, intolerable: That, in exe- "cuting this their Charge, they were to expect Labours and Difficulties, Perils and "Perſecutions innumerable; but, in Balance to theſe, might depend on his conti- "nual Preſence with them, the Comforts and Supports of his bleſſed Spirit, and the "Almighty Hand of God, attending their Miniſtry, and enabling them to work all "Kinds of Miracles in Confirmation of it: That, through theſe Aſſiſtances, they "ſhould ſee the Work of God proſper in their Hands; ſee People of all Nations "converted to the Faith; and, when they themſelves had finiſhed their Courſe, "ſhould receive the Reward of their Labour and Fidelity, Crowns of Glory in the "Manſions of Bliſs, and live for ever in the Joy of their Lord. In the mean Time, "wherever the Chriſtian Religion prevailed, that there they ſhould ſettle Elders in "the Church; admit them, by a ſolemn and regular Ordination; conſecrate a Day "in Memory of his Reſurrection; appoint a Liturgy, for the Help of publick De- "votion; Impoſition of Hands, for the Confirmation of the Adult; Cenſures, for "the Vicious; Honours, for the Diligent; and every Thing, that the Spirit of "Truth ſhould direct them to, for the Uſe of edifying."

Concerning his Church.

THESE, and ſuch-like Topics (as they relate to the Eſtabliſhment and good Government of his Church) ſeem to have made up the Subject of our Saviour's Diſcourſes, in the ſeveral Times, that he viſited his Diſciples, after his Reſurrection; all along intermixing Lectures of Comfort and Conſolation; Promiſes of his Divine Preſence and Protection; and Aſſurances of his ſending the Holy Ghoſt, to be their conſtant Guide and Counſellor; till being now about to take his final Leave of them, he led them out to [u] the Mount Olivet, the Mount, where he had preached and prayed, where he was transfigured and crucified ſo lately, and there, while he was giving Inſtructions, and imparting Benedictions to them, St Luke acquaints us, * he was taken up into Heaven, and a Cloud received him out of their Sight.

THAT our bleſſed Lord, [x] by a true and local, not a ſeeming or metaphorical Tranſlation, in the ſame Humanity, which he had on Earth, with the ſame Body, which died, and was buried, and was raiſed again, and the ſame Human Soul, which by Death was ſeparated from his Body, and, at his Reſurrection, re-united by the Power of his Divine Spirit, did, in the publick View of many Spectators, riſe from the Earth, and gradually aſcend to Heaven, is evident from the Teſtimony of thoſe, who were preſent at this Tranſaction: Which Teſtimony is therefore to be credited; becauſe, as we ſhewed in the Article of his Reſurrection, they were Men of too good Underſtanding, to be deceived by themſelves, and of too much Veracity, to impoſe upon others, in a Matter of Fact, ſubmitted to the Senſes of ſuch a Number of Witneſſes. They were the ſame Perſons indeed, that bore Teſtimony of his Reſurrection, but herein it was not ſo neceſſary that they ſhould be Eye-Witneſſes, as in the Act of his Aſcenſion. [y] It was enough in that Caſe, if they ſaw him, whom a little a little before they knew to be dead, alive again; for whatever was a Proof of his Life after Death, was a Demonſtration of his Reſurrection: But ſince they were not to ſee him in Heaven, and, by the Weakneſs of their Eye-ſight, were hindered from beholding his Reception and Seſſion on high; it was neceſſary, that, for the Confirmation of their own, and other Mens Faith in this particular, they ſhould be actual Spectators of his Paſſage and Tranſition thither, as far as their Eyes would reach; and, when theſe could follow him no farther, [a] then to have the Inhabitants of the Place come, and inform them of the reſt.

The Reality of Chriſt's Aſcenſion.

[t] Whitby, on Acts i. and Barrow, on the Creed. [u] St Jerome [de Locis Heb.] and Sulpitius Severus [Hiſt. Sacra, Lib. ii.] both tell us, that the exact Print of our Saviour's Feet remained in their Time, on this Mountain, not to be effaced; and that over it, Helena, the Mother of Conſtantine the Great, erected a Chapel, called the Chapel of Aſcenſion; wherewith the modern Travellers, not only of the Roman Communion, but even of a contrary Perſuaſion, (among whom Sandys, in the third Book of his Travels, is one) do agree, aſſuring us, that theſe ſacred Footſteps are to be ſeen in that Place, and not to be obliterated. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. * Acts i. 9. [x] Pearſon, on the Creed. [y] Pearſon bid.

The Manner of it.

HEAVEN indeed is a Term, that admits of divers Significations in holy Scripture: The lower Region under the Clouds, the middle Region among the Clouds, and the higher Region above the Clouds, fall all under the ſame Denomination; but ſince our Saviour is ſaid, in Scripture, [b] to have been made higher than the Heavens, [c] to have paſſed into the Heavens, and [d] aſcended far above the Heavens, &c. there is good Reaſon why we ſhould underſtand Heaven here in its moſt exalted Senſe, viz. for that Place, where God has choſen to diſcover the immediate and glorious Effects of his Preſence, the Seat appointed by him for the Reſidence of Angels, and the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect. How far diſtant this Habitation of the Almighty may be from this terraqueous Globe, whereon we live, is above the Power of Aſtronomy to compute or imagine; but, let the Space be ſuppoſed never ſo great, it can be no valid Objection againſt the Poſſibility of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, [e] conſidering the Nature of his glorious and ſpiritual Body, ſtrong and active, and perfectly obſequious to all the Motions of the Soul; conſidering the Nature of his glorified Soul, tending upwards, and moving towards Heaven, as its proper Center; and conſidering the Union of both with his Divinity, which, as it originally gave, and ſtill continues Motion to all Bodies, can undoubtedly make them move in what Meaſure and Degree of Celerity it pleaſes.

With the ſame Body.

[e] WITH what peculiar Qualities the Body of Chriſt, which aſcended, is now in its glorified State, endowed; whether it ſubſiſts by any acceſſary Renovation of Parts; after what Manner any Loſs or Acceſſion of Parts happen to it, and of what Kind thoſe Parts may be, are Queſtions ſavouring of too much Subtlety to be purſued. It ſeems probable, from what St Paul ſays, that [f] Fleſh and Blood ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of Heaven (which relates to our glorified Bodies, when we ſhall bear the Image of the heavenly Adam,) [g] that Chriſt's Body has no more the Modifications of Fleſh and Blood in it, and that the Glory of the celeſtial Body is of another Nature and Texture, than that of the terreſtrial. It is eaſy however to imagine how this may be, and yet the Body remain numerically the ſame: For all Matter being uniform, and capable of all Sorts of Motion, and, by Conſequence, of being either much groſſer or much purer; the ſame Portion of Matter, which made a thick or heavy Body here below, though not changed in its eſſential Parts, may be ſublimated into ſuch Purity and Fineneſs, as to be no longer a fit Inhabitant for this Earth, or in a Condition to breathe this Air, but meet to be tranſlated into the Regions above.

The Ends of his Aſcenſion.

HOWEVER this be, [h] what it principally concerns us to know in Relation to our Lord's Aſcenſion is, that his human Soul, by a local and true Tranſlation, in Union with his Body, was conveyed from Earth, through the Regions of Air, to the higheſt Heaven, the Seat and Reſidence of the Divine Majeſty; that there, as himſelf expreſſes it, he [i] might prepare a Place for us, and take Poſſeſſion of thoſe celeſtial Manſions, which he had purchaſed by his meritorious Paſſion; that, as our [k] Advocate, he might preſent our Supplications, and, in our Behalf, interpoſe his Intereſt and Authority at the Throne of Grace; that, as our King, he might govern us in a Place, where Myriads of bright and [l] flaming Miniſters are ready at all Times to obſerve his Beck; that, as our Royal Benefactor, [m] he might diſtribute from thence, at the Inauguration to his Sovereign Dignity, [n] the Gift of the Holy Ghoſt; and laſtly, that having [o] finiſhed the Work, which his Father gave him to do, he might, in Reward of his Obedience, [p] ſit down at his Right-Hand in heavenly Places, far above all Principalities and Powers, and Might, and Dominion, and every Name, that is named, not only in this World, but in that which is to come.

SECT.

[a] Acts i. 10, 11. [b] Heb. vii. 26. [c] Ibid. iv. 14. [d] Eph. iv. 10. [e] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [f] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [g] 1 Cor. xv. 50. [h] Burnet, on the Articles. [i] Fiddes, ibid. [k] John xiv. 2. [l] 1 John ii. 1. [m] Heb. i. 14. [n] Eph. iv. 10. [o] John xvi. 7. [p] Ibid. xvii. 4. [q] Eph. i. 20.

SECT. II.

Of CHRIST's Seſſion at GOD's Right-Hand.

Chriſt's Seſſion.

TO ſit at God's Right-Hand, is one of thoſe Expreſſions, wherein the Holy Ghoſt condeſcends to our Capacities, by attributing to God the Parts and Geſtures of an human Body. [q] The Hand is the chief Inſtrument of exerting our Strength, and therefore often uſed to denote the Power of God: The Right-Hand is the uſual Place of Honour and Reſpect, and therefore this denotes the higheſt Dignity; and, as the moſt Honourable upon Earth are diſtinguiſhed by the neareſt Approaches to the Perſon of the King, ſo it was the Ambition of the Sons of Zebedee, [r] to ſit, one on Chriſt's Right-Hand, and the other on the Left in his Kingdom. In like Manner, by ſitting, in the Caſe before us, is not intended any Poſture of the Body, but the Things uſually implied by that Poſture. Thus the Prophet intimates the profound Peace and Tranquillity of his People, by promiſing that they ſhould ſit every Man under his own Vine: In Analogy to which, our Saviour is ſaid to ſit down at the Right-Hand of God, as he now hath ceaſed from the Labours and Sufferings undergone [s] in the Days of his Fleſh, and enjoys perfect Repoſe and Happineſs with his Father in Heaven. Sitting, again, implies Continuance in the ſame Place, from whence the Tribes, whoſe Lot, in the Diviſion of the Land, fell out ſo, are ſaid [t] to ſit by the Sea-Shore: And thus our Saviour's ſitting at God's Right-Hand denotes his conſtant Abode in thoſe Regions of Bliſs and Glory; or, in the Words of St Peter, [u] that the Heavens muſt receive him, until the Times of Reſtitution, or final Conſummation all Things. Sitting, once more, imports Authority and Dominion; hence Kings are repreſented in this Poſture on their Thrones, and Magiſtrates uſe it in Courts of Juſtice: And, for this Reaſon * more eſpecially, Chriſt is deſcribed ſitting on the Right-Hand of God, to intimate that mediatorial Kingdom and Power, which he is to exerciſe, until the great Day of Judgment be paſſed, and [x] then ſhall he deliver the Kingdom to God, even the Father. According to this Interpretation of the Words, Chriſt's ſitting at God's Right-Hand muſt denote —— " That the ſame Bliſs, and Glory, and Power, which the Son of God did, before " his Incarnation, enjoy with his Father from all Eternity, his Human Nature is " made Partaker of, in the higheſt Heavens: That this God-Man is inveſted with " an abſolute Authority, and boundleſs Dominion, and does now, in both Na- " tures, rule, as he ſhall one Day judge the whole World." [y] For all Power is given to him, both in Heaven and Earth, [z] i. e. God hath committed the Government of the World into his Hands, for the Benefit and Advantage of his Church in this Life, and for the diſpenſing of Rewards and Puniſhments to good and bad Men in the next.

The Meaning of it.

[a] THE Apoſtles indeed could not be Witneſſes of this their Lord's Advancement and Exaltation at the Right-Hand of God; but ſtill they had, and ſo have we, ſufficient Aſſurance of it, both by what our Saviour declared before his Aſcenſion, and by the Effects which followed after. Before he aſcended, he told them whither he was going, what Power and Dignity would be conferred upon him; and that, as an Evidence of ſuch Power and Dignity, he would, in a few Days, ſend down the Holy Ghoſt upon them, in a ſenſible Manner, and, in great and ſenſible Effects, enable them to ſpeak with Tongues, and to work all Sorts of Miracles. After this he was, in their Sight, taken up from them, and carried towards Heaven; and ten Days after, the Holy Ghoſt, according to his Promiſe, came down upon them in miraculous Powers and Gifts. So that here was abundant Evidence to them of his Exaltation in Heaven, they having ſeen him taken up, and carried thitherward, and, after this, finding the wonderful Effects of his being there, and of the Power, which was conferred upon him. And, to confirm our Faith ſtill more and more, the infallible Records acquaint us, [b] that the bleſſed Martyr, St Stephen, while he was on

The Truth of it.

[q] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III. and Pearſon, on the Creed. [r] Matth. xx. 21. [s] Heb. v. 7. [t] Judg. v. 17. [u] Acts iii. 21. * Vid. King's Critical Hiſtory of the Creed, p. 279. [x] 1 Cor. xv. 24. [y] Matth. xxviii. 18. [z] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III. [a] Tillotſon, ibid. [b] Acts vii. 55.

Earth, ſaw the Heavens open, and Jeſus ſtanding at the Right-Hand of God; even St Paul and St John ſaw him inthroned in his heavenly Majeſty, though they themſelves were not entered into Glory. Such is the Nature and Evidence of Chriſt's Exaltation: And hence,

What we may obſerve from Chriſt's Exaltation.

1. WE cannot but obſerve and admire the wonderful Wiſdom and Equity of God, in receiving the human Nature of his bleſſed Son to his Right-Hand in Heaven. [c] It is indeed a moſt glorious Privilege for Fleſh and Blood to ſit in heavenly Places; but when we remember, that this was the Fleſh and Blood, which the eternal Son of God condeſcended to honour with his perſonal Reſidence; that in this he laboured under all the Wants and Infirmities, the contumelious Treatment, and bitter Agonies, which he ſubmitted to, but could not undergo, except as Man; we then may eaſily diſcern great Reaſon for a Recompence as extraordinary, as the Sufferings had been; and cannot ſuppoſe any Amends too much, for ſuch exquiſite Tortures, and barbarous Indignities. As no Sorrow was like unto his Sorrow, ſo was no Joy ever ſo full, no Honour ever ſo high and excellent; for, [d] being found in Faſhion as a Man, he humbled himſelf, and became obedient unto Death, even the Death of the Croſs; wherefore God hath highly exalted him, and given him a Name, which is above every Name, that at the Name of Jeſus every Knee ſhould bow; of Things in Heaven, and Things in Earth, and Things under the Earth; and that every Tongue ſhould confeſs, that Jeſus Chriſt is Lord, to the Glory of God the Father. So that the Scandal of the Croſs is effectually removed, by ſeating the Body crucified upon the Throne on High, and conſtituting that once Mock-King, and ſuppoſed Malefactor, the Lord and Judge of the whole Earth. Hence, God's Juſtice.

A future State of Happineſs.

2. WE cannot but obſerve the Aſſurance, God hath given us, in Relation to the Happineſs we hope for in the next World. No Religion ever gave Man ſo ſenſible a Demonſtration of a future Life, and bleſſed Immortality hereafter, as the Chriſtian Religion hath done, by the Reſurrection of our bleſſed Lord from the Dead, and his viſible Aſcenſion into Heaven: [e] The Reaſonings of Philoſophers concerning the Immortality of the Soul, and a future State after this Life, beſides the Uncertainty of them, have alſo this Diſadvantage, that they are only calculated for the more refined and ſpeculative Part of Mankind; but every Man is capable of the Force of this Argument,——That he, who publiſhed and declared to the World another Life after this, and the happy Condition of good Men in it, was himſelf raiſed from the Dead, and viſibly taken up into Heaven; from whence the Inference is obvious, that God will, in like Manner, raiſe and advance us to Glory and Happineſs, if ſo be we take Care to prepare ourſelves for it; becauſe this Aſcent and Advancement of Chriſt is to be conſidered, not merely as a private and perſonal Advantage, but as a Thing performed under that publick Character, which he ſuſtained, in the Quality of our great High-Prieſt. To this Purpoſe the Author to the Hebrews, in Alluſion to the Sacerdotal Office, tells us, that he is entered into the Holy Place, [f] to appear in the Preſence of God for us, and that [g] he is entered for us within the Vail, as our Forerunner. Now, a Forerunner is a relative Term, and of Neceſſity implies ſome Perſons following behind, and therefore his Meaning muſt be, that Chriſt, by entering into Heaven before us, has, in our Nature, taken Poſſeſſion of the Manſions of Bliſs, not for himſelf only, but for all good Chriſtians, that ſhall come after him. For which Reaſon the great Apoſtle St Paul, by Way of Anticipation, concludes good Chriſtians already poſſeſſed of what their Proxy enjoys; for this is the Tenor of his Argument: As [h] God hath quickened us together with Chriſt, and has raiſed us up together, by Virtue of his Reſurrection; ſo hath he, by Virtue of his Glorification, made us ſit together with him in heavenly Places, that, in the Ages to come, he might ſhew the exceeding Riches of his Grace, in his Kindneſs to us, through Jeſus Chriſt. Hence, Comfort in Troubles.

3. WE cannot but obſerve, of what great Comfort and Encouragement it is, in all the Trials and Afflictions that can befal us, to conſider, that we are under the Patronage and Protection of one, who ſits at the Right-Hand of God; who, highly exalted though he be, is nearly related to us, and has that Nature about him, in which he ſuffered more than any of us can do, and, from the Experience of his own Sufferings, retains ſtill a quick Senſe of the Frailties and Infirmities of Mortality. Do we then ſuffer for Righteouſneſs-Sake? * Seeing we have an High-Prieſt, that is now paſſed

[c] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III. [d] Phil. ii. 8. [e] Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III.
[f] Heb. ix. 24. [g] Ibid. vi. 19, 20. [h] Eph. ii. 5, &c. * Heb. iv. 14, 15.

paſſed into Heaven, but was once tempted in all Points, like as we are, let us hold faſt our Profeſſion without Wavering, being fully perſuaded, [l] that if we die with him, we ſhall alſo live with him, and if we ſuffer with him, we ſhall alſo reign with him. Are we diſquieted for the Loſs or Want of the good Things of this Life? [k] The Iſſues of Providence and the Diſpenſations of the Bleſſings of God are repoſited in our Saviour's Hands, who knoweth that we have Need of theſe Things, and therefore, if they would conduce to his Glory, and our Welfare, we may be ſatisfied he would not detain them from us; and that, if he does, he with-holds them for our Good, and has better Things abundantly in Reſerve for us. Are we uneaſy at the Apprehenſions of Death? The Conſideration that our gracious Lord [l] is gone before, to prepare a Place for us, that where he is, we may be alſo; and that, while we are detained in the Body, we are abſent from him, [m] in whoſe Preſence is Fulneſs of Joy, and at whoſe Right-Hand are Pleaſures for evermore, is enough to out-balance the Reluctance of Nature, and make a wiſe Man even deſire to die. Are we fearful, and in Danger of falling by the Weight of Temptations, that we ſee coming upon us? He that ſitteth on High, was more than once in the ſame Circumſtances, [n] and in that himſelf hath ſuffered, being tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted. In a Word, be our Trials and Afflictions what they will, yet the Triumph of our Champion over all our Enemies, the great Advancement of our Nature in him, and the tranſporting Satisfaction of having ſo good a Friend in ſo high a Place, and in ſo great Power, on whoſe Help we may depend, and under whoſe Patronage we may be ſecure, in every State, at all Times, and in all Places, is enough to pacify our Minds, and to put in Practice that wiſe and ſalutary Advice of the Apoſtle; [o] Be careful for nothing; but in every Thing, by Prayer and Supplication, with Thankſgiving, let your Requeſts be made known unto God. Hence,

The Neceſſity of Heavenly-mindedneſs.

4. LASTLY, we cannot but obſerve the great Obligation we all lie under, both as Men, and Chriſtians, [p] to ſet our Affection, not on Things on the Earth, but on Things in Heaven; ſince our Nature and our Saviour both are aſcended thither. [q] A carnal ſenſual Life, that is wholly immerſed in earthly Concerns, and intends no farther Acqueſt, than the good Things of this World, is evidently the greateſt Contradiction to the Exaltation of our Nature with Chriſt in Heaven: For if Humanity be raiſed, how can they be ſaid to live like Men now, who are loſt in Senſe, and buried in the Sink of brutal Pleaſures? And if Chriſt be aſcended, and ſet on God's Right-Hand in Heaven, how can they be ſaid to be his Followers, who are ſtill wandering and bewildering themſelves, at the fartheſt Diſtance from him on Earth, where he is not; and will not ſo much as lift up an Eye after him to Heaven, where he is? Let us then remember, that our Lord and Leader is gone far above out of our Sight; that we are ſtill able to follow him with the Eye of Faith; that our true Bleſſedneſs conſiſts in being with him; that our main Concern lies in another Country; and that the Affairs of this, in which we now ſojourn, are allowed, in ſome Meaſure, to employ our Pains, but, by no Means, muſt engroſs our Affections; and, in the Strength of this Perſuaſion, let us in Heart and Mind aſcend to him, and with him conſtantly dwell, [r] uſing this World, as not abuſing it, for the Faſhion of this World paſſeth away.

[l] 2 Tim. ii. 12. [k] Les Oeuvres poſth. de M. Claude, Tom. III. [l] John xiv. 2. [m] Pſal. xvi. 11. [n] Heb. ii. 18. [o] Phil. iv. 6. [p] Col. iii. 2. [q] Newcombe's Sermons, Vol. I. [r] 1 Cor. vii. 31.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

Our JESUS the true Meſſias.

The Word Meſſias, what it means.

WE have hitherto followed our bleſſed Saviour, through the different Stages of his Life, from the Time of his Conception and Birth, to that of his Aſcenſion into Heaven, and Exaltation to the Hight-Hand of God; and ſhall now look into the ſacred Records, in order to perceive, whether the State and Condition, in which he appeared, his perſonal Qualities and Performances, what he did, ſuffered, and received, be agreeable to the Characters, which the Prophets gave of that great and eminent Perſon, who was to come into the World; and conſequently, whether this Jeſus of Nazareth, to whom we have given up our Names in Baptiſm, whom the Jews indeed crucified, but whom we rely on for the Salvation of our Souls, was in Reality the promiſed Meſſias. Only, before we come to that, we would briefly obſerve, that the Word Meſſias, which, in Greek, is rendered Chriſt, ſtrictly ſignifies the ſame with Anointed, and here properly denotes a Perſon ſet apart and conſecrated to ſome great Office and Employment. [a] For, in the Eaſtern Countries, which abounded with Oil, and odoriferous Spices, the Cuſtom was to anoint with an Ointment, compoſed of theſe Ingredients, the Perſons appointed to ſuch high Offices, as is evident in the Caſe of Kings and Prieſts, if not Prophets, among the Jews. This was probably done to ſignify the plentiful Effuſion of Gifts and Graces, neceſſary to qualify them for their Employment, as well as the good and beneficial Effects, which the Office, they were advanced to, might enable them to diſpenſe. [b] Upon theſe Occaſions, the Cuſtom of anointing was ſo general, that, in Alluſion thereunto, Perſons appointed by God to any eminent Office and Employment, are often ſaid to be the Lord's anointed, even though they were not conſecrated by any material Unction: For ſo is [c] Cyrus ſtiled, whom God ordained for the Deſtruction of Babylon, and the Reſtoration of Iſrael; and ſo is Jeſus, [d] whom God anointed with the Holy Ghoſt, whereof the Oil was but a faint Type and Shadow, and with Power, enabling him to perform the high Charge and Office, whereunto he had appointed him.

THE Word Meſſias, or Chriſt, therefore denotes a Perſon, in a ſignal and ſpecial Manner, ordained and appointed by God to ſome great Charge or Function; whoſe Qualities and Performances were to be extraordinary, and highly beneficial to Mankind. And, in order to prove that Jeſus of Nazareth, the Saviour in whom we truſt, was this extraordinary Perſon, we ſhall endeavour to ſhew from the ſacred Writings,

I. THAT God had, all along, promiſed a Meſſias to the World, and under what Characters he deſcribed him.

II. THAT, at the Time of our Saviour's coming into the World, the Expectation of the Meſſias was univerſal.

III. THAT the Time, within which the Meſſias was to come, is long ſince elapſed. And,

IV. THAT, by all concurrent Signs and Characters, our Jeſus is the true Meſſias.

Scripture-Promiſes and Characters of the Meſſias.

I. [e] THAT there are, in the Old Teſtament, many Intimations, and ſome direct Propheſies and Predictions, that all the great Promiſes of God, made to his true Worſhippers,

[a] Barrow's Works, Vol. III. [b] Kidder's Demonſtration. [c] Iſa. xlv. 1, &c. [d] Acts x. 38.
[e] Clarke's Evidence of Natural and Revealed Religion.

Worſhippers, ſhould receive their final Accompliſhment, by Means of a particular Perſon, anointed of God for that Purpoſe, and who, after the Reduction of all Adverſaries, ſhould ſet up an everlaſting Kingdom, is what any common Reader cannot but obſerve. [g] The Seed of the Woman, which was to bruiſe the Serpent's Head, and [h] the Seed of Abraham, in which all the Nations of the Earth were to be bleſſed, might originally be underſtood to ſignify, what [i] St Paul afterwards aſſerts they did, in the ſingular Senſe, a particular Perſon; as well as in the plural, a Number of Perſons. The [k] Shiloh, which was to come, and to whom the Gathering of the People was to be, muſt naturally denote a ſingle Perſon, who was to reign, and (by the Gradation of the Words in the Text) of a Character ſomewhat ſuperior to that of a Sceptre, and a Law-giver. The Words of Balaam, [l] I ſhall ſee him, but not now; I ſhall behold him, but not nigh; there ſhall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre ſhall riſe out of Iſrael, are put in his Mouth, to deſcribe very obviouſly a greater Perſon, than one, who ſhould ſmite the Corners of Moab, and deſtroy all the Children of Seth. The Words of Moſes, [m] The Lord thy God will raiſe up unto thee a Prophet, from the Midſt of thee, like unto me; unto him ſhalt thou hearken; and it ſhall come to paſs, that whoſoever will not hearken to my Words, which he ſhall ſpeak in my Name, I will require it of him; plainly deſcribe a very extraordinary Prophet, ſome Time to come, who ſhould reſemble Moſes; and, conſequently, accompliſh high Deſigns, reveal God's Will, promulge a new Law, and eſtabliſh a new Covenant. The Words of Iſaiah, [n] Unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government ſhall be upon his Shoulders, and his Name ſhall be called Wonderful, Counſellor, the mighty God, the everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace: Of the Increaſe of his Government and Peace there ſhall be no End; upon the Throne of David, and upon his Kingdom, to order it, and to eſtabliſh it with Judgment, and with Juſtice, from henceforth, even for ever: Thoſe of Jeremiah, [o] I will raiſe unto David a righteous Branch, and a King ſhall reign and proſper, and ſhall execute Judgment and Juſtice; and this is the Name whereby he ſhall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS; and thoſe of Daniel, [p] I ſaw in the Night Viſions, and behold one, like the [q] Son of Man, came with the Clouds of Heaven, and came to the Ancient of Days, and there was given unto him Dominion, and Glory, and a Kingdom; that all People, and Nations, and Languages ſhould ſerve him: His Dominion is an everlaſting Dominion, which ſhall not paſs away, and his Kingdom, that which ſhall not be deſtroyed: All theſe Paſſages, I ſay, do plainly denote, that this illuſtrious Perſon ſhould be a mighty Prince and Governor, [r] whoſe Dominion, as Zechary deſcribes it, ſhould be from Sea even to Sea, and from the River, even unto the Ends of the Earth; and who is called, by David, [s] the everlaſting Prieſt; by Ezekiel, [t] the one Shepherd; by Haggai, [u] the Deſire of all Nations; by Malachi, * the Meſſenger of the Covenant; and, in another Place of Daniel, expreſſly, [x] the Meſſiah the Prince.

II. THESE are ſome of the Predictions and Promiſes, which God was pleaſed to make in Scripture, of an extraordinary Perſon, inveſted with great Power and Authority, and who, in the Exerciſe of it, was to give a general Bleſſing to Mankind, whom the Prophets diſtinguiſhed by a Variety of Appellations, which the Jews have comprized in the general Stile of Chriſt, or Meſſias: And that, under this Name and Notion, they expected a Perſon, at the Time of our Saviour's Coming, who ſhould be endowed with Qualities, and perform Actions ſuitable to the Character, whereby he is deſcribed, is manifeſt from the Woman of Samaria's ready Reply, [y] I know that the Meſſiah cometh, and, when he cometh, he will teach us all Things; from the [z] People's expecting, and muſing in their Hearts of John, whether he was the Chriſt, or not; and their deputing, from their Sanhedrim, [a] ſome Prieſts and Levites, to go and enquire of him concerning this Matter: Is manifeſt, from [b] the People's thinking, when they ſaw our Saviour's Works, that the Kingdom of God would immediately appear; from their queſtioning, among themſelves, [c] When Chriſt comes, will he do greater Miracles than this Man has done? And, at another Time, openly declaring, [d] This is in Truth the Prophet, who was to come into the World: Is manifeſt, laſtly, from the

That, at the Time of our Saviour's Coming, he was expected by the Jews, [g] Gen. iii. 15. [h] Ibid. xii. 3. [i] Gal. iii. 16. [k] Gen. xlix. 10. [l] Numb. xxiv. 17, &c.

[m] Deut. xviii. 15, 18, 19. [n] Iſa. ix. 6, &c. [o] Jer. xxiii. 5, &c. [p] Dan. vii. 13, &c.
[q] With Reference to this it is, that Chriſt, in the Goſpel, perpetually ſtiles himſelf the Son of Man, and once the Son of Man, which is in (which, in the Propheſy is deſcribed as coming in the Clouds of) Heaven, John iii. 13.
[r] Zech. ix. 10. [s] Pſal. cx. 4. [t] Ezek. xxxiv. 23. [u] Haggai ii. 7. * Mal. iii. 1.
[x] Dan. ix. 25. [y] John iv. 25. [z] Luke iii. 15. [a] John i. 19. [b] Luke xvii. 20.
[c] John vii. 31. [d] Ibid. vi. 14.

great Jealouſy, which Herod had concerning the King of the Jews, who was expected to be born about that Time; and from the remarkable Teſtimony of [e] Joſephus, who tells us, that the chief Thing, which incited the Jews to rebel againſt the Romans, was a doubtful Propheſy, as he calls it, found in the Holy Scriptures, that, about that Time, a great Prince ſhould be born among them, who was to be Monarch of the whole World. However this be, 'tis certain, that, from this general Expectation, [f] falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets, in Abundance, took Occaſion to deceive the People, who were eaſy enough to be deluded, and to be drawn into Ruin, upon the Perſuaſion, that their Meſſias, and univerſal King, their Reſtorer, and wonderful Deliverer, was then to appear in the World.

and Gentiles. NOR was this the Expectation of the Jewiſh Nation only, but, even among Heathens, the Notion did prevail, that ſome great and extraordinary Perſon was to appear in the World, in the Age wherein our Saviour lived. For, beſides the Authorities of Suetonius and Tacitus, which we had Occaſion to produce before, the Oracles of the Sibyls, which were kept among the Archives at Rome, plainly foretold the Coming of Chriſt, and pointed out the very Time, which made the Romans have a watchful Eye upon the Jews. The ſame Year that Pompey took Jeruſalem, one of theſe Oracles, viz. That Nature was about to bring forth a King to the Romans, made ſo great a Noiſe, and terrified the Senate ſo, that they made a Decree, [g] that none, who were born that Year, ſhould be brought up; but, by the Intereſt of thoſe great Men, whoſe Wives were then with Child, and thereupon applied the Propheſy to themſelves, the Decree was hindered from being made publick. Virgil, [h] in the famous IVth Eclogue, wrote about the Beginning of Herod the Great, compliments

[e] De Bello Jud.

[f] It may not be amiſs, in this Place, to make mention of ſome of the falſe Chriſts, againſt whom our Saviour [Matth. xxiv. 24, &c.] cautions his Followers, who, in different Ages of the World, aſſumed that Character, and impoſed upon the People; in order to ſhew the Reader the Succeſſion of Deluſion in the Jews. The two, whom we read of in Scripture, before our Saviour's Appearance, were Theudas, and Judas of Galilee, who drew ſome People after them, but were ſoon both ſlain, and all, as many as obeyed them, were ſcattered, and brought to nought, Acts v. 36, 37. Joſephus [Antiq. Lib. XXVIII. c. vii.] about that Time, mentions another, who led the Jews into the Wilderneſs, and promiſed them Deliverance, but was deſtroyed by Feſtus, together with all his Followers. About forty Years after the Birth of Chriſt, two Brothers, Aſinæus and Avileus, both Weavers, had mighty Succeſs, but were, at laſt, deſtroyed, and occaſioned the Ruin of many of their Followers; and, about ſeventy-four Years after that, another Weaver, named Jonathan, led many Jews after him into the Wilderneſs, but was taken, and burnt alive, and Multitudes of the Jews maſſacred about Cyrene. In the Reign of Trajan, A. C. 114, the Jews ſet up one Andrew, who occaſioned the Deſtruction of many Thouſands of them; and, in the Reign of Adrian, another, whom they called Bar Cochab, i. e. the Son of a Star, alluding to the Star of Jacob, Numb. xxiv. 17. But, when they diſcovered the Impoſture, they changed his Name to Bar Coſibàh, i. e. the Son of a Lye. In the Reign of Theodoſius the Younger, A. C. 434, another falſe Chriſt aroſe in the Iſland of Crete, pretending that he was ſent from Heaven to carry the Jews off that Iſland, on dry Ground, through the Sea, and thereupon perſuaded ſeveral to throw themſelves in. In 520, another, called Dunaan, aroſe in Arabia, and, with the Jews, who followed him, ſet upon the Biſhops and Chriſtians in the City of Nigræ, and committed great Outrages, till he was deſtroyed. In 529, the Jews and Samaritans in Paleſtine were ſeduced into Rebellion by one Julian, a falſe Meſſias, which occaſioned the Deſtruction of many of them. In 620, when Mahomet appeared, as he, at firſt, pretended to be the Meſſias, the Jews flocked to him; till, as ſome ſay, they ſaw him eat Camel's Blood, and upon that Account forſook him. In 721, they followed a certain Syrian, who ſaid he was Chriſt. In 1137, they followed another in France, which occaſioned their Baniſhment from that Country. In 1138, they took up Arms with another in Perſia, which brought great Miſchief upon them. In 1157, they made an Inſurrection with another in Spain, and had almoſt all been cut off. In 1167, they ſuffered very much under another in the Kingdom of Fez; and, in the ſame Year, under another in Arabia, who gave for a Sign, that, after his Head was cut off by the King of Arabia, he would riſe to Life again, by which Fiction he eſcaped a more cruel Death. About the Year 1174, another aroſe in Perſia, and led the Jews into Rebellion, which occaſioned great Deſtruction among them; and, about 1199, another famous one, called David el David, alias David Alroi, who was a great Magician, and deluded many Jews. In 1222, many of them followed a falſe Chriſt in Germany, whom they called the Son of David; and the ſame Year expected their Meſſias to be born of a Woman, then with Child, at Worms, but it proved a Girl. In 1465, when the Saracens made ſuch Inroads upon Chriſtendom, the Jews thought their Meſſias was coming to fight their Battles; and, the ſame Year, R. Abraham Avenaris, a Jewiſh Aſtrologer, from the Conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn in the Sign Piſces, foretold the Coming of their Meſſias to be at Hand. In 1497, the Jews were deceived by Iſhmael Sophus, who, having got together an Army of vile and profligate Men, gained many Victories, but, at laſt, cheated them, and ſet up a new Sect for Mahomet. In 1503, R. Aſcher Lemla appeared in Germany, pretending that he was the Meſſias's Forerunner, who, he promiſed, ſhould come and reſtore the Jews to the Land of Canaan that ſame Year. In 1534, a new Meſſias aroſe in Spain, who was burnt by Charles V. The ſame Year, another at Mantua, who came to Life again, as many of the Jews believed, after he was burnt. In 1615, another Pſeudo-Meſſias appeared in the Eaſt-Indies, and was followed by the Portugueze Jews. In 1624, another in Holland. In 1666, a famous one, called Sabethai Levi, who, after all the Expectation of the People of the Jews, turned, at laſt, Mahometan, to ſave his Life; and, no longer ago than 1682, another, named R. Mardochai, a German Jew, whom all the Jews in Italy, and many in Germany, owned, but, like wiſe Men, they concealed it, with due Reſpect to the Inquiſition and Self-Preſervation. Thus the Jews have been perpetually ſetting up falſe Meſſiahs, one after another, from the Time of our Saviour's Coming, even to our Days; which is enough, one would think, after ſo many Diſappointments, to make them bethink themſelves. Vid. Kidder's Demonſtration, and Leſlie's Short Method with the Jews.

[g] Suetonius, in Vitâ Auguſt.

[h] Ultima Cumæi venit jam carminis ætas,
Magnus ab integro ſæc'lorum naſcitur ordo:

Jam

compliments the Conſul Pollio with his Propheſy, by ſuppoſing it might refer to his Son Salonius, then newly born; but the Words are too great to be verified in mere mortal Man; the Golden Age, and Renovation of all Things, cannot be fulfilled in the Reign of any earthly King; and therefore we may obſerve, that the Poet expreſſes it, almoſt in the very Words [i] of the holy Scriptures, wherein they tell of the glorious Age of the Meſſias, of new Heavens, and a new Earth, then to begin, and to be finally compleated at the End of the World. After this, he runs a Diviſion upon the peaceable State of that Reign, which is perfectly a Paraphraſe [k] upon Part of that Chapter of Iſaiah, where the Wolf is to dwell with the Lamb, and the Leopard lie down with the Kid, and the Calf, and the young Lion, and the Fatling together; and where all noxious Animals are no longer to hurt or deſtroy, in all God's holy Mountain. So univerſal was the Expectation, both in Jews and Gentiles, of ſome great and wonderful Perſon to come into the World, in the Age when our Saviour appeared; and,

III. THAT the Time of his Coming is long ſince paſt, we ſhall now endeavour to evince, by ſuch Marks and Diſcoveries, as the holy Scriptures furniſh us with.

1. IN the Words of Jacob, we have a notable Prediction of the Time, when the Meſſias was to come; [l] The Sceptre ſhall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his Feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him ſhall the Gathering of the People be. Theſe Words we had Occaſion to explain before; but, for the preſent Uſe and Purpoſe of them, we deſire it may be conſidered, [m] that the firſt Promiſe of the Meſſias was made to Adam, as [n] the Seed of the Woman, which ſhould break the Serpent's Head, and from thence derived to Shem, the Son of Noah, Japhet and Ham being paſſed by; that from Shem it was deduced to Abraham, the other Sons of Terah not being conſidered; that from Abraham it was conveyed to Iſaac, Eſau being omitted; and from him to Jacob, the Author of this Prediction, who, being now about to leave the World, called his Sons, and bleſſed them, and by the Prophetick Spirit, that was then upon him, told them ſeveral Things, which ſhould happen in the laſt Days; and, among others, when Shiloh, who is the Meſſias, (according to [o] the ancient Jews themſelves) and who was to deſcend from the Tribe of Judah, ſhould come, viz. before the Jews ſhould become a conquered Nation, deprived of all Rule and Authority of their own, and ſubjected to a foreign Yoke. Since then it is acknowledged, that by Shiloh we are to underſtand the Meſſias, and that God, by the Mouth of the Patriarch, promiſed, that the Government of Iſrael ſhould not fail, until Shiloh came; the Government of Iſrael having now manifeſtly failed, and there being not one Country in the World, where the Jews are either a Kingdom, or Republick, or Body Politick, it inevitably follows, that the Meſſias is already come.

2. THE Words of the Angel Gabriel, in the Prophet Daniel, [p] are more particular in this Affair; for therein he names the Meſſias the Prince, and fixes the Time of Jam nova Progenies cœlo dimittitur alto——

Tu modo naſcenti puero, quo ferrea primum
Deſinet, & toto ſurget gens aurea mundo. VIRG. Ec. IV.

[i] Iſa. lxv. 17. 2 Pet. iii. 13.

[k] Iſa. xi. 6. ——Non magnos metuent armenta Leones,
Occidet & ſerpens, & fallax herba veneni
Occidet - - - - - - - - - - - - Ibid.

[l] Gen. xlix. 10. [m] Kidder's Demonſtration. [n] Gen. iii. 15.

[o] The Chaldee and ancient Jewiſh Interpreters did always underſtand it in this Senſe: But the Sceptre being long ſince departed from Judah, and no other Meſſias come, but our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to whom the Gathering of the Nations or Gentiles has been, the Rabbies of the Jews have, ſince his Coming, ſtrained their Wits to invent Salvo's, and Evaſions for this Propheſy. Some of them ſay, that, by Shiloh here, was not meant the Meſſias, but Moſes; while others maintain, that it was the Tabernacle at Shiloh. Others, allowing it to be meant of the Meſſias, have ſuppoſed the Sceptre to be a Rod, not of Rule, but of Correction, which ſhould not depart from Judah, until the Meſſias came; whilſt others, not liking this, allow it to be a Sceptre of Government, but then they turn it this Way, viz. that the Sceptre ſhould not finally, or for ever, depart from Judah, becauſe the Meſſias ſhould come, that is, to reſtore it: But this being an Alteration, rather than an Expoſition of the Text, others have adventured upon a bolder Way to ſatisfy it, viz. by affirming, that the Sceptre or Dominion is not yet departed, i. e. not totally gone, becauſe ſome of the Tribe of Judah have, ſome where or other, ſome Share or other of Government or Juriſdiction. more or leſs; at leaſt, that ſome of the preſent Potentates of the World have, one Way or other, deſcended from that Tribe, though it may not be known how. But theſe Pretences need no diſproving: They carry Guilt in their Face, and, being all contradictory to one another, ſhew to what Confuſion the Jews are brought, in forcing their Way through the plain Predictions of the Meſſias. Leſlie's ſhort Method with the Jews.

[p] This Propheſy comes ſo cloſe to the Point, that the modern Jews, to avoid it, would endeavour to diſcredit the whole Book of Daniel. For, above an hundred Years after Chriſt, making a new Diſtinction of the Books of of his appearing. [q] Seventy Weeks are determined upon thy People, and upon thy holy City, to finish the Transgression, and to make an End of Sin, and to make Reconciliation for Iniquity, and to bring in everlasting Righteousness, and to seal up the Vision and Prophesy, and to anoint the most Holy, &c. We have before explained this Prophesy at large, and, upon this Occasion, need only take Notice, that Daniel, computing that the seventy Years of Judah's Captivity, which were foretold by the Prophet Jeremiah, were now drawing to an End, earnestly prayed to God, to grant his People a Restoration to their native Land: Whereupon he is assured in a Vision, not only of a temporal Deliverance from the Babylonish Captivity, but of a much greater Redemption from their spiritual Bondage under Sin and Satan, which God would vouchsafe them by the Hands of the Messiah, their Prince, in such a determinate Time. For if, according to the Prophetick Computation, we reckon each Day of these Weeks for a Year, the Term of seventy Weeks will just amount to four Hundred and ninety Years; which, commencing at the Time when the Commandment, or Decree, was given Ezra to restore and rebuild Jerusalem, (and this was given in the seventh Year of Artaxerxes) must have expired many hundred Years ago; and, according to the best Calculation, much about the Time, when Jesus of Nazareth was cut off, not for himself, but to finish the Transgression, and make an End of Sin, and a Reconciliation for Iniquity, as the Angel expresses the blessed Effects of his meritorious Passion.

3. THE Prophet Haggai is still more express upon the Subject of the Messiah's Coming, [s] and limits it to a Time, wherein we cannot be mistaken: I will shake all Nations, and the Desire of all Nations shall come, and I will fill this House with Glory, saith the Lord of Hosts. The Silver is mine, and the Gold is mine; the Glory of this latter House shall be greater, than that of the former, saith the Lord of Hosts. This Prophesy likewise we have explained before; and for the present therefore need only observe, that as the former Temple was much more illustrious, * not only for its Riches and Magnificence of Building, but for the many great Tokens of God's special Favour, (whereof we have made Mention elsewhere) the latter Temple could not possibly excel it in any other Respect, but this,——That during its Standing, the Messias, here called the Delight of all Nations, should appear, and honour the Place more by his Presence in it, than all those other Things did, which were but Types and Shadows of him, [t] who was to be the Brightness of his Father's Glory, the express Image of his Person, and [u] in whom the Fulness of his Godhead was to dwell bodily. Since therefore the second Temple, so far inferior to the former, both in external Ornaments, and signal Manifestations of the Divine Grace and Power in it, was, according to God's Promise and Prediction, to become more glorious than the other, which could only arise from the personal Appearance of the Messias in it; the Messias must necessarily appear, before the Destruction of this second Temple happened: And since the Destruction of it is now considerably more, than sixteen hundred Years ago, the Old Testament into Ἁγιόγραφα, or Holy Writings, and inspired and canonical Scriptures, they thrust down the Book of Daniel into this Class, at the End of the Prophets, which before was placed in the Middle of them. It is to be observed however, that if this Book of Daniel be not inspired in the highest Degree, it cannot stand among the Number of Holy Writings, but must be accounted false and blasphemous; because it all along speaks of itself as immediately inspired by God: And if those Visions and Revelations, here related, be not true, then is it telling of Lyes in the Name of the Lord, which is the Height of Blasphemy. Since therefore the modern Jews dare not place the Book of Daniel lower, than among the holy and pious Writings, they confess it to be inspired and canonical, and have only discovered their own Guilt, by endeavouring to decline the Testimony of their own Prophets from our Messias. Leslie's short Method with the Jews.

[q] Dan. ix. 24, &c. [r] Prideaux's Connection.

[s] Some modern Jews, to avoid the Force of this Prophecy, pretend that the latter House is not to be meant of the second Temple, but of some other, to be built hereafter. But this is the most extravagant Conceit imaginable, inconsistent with the Context, with the Letter, and plain Meaning of the Text, with the Purpose of the Prophet, and, in Truth, with common Sense. For, that the Prophet, when speaking of an House, that was building, and encouraging the Jews to go on with it, should affirm, that by this House is meant an House hereafter to be built, is a Thing incongruous and incredible. See Leslie, ibid. Others tell us, that the Glory of the second House was greater, than that of the first, because it continued longer. Solomon's Temple, say they, continued but 410 Years, before it was destroyed by the Babylonians; but this second Temple stood 420, before it was destroyed by the Romans; upon which Account the Glory of this latter House was greater. But is the Continuance of ten Years so mighty a Thing? Will this make a Compensation for the Defect above-mentioned? Does God say, he will shake the Heaven and the Earth for this only? Is this all that he designs and promises, when he says, I will fill this House with Glory? If the bare Continuance of a few Years longer be such an Addition of Glory, the Tabernacle of Moses was more glorious than the Temple of Solomon; and if the People of the Land could not know, how much the Temple they were building, was to stand longer than Solomon's did, which they could not know, without a particular Prophesy, this never could have been used as an Encouragement for their vigorous Prosecution of the Work. Kidder's Demonstration, Part III.

* Kidder, ibid. [t] Heb. i. 3. [u] Col. ii. 9.

ago, the Coming of the Meſſias cannot be of later Date, how much ſoever it may be ſooner.

THUS it appears, that, within the Compaſs of Daniel's Weeks, and during the Standing of the ſecond Temple, and before the Jewiſh Polity was quite diſſolved, which all ſeem to point at one and the ſame Time, the Meſſias was to come, if we may rely on the Promiſes of God: "But theſe Promiſes, may the Jews ſay, are "not abſolute, but conditional: They depend upon the Temper and Diſpoſition of "the Perſons, to whom they are made. If they deſerve them, they ſhall be ful-"filled in due Time; but, if they are found unworthy of them, they ſhall be de-"layed. Now, though God has promiſed indeed to ſend us the Meſſias, at the Time "appointed by theſe Predictions; yet it is upon Condition, that we deſerve ſuch "an ineſtimable Bleſſing; whereas our Back-ſlidings have been ſo many, and our "Iniquities ſo grievous, that we muſt charge it upon our guilty Selves, and not "any Breach of the Divine Promiſes, that the Gift of God is retarded, and this long-"expected Son of David has not yet made his Appearance." An Objection of the Jews.

* IN the xxviiith Chapter of Jeremiah, we have, in ſome Meaſure, a Rule laid down, whereby we may judge of the Truth of a Propheſy, wherein the Good or Evil of any People is concerned. Hananiah, the Son of Azur, propheſied Good concerning the People of Iſrael, and a ſpeedy Deliverance from their Captivity in Babylon: But Jeremiah, having all along propheſied the quite contrary, addreſſes his Opponent in theſe Words: [x] The Prophets, which have been before me, and before thee of old, propheſied both againſt many Countries, and againſt great Kingdoms, of War, and of Evil, and of Peſtilence; the Prophet, which propheſieth of Peace, when the Word of the Prophet ſhall come to paſs, then ſhall the Prophet be known, whether the Lord hath truly ſent him: Whereby he intimates, that, as we cannot account him to be a falſe Prophet, who threatens an Evil, which does not come to paſs, becauſe Repentance may intervene, and ſtop God's avenging Hand; ſo we have no Cauſe to believe him, who promiſes a Bleſſing, to be a true Prophet, until the Bleſſing confirms the Truth of his Propheſy; becauſe there is not the like Reaſon for God's deferring his Promiſes, as there is for not performing his Threats. [y] If then the Coming of the Meſſias was an Event, in which, not the Jews only, but all the Nations of the World were to be bleſſed; to ſuppoſe, that he did not come at the Time appointed, is not only to reproach the Prophets, who foretold his Coming, but to impeach the Veracity likewiſe of that Divine Spirit, by which theſe holy Men of old ſpake, as they were directed. Anſwered.

WE grant indeed, that our Iniquities do frequently with-hold God's Bleſſings from us, but, in Relation to the Bleſſing we are now conſidering, they could not have that Effect, becauſe we have the Teſtimony of God himſelf, that, in this Reſpect, he would, upon no Conſideration, [z] break his Covenant, nor alter the Thing that had gone out of his Lips: I have ſworn once by my Holineſs, ſays he, that I will not fail David, concerning the Coming of the Meſſias of his Lineage and Deſcent; for ſo he goes on, his Seed ſhall endure for ever, and his Seat is like the Sun before me; he ſhall ſtand faſt for evermore as the Moon, and as the faithful Witneſs in Heaven: What then can the Sins and Tranſgreſſions of the Jews be, that they ſhould vacate and defeat ſuch ſolemn and expreſs Propheſies? [a] That old Idolatry, which was the Foundation of ſo much Miſchief to them, they have, ever ſince their Return from the Babyloniſh Captivity, laid aſide: That Contempt of the Law, for which they were ſo frequently reproved by their Prophets, they have endeavoured to reform, and (abating one melancholy Conſideration) have no more Iniquities in Number, nor more heinous in their Nature to anſwer for, than other People; and yet they make their Sins their Subterfuge upon this Occaſion, and, in the Language of the Prophet, call themſelves [b] a People laden with Iniquity, a Seed of Evil-doers, Children that are Corrupters, that have forſaken the Lord, and provoked the Holy One of Iſrael unto Anger. But, allowing their Iniquities to be as great as they ſuppoſe them on this Occaſion, yet was not the Meſſias promiſed as a Remedy for Sin? Is not the declared Purpoſe of his Coming, [c] to make an End of Sins, and to make a Reconciliation for Iniquity? [d] In that Day there ſhall be a Fountain opened, ſays the Prophet, to the Houſe of David, and to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem, for Sin and for Uncleanneſs: And if ſo, then are the Sins of the Jews ſo far from being a Reaſon The Sins of the Jews no Obſtruction.

* Jer. xxviii. 9. [x] Ibid. ver. 8, 9. [y] Kidder's Demonſtration, Part III. [z] Pſal. lxxxix. 31, &c. [a] Kidder, ibid. [b] Iſa. i. 4. [c] Dan. ix. 24. [d] Zech. xiii. 1.

for the deferring of his Coming, that they are rather an Argument for the haſtening it; that ſuch as were in Darkneſs, might ſee a marvellous Light, and to them, who ſat in the Shadow of Death, [h] the Sun of Righteouſneſs might ariſe with Healing in his Wings. Thus having ſhewn, that, notwithſtanding the Jewiſh Pretences for Delay, the Time of the Meſſiah's Coming is moſt certainly elapſed; we ſhall now endeavour to prove,

Jeſus proved to be the Meſſias.

IV. THAT our bleſſed Saviour, in whom we truſt, is that very Meſſias, whom the Scriptures characterize, and whom the Jews, in their Infidelity, vainly expect. And this we ſhall do, by obſerving, how all the Predictions of the Prophets, concerning the one, agree with the Account, which the Evangeliſts give us of the other.

From the Fulfilling of the Propheſies.

I. THE Propheſies require, that the Meſſias ſhould ariſe from the Nation of the Jews, from the Tribe of Judah, from the Family of David; be born of a Virgin, in the Town of Bethlehem, and have his conſtant Reſidence at Nazareth of Galilee. To this Purpoſe, we read in the Prophets, that [i] in the Seed of Abraham, the great Progenitor of the Jews, all the Nations of the Earth ſhould be bleſſed; that [k] his Brethren ſhould praiſe Judah, from whom Shiloh was to come, and his Father's Children bow before him; that God would [l] raiſe unto David a righteous Branch, and a King to execute Judgment and Juſtice in the Earth; that [m] a Virgin ſhould conceive, and bear a Son, and ſhould call his Name Immanuel; that [n] out of Bethlehem, in the Land of Judah, ſhould come a Governor, who ſhould rule Iſrael, and that [o] in the Way of the Sea, beyond Jordan in Galilee of the Nations, the People, that walked in Darkneſs, ſhould ſee a great Light; &c. And, to the ſame Purpoſe, we read in the Evangeliſts, what the Genealogy of our Lord and Saviour was; that by Birth he was a Jew, * deſcended from the Tribe of Judah, [p] of the Houſe and Lineage of David, [q] born of an immaculate Virgin †, by a ſpecial Providence, in the City of David, which is called Bethlehem; but brought up, with his reputed Father, in a Place of Galilee, named Nazareth.

THE Propheſies require, that this Meſſias ſhould not only be a Prophet, to teach and inſtruct, but a great Prince likewiſe, conſtituted by God, to rule and govern his People; to deliver them from Oppreſſion and Slavery; to ſubdue their Enemies, and reduce all Nations, both Jew and Greek, under his Dominion. But, notwithſtanding this, that he ſhould be a Prince of a peculiar Character, juſt and merciful in his Adminiſtration, meek and gentle in his Diſpoſition, mean and humble in his Appearance, living a poor inglorious Life, dying a cruel and ignominious Death, and yet bearing all with invincible Patience, and making his Sufferings ultimately redound to the Salvation of Mankind, by becoming an Atonement and Propitiation for Sin. To this Purpoſe, we read in the Old Teſtament, that [r] God would raiſe up a Prophet, like unto Moſes, and put his Words in his Mouth, and [s] anoint him to preach good Tidings unto the Meek, and to bind up the Broken-hearted; that he would [t] ſet a King upon the Throne of David, and upon his Kingdom, to order it, and to eſtabliſh it, with Judgment and with Juſtice for ever; who ſhould [u] proclaim Liberty to the Captives, and the Opening of the Priſon to them that are bound; who, * girding his Sword upon his Thigh, ſhould go out conquering and to conquer, until he made [x] the Inhabitants of the Wilderneſs kneel before him, and his Enemies lick the Duſt; until his Dominion ſhould be extended from one Sea to another, and from the Flood unto the World's End. For [y] from the Riſing of the Sun, even to the Going down of the ſame, his Name ſhall be great among the Gentiles, and, in every Place, Incenſe offered to his Name, and a pure Offering. But, how powerful and victorious ſoever he might prove, yet ſtill he was to be the [z] Prince of Peace; [a] Righteouſneſs was to be the Girdle of his Loins, and Faithfulneſs the Girdle of his Reins; and, [b] like a Shepherd, was he to feed his Flock, and gather the Lambs with his Arms, and carry them in his Boſom, and gently lead thoſe that were with Young: For [c] behold, thy King cometh unto thee, he is juſt, and having Salvation, lowly, and riding upon an Aſs; [d] he hath no Form or Comelineſs, and when thou ſhalt ſee him, there is no Beauty, that thou ſhouldſt deſire him: He ſhall be deſpiſed and rejected of Men, a Man of Sorrows, and acquainted with Grief; and the World, as it were, ſhall hide their Faces from him; but, all this while, while, [a] he ſhall not cry, nor cauſe his Voice to be heard in the Street; like a Lamb, ſhall he be brought to the Slaughter, and as a Sheep before her Shearers is dumb, ſo he ſhall not open his Mouth; and, tho' he be numbered with the Tranſgreſſors, yet ſhall he make his Soul an Offering for Sin, juſtify many, and bear their Iniquities, and make Interceſſion for the Tranſgreſſors. To the ſame Purpoſe we read, in the New Teſtament, that, as a Prophet, he expounded and applied the Holy Scriptures ſo, [f] that all, who heard him, were aſtoniſhed at his Underſtanding, and [g] wondered at the gracious Words which proceeded out of his Mouth: And that, as a King, [h] he deſtroyed him, who had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil, and delivered them, who, through Fear of Death, were all their Life-time ſubject unto Bondage. Therein we read of the Spreading of the Goſpel, and the large Extent of his Kingdom, when [i] Multitudes of Believers, and [k] devout Men of every Nation under Heaven, leaving their Superſtition and Idolatry, embraced the Chriſtian Faith; and there we read too of the poor Figure and Appearance he made in the World, who, [l] being in the Form of God, took upon him the Form of a Servant, and made himſelf of no Reputation: We read of his quiet and peaceable Diſpoſition, in not attempting any Reſiſtance, or Revenge, upon Provocations of the greateſt Injuries and Affronts; of his exceeding Meekneſs and Charity, in pitying all Perſons in any Want or Diſtreſs, and even bewailing the Vengeance he foreſaw impendent on his Perſecutors; of his marvellous Humility, in ſhunning and rejecting Honours, and condeſcending to the meaneſt Offices and Employments; and his unparallelled Patience, in ſubmitting to what the Will and Providence of God laid upon him, Poverty and Diſgrace, bitter Pains and Anguiſhes, both of Body and Mind, and the moſt horrid and moſt opprobrious Death, chearfully and contentedly, without the leaſt Murmur or Regret: And, in ſhort, there we read of our Saviour's dying, not for his own Offences, but for ours, that, from the Foundation of the World, his Death was ordained to be a Propitiation for the Sins of Mankind, his Blood ſet forth [m] to be a Sacrifice of a ſweet-ſmelling Savour unto God; and that, [n] if the Blood of Bulls and of Goats ſanctified to the purifying of the Fleſh, how much more ſhould the Blood of Chriſt, who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himſelf without Spot to God, purge our Conſcience from dead Works, to ſerve the living God?

[h] Mal. iv. 2. [i] Gen. xxii. 18. [k] Ibid. xlix. 8, 10. [l] Jer. xxiii. 5. [m] Iſa. vii. 14. [n] Mic. v. 2. [o] Iſa. ix. 1, 2. * John vii. 41, 42. [p] Luke ii. 4. [q] Matth. ii. 5, 6. Luke ii. 11. † Ibid. i. 34. [r] Deut. xviii. 18. [s] Iſa. lxi. 1. [t] Ibid. ix. 7. [u] Ibid. lxi. 1. * Pſal. xlv. 3. [x] Ibid. lxxii. 8, 9. [y] Mal. i. 11. [z] Iſa. ix. 6. [a] Ibid. xi. 5. [b] Ibid. xl. 11. * Zech. ix. 9. [d] Iſa. liii. 2.

ONCE more, the Propheſies are very exact in foretelling every little Circumſtance, relating to the Meſſiah's Death and Exaltation; and the Evangeliſts (as they go along) have obſerved, how each of theſe very ſtrangely concurred, and were accompliſhed in our Saviour's Crucifixion, and other ſubſequent Events. [o] That he, who was born, ſhould die, hath nothing of Wonder in it; but that he ſhould [p] die on the Croſs, who, by the Laws of the Country, had he been guilty, muſt have been ſtoned; that he, who had ſo many Enemies, ſhould yet be [q] betrayed by one of his Diſciples; that he, who had the Bag, and, one would think, not that Temptation to Corruption, ſhould betray him [r] for ſo vile a Price as Thirty Pieces of Silver; that this Price of Blood ſhould be employed in a Work of Mercy, to [s] buy a Field to bury Strangers in; that he ſhould die [t] among Thieves and Malefactors, who ſpent his Time in doing Good; and the Multitude, which were wont to pity dying Criminals, ſhould [u] deride him in his greateſt Miſeries; that he ſhould * drink Vinegar on the Croſs, inſtead of a narcotick Potion, as the Cuſtom was; and the Soldiers, after they [x] had parted his Garments, ſhould caſt Lots for his Coat; that they ſhould not [y] break his Bones, as the Manner was among them, but only [z] pierce his Side with a Spear; that he, who was crucified, ſhould be interred, contrary to the Practice of the Romans, who did not bury thoſe who died upon the Croſs, and [a] Perſons, of the higheſt Rank and Character, ſhould agree in the honourable Interment of one, who died ſo ignominious a Death; that, upon this Interment, he ſhould not, as other Mortals do, [b] taſte of Corruption; but, after a [c] ſhort Stay in the Grave, riſe again, and, in a proper Time, [d] aſcend into the higheſt Heavens, leading Captivity captive, and become himſelf [e] the Author of eternal Salvation: In a Word, that the ſame Perſon ſhould ſuffer and die, and yet reign and proſper; ſuffer like a vile Malefactor, factor, and yet reign like a triumphant Conqueror; these are Things so strange and so surprizing, so much beyond what any History besides affords us, that, if we believe but the Matter of Fact, which we have all the Reason in the World to believe, we cannot but find abundant Reason to adore the Wisdom and Goodness of God, who has so fully accomplished in our Jesus, what was so punctually foretold of the Messias many Ages before.

[a] Iſa. xlii. 2. [f] Luke ii. 47. [g] Ibid. iv. 22. [h] Heb. ii. 14, 15. [i] Acts v. 14. [k] Ibid. ii. 5. [l] Phil. ii. 6, 7. [m] Eph. v. 2. [n] Heb. ix. 13, 14. [o] Kidder's Demonſtration. [p] Pſal. xxii. 16. John xix. 25. [q] Pſal. xli. 9. Matth. xxvi. 47. [r] Zech. xi. 12. Matth. xxvi. 15. [s] Zech. xi. 13. Matth. xxvii. 7. [t] Mark xv. 27. [u] Pſal. xxii. 7, 8. Matth. xxvii. 39, 43. * Pſal. lxix. 21. John xix. 29, 30. [x] Pſal. xxii. 18. John xix. 23, 24. [y] Exod. xii. 46. John xix. 33. [z] Zech. xii. 10. John xix. 34. [a] Iſa. liii. 9. John xix. 38, 39. [b] Pſal. xvi. 10. Math. xxviii. 6. [c] Hoſea vi. 2. Matth. xii. 40. [d] Pſal. lviii. 18. Acts i. 9, 10. [e] Heb. v. 9.

So far then as the Word of Prophesy is a Light to direct us unto Christ, we have all the Predictions of the Old Testament, relating to his Birth and Life, his Death and Resurrection, meeting together, as Rays in a Center, and pointing at our Jesus, as that great and eminent Person, ordained by God to come into the World, and promised as a mighty Blessing to his People.

An Objection. "But though these Prophesies remit you to Christ, may the Jews reply, yet may "you not be mistaken in their Interpretation, and apply that to him, which is pro- "perly meant of another? [f] A Kingdom of this World, and not of this World, "Contempt and Adoration, Poverty and Majesty, Persecution and Peace, Suffer- "ings and Triumphs, a Cross and a Throne, the scandalous Death of a private "Man, and the everlasting Dominion of an universal Monarch; these are Things "so inconsistent, so impossible to meet in the same Subject, that there is a great Pre- "sumption to believe you are not a little mistaken in the Application of those Pre- "dictions, which are produced to countenance your pretended Saviour's Humilia- "tion, and to apologize for his being put to an ignominious Death; whereas the "whole Tenor of the Prophesies, undoubtedly applicable to him, represent him as "a great and successful Conqueror." This is the Substance, I think, of what the Jews have to object against the Gospel-Account of our Saviour's Life and Transactions, and the different Stages of Abasement and Exaltation, through which he passed: And, to give it a plain and proper Solution, we shall,

1. ASSIGN some Reasons why many of the Prophesies, those relating to the Messias in particular, should be obscure, and liable to Misconstructions: And then,

2. MAKE it appear, that, notwithstanding this Obscurity, the Christian Interpretation of Old Testament Prophesies, concerning the Messias, is undoubtedly true.

Answered, by shewing why Prophesies are obscure. 1. NOW it cannot but be obvious to every common Reader, that, of all the Parts of Scripture, the prophetick Books abound most with figurative Schemes of Speech, which naturally produce a Difficulty in the Sense, and are not, without great Application, and some previous Knowledge, rightly to be understood. [g] "There are so many bold Metaphors, and hyperbolical Expressions, so many Allegories and Parables; such an Air of Rapture, such Flame, and Fire throughout; so many Allusions to particular Places, and Things, and Customs, of which, these Books themselves do give but dark Intimations; so frequent Changes of Persons spoken of; and so many, so sudden, and, to Readers less observant, seemingly abrupt Transitions from one Subject to another, that it is not at all to be wondered at, if the Interpreters of Scripture have fallen into a greater Variety of Opinions concerning this Part of it, than any other. Figures indeed in some Places are so obvious, that one cannot adhere to the literal Sense, without manifestly departing from the Mind of the Author: But, in others, it may be questioned, whether the literal or figurative Signification ought to be preferred, where both are true, both rational, and both agreeable to the Principles of sound Faith. In Similitudes and Parables, every Circumstance is sometimes significant, and to be taken notice of, in the Explanation of the Whole; and sometimes the greater Part of them serve chiefly for Elegance and Ornament, and the main Drift and Substance of the Whole is only to be attended to; but in Transitions the Prophet is still more uncertain; sometimes [h] he is speaking of Events near at Hand, when, all on a sudden, a strong Impulse of the holy Spirit carries him up on high to others, far more distant and noble; and afterwards, without any Warning to the Reader, he is brought back, and set down at the nearer and meaner Event, which, by some Analogy or other, gave Occasion for the Mention of the more remote and sublime. He speaks sometimes in his own, sometimes in God's, sometimes in the Church's Name; mentions the Person he speaks of, sometimes under his proper Character, sometimes under [i] the Name and Character of another, who bears some Resemblance to him; and many Times puts whole Countries, and Kingdoms, and Societies of Men, not for the Places and Persons only, whose Names

[f] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [g] Stanhope, ibid. [h] Vid. Isa. vii. 10, to 18.
[i] Ibid. xliii. 44, 49. Jer. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24. Hos. iii. 5. Mal. iv. 5.

Names they bear, but for others, in After-Ages, that come up to a Similitude in the ſame Sins and Circumſtances.

Thoſe concerning the Meſſias more eſpecially. From the Greatneſs of the Subject.

UPON theſe, and ſeveral other Accounts, it cannot well be imagined, but that Propheſies in general muſt be obſcure; but then there are other Conſiderations, ariſing from the Nature of the Subject itſelf, which bring the Predictions concerning the Meſſias under a Neceſſity of being more involved in a great Variety of Figures, and daring Flights, than any other Predictions whatever. This the Jews themſelves make no Difficulty to allow; and ſome of their [k] greateſt Doctors have laid it down for a Rule, in interpreting the Prophets, [l] that they are not literally to be underſtood, by Reaſon of thoſe metaphorical Expreſſions; and therefore we need leſs wonder, that we meet with ſuch Figures and lofty Images, where the Benefits ſpoken of are of ſo ſpiritual, and ſo exalted a Nature, as to make the Pomp of Expreſſion the Effect of Neceſſity, which would, in other Caſes, paſs for choſen and artificial. Our Saviour, for Inſtance, is repreſented in Scripture, 1. as a [m] Prophet, far above the reſt, both for the Perfection and Succeſs of his Doctrine, and the ſtupendous Teſtimony given of it by his Miracles; 2. As a [n] Prieſt, not like thoſe of the Aaronical Succeſſion, who made Atonement for the People by offering other Creatures daily; but one of another Order, poſſeſſed of an everlaſting Prieſthood, and expiating the Sins of the World by the Sacrifice of himſelf; and, 3. As a [o] King, peaceful and glorious, veſted in a Kingdom different from all others, in that it is ſpiritual and eternal, a Dominion over the Souls, as well as the Bodies, and Fortunes of his Subjects, and a Government, of whoſe Stability and Increaſe there ſhall be no End. Now, in theſe ſeveral Capacities, every Thing was extraordinary; all ſo noble, as to require the moſt towering Flights even of inſpired Eloquence to deſcribe them worthily; and ſome ſo remote from Senſe and common Appearances, that there was a Neceſſity of borrowed Reſemblances, to give us any Idea of them at all. The Prophets, in this Caſe, I ſay, were obliged to take in ſenſible Images to make themſelves underſtood, and to form their Diſcourſes of ſpiritual and inviſible Bleſſings, upon ſuch temporal Advantages, as the People they were ſent to, were beſt acquainted, and moſt delighted with. And as the Loftineſs, ſo

The different Figures in expreſſing it.

2. THE ſeeming Difference of the Figures, wherein the Prophets repreſent the Perſon of the Meſſias, according to the different Characters he ſuſtained, is a great Addition to the Obſcurity of their Writings. Thus, when at ſome Times they call him [p] a Worm and no Man, the Scorn of Men, and the Out-caſt of the People; one, [q] that was deſpiſed and rejected, ſmitten and afflicted, and [r] cut off from the Land of the Living; and at other Times [s] fairer than the Children of Men, and [t] ſitting at the Right-Hand of God, the God, [u] whoſe Throne is for ever and ever, and the Lord, * whoſe Name alone is excellent in all the World, [x] who laid the Foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the Work of his Hands: When they give ſuch diſtant and almoſt contradictory Characters of one and the ſame Perſon, and both, in different Reſpects, belonging to him, at one and the ſame Time too; theſe ſeeming Incongruities may well be allowed to create ſome Confuſion in Men, who are not careful to diſtinguiſh, and apply, and compare the Circumſtances of the Meſſias, and the Propheſies foretelling him, juſtly together; whereas to conſider him, both in his Divine and human Nature, ſometimes in his State of Abaſement, and ſometimes in his State of Exaltation, according as the Propheſy points, clears up this Obſcurity at once.

The different Offices he ſuſtains.

3. ANOTHER Cauſe of the Obſcurity of thoſe Propheſies, which particularly concern the Meſſias, may be aſcribed to thoſe different Offices, under which he is there repreſented, and the promiſcuous Mention of his firſt and ſecond Coming, which ſome are not careful enough to diſtinguiſh. The Jews, in this Reſpect, are very unhappy; for, being prepoſſeſſed with a Notion of Chriſt's temporal Grandeur, and, finding ſo many pompous Deſcriptions of the Glory and Triumphs of his Kingdom, they cannot reliſh any Part of his Humiliation; and therefore, whatever they meet with in Scripture, that has an Aſpect this Way, they immediately apply to

 ſome

[k] Maim. More Nevoch. p. 2. c. 30. Menaſ. Ben Iſrael, Qu. in Gen. xxx. [l] This appears to be their Method of interpreting ſeveral Paſſages of the Old Teſtament, acknowledged by themſelves to belong to the Meſſias, ſuch as the 72d Pſalm; the 11th, 35th, 65th, and 66th of Iſaiah; the 5th of Micah; the two laſt Chapters of Zechariah, and ſundry others. Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III. [m] Deut. xviii. 15, &c. Iſa. ii. 3. Mich. iv. 2. [n] Pſal. cx. 4. [o] Ibid. lxxii. lxxix. Iſa. ix. 6, 7. xi. xl. xlix. Hoſ. iii. Jer. xxx. Ezek. xxxiv. 24. and Zech. ix, &c. [p] Pſal. xxii. 6. [q] Iſa. liii. 3. [r] Dan. ix. 26. [s] Pſal. xlv. 2. [t] Ibid. cx. 1. [u] Ibid. xlv. 6. * Ibid. viii. 1. [x] Ibid. cii. 25.

ſome other Perſon, and ſo make one Part of the Propheſy incompatible with the other. Now, to remedy this Abuſe, it may not be improper to remind them, that the Meſſias, as we ſaid, is to be conſidered in the Capacity of a Prophet and Prieſt, as well as a King; and that though the Predictions relating to his Royal Authority be enlarged upon more copiouſly, as being the nobleſt Part of his Character, than either of the other; yet are they all equally eſſential to the Scheme of Man's Redemption, though not capable of being equally exerciſed, at one and the ſame Time, by one and the ſame Perſon.

THE Prophet's Buſineſs was to teach the People: And ſince this great Prophet's Deſign was to raiſe Mens Affections and Deſires, by the cleareſt Revelation of Happineſs in a future, inviſible State; to ſupport them under Afflictions and Perſecutions, and to juſtify the Providence of God, in the Sufferings of good Men, for whom he hath an ineſtimable Recompence in Reſerve; It was no more than requiſite, that ſuch a Preacher's Example ſhould bear Teſtimony to his Doctrine. In like Manner, the Prieſt's Buſineſs chiefly conſiſted in making Interceſſion for the People by the Atonement of bloody Sacrifices; and therefore he, who was to ſanctify the People, by the Sacrifice of his own Blood, muſt of Neceſſity die: But now the ſolemn Adminiſtration of his Kingly Office could not be entered upon, until the two former were diſcharged, becauſe, in the Predictions of the Meſſias, his Promotion to a Kingdom is expreſsly mentioned, as the Reward of his Fidelity and Sufferings; [z] becauſe my righteous Servant, ſays God, did bear the Iniquities of many, and poured out his Soul unto Death, I therefore will divide him a Portion with the Great, and he ſhall divide the Spoil with the Strong. Since then, according to the Nature and Order of Things, Chriſt was to ſuffer, before he could reign; to anſwer his prophetick Character, in his Teaching and Practice, and his ſacerdotal, in his Death and Interceſſion, before he could be admitted to his regal, which he then only aſſumed, when, after his Reſurrection, he aſcended up on high, and was ſeated at God's Right-Hand; it muſt needs be a Deception, in the Jews, to have their Attention ſo ſet upon the Meſſiah's regal Character, as almoſt wholly to overlook the prieſtly and prophetical; and whoever is under the Influence of ſuch a Deception, is but in a bad Diſpoſition to interpret Scripture. And from theſe Conſiderations we proceed,

The Chriſtian Interpretation of Propheſies vindicated.

2. TO juſtify our own Interpretation, and to make it appear, that, notwithſtanding the Obſcurity of the Propheſies concerning the Meſſias, we Chriſtians are let into the Knowledge of expounding, and applying them right. That our bleſſed Saviour was a Prophet ſent from God, is evident, not only from the many miraculous Works which he did, but from the Confeſſion of his greateſt Enemies. For though they differed in their Sentiments, as to what Prophet it was that he perſonated, ſome thinking him [a] to be one of the old Prophets riſen from the Dead; others, that he was the new Prophet Elias; and others, John the Baptiſt reſtored to Life again; yet all agreed, that he was a Prophet, [b] mighty in Word and Deed; and, for this Reaſon, the chief Prieſts feared to lay Hands on him, [c] becauſe the Multitude took him to be a Prophet. Nay, they not only took him to be a Prophet, but to be that great and eminent Prophet, whom Moſes [d] had foretold; and therefore, upon his raiſing the Widow's Son at Naim, [e] they glorified God, ſaying, that a great Prophet is riſen up among us; as, upon another miraculous Occaſion, they declared openly, [f] this is of a Truth the Prophet, that ſhould come into the World.

[g] NOW one Part of this great Prophet's Office was, to explain the Senſe of the Jewiſh Scriptures, and to remove the Obſcurity that was to remain on many Propheſies, until his Coming. In this, the Jews were ſo generally perſuaded, that in every Difficulty, they could not explain, it was an uſual Thing for them to ſay, [h] Elias will come and reveal all Things; to the ſame Purpoſe, as the Woman of Samaria anſwered our Saviour, [i] I know that Meſſias cometh, and, when he is come, he will teach us all Things. Now, if our Saviour himſelf was a Prophet, it was impoſſible for him to have been miſtaken in the Interpretation of any Propheſy; becauſe he interpreted by the very ſame Spirit, wherewith the Prophets wrote; and if he communicated the ſame Spirit to his Apoſtles, (as the Day of Pentecoſt made it manifeſt he did) then muſt their Judgment too, whenever it paſſed upon any Text, be deciſive, even though it ſhould differ from the Senſe of the Jewiſh Doctors. But,

[y] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [z] Iſa. liii. 11, 12. [a] Luke ix. 19. [b] Ibid. xxiv. 19. [c] Matth. xiv. 5. [d] Deut. xviii. 5. [e] Luke vii. 16. [f] John vi. 14. [g] Biſhop Chandler's Defence of Chriſtianity. [h] i. e. All Obſcurities ſhall be removed under the Meſſias, whoſe Forerunner and Contemporary Elias was expected to be. [i] John iv. 25.

But, when it is more than probable, that their Interpretation agreed with the Senſe of theſe Jewiſh Doctors, (ſince to put a falſe, or controverted Senſe on Predictions, confeſſedly belonging to the Meſſias, had been both a bold and fruitleſs Attempt) this is ſtill a farther Confirmation of their Truth and Integrity, in applying the Texts, in the Old Teſtament, literally fulfilled in Jeſus, to the Proof of his being the true Meſſias.

'TIS well obſerved, by a great Man of our own, [k] that the Jewiſh Traditions, contrary to the Law of God, have done leſs Hurt to Religion, than the Loſs of ſome Jewiſh Traditions, or Rules for interpreting Scripture, which had been received among the ancient Hebrew [l] Rabbins, but rejected by the later Jewiſh Maſters, who, to get quit of all the Difficulties that do ſurround them, have deviſed the Expedient of two Chriſts, one the Son of Joſeph, and the other the Son of David; the former to ſuffer and die; the latter to conquer and reign: A bold, unheard-of Fiction, which their Anceſtors were Strangers to, and what the Word of God knows nothing of. It repreſents, indeed, one and the ſame Perſon, under very oppoſite Circumſtances, a Man of Sorrow, and of Joy, oppreſſed and exalted, deſpiſed and adored, ſuffering and triumphing, hanging upon a Croſs, and ſeated upon a Throne; but this it does under different Views, and according to the different Characters he ſuſtained. He was a Prophet, to teach us the Will of God; and he was a Prieſt, to make Atonement for us; but theſe Offices he could not execute, without Trouble and Affliction, without ſuffering and dying, which he came into the World to finiſh firſt, before he took Poſſeſſion of his Kingdom. His Sufferings were accompliſhed here on Earth, but his Triumphs did not begin, until he was aſcended into Heaven; nor ſhall the full Glories of his Kingdom be revealed and diſplayed, until, with Ten thouſand of his mighty Angels, he ſhall return from thence to judge the World in Righteouſneſs, and [m] to take Vengeance on them, that know not God, and obey not his Goſpel.

HAVING thus vindicated the Chriſtian Interpretation of ancient Propheſies, which point out the Time and Place of the Meſſiah's Birth, his perſonal Qualities, Manner of Life, and Circumſtances of Death, all accompliſhed in our Bleſſed Saviour; we come now to another Characteriſtick of him, and that is,

2. THE great and miraculous Works, which he was to do. The Jews, indeed, of late, are fallen into a Notion, [n] that Miracles are not neceſſary to prove a Divine Miſſion, and that the Meſſias, when he comes, is to do no other Wonders, [o] than to fight the Lord's Battles, and conquer all before him: But a ſmall Reflection will convince us, that, in the Days of our Saviour, their Forefathers were of a contrary Opinion. When [p] John the Baptiſt had heard of the Works which Chriſt did, he ſent two of his Diſciples with this Meſſage to him, Art thou he that ſhould come, (i. e. the Meſſias) or look we for another? To whom our Saviour returned this Anſwer; Go, and ſhew John again theſe Things, which ye do hear and ſee; the Blind receive their Sight, and the Lame walk, and the Lepers are cleanſed, and the Deaf hear, and the Dead are raiſed up. The Anſwer is, in a great Meaſure, taken from the Prophet [q] Iſaiah, deſcribing the great Operations of the Meſſias; and, by remitting the Baptiſt to them, our Saviour has both proved the Truth of his own Miſſion, and the Neceſſity of Miracles in any other, who pretends to the Authority of a Prophet ſent from God. The Demand therefore which the Jews made (had Chriſt proved to be the Meſſias, from his Miracles.

[k] Dr Jackſon, Tom. II. Sect. 2. c. 9.

[l] Thus, as to the Prophecy of Zechariah, where the King is repreſented riding on an Aſs, 'tis twice explained of the Meſſias in the Talmud; as to that of Daniel, where the Prince is to be cut off in ſo many Weeks; this Saying is ſtill extant in the Talmud, as the Tradition of former Times; in Daniel is delivered to us the End of the Meſſias, i. e. the Term, wherein he ought to come, as Jarchi explains it: And (to name no more) as to the famous 53d Chapter of Iſaiah, their Targum is expreſs, that it relates to the Meſſias; and not only ſo, but their Doctors, with one Mouth, aſſert, (as they received it by Tradition from their Anceſtors) that the Meſſias muſt be underſtood, by God's Servant, that ſhall proſper, and be exalted. Biſhop Chandler's Defence of Chriſtianity. If then there be any Miſinterpretation of the Propheſies, 'tis not we, but the modern Jews, that are guilty of it, who, to maintain their Ground againſt Chriſtians, have departed from the Expoſitions of their Forefathers, and, in Contradiction to Philo and Joſephus, as well as other Authors, have perverted both Chronology and Hiſtory, placing the Paſſion of our Saviour ſixty-nine Years before the true Account of it, although we have the Teſtimony of Tacitus, that he ſuffered under Pontius Pilate. Jenkin's Reaſonableneſs.

[m] 2 Theſſ. i. 8. [n] The learned Jew, who diſputed with Limborch, Anno 1687, contends, that the Prophets foretold neither the Time nor Place of the Nativity of the Meſſias, and ſays, that Miracles were of no Uſe to prove his Miſſion, but only to gather the Jews together from all Parts of the World, and to conquer the Nations. Leſlie's Short Method with the Jews. [o] Mahomet made the like Excuſe for his not working of Miracles. He ſaid, that Moſes, Solomon, and Jeſus, were ſent to ſhew God's Righteouſneſs, Wiſdom, and Clemency, to which Miracles were neceſſary to gain Belief; but that he was ſent to ſhew God's Fortitude, to which no Miracles were neceſſary, but to enforce it with the Sword, which carried its own Conviction. Leſlie, ibid.

[p] Matth. xi. 4, 5. [q] Iſa. xxxv. 5, 6.

(had it proceeded from a good Intent) was neither impertinent, nor unreaſonable; [r] Maſter, we would ſee a Sign from thee; what Sign therefore doſt thou do, that we may ſee, and believe thee? And the Reply, which our Saviour makes, ſeems to allow of the Juſtneſs of it; [s] If I witneſs of myſelf, my Witneſs is not true, i. e. not credible; [t] If I do not the Works of my Father, (i. e. Works, only imputable to God's extraordinary Power) believe me not; but [u] if I do the Works among you, which no Man elſe has done; if I cure all Diſeaſes with a Touch, and [*] with the Finger of God caſt out Devils, no doubt the Kingdom of God is come upon you.

His Miracles not diabolical.

How many in Number, how great in Power, how beneficial in their Effects, the Miracles were, which our Saviour wrought, we had Occaſion to conſider [x] elſewhere; and ſhall only now obſerve from what Principle they did proceed: And this the rather, becauſe there have not been wanting thoſe, who have had the Hardineſs to aſcribe our Lord's Miracles [y] to magical Enchantment, and to compare them with ſuch, as falſe Prophets, and Wizards, and the vileſt Impoſtors have been ſaid to do in all Ages. Whether it be conſiſtent with the Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God to ſuffer Men, under the Influence of evil Spirits, to do true Miracles, in Confirmation of a real Impoſture, [z] is an Argument, wherein the Learned are divided, and what we ſhall not purſue at preſent. We will allow it for once, that, in ſome Caſes God may permit this to be, in order to exerciſe our Faith, [a] and to prove us, whether we will adhere to the Truth, which he hath already, by mighty Signs and Tokens, eſtabliſhed among us: But that this may be done, in all Caſes, without any Means to diſtinguiſh falſe from true Miracles, this is a Thing impoſſible. [b] There are ſome Things ſo great, that it is not reaſonable to conceive, that any created Powers can do them, or that, if they could, God would permit them to have Succeſs; ſuch is [c] the making a great and general Alteration in the Courſe of Nature: Some Things ſo good and beneficial to Mankind, that wicked and infernal Agents will not, even tho' they were able, perform them; ſuch are the Ejection of Devils, or the Diſcovery of moral Truths: Some Things of ſuch a Nature, that theſe malicious Spirits, which are under the Reſtraint and Controul of their Judge, dare not do them, for Fear of meeting ſevere Chaſtiſement for their Preſumption; ſuch may be the ſpecial Names of God, or oppoſing directly his extraordinary Meſſengers: And, laſtly, there are ſome Things, ſo peculiarly appropriated to God, that no other Being, otherwiſe than as it is acted by his Divine Power, and immediately dependent on it, can in the leaſt intermeddle with; ſuch are the Knowledge of future Contingents, the Diſcernment of our ſecret Thoughts and Intentions, and the Reſtitution of Men from a State of Death; for, I am he, and there is none beſides me, ſaith the Lord; [d] I ſhew the Things to come; [e] I ſearch the Heart, and try the Reins; [f] I kill, and I make alive.

THERE being ſo many Caſes then, wherein either the Will or Power of diabolical Agents muſt fail, their Compaſs of working Miracles cannot be ſo large, as ſome may imagine; but, even if it were more extended than it is, upon the Suppoſition, that we believe a righteous Providence, we can hardly imagine, that he will ſuffer them to uſurp ſuch a Tyranny over the Minds of Men, as to make thoſe Things paſs with the ſober and inquiſitive Part of the World, for Divine Miracles, which were only Counterfeits and Impoſtures: [g] If the Providence of God, I ſay, be concerned in the Diſcovery of Satan's Deſigns, there muſt be ſome Means of this Diſcovery; and that Means can be ſuppoſed to be no other, than ſome rational and ſatisfactory Evidence, whereby we may know, when ſtrange and miraculous Things are done by Satan to deceive Men, and when, by the Power of God, to confirm a Divine Teſtimony.

Rules for diſtinguiſhing between true and falſe Miracles.

THE Rules then, that are generally laid down, in order to diſtinguiſh true Miracles from falſe, and to ſatisfy ourſelves, whether they are done by God and good Spirits, or

[r] John vi. 30. [s] Ibid. v. 31. [t] Ibid. x. 37. [u] Ibid. xv. 24. [*] Luke xi. 20.
[x] See Page 34.
[y] Vid. Juſt. Mart. Dial. cum Tryph. Celſus, as he is quoted by Origen, accounts for our Saviour's Miracles, by pretending, that he went into Egypt, and there learnt the Art of doing wonderful Works; and ſeveral of the Talmudic Writers affirm, that he was well verſed in Magic; while others aſcribe all his wonderful Works to the Art he had, in pronouncing the Name Jehovah, which he learnt in the Temple, having, as they ſay, once ſecretly conveyed himſelf into the Sanctuary for that Purpoſe. Chandler, on Miracles.
[z] Vid. Chandler, ibid. and Stillingfleet's Orig. Sacræ. [a] Deut. xiii. 1. [b] Barrow's Works, Vol. III.
[c] Jer. v. 22. xxxiii. 25. [d] Iſa. xli. 23. [e] Jer. xvii. 10. [f] Deut. xxxii. 39.
[g] Stillingfleet, ibid.

or by evil Angels, in Oppoſition to him, [h] are ſuch, as either reſpect, 1. The Works themſelves, and their Manner of being done; or, 2. The Perſons themſelves, and the Ends for which they are done.

1. IN Relation to the Works themſelves, it is required, that they be [i] poſſible, ſince no Power whatever can effect that which is ſtrictly impoſſible; that they be [k] probable, ſince the Divine Power will hardly concern itſelf in what ſavours of Fable and Romance; that they be not [l] below the Majeſty of God, as he is the great Ruler and Governor of the World; nor inconſiſtent with his Character, as he is a good and gracious Being. It is farther required, that they be done openly, in the Eye of the World, and before many competent Witneſſes; that they be done readily, ſo that no previous Forms or Ceremonies may make them look like Magic, or Incantation; that they be done upon all important Occaſions, to ſhew the Permanency of the Divine Power; and that the Power be communicated to others, and remain in the Hands of their Succeſſors, ſtill producing the ſame great Effects.

2. IN Relation to the Perſons, pretending to a Divine Miſſion and Authority, it is neceſſary, that they be in the perfect Exerciſe of their Reaſon and Senſes; that they be conſtant and uniform in the Meſſage they deliver; Men, that fear God, and have a good Report for their unblameable Converſation; and that the Doctrine they endeavour to eſtabliſh by their Miracles, be conſiſtent with the Principles of true Reaſon and Natural Religion; conſiſtent with right Notions and Worſhip of God; conſiſtent with the former Revelations he has made of his Will; of a fit Tendency to deſtroy the Devil's Power in the World, to recover Men from their Ignorance, to reform them from their Vices, to lead them into the Practice of Virtue and true Godlineſs, by proper Motives and Arguments; and, in ſhort, to advance the general Welfare of Societies, as well as every Man's particular Happineſs in this Life, and Preparation for a better. And now to apply theſe Marks and Characters to the Miracles, which our Saviour and his Apoſtles wrought.

Theſe Rules applied to Chriſt.

1. WE may allow indeed, that what they did tranſcended the natural Skill of any Angel to effect; but it will not therefore follow, that they were any Ways impoſſible, ſince they were not above the Power of the firſt Cauſe and ſupreme Being. [m] The ſame God, who formed the Eye, could reſtore the Blind his Sight; he, who wrought the whole Frame of our Bodies, could as eaſily cure the Maimed, and heal the Diſeaſed; and he, who cauſes the Rain to deſcend, and to water the Earth, that it may produce the various Kinds of Herbs and Fruits, and miniſter Bread to the Eater, and Seed to the Sower, could not be at a Loſs to change Water into Wine, or to multiply the Loaves and Fiſhes, for the Relief of a fainting, hungry Multitude.

THAT wicked and malicious Spirits ſhould, for a long Continuance of Time, do innumerable Acts of Beneficence, Kindneſs, and Charity to Mankind, is a Thing incredible, and quite repugnant to their known Character; but that God ſhould have Compaſſion on his Creatures, and exerciſe his tender Mercies over the Works of his Hands; that he ſhould raiſe the Dead, and create Bread for the Hungry, and Limbs for the Maimed, are Works both of Power and Mercy; and therefore entirely agreeable to his Wiſdom and Goodneſs, ſince they naturally tended both to beget Reverence in the Minds of Men towards his Meſſenger, and to reconcile them to the Belief and Obedience of his heavenly Will.

'TIS natural to imagine, that falſe Prophets and Impoſtors ſhould creep into Corners and obſcure Places, when they are called upon to give Teſtimony of their Miſſion, and, in the few Things they do, ſhould endeavour to gratify the Curioſity, and raiſe the Admiration of their deluded Followers. But ſo far was our Lord from ſeeming to have any Deſire of Privacy, that he choſe the moſt publick Places to perform his Wonders in; [n] cleanſing the Leper in the View of the Multitude; [o] healing the [h] Vid. Stillingfleet's Orig. Sacræ, and Chandler, on Miracles.

[i] This deſtroys the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation, the ſtanding Miracle of the Roman Church, but no great Proof of its Infallibility.

[k] This deſtroys the Credit of the few Miracles pretended to be wrought by Mahomet, viz. his ſplitting of the Moon, and his wonderful Journey to Heaven, &c.

[l] This ſhews the Folly of thoſe, related by Philoſtratus, in his Life of Apollonius Tyaneus: For can any Thing be more trifling, than the miraculous Dance of the Stools and Tables, and Cups and Diſhes, and placing themſelves in Order for his Entertainment among the Indians? Any Thing more ſilly, than his pretending to underſtand the Language of Birds, or the Queſtion he puts to Achilles's Ghoſt; as whether Polyxena was ſlain at his Tomb, and whether Helen was carried to Troy or no? Wonderful Queſtions indeed, to be aſked by ſo grave a Philoſopher, whom the Enemies of Chriſtianity ſet up in Competition with Jeſus! Stillingfleet's Sermons.

[m] Chandler, ibid. [n] Matth. viii. 1, &c. [o] Ibid.

Centurion's Servant before many Witneſſes; [p] raiſing the Ruler's Daughter before the Company, that was to attend her Funeral; [q] feeding four Thouſand Men at one Time, beſide Women and Children; and, at another, [r] entertaining no leſs than five Thouſand at his Table. So far was he from contenting himſelf with a few miraculous Actions, that almoſt every Day and Hour produced ſome freſh Inſtance of his Power and Goodneſs; inſomuch, that, if all he did were recorded, the World itſelf (ſays the [s] Apoſtle, but with ſomething of Hyperbole) would not contain the Books which ſhould be written: And ſo far from affecting any Pomp or Ceremony, to delude or captivate the Multitude, that he did all with a Word's ſpeaking. [t] Peace, be ſtill, quelled the Raging of the Winds and Waves; [u] Young Man, ariſe, revived the Widow's Son; [*] Be it to thee, as thou deſireſt, cured the Canaanitiſh Woman's Daughter, poſſeſſed with a Devil; [x] Ephpatha, be opened, gave the deaf Man Hearing; [y] Be thou cleanſed, healed the Leper; and [z] Lazarus, come forth, raiſed him from the Grave, who had been dead four Days.

THESE Miracles, ſo great in their Nature, and ſo remarkable in their Manner, had our Saviour performed in his own Perſon only, he had given a Demonſtration of his Divine Miſſion, and that the Works which he did, were according to the Power and Will of God; but when, even in the Time of his Miniſtration, he imparted to his Diſciple the ſame Power of caſting out Devils, and healing all Manner of Sickneſs, and all Manner of Diſeaſes among the People; when he promiſed and made it good to them, that they ſhould do greater Works, than he had done, [a] becauſe, by the Power of their Preaching and Miracles, as a Father expreſſes it, the Eyes of blind Souls ſhould be opened, and the Ears of them, that were deaf to Goodneſs, hearken to the Precepts and Promiſes of the Goſpel; when he continued this Power to their Succeſſors, [b] till Chriſtianity was ſo fully eſtabliſhed, as to need no farther Proof for its Confirmation; till it had overcome the Power and Policy of the World, and converted an innumerable Company of Souls to the true Worſhip and Service of God: When our Saviour did this, I ſay, both in his own Perſon, and in the Perſons of thoſe, that ſucceeded him, what ſhall we think? Did not he act by a Power moſt evidently ſuperior to that of the Devil, when diſpoſſeſſing evil Spirits, and forcing them to [c] confeſs, to [d] intreat, to [e] obey, to [f] expreſs an Awe and Dread of him; when detecting and [g] defeating the Treachery and Sorceries of Simon, by one Apoſtle, and ſtriking Elymas with Blindneſs, by another? Did not he and they act by a Power oppoſite to Devils, when rooting out their Idolatry and Superſtition, [h] putting the Heathen Oracles to Silence, diſcountenancing all Manner of Wickedneſs, declaring that Light and Darkneſs may as well have Fellowſhip, [i] as Chriſt and Belial? [k] Are theſe the Words of one, that hath a Devil? Is he not declared to be manifeſted, for this very Purpoſe, [l] that he might deſtroy the Works of the Devil? Have we not ſhewn his Miracles to be ſo many Works of Mercy and Goodneſs? And [m] can a Devil open the Eyes of the Blind? Is it in the Power, is it in the Inclination of the common Enemy of Mankind to do Things ſo aſtoniſhingly great, ſo excellently good as thoſe, which this Man has done? Either therefore make the Tree good, and his Fruit good, or elſe make the Tree corrupt, and his Fruit corrupt; for the Tree is known by his Fruit.

The Character of Chriſt and his Apoſtles.

2. IN trying the Miracles of Chriſt, whether they were done by the Interpoſition of a Divine or Diabolical Power, we muſt examine into his Character, and that of his Apoſtles. [n] That they were in full Poſſeſſion of their Reaſon and Senſes, the Nature of their Doctrines, the Excellency of their Precepts, their Speeches, their Apologies, in a Word, their whole Conduct is an abundant Proof: That they were good and holy Men, appears from every Part of their Hiſtory; from their reproving Vice in others, and carefully avoiding it themſelves; their recommending the Fear of God, and the Love of Juſtice and Charity, of Sobriety and Temperance, in their Diſcourſes; and their [o] propoſing themſelves for an Example to others, which, in Modeſty, they could

[p] Matth. ix. 18. [q] Ibid. xv. 36, 37. [r] Mark vi. 34, &c. [s] John xxi. 25. [t] Mark iv. 39. [u] Luke vii. 14. [*] Matth. xv. 28. [x] Mark vii. 34, 35. [y] Luke v. 13. [z] John xi. 43, 44. [a] Orig. cont. Celſ. L. II.

[b] This Power of working Miracles in the Chriſtian Church, in greater or leſſer Degrees, was continued many Years; for Origen [contra Celſum] ſpeaking of the Spirit of God, tells us, Ἔτι ἴχνη αὐτοῦ πνεύματος, &c. that ſome Footſteps of this holy Spirit remain, even to this Day, among Chriſtians, who caſt out Devils, and perform many Cures, and foreſee ſome future Events, according to the Will of Chriſt.

[c] Luke iv. 34, 35. [d] Ibid. viii. 28, 31. [e] Matth. viii. 29, 32. [f] Ibid. viii. 34. [g] Acts viii. 13. [h] Euſeb. Præp. Evang. L. V. [i] 1 Cor. x. 21. 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15. [k] John x. 21. [l] 1 John iii. 8. [m] John x. 21. [n] Chandler, on Miracles. [o] 1 Cor. iv. 16.

could not have done, had they not been conſcious of their own Integrity, and able [p] to approve themſelves as the Miniſters of God, in much Patience, in Afflictions, in Neceſſities, in Diſtreſſes, by Pureneſs, by Knowledge, by Long-ſuffering, by Kindneſs, by the Holy Ghoſt, by Love unfeigned. Whatever Oppoſition or Difficulties they met with, they ſtill continued firm to the Principles of their great Maſter, and conſiſtent with each other. Their Arguments, their Defences, their Exhortations, their Principles of Action, their Motives to Virtue, the Rewards and Puniſhments they ſet before Men, their Behaviour to their Enemies, and, in a Word, their entire Conduct was always, and every-where the ſame. They none of them ſet up for themſelves, nor divided into Parties, nor wrought Counter-Miracles, in Oppoſition to one another, but had all the ſame End in View, and every-where purſued it by the ſame Means.

And of the Chriſtian Religion.

[q] SUCH was the real Character of the Perſons employed to propagate the Religion of Jeſus Chriſt: A Religion, that was worthy to be publiſhed by the Son of God, and confirmed by Signs, and Wonders, and Miracles, and Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. For the great Deſign of this Religion is, to eſtabliſh the Belief of a God, and his Providence, and a future State of Rewards and Puniſhments; to teach Men the Nature of God, and that, as he is a Spirit, he is to be worſhipped in Spirit and in Truth; to inſtruct them in their Duty towards one another, and to oblige them, by the ſtrongeſt Motives, to obſerve and practiſe whatſoever Things are true, and honeſt, and juſt, and pure, and lovely, and of good Report, and virtuous, and praiſe-worthy; and to perſuade them to mortify every inordinate Affection, and to attain to thoſe excellent Diſpoſitions of Mind, which will make them reſemble God, and become moſt uſeful in Life, and beſt prepared for future Happineſs; in a Word, to eſtabliſh the Practice of theſe two great Duties, the Love of God, and the Love of our Neighbour, upon theſe two excellent Principles, of Faith in God, as a Rewarder of thoſe, that ſeek him; and Faith in Jeſus Chriſt, as the Saviour and Judge of Men. And, if this be the Tenor of the Chriſtian Religion, there is little Reaſon to ſuppoſe, that the Devil ſhould have any Hand in effecting thoſe Wonders, which gave Credit to the firſt Appearance and Strength, and Succeſs to the Propagation of ſuch Doctrines, as were calculated on Purpoſe to deſtroy his Dominion in the World, and, upon its Ruins, to erect the Kingdom of God and his Chriſt.

The Abſurdity of ſuppoſing Chriſt's Miracles to be diabolical.

THE Sum of the whole Matter is this——If the Goſpel-Account of Chriſt be true, then his entire Character will appear conſiſtent, and of a Piece; but if he was a Cheat and Impoſtor, and beholden to the Aſſiſtance of evil Spirits, in what he did, it will be a Bundle of the greateſt Contradictions in Nature. That a righteous and good Man ſhould be ſent from God to reform the World; that he ſhould do many wonderful Works of Goodneſs, to confirm his Divine Authority and Miſſion; that he ſhould lead a ſober, righteous, and godly Life, and, by his own Example and Precepts, teach others the Practice of Virtue, upon the Principles of Rewards and Puniſhments in another Life; that he ſhould be reproached and perſecuted by bad Men, and die, in Confirmation of his Character and Doctrines, with great Truſt and Confidence in God; and that a great deal of Good ſhould, by a wiſe and gracious Providence, be brought out of this Inſtance of Wickedneſs and Cruelty; theſe are all conſiſtent Suppoſitions, and very far from being incredible or unaccountable. But that a Perſon ſhould pretend to a Miſſion from God, himſelf conſcious, at the ſame Time, that he really had none; that, in order to confirm ſuch falſe Pretenſions, he ſhould impoſe on the World Tricks and Juggles, known to be ſuch, as genuine Miracles, and perform them by a voluntary Compact with Devils; that, in ſuch Circumſtances, he ſhould himſelf live an exactly regular Life, and ſteadily proſecute this one great Deſign, the Honour of God, and the Good of Mankind; that he ſhould inculcate the Neceſſity of univerſal Goodneſs in others, and, in particular, the Obligations of Juſtice, and Honeſty, and Truth to his Neighbour; that he ſhould teach the Doctrines of God's Providence, of a future State, and of eternal Rewards and Puniſhments, as the Conſequence of Mens Actions, according as their Quality ſhould be; that he ſhould deny himſelf all the worldly Advantages, which an Impoſtor, one would think, ſhould chiefly deſign to ſecure; willingly expoſe himſelf to Death, for the Maintenance of his Truth; and, at the very Inſtant of his expiring upon that Account, ſhould call God his Father, and with the greateſt Eaſe and Aſſurance commend his departing Spirit into his Hands; that a known, obſtinate, hardened Impoſtor ſhould ſhould thus live, and thus die, is one of the moſt monſtrous, moſt improbable Suppoſitions in the World.

[p] 2 Cor. vi. 4, 6.

[q] Chandler, on Miracles.

An Objection againſt Chriſt's being the Meſſias.

"BUT how monſtrous ſoever the Suppoſition be, may the Jews ſay, your Jeſus "can never be that Prophet, which was to come from God, ſince his Religion is "contrary to former Revelations: Since he hath aboliſhed our Law, which was "confeſſedly of Divine Inſtitution, and, by the Appointment of its Author, or"dained to endure for ever, and, in the Room thereof, has ſet up another, which "we know not whence it is. "God we account immutable in his Nature, and "wiſe in all his Purpoſes; but if the Goſpel-Diſpenſation be from Heaven, and re"pugnant to what was once his declared Will, at this Rate of chopping and chang"ing Revelations, he has proceeded with ſo much Levity in the new, or elſe with "ſuch Weakneſs in the old Eſtabliſhment, as cannot, without the laſt Degree of Ig"norance or Impiety, be imputed to an all-wiſe, and conſequently an unchangeable "Being."

Anſwered.

THIS is one of the ſtrongeſt Objections, that the Jews have, againſt the Divine Miſſion of our bleſſed Saviour; and therefore, to give it a full and ſatisfactory Anſwer, we muſt remember what has been alledged before, * viz. that the Jewiſh Laws were of three Sorts, moral, civil, and ceremonial; that the moral related to the Conduct of Mens Lives, and had a Tendency to make them good and virtuous; that the civil concerned the Government of the State, and made Proviſion for the Adminiſtration of Juſtice; and that the ceremonial had Reſpect to the Offices of the Church, and were converſant about the Rites and Ceremonies of Religion. The civil or judicial Laws however are not properly of religious Import, and therefore come not under our preſent Conſideration; it is the moral and ceremonial, about which the Controverſy is ſtated; and therefore, though we readily own [x] that, as they both came from Heaven, they were a great Bleſſing to the Jewiſh Nation, and one of thoſe Crowns, as their Doctors call it, wherewith they were adorned; though we agree with the Commendation, which Moſes gives of them; [y] What Nation is there ſo great, that hath Statutes and Judgments ſo righteous, as all this Law, which I ſet before you? Nay, though we cannot but acknowledge, that, as they were the Product of Divine Wiſdom, they could not but be perfect in their Kind, fit for the People to whom, and the Place in which, and the Ends for which they were given, and therefore given with this Injunction, [z] Ye ſhall not add unto the Word which I command you, neither ſhall ye diminiſh aught from it: Though we readily agree to this, I ſay, yet we hope to make it appear, that it is no Imputation upon the Divine Wiſdom to have changed the one, and improved the other.

The original Deſign of the Ceremonial Law.

I. THAT the ceremonial Part of the Law was ordained by God to typify and prefigure the Goſpel-State, as well as to make a peculiar Diſtinction between Jews and other Nations among whom they lived, is what we have elſewhere taken notice of; and from hence we may obſerve, [a] that, if this Law was an occaſional Inſtitution only, (as it muſt be, if impoſed upon the Jews, for a peculiar Note of Diſtinction) this Inſtitution muſt fall, when once the Occaſion, which required it, ceaſes; and, if it was only typical of ſome future Things, the very Nature of a Type is the giving way to the Antitype when once it appears. And indeed, if we look into the Form of theſe Laws, and compare them a little with others of a different Kind, we ſhall ſoon perceive that they were not ſuch, as had real and intrinſic Worth in them; as made Men immediately better, becauſe they were obeyed, but ſuch, as were therefore obeyed, becauſe they were commanded; and, conſequently, were primarily impoſed, not for themſelves, but for ſome farther End. [b] To what Purpoſe is the Multitude of your Sacrifices unto me, ſaith the Lord? I am full of the Burnt-Offerings of Rams, and the Fat of fed Beaſts, and I delight not in the Blood of Bullocks, or of Rams, or of He-goats. Bring no more vain Oblations; Incenſe is an Abomination unto me; the New Moons, and Sabbaths, the Calling of Aſſemblies, I cannot away with; it is Iniquity, even the ſolemn Meeting: But waſh ye, make you clean, put away the Evil of your Doings from before mine Eyes, ceaſe to do evil, learn to do well: For I ſpake not unto your Fathers, (ſays he by another Prophet [c]) nor commanded I them, in the Day that I brought them out of the Land of Egypt, concerning Burnt-Offerings, or Sacrifices; but this Thing commanded I them, ſaying, Obey my Voice, and I will

[a] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [x] Kidder's Demonſtration. [y] Deut. iv. 8. [z] Ibid. ver. 2. [a] Stanhope, ibid. [b] Iſa. i. 11, &c. [c] Jer. vii. 22, 23. * Vid. Page 392, 442, 445.

I will be your God, and ye ſhall be my People. But, how ſhould this be, (ſays the Jewiſh Commentator) that God ſhould not command them concerning Sacrifices, when it is obvious to every Reader, that a great Part of the Law is taken up about them? Why, himſelf reſolves the Doubt excellently well, viz. [e] That God's primary Intent, and that which he chiefly looked at, was Obedience, which it was his Deſign, in appointing Sacrifices and Oblations, to teach them.

AND as this Part of the Law was not, at firſt, inſtituted for any intrinſic Goodneſs that it had; ſo may we farther obſerve, that it was often diſpenſed with, when the End of its Inſtitution could not be attained. [f] Thus, in the Matter of Circumciſion, the Jews intermitted it, all the while that they wandered in the Wilderneſs, and that, not becauſe of the Uncertainty of their Motion, which always depended upon the Signal of the Cloud that conducted them; but, probably, becauſe it might be, with Safety, diſcontinued, while they remained in a deſert Place alone; and ſo, having no Neighbours to mingle with, were not in Danger of thoſe Inconveniencies, which it was deſigned to prevent. And, indeed, if we look a little farther into the Nature of theſe Laws, we ſhall find, that, in their firſt Inſtitution, they were never deſigned to be of general Uſe, or perpetual Obligation. Some of them [k] ſo peculiarly belonged to the Jews, that they could not be ſuppoſed to concern any other Nation; ſome were [l] ſo appropriated to the Land of Judea, that, in any other Country, the Jews themſelves were exempted from them; and others again ſo confined to the Temple of Jeruſalem, that to obſerve them in any other Place was reputed no leſs than Impiety. [m] To do Juſtice, and to love Mercy, and to walk humbly with God, were Precepts eternally good, and therefore of general Obligation; but to have Fringes on their Garments, or Frontlets between their Eyes; not [n] to wear a Garment of Linnen and Woollen, nor to ſow the ſame Ground with divers Seeds; but to be obliged to repair to Jeruſalem three Times a Year, there to keep the ſolemn Feſtivals, to eat the Peace-Offering, and Firſt-Fruits, and the Paſchal Lamb; theſe were Precepts peculiar to that People and Place, and not proper to be impoſed upon any other Nation. And therefore God, having all along ſignified his Deſign of enlarging the Boundaries of his Church, that [o] pure Incenſe might be offered in every Place, and his Name be made great among the Heathen, from the riſing up of the Sun unto the going down of the ſame, did not obſcurely intimate, that theſe Ceremonies, which made a Diſtinction, and, properly ſpeaking, were only practicable by one Nation in ſuch particular Circumſtances, ſhould be laid aſide, and an Inſtitution of a more univerſal Comprehenſion ſucceed in its Place.

It frequently diſpenſed with.

Of Uſe and Obligation to the Jews only.

To this Purpoſe, even while the Law was in its full Force, God himſelf expreſſly tells us, [p] that all Nations ſhould flow unto him: That he would [q] appoint a Prieſt according to the Order of Melchiſedeck; [r] take to himſelf Prieſts and Levites out of every Nation; [s] cauſe the Sacrifice and Oblation to ceaſe; deſtroy the City and the Sanctuary; [t] and make a new Covenant with the Houſe of Iſrael, and with the Houſe of Judah; not according to the Covenant, which I made with their Fathers, ſays God, in the Day I took them by the Hand, to bring them out of the Land of Egypt—— But this ſhall be the Covenant, which I will make with the Houſe of Iſrael, after thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord: I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts, and will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. [u] Can any one, that conſiders the State of Things, thus deſcribed, ever imagine that the Levitical Service was calculated for it? Can the Covenant of God, made with the Iſraelites, continue, when himſelf expreſſly ſaith, that he would make a new one, upon different Conditions, to what he entered into with their Forefathers? Was God's Worſhip to be confined to the Temple at Jeruſalem, when all the Nations of the Earth ſhould come to ſerve him? Was the High-Prieſt to make an Atonement there, when an Order of Prieſthood, different from the Aaronical, ſhould be ſet up? Muſt the Tribe of Levi only attend the Temple, when God ſhould take Prieſts and Levites out of all Nations to adminiſter to him? And what would become of the Magnificence and Glory of the Temple, when both City and Sanctuary ſhould be deſtroyed, which was to be within a few prophetick Weeks, after the Meſſias was cut off.

[e] Maimon. More Nev. p. 3. c. 32. [f] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [k] Thus the Paſſover, being appointed in Remembrance of their Deliverance out of Egypt, was a peculiar Law to that People, who were delivered from thence. [l] The Jews own, that the Sheaf, which was to be reaped, and other First-Fruits, which were to be offered, were to be of the Growth of Canaan, as likewiſe the Shew-Bread was to be of the Corn of that Country. The Laws, which concern Tithes, the Sabbatical Year, their Year of Jubilee, their Feſtival Rites, their Cities of Refuge, their Expiation of an uncertain Murther, and very many others, did all oblige them in their own Land. Kidder's Demonſtration. [m] Micah vi. 8. [n] Lev. xix. 19. [o] Mal. i. 11. [p] Iſa. ii. 2. [q] Pſal. cx. 4. [r] Iſa. lxvi. 21. [s] Dan. ix. 26, 27. [t] Jer. xxxi. 31, 32. [u] Stillingfleet's Orig. Sacræ.

And that they actually have ceaſed, and are never to be reſtored.

THESE prophetick Weeks have, long ſince, expired, and the Abrogation of this Law is abundantly notified to the Jews, by the Deſtruction of their City and Temple, and the miſerable Diſperſion of that People, after the Promulgation of a new Law and Covenant by Jeſus and his Apoſtles. * In ſuch Caſes, the Providence of God is the Interpreter of his written Word; and he cannot more plainly ſignify the Releaſe of any Obligation, than by making the Diſcharge of it abſolutely impracticable. The Country, which was the proper Scene of this Religion, Strangers do now inhabit; the City, which all their Males were obliged to reſort to thrice every Year, is now laid waſte; the Temple, where the Morning and Evening Sacrifice was to be performed, is level with the Ground, [x] by the Decree and Appointment of God, never to be built again; and themſelves are ſcattered among other Nations, without City, without King, without Government, without Temple, without Altar, without Sacrifice; and therefore the Law can now be no longer in Force, which ſuppoſes the Continuance of all theſe.

The diſtracted Circumſtances of the Jews.

IN the Babyloniſh Captivity, [y] Jehoiachim, their King, had his Throne, and there were always [z] proper Rulers, to keep up Order and Government among them; their Genealogies too were preſerved, and the Diſtinction of their Tribes and Families known; their Deliverance out of Captivity, and the very Name of Deliverer foretold; and, during the whole Time of their Continuance in it, they had Prophets ſent to direct and ſupport them under their Afflictions, and to give them Aſſurance of a Reſtoration: But, in their preſent Diſperſion and Calamity, there are Circumſtances that quite alter the Caſe. It is ſubſequent to the Publication of the Goſpel; it is [a] after the Viſion and Propheſy had been ſealed up by the Coming of the Meſſiah; it is that Deſolation, which has cauſed Sacrifice and Oblation to ceaſe, for theſe Sixteen hundred Years, and more; it is the only long Captivity, that never had any Time prefixed for their Return, never any one Meſſage of Comfort to ſuſtain the Hearts, from the firſt diſmal Blow, to this very Day; it ſeems to have brought their Affairs into ſuch Confuſion, that their Genealogies are perplexed, and loſt beyond the Poſſibility of a Retrieve; inſomuch that they have loſt the Pedigree, even of thoſe Tribes, on which the Prieſthood was entailed, and from whence the Meſſias was to ſpring: So that, upon the Suppoſition that Chriſt is not yet come, they are in no Capacity of knowing when he does come, becauſe they are not able to prove his Deſcent, according to the Propheſies which ſpeak of his Coming.

To ſum up then what has been ſaid on this Argument: If God, who at firſt inſtituted the ceremonial Law of the Jews, did it for particular Ends, and with Regard to one Nation of the World only; if he never intended it to be of univerſal Uſe, but, even while it was in Force, gave ſufficient Warning of its approaching Expiration; if he all along ſignified his Intentions of inſtituting a New Religion, which ſhould comprehend all Nations, and have its Commencement, even before the Old was totally laid aſide; and if the Old, of Courſe, was to be laid aſide, when the People and Polity, for which it was calculated, were diſperſed and diſſolved; and that People and Polity have had their ſad Fate attending them, without any Proſpect of Relief, or Promiſe of Reſtoration, for above theſe Sixteen hundred Years; in vain do they contend, that their Law is of perpetual Obligation, unleſs they could

* Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures.

[x] Dan. ix. 26, 27. Accordingly we may obſerve, that the Jews have, ſeveral Times, attempted to rebuild their Temple, in the Reigns of Adrian, Conſtantine, and Julian; but have always been defeated. This Apoſtate Emperor, in particular, out of Hatred to the Chriſtians, gave Orders for rebuilding the Temple at Jeruſalem, and engaged himſelf to bear the Expences; to which the Heathens, for the ſame Reaſon, did willingly contribute their Aſſiſtance; but God did immediately himſelf interpoſe, and, by a terrible Earthquake, threw up the Stones, from the very Foundation, with ſuch Violence, that they deſtroyed many of the Workmen and Spectators; and, by overthrowing the Buildings near adjoining to the Temple, killed and maimed many more of the Jews, who were gathered together for the carrying on of this Work: And when, not terrified with this, they again attempted to lay the Foundations of the Temple, Globes of Fire, burſting out of the Foundations, not only deſtroyed the Workmen, but devoured the very Stones. The Perſons, who relate this, are, Ammianus Marcellinus, [Lib. xiii.] an Heathen; and Wagenſel (in his Annotat. Ad Excerpta Gemaræ, c. 1.) who was a Jew; Nazianzen and Chryſoſtom, among the Greeks; St Ambroſe and Ruffinus, among the Latins, who flouriſhed at the very Time when this was done; Theodoret and Sozomen, orthodox Hiſtorians; Philoſtrorarius, an Arian; and Socrates, a Favourer of the Novatians, who wrote the Story, within the Space of fifty Years after the Thing was done, and whilſt Eye-witneſſes of the Fact were ſtill alive. Vid. Whitby's general Preface, Leſlie's Short Method, and Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs, Vol. II.

[y] 2 Kings xxv. 28. [z] Ezek. viii. 1. Ezra i. 5. which Rulers were called Ἀιχμαλωτάρχαι.

[a] Iſa. xliv. 28. Jer. xxv. 12. Dan. ix. 2. [b] Ibid. ix. 24.

could maintain the perpetual Poſſeſſion of that Land, in which it was to be obſerved.

The meaning of the Law's abiding for ever.

THE Word [Olam] which we render for ever, is, [c] by the Jewiſh Interpreters, acknowledged to ſignify, not always an Eternity, but very frequently a limited and determinate Space of Time. The Poſſeſſion of the Land of Canaan was promiſed them as an everlaſting Poſſeſſion, and an Inheritance for ever; but the Event has proved, that this was to be underſtood in a limited Senſe; and the Similitude of Diction, as well as the Nature of the Thing, obliges us to think, that the Duration of their Law, I mean their ceremonial Law, was to be no longer, than their Continuance in that Land: And accordingly ſome learned Men have obſerved, that where theſe Precepts, which are ſaid to be for ever, are given, [d] there is ſomething in the very Text, which determines the utmoſt Extent of this Expreſſion, and aſſures us, that theſe Things were to be in Force no longer than the Jewiſh State and Polity did continue. It cannot be denied, indeed, but that, before the Conſummation of all Things, God may bring back the Out-caſts of Iſrael, and reſtore them to their native Land; yet, that neither the Levitical Worſhip, nor any Part of its Ceremonies, ſhall ever be reſtored again, we have an expreſs Propheſy, even where this Reſtoration is promiſed, to convince us: [e] Turn, O back-ſliding Children, ſaith the Lord, for I am married unto you; and I will take you, one of a City, and two of a Family, and I will bring you to Zion; and I will give you Paſtors according to mine Heart, which ſhall feed you with Knowledge, and with Underſtanding; and it ſhall come to paſs, when ye ſhall be multiplied, and increaſed in the Land, all Nations ſhall be gathered to the Name of the Lord to Jeruſalem. In thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord, they ſhall ſay no more the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, neither ſhall it come to mind, neither ſhall they remember it, neither ſhall they viſit it, neither ſhall that be done any more: For in the Days of the Meſſiah, as [f] ſome of the ableſt Jewiſh Doctors affirm, all Sacrifice is to ceaſe, except Praiſe and Thankſgiving.

The Imperfection of the Law,

IT does not, indeed, become us to cenſure or diſparage any Thing, that had once the Appointment and Sanction of God; [g] but let any indifferent rational Perſon take the Precepts of the Goſpel, and lay them in the Balance with thoſe of the ceremonial Law, and, if he makes any Scruple of determining on which Side the Over-weight lies, we may have cauſe to ſuſpect him forſaken of that little Reaſon, which gave him the Name of Man. Let but the fifth Chapter of St Matthew be laid againſt the whole Book of Leviticus, and then ſee whether it does not contain Precepts more excellent in themſelves, more ſuitable to the divine, and more perfective of human Nature. The Pſalmiſt, indeed, runs an high Commendation on the Law, calling it [h] perfect, and pure, and undefiled, converting the Soul, and giving Wiſdom to the Simple: But then he inſinuates what Part of the Law it is he means, when, [i] in another Place, inſtead of outward Waſhings, and outward Sacrifices, he offers up his Petitions in theſe Words; Make me a clean Heart, O God, and renew a right Spirit within me; for thou deſireſt not Sacrifice, elſe would I give it thee; thy Sacrifice, O God, is a troubled Spirit, a broken and a contrite Heart thou wilt not deſpiſe.

ſupplied by the Goſpel.

IT muſt not be diſſembled indeed, that theſe poſitive Obſervances of the Jews were deſigned to recommend moral Virtues; that their Circumciſion repreſented inward

[c] R. Joſeph Albo confeſſes thus much, and produces ſeveral Inſtances to prove, that what is ſaid to be for ever, is to abide for ſome ſtated and fixed Time only. Thus, when it is ſaid of the Servant, that he ſhould ſerve his Maſter for ever, [Exod. xxi. 6.] the Targum confines it to the next Jubilee, becauſe the Year of Jubilee was the utmoſt Extent of that Service; and, in like Manner, when Hannah ſays of Samuel, that he ſhould appear before the Lord, and there abide for ever, [1 Sam. i. 22.] the utmoſt Extent could be no more, than that of his Life, or ſo long as he was fit to miniſter legally; whence it appears, that the eternal Obligation of theſe Laws cannot be proved from this Expreſſion. Kidder's Demonſtration.

[d] For theſe Laws, which are ſaid to be for ever, are ſaid to be ſo in their Generations, and in their Dwellings, which two Expreſſions reſtrain that indefinite Phraſe for ever, and confine it to the Jewiſh Country and Polity. Thus the Law, which forbad the eating of Fat, is called a perpetual Statute; but then it follows for your Generations, and through all your Dwellings, Lev. iii. 17. The eating of Fat, which was forbid, was the Fat of thoſe Beaſts, which were admitted as Sacrifices, Lev. vii. 23, 25. and when the Sacrifices ceaſed, which were confined to a certain Place, this Law ceaſed likewiſe. The Law of afflicting their Souls, on the Day of Expiation, is ſaid to be a Statute for ever, Lev. xvi. 31. but then it is confined by thoſe Expreſſions, in which it is ſaid to be a Statute to them throughout their Generations, and in all their Dwellings, Lev. xxiii. 31. The ſame Reſtrictions we find annexed to the Laws of the Sheaf of Firſt-Fruits, Lev. xxiii. 14. of the two Wave-Loaves, Lev. xxiii. 17, 21. of burning the Lamps, Lev. xxiv. 3. of blowing the Trumpets, Numb. x. 8. of the Meat and Drink Offerings, Numb. xv. 15. of the Service of the Levites, Numb. xviii. 23. of the Prieſthood of Aaron, Exod. xl. 15. and of the Prieſts abſtaining from Wine and ſtrong Drink, during the Time of their Miniſtration, Lev. x. 9, &c.

[e] Jer. iii. 14, &c.

[f] Vid. Raym. Mart. Pug. Fid. p. 3.

[g] Stillingfleet's Orig. Sacra.

[h] Pſal. xix. 7, 8.

[i] Pſal. li. 10, 16, 17.

ward Purity; their Sacrifices were Signs of Contrition; and their ſolemn Feaſts, Commemorations of the Divine Bounty; that ſeveral other of the Rites ſuggeſted, ſome [k] Juſtice and Equity, others, [l] Mercy and Humanity, and others again, Temperance and Chaſtity, &c. yet was the ſpiritual Meaning hereof ſo deeply laid, that, few having the Sagacity to find it out, moſt Men contented themſelves with the outward Performance. It was, however, a fit School-maſter, as the Apoſtle calls it, to bring us to Chriſt, that we might be juſtified by Faith, or by the Belief and Obedience of the Goſpel; but, after that Faith is come, we are no longer under a School-maſter. [m] Do we then make void the Law through Faith? God forbid; yea, we eſtabliſh the Law. [n] What was intrinſically Good in the Jewiſh Oeconomy, is preſerved entire in the Chriſtian; what was typical with them is accompliſhed with us; what was defective there is ſupplied here; and all this, in ſuch a Manner, as, we make no Doubt, was intended from the Beginning; it being reaſonable to ſuppoſe, [o] that, when that which was perfect was come, that which is in Part ſhould be done away. If then the Law be made void by ſuch a Faith, it is only done in the ſame Manner, as Promiſes are made void by being fulfilled; or as Images become uſeleſs, when their Originals are preſent, or as Rules, for educating Children, are laid aſide, when the Heir is of Age, and their Aim is anſwered.

HAVING thus ſhewn, from the Nature and firſt Inſtitution of it, that the changing the Commandment, contained in Ordinances, which were but a Shadow of good Things to come, can be no Imputation upon the Wiſdom of God, nor any Prejudice to our Saviour's Claim of being the true Meſſias; we ſhould now proceed,

That God might make Additions to the Law.

II. TO obſerve, what Improvements have been made to the moral Part of the Law; but this being a Subject, which, in a great Meaſure, has been handled elſewhere, we ſhall only remark at preſent, that the Jews, leaſt of all, have Reaſon to complain of Additions of any Kind; ſince, without the Direction of any Prophet, or the Teſtimony of any Miracle, they have made no ſmall Number to their Law, even to the utter Deſtruction of its true Intendment. For how many Traditions of their Elders do they obſerve, which were never commanded by Moſes, and of theſe, ſome flatly repugnant, not only to the Laws of God, [p] but the very Ties of Conſanguinity? What Command or Direction had they for changing the Poſture of eating the Paſſover, and putting their own Conſtruction upon ſo ſtrict and ſo particular an Injunction? By what Authority did they add a Poſt-cœnium to the Paſſover, and Baptiſm to Circumciſion, and ſeveral other Things, which are not contained in their Law? [q] What God has commanded, Man may not add to, nor diminiſh from; but may not God, who is certainly the Judge of his own Revelation, add or diminiſh what he pleaſeth? May not he, who, to [r] the Injunctions he gave Adam, added the ſeven Precepts of Noah; to theſe Precepts, added the Law of Moſes; and, to this Law, the Meſſages of his Prophets; may not he, I ſay, enlarge his Will, and, by ſlow Degrees, bring his Scholars, from the Rudiments of their Nonage, to the higher Knowledge of the Adult; and, thence [s] to a perfect Man, to the Meaſure of the Stature of the Fulneſs of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle expreſſes it?

LET the Jews then make never ſo loud Boaſts of the Perfection of their Law, yet the Man muſt be extremely prejudiced, who does not perceive its Defectiveneſs, in point of Aſſiſtance, in point of Pardon, and in point of Reward; all which our Saviour, in his Goſpel, has abundantly ſupplied.

As he has done,

1. WE allow, indeed, that the Aſſiſtance of God's bleſſed Spirit did, in all Ages, attend good Men in the Diſcharge of their Duty, and that, under the Diſpenſation of the Law, the cleanſing the Heart, and renewing the Spirit within them, was the Effect of a Divine Principle; but then we affirm, that this Gift of God was arbitrary, imparted to whom, and in what Meaſure he pleaſed; that it was not ſtipulated to Mankind; was no Condition of the Covenant then in being; what no Man was permitted to call upon God for as a Right; and what God, in thoſe Times, diſpenſed with a ſparing Hand; and therefore we ſay, that the Law was weak, and, though it impoſed the Duty, yet it did not give Life and Power ſufficient to obey.

2. WE

[k] Such are their Laws about Cities of Refuge, concerning Dominion, purchaſing Property, Treſpaſſes, &c.
[l] Such were the Laws about the forgotten Sheaf, [Deut. xiv. 28.] and the Corner of the Field, and the third Year's Tithing, and the Increaſe of the ſabbatical Year, Lev. xxv. 4, &c.
[m] Rom. iii. 31. [n] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [o] 1 Cor. xiii. 10.
[p] Matth. xv. 5, 6. [q] Deut. xii. 33. [r] Stillingfleet's Orig. Sacræ. [s] Eph. iv. 13.

2. WE allow again, that, upon the Account of their Divine Institution, the Sacrifices under the Law might be accepted for the Atonement of Guilt; but then we say, that there were some Sins, for which there was no Atonement allowed, and where the Offender, consequently, was left without Hope of Pardon. All those Sins indeed, which were committed with an high Hand, were of this Sort; and whatever Comfort the Sinner, that was surprized, or transgressed ignorantly, might conceive, he, who was guilty of Offences, for which there was no Provision made, was left disconsolate and despairing: And though, upon his Repentance, he might have Recourse to the Blood of that Lamb which was slain from the Foundation of the World; yet this was a Sacrifice, he was so little acquainted with, that he could not apply it to the Pacification of his Conscience.

3. ONCE more we allow, that the Hopes of eternal Life were found among some pious and devout Jews; and that, under temporal Blessings, especially a Land flowing with Milk and Honey, the Joys and Happiness of a celestial Country were insinuated; but then the earthly Canaan, as one expresses it, lay so fair and open to their Prospect, that it easily intercepted the View of the heavenly; and their Faith must remove, at least overlook that Mountain, before it could come to any Sight of the Horizon and extended Sky; and therefore we need less wonder, that, viewing the Reward at so tedious a Distance, they contented themselves with what lay before them, and were less sollicitous for the future.

THESE cannot but be reckoned Defects in the Law; but behold what glorious Things we are promised under the Gospel-State, in Point of Assistance! For * after those Days, saith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts, and they shall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, saying, know the Lord; for they shall all know me, from the least of them, unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord. [x] For I will pour Water upon him that is thirsty, and Floods upon the dry Ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy Seed, and my Blessing upon thine Offspring; and not only so, but [y] I will pour my Spirit upon all Flesh, and your Sons and your Daughters shall prophesy; your old Men shall dream Dreams, and your young Men shall see Visions. This was actually fulfilled after the Descent of the Holy Ghost, on the Day of Pentecost: And though these miraculous Gifts were not designed to continue in the Church any longer, than the Reason and Necessity of them continued; yet the ordinary Operations of God's Spirit, such as conduce to the Illumination of our Minds, and the Sanctification of our Hearts, are permanent, and will never fail. These Christ has made the Purchase of his Blood: These we have actually indented for in the Christian Covenant; and therefore we have a Right [z] to be led by the Spirit, to be kept by Grace unto Salvation, and, in Trials too difficult for our single Strength, may with Justice require Succours and Assistance; upon which Account it is, that the Apostle assures us, that, unless we are minded to have it so, Sin shall not have Dominion over us, because we are not under the Law, which required Obedience, but gave no Help to obey; but under Grace, where all Assistance imaginable, comporting with the Freedom of our Will, is continually afforded us. in Point of Assistance,

2. WHAT glorious Assurances does the Gospel give us of our Pardon, upon Terms, that are easy and reasonable, and by no Means to be rejected! For, be our Sins never so great, yet, upon our Repentance and sincere Obedience for the future, we are sure of God's Favour and Reconciliation; as sure, as [a] the Covenant of Grace, which Christ purchased by his Merits, sealed by his precious Blood, assured to us by his Resurrection, confirmed by Miracles, proclaimed by his Messengers, and signified to us by his Sacraments and holy Institutions, can possibly make us. St Paul, to shew the Extent of Evangelical Forgiveness, gives a dark Catalogue of the Sins of the Heathen World, that [b] they were Fornicators, Idolaters, Adulterers, effeminate, Abusers of themselves with Mankind, Thieves, covetous, Drunkards, Revilers, Extortioners, and such were some of you, says he; the Christian Doctrine found them such, but it did not leave them so; for ye are washed, for ye are sanctified, for ye are justified in the Name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God. For [c] here again is the Ground of our Comfort, that if any Man sin, (be his Sin, we see, never so great) we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous; and he is a Propitiation for our Sins, and not for ours only, but also for the Sins of the whole World. And, in Point of Pardon,

[a] Kidder's Demonstration. * Jer. xxxi. 33, 34. [x] Isa. xliv. 3. [y] Joel ii. 28.
[z] Rom. viii. 14. [a] Kidder, ibid. [b] 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10, &c. [c] 1 John ii. 1, 2.

and in Point of Reward.

3. WHAT glorious Encouragement have we in Point of Reward! When by our blessed Saviour, the Mediator of a Covenant [d] established on better Promises, God has [e] brought Life and Immortality to Light, which was but obscurely revealed before; and, [f] according to his abundant Mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively Hope, by the Resurrection of Christ from the Dead, to an Inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for us; enough to engage us to obey all the Precepts, which our Master has given us, and to reconcile us to all the Labour and Difficulty, which may at any Time attend our Performance of them. [g] For eternal Life imports more, than we can express or comprehend; Something more excellent, than what our Eye hath seen, our Ear hath heard, or our shallow Mind is able to conceive. Crowns and Sceptres, Feasts and Triumphs, worldly Success and Prosperity, are but little and faint Resemblances of this unspeakable and inconceivable Happiness, which is clearly revealed, faithfully promised, and expressed in Words of the highest Import, but in such a Manner, as speaks the Thing too big for the Expression, and too glorious for the Comprehension of Men, while they [h] dwell in Houses of Clay, whose Foundation is in the Dust. And so we proceed, Jesus proved to be the Messias from his Predictions.

III. To another Argument, proving our Saviour to be the Messias, and that is, the Truth of his Predictions concerning future Events. But herein we have so far prevented [i] ourselves already, that we need only observe, what is most suitable to our present Purpose, how punctually his Predictions concerning the Calamity and Desolation of the Jews were accomplished, even according to the Account which their own Historian has given us. Our Saviour prophesied that their Temple should be so totally destroyed, that [k] there should not be left one Stone upon another, which should not be thrown down: And [l] Josephus tells us, that though Titus endeavoured what he could to save that stately Building; though he gave the Officers in Charge that it should not be demolished, and, even when he saw the Fire begin to seize it, called and beckoned, and commanded the Soldiers to extinguish it; yet they, regardless of his Commands, went on furiously, and animated one another in the Destruction of it; till it was not only laid level with the Ground, but (to have the Prophesy verified in the Letter) the very Foundations of it were plowed up: [m] God himself, as Josephus observes, assisting with the Romans to the Ruin of it, that the Words of Christ might not fail of their Accomplishment, [n] he will send forth his Armies, and destroy those Murtherers, and burn up their City.

OUR Saviour prophesied, with the same Exactness and Particularity, that their Place and City should be ruined and destroyed; that [o] their Enemies should cast a Trench about it, and compass it round, and keep it in on every Side; that they should lay it even with the Ground, and not leave in it one Stone above another: And [p] Josephus tells us, that Titus encouraged his Soldiers so, that, in three Days Time, they built a Wall of thirty-nine Furlongs, with thirteen Castles on it, round the City; which hindered those within from making their Escape: And that, when he made the Assault, he gave the Soldiers Orders to dig up the City, and level it entirely; which they executed so effectually, that those who came afterward to see it, were of Opinion that it would never be built again.

OUR Saviour prophesied, that Jerusalem should be trodden down, i. e. possessed and inhabited by the Gentiles: And [q] Josephus tells us, that Titus commanded the whole Land of Judea to be sold to any Heathen Nation, that would buy it; and Hadrian, about sixty-three Years after, as [r] Eusebius tells us, made a Law, that no Jew should come into the Regions round about Jerusalem; so that the Jews being banished thence, and other Nations flocking in, it became perfectly a City and Colony of the Romans, and, in Honour of the Emperor, was named Ælia. Our Saviour prophesied, that the Calamities of the Jews, upon this Occasion, should be so very grievous, as to admit of no Parallel; that there [s] should be great Tribulation, such as never happened from the Beginning of the World to that Time; that they [t] should be led away Captives into all Nations; and that [u] wherever the Carcase was, i. e. the Nation of the [d] Heb. viii. 6. [e] 2 Tim. i. 10. [f] 1 Pet. i. 3, 4. [g] Kidder's Demonstration.

[h] Job iv. 19. [i] Vid. Page 33. [k] Matth. xxiv. 2. [l] De Bello Jud. Lib. VII.
[m] The Temple was destroyed on the same Month, and the same Day of the Month, on which it formerly was burnt by Nebuzaradan, the Captain of the King of Babylon, which is therefore, by Maimonides, stiled the fatal Day of Vengeance, and by Josephus [L. vii. c. 26.] is reckoned a Matter of just Admiration, and a plain Indication, that this so happened by a Divine Appointment. Whitby's Gen. Pref. [n] Matth. xxii. 7.
[o] Luke xix. 43, 44. [p] De Bell. Jud. L. VII. [q] Ibid. c. xxvii. [r] Hist. Eccles. L. XXI. c. vi. L. IV. c. vi.
[s] Matth. xxiv. 21. [t] Luke xxi. 24. [u] Matth. xxiv. 28.

the Jews, rejected now, and loathed by God, as a dead Carcaſe, there ſhould the Eagles, i. e. the Roman Army, be gathered together, to prey upon them: And Joſephus tells us, that, as never any People was more wicked, ſo never did a Nation ſuffer as they did; for he informs us, * that eleven hundred thouſand periſhed in the Siege; that ninety-ſeven thouſand were made Captives; and that, when there was no more left in Judea, many of them were deſtroyed at Alexandria, at Cyrene, and other Cities of Egypt, and, to the Number of ſixty thouſand, in all the Cities of Syria: Inſomuch [z] that all the Miſeries, which all Mankind have ſuffered from the Beginning of the World, ſays he, are not to be compared with what the Jewiſh Nation at that Time endured.

OUR Saviour propheſied, what were to be the Forerunners of this Deſtruction; that [a] there ſhould be great Earthquakes in divers Places, and in Heaven great Signs, and fearful Sights: And Joſephus tells us, [b] that in Judea and Jeruſalem there happened an immenſe Tempeſt, and vehement Winds, with Rain, and frequent Lightning, and dreadful Thundering, and extreme Roarings of the quaking Earth, which portended no ſmall Miſchiefs; that [c] a Sword ſeemed to hang over the City, and a Comet, with its fiery Tail, pointed down upon it for a whole Year; and that, frequently before the Sun ſet, [d] there were ſeen in the Clouds [e] Armies in Battle-Array, and Chariots, as it were, compaſſing the Country, and inveſting Cities: A Thing ſo ſtrange, ſaith he, that it would paſs for a Fable, were there not ſtill Men living to atteſt it. Our Saviour propheſied, that the Period of Time, when all theſe Things ſhould come to paſs, would be [f] within the Compaſs of the Generation, which was then living: He declared likewiſe the Reaſon, for which they ſhould befal Jeruſalem, even [g] becauſe ſhe knew not the Time of her Viſitation, and the Things which belonged to her Peace; but promiſed, withal, ſuch effectual Care ſhould be taken, that, amidſt this general Ruin, [h] his faithful Servants ſhould be ſaved, and [i] not one Hair of their Heads periſh. And Joſephus tells us, that, about forty Years after Chriſt's Death, all this Deſolation came upon them; but is very full of this Obſervation, [k] that, when Ceſtius beſieged them at firſt, he might have taken the City, and put an End to the War; but that God, being angry with them for their Wickedneſs, reſerved them for a worſe Deſtruction, [l] becauſe they would give no Credit to the Signs, which manifeſtly portended their Deſolation. Ceſtius indeed, when he came to Jeruſalem, ſoon took the lower City, and might have taken the upper too; but, all on a ſudden, he quits the Siege without any viſible Cauſe, and ſo gave the Chriſtians an Opportunity to eſcape; whereupon many fled out of the City, [m] ſays the Hiſtorian, as from a ſinking Ship, into the Region of Peræa, a deſart and mountainous Country, which lying beyond Jordan, and under the Government of King Agrippa, was at that Time exempted from War.

ONCE more: Our Saviour propheſied, [n] that falſe Prophets ſhould ariſe; that they ſhould ſhew great Signs and Wonders; [o] deceive many, and [p] lead their Followers into the Wilderneſs; but, notwithſtanding this, [q] that the Goſpel of his Kingdom ſhould be firſt preached unto all the World, i. e. throughout the Roman Empire, for a Witneſs to all Nations, and then ſhould the End come. And ſo Joſephus tells us, that, about this Time, [r] an Egyptian, a falſe Prophet and Magician, got together about thirty thouſand of the Jews; that [s] one Theudas, another Magician, who declared himſelf a Prophet, deceived many; and that many more Impoſtors and Magicians perſuaded [t] the People to follow them into the Wilderneſs, where they promiſed to ſhew them many Signs and Wonders done by God. By this Time however, the Faith of the Church of Rome (as St Paul [u] tells them) was ſpoken of throughout the whole World, and * the Truth of the Goſpel (as he acquaints the Coloſſians) was come, not to them only, but to all the World, and preached to every Creature: For the Word of God, as [x] Euſebius relates, ſhone ſuddenly upon the World, as a Ray of the Sun, and was, on that Account, ſtiled, by the very Heathens, the prevailing Doctrine. Conſidering then the particular Manner in which our Saviour predicted theſe

* Lib. vii. c. xlv.
[x] Ibid. c. xliv.
[y] Ibid. c. xxxvi.
[z] Proleg. ad Bell. Jud.
[a] Luke xxi. 11.
[b] Lib. iv. c. xvii.
[c] Lib. vii. c. xxxi.
[d] Ibid.
[e] Tacitus, a Roman Hiſtorian of that Age, has in a manner given us the ſame Account: Evenerant prodigia, viſæ per cœlum currere acies, rutilantia arma, & ſubito nubium igne collucere templum, expâſſe repentè delubri fores, & audita major humana vox, excedere Deos, & ſimul ingens motus excedentium. Hiſt L. V.
[f] Matth. xxiv. 34.
[g] Luke xix. 42, 44.
[h] Matth. xxiv. 13.
[i] Luke xxi. 18.
[k] De Bell. Jud. L. II.
[l] L. VII. c. xxx.
[m] L. II. c. xxxix.
[n] Matth. xxiv. 24.
[o] Ibid. ver. 5.
[p] Ibid. ver. 26.
[q] Ibid. ver. 14.
[r] Antiq. L. XX. c. vi.
[s] Ibid. c. ii.
[t] De Bello Jud. L. II. c. xxiii.
[u] Rom. i. 8.
* Col. i. 23.
[x] Hiſt. Eccleſ. L. II. c. iii.

and in Point of Reward.

3. WHAT glorious Encouragement have we in Point of Reward? When by our bleſſed Saviour, the Mediator of a Covenant [a] eſtabliſhed on better Promiſes, God has [c] brought Life and Immortality to Light, which was but obſcurely revealed before; and, [f] according to his abundant Mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively Hope, by the Reſurrection of Chriſt from the Dead, to an Inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reſerved in Heaven for us; enough to engage us to obey all the Precepts, which our Maſter has given us, and to reconcile us to all the Labour and Difficulty, which may at any Time attend our Performance of them. [g] For eternal Life imports more, than we can expreſs or comprehend; Something more excellent, than what our Eye hath ſeen, our Ear hath heard, or our ſhallow Mind is able to conceive. Crowns and Sceptres, Feaſts and Triumphs, worldly Succeſs and Proſperity, are but little and faint Reſemblances of this unſpeakable and inconceivable Happineſs, which is clearly revealed, faithfully promiſed, and expreſſed in Words of the higheſt Import, but in ſuch a Manner, as ſpeaks the Thing too big for the Expreſſion, and too glorious for the Comprehenſion of Men, while they [h] dwell in Houſes of Clay, whoſe Foundation is in the Duſt. And ſo we proceed, Jeſus proved to be the Meſſias from his Predictions.

III. TO another Argument, proving our Saviour to be the Meſſias, and that is, the Truth of his Predictions concerning future Events. But herein we have ſo far prevented [i] ourſelves already, that we need only obſerve, what is moſt ſuitable to our preſent Purpoſe, how punctually his Predictions concerning the Calamity and Deſolation of the Jews were accompliſhed, even according to the Account which their own Hiſtorian has given us. Our Saviour propheſied that their Temple ſhould be ſo totally deſtroyed, that [k] there ſhould not be left one Stone upon another, which ſhould not be thrown down: And [l] Joſephus tells us, that though Titus endeavoured what he could to ſave that ſtately Building; though he gave the Officers in Charge that it ſhould not be demoliſhed, and, even when he ſaw the Fire begin to ſeize it, called and beckoned, and commanded the Soldiers to extinguiſh it; yet they, regardleſs of his Commands, went on furiouſly, and animated one another in the Deſtruction of it; till it was not only laid level with the Ground, but (to have the Propheſy verified in the Letter) the very Foundations of it were plowed up: [m] God himſelf, as Joſephus obſerves, aſſiſting with the Romans to the Ruin of it, that the Words of Chriſt might not fail of their Accompliſhment, [n] he will ſend forth his Armies, and deſtroy thoſe Murtherers, and burn up their City.

OUR Saviour propheſied, with the ſame Exactneſs and Particularity, that their Place and City ſhould be ruined and deſtroyed; that [o] their Enemies ſhould caſt a Trench about it, and compaſs it round, and keep it in on every Side; that they ſhould lay it even with the Ground, and not leave in it one Stone above another: And [p] Joſephus tells us, that Titus encouraged his Soldiers ſo, that, in three Days Time, they built a Wall of thirty-nine Furlongs, with thirteen Caſtles on it, round the City; which hindered thoſe within from making their Eſcape: And that, when he made the Aſſault, he gave the Soldiers Orders to dig up the City, and level it entirely; which they executed ſo effectually, that thoſe who came afterward to ſee it, were of Opinion that it would never be built again.

OUR Saviour propheſied, that Jeruſalem ſhould be trodden down, i. e. poſſeſſed and inhabited by the Gentiles: And [q] Joſephus tells us, that Titus commanded the whole Land of Judea to be ſold to any Heathen Nation, that would buy it; and Hadrian, about ſixty-three Years after, as [r] Euſebius tells us, made a Law, that no Jew ſhould come into the Regions round about Jeruſalem; ſo that the Jews being baniſhed thence, and other Nations flocking in, it became perfectly a City and Colony of the Romans, and, in Honour of the Emperor, was named Ælia. Our Saviour propheſied, that the Calamities of the Jews, upon this Occaſion, ſhould be ſo very grievous, as to admit of no Parallel; that there [s] ſhould be great Tribulation, ſuch as never happened from the Beginning of the World to that Time; that they [t] ſhould be led away Captives into all Nations; and that [u] wherever the Carcaſe was, i. e. the Nation of the

[a] Heb. viii. 6. [c] 2 Tim. i. 10. [f] 1 Pet. i. 3, 4. [g] Kidder's Demonſtration.
[h] Job iv. 19. [i] Vid. Page 33. [k] Matth. xxiv. 2. [l] De Bello Jud. Lib. VII.
[m] The Temple was deſtroyed on the ſame Month, and the ſame Day of the Month, on which it formerly was burnt by Nebuzaradan, the Captain of the King of Babylon, which is therefore, by Maimonides, ſtiled the fatal Day of Vengeance, and by Joſephus [L. vii. c. 26.] is reckoned a Matter of juſt Admiration, and a plain Indication, that this ſo happened by a Divine Appointment. Whitby's Gen. Pref. [n] Matth. xxii. 7.
[o] Luke xix. 43, 44. [p] De Bell. Jud. L. VII. [q] Ibid. c. xxvii. [r] Hiſt. Eccleſ. L. XXI. c. vi. L. IV. c. vi. [s] Matth. xxiv. 21. [t] Luke xxi. 24. [u] Matth. xxiv. 28.

the Jews, rejected now, and loathed by God, as a dead Carcaſe, there ſhould the Eagles, i. e. the Roman Army, be gathered together, to prey upon them: And Joſephus tells us, that, as never any People was more wicked, ſo never did a Nation ſuffer as they did; for he informs us, * that eleven hundred thouſand periſhed in the Siege; that [y] ninety-ſeven thouſand were made Captives; and that, when there was no more left in Judea, [z] many of them were deſtroyed at Alexandria, at Cyrene, and other Cities of Egypt, and, to the Number of ſixty thouſand, in all the Cities of Syria: Inſomuch [a] that all the Miſeries, which all Mankind have ſuffered from the Beginning of the World, ſays he, are not to be compared with what the Jewiſh Nation at that Time endured.

OUR Saviour propheſied, what were to be the Forerunners of this Deſtruction; that [a] there ſhould be great Earthquakes in divers Places, and in Heaven great Signs, and fearful Sights: And Joſephus tells us, [b] that in Judea and Jeruſalem there happened an immenſe Tempeſt, and vehement Winds, with Rain, and frequent Lightning, and dreadful Thundering, and extreme Roarings of the quaking Earth, which portended no ſmall Miſchiefs; that [c] a Sword ſeemed to hang over the City, and a Comet, with its fiery Tail, pointed down upon it for a whole Year; and that, frequently before the Sun ſet, [d] there were ſeen in the Clouds [e] Armies in Battle-Array, and Chariots, as it were, compaſſing the Country, and inveſting Cities: A Thing ſo ſtrange, ſaith he, that it would paſs for a Fable, were there not ſtill Men living to atteſt it. Our Saviour propheſied, that the Period of Time, when all theſe Things ſhould come to paſs, would be [f] within the Compaſs of the Generation, which was then living: He declared likewiſe the Reaſon, for which they ſhould befal Jeruſalem, even [g] becauſe ſhe knew not the Time of her Viſitation, and the Things which belonged to her Peace; but promiſed, withal, ſuch effectual Care ſhould be taken, that, amidſt this general Ruin, [h] his faithful Servants ſhould be ſaved, and [i] not one Hair of their Heads periſh. And Joſephus tells us, that, about forty Years after Chriſt's Death, all this Deſolation came upon them; but is very full of this Obſervation, [k] that, when Ceſtius beſieged them at firſt, he might have taken the City, and put an End to the War; but that God, being angry with them for their Wickedneſs, reſerved them for a worſe Deſtruction, [l] becauſe they would give no Credit to the Signs, which manifeſtly portended their Deſolation. Ceſtius indeed, when he came to Jeruſalem, ſoon took the lower City, and might have taken the upper too; but, all on a ſudden, he quits the Siege without any viſible Cauſe, and ſo gave the Chriſtians an Opportunity to eſcape; whereupon many fled out of the City, [m] ſays the Hiſtorian, as from a ſinking Ship, into the Region of Peræa, a deſart and mountainous Country, which lying beyond Jordan, and under the Government of King Agrippa, was at that Time exempted from War.

ONCE more: Our Saviour propheſied, [n] that falſe Prophets ſhould ariſe; that they ſhould ſhew great Signs and Wonders; [o] deceive many, and [p] lead their Followers into the Wilderneſs; but, notwithſtanding this, [q] that the Goſpel of his Kingdom ſhould be firſt preached unto all the World, i. e. throughout the Roman Empire, for a Witneſs to all Nations, and then ſhould the End come. And ſo Joſephus tells us, that, about this Time, [r] an Egyptian, a falſe Prophet and Magician, got together about thirty thouſand of the Jews; that [s] one Theudas, another Magician, who declared himſelf a Prophet, deceived many; and that many more Impoſtors and Magicians perſuaded [t] the People to follow them into the Wilderneſs, where they promiſed to ſhew them many Signs and Wonders done by God. By this Time however, the Faith of the Church of Rome (as St Paul [u] tells them) was ſpoken of throughout the whole World, and * the Truth of the Goſpel (as he acquaints the Coloſſians) was come, not to them only, but to all the World, and preached to every Creature: For the Word of God, as [x] Euſebius relates, ſhone ſuddenly upon the World, as a Ray of the Sun, and was, on that Account, ſtiled, by the very Heathens, the prevailing Doctrine. Conſidering then the particular Manner in which our Saviour predicted theſe

* Lib. vii. c. xlv.
[a] Luke xxi. 11.
[b] Lib. iv. c. xvii.
[c] Tacitus, a Roman Hiſtorian of that Age, has in a manner given us the ſame Account: Evenerant prodigia, viſæ per cœlum currere acies, rutilantia arma, & ſubito nubium igne collucere templum, expâſſe repentè delubri fores, & audita major humana vox, excedere Deos, & ſimul ingens motus excedentium. Hiſt L. V.
[d] Ibid.
[e] Lib. vii. c. xxxi.
[f] Matth. xxiv. 34.
[g] Luke xix. 42, 44.
[h] Matth. xxiv. 13.
[i] Luke xxi. 18.
[k] De Bell. Jud. L. II.
[l] L. VII. c. xxx.
[m] L. II. c. xxxix.
[n] Matth. xxiv. 24.
[o] Ibid. ver. 5.
[p] Ibid. ver. 26.
[q] Ibid. ver. 14.
[r] Antiq. L. XX. c. vi.
[s] Ibid. c. ii.
[t] De Bello Jud. L. II. c. xxiii.
[u] Rom. i. 8.
[x] Hiſt. Eccleſ. L. II. c. iii.
[y] Ibid. c. xxxvi.
[z] Proleg. ad Bell. Jud.
[x] Ibid. c. xliv.
• Col. i. 23.

theſe Events, and the punctual Manner, even according to the Teſtimony of an Adverſary, in which they came to paſs, we cannot in Juſtice but conclude, that he was the great Prophet ſent from God; ſince [y] theſe Events were ſo perfectly contingent, that no human Sagacity could poſſibly foreſee them, and, conſequently, ſuch Diſcoveries, as could come from none but him, at whoſe Diſpoſal all Things lie, and with whoſe comprehenſive Knowledge the moſt diſtant of them are always preſent.

Jeſus proved to be the Meſſias, from the ſpeedy Propagation of his Religion.

IV. ONE Argument more, proving our Saviour to be the true Meſſias, is, the miraculous and ſpeedy Propagation of his Goſpel. But herein again we have ſo far [z] prevented ourſelves, that we need only obſerve farther, that no other Religion whatever had ſo large an Increaſe, with ſo little human Aid and Aſſiſtance, or prevailed in ſuch a Manner, as to make a Recourſe to ſupernatural Influences neceſſary, in order to explain the Succeſs of it.

The Mahometan Religion.

[a] OF all falſe Religions, the Mahometan came neareſt to the Chriſtian in the ſwift Manner of its Propagation; for in a ſmall Time it over-ran a great Part of the Eaſtern World: But this Succeſs, how extraordinary ſoever, had nothing miraculous in it; nothing but what may eaſily be accounted for, by reflecting on the Circumſtances, which attended the Propagation of that Impoſture; ſuch as the looſe Manners and lamentable Diviſions of the Chriſtians of that Time; the groſs Ignorance, which then abounded every-where; the Suitableneſs of Mahomet's Doctrine to the ſenſual Inclinations of Men, eſpecially of thoſe Eaſtern People, to whom it was firſt addreſſed; and the Method he uſed, of procuring Submiſſion to it by the Dint of the Sword, not by the Power of Perſuaſion and Argument. A Religion, that gave a full Indulgence to the Ambition, the Luſts, and Cruelty of Mankind, could not fail of gaining Proſelytes, and when a warlike and ſavage Race of Men, united by the Hopes of Rapine and Spoil, ſet upon a diſſolute, divided, and weakened Enemy, as the Chriſtians then were, the Succeſs of ſuch an Enterprize was ſure and eaſy; and on the Succeſs of Mahomet's Arms the Succeſs of his Religion did depend. When, by an uninterrupted Courſe of Victories, he had laid the Foundation of the Saracen Empire, it was no Wonder, that a new Empire ſhould be able to introduce a new Religion: The Increaſe of the one was naturally followed by a proportionable Enlargement of the other: But this, as I ſaid, had nothing miraculous in it; nothing that rivalled, or any Ways reſembled the Succeſs of the Goſpel, [b] that Stone, which was cut out of the Mountain without Hands, i. e. without viſible Cauſes, or Inſtruments proportioned to ſuch a Work, and brake in Pieces all other Kingdoms, and, at laſt, became itſelf a great Mountain, and filled the whole Earth.

The Jewiſh.

THE Jewiſh Religion indeed was inſtituted by God; but it will will admit of no Compariſon with the Chriſtian, either as to the Manner of its firſt Reception, or the Addition of Converts, which were afterwards made to it. It was given to the Iſraelites by Moſes, in the Wilderneſs, whither he led them, out of the Houſe of Bondage, in their Way to a Land flowing with Milk and Honey. Now, ſetting aſide the Conſideration of Miracles, (by which the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Diſpenſations were alike confirmed) the Reception of the Law by the Iſraelites, from ſuch a Deliverer, under whoſe Conduct and Command they then entirely were, and in a Place, where they had no Communication with the reſt of the World, had nothing in it near ſo wonderful, as the firſt Plantation of the Chriſtian Church, by Means of the Apoſtles Preaching. Nor was the Acceſſion of the Gentile Converts, after the Tabernacle was ſet up at Shiloh, ſo conſiderable, as to give the Religion of the Jews any Title or Pretenſion to a Divine Original on that Account.

THE narrow Limits of the Jewiſh Church are thus, under the Emblem of a tranſplanted Vine, aptly repreſented by the Pſalmiſt: [c] Thou haſt brought, ſays he, a Vine out of Egypt, thou haſt caſt out the Heathen, and planted it; thou preparedſt Room for it, and didſt cauſe it to take Root, and it filled the Land, viz. the Land of Jewry, wherein it was ſet. The Hills, i. e. the hilly Country of Judah, the fartheſt Part of Paleſtine ſouthward, were covered with the Shadow of it, and the Boughs thereof were like the Cedars of God, on Mount Lebanon, in the Extremity of its Northern Borders: She ſent out her Boughs into the Sea, the Mediterranean Sea, her utmoſt Limit to the Weſt, and her Branches to the River, even as far Eaſtward as the River Euphrates. Thus was the Jewiſh Church, even in its largeſt and moſt flouriſhing flouriſhing Condition, ſhut up within the Bounds of Canaan, and the Countries adjacent: Whereas [d] that Muſtard-Seed, the Kingdom of Chriſt, [e] though it were leſs than all the Seeds, that be in the Earth, yet, when it was ſown, it grew up, and became greater than all Herbs, and ſhot out Branches, and the Fowls of the Air lodged in the Branches of it; Men of all Countries and all Religions under Heaven flocked to it for Shade and Shelter.

[y] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [z] Vid. Page 36. [a] Biſhop Atterbury's Sermons, Vol. I.
[b] Dan. ii. 34, 35. [c] Pſal. lxxx. 8, &c.

THE Truth is, the Moſaick Law was intended for a ſingle People only, who were to be ſhut in, from the reſt of the World, by a Fence of legal Rites and typical Ceremonies, and by that Means, to remain ſeparate and unmixed, till the great Antitype, the Meſſias, ſhould appear, and break down this Fence, and lay open this Incloſure, publiſhing a Religion of a more extenſive Nature and Uſe, which all Mankind ſhould be invited to profeſs, and in which all ſhould have an equal Intereſt. [f] Whereunto therefore ſhall we liken the Kingdom of God, and its marvellous Increaſe? Or with what Compariſon ſhall we compare it? There is indeed ſome faint Reſemblance of it in the prodigious Fecundity of Seeds, which accordingly our Saviour makes uſe of more than once to illuſtrate it; but there is nothing parallel to it, in the Hiſtory of all the Religions, which have obtained among Men, from the Beginning of the World to this Day.

An Objection, That the Propagation of the Goſpel might come about by natural Means.

" BUT though the Propagation of the Goſpel was wonderful, yet why ſhould it be " accounted miraculous? Wonderful it was indeed, as every unuſual Thing is to " thoſe, who do not know or conſider the Cauſes of it; But to a Man, who dares " to go out of the common Road, and think for himſelf, it will appear that there " was, at that Time, a Set of natural Cauſes on Foot, ſufficient to account for this " Effect, without any Recourſe to a Divine and Supernatural Agent. The Apoſtles " indeed were twelve plain illiterate Men, who had neither Force nor Skill of themſelves, to bring about ſuch an Event; But their natural Inability was ſupplied " by a favourable Juncture; by an happy Coincidence of ſuch conſpiring Cauſes, " and accidental Advantages, as mightily helped on the Work. [g] The Sufferings " of thoſe poor bigotted Creatures, the Martyrs, made a mighty Impreſſion upon " the common People, who never fail to take the Side of the oppreſſed, and to " think the Cauſe good, be it what it will, for which they ſee People badly treated; " the Purity of the Chriſtian Morals was a great Inducement to Men of Probity " and Virtue; the Analogy of ſome of its myſtical Truths to the Doctrines of Plato, " then in Vogue, was a Bait to Men of Philoſophy and Learning; the Diſtribution " of Goods, which was cuſtomary among the firſt Chriſtians, was a ſtrong Temptation to the meaner Sort; and the Oracles, at this Time happening to ceaſe, and " the Jewiſh State to be diſſolved, turned to the Advantage of the Chriſtian Religion, " and contributed not a little to the Increaſe of its Numbers. Mean while, the Rulers of the World overlooked and neglected to cruſh a Doctrine, ſo harmleſs in itſelf, " and ſo unlikely to ſucceed on the Account of its Abettors, till, by their Connivance, " it was at laſt univerſally received by the vulgar Sort, and the Number of its Votaries was grown ſo formidable, that even Princes themſelves were forced, for their " own Eaſe and Intereſt, to come into it and profeſs it."

Anſwered particularly.

IT cannot be denied indeed, but that every one of theſe Particulars might, in a natural Way, contribute ſomewhat, either to the planting or ſpreading of the Goſpel; but that all of them together could not do the thouſandth Part of the Work, that is here allotted them, will beſt appear by examining them ſeverally. The Blood of the Martyrs was indeed, what it hath oft been ſtiled, the Seed of the Church; but this could not be at the Time when thoſe Martyrs ſuffered, ſince nothing could have a greater Tendency to frighten Men from profeſſing the Goſpel, than to find that they ſhould be perſecuted, and muſt die for it. This only then can be the Meaning of the Saying, that the Sufferings and Torments, which the firſt Chriſtians underwent ſo willingly and bravely, were a ſtrong Evidence of the Truth of that Doctrine, which could inſpire its Followers with ſo much Courage and Conſtancy, and diſpoſed Men mightily to embrace the Religion of Chriſt afterwards, in better and more quiet Times: But before the Time, that this Motive could have any Influence, the Goſpel had already ſpread, and ſettled itſelf every-where. The Purity of the [d] Luke xiii. 19. and Mark iv. 31, 32.

[e] The Jews give a wonderful Account of the Growth and Increaſe of this Seed, viz. that there was a Stalk of Muſtard-Seed in Sichem, from which ſprang out three Boughs, one of which being broke off, covered the Tent of a Potter, and produced three Cabs (every Cab about three Pints and an half) of Muſtard-Seed. Whitby, on Matth. xiii. 32. [f] Luke xiii. 18. [g] Biſhop Atterbury's Sermons, Vol. I.

Chriſtian Morals, and the anſwerable Lives of Chriſtian Converts, did indeed very naturally lead Men to admire and value the Doctrine of Chriſt, but by no Means to come under its Yoke: For though moſt Men have an Eſteem for ſtrict Rules and ſtrict Livers, yet few care to practiſe the one, or imitate the other; and therefore a Religion, which required of all its Proſelytes to renounce their deareſt Paſſions and Appetites, was, upon this Account, more likely to deter, than allure Men to the Profeſſion of it: And, in like Manner, the Analogy of ſome of its myſtical Truths to the Doctrine of Plato, as it was an Argument calculated to touch but few, only the Philoſophers of the Academic School; ſo it ſeems improbable, that it ever ſhould have Weight enough to out-balance the Scorn and Contempt, with which they treated the Chriſtian Religion, for its unphiloſophical Way of propounding Truths, without Demonſtration; and the Promulgers of it, for their apparent Ignorance and Want of Education: And though the charitable Diſtribution of Goods, or having all Things in common among the primitive Chriſtians, may be thought a Motive ſomewhat adapted to the meaner Sort; yet even this could be of no great Influence, ſince there was Something in the Chriſtian Religion of far more Force to affright, than this to engage them, viz. the ſtrict Rules of Honeſty and Temperance, according to which they were bound to live; and the great Calamities and Perſecutions, they were ſure to undergo.

WE allow indeed, that had the Ceſſation of Oracles been imputed to its right Cauſe, and known to be the Effect of the Promulgation of the Goſpel; this would have been of Uſe towards bringing the Heathen World to the Acknowledgment of Chriſt; but this Cauſe, at that Time, was not conſidered, as is evident from that celebrated Diſcourſe in Plutarch concerning this very Subject; where, among many Reaſons for that Ceſſation, he never once mentions that of Chriſt's Coming: And though the Deſtruction of the Jewiſh State brought in ſome Converts to Chriſtianity, yet this happened late, forty Years after our Saviour's Death; and the Advantage which his Cauſe gained by the Compliance of ſome few was more than out-done by the Harm, occaſioned by the Obſtinacy of others, who, not content to reject his Religion themſelves, made it their Buſineſs to expoſe and ridicule it among the Heathens, in all the Countries, into which they were driven.

[h] WELL then, the Chriſtian Religion, from ſmall and weak Beginnings, ſpread itſelf far and wide, after a ſudden and ſtrange Manner; and this it did, contrary to all the Rules of Succeſs, which all other riſing Opinions ever ſet up with. It was marked out for Deſtruction in its Infancy, and by the early Perſecutions of Nero, we may learn, that the Powers of this World did not overlook it, but were eagerly bent upon its Extirpation: It had none of thoſe Advantages, which recommend every new Sect, that ſtands and prevails; and as for all other leſſer Helps and Aſſiſtances towards its Increaſe, which the Wit of Man can aſſign, they are apparently too weak to ſuſtain the Weight that is laid upon them. It remains therefore, that this wonderous Effect ſprang undoubtedly from the immediate Influence of God, ſtirring up the Minds of Men to attend to, and diſpoſing their Hearts to embrace the Truth of the Goſpel; actuating, after an extraordinary Manner, the Induſtry, and bleſſing the Endeavours of the Apoſtles; and, in ſhort, accompanying all they ſaid and did with mighty Signs and Wonders, with the Demonſtration of the Spirit and of Power.

Why Learning and the ſecular Power were not employed in the Propagation of the Goſpel.

AND hence probably we may perceive the Reaſon, why the Providence of God did not ſuffer human Learning, or the Civil Power to come in to the Support of Chriſtianity, the one not till at leaſt an hundred, and the other not till three hundred Years after Chriſt, viz. that the Eſtabliſhment of our Faith might appear manifeſtly to be the immediate Work of Heaven, and not owing to human Means, or any Set of natural Cauſes. The Apoſtles themſelves confeſs, and glory in confeſſing, that as they preach the Doctrine of Chriſt, in the moſt ſimple and artleſs Manner, not with Excellency of Speech, or the enticing Words of Man's Wiſdom; ſo the firſt Converts, whom their Labours brought over to the Faith, were generally mean Perſons, of no acquired Knowledge, no Rank, no Education. Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory tells us, that, for near three hundred Years after Chriſt, no Roman Emperor embraced the Faith, though there were ſeveral of them Men of great moral Virtues, and not far from the Knowledge of God, as to their perſonal Qualifications and Characters; and yet

[h] Biſhop Atterbury's Sermons, Vol. I.

yet it pleased the Divine Providence, that even these good Emperors, instead of embracing and protecting the Faith, should discourage and persecute it, that the Kingdom of Christ, which was not of this World, might not be beholden to any of the Kingdoms of this World for its Establishment. [i] For you see your Calling, says St Paul, how that not many Wise Men after the Flesh, not many Mighty, not many Noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish Things of the World to confound the wise, and the weak Things of the World to confound the mighty, and base Things of the World, and Things that are despised, hath he chosen, yea, and the Things which are not, such is the lessening Phrase of the Apostle, to bring to nought Things that are, that no Flesh might glory in his Presence, i. e. that he might have no Rivals, no Sharers in the Glory of this Event. For though the Apostles, to whom St Paul alludes, were destitute of every Accomplishment, that might recommend them to the World; [k] yet such was the Power of God working in them, that the most celebrated Philosophers, and the most eloquent Orators, were not, all of them together, so persuasive, as one of the least of these. They enlightened Men's Understandings; convinced their Judgments; baffled whole Synagogues; struck an Awe into Courts of Judicature; confounded Gainsayers; charmed Enemies; converted Kingdoms; subdued and reformed a corrupted World; and were the only Persons that ever triumphed over the Disadvantages of long-rooted Prepossessions, implacable Malice, and general Contempt. In Despite of all these, and without any artful Insinuations, their Authority and commanding Influence was such, that their Followers were content, not only to believe, but to sacrifice their Estates, their Reputation, their Liberty, their Lives, and to stake down their Souls, their All, upon the Credit of these new Teachers, and in Confidence, that the Jesus, whom they preached to them, was the Prince of Life, and the Author of eternal Salvation to those, that laid hold on him.

The Sum of the whole Argument.

To sum up the Evidence, then, of this whole Argument. If God did all along promise, and promise, in an absolute and unconditional Manner, that, in the Fulness of Time, he would send a Person, of peculiar Eminence, called the Messias, to redeem lost Mankind from the Captivity of Sin and Satan; if, at the Time, when Jesus of Nazareth (whom we Christians account the Messias) came into the World, there was an universal Expectation, both among Jews and Gentiles, of this great Person, to make his Appearance; if, according to some famous Prophesies, which limit his Coming to such a certain Period, this Saviour of the World is, in all Probability, come, because this Period is undoubtedly past, and no Reason can be assigned for his longer Delay; and if all the Prophesies, which distinguished the Messias, in all the Circumstances of his Life, and Sufferings, and Exaltation, according to their true Sense and Interpretation, do fairly meet, and are fully comprehended in our Jesus; if the Miracles, which he wrought, are so great in their Nature; the Prophesies, which he told, so certain in their Event; and the Doctrine, which he taught, so wonderful in its Propagation, that nothing but the Divine Omniscience and Omnipotence could have effected these; then is the Consequence, I think, undeniable, since we are not to suppose that God will assist an Impostor, that the Person, who taught this Doctrine, predicted these Events, wrought these Wonders, and in whom all the Prophesies of the Old Testament, relating to the Messias, do exactly center, is in Reality what he pretended to be, that promised Messias, which was to come into the World; since there never was, nor ever can be another, in whom these distinguishing Characters did, or can, at any Time, meet.

Reasons why our Saviour was not owned to be the Messias.

[l] But then, "If there is such "plain Evidence of our Saviour's being the true Messias, it seems a wonderful, nay "some say, and almost an incredible Thing, that not only the Gentiles, but the "Jews likewise, who had such remarkable Means and Opportunities of Conviction, "should so universally reject him." And therefore, to satisfy this Scruple, we shall endeavour to give some Account of the Causes of their Unbelief, beginning with the Gentiles.

By the Gentiles from their Philosophy.

I. OF what Avail soever the Philosophy, which, in the Beginning of Christianity, was current in the World, might be towards refining the Notions, and adorning the Minds of Men; yet the Apostle seems to signify, that it was far from being of any Service to fit and dispose them for the Reception of Christianity, or to preserve its Purity, after it was received; and therefore his Admonition is, [m] Beware lest any Man

[i] 1 Cor. i. 26, &c.
[k] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures.
[l] Jenkins's Reasonableness, Vol. II.
[m] Col. ii. 8.

Man ſpoil you through Philoſophy and vain Deceit, after the Tradition of Men, after the Rudiments of the World, and not after Chriſt; as knowing very well, that the Opinions of the ſeveral Philoſophers, then in Vogue, had no kindly Aſpect upon the Faith of Chriſt. [n] The Epicureans, a confident and vain Sect, would (as the Apoſtle knew by Experience) hear nothing of a Reſurrection and future Life, the great Principles of Chriſtianity, without a preventing Deriſion and Contempt [o]. The Peripateticks were perſuaded, that the World was eternal, and therefore laughed at thoſe, who pretended to teach, that it was not far from its End, and had its Beginning not many thouſand Years ago. The Pythagoreans were very ſuperſtitious, and apt to aſcribe every Thing to Magick, and, beſides, ſo blindly devoted to their Maſter's Dictates, that they regarded no Reaſons or Arguments againſt them; and (to name no more) the Stoicks, who, by the Help of the Chriſtian Syſtem, had mightily improved the moral Part of Philoſophy, were ſtrangely erroneous in this, that they believed nothing immaterial, which was a plain Contradiction to the fundamental Doctrines of Chriſtianity. Thus, one Way or other, the Philoſophers and learned Part of the World, beſides the common Prejudices of other Men, had Prepoſſeſſions peculiar to their Opinions, which hindered them from embracing Chriſtianity; and as their Philoſophy was apt to affect the Praiſe and Admiration of Men, to foſter Pride and Self-conceit, and was, indeed, [p] an Artifice and Diſguiſe only, to conceal the worſt of Vices under a moroſe Look, and an Habit different from other Men; ſo it ſet them at a farther Remove ſtill from the Reception of a Religion, which calls upon them to be [q] meek and humble, and poor in Spirit; [r] in Lowlineſs of Mind to prefer others before themſelves; and [s] in Simplicity and godly Sincerity, not with fleſhly Wiſdom, but the Grace of God, to have their Converſation in this World.

Their Prejudices.

NOR was this Repugnancy of Tenets and Temper the only Obſtruction found among the Gentiles, but even the poor and perſecuted Condition of the Chriſtians deterred and prejudiced them againſt a new Religion, which would neceſſarily expoſe them to Sufferings, out of a Principle of Fondneſs, which Men naturally have for Eaſe and Safety. They conſidered therefore, that their own Religion was the Religion of their Country, in which they might live without Trouble or Moleſtation, and to which the Honours and Emoluments of the State were annexed: They alledged, that this had been the Religion of their Forefathers, under the Influence of which, the Roman Empire had arrived at ſo much Power and Greatneſs; and they aſcribed [t] all the Calamities, which befel the World, by Famine, Earthquakes, or Peſtilence, to the Neglect of their own Worſhip, and the Progreſs of the Chriſtian Religion; and, in Conſequence of theſe Errors and Prejudices, they deſpiſed Chriſtianity before they had any Knowledge of it. Nay, ſome of their learned Men were ſo little acquainted with it, [u] that they did not diſtinguiſh its Profeſſors from Jews, nor knew the right Pronunciation of the very Word * Chriſt or Chriſtian; which made the ancient Apologiſts ſo frequently complain, that their Adverſaries perſecuted what they did not underſtand; and ſo earneſtly deſire, that their Religion might be impartially enquired into, and themſelves allowed the Juſtice and Opportunity of a fair Hearing.

And other incidental Things.

THERE were ſome other incidental Things, which contributed to the heightening theſe Prejudices of the Heathens. The Jews not only [x] blaſphemed Chriſt in their Synagogues, but [y] ſent Men (as we ſaid before) on Purpoſe, from Jeruſalem into all the Parts of the World, to vilify him and his Religion. The Hereticks, which ſoon ſprang up in the Church, by their abominable Doctrines and Practices, brought [z] a general Scandal upon Chriſtians, as being ſuppoſed all of one Profeſſion, and ſo confirmed Men in the ill Opinion, which they had already conceived of them. The Chriſtians themſelves, by their Diſcourſes and Writings concerning Chriſt's Kingdom, gave Umbrage to thoſe, that were glad of a Pretence againſt them, that they [n] Acts xvii. 18, 32. [o] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs, Vol. II. [p] Vid. Quintil. Inſtit. Lib. i. c. 1. and Senec. in Exhortationibus apud Lactant. Lib. iii. c. 15. [q] Matth. v. 3, 5. [r] Phil. ii. 3. [s] 2 Cor. i. 12. [t] This was ſo much inſiſted upon, as it is to be ſeen in Zoſimus, Symmachus, and others, that Oroſius ſet himſelf to anſwer it in a particular Work; and St Auſtin, who put him upon writing it, thought himſelf concerned, in his own Works, to oppoſe ſo unreaſonable, but fatal a Prejudice, as Arnobius had done before. Jenkins, ibid. [u] Vid. Sueton. in Claudio, c. 25. * For ſo, in Suetonius, [c. 25.] we find it wrote, Chreſtus and Chreſtianus, whereupon Tertullian [in his Apol. c. 3.] has the Remark, Nam nec nominis certa eſt notio penes vos. [x] Cui [Chriſto] ter, per ſingulos dies, ſub Nomine Nazarenorum maledicunt, in ſynagogis ſuis. Hier. ad Iſa. xlix. 7. [y] Juſtin. Martyr. Dialog. [z] Thus Celſus makes Objections from the erroneous and wicked Notions and Practices of the Ophitæ, the Valentinians, the Marcionites, and others. Orig. contra Celſum, Lib. vi, &c.

2

they intended to ſet up a temporal Kingdom by Rebellion. Their Servants, [a] being examined before Magiſtrates, and telling, that they had heard their Maſters ſpeak of the Communion of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, gave Riſe to the Story of their devouring human Fleſh and Blood; and ſome vile Women at Damaſcus, threatened with Torments, unleſs they would confeſs that they were Chriſtians, which Confeſſion was publiſhed in all Cities and other Places, gave their Enemies an Occaſion to charge them with all Manner of Wickedneſs and groſs Impiety.

Several Heathens, of great Note, Admirers of Chriſtianity.

BUT how much ſoever theſe Arts and Accidents may be ſuppoſed to prejudice Mankind againſt Chriſtianity, yet they did not ſo far prevail, but that, in early Days, we find ſome of the greateſt Names in the Gentile World, though they did not actually become Chriſtians, entertaining juſt and favourable Opinions of that Religion. Of Alexander Severus [b] it is reported, that he had the Effigies of Chriſt in his Chapel; that he deſigned to have erected a Temple for the Worſhip of him; and inſerted his Name among the Heathen Gods: Of Arian, that, with the ſame Intention, he commanded Temples to be built in all Cities without Images, but was diſſuaded from it by ſome about him, who, having conſulted the Oracles, were told, that this would be the Way to make all Men become Chriſtians: Of Valerian, that, in the Beginning of his Reign, he was ſo favourable to Chriſtianity, that his Palace, being full of devout Worſhippers, was, as it were, the Church of God, as [c] Dionyſius of Alexandria ſtiles it: And during the Interval between the Perſecution of Gallienus, and that which began in the nineteenth Year of Diocleſian, that Chriſtians were in the higheſt Stations and Employments; that their Number increaſed daily, and magnificent Churches were erected, where their Congregations, which were now become exceeding large, publickly reſorted.

By the Jews.

II. THERE is the ſame to be ſaid of the Jews, concerning the Cauſes of their Infidelity. [d] Their Law, as it came from God, was held in ſuch Eſteem and Veneration, and their Traditions, as deſcending (according to their Notion) from the ſame Original, were ſo punctually obſerved, that whoever ſhould go about to weaken or repeal any of theſe, were ſure to meet the Expreſſes of their Indignation. Their fixed Expectance of the Meſſias, in the Pomp and Character of a temporal Prince, made them think the Meanneſs of our Saviour's Condition, and the Ignominy of his Death, ſufficient to overthrow all the Arguments, that could be brought in Confirmation of his Title; and their having ſlain the Lord of Life, and being frequently upbraided with it by the Apoſtles, put them upon the Neceſſity, either of acknowledging their Crime, which few are diſpoſed to do, or of vindicating the Thing with more obſtinate Reſolution and Outrage, which ſeems to have been their Caſe in the Martyrdom of St Stephen: For, upon his having charged them with the Murther of Chriſt, and declaring his Exaltation to God's Right-hand, [e] they cried out with a loud Voice, and ſtopped their Ears, and ran upon him with one Accord, and caſt him out of the City, and ſtoned him.

THERE were other Circumſtances, moreover, which ſeemed not to favour the Reception of the Goſpel. For, beſides that falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets, [f] with their Signs and Wonders, were then very frequent, inſomuch, that if it had been poſſible, they would have deceived the very Elect; and that the Jews were much more inclined to give Credit to theſe, who complied with their Luſts and Deſires, than to examine and conſider the Evidence of a Religion, which muſt have obliged them to take up the Croſs and follow a crucified Saviour: Beſides this, I ſay, [g] the Nation, at this Time, was ſo very wicked, that, according to the Judgment of their own Hiſtorian, had not the Roman Army come, the Earth would have ſwallowed up the City, or a Deluge deſtroyed it, or Fire from Heaven, like Sodom, conſumed it. No Wonder then, that, among ſo wicked a People, who, by their Impieties, had fortified themſelves againſt Conviction, ſo [h] that their Eyes were blinded, and their Hearts hardened, that they ſhould not ſee with their Eyes, nor underſtand with their Heart, and be converted; Converſions ſhould not be ſo general, and [i] that the Goſpel ſhould be hid to them that were loſt, in whom the God of this World had blinded their Minds, leſt the Light of the glorious Goſpel of Chriſt, who is the Image of God, ſhould ſhine unto them.

[a] Irenæi Fragm. apud Œcumen. Comment. in 1 Pet. iii. [b] Æd. Lamprid. in Alex. Severo. [c] Καὶ πᾶς ὁ οἰκοῦντὲν θεοσεβῶν πεπλήρωτο, καὶ ἦν ἐκκλησία Θεῦ. [d] Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs, Vol. II. [e] Acts vii. 57, 58. [f] Matth. xxiv. 24. [g] Joſeph. de Bell. Jud. Lib. ix. [h] John xii. 40. Acts xxviii. 26. Rom. xi. 8. [i] 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

Many Jews converted.

BUT, theſe Impediments notwithſtanding, it muſt be allowed, that many Jews and Proſelytes were very early converted to the Chriſtian Faith; that [k] Simeon, (ſuppoſed to be the Rabbin [l] Simeon, the Son of Hillel, and the Father of Gamaliel) and Anna the Propheteſs, acknowledged and adored our Saviour in his Infancy; that Nicodemus, Joſeph of Arimathea, and ſeveral other Names of Note and Eminence, ſoon after the Preaching of it, received the Chriſtian Faith; that [m] about Three Thouſand were converted at one Time; [n] Five Thouſand at another; and that [o] Believers were daily added to the Lord, even Multitudes both of Men and Women; [p] that a great Number of Grecians, i. e. Jews, ſpeaking the Greek Tongue, at Antioch; [q] a great Multitude of devout Greeks, i. e. Proſelytes of the Gates, at Theſſalonica; a great Company [r] at Iconium; and [s] all that dwelt at Lidda and Saron, turned unto the Lord; nay, that not only the People, but [t] Prieſts alſo became Chriſtians; ſeveral [u] of the Sect of the Phariſees; * Criſpus, a Ruler of the Synagogue; Soſthenes, [x] another chief Ruler; [y] Apollos, an eloquent Man, and mighty in the Scriptures; and [z] many more, not mentioned in the ſacred Records, became great Defenders of the Faith; inſomuch, that [a] the Number of them that were ſealed, very early in the Church, was an Hundred and Forty and Four Thouſand, of all the Tribes of the Children of Iſrael.

The Cauſes, why the preſent Jews are not converted to Chriſtianity.

IF it be farther enquired, why ſo many of the Jews, even in Chriſtian Countries, live unconverted, now in the bright Sun-ſhine of the Goſpel, and when many of their old Prejudices are removed; there are ſundry Reaſons, both on their Side and ours, that may account for this Infelicity, and Faults on both, that ought to be amended, and which, for a Concluſion of this Chapter, I ſhall take the Freedom but juſt to ſuggeſt.

WHEREAS the Jews of Old were careful in the Preſervation of the holy Scriptures, and extremely cautious againſt any Adulteration of them; there are ſome great Preſumptions to think, that, ſince the Coming of our Saviour Chriſt, they have altered and corrupted the very Text, in thoſe Places which ſpeak of the Meſſias, and the particular Time of his Coming; however, this cannot be denied, that the Loſs of the Vowels in the Hebrew Language has made it very ambiguous: And therefore, whereas, to ſupply this Defect, the Greek Tranſlation of the LXX (highly commended, and ſuppoſed to be even of Divine Inſpiration by the ancient Jews) was publickly read in their Synagogues, but, ſince the Coming of our Saviour, has been diſuſed, and a ſpurious one of Aquila (who was an Heathen, a Chriſtian, and a Jew) made in the manifeſt Decay of the Hebrew Tongue, ſet up in its Stead, for no other Reaſon, but becauſe the former gave too flagrant Teſtimonies of our Saviour's being the Meſſias: And whereas the ancient Jews built their Faith upon the Authority of the Scriptures, the Notoriety of the Facts, and the Impoſſibility of an Impoſture, the modern ground all upon the Tradition of their Fathers, and, by that Means, preclude themſelves from all Poſſibility of being converted; " [b] Becauſe their Fa- " thers, they ſay, having told them, that the Things, related in the Goſpel, were " not ſo done, as they are related, they are bound to believe them upon their ſole " Teſtimony, be the contrary Evidence never ſo convincing."

WHEREAS Philo and the Jews before him inſiſt much upon the typical Senſe of the Law, and their Cabbala makes the outward Precepts, but the Cortex, or Shell, as it were, of the hidden Myſteries, which they contain; their later Authors, finding how this inward and ſpiritual Meaning relates to the Meſſias, and is accompliſhed in our Saviour, deny that there is any Type at all in the Law, or that the Office of the Meſſias extends to any heavenly and ſpiritual Acquiſitions, but to worldly Succeſſes [k] Luke ii. 25, 36. [l] The Title of Rabbin was the higheſt of all Titles, ſignifying a Prince, rather than a Doctor or Teacher, as Rabbi doth, and there were but Seven of the Poſterity of Hillel, whoſe Family was the greateſt in all Judea, that were dignified with it. Jenkins's Reaſonableneſs, Vol. II. Ex Buxtorf, de Abbrev. Heb. [m] Acts ii. 41. [n] Ibid. iv. 4. [o] Ibid. v. 14. [p] Ibid. xi. 21. [q] Ibid. xvii. 4. [r] Ibid. xiv. 1. [s] Ibid. ix. 35. [t] Ibid. vi. 7. [u] Ibid. xv. 5. * Ibid. xviii. 8. [x] Ibid. xviii. 17. [y] Ibid. xviii. 24.

[z] Epiphanius, who himſelf was brought up in the Jewiſh Religion, acquaints us, that Ellel, the Jewiſh Patriarch, ſent for a Biſhop, to baptize him upon his Death-bed. Samuel Morochianus, Petrus Alphonſius, Rimundus Martini, Paulus Burgenſis, Nicholas de Lyra, Alphonſus de Zamora, Petrus Galatinus, Sextus Sinenſis, Johannes Iſaacus Levita, Tremellius, and other learned Men, educated in the Jewiſh Worſhip, upon their Converſion, have been eminent Defenders of the Chriſtian Religion. But it is obſervable, that the Rabbins of the greateſt Note and Authority with the Jews, Maimonides, Solomon Jarchi, Aben Ezra, and David and Joſeph Kimchi, flouriſhed in the moſt ignorant and corrupt Ages of the Chriſtian Church, when Chriſtians, by their ſuperſtitious and erroneous Doctrines, and wicked Lives, had brought their Religion into Contempt, both with Jews and Mahometans, who, at that Time, were more learned than in any other Age. Jenkins, ibid.

[a] Rev. vii. 4. [b] Leſlie's Short Method.

ceſſes and Conqueſts only. Whereas the conſtant Tradition of the Ancients was, that the Meſſias would ſhew himſelf to the World, and vouch his Commiſſion by exhibiting Miracles; the Notion of ſome Moderns, to elude the Demonſtration of our Saviour's wonderful Works, is expreſſed in theſe Words, that [c] there is no other Miracle needful for the Meſſias, but one only, viz. to gather the Jews out of all the Countries of the World, to reſtore the Throne of David to its ancient and greater Majeſty, and to bring all Kings and Nations to the Worſhip of the true God. Once more; whereas the World before Chriſt, never dreamed of more than one Meſſias, how various and different ſoever his Offices and Adminiſtrations might be, to anſwer the two States of Suffering and Triumphing, foretold of the Meſſias, and fulfilled in our Saviour: The Jews, of late, have invented a new and ſtrange Conceit of two Meſſias, one to die, and the other to conquer, though there be no Footſteps of this in all Antiquity, nor any Poſſibility of crediting the [d] monſtrous Story, they tell about it.

What is requiſite on their Parts.

IF ever therefore the Jews would put themſelves in a Capacity to ſearch out Truth, they muſt reſolve to lay aſide their counterfeit Hiſtory, and corrupt Chronology, which they have endeavoured to impoſe upon the World; and more eſpecially, their Oral Laws, and Traditions of ſuppoſed Credit, contrived on Purpoſe to evacuate the written Word of God, and the Evidence, which it produces againſt them. They muſt have Recourſe to the Law, and to the Teſtimony, and to the moſt natural and obvious Interpretations of theſe; [e] for if they ſpeak not according to the Word, it is becauſe there is no Light in them; and, inſtead of hunting after ſuch Shifts and Evaſions, as ſome modern Doctors have deviſed on Purpoſe to maintain a ſhattered Scheme, comply with the Advice, which God gives them; [f] ſtand ye in the Ways, and ſee, and aſk for the old Paths, where is the good Way, and walk therein, and ye ſhall find Reſt for your Souls. When the Jews are once come to the Reſolution of making the Holy Bible the Rule of their Faith, it may not miſ-become them, to entertain more charitable Thoughts of thoſe, who differ from them in Matters of Religion; to conſider, that ſo great a Body, as Chriſtians make, Men of ſufficient Sagacity in other Affairs, and remarkable enough in moſt Parts of human Literature, may poſſibly be in the Right; at leaſt, that it may be worth their Pains, to make the Trial, whether they be or no; that, in the Main, theſe Chriſtians are Men of Probity and Sincerity, and ſuch, as it would not well become the Goodneſs of God, in a Matter of ſuch infinite Importance, to ſuffer to be led away with a common Deception; and upon this Preſumption, they ought to perſuade themſelves [g] to deſiſt from reviling the Name of Jeſus, (who poſſibly may be no Impoſtor) in their Books, and curſing his Diſciples, (who poſſibly may not deſerve it) in their daily Prayers.

WHEN this is done, it may not perhaps be amiſs, in order to create a Jealouſy in themſelves, whether they are in the Right or no, to reflect a little on the diſtreſſed Condition they are in; how ſcattered and diſperſed over the Face of the Earth; debarred from their ancient Land, the Land of Promiſe; and in no Nation, where they ſojourn, allowed the leaſt Power, or Shadow of Government: That in this Diſorder, they have loſt all their Records and Genealogies, ſo that, if the Meſſias be not yet come, they cannot diſcover him, when he does, or trace the Lineage, from whence he is to ariſe. They ſhould remember, that [h] in all their Captivities, the Time of their Redemption was foretold, and Prophets were all along ſent from God, to revive their drooping Hearts with the Expectation of it; but that ſixteen hundred Years and more are now expired, without any Glimpſe of Hopes, or Proſpect of End, or Meſſage of Comfort to refreſh them. Falſe Chriſts and falſe Prophets, indeed, they have had enough, but theſe have drawn ſo much Ruin and Deſtruction upon them, as

[c] Limber Collat. cum Jud.

[d] The Story which Hornbeck [cont. Jud. p. 253.] relates, out of their Author Aukat Rochel, de ſigno Meſſiæ ſeptimo apud Hulſium, p. 51. is this: ——— They ſuppoſe that a Company of profligate Fellows will invent a new Sin; that they will take a beautiful Stone Statue of a Woman, that is in Rome, and warming it, will lie with it: that from thence it will conceive, and at laſt burſting, there ſhall come forth a Child, whoſe Name ſhall be called Armillus; that he ſhall be twelve Cubits high, and the Length of a Span between his Eyes; that he will ſay to the Wicked, I am your Meſſias, and your God; that they will believe in him, and make him their King; and that to him will be gathered all the Poſterity of Eſau. That their firſt Meſſias, Ben Joſeph, of the Tribe of Ephraim, will fight againſt him with 30,000 Iſraelites, and ſhall have Succeſs in the firſt Battle; that, in the ſecond Battle, he ſhall be killed, and his Army routed; but Angels ſhall take away his dead Body, and keep it with thoſe of the Patriarchs: That, after this, ſhall ariſe their ſecond Meſſias, Ben David, of the Tribe of Judah, and Elias with him, to whom the Jews, that are left, ſhall be gathered, and oppoſe Armilius; that God will deſtroy Armillus, and his whole Army, by Fire and Brimſtone, and great Stones caſt down upon them from Heaven. With Abundance more of the like mad Excurſions of Imagination. Leſlie's ſhort Method.

[e] Iſa. viii. 20. [f] Jer. vi. 6. [g] Stanhope's Sermons at Boyle's Lectures. [h] Leſlie, ibid.

as ſhould make them weary, one would think, of deluding themſelves with any farther Expectation: But, above all, they ſhould remember, that their Temple is deſtroyed, and with it the Morning and the Evening-Sacrifice ceaſed; ſo that now they are under a Curſe and Condemnation for every Tranſgreſſion of their Law, but have no Atonement for their Guilt, or Expedient to pacify their Conſcience; and yet, to be left in this forlorn Condition, would hardly be reconcileable to the Goodneſs and Holineſs of God, had not he ſet forth [l] Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous, for a Propitiation, and in him opened a Fountain for Sin, and for Uncleanneſs.

THEIR Deſtitution of theſe Things therefore does, in ſome Meaſure, point them to Jeſus, and ſhould diſpoſe them, with meek and unprejudiced Minds, to ſearch the Scriptures, which teſtify of him; to compare the Propheſies in the Old, with the Accounts of him in the New Teſtament; and to read the Apologies, both ancient and modern, which ſet this Controverſy in a clear Light. By the Help of theſe, together with their fervent Prayers to God, that he would enlighten their Minds to the Acknowledgment of the Truth, it is ſcarce to be doubted, but that, after ſome Enquiry, they would come to perceive the Reaſonableneſs and Certainty of the Chriſtian Religion; that [k] all Things, which were written in the Law, and in the Prophets, and in the Pſalms, concerning the Meſſias, were fulfilled in our Jeſus, and that, according to the wiſeſt Scheme of Man's Redemption, it behoved him to ſuffer, and to riſe from the Dead, and to enter into Glory, and that Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins ſhould be preached in his Name.

What is requiſite on the Part of Chriſtians.

WE indeed, who are to aſſiſt in this bleſſed Work of their Converſion, have not thoſe extraordinary Gifts of Power and Utterance, which enabled St Peter, the Apoſtle of the Jews, in one ſingle Diſcourſe, to convert [l] three Thouſand of his Brethren; and have little or nothing of that Zeal, which encouraged St Paul, the Apoſtle of the Gentiles, to take ſuch a large Compaſs in his Travels, and to run through ſuch a [m] Scene of Perils and Perſecutions, for the Salvation of Souls. [n] Thoſe, who are ready enough to compaſs Sea and Land, to gain any other Sort of Proſelytes, ſeem to be cold and indifferent, in Relation to the ancient People of God. The Fear of Idolatry, ſo expreſsly forbidden in the Law, is a great Stumbling-Block in ſome Places; and in others, the Want of a regular Conſtitution, with Governors and Laws, with Promiſes and Privileges of their own in a Church, gives no ſmall Offence: Nay, even in this Country, where no ſuch Obſtacle is complained of, there is neither that [o] Care taken by the Publick, nor that Application uſed by Perſons of Capacity, as the great Affair of converting the Brethren of the Circumciſion moſt certainly does require. We diſpute one againſt another with great Heat and Animoſity; we do it about Trifles, concerning Rites and Modes of Worſhip, about Decrees and the Divine Preſcience; about Things, that we do not underſtand, and in which we may ſafely be on the wrong Side; here we are fierce and paſſionate, fond of our ſeveral Opinions, and uncharitable to one another: In the mean Time, in the main Controverſy between us and the Jews, we are cold and indifferent, as if the Skirts and

[l] John ii. 1. &c. Zech. xiii. 1. [k] Luke xxiv. 26, 44, 46, 47. [l] Acts ii. 41.
[m] 2 Cor. xi. 23, 24, &c.

[n] There is this Reaſon offered, why the Church of Rome ſhews ſo much Concern for the Converſion of other Nations, and, at the ſame Time, is ſo negligent of the Jews. If they could convert any Pagan or Infidel Nation, they might from thence have a conſiderable Acceſſion to their Church, both of Glory and Revenue; but alas! the Jews are a ſcattered and peeled People: Their Converſion therefore would add no new Territory, or Country, or Revenue, or Preferment. So that, if all the Jews in Rome were converted, the Church's Patrimony would not be enlarged by it; the Tribute given, for Leave to live quietly in the Pope's Territories, would be loſt, and the Poor, who muſt be maintained, increaſed. But if this be the Reaſon, I am ſure it is abhorrent to Chriſtianity. Biſhop Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſias.

[o] What would be proper for the Publick to do, upon this Occaſion, we find the above named Biſhop expreſſing in theſe Words: "Though I am not againſt the Liberty allowed the Jews of reading their Law, and uſing their Prayers and Hymns in their Synagogues; yet I humbly offer, that all Chriſtian Princes and States ſhould not permit this Liberty without ſome Reſtraint. It is not reaſonable, that they ſhould have Liberty to curſe Chriſtians, under the Name of Edomites, or Minim, i. e. Hereticks, to blaſpheme the holy Name of Jeſus, or do any Thing reproachful to our Religion, either in the publick Offices, or private Converſation; which is not only immoral in itſelf, but contrary likewiſe to the very Letter of their Law: And though I am not for compelling the Jews to turn Chriſtians, yet Chriſtian Kings and States may oblige them to hear our Sermons, and admit of our Conferences: They may oblige them to appear either before them, or their Commiſſioners, at certain Times, and by their Chacams, or wiſe Men, to exhibit their Reaſons in Writing, why they continue in Judaiſm, and reject Chriſtianity. Theſe Papers they may order to be delivered to ſuch learned Men, as are fit to draw up an Anſwer to them, which may be returned to the Jews, and they obliged to return a Reply to them, in ſuch a determinate Time. After which, a publick Conference may be appointed, and the Jews permitted to defend themſelves, and anſwer ſuch Chriſtians, as ſhall be deputed to diſpute with them, with Freedom and Sincerity, and without any Manner of Moleſtation." Biſhop Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſias, ad finem.

and Fringes of Religion were of greater Care to us, than the Vitals and Power of it. In other Differences, the Queſtion is many Times ſuch, that we may be miſtaken, and yet ſafe; but if we are wrong in this Diſpute, we err fundamentally, and muſt never hope for Salvation. And therefore it nearly concerns us to know on which Side the Truth lies; and if we are fully convinced that it is on ours, and have a Sufficiency of Knowledge and Learning for the Purpoſe, our next Care muſt be, [p] in Meekneſs to inſtruct thoſe, that oppoſe themſelves, if God peradventure will give them Repentance, to the Acknowledgment of the Truth: Shewing them, [q] that, ſince there is no living without committing Offences, and thereupon being culpable before God, there muſt, of Neceſſity, be ſome Atonement or Expiation to quiet the Mind, and ſet the Conſcience at Eaſe; that, ſince all inſtituted Means of that Nature are ceaſed among the Jews, there is no Atonement to be expected, but what the Meſſias was to make, as is predicted, and ſet forth in holy Writ; and thereupon evincing, that Jeſus is that Meſſias, by all the Arguments that prove the Divine Miſſion of Moſes, and ſuch as have been the Subject of this Diſcourſe. This while we are labouring to do, we ſhould make it our Heart's Deſire, and Prayer to God, that he would remove from them all Hardneſs of Heart, and Contempt of his Word, that they may be ſaved among the Number of true Iſraelites; and, for our own Encouragement, call frequently to Mind, that they, who are Inſtruments in ſo good a Work, [r] ſhall ſhine as the Brightneſs of the Firmament, and as the Stars for ever and ever.

[p] 2 Tim. ii. 25. [q] Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſias, ad finem. [r] Dan. xii. 3.

CHAP. V.

Of CHRIST's Commiſſion to his Apoſtles.

THE laſt Thing that we find our Saviour doing, before his Aſcent into Heaven, is his giving a Commiſſion to his Apoſtles; which deſerves a particular Conſideration, becauſe on it depends all that Power and Authority, all thoſe Rights and Privileges, all thoſe Offices and Adminiſtrations, which the Apoſtles themſelves, and, after them, their Succeſſors, claimed, and executed in the Chriſtian Church. The Extent of the Commiſſion.

THE Form of the Commiſſion runs thus —— [a] Go ye, and teach all Nations, baptiſing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; teaching them to obſerve all Things, whatever I have commanded you. [b] Whoſe ſoever Sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whoſe ſoever Sins ye retain, they are retained: For as my Father ſent me, even ſo ſend I you. The whole Streſs and Purport of the Commiſſion lies in theſe laſt Words, which may very properly be extended to theſe ſeveral Senſes.

I. As my Father ſent me from Heaven to declare his Will, and to make choice of you, to be my Meſſengers and Apoſtles; ſo I ſend you into the World, to preach the Goſpel, and to gather together my Church out of every Nation.

II. As my Father ſent me to appoint you my Succeſſors, to carry on the Work of the Goſpel, when I am gone; ſo I ſend you to ordain your Succeſſors, that there may not be wanting fit and proper Miniſters in the Church, upon your Demiſe.

III. As my Father ſent me to acquaint you with the Offices, you are to execute, in the future Adminiſtration of the Church; ſo I ſend you, to inſtruct your Succeſſors in the Nature of the Sacerdotal Function, to acquaint them with the Powers, and Miniſtries belonging thereunto; and in what Manner they are to behave towards the People committed to their Charge.

[a] Matth. xxviii. 19, 20. [b] John xx. 23.

IV. As my Father ſent me with full Power and Authority, to make Laws for the good Government of the Church, and to oblige Mankind to the Obſervance of them; ſo I ſend you, with the like Authority, to make ſuch Orders and Conſtitutions, to appoint ſuch Rites, and impoſe ſuch Cenſures, as ſhall be thought conducible to the ſame End. And,

V. As my Father ſent me from his Boſom, with a full Aſſurance of his Love and paternal Care; ſo I ſend you, and your Succeſſors, with the like Promiſe of Protection and Aſſiſtance, and Succeſs in your Labours; for [a] lo, I am with you always, even unto the End of the World.

The firſt Branch of the Apoſtles Commiſſion, to gather a Church.

I. ONE Branch then of the Apoſtles Commiſſion was to teach, or make Diſciples of all People, and to collect a Church out of every Nation upon Earth. [b] The Synagogue of the Jews indeed conſiſted but of one Country, to which the publick Worſhip of God was confined: [c] In Judah he was known, and his Name was great in Iſrael; at Salem was his Tabernacle, and his Dwelling-place in Sion; [d] his Word he ſhewed unto Jacob, and his Judgments unto Iſrael; but he did not deal ſo with any other Nation. The Temple was the only Place, in which the Sacrifices could be offered, in which the Prieſts could perform their Office of Adminiſtration; ſo that, under the Law, there was an Incloſure, as it were, dividing a particular Nation from all the World beſide. But when God gave [e] the Heathen to his Son for his Inheritance, and the uttermoſt Parts of the Earth for his Poſſeſſion; when Chriſt [f] ſent his Apoſtles into all the World to preach the Goſpel to every Creature; the Church, which, in its primary Inſtitution, was of a diffuſive Nature, ſoon ſpread and extended itſelf from the City of Jeruſalem, where it firſt began, to all the Parts and Corners of the Earth.

The Church.

IN the City of Jeruſalem we read, that there were twelve Apoſtles, together with the Diſciples, and, before the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, that [g] the Number of the Names together were about an Hundred and twenty. When the Holy Ghoſt miraculouſly deſcended upon the Apoſtles, and St Peter thereupon preached to the Jews, that [h] they ſhould repent, and be baptiſed in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, for the Remiſſion of Sins; it is ſaid, that they, who received the Word, were baptiſed; that, the ſame Day, there were added unto them three Thouſand Souls; and that theſe, continuing ſtedfaſtly in the Apoſtles Doctrine, and Fellowſhip, and in breaking of Bread, and in Prayers, were the firſt, who had the Title of CHURCH conferred on them. [i] From hence we may obſerve what this Original Church was, viz. a certain Number of Men, of which ſome were Apoſtles, ſome the former Diſciples, and others, Perſons who repented, and believed in the Name of Chriſt, and continued with one Heart, and one Soul, hearing the Word preached, receiving the Sacraments adminiſtered, and joining in the publick Prayers preſented unto God. And, from this Account of its Riſe and Beginning, we may define the Church, in all Ages, to be a ſpiritual Society, joined to Chriſt their Head by the ſame Faith, and Offices of Religion, and to one another by the ſame Love and Charity.

It's Riſe and Nature.

It's Regularity.

St PAUL, to ſhew the Regularity of this Society, and how they are united to one another by the ſtricteſt Bands and Terms of Communion, has employed a great Variety of Alluſions and Compariſons to repreſent it by. [m] He ſometimes borrows an Illuſtration from a civil Body, when he calls it [n] a Family, [o] a City, a Kingdom, whereof Chriſt is the Head and Governor; ſometimes from an artificial Body, when he compares it to a Building fitly framed, and to a [p] ſpiritual Houſe, raiſed upon the Foundation of the Apoſtles and Prophets, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being the chief Corner-ſtone: But what is the moſt lively Compariſon of all, is that which he borrows from a natural Body; [q] Chriſt, ſays he, is the Head of the Church, and we, being many, are one Body in him, and every one Members one of another: Into him therefore [a] Matth. xxviii. 20. [b] Pearſon, on the Creed. [c] Pſal. lxxvi. 1, 2. [d] Ibid. cxlvii. 20. [e] Ibid. ii. 8. [f] Mark xvi. 15. [g] Acts i. 15. [h] Ibid. ii. 38, &c. [i] Pearſon, ibid. [m] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV. [n] Heb. iii. 6. Eph. iii. 14, 15. [o] Heb. xii. 22. [p] Eph. ii. 20, 21. [q] Ibid. iv. 16.

therefore we are to grow up, who is the Head, and from whom the whole Body, fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every Joint ſupplieth, according to the effectual working in the Meaſure of every Part, maketh Increaſe unto the edifying itſelf in Love.

Now the Deſign of the Apoſtle's uſing theſe Alluſions and Allegories, is to teach us, that the Church, as it ſignifies the true myſtical Body of Chriſt, is, and can be, but one; becauſe the ſame Terms of uniting Members into it have always been, and always will continue unalterable. This is the ſame Family, and City, and Kingdom, unto the Rights and Inheritance, the Privileges and Immunities of which, Mankind in all Ages, and all Places, are admitted. This is the ſame Body, in which all Members are united; and the ſame Houſe and Temple, in which all the living Stones are compacted; and therefore, howſoever we may read of ſeveral Churches in the Scriptures, and elſewhere; yet theſe are only ſo many diſtinct Parts of the univerſal Church; they are all Members of this Body, all Apartments of this great Houſe, all Companies of this populous City: And though they be conſidered as ſeparate, with Regard to the Places, where they are ſituate, the Limits of their Dominion, their temporal Conſtitutions, and ſeveral Juriſdictions; yet ſtill they are but one in the main, and can no farther deſerve the Title of Churches, than as they agree in all eſſential Points with the univerſal Church, diffuſed over the Face of the whole Earth. Unity.

And as the Church of Chriſt is one regular Society; ſo, in the very Deſign and Inſtitution of it, it cannot but be of a ſpiritual Nature. The Jews, indeed, who explained the Propheſies, which ſpake of the Meſſiah's Kingdom, in ſuch a Senſe, as agreed beſt with their own Prejudices, conceived, that their Meſſias was to be a glorious temporal Monarch, who ſhould ſubdue the Romans, and reſtore to them their ancient Laws and Liberties: And therefore they alledge, that Jeſus, by declaring himſelf to be the Meſſias, was a profeſſed Enemy to the Roman Government; upon which Crime they arraigned him before Pilate, and told the Governor plainly, [t] that, if he acquitted him, he was not Cæſar's Friend, becauſe whoſoever made himſelf a King, ſpake againſt Cæſar. He cleared himſelf, however, of this Accuſation, by declaring himſelf, indeed, to be a King, but one of a quite different Order to that, which his Enemies ſuggeſted; [u] My Kingdom, ſaid he, is not of this World; if my Kingdom were of this World, then would my Servants fight, that I ſhould not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my Kingdom not from hence. Which Anſwer, in the Governor's Opinion, ſo fully aſſoiled him from any Affectation of ſecular Empire, that, * when he had ſaid this, Pilate went out to the Jews, and ſaid unto them, I find in him no Fault at all. Spirituality.

All Power, indeed, both in Heaven and Earth, is given unto Chriſt, as he is our Mediator; but then this Power is of a very different Nature, exerciſed in a different Manner, and for quite different Ends, from thoſe Powers, which are claimed by the Civil Magiſtrate. The Enemies, which, by this Power, as Soldiers of Chriſt, we are to fight againſt, [x] are not Fleſh and Blood, but Principalities and Powers, the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World, and ſpiritual Wickedneſs in High-places; and the Armour, which we are to wield, upon this Occaſion, is [y] the Armour of Light, [z] the Girdle of Truth, the Breaſt-plate of Righteouſneſs, the Shield of Faith, the Helmet of Salvation, the Sword of the Spirit; for [a] the Weapons of our Warfare are not carnal. The Rights, which this Power is deſigned to ſecure, are of a different Sort from our civil Rights and Liberties; they are ſuch, as Greeks and Barbarians, Bond and Free, they who have civil Rights, and they who have none, are all capable of enjoying; for [b] all of them are one and the ſame in Chriſt Jeſus. The Laws, enacted by this Power, though the greateſt Security to the Civil Government, are of a different Nature to its Ordinances, ſince theſe are deſigned only to maintain the outward Peace and Proſperity of the World; whereas the End of the other is to promote our everlaſting Happineſs: And, laſtly, the Rewards and Puniſhments, whereby this Power enforceth its Laws, are Spiritual and Future, and ſuch as, in this Life, can only influence Men by Means of their Faith; whereas thoſe, which belong to the civil Power, are calculated for this Life only, and, if they do not reach us here, can never affect us at all.

But

[t] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV. [u] Archbiſhop Potter, of Church-Government, [t] John xix. 12. [u] John xviii. 36. * Ibid. ver. 38. [x] Eph. vi. 12. [y] Rom. xiii. 12. [z] Eph. vi. 14, &c. [a] 2 Cor. x. 4. [b] Gal. iii. 28. Col. iii. 11.

Visibility.

BUT tho' the Kingdom of Christ is plainly distinct from all worldly Kingdoms, and the Graces, whereby our inward Communion with Christ is maintained, are invisible; yet it will not therefore follow, that the Christian Church is not an outward and visible Society. For when we read, how [a] Paul and Barnabas were brought on their Way by the Church; how the Elders of Ephesus were commanded [b] to feed the Church, whereof they were Overseers; and in Case of [c] Trespass, between Brother and Brother, how we are to tell it to the Church, and, if the Offender neglects to hear the Church, he was to be looked upon as an Heathen: When we consider, that publick Rulers were appointed to govern this Church; that publick Worship was to be frequented, and publick Sacraments administered in it; and that Hereticks, and other notorious Offenders, [d] after the first and second Admonition, were to be rejected out of it; we cannot but conclude, that this Church must be an outward and visible Society, whose Privileges and Offices some Men were admitted to, and others excluded from: And, if the Church of Christ be a visible Society, it may not be improper here to enquire, by what Means we become, and continue Members of the same.

Baptism the Means of admitting us into the Church.

NOW the Sacrament, whereby we are at first incorporated into the Church of Christ, is declared in Scripture to be Baptism; for [e] by one Spirit we are all baptized into one Body. This is an Ordinance, which, as we shewed [h] before, our Saviour took from the Jews, and, in this new Religion, appointed to be the only Form of admitting us into the Number of his Disciples: And therefore vain and presumptuous is the Delusion of those, who, because they call Christ Lord, and pretend to an uncommon Measure of the Spirit, arrogate to themselves the Name and Privileges of Christians, without this initiating Sacrament of Baptism, which he hath ordained, as the Instrument of making them Members of his visible Body. For that the Baptism of the Spirit, be it what it will, was never intended to supersede the Observance of this Ordinance, is manifest from a Passage in Scripture, which cannot be gainsay'd. Among the Acts of the Apostles we read, that when Peter, who was sent for to Cornelius, to instruct him in the Christian Faith, and preaching to the Company, which was convened upon that Occasion, [i] the Holy Ghost fell upon all them that heard him, in the same Manner as it did, at its first plenteous Effusion, on the Day of Pentecost. But, now, what is St Peter's Inference from this miraculous Event? Is it that the Persons, to whom it happened, were sufficiently illuminated already, and had no Need of outward Baptism? No: But that this was an Evidence of God's Approbation of them, as fit Objects of Baptism; and accordingly he asks, [k] Can any Man forbid Water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? So far is the Baptism of the Spirit, even where it is undeniable, from excluding the Baptism of Water, or any of the extraordinary Methods of Grace, from intending to break in upon, and overturn the regular Orders and Establishments of the Church.

The Means of our Continuance in it, Faith and Love, and in what Sense.

AND as Baptism is the proper Means, whereby we are made Members of the Church, so the two great Ligaments, which compact and continue us in this mystical Body, are [l] Faith and [m] Love; Faith, or the Profession of the Gospel-Truths, as it is opposed to Heresy; and Love, or Continuance in Communion and Church-Fellowship, as it is opposed to Schism. For so the Apostle requires, that we should both [n] hold fast the Form of sound Words, which was delivered to the Saints; and [o] that we should keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace. But here it is proper to observe, that as the Profession of all the Truths in the Gospel is not made the Condition of our Continuance in the Church, so neither is our Deviation from some to be accounted a Character of Heresy in us. [p] Considering, indeed, the Nature and Corruption, the Ignorance and Frailty, the Avocations and Inadvertencies, the Mistakes and different Capacities and Interests of Men, we have Reason to think, that it is so far from being necessary, that, ordinarily speaking, it can hardly be conceived possible, how any great Number of Men should entirely agree in the same Persuasion, as to several Matters relating to Religion: And therefore, since all Points of Faith are not of equal Importance and Concern, it suffices that those which are of the Foundation, as the Apostle speaks, such as the Being of a God, the Doctrine of the Trinity, the Divinity and Satisfaction of Christ, his Resurrection, Ascension, and coming again to Judgment, the Immortality of

[a] Acts xv. 3. [b] Ibid. xx. 28. [c] Matth. xviii. 15, &c. [d] Tit. iii. 10. [e] 1 Cor. xii. 13.
[h] See Page 630. [i] Acts xi. 15. [k] Ibid. x. 47. [l] 1 Tim. i. 4. [m] Eph. iv. 16.
[n] 2 Tim. i. 13. [o] Eph. iv. 3. [p] Stanhope, on the Epistles and Gospels, Vol. IV.

of human Souls, the Reward of Heaven, and the Torments of Hell, be firmly believed, and ſtedfaſtly continued in by every Chriſtian. He, that denies any of theſe Articles, indeed, is truly an Heretick. But we cannot, and muſt not, give him that Name, who is erroneous in ſome leſſer Matters of Chriſtianity, and diſſents from the Church in Propoſitions of a lower Nature, ſuch as admit of ſome Diſpute and Debate, but do not properly belong to the Subſtance of Faith and Manners.

IN like Manner we are to obſerve, that, as our Obligation to Church-Communion is no where delivered in abſolute and inconditional Terms; ſo there may frequent Occaſions ariſe, where Separation, or abandoning Communion on religious Accounts, is not only lawful, but even neceſſary and indiſpenſable. For though a Church, as [q] a great Defender of our own ſays, may want nothing neceſſary in its Conſtitution, yet if it requires me to profeſs, againſt my Conſcience, that I believe ſome Error, though never ſo ſmall and innocent, which I do not believe, and will not allow me her Communion, but upon this Condition; in this Caſe, the Church, for requiring this Condition, is ſchiſmatical, not I, for ſeparating from it. But where this is not the Caſe, where all Doctrines neceſſary to Salvation are taught, and no unlawful Terms of Communion are impoſed, there the Apoſtle's Exhortation moſt certainly takes Place: [r] I beſeech you, Brethren, by the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ye all ſpeak the ſame Thing, and that there be no Diviſion among you, but that you be perfectly joined together, in the ſame Mind, and in the ſame Judgment; which he only can be ſaid to do, who holds Communion with the particular Church, and Paſtor, to which he regularly belongs. For, ſince every Particular is a Branch of the Univerſal Church; it is only thus, and by the like gradual Progreſſions, (beginning from the Union of ſingle Perſons, under their reſpective Guides, and, riſing from particular Congregations, to Diſtricts of larger Extent and Denomination) that we come at laſt to the Union of each Part with the whole Body of Chriſtians, diffuſed all the World over; and that we are able to ſhew, how he, who is regularly joined to one, by Virtue thereof, is joined to the other alſo.

The Means of Union between diſtinct Churches.

THERE can be no Diſpute then, concerning the Obligation of private Chriſtians, in Regard to the Unity of the Church; but it is not thought ſo eaſy a Matter to determine, in what Manner Unity is to be maintained between particular diſtinct Churches, (eſpecially in different Countries, which have no Claim of Power over one another) in order to make them Members of the Catholick Church. [s] For the Reſolution of this Point, however, it may not be improper to obſerve, 1. That it is neceſſary, the inſtituted Order of Governors in the Church of Chriſt ſhould be ſtrictly obſerved in every Church: Otherwiſe, if he, who is ordained to the ſacerdotal Office, and has a Right to exerciſe it in one Communion, be reputed no more than a Layman in another, the Unity of the Church in general muſt neceſſarily fall to Decay. 2. That the Governors of the Church, though diſtant in Place, and independent as to their ſeveral Juriſdictions, ſhould agree in ſuch Fundamentals of Worſhip and Diſcipline, that they may ſafely communicate with one another, as often as Occaſion offers. And, 3. That, as the eſſential Laws of the Church are enacted by Chriſt himſelf, in the Obſervance of which, all the Members, and particularly all the Paſtors of it are to unite; ſo great Care ſhould be taken, [t] that all occaſional Laws, and local Rules of Diſcipline be conformable to, and genuine Deductions, as it were, from the great and fundamental ones, which Chriſt himſelf hath left. By this Means we ſhould have the ſame Form of Government, the ſame Orders of Clergy, the ſame Number of Sacraments, and the ſame Terms of Communion in every Church, though in Countries of never ſo diſtant Situation, Cuſtoms, and Languages. And that theſe were the Bands of Unity between Church and Church, in the primitive Times, is apparent from the * canonical Epiſtles, (as the Ancients call them)

[q] Chillingworth's Anſwer to Charity maintained. [r] 1 Cor. i. 10. [s] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV. [t] Fiddes's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

[t] There are other Rules, which ſome have thought proper for the Preſervation of the Church's Unity, viz. 1. That Religion be not clogged with Ceremonies, which, when multiplied too much, even tho' they be lawful, eat out the Heart, and Life, and Vigour of Chriſtianity. 2. That nothing of this Kind be determined, but what is ſufficiently known to be indifferent in its own Nature, and impoſed only, in order to the due Performance of what is generally required by the Word of God. And, 3. That no Sanctions be made, nor Mulcts or Penalties inflicted on ſuch, as only diſſent from the Uſe of ſome Things, whoſe Lawfulneſs they at preſent ſcruple, till ſufficient Time be granted, and Means be uſed for their Information of the Nature and Indifferency of the Things, that it may be ſeen whether it is out of wilful Contempt, and Obſtinacy of Spirit, or only Weakneſs of Conſcience, and Diſſatisfaction concerning the Things themſelves, that they diſobey. Stillingfleet's Irenicum.

* Theſe Epiſtles were chiefly of three Kinds. 1, Εἰρηνικαὶ, Letters of Peace and Congratulation, which one Biſhop wherewith Persons are wont to be furnished, when going from one Place to another; and whereby Clergymen more especially, removing into any other Country or Diocese, were, by the Bishop, who ordained them, (testifying the Soundness and Orthodoxy of their Faith, as well as the Innocence and Unblameableness of their Lives) recommended to the Bishop of the Place, whither they are going, to be admitted to the Exercise of their ministerial Function, which, as soon as they exhibited such Letters, they immediately entered upon; though it is difficult to imagine, how they could have done this, had not the Terms of Communion, the Orders and Sacraments, and other Ministrations been alike in all Churches.

The second Branch of the Apostles Commission, to appoint proper Officers in the Church.

II. ANOTHER Branch of the Commission, which our Saviour gave his Apostles, was, that they should ordain proper Officers, to administer the Affairs of his Church. That there were all along, from the first Beginning of the World, Persons appropriated to the Service of God in Matters of Religion, [x] is manifest from the first and patriarchal Oeconomy, when the ministerial or sacerdotal Power was vested, not in the Community, but in select Persons, and every Patriarch was the Sacrificer in his respective Family, as may be gather'd from sundry Passages in the sacred Records. After the Publication of the Law, and when the Priesthood came to be more particularly and distinctly settled, the publick Ministry of the Church was confined to one Tribe only; nor durst any intrude into the least Part of the sacerdotal Office, without a proper Designation. When the Christian Religion appeared in the World, the evangelical Ministry was at first wholly seated in Christ alone; but neither [y] did he, as the Apostle argues, glorify himself, to be made an High-Priest, but he, that said unto him, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. After that our Saviour had publickly entered upon the Work, which he came into the World to do, he first chose [z] twelve Apostles, and afterward [a] seventy Disciples, to whom he gave Commission to preach the Gospel, and to perform all other Acts, relating to the Christian Ministry. It is to be observed likewise, that one he refused, viz. the Scribe, who said unto him, [b] Master, I follow thee, whither soever thou goest; and that another, whom he called, would not follow, viz. the rich young Man, to whom he said, [c] Sell all that thou hast, and give it to the Poor, and come and follow me; which plainly shews, that all Men were not alike fit for the Kingdom of Christ, nor capable of being his Disciples.

Ministers always a distinct Body of Men, shewn from the Apostles Practice, AFTER Christ's Departure, the first Thing of this Kind, which the Apostles did, was to chuse one, who might succeed in the Place, which Judas had forfeited, and they appointed two, Justus and Matthias, and [d] prayed, saying, Lord, thou knowest the Hearts of these Men, shew whether of these thou hast chosen, and they gave forth their Lots, and their Lot fell upon Matthias. After this, we find them instituting Deacons, who, though they were certainly the lowest Order of the Church, were nevertheless not to be taken out of the promiscuous Multitude. They were to be [e] Men of honest Report, and full of the Holy Ghost: And though the Brethren presented them, [f] yet the Apostles were the Persons, who actually approved of them, and, by the Imposition of Hands, impowered them, whom they thus ordained, not only to act under them, as Ministers in taking care of the Poor, but also to baptise new Converts, as we see St Stephen afterwards did at Samaria.

Bishop sent to another, by such of the Clergy, as were going into distant Dioceses, in order to maintain a good Concord and Agreement between them. 2. Ἀπολυτικαὶ, Letters Dimissory, whereby Leave was given to Persons, going into another Diocese, either to be ordained by the Bishop of the Place; or, if ordained already, to be admitted and incorporated into the Clergy of that Church. And, 3. Συστατικαὶ, Letters Commendatory, which were granted to the Clergy, when they went into another Diocese, that they might be employed in the Office whereunto they had been ordained; or granted to all, whether Clergy or Laity, who were going to travel, as Tickets of Hospitality, that wherever they came, upon producing these Letters, they might be known to be Catholick and Orthodox, and as such received and entertained. Cave's Primitive Christianity, Part III.

[x] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [y] Heb. v. 5. [z] Luke vi. 13. [a] Ibid. x. 1. [b] Matth. viii. 19. [c] Ibid. xix. 21, 22. [d] Acts i. 23, 24, &c. [e] Ibid. vi. 3, &c.

[f] Upon this Occasion, I cannot but take Notice of a vile Forgery, which is crept into very many Editions of the English Bible, especially, since the Beginning of the great Rebellion. St Luke tells (Acts vi. 1.) that when the Number of the Disciples was multiplied, and there was a Murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, that the Apostles said, look ye out seven Men, whom we may appoint over this Business, ὃς κατασήσομεν. Now in many modern Editions, and even in some of Field's beautiful Cambridge ones, instead of WE, it is, whom YE may appoint over this Business. This is a direct Corruption of the Text, and it is well known to what Purpose it served. We see what the People's Power was in appointing Ecclesiastical Officers: They proposed, the Apostles approved, and ordained; and that, as the Text plainly shews, without calling in any other Authority to make their Acts valid, besides their own. Wotton's Sermon, of the Rights of the Clergy.

IF ever any Man had a Miſſion from Heaven to preach the Goſpel, it was St Paul; ſo that he, who declared himſelf to be an Apoſtle, not of Men, neither by Men, but immediately from Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, needed not, one would think, any farther Deſignation by the Governors of the Church to ſet about the Work: And yet, when he was ſent abroad to preach the Goſpel with Barnabas, he was particularly ordained, or conſecrated, by the Apoſtles. Before that, indeed, he had publickly declared, what wonderful Things God had wrought by him in his Converſion, and had diſputed with the unbelieving Jews, (as any other private Chriſtian might do) convincing them, by his own Experience, that Jeſus was the Chriſt; yet ſtill he had no ſolemn Miſſion: And therefore, when the Holy Ghoſt commanded the Apoſtles, to [h] ſeparate Paul and Barnabas for the Work, for which he had called them, they faſted, and prayed, and laid their Hands upon them, and ſent them forth; in like Manner as Paul himſelf ordained Timothy, when he made him Biſhop of Epheſus; and Titus, when he ſent him into Crete, [i] to ſet in Order the Things, that were wanting, and ordain Elders in every City.

AND as the Practice of the Apoſtles ſhews, that all Men in common have not a Right to the prieſtly Office, ſo their Doctrines ſufficiently evince, that there is a particular Order of Men appointed to this Function: For, [k] are all Apoſtles? Are all Prophets? Are all Teachers? ſays St Paul, plainly enough intimating, that they are not all ſo, but peculiar Perſons are inveſted with theſe Dignities: And again, ſpeaking of Chriſt's Aſcenſion, he tells us, that he thereupon [l] gave ſome, Apoſtles; and ſome, Prophets; and ſome, Evangeliſts; and ſome, Paſtors and Teachers; for the perfecting of the Saints, for the Work of the Miniſtry, for the edifying of the Body of Chriſt; and this is to be, till we all come in the Unity of the Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, i. e. until the Church be conſummated: And, purſuant to this Diſtinction, we find him exhorting the People, [m] to know thoſe, who labour among them, and are over them in the Lord; and to [n] obey thoſe, that have the Rule over them, and to ſubmit themſelves; becauſe they watch for their Souls, as they that muſt give an Account; that they may do it with Joy, and not with Grief. From all which, it unqueſtionably follows, that Miniſters and People were originally diſtinct, and that there was a peculiar Rank of Men, all along in the Church, whoſe appointed Taſk it was, to miniſter about holy Things. and Precepts.

" BUT, allowing it was ſo, in the Infant-State of the Church, yet what Occa- " ſion is there for this Set of Men, or their Function now, when the Book of Life " is in every Man's Hands, and all the Congregation is knowing and learned, as well " as they?" 'Tis much to be wiſhed, indeed, that the Laity would ſo far attend to the Word of God, and other good Books, where the Subſtance of their Duty is comprized, as to attain a competent Underſtanding thereof, and thereby facilitate the Clergy's Pains, and make the Burthen of their high Calling leſs laborious. But, even upon the Suppoſition that moſt Men do ſo, we cannot but imagine, that ſome Advantage at leaſt will accrue, even to thoſe, that know their Duty beſt, from an Order of Men, who are bound to deal impartially with them, in awakening their Attention, ſearching their Conſciences, repreſenting their Danger, quickening their Endeavours, and frequently refreſhing their Memories in many Things, which they are ſo far from carefully recollecting, that the Temptations, and Pleaſures, and Cares of the World, often prevail with them to uſe many Arts, and to take great Pains to forget, and even drive theſe Things out of their Thoughts. and from Reaſon itſelf.

[o] BUT waving theſe, and ſuch-like Arguments, are we to ſuppoſe, that the whole of a Paſtor or Teacher's Office conſiſts in this ſingle Point of Inſtruction? No ſuch Thing. Theſe are the Perſons authorized by God, to tranſact the Affairs of the ſecond Covenant, between him and his People, and therefore called in Scripture his Delegates, and [p] Embaſſadors; to ſeal that Covenant by viſible Signs and Sacraments, and therefore ſaid to baptiſe Men for [q] the waſhing away of their Sins; and to offer the commemorative Sacrifice of their Lord's Death, and therefore ſaid to [r] bleſs the holy Elements at his Table. Theſe are appointed to declare the Conſcience abſolved or condemned, and, in the Name, and by the Power of their great Original, the High-Prieſt of our Profeſſion, to grant Pardon upon certain Conditions, and therefore ſaid [s] to rebuke with all Authority, and [t] to retain and remit the [g] Wotton's Sermon, of the Rights of the Clergy. [h] Acts xiii. 2, 3. [i] Tit. i. 5. [k] 1 Cor. xii. 29. [l] Eph. iv. 11, &c. [m] 1 Theſ. v. 12. [n] Heb. xiii. 17. [o] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. IV. [p] 2 Cor. v. 10. [q] Acts xxii. 16. [r] 1 Cor. x. 16. [s] Tit. ii. 15. [t] John xx. 23.

the Sins of others. These are ſet between God and Men, to bleſs in his Name, and to intercede for their Charge, with an expreſs Promiſe of being heard in their Mediations. In a Word, theſe are declared to be ordained of Men, in Things pertaining unto God; and, in that Reſpect, to have an Honour conferred upon them, which [u] no Man taketh to himſelf, but he, that was called of God, as was Aaron. So far is this Diſtinction between the Clergy and Laity from being an empty Title; ſo impoſſible to be at any Time ſuperfluous; and, by Conſequence, ſo juſtly to be concluded of perpetual Duration, and even eſſential to the Conſtitution of the Chriſtian Church. [x] And well might it be ſo in the Chriſtian, when, even in the Gentile World, the Suggeſtions of Nature, and the innate Reverence of a Deity taught them, that ſome Perſons were peculiarly to be appointed for the Myſteries and Ceremonies of their Religion, and, that they might perform them with more Exactneſs and Solemnity, ſhould entirely devote themſelves to this Work.

THUS we have ſeen, from Scripture and Reaſon both, that the Miniſters of God were, in all Times, a diſtinct Order of Men, ſeparated from the People, and inveſted with a Character and Office peculiar; and ſhall now proceed in our Enquiry who theſe Miniſters were; how they ſucceeded; and in what Point of Pre-eminence they ſtood, with Relation to one another.

Their Orders in the Church from the firſt.

1. WHEN God at firſt eſtabliſhed a Form of Worſhip among the People, whom he had ſeparated from the reſt of Mankind for his more immediate Service, [y] he appointed three Orders of Men, the High-Prieſt, Prieſts, and Levites, to attend his Temple, and ſerve at his Altar. When our Saviour inſtituted his Religion, being no Lover of Innovations, he kept as near to this Form in his own Time, as the Circumſtances of Things would bear; for himſelf ſuſtained the Place of High-Prieſt, as he is [z] ſometimes called in Scripture; his Apoſtles were, under him, as Prieſts, and the Diſciples below them, as Levites. When the Apoſtles ſucceeded their Maſter in the Government of the Church, being not fixed as yet in Dioceſes, they became a College of Biſhops, and, out of the Diſciples, elected Evangeliſts, ſent about to preach, and plant Churches, who repreſented Presbyters; and to theſe they added the Deacons, who were ordained, not only in Judea, but alſo among the Gentile Proſelytes, [a] as appears from the Title of ſome Epiſtles, and the Rules given to Timothy concerning them. When great Multitudes, in ſeveral Nations, were converted, and Biſhops were placed in every great City, [b] it ſeems very evident, that there were two Orders under their Inſpection, the preaching Preſbyters, and the miniſtering Deacons, eſpecially in regular Churches, and at leaſt before the Expiration of the Apoſtolic Age. But, becauſe all this may be looked upon as bare Aſſertions only, we will here examine a little into the Hiſtory of the Apoſtles Times, and thence trace down their Succeſſors for an Age or two following.

Though the Account hereof is not ſo diſtinct, as afterwards.

AND here the candid and impartial Reader will not expect, we hope, ſo full and diſtinct an Account of the Miniſters, who aſſiſted the Apoſtles in governing the Church, as may be given of thoſe, who lived in ſucceeding Ages. 1. [c] Becauſe many of the Miniſters, who lived in the Age of the Apoſtles, were extraordinary Perſons, whoſe Miniſtrations are not always ſo eaſy to be diſtinguiſhed from the ordinary Offices of the Church, or from one another. The Apoſtle, indeed, tells us, that [d] God hath ſet ſome in his Church, firſt Apoſtles, ſecondly Prophets, thirdly Teachers, after that Miracles, then Gifts of healing, Helps, Governments, Diverſities of Tongues: In which Place it is certain, that different Orders of Miniſters are deſcribed, ſome of which did not only excel others in the extraordinary Gifts of the Spirit, but had Authority alſo to govern them; becauſe the firſt Order is that of the Apoſtles, to whom all other Chriſtians, of what Rank ſoever, were ſubject: But then, it is not eaſy to give a diſtinct and certain Account, what were the particular Offices of theſe Perſons; which of them were extraordinary and temporary, and which deſigned for the conſtant and laſting Uſe of the Church, ſince the Scriptures do not explain them, and [e] learned Men have differed in nothing more, than in their Judgments about them.

[u] Heb. v. 1. [x] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [y] Comber, on Ordination.
[z] Heb. iv. 14. [a] Phil. i. 1. 1 Tim. iii. 8. [b] Comber, ibid.
[c] Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-Government. [d] 1 Cor. xii. 28.
[e] The moſt general and received Explication of theſe Offices is this ——— The Prophets are ſuppoſed to be the Expounders of the difficult and abſtruſe Parts of Scripture, by an immediate Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt; for ſo the Apoſtle, in the following Chapter, ſeems to put it; though I have propheſied, and know all Myſteries, and all Knowledge, 1 Cor. xiii. 2. The Teachers ſeem to be Men, who, having received the Doctrine of Faith from the Apoſtles, preached it to others for their Converſion, and ſo they are the ſame with thoſe, who laboured in the Word and Doctrine, them. 2. It is to be obſerved, that the hiſtorical Parts of the New Teſtament are very ſhort, and many Times relate nothing farther, than the firſt Plantation of the Goſpel: And that moſt of the Epiſtles, being ſent to Churches juſt in their Infancy, where ſtanding Miniſters, as yet, were not ſettled, and written to Perſons lately converted from Judaiſm or Heatheniſm, their main Deſign was to inſtruct them in the Principles of Chriſtianity, or to warn them againſt falſe Teachers. But there was not that Occaſion to ſpeak any Thing concerning the Form of Church-Government, which the Apoſtles either kept in their own Hands, or committed to Perſons choſen by themſelves. All that ſeems requiſite was, in general Terms, to put them in mind to be obedient to thoſe, who laboured among them in the Miniſtry, and took great Pains for the Inſtruction and Salvation of their Souls.

The firſt Miniſters of the Church called Elders.

THOUGH therefore it cannot be expected, that the Account, which the Scripture gives us of the Offices and Orders of the Chriſtian Miniſtry, in this Situation of Circumſtances, ſhould be full and diſtinct; yet, if we look into the Church of Jeruſalem, where Chriſtianity firſt began to form itſelf, beſides the twelve Apoſtles, who lived there, and governed the Church together for ſome Time, we find ſeven Deacons, who were ſolemnly ordained by the Apoſtles, to be [f] Miniſters of the Word, as well as Miniſters of Tables; and therefore it was required, as a previous Qualification, that they ſhould be full of the Holy Ghoſt and Wiſdom. When the Apoſtles were about to leave Jeruſalem, and to take each one the Way, which the Holy Ghoſt ſhould direct for the ſpeedier Propagation of the Goſpel, St James was left Biſhop of Jeruſalem, and had, at the ſame Time, a College of Preſbyters ordained under him: [g] Nor want there ſeveral other Paſſages, both in the Acts and the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles, which make it appear, that, in all Places, which had been long enough converted to be formed into regular Churches, there were Orders of ſtanding and fixed Miniſters. St Peter, who writes to the Strangers, ſcattered thro' Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Aſia, and Bithynia, exhorts [h] the Elders to feed the Flock of God, and the People to be obedient to their Elders. St Paul having called the Elders of Epheſus to Miletus, gives them a ſolemn Charge [i] to take Care of the Flock, over which the Holy Ghoſt has made them [Ἐπισκόπους] Overſeers, and tells Titus, that he had left him in Crete, to [k] ordain Elders in every City. St James, who writes to the twelve Tribes, wherever ſcattered abroad, directs [l] the Sick among them to ſend for the Elders of the Church, to pray over them, and anoint them with Oil, in the Name of the Lord, and (to inſtance in no more) St John, in the three firſt Chapters of his Revelation, introduces our Lord, as ſending ſeven Epiſtles to the ſeven Churches of the Proconſular Aſia, directed to the ſeven Angels of theſe Churches, whom he calls the [m] ſeven Stars in his Right-Hand, and by whom almoſt all Interpreters underſtand ſo many ſingle Perſons inveſted with ſupreme Authority in theſe ſeven Churches. So that in all the Cities of Crete, in the principal Towns of Aſia, and in all the Places, where the twelve Tribes were diſperſed, and that was all over the Roman Doctrine, 1 Tim. v. 17. The Helps, i. e. putting the Abſtract for the Concrete, Helpers, ſeem to be the Deacons, whoſe Office it was to look to the Goods of the Church, to the Relief and Maintenance of the Poor, and to aſſiſt the ſuperior Orders in adminiſtering the Sacraments of Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper: For, as the Talmudiſts, ſays Dr Lightfoot, call the Levites the Helps of the Prieſts, ſo may the Apoſtle call the Deacons, which anſwered to them, the Helps of the Apoſtles and Biſhops of the Church. Governments, i. e. (according to the former Way of Speaking) Governors are interpreted, by ſome, to be the ruling Preſbyters, whoſe Work it was to obſerve the Manners of the People, and to promote good Diſcipline and Government in the Church; others, with more Reaſon, ſuppoſe them to denote the Rulers of the Churches planted by the Apoſtles, and who are ſometimes ſtiled Biſhops, Acts xx. 28. Sometimes ἡγούμενοι, Guides, or Rulers, Heb. xiii. 7, 17. And ſometimes προϊστῶτες, Preſidents, or Prelates, Rom. xii. 8. 1 Theſſ. v. 12. But Dr Lightfoot conjectures, that they were the Men, who had the Gift of diſcerning Spirits, becauſe the Κυβερνήσεις, which we here render Governments, ſignifies, in the Old Teſtament, wiſe Counſels, and Skill in giving Judgment of Things, [Prov. i. 5. xi. 14. xiv. 16.] and it is not reaſonable, as he ſays, to ſuppoſe, that no Office ſhould be appointed to this ſo neceſſary a Gift, and yet no other is here mentioned, to which it can belong. Whitby, on 1 Cor. xii. 28. As for the Gifts of Healing, of Miracles, and of Tongues, they have not the leaſt Appearance of diſtinguiſhing the Perſons, who were poſſeſſed of them, as Officers of the Church, becauſe they were promiſcuouſly conferred on all, as appears in the Caſe of the Converſion of Cornelius and his Friends, as well as the Converts which were at Epheſus; and therefore the ſagacious Mr Rogers concludes, that the Characters, here deſcribed, were not, in a proper Senſe, Officers of the Church of Corinth, but only Perſons, by whoſe ſupernatural and infuſed Gifts, the Holy Ghoſt ſupplied the Want of proper Officers, and were therefore never deſigned for any long Continuance in that Church. Sermons, on ſeveral Occaſions.

[f] Acts vi. 2, &c.

[g] This, indeed, is not expreſsly mentioned in the Hiſtory, but there is good Reaſon to preſume it was ſo; becauſe, after a certain Period of Time, we find ſuch frequent Mention made of the Elders, viz. that (Acts xv. 2, &c.) the Diſciples came from Antioch to Jeruſalem, to conſult with the Apoſtles and Elders, whether the Converts from Heatheniſm were to be circumciſed; that theſe Diſciples were received by the Apoſtles and Elders; that a Decree was accordingly enacted (Acts xvi. 4.) by the Apoſtles and Elders at Jeruſalem; and that when St Paul returned from preaching the Goſpel, and was deſirous to give an Account of his Succeſs among the Gentiles, (Acts xxi. 18.) the Day following he went in unto James, all the Elders being preſent; James, as the Chief, or Biſhop, and the Elders, as next under him, Paſtors and Teachers of the Church of Jeruſalem. Archbiſhop Potter, of Church Government.

[h] 1 Pet. v. 1, 2. [i] Acts xx. 28. [k] Tit. i. 5. [l] James v. 14. [m] Rev. i. 20.

Roman Empire, there were Elders, or Perſons intruſted with the Government of God's Church, appointed even before the Canon of the New Teſtament was compleated. But who theſe Elders were; whether they were the ſame, as what we now properly call Biſhops, or of an Order next above Deacons, and what, in Time, came to be diſtinguiſhed by the Name of Preſbyters, is a Queſtion, that has exerciſed the Pens of many learned Men; which, though we pretend not to determine, yet it may poſſibly give ſome Light to the Argument, if we conſider,

Who theſe Elders were.

1. THAT, tho' the Words Biſhop and Preſbyter be ſometimes uſed promiſcuouſly, yet it will not therefore follow, that they are both of the ſame Order. [p] In the Jewiſh OEconomy, there was an High-Prieſt, under him inferior Prieſts, and under them Levites; and yet, in ſeveral Authors, all theſe three Orders are comprehended under the two Names of Prieſts and Levites, tho' it cannot be denied, that the High-Prieſt had Powers and Prerogatives peculiar to himſelf. The Apoſtles, in like Manner, call [q] themſelves Preſbyters, but it muſt not thence be concluded, that every Preſbyter was an Apoſtle, becauſe it is apparent, that there were ſeveral Powers exerciſed by the Apoſtles, which never, of Right, belonged to a mere Preſbyter; and therefore, when the Name of Preſbyter is applied to any of a ſuperior Order, it might be either in Conſideration of their Seniority, (the Apoſtles, and others admitted to the Epiſcopate, being generally Perſons of advanced Years) or on Account of their Authority as Church-Governors, according to the general Import and Signification of the Word Preſbyter; or becauſe theſe Governors, having, each of them, really all the Power of a Preſbyter, might the rather call themſelves ſo, becauſe it was a Title of more Condeſcenſion and Humility, than that of Apoſtles, which, in a ſhort Time, grew into high Repute. It may be conſidered,

2. THAT though, in ſome Churches, we read only of Biſhops and Deacons, which may induce Men to imagine, that Biſhops and Preſbyters were all of the ſame Order; [r] yet it is a Thing conſonant enough to Reaſon, that in thoſe Churches, where any of the Apoſtles lived, or commonly reſided, the Government remained in their Hands; and ſo long there was no Occaſion for any more than two Orders, viz. Preſbyters and Deacons, under the Direction of an Apoſtle: And, in like Manner, in thoſe Cities where few were converted, there was no Occaſion, at firſt, for any more than a Biſhop and his Deacons, until the Number of Proſelytes was increaſed. To this Purpoſe, we find Epiphanius [s] accounting, why St Paul, in ſome Places, mentions only Biſhops and Deacons without Preſbyters; and in others, Preſbyters and Deacons without Biſhops; viz. "That the Apoſtles could not perfectly ſettle all Things at once, and "therefore, in their Converſions, where no Perſon was fitly qualified to be a Biſhop, "they only ordained Preſbyters and Deacons, and ſuch Places, for the preſent, re"mained without a Biſhop; and, in other Places, where one was found fit to be a "Biſhop, but by Reaſon of the Paucity of Believers, there were no others qualified "to be Preſbyters, they ordained only a Biſhop and Deacons." Which, by the Way, ſolves the Difficulty, why St Paul delivers Rules [t] for the Ordination of Biſhops and Deacons, without mentioning the intermediate Order of Preſbyters; ſince, according to this Situation of Affairs, he might, conveniently enough, include theſe laſt in the Rules which concern Biſhops; [u] becauſe Preſbyters are ordained to a Sort of Copartnerſhip in the Paſtoral and Epiſcopal Charge, and (excepting the Impoſition of Hands in Ordination and Confirmation) there is ſcarce any Act, which Preſbyters may not exerciſe, as well as Biſhops. But,

3. THOUGH we ſhould allow, that the Names of Biſhop and Preſbyter did, in the Age of the Apoſtles, ſignify the ſame Office; and that all the Biſhops, ſpoken of in the New Teſtament, were mere Preſbyters, and of the next Order above Deacons; yet ſtill it appears, that, even then, there were three diſtinct Orders of Miniſters in the Church; namely, that of Deacons, another of Preſbyters, and over them, a ſuperior Order, in which were not only the Apoſtles, but alſo Timothy and Titus, who governed the Churches in which they reſided. For it is plain, from St Paul's Epiſtles to each, (but * more eſpecially from that to Timothy) that they had Power, not only over the Laity, to [x] command and teach them; [y] to receive Widows into the Church's Service; or to reject or refuſe them; and [z] to oblige Women to go modeſtly in

[p] Archbiſhop Potter, of Church-Government. [q] 1 Pet. v. 1. John Ep. ii. 1. [r] Comber, on the Ordination Office. [s] Hæreſ. DXXV. Sect. V. This Account he affirms to be taken from the moſt ancient Hiſtories, [Βαβυλῶνιαις ἱστοριαις] and it is hence manifeſt, that, in his Time, it was believed, that the Superiority of Biſhops over Preſbyters was eſtabliſhed by the Apoſtles. [t] 1 Tim. iii. [u] Archbiſhop Potter, ibid.
* Scott's Mediator. [x] 1 Tim. iv. 11. [y] Ibid. v. 4, 9, 16. [z] Ibid. ii. 11, 12.

in their Apparel, and to keep Silence in the Church; but alſo over the Clergy; to take care, [a] that ſuitable Proviſion ſhould be made for them, [b] that none ſhould be admitted a Deacon, till after competent Trial, nor ordained an Elder, till after he had well acquainted himſelf in the Deaconſhip; to exerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction over them; [c] to receive Accuſations againſt them, and, if he found them guilty, to put them to open Shame; to charge Paſtors [d] not to preach any ſtrange Doctrine; if they did, [e] to rebuke with all Authority; [f] to admoniſh Hereticks, and, in caſe of Pertinency, to eject them from the Communion of the Church.

THUS it ſeems manifeſt, that, in the Times of the Apoſtles, there were three diſtinct Orders of Miniſters, by whom the Chriſtian Church was governed; and, if we proceed in our Enquiry an Age or two farther, we ſhall find who the ſupreme Governor in each Church was, cleared up beyond all Controverſy. Clemens Romanus, who wrote an Epiſtle to the Corinthians before St John's Death, reminds them, that, before the late unhappy Schiſm, they walked in God's Laws, being ſubject to [g] their Governors, i. e. their Biſhops, or ſpiritual Rulers, and giving due Honour to the Preſbyters among them. Ignatius, who ſuffered Martyrdom about four Years after St John's Death, writing to the Magneſians, exhorts them all to reverence their Biſhop; [h] their Biſhop preſiding in the Place of God; the Preſbyters, as the Council of Apoſtles; and the Deacons, as the Miniſters of Chriſt. Clemens of Alexandria, who lived in the ſame Century, having ſelected ſome Texts of Scripture, containing a Summary of the Duties which concern all Chriſtians in general, adds, [i] that there are other Precepts without Number, which concern Men in particular Capacities; ſome, which relate to Presbyters, others to Biſhops, and others to Deacons. Tertullian, who was contemporary with them, in his Treatiſe of Baptiſm, affirms, that [k] the Power of baptiſing is lodged in the Biſhop, and that it may alſo be exerciſed by Presbyters and Deacons, but not without the Biſhop's Commiſſion; [l] and, in another of his Pieces, he tells us, that Biſhops were ſet over the Church by the Apoſtles, and had had their Succeſſion continued to his Time. Origen, who was Scholar to Clemens of Alexandria, and flouriſhed in the Beginning of the next Century, ſpeaking of our Debts in the Lord's Prayer, inſiſts firſt on the Debts or Duties common to all Chriſtians, and then adds, [m] beſides theſe general Debts, there is a Debt peculiar to Widows, another to Deacons, another to Preſbyters, and another to Biſhops; which is the greateſt of all, exacted by our Saviour of the whole Church, and who will ſeverely puniſh the Non-payment of it. Cyprian, who was Tertullian's Scholar, lived a little before the Middle of the ſame Age: And he, blaming ſome Preſbyters, who, without his Conſent, would have reſtored to the Church's Communion ſome, who had lapſed, in the Time of Perſecution; [n] What a dreadful Proſpect, ſays he, muſt we have of the Divine Vengeance, when ſome of the Presbyters, neither mindful of the Goſpel, nor of their own Salvation, neither regarding the future Judgments of God, nor the Biſhop, who now preſides over them, dare arrogate entirely to themſelves, what was never attempted under any of my Predeceſſors? Which is a ſufficient Evidence of the Subordination of Preſbyters to their Biſhops, both in Cyprian's own Age, and under his Predeceſſors.

Biſhops the ſupreme Governors of the Church, from Antiquity.

BUT the farther we go, the clearer the Evidence both of the Succeſſion and Preeminence of Biſhops appears, and therefore to cloſe up all farther Enquiry with this Obſervation,——That, before the Middle of the ſecond Century, viz. within forty Years after the laſt of the Apoſtles, ſingle Perſons did every where preſide over Presbyters; that theſe did, each of them, exerciſe Authority over their reſpective Churches; and that their Powers were as great, as thoſe, which we claim to belong to Biſhops now, is ſo irrefragably proved from the beſt and moſt ancient Monuments of the Church, that the greateſt Oppoſers of epiſcopal Authority have been forced to confeſs it: Which, to all unprejudiced Perſons, muſt needs be a ſufficient Proof of ſuch an Inſtitution.

FOR that the firſt Succeſſors of the Apoſtles were wiſe and good Men, no one, who has any Regard to the Cauſe of Chriſtianity, will deny. They knew what the Apoſtles had ordained concerning the Government of the Church, and no ſufficient Reaſon can be aſſigned, why they ſhould innovate upon an Apoſtolick Inſtitution.

and the Reaſon of the Thing.

° They

[a] 1 Tim. v. 17, 18. [b] Ibid. iii. 10. 13, [c] Ibid. v. 19, 20. [d] Ibid. i. 3. [e] Tit. ii. 15. [f] Ibid. iii. 10. [g] Since we cannot reaſonably ſuppoſe, that the Chriſtians at Corinth had then any ſecular Governors of their own, theſe Ἡγούμενοι (who are ſet before, and diſtinguiſhed from the Preſbyters) muſt be their Biſhops, who in Scripture are called by that very Name, [Acts xv. 22. and Heb. xiii. 7.] and it may be farther remarked, that Obedience is made due to them, and only Reverence to the Preſbyters. Comber, on the Ordination Office. [h] Ad Magneſ. c. vi. [i] Pædag. Lib. III. c. xii. [k] De Baptiſmo. c. xvii. [l] De præſcrip. Hæretic. c. xxx. [m] Origen. Lib. Περὶ ἰυχῆς. [n] Cypriani Epiſt.

• They were Men of ſuch Integrity, ſuch Piety, ſuch Love to Chriſt, that they never ſcrupled to ſeal the Goſpel, which they preached, with their Blood; they brought forth the Fruits of it in their holy Lives, and ratified its Truth by their Deaths. Now, how was this conſiſtent with the known Humility of theſe Perſons to arrogate to themſelves more Power over their Brethren, than their Lord and Maſter had truſted them with? What could ſhew more Impiety towards Chriſt, than boldly and ſacrilegiouſly to violate his Inſtitution? And what could be more injurious to their Brethren, than to rob them of their Privileges, and to aſſume to themſelves alone an Authority, which was common to others beſides? How much Ambition, how much Pride, how much Tyranny muſt poſſeſs the Minds of thoſe, who would thus go about to lord it over God's Heritage? Theſe are the Crimes, which Contenders for a Parity among Eccleſiaſtical Governors muſt, in Conſequence, impute to the immediate Diſciples and Succeſſors of the Apoſtles, when they repreſent them, as uſurping an undue Authority and Dominion over thoſe, who, by Chriſt's Appointment, were their Equals; but if theſe Men were holy, if they were religious, if they were worthy of the Name of Chriſtians, (as none I think, can have the Courage to gainſay) they were not, they could not, be guilty of ſuch intolerable Pride and Arrogance.

AND as they would not if they could, ſo neither is it probable that they could, if they would, have introduced into the univerſal Church another Form of Government, than ſuch as was inſtituted by the Apoſtles. If indeed only one or two Churches had been governed by Biſhops, there would be Room to ſuſpect, that this might be an undue Deviation from the Apoſtolical Pattern. But, when all the Churches, founded by the Apoſtles, though never ſo remote, and not ſo much as known by Name to one another, did all agree in the ſame Form of Government, ſo that there is not one Church, we read of, but what we are able to prove was governed by a ſingle Biſhop; this, we think, could never ſo ſoon, ſo univerſally, have been brought about, unleſs the Churches had, together with the ſame Faith, received alſo the ſame Form of Government from the Apoſtles. If the ſeveral Biſhops, in their ſeveral Churches, did challenge and exerciſe an Authority over their Preſbyters, which was contrary to the Command of Chriſt, and the Inſtitution of the Apoſtles, how came it to paſs, that no Preſbyters did ever oppoſe them, and object to them this Violation of the Lord's Command, and Invaſion of their Rights? If the Apoſtles did delegate an equal Share of Authority to every Preſbyter of each Church, how came the Preſbyters quietly to ſuffer this Authority to be forced away from them, and transferred upon the Biſhops? Why did not the Preſbyters of that Age, as well as ſome of ours, pretend that they were equal to the greateſt of the Biſhops? Were not they, who had lived in the next Age, as well acquainted with the Practice of the Apoſtles, as we are, at the Diſtance of ſo many Centuries? And if they were, how came it to paſs, that no Preſbyter of them all had, in thoſe Days, Courage enough to tell an aſſuming Biſhop, "That he arrogated too much to himſelf; that "he could not but know, what every one knew, that the Lord and his Apoſtles, "from whom they received their Faith, their Doctrine, and their Authority, had de-"creed, that there ſhould be an exact Equality between them, and no one pretend "to a Superiority over another?" And yet it is certain Matter of Fact, that ſuch an Authority was exerciſed without any Oppoſition; that ſuch a Power was challenged by Biſhops, and never reſiſted by Preſbyters; and that, from the Age next after the Apoſtles, to the Age next before ours, there was never above [p] one Preſbyter taken Notice of in Hiſtory, (and him we find branded as an Heretick on this Account) as pretending to be equal to a Biſhop.

An Objection. "BUT might not this be done, may the preſent Advocates for Equality ſay, with-"out any Methods of Uſurpation, by a free Conſent and voluntary Dedition? The "Apoſtles indeed, at firſt exerciſed a Superiority over other Eccleſiaſtical Orders, "but [o] Biſhop Smalridge's Sermons.

[p] This was Aerius; but upon what Account he is called an Heretick, is not ſo well agreed: Blundel however has well obſerved, that the main Reaſon why he was condemned, was his unneceſſary Separation from the Church, and not his Opinion about Biſhops; for, had it been the latter, there can be no Reaſon aſſigned, why his Hereſy, if it was then thought ſo, ſhould not be mentioned either by Socrates, Theodoret, Sozomen, or Evagrius, before whoſe Time he lived, when yet they mention the Euſtathiani, who were Contemporaries with him: And therefore, when Epiphanius, and others, liſt him in the Roll of Hereticks, it muſt be, either on Account of the other heretical Notions which he maintained, or becauſe they took the Name Heretick, (as it is evident they often did) for one, who, upon a Matter of different Opinion from the preſent Senſe of the Church, did proceed to make Separation from the Body of the Catholick Church; which I take to be the trueſt Account of the Matter. Stillingfleet's Irenicum.

" but leaving none behind to ſucceed in that Power, the Church was every where " governed by a Common Council of Preſbyters, till this Form of Government being " found inconvenient, as giving too much Occaſion for Schiſms and Diviſions, it " was at laſt univerſally agreed, that one Preſbyter ſhould be choſen out to preſide " over the reſt:" And from this they produce the Authority of St Jerom [q], who having obſerved, that the Names of Biſhops and Preſbyters are uſed promiſcuouſly in the Scriptures, and that the Apoſtles likewiſe, in ſome Places, call themſelves Preſbyters; from thence he concludes, that there was no Diſtinction between their Offices, but that Apoſtle, Biſhop, and Preſbyter, were only different Names for the ſame Thing; that Churches at firſt were generally governed by a College of Preſbyters, equal in Rank and Dignity to one another; but, afterwards Diviſions ariſing by Reaſon of this Parity among Preſbyters, when every Preſbyter began to claim, as his own particular Subjects, thoſe, whom he had baptiſed; it was decreed, all the World over, that one of the Preſbyters, in every Church, ſhould be ſet over the reſt, and particularly called Biſhop, and that the chief Care of the Church ſhould be committed to him, in order that the Seeds of Schiſm and Contention might be deſtroyed.

THIS Suppoſition at firſt Sight reflects not a little upon the Wiſdom of Chriſt and his Apoſtles. For, if the Apoſtles, devolving the Government of the Church upon common Councils of Preſbyters, left it in ſuch a Condition, as occaſioned Schiſms and Diviſions, and, for the Removal of theſe, the Church afterwards found it neceſſary to diſſolve theſe Preſbyteries, and introduce Epiſcopacy in its room; then were Chriſt and his Apoſtles both imprudent in not foreſeeing, and neglective in not preventing theſe Diſorders; and, conſequently, had not the After-Age taken care to ſupply the Defect of their Conduct, by ſettling a wiſer Form of Government, than they left, the Church had infallibly run to Ruin. This is the unavoidable Conſequence of St Jerom's Hypotheſis, and, at the ſame Time, a remarkable Inſtance, to what Abſurdities a wiſe Man's Paſſion and Reſentment will lead him. For the true Occaſion of this famous Paſſage was,——That ſome Deacons, who enjoyed wealthier Places in the Church, than many Preſbyters, claimed ſeveral Privileges above them, and were thereupon unwilling to be admitted into the Order. This Irregularity ſo provoked that holy Father, who himſelf was only a Preſbyter, that, to raiſe his own Order beyond the Competition of Deacons, he endeavoured to make it equal, by its Original Inſtitution, with Biſhops and Apoſtles; and in this he fell into a common Miſtake of running into one Extreme, to avoid another. But even if this had not been the Caſe, yet there is very good Reaſon to except againſt his Teſtimony, becauſe it was a long while ſubſequent to the Witneſſes, we have above produced.

Anſwered.

The Occaſion of St Jerom's Words.

St JEROM [r] was not born till about three hundred and thirty Years after Chriſt, almoſt an hundred Years after Origen one of the lateſt, and full three hundred Years after Clemens, the earlieſt of the Authors we have cited; and therefore, to adhere to the Authority of one ſingle Witneſs of ſo late a Date, againſt the unanimous Aſſertions of ſo many, that lived ſo near a Matter of Fact, cannot but be thought irrational, eſpecially when we find this ſame great Advocate for Parity, in other Parts of his Writings, where he was not heated with Paſſion, expreſsly declaring, that [s] what Aaron and his Sons were, that we know the Biſhops and Preſbyters to be, and thereby acknowledging, that, as Aaron, by Divine Right, was ſuperior to his Sons the Prieſts, ſo is the Biſhop to the Preſbyters. [t] As plain a Contradiction to this above-cited Paſſage, as one Propoſition can be to another! And therefore we muſt ſuppoſe, that the Notion of an univerſal Decree, whereby one Preſbyter in every Church was raiſed to an Epiſcopal Superiority, was a mere Conjecture of this Father's, in order to ſolve the Difficulty, which he conceived in the promiſcuous Uſe of the Words Apoſtle, Biſhop, and Preſbyter; " ſince it is impoſſible to conceive, how ſo great a Change ſhould be introduced in all Parts of the World, at a Time when the Church abounded with Men of great Parts and Learning, and yet not the leaſt Mention be made of it in any other Writings; at a Time when no General Council could meet to appoint it; when there were no Chriſtian Princes, on a political View, to ſet it forward; and when by Reaſon of the Heat of Perſecution, and the Diſtance of Churches, there was ſo little Commerce and Intercourſe between them, that from the Churches of Armenia and Perſia in the Eaſt, to thoſe of Spain in the Weſt, from the African Churches in the South, to our Britiſh Churches in the North, this Conſtitution ſhould univerſally be received and ſubmitted to, if it had not been eſtabliſhed by the Apoſtles, or the firſt Founders of theſe Churches."

That Preſbytery could not be changed into Epiſcopacy.

[q] Ep. ad Evagrium. [r] Ep. ad Nepot. [s] Scott's Mediator. [t] Archbiſhop Potter, of Church Government. [u] See Whitby's Preface to the Epiſtle to Titus.

GOVERNMENT, we know, is a publick Matter of Fact, and, as such, visible, and well known to every one. The People were all concerned to be well acquainted with the Rulers, whom God had set over them, and to whom the Scriptures had obliged them to pay Obedience; and therefore would not easily submit to an Innovation, which manifestly endangered the Safety of their Souls. But even supposing that both they and the Presbyters could have been prevailed upon to come into it; yet what Temptation or Motive could the Persons, then exalted, have to accept of the Advancement? Men do not easily desire a Change, but upon Prospect of some Ease or temporal Advantage, much less when they perceive the Change is like to add to their Trouble, and increase their Danger. Now this was really the Case of the first Christian Bishops: They were still exposed to the sharpest Fury of their Persecutors, and when any Storm was raised against the Church, it commonly fell upon them first. Their Labours too were very great; and as the Care of the whole Flock lay upon them, they were extremely sedulous, and unwearied in the Discharge of it? And can we then reasonably think, that they could be so fond of so much Toil and Peril, as to violate the Institution of the blessed Jesus or his Apostles, to obtain it? This is repugnant to the Nature of Man, and abhorrent to their Principles, (as we shewed before) and therefore upon the whole we may conclude, that whatever the Sense of the Passage, upon which the Objection is founded, may be, the Superiority of Bishops to Presbyters was of ancient Right, derived from the Apostles, and no subsequent Concession, or Innovation.

The small Distinction between Bishop and Presbyter.

THIS Difference, however, we owe to the Authority of St Jerom, among many other Fathers, as to suppose the Distinction between Bishop and Presbyter, not only as to the Honours and Emoluments, wherewith the Bounty of Princes has enriched the former, but even as to the Exercise of their Office and spiritual Jurisdiction, was not near so conspicuous in former Ages, as it is now. A Bishop then thought it no Disparagement * to be joined with the lowest Priest in the sacerdotal Honour. The common Appellation, [x] wherewith they addressed each other, was Brother, or Fellow-Presbyter; nor was it any Disparagement to his Wisdom and Knowledge, in every Matter of Importance, to advise with the [y] Assembly of Presbyters, which was held the Senate of the Church. Nay, several Things there were, in a Manner peculiar to the Bishop's Office and Function, which yet he could not do, without the Consent and Approbation of his Presbyters. He could not [z] ordain any Clerks, unless the Presbyters were consenting to it; for they were the Persons, who were to offer and propose such, as they judged fit to enter into holy Orders: He could not hear any Cause of Consequence [a] without their Presence, nor determine it, without their Approbation, and in case he did, the Sentence he gave was to be deemed null; nor could [b] he degrade any Presbyter, without the Consent of a Synod, wherein a Majority of Presbyters were usually present; or [c] suspend him, without the Approbation of his Chapter.

Dr Comber's Opinion hereupon.

" I AM very sensible, (says the [d] learned Author, I have frequently quoted upon " this Subject) that many of the Privileges, belonging to the second Order of the " Clergy, have been laid aside, whether to repress the Ambition of the Presbyters, " who unjustly aimed at an Equality, or out of an Affectation of Singularity in some " of the superior Degrees, I will not determine. 'Tis, however, equally pernicious " to the Church, for Presbyters to aspire at a Parity with Bishops, or for Bishops " to despise the others, as unworthy to advise or assist them: For the former " destroys, and the latter very much impairs the good Government of the Church. " Bishops cannot exercise that Authority, which Christ and his Apostles left them, " if Presbyters were their Equals; for this, as St Jerom speaks, will make as many " Schisms, as Priests; nor can they have that useful Assistance, towards the Execution " of their episcopal Function, which was designed them, when they exclude so " many learned and able Men, as this next Order affords, from their Counsels and " Administrations. The Orders therefore must be distinct, to avoid Confusion; " but, provided the Subordination be kept up, due Respect should at all Times be " shewn, to exclude arbitrary Dominion. The Bishop, in short, as an ancient Canon " has

* Presbyteros cum Episcopo sacerdotali honore conjunctos. Cypr. ad. Luc. Ep. 58. [x] Fratri & Compresbytero sexto. Aug. Ep. 104. Nay, the College of Presbyters, writing to St Cyprian, their Bishop, call him Brother. Cypr. Ep. 26. [y] Σύμβουλοι καὶ συνεδρίται Ἐπισκόπου, Ignat. Ep. ad Tral. Habemus in Ecclesiâ Senatum nostrum, cœtum Presbyterorum. Hier. in Jesai. c. iii. [z] Ut Episcopus sine Concilio Clericorum suorum Clericos non ordinet. Conc. 4. Carth. Can. 22. [a] Ut Episcopus nullius causam audiat, absque præsentiâ Clericorum suorum, alioqui irrita erit sententia. Ibid. Can. 23. [b] Concil. Hispal. 2. Can. 6. Anno 619. [c] Vel inhonestè tractare, aut sine Judicio Capituli suspendere. Alex. III. in Decret. Lib. V. [d] Comber, on Ordination.

"has provided, ſhould ſit higher in the Aſſembly of Preſbyters in the Church, but with-
"in the Houſe he ſhould conſider them as Colleagues: In Publick, he ſhould have
"all imaginable Expreſſions of Reverence from his Clergy; but, in Private, ſhould "treat them with great Civility and Condeſcenſion, to allay the Splendor of an ex"alted Fortune, and to leſſen the Diſtance, which his Honours and Temporalities
"have ſet between them."

THUS we have endeavoured to ſhew, that [e] as, in the Jewiſh Church, the High-Prieſt was above the Prieſts and Levites; as, in the Infancy of the Chriſtian Church, Chriſt was above the Apoſtles, and the ſeventy Diſciples; as, while the Apoſtles lived, they were above the other Eccleſiaſtical Officers; ſo, even after their Death, Biſhops have, (by Divine Appointment, not any voluntary Dedition) and, to the End of the World, ought to have a Power and Authority over Prieſts and Deacons. But becauſe here it may be enquired, whether there is not the like Authority of one Biſhop over another, it is to be obſerved, that, whatever may be diſputed concerning a Priority of Order, it is undoubtedly true, that, in Point of Power and Authority, every Apoſtle was equal. They were all diſtinguiſhed by the ſame common Name; had all the ſame Commiſſion and Inſtructions given them; were all alike admitted to be Attendants on Chriſt; were authorized alike to preach his Goſpel; and, without a Difference, have twelve Thrones appointed them, in which they are to judge the twelve Tribes of Iſrael. And as their Predeceſſors, the Apoſtles, were, in all Reſpects, of equal Power and Authority; ſo there are very pregnant Proofs in Antiquity, that every Biſhop, in the firſt Centuries, was Supreme in his own Dioceſe, and ſubject to none but Chriſt. One Biſhop, indeed, might excel another in the Extent of his Dioceſe, in the Number and Quality of Chriſtians under his Care, or in outward Splendor and Magnificence; but, to apply [f] St Jerom's Words in this Caſe; "Wherever a Biſhop is, whether at Rome, or at "Eugubium, at Conſtantinople, or at Rhegium, at Alexandria, or at Tani, he has the "ſame Merit, and the ſame Prieſthood. Neither the Power of Riches, nor Abaſe-"ment of Poverty makes a Biſhop higher or lower, but they are all Succeſſors of "the Apoſtles."

Biſhops all equal.

BUT though the Biſhops of the primitive Church were all inveſted with the ſame Office and Authority; yet, in Proceſs of Time, and as Chriſtianity increaſed, it was found neceſſary to enlarge the Epiſcopal Power: And therefore, as before there was commonly a Biſhop placed in every great City, [h] ſo now, in every Metropolis, as the Romans called it, or Mother-City of every Province, wherein were Courts of Civil Judicature, there was an Archbiſhop, or Metropolitan, who had Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction over all the Churches within that Province. He was ſuperior to all the Biſhops within thoſe Limits; and here it belonged to him, either to ordain, or to ratify the Elections and Ordinations of all other Biſhops, which, without his Confirmation, were looked upon as null and void. Once, at leaſt, every Year, he was to ſummon the Biſhops under him to a Synod; to enquire into, and direct the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs within his Province; to inſpect the Lives and Manners, the Opinions and Principles of his Biſhops; and to admoniſh, reprove, and ſuſpend them, that were diſorderly and irregular: If any Controverſies or Contentions happened between any of them, he was to have the Hearing and Determination of them; nor, indeed, was any Matter of Moment done within the Compaſs of his Juriſdiction, without conſulting him in the Caſe.

The Riſe of Metropolitans and Primates, and their Juriſdiction.

WHEN Chriſtianity, increaſing ſtill more and more, came at laſt to overſpread the whole Roman Empire, there ſprang up another Branch of the Epiſcopal Office, as much ſuperior to that of Metropolitans, as theirs was to common Biſhops, viz. that of Primates and Patriarchs, who had Juriſdiction over ſeveral Provinces: But, for the right underſtanding of this, it is requiſite to know:——[i] That, when the Chriſtian Faith was fully ſettled in the World, it was determined to model the external Government of the Church, as near as might be, to the Civil Government of the Empire. Now, the whole Empire being divided into thirteen Dioceſes, as they called theſe Diviſions, and theſe containing about an hundred and twenty Provinces, and every Province ſeveral Cities; as in every City there was a Civil Magiſtrate, for the Execution and Preſervation of the Peace, both in the City and adjacent Country; ſo was there alſo a Biſhop, for ſpiritual Order and Government, whoſe whoſe Juriſdiction was of like Extent and Latitude: As in every Province there was a Proconſul or Preſident, whoſe Seat was uſually at the Metropolis, whither all inferior Cities came for Judgment in Matters of Importance; ſo in the ſame City there was an Archbiſhop, or Metropolitan, for Matters of Eccleſiaſtical Concernment: And laſtly, as, in every Dioceſe, the Emperors had their Vicarii or Lieutenants, who dwelt in the principal City of the Dioceſe, where all Imperial Edicts were publiſhed, and Cauſes, not determined elſewhere, decided; ſo there was in the ſame City a Primate, to whom the laſt Determination of all Appeals from all the Provinces in Differences of the Clergy, and the ſovereign Care of all the Dioceſe for ſundry Points of ſpiritual Concernment, did belong: So that the Patriarch, as ſuperior to the Metropolitans, was to have under his Juriſdiction, not only one ſingle Province, but a whole Dioceſe, (in the old Roman Notion of the Word) conſiſting of many Provinces. To him belonged the Conſecration of the Metropolitans, that were under him; the ſummoning them to Councils; the correcting their Miſdemeanors; and in Matters, which lay properly within his Cognizance, from his Judgment and Sentence, there was no Appeal. But, to return to the ordinary Miniſters of the Church.

[e] Biſhop Smalridge's Sermons. [f] See Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-Government, c. iii. [g] Ad Evagrium. [h] Cave's Primitive Chriſtianity. [i] Ibid.

The Qualifications of Miniſters.

THE Qualifications, which the Scriptures require in him, that is admitted to attend on God's Altar, are ſuch as theſe—That he [k] be blameleſs, as the Steward of God; not ſelf-willed, not ſoon angry, not given to Wine, no Striker, not given to filthy Lucre, but a Lover of Hoſpitality, a Lover of good Men, ſober, juſt, holy, temperate, [l] and having a good Report, even of them that are without, i. e. of unbelieving Jews and Gentiles, leſt he fall into their Reproach, and in the Snare of the Devil. For, be he never ſo learned and ingenious, yet, if he be not virtuous, [m] his Example will do more Harm, than all the other Labours do Good: He will diſcourage the Pious, and harden Sinners; diſhonour the Lord Jeſus; diſgrace the Church whereunto he belongs, and not only deſtroy his own, but the Souls of other People likewiſe.

Virtue.

Learning.

BUT though Virtue be the principal, yet it is not the only Qualification belonging to a Miniſter of Chriſt; for if under the Levitical Diſpenſation, which conſiſted, in a great Meaſure, of carnal Obſervances, [n] the Prieſts Lips were to preſerve Knowledge, becauſe the People were to require the Law at their Mouths; how much more under the Chriſtian, where the Adminiſtrations of the Prieſthood are become ſpiritual, and the Burthen of their Office vaſtly augmented. [o] The Apoſtles, indeed, were ἀνθρωποι ἀγραμμάτοι καὶ ἰδιῶται, that is to ſay, according to the ſtrict Signification of the Words, Men unlearned, and of a mean and plebeian Condition; nevertheleſs, ſince they were appointed by God to preach the Goſpel to ſeveral Nations, a Work requiring a conſiderable Knowledge of the Languages of thoſe Nations, impoſſible to be performed without it, and yet impoſſible for the Apoſtles, in a natural and ordinary Courſe of Study, to acquire; God was pleaſed to ſupply this Defect, and to give them all neceſſary Qualifications by immediate and divine Infuſion. From whence we may infer, that if Helps and Qualifications were not always of moſt ſingular Uſe, and ſometimes of indiſpenſable Neceſſity to the ſacred Calling, certainly the moſt wiſe God would never have been at the Expence of a Miracle to endow Men of that Calling with them.

Even neceſſary to the Apoſtles.

NAY, we may add further, [p] that even the Apoſtles, thoſe Miniſters of God, who were inſpired from Heaven, did not ſo wholly depend upon Divine Inſpiration, but that they made uſe alſo of ordinary Helps and Means (ſuch as reading Books, with Study and Meditation on them) for their Aſſiſtance in the Diſcharge of their Office. St Paul had his Books, his Manuſcripts, and Collation of Notes too, which he read, and which he found ſo uſeful, that he gives Timothy a ſpecial Charge to convey them ſafely to him; [q] The Cloak, that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comeſt, bring with thee, and the Books, but eſpecially the Parchments: And it is farther to be obſerved, that he earneſtly exhorts the ſame Timothy, to the like Courſe of Reading and Study; [r] Give Attendance to Reading, to Exhortation, to Doctrine; (which he calls elſewhere [s] kindling, or ſtirring up Gifts that were in him) meditate on theſe Things, and give thyſelf wholly to them, that thy Profiting may appear unto all. And if Study and Meditation, the Knowledge of Sciences, and human Learning were requiſite in inſpired Apoſtles, for the more complete Diſcharge of their Office, how much more neceſſary is it now, when thoſe miraculous Gifts are ceaſed, and no Man hath [k] Tit. i. 7, &c. [l] 1 Tim. iii. 7. [m] Comber, on Ordination. [n] Mal. ii. 7.

[o] South's Sermons, Vol. IV. [p] Bull's Sermons, Vol. II. [q] 2 Tim. iv. 13. [r] 1 Tim. iv. 13, &c. [s] 2 Tim. i. 6.

hath any Thing beyond the ordinary Aſſiſtance of the Holy Ghoſt, to bleſs his Study and his Labours?

Knowledge of the Scriptures.

BUT as in all other Sciences, ſo great a Part of Knowledge, requiſite in a Miniſter of Chriſt, is, that he ſhould [t] be mighty in the Scriptures, and ſo far [u] taught in the faithful Word, as to be able thereby both to exhort the Orthodox, and convince Gainſayers: But as Things are now, there is no Way to underſtand the Scriptures, but by Skill in the original Tongues, conſulting Fathers and Commentators, and comparing one Part of the Bible with another; and yet, unleſs he underſtands them, he cannot do his Office well, becauſe all his Doctrines and Exhortations muſt be taken from thence. He muſt inſtruct the Ignorant, confirm the Faithful, comfort the Sad, ſtrengthen the Weak, exhort the Negligent, and reprove the Wicked with Divine Sentences, duly applied, and carefully gathered from the Word of God, which give Strength and Authority to all his Diſcourſes. Thus the Miniſter of Chriſt's Church ſhould be a good Man, a learned Man, well ſkilled in the Scriptures, and (to give him more Leiſure to attend on his Duty) as little entangled with worldly Cares and ſecular Buſineſs as poſſible. For [*] no Man (as St Paul applies the Similitude to the Clergy) that warreth, entangleth himſelf with the Affairs of this Life, that he may pleaſe him, who hath choſen him to be a Soldier.

Leiſure to ſtudy.

Solemn Ordination.

THESE are the Qualifications of the Miniſters of Chriſt: But every one that has theſe Qualifications, may not yet enter upon the Work of a Miniſter, without a proper Call and Deſignation: For, [x] when every other Office of Truſt and Power, whether in a civil or military Capacity, is conveyed unto Men by ſome Form of Admiſſion and ſolemn Inveſtiture; 'tis incongruous to think, that theſe great Offices of bleſſing the Congregation, of abſolving the Penitent, of ejecting the Criminal, and of working together in this wiſe for the Salvation of Souls, ſhould be left to the Diſcretion of every one, that either has Preſumption enough to aſſume, or Abilities enough to perform them. We have a very remarkable Paſſage to this Purpoſe in the Hiſtory of the Apoſtles, where we are informed, that [y] the Holy Ghoſt ſaid, ſeparate me Barnabas and Saul for the Work, whereunto I have called them; and accordingly they faſted, and prayed, and laid their Hands on them, and ſent them away. And ſo they went forth by the Holy Ghoſt. Now it is very obſervable here, that the Holy Ghoſt himſelf dictated, and appointed the Ordination of Barnabas and Saul; that though Perſons are called to the Work of the Miniſtry by the Spirit, and educated with proper Gifts, yet laying on of Hands is required; and farther, that thoſe who are lawfully ſeparated, and ordained to the Work of the Miniſtry, are ſent forth by the Holy Ghoſt. [z] Theſe are natural Deductions from this Place of Scripture, and from the whole 'tis rational to infer, that it is not ſufficient for Perſons to have the Call of the Spirit, but they muſt likewiſe be called by Men, to exerciſe the miniſterial Function. Even Paul and Barnabas, we ſee, though approved by the Spirit, and bleſſed with extraordinary Graces, muſt have Impoſition of Hands, to fit them for the Work, for which God deſigned them, and for which the Holy Ghoſt called them: And from hence we may gather what it is, that conſtitutes a Miniſter of the Church of Chriſt at this Day, and what is the Call, that authorizes him to diſcharge the publick Offices thereof.

Impoſition of Hands.

IMPOSITION of Hands was a Ceremony of ancient Date: It [a] was in Uſe before the Law, but among the Jews it was chiefly employed, as a figurative Rite, in ordaining Elders, and thereby qualifying them, either to be Members of their Sanhedrim, or Teachers of the Law. [b] Now, beſides the ſolemn Deſignation of the Perſon, on whom the Hands are laid, we may imagine a threefold Uſe of this ſymbolical Rite. 1. To invocate the Divine Preſence and Aſſiſtance to the Perſon, on whom the Hands are laid. 2. To deliver unto him a Power to act in the Office and Capacity, to which he is appointed. And, 3. To denote the Conſignment of him to the more immediate Service of God. The Apoſtles therefore, introducing this Ceremony into the Chriſtian Church, intended thereby to implore a Bleſſing upon the new ordained Perſons, that [c] the Spirit of the Lord might reſt upon them; the Spirit of Wiſdom and Underſtanding, the Spirit of Counſel and Might, the Spirit of Knowledge, and of the Fear of the Lord: Intended thereby, as Stewards of the Myſteries of Chriſt, to give them full Power and Authority to officiate in the Church; and, by the Sign of ſuch Delegation of Power, to declare their future Adminiſtrations valid: But, above all, intended thereby to put them in

The Nature and Deſign of it.

[t] Acts xviii. 24.
[u] Tit. i. 9.
[*] 2 Tim. ii. 4.
[x] Comber, on Ordination.
[y] Acts xiii. 2, &c.
[z] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. Stillingfleet's Irenicum.
[a] Gen. xlviii. 14.
[b] Biſhop
[c] Iſa. xi. 2.

mind of their preſent Conſecration to the Service of God; and upon that Account, what an extraordinary Meaſure of Grace and Holineſs is expected from them; that as they are employed in ſuch a ſacred Function, and ſeparated to ſuch a ſingular Dignity, they ſhould excel all other Degrees of Men in their virtuous Carriage and Behaviour, that [a] they, ſeeing the Light of their good Works, may be inclined to follow it, and to glorify their Father, which is in Heaven.

The Powers and Offices of Chriſt's Miniſters,

III. ANOTHER Branch of the Commiſſion, which our Saviour gave his Apoſtles, was to inſtruct their Succeſſors, as he had done them, in the Nature of the Sacerdotal Function; to acquaint them with the Powers and Miniſtries belonging thereunto, and in what Manner they were to behave towards the People, committed to their Charge. Now the

1. to preach.

1. FIRST miniſterial Act or Power, mentioned by our Saviour in the Commiſſion he gives his Apoſtles, is that of preaching the Goſpel. In Obſervance of which Commiſſion, we find St Paul telling the Corinthians, that he [c] was not ſent to baptiſe, but to preach; meaning, that his chief Buſineſs was to make Converts by his Sermons and Diſcourſes, which others of an inferior Order were to receive into the Church by Baptiſm; and therefore he declares, that [f] a Neceſſity was laid upon him; yea, woe unto me, ſays he, if I preach not the Goſpel; whereupon he lays this ſtrict Injunction upon his Son Timothy; [g] I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who ſhall judge the quick and the dead, preach the Word, be inſtant in Seaſon, out of Seaſon, reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all Long-ſuffering and Doctrine. The Biſhop indeed, as being the chief Steward of the Lord's Houſhold, was primarily concerned to give every Member thereof his Portion of Food in due Seaſon; but as the Preſbyters were admitted to a Copartnerſhip with him in the Care of the Church, ſo, both in the Scripture and Primitive Fathers, they are deſcribed as Aſſiſtants in feeding the Flock of Chriſt; and therefore there is no Doubt to be made, but that the Power of Preaching belongs likewiſe to their Office. Since Deacons however were not ordained to be Paſtors of the Flock of Chriſt, Preaching in the publick Congregation, which inſeparably accompanies the Cure of Souls, cannot of Right belong to them, though they were often commiſſioned by the Biſhop to exerciſe that Function, when any of them were found ſufficiently qualified.

Lay-Men not ordinarily allowed to preach.

[h] THAT private Chriſtians would inſtruct and admoniſh one another in their Converſation and Conferences, is much to be wiſhed; and happy it were, both for themſelves and the Church, if they would thus employ the Time, which is often ſpent in vain and trifling, not to ſay, ſinful and immodeſt Talk: But that Lay-Men may take upon them the Office of preaching the Goſpel of Chriſt in publick Congregations, except upon ſome emergent Occaſions, we can by no Means allow. [i] Before the Church was ſettled indeed, and when extraordinary Gifts prevailed, private Men took upon them to expound the Scriptures, and to teach and inſtruct publickly: In the Times of Perſecution too, when there was not a ſufficient Number of Preſbyters left, Lay-Men were permitted to exerciſe that Office; nor is there any Queſtion to be made, but that they might do the ſame now, if there were the like raging Perſecution, and Chriſtians were deprived of their regular Miniſters; but abſtracting from this, and the like Cauſes, it is certainly true, that Lay-Men have no Authority to adminiſter publickly in ſacred Things. For, when St Paul ſays, [k] How then ſhall they call on him, in whom they have not believed? How ſhall they believe in him, of whom they have not heard? How ſhall they hear, without a Preacher? And how ſhall they preach, except they be ſent? Theſe Queſtions being an emphatical Denial of the Things in Queſtion, he plainly enough intimates, that to preach the Goſpel, without being ſent, is as impoſſible, in a Chriſtian or Moral Senſe, as it is, in a natural Senſe, for a Man to believe what he never heard, or to hear what was never preached, or ſpoken to him. So that before Men can preach with Authority, they muſt ſhew their Commiſſion, which is a regular Ordination, conferred by Impoſition of Hands.

The Manner of the Apoſtles preaching.

IN what Manner the Apoſtles preached may beſt be learned from the Effects of it: For when St Peter, at one Sermon, * converted three thouſand Souls; when St Paul [l] baffled all the Learning of Athens, and finally ſucceeded wherever he came; when [a] Matth. v. 16. [c] 1 Cor. i. 17. [f] Ibid. ix. 16. [g] 2 Tim. iv. 1, 2, &c. [h] Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-Government. [i] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [k] Rom. x. 14, 15. * Acts ii. 41. [l] Ibid. xvii. 22, &c.

when the ſeveral Synagogues at Jeruſalem [m] were not able to reſiſt the Wiſdom and Spirit, by which St Stephen ſpake; when the whole Roman Empire, in ſhort, in a ſmall Tract of Time, was over-run, and ſome in every Place converted by the Labours of the firſt Planters of the Goſpel; it muſt needs be owned, that [n] their Speech, and their Preaching, as St Paul expreſſes it, was in Demonſtration of the Spirit and Power. As their Buſineſs was to convert the World to the Chriſtian Faith, their Method was vaſtly different from what has obtained now. They made their Text, (if we may ſo ſay) any Hint, any Occurrence, that preſented them with an Opportunity of proving the crucified Jeſus to be the Son of God. St Paul, from the Inſcription of an Altar, [o] TO THE UNKNOWN GOD, took Occaſion to explain and magnify the Divine Attributes, and thence gently to fall upon the particular Tenets of Chriſtianity. His uſual Way was [p] to reaſon with the People, to whom he addreſſed himſelf, out of the Scriptures, opening, and alledging, that Chriſt muſt needs have ſuffered, and riſen from the dead, and that Jeſus, whom they preached, was the Chriſt.

AFTER Churches were ſettled, and Congregations gathered, the Method of preaching of courſe varied; and Sermons were commonly then the Expoſition of ſome ſelect Portion of Scripture, which was read in the Aſſembly that Day. Sometimes [q] they preached on whole Chapters, or a very large Portion of them, and proceeded in Order through a whole Book, inſiſting on ſeveral Parts of it at different Times. Sometimes [r] they preached without any Chapter or Text at all, only exhorting the People to ſome religious and virtuous Practice, or declaiming againſt ſome prevailing Vice, or diſcourſing upon ſome emergent Occaſion; and, at other Times, they entertained their Audience with general Diſcourſes of the Truth and Reaſonableneſs of Chriſtianity, againſt Jews and Pagans. Theſe were Compoſitions ſtudied and elaborate, but their Preaching for the moſt Part was popular, eaſy, and extemporary. The Manner of Preaching on the Places of Scripture, which were read to the People, as proper Leſſons for the Day, continued in the Church until, in the time of Charles the Great, about the Middle of the ninth Century, poſtillary Diſcourſes, (as they were called) or Comments upon the Goſpels and Epiſtles, came in their Room, and theſe remained until the Reformation. When this flat and inſipid Way began to be laid aſide, and as Churches recovered out of Ignorance and Error, Preaching revived, and was a long while improving, till it ſettled at laſt in the Method, we now uſe, of taking only a Verſe or two as a Text, which is firſt expounded, and then enlarged upon from Topicks of Reaſon and Scripture, and ſo applied. By this Means, Sermons are [s] reduced, 1. To a plain opening of the Senſe of the Text, in a few ſhort Illuſtrations of its Coherence with what goes before and after, and of the Parts, whereof it is compoſed: To which is joined, 2. A clear ſtating of ſuch Propoſitions, as ariſe out of it, as to their Nature, Truth, and Reaſonableneſs: To all which, 3. Applications are added, tending to the reproving, directing, encouraging, or comforting the Hearers, according to the ſeveral Occaſions that are offered. This is indeed all that can be truly intended in preaching, viz. to make ſome Portions of Scripture to be rightly underſtood; to make thoſe Truths contained in them to be more fully apprehended; and then to lay the whole Matter home to the Conſciences of the Hearers; for [t] to teach clearly, to convince ſtrongly, and to perſuade powerfully, (as a great Maſter of the Art informs us) is the principal, if not the only Scope of a Divine Orator.

How it altered.

What it is now.

HOW eminent the Divines of the Church of England are in this Kind of Performance, we leave to the learned of other Churches, who have attained to the Knowledge of the Engliſh Tongue, to declare and admire; and ſhall only go on to obſerve, that there is another Form and Method of teaching the Goſpel, which our Excellency in ſermonizing ſhould not ſuperſede; and that is, inſtructing the younger, and more ignorant Sort, in the great and fundamental Principles of Chriſtianity, which we call Catechizing: An Office, not ſo appropriated to the ſacred Function, but that all Parents and Maſters of Families may, and ought to execute it, but what, in the earlieſt Times of Chriſtianity, when Religion was not ſo well underſtood by the Laity, was generally devolved upon the Clergy, and in ſome Places upon Perſons of Catechizing.

[m] Acts vi. 10. [n] 1 Cor. ii. 4. [o] Acts xvii. 23. [p] Ibid. ver. 2, 3.
[q] Of this Nature are Chryſoſtom's Homilies, or Expoſitions on the Book of Geneſis, on the Pſalms, and on St Matthew, all which were Diſcourſes to the People. And Origen, and Baſil, and other Fathers did the ſame. [r] Of this Sort are ſome of the Sermons of Chryſoſtom, Ambroſe, Auguſtin, Gregory the Great, &c. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [s] Burnet's Paſtoral Care. [t] Wilkins's Eccleſiaſtes.

of [u] the greateſt Eminence in the Church, whoſe Buſineſs it was to inſtruct ſuch, as were called Catechumens in thoſe Days; and thoſe were of two Sorts: 1. Thoſe, that were Converts and Proſelytes to Chriſtianity from Gentiliſm and Judaiſm, whom theſe Catechiſts were to inſtruct, before they were baptiſed, as being Perſons adult, and capable of underſtanding the Nature of the Chriſtian Faith: And, 2. Thoſe, that were Children of Chriſtians, and born in the Body of the Church, who, being firſt baptiſed, as they advanced in Years, were taught the Rudiments of Religion, and trained up in the Knowledge of Chriſt, till they were prepared for Confirmation, and thence admitted to the Holy Communion.

The primitive Manner of it.

IN what Manner the Catechiſts proceeded in the Inſtitution of their Scholars and Hearers, we have not that clear Account from Antiquity, as to determine; but this we have ſome Countenance from Scripture to ſuppoſe, that having given them a Compendium, or Summary of the Chriſtian Doctrine, which the Apoſtle calls * the Form of ſound Words, which was delivered to them, to be diligently peruſed, if not got memoriter; they afterwards examined, whether they underſtood what they ſaid or repeated, and where they found their Underſtanding fail, there they explained and inculcated, (as [x] the Word catechize ſeems to ſignify) the ſame Thing over and over again, in different Words perhaps, and ſuch as they thought more eaſy and familiar to their Apprehenſions; and hence, very probably, the conveying of the Knowledge of the Principles of Religion, by Way of Queſtion and Anſwer, came to be named Catechizing. The Points, which they firſt began with, the Author to the Hebrews hath ſet down in this Order: [y] Therefore leaving the Principles of the Doctrine of Chriſt, let us go on unto Perfection, not laying again the Foundation of Repentance from dead Works, and of Faith towards God, of the Doctrine of Baptiſms, and of laying on of Hands, and of Reſurrection of the dead, and of eternal Judgment. Here are ſix catechetical Heads, or fundamental Principles of the Doctrine of Chriſt. Repentance, which includes in it all the Doctrines relating to Regeneration, Sanctification, Mortification, and all holy Converſation and Godlineſs: Faith, which implies our full Aſſent to all the Truths of the Goſpel, with a firm Confidence and Reliance on the Mercy of God, and the Merits of Jeſus Chriſt: Baptiſms, which denote the ſacred Inſtitution and Ordinance of admitting Children and others into the Church of Chriſt, by waſhing, or ſprinkling with Water; as well as the other ſolemn Sacrament of the Lord's Supper: Impoſition of Hands in confirming the Adult, in ordaining Miniſters, and in conferring the miraculous Gifts of the Spirit, which was cuſtomary in the Apoſtles Times: The Reſurrection of the Dead, which compriſes all our Comforts and Aſſurances, relating to another Life: And eternal Judgment, whereby we ſhall be irreverſibly conſigned to Miſery or Happineſs for ever, according as the Tenor of our Actions ſhall be found to be: Theſe, I ſay, were the Principles, which the Catechiſts firſt propounded to their Scholars, and made them perfect in, before they proceeded to the more abſtruſe and myſterious Articles, ſuch as the Doctrine of the Trinity, the hypoſtatic Union of the two Natures, &c. and from this one Place, as Calvin in his Comment upon it obſerves, we may infer, that the Cuſtom of catechizing was of Apoſtolic Inſtitution.

The Uſe and Neglect of it.

OF what ſingular Uſe and Neceſſity this Method of Inſtruction is, needs no Detail of Arguments to prove. "The Reaſon of the Thing itſelf, ſays our late excellent "Metropolitan, ſufficiently ſpeaks it; [z] and yet, alas! how has this prudent and "uſeful Method been ſlighted by many, and neglected by more; and, inſtead of "theſe catechetical Inſtitutions, a ſecond Sermon been introduced for the Afternoon, "and a new Sort of Teachers ſet up, under a new Character of Lecturers, to "preach it, and that oftentimes not ſo much to the real Benefit, as to the Fancies "and Inclinations of thoſe, by whom they are to be paid! I cannot, I ſay (as the "judicious Prelate proceeds) that this is altogether contrary to our preſent Eſtabliſh-"ment, becauſe [a] the laſt Act of Uniformity has given Directions for the licencing "and allowing of them; but ſure I am, it is a manifeſt Incroachment upon our "good [u] Euſebius acquaints us, that there were very eminent Perſons in the Church, who undertook this neceſſary Office. He relates, that, at Alexandria, the firſt Catechiſt was Patenus, a Chriſtian Convert from the Stoick Philoſophy: After him, Origen, in the famous School of Alexandria, had the Office of inſtructing late Converts to the Chriſtian Faith. Optatus was appointed by St Cyprian to be a publick Catechiſt, and Inſtructor of the Youth; and St Jerom mentions Gregory Nazianzen, and others, who had this Office in his Time, and tells us, that he himſelf was inſtructed and catechized by them. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

* 2 Tim. i. 13. and Rom. vi. 17.

[x] It is derived from Κατηχέω to reſound, or ſound often in the Ear of the Learned, the Principles to be imbibed, and fixed in his Mind and Memory. Bray's Lectures on the Church-Catechiſm.

[y] Heb. vi. 1, 2.

[z] Archbiſhop Wake's Commentary on the Church-Catechiſm.

[a] 13 Car. II. c. iv.

" good old Conſtitution, which knew no ſuch Perſons, nor made any Proviſion " for them; and the Reſult has been, that the Afternoon-Sermon has almoſt quite " thrown out the much better and more profitable Exerciſe of Catechizing, which " has both the Laws of the Realm, and the Canons of the Church on its Side; " whereas the other has neither." But this is an Abuſe, which might as eaſily be reformed, as complained of, were but the Canons, which require of the Clergy the weekly Performance of this Duty, by the Governors of the Church, unanimouſly put in Execution.

2. ANOTHER religious Act, which properly belongs to theſe Servants of God, is the Adminiſtration of the Evangelical Sacraments. It was to his Apoſtles, indeed, and, in them, to their Succeſſors, that our Saviour gave the Commiſſion of Baptizing all Nations, in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and of conſecrating and adminiſtering the holy Euchariſt in Remembrance of him; but yet it is evident, that this Office was not ſo confined to the Apoſtolic Order, as that none but they were allowed to execute it. For, even in the Apoſtles Days, we find not only [b] Philip, who was but a Deacon, baptizing at Samaria, but St Peter himſelf commanding the Brethren with him, who certainly were no Apoſtles, to [c] baptize thoſe Gentile Converts, upon whom the Holy Ghoſt deſcended; and St Paul affirming, [d] that he baptized none, in the Church of Corinth, tho' himſelf planted it, except Criſpus, Gaius, and the Houſhold of Stephanus; which is a plain Argument, (as we hinted before) that, when the Apoſtles converted Men to the Chriſtian Faith, they generally ordered them to be baptized by the inferior Miniſters of the Church. There is no Doubt to be made then, but that Prieſts and Deacons are both inveſted with a Power of Baptizing; but whether Lay-Men had the ſame, is a Queſtion, that has been much agitated, and the Reſult of the whole Matter ſeems to be this;—[e] That in Caſes of extreme Exigence, when neither Deacon, nor Preſbyter, nor Biſhop can be procured, Lay-Men were allowed to adminiſter this Sacrament; that ſo none might be debarred from Admiſſion into the New Covenant, that were diſpoſed and qualified to receive it: But the Church's allowing this to Lay-Men, only in Caſes of Neceſſity, is a plain Argument, that none had a ſtanding Authority to adminiſter it, but ſuch as were in holy Orders.

2. To adminiſter the Sacraments.

Lay-Men, when allowed to baptize.

THE Conſecration of the Euchariſt, when any of the Apoſtles were preſent, was, without all Doubt, ordinarily performed by them; but conſidering how faſt Chriſtianity increaſed, and how frequently Chriſtians did then partake of this Sacrament, it is not to be ſuppoſed, that the Apoſtles could be preſent in all Places, where it was adminiſtered, nor, conſequently, that they could conſecrate it in every particular Congregation; and therefore there is no Queſtion to be made, but that the Conſecration, as well as the Adminiſtration of it, was ordinarily performed by the inferior Preſbyters, in the Abſence of the Apoſtles and Biſhops: But the Queſtion then is, how came the Deacons, who were permitted to adminiſter the other Sacrament, never to be allowed to conſecrate the Lord's Supper? The other Sacrament, indeed, was not only one of the loweſt Miniſtries, and therefore committed, by the Apoſtles, to thoſe of the loweſt Order; but, being the Rite of Admiſſion into the Church, was thought more neceſſary than the Lord's Supper, [f] which, among the moſt ancient Fathers, was always ſuppoſed to ſucceed in the room of Sacrifices: And therefore, as none, beſide the High-Prieſt and inferior Prieſts, were permitted to offer Sacrifices under the Jewiſh Law; ſo the Lord's Supper was conſecrated by none, but Biſhops and Preſbyters, who alone are Prieſts in the Chriſtian Senſe of that Name.

Why Deacons might not conſecrate.

3. ANOTHER religious Act, which has always been appropriated to the Clergy, is to offer up the publick Prayers and Interceſſions of Chriſtian Aſſemblies; for, to be ſure, none can be authorized to perform the publick Duties of the Church, but ſuch only as are ſet apart, and ordained to be the publick Officers of it. For that Prieſts, of all Nations, are Interceſſors between God and Men, who communicate the Laws of God, and impart his Bleſſings to the People; and, on the other Hand, convey the People's Devotions and Adorations unto God, is a generally-received Notion; and from hence Philo [g] obſerves of the Jewiſh High-Prieſt, " That the Law required " him to be raiſed above human Nature to a Proximity with God, that being placed, " as it were, in a middle Station between God and Man, he might ſupplicate God " in Behalf of Men, and convey unto Men the Graces of God."

3. To offer up the People's Prayers.

[b] Acts viii. 12. [c] Ibid. x. 48. [d] 1 Cor. i. 13, &c. [e] Scott's Mediator. [f] Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-Government. [g] De Monarchiâ, Lib. II.

IN his own Cloſet indeed, every Man is his own Orator, and, in private Families, the Performance of Divine Worſhip is incumbent on them, to whom the Care and Government of theſe Families belong; but, in the publick Congregations of Chriſtians, Divine Worſhip muſt be only celebrated by thoſe, to whom it has pleaſed God to commit that Office. And, indeed, if nothing be regarded, beſides the decent and orderly Performance of this Duty, this alone would make it neceſſary, that the Prieſt ſhould be the Mouth of the Congregation, otherwiſe it is not poſſible, that, when Chriſtians meet together, they ſhould have one Prayer, and one Supplication, as the Ancients call it; and ſince there is no Way for a Congregation to join in one Prayer, but by attending to one Speaker; for whom can it be ſo proper to preſide in publick Prayers, as for thoſe, whom God hath authorized to govern the Church, and to officiate in all other Parts of Divine Service? And, accordingly, we may obſerve, that [d] the four and twenty Elders, in the Revelation, who repreſent the Miniſters of the Chriſtian Church, have every one of them Golden Vials, full of Incenſe, which is the Prayers of the Saints.

4. To Ordain, which was peculiar to Biſhops.

THERE are two Eccleſiaſtical Offices more, the Ordination of ſuch, as are appointed to ſerve in the Church, and the Confirmation of ſuch, as have been baptized and inſtructed in the Chriſtian Faith; both done by the Impoſition of Hands, and both productive to the Gifts and Graces of the Holy Ghoſt, which are not, as other miniſterial Acts, to be performed in common, but are peculiarly the Work of the Biſhops and Governors of the Church. [e] And indeed, as to the firſt, if we may be allowed to reaſon from the Conſtitution and univerſal Practice of Civil Societies; we muſt conclude, that the Power of ordaining Miniſters belongs to the Biſhops, who are the chief Governors of the Church, becauſe the Power of conſtituting ſubordinate Magiſtrates belongs to the ſupreme Governors of all Civil Societies; nor can it be thought conſonant to Reaſon, that they, who exerciſe any Authority, whether in Church or State, ſhould derive their Authority from any, but thoſe, in whom the ſupreme Authority is lodged.

PURSUANT to this, we find, in the Goſpels, that, whilſt our Saviour lived on Earth, he reſerved the Power of ordaining Miniſters to himſelf, and that though he gave the Apoſtles, and ſeventy Diſciples, a Commiſſion to preach, he never allowed them to communicate that Commiſſion to any other. Upon his Removal, the Apoſtles, who were the chief viſible Governors of the Church, ordained Miniſters: For, as they went about preaching through Countries and Cities, (as Clemens Romanus [f] calls it) they conſtituted their Firſt-fruits, i. e. the firſt of their Diſciples in any Place, when they had proved them, by the Spirit, to be the Biſhops and Deacons of thoſe, who ſhould believe. After their Demiſe, Ordination continued, where they had left it, in Epiſcopal Hands, nor do we find any Inſtance, either in Scripture or Antiquity, of inferior Orders pretending to that Prerogative. St Paul tells Timothy indeed, that [g] the Gift which was in him, was given him by Propheſy, with the laying on of the Hands of the Preſbytery; whence ſome may conclude, that the Preſbytery ordained even thoſe who were to ordain others: But it muſt be remembered, that the Gift, which is here ſaid to have been conferred by the Hands of the Preſbytery, in another Place, is affirmed to have been given him [h] by the laying on of St Paul's Hands; ſo that the utmoſt, which can be inferred from this Paſſage, is, that Preſbyters ſometimes, together with an Apoſtle or Biſhop, laid their Hands upon the Perſon to be ordained; but that they always did ſo, or that they ever did it without a Biſhop, there is not the leaſt Colour to conclude.

[i] THE Truth is, That Ordination, in St Cyprian's Time, was properly the Biſhop's Right, we have the Confeſſion of ſome of the ableſt Patrons of Preſbytery; and, from the Apoſtles to Cyprian's Days, the Biſhops, as we ſaid before, were ſo poor, and perſecuted, and pious withal, that we cannot ſuppoſe they would, in that Period, have uſurped and monopolized an Authority, that had not been left them by their Predeceſſors. And, in like Manner, that the Rite of Confirmation is the Biſhop's ſole Prerogative, we may perceive, by this one Inſtance, that [k] when St Philip, by preaching and doing Miracles, had converted the Samaritans, and afterwards baptized them, St Peter and St John, two of the Apoſtles, were ſent to lay Hands on them; upon which it is ſaid, that they received the Holy Ghoſt: From whence it appears, that this Miniſtry of Confirmation appertained to the Apoſtles only, ſince St Philip, though

5. And to Confirm.

[d] Rev. v. 8. [e] Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-Government. [f] Ep. 1. ad Corinth.
[g] 1 Tim. iv. 14. [h] 2 Tim. i. 6. [i] Blundel, citat. à Dr Hammond, in Epiſt. præfix. Diſſert. de Epiſt. & Daillé de Cult. Latin. Relig. Lib. II. c. xiii. [k] Acts viii. 12, 17.

though a Worker of Miracles, a Preacher, a prime Deacon, and, if we may believe St Cyprian, one of the ſeventy-two Diſciples, would not preſume to aſſume it, but left it to the Apoſtles, as their peculiar Province.

THUS beſides the Buſineſs of Ordination and Confirmation, which is peculiar to the Biſhops; to preach the Goſpel, to adminiſter the Sacraments, to bleſs the Congregation, and to offer up the Prayers of the People, is the common Office and Employment of the whole Clergy: And how ſacred and tremendous an Office this is, how much Learning, and Wiſdom, and Zeal, and Holineſs is required to the due Performance of it, is what we ſhall juſt take upon us to ſuggeſt.

WHEN the Prophet [l] Malachi tells us, that the Prieſts Lips ſhould keep or preſerve Knowledge, becauſe he is the Meſſenger of the Lord of Hoſts; there is ſomething, methinks, more emphatical in the Expreſſion, than is commonly imagined: It ſeems to imply, that the Prieſt ſhould be a Kind of Repoſitory, or Treaſury of Science, richly furniſhed with Knowledge himſelf, and able likewiſe to furniſh and ſupply abundantly the Wants of thoſe, that ſhall ſeek the Law at his Mouth, or have, at any Time, Recourſe to him for Inſtruction in their Duty. Our bleſſed Saviour (though it be in a Parable) has excellently expounded this Text; [m] Every Scribe, ſays he, that is inſtructed in the Kingdom of Heaven, i. e. furniſhed and prepared for the preaching of the Goſpel, is like a Man, that is an Houſholder, which bringeth forth, out of his Treaſure, Things new and old: He is like an Houſholder, who, for the Maintenance of his Family, and the Entertainment of his Gueſts all the Year long, is ſuppoſed to have an Ἀποθήκη, or Repoſitory for Proviſions, and there to have laid in a great Store, and Abundance of all Sorts and Kinds, in order to keep a well-furniſhed Table for all Comers: And indeed if we conſider a little the Compaſs of his Profeſſion, and the Nature of the Science which he teaches, we ſhall ſoon be convinced of this Truth. The Science which he teaches is Theology, the Queen of Sciences, and Perfection of all other Knowledge, as the Ancients call it: And here, to give our Thoughts a Tract in ſo ſpacious a Field, we may divide it into Poſitive, Polemical, Moral, and Caſuiſtical.

What is required of a Divine, in the Execution of his Office.

Learning.

[n] POSITIVE Divinity, or the Knowledge of thoſe ſpeculative Truths, which are revealed in Scripture, is ſo neceſſary to this Profeſſion, that a Man can no more be a Divine without it, than he can be a Grammarian, who underſtands not the very firſt Elements of Grammar; and yet of ſo abſtruſe and ſublime a Nature are theſe Truths, that rightly to apprehend, and clearly to explain them to Capacities even of a moderate Size, is no very eaſy Matter. Polemical, or Controverſial Divinity, eſpecially in theſe Days, when there are ſo many [o] vain and unruly Talkers, and Deceivers, whoſe Mouths muſt be ſtopped, is what he muſt be acquainted with, otherwiſe theſe Deceivers, when they ſpread their erroneous and ſtrange Doctrines, will ſubvert whole Houſes, and, with Triumph and Oſtentation enough, carry Souls captive to the Diſgrace of his Function, yea, of Truth itſelf, which is wounded thro' his Sides, and bleeds thro' his Weakneſs and Folly. Moral, or Practical Divinity, is to furniſh him with the Matter and Subſtance both of his private Exhortations, and publick Diſcourſes; and Caſuiſtical, with an Ability to reſolve his People, what their Duty is, in difficult and perplexed Caſes. Without a ſufficient Knowledge of theſe, he can by no Means proceed in his Profeſſion; and yet to attain a competent Knowledge herein, he muſt know moſt of the learned Languages, wherein the Holy Scriptures were written, or into which they have been tranſlated; he muſt be well read in all Parts of natural, rational, and moral Philoſophy; well read in the claſſical Authors, eſpecially the Orators and Poets, whence excellent Matter may be extracted; and in ſome of the choiceſt Critics, which treat of the Words and Phraſes, and more eſpecially of thoſe Rites and Cuſtoms, that tend to illuſtrate the holy Text. Nor muſt he be unacquainted with Hiſtory of all Sorts, and eſpecially with the Hiſtory of thoſe Ages, which are coincident with the Times, and of thoſe Countries, which are adjacent to Places, made Mention of in Scripture, to which Geography and Chronology will exceedingly conduce. In ſhort, there are few Parts of human Learning, that are not, ſome Way or other, neceſſary to accompliſh [p] a Divine: And

[l] Chap. ii. 7. [m] Matth. xiii. 52. [n] Bull's Sermons, Vol. I. [o] Tit. i. 10, 11.

[p] As a Divine, ſays a very good Judge, he muſt be well verſed in all Writers, Syſtematical, Textual, Hiſtorical, Polemical, and Practical. The Syſtematical are the Catechiſts, ancient and modern, and the Authors of whole Bodies of Divinity. The Textual are the learned and laborious Commentaries of the holy Fathers, and later orthodox Divines. The Hiſtorical are ſuch, as have writ the ſacred Hiſtory of the Jewiſh and Chriſtian Church in general, or the Lives of the Fathers, and moſt eminent Biſhops and Doctors; together with the Collectors

And from hence it follows, that he ſhould be poſſeſſed of a liberal Maintenance, in order to furniſh him with ſome of the beſt Books, in all Sciences, both ſecular and ſacred. For what the Italian Proverb ſays of a well-furniſhed Houſe, [q] that it makes a notable Dame, is very true of a well-filled Study, that it makes an eminent Divine: And doubtleſs we muſt aſcribe the Ignorance of ſome, and the Looſeneſs of others in Holy Orders chiefly to the Want of this; becauſe it cannot be ſuppoſed, that Men of ingenuous Education ſhould either be ſo dull, as not to improve with ſuch Helps, or ſo wretched, as to keep mean Company, when they have at home the Benefit of converſing with the moſt learned and beſt Men of all Ages.

Wiſdom. 2. BUT Learning is not the only Qualification in a Divine. As he is the Paſtor and Teacher of a People, he muſt be endued with a Spirit of Wiſdom, leſt, by any Indiſcretion of his, he obſtructs that, which ought to be his great Deſign and Buſineſs, the Salvation of thoſe Souls, that are committed to his Charge. And therefore [r] he muſt be wiſe, ſo to frame his Diſcourſes, eſpecially in Publick, that he ſpeak nothing, which may either offend the Weak, or give Advantage to the Malicious; that his Sermons may not only be good in themſelves, but adapted and fitted to the Neceſſities of his Hearers. He muſt be wiſe in the Government of his Carriage and Actions, diſtinguiſhing eſpecially between Lawfulneſs and Expediency, and ſhunning, not only that which is directly ſinful, but whatſoever is ſcandalous and offenſive. He muſt be wiſe in his common Converſe with his People, that he be neither of too eaſy, nor of too moroſe and difficult Acceſs; but eſpecially he muſt be careful of this, in his freer Converſation, that he indulge not himſelf any Liberty more than ordinary among thoſe, that will make an ill Uſe of what was never ill intended. He muſt be wiſe in the Choice of his Friends, not to admit any Man into that Number, who may reflect a Diſparagement on his Perſon or Function. He muſt be wiſe eſpecially in the Government of his own Family; for, as the Apoſtle excellently reaſons, [s] If a Man know not how to rule his own Houſe, how ſhall he take care of the Church of God? He muſt be wiſe to enquire into the State of his Flock, to diſcern their particular Tempers and Conſtitutions; and even to ſearch into their Hearts and ſecret Inclinations: And laſtly, he muſt be wiſe to adminiſter private Counſels and Reproofs, duly obſerving the Circumſtances of Time, of Place, of Perſon, of Diſpoſition; for [t] a Word fitly ſpoken, ſays the wiſe Man, is like Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver.

Holineſs and Zeal. 3. THERE are theſe two Qualifications more, requiſite in the Miniſter of Chriſt, without which all his Wiſdom and Learning will be of ſmall Avail, and that is Holineſs in the Tenor of his Life, and Zeal in the Execution of his Duty: For a Prieſt, that is not cloathed with Righteouſneſs, tho' otherwiſe richly adorned with all the Ornaments of Human and Divine Literature, and thoſe gilded over with the Rays of ſeraphic Prudence and Sagacity, is yet but a naked and deſpicable Creature, of no Authority, no Intereſt, no Uſe, or Service in the Church of God. 'Tis a black and diſmal Picture, which the Prophet gives us of the Shepherds of Iſrael; [u] Wo to the Shepherds of Iſrael, that do feed themſelves: Should not the Shepherds feed the Flock? Ye eat the Fat, and ye cloath you with the Wool, but ye feed not the Flock. The Diſeaſed have ye not ſtrengthened; neither have ye healed that which was ſick; neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away; neither have ye ſought that which was loſt; but with Force and with Cruelty have of the Councils, and Eccleſiaſtical Laws of Chriſtian Princes. The Polemical are the ancient Apologiſts, and thoſe Orthodox Fathers, who defended the Chriſtian Religion againſt Paganiſm and old Hereſies; as alſo ſuch, as have maintained the Doctrine and Rites of the Reformed Church of England, againſt Papiſts and Diſſenters. Finally, the Practical Authors are the Editors and Explainers of Liturgies, the Compilers of Offices for private Devotion, and ſuch as write about Piety, and an holy Life in general, or concerning any particular Virtue or Vice. And that he may not loſe Time, either by an ill Method of Study, or an ill Choice of Books in all Faculties, there are ſome very uſeful Writers, ſuch as Hug. Grotii, & alior. Diſſertationes de Studiis Inſtituend. Apparatus ad Theolog. per Steph. Penton, Biſhop Barlow's Directions for Study, Dr. Bray's Parochial Library, and Biſhop Wilkins's Eccleſiaſtes, &c. which will direct him in theſe Matters. But he muſt not forget to keep Common-Places, or methodical Repoſitories of all the choice Things, he would remember; for which there are very good Rules in Drexelius, [Aurifodina, Tom. IV.] but the beſt Method of Common-placing is that by our Countryman, Mr Locke. Let the young Divine then be provided with a Bible, a Concordance, a Common Prayer-Book, and the Articles and Canons all interleaved, with a large Common-Place-Book that may lie ready: The 1ſt, to note down all choice Explications of any Text; the 2d, for the Signification of Words and Phraſes; the 3d, for what is agreeable to our Offices, eſpecially in the primitive Fathers; the 4th, for ſuch Things, in Antiquity chiefly, as vindicate our Doctrine and Diſcipline: and the 5th, for a general Repoſitory of all Philological and Moral Notions; by the daily Uſe of which, a ſtudious Man will not only ſurely retain whatever he reads, even to his old Age, but will always be furniſhed, by conſulting theſe Collections of his own, with Variety of proper Matter for Sermons, Diſputations, or Diſcourſes upon any Subjects in a few Hours Time. Comber, on Ordination.

[q] Camera adorna fa Donna Savia, Prov. Ital. G. Torrian. [r] Bull's Sermons, Vol. I. [s] 1 Tim. iii. 5. [t] Prov. xxv. 11. [u] Ezek. xxxiv. 2, &c.

have ye ruled them; wherefore I am againſt the Shepherds, ſaith the Lord. And well may his Face be againſt them, when, by their looſe and irregular Lives, they make the Offering of the Lord to be abhorred; or, by their ſupine Negligence, ſuffer the Souls, committed to their Cuſtody, to fall into Perdition. St Paul, taking leave of the Biſhops, that met him at Epheſus, gives them this in Charge: * Take Heed to yourſelves, and to all the Flock, over which the Holy Ghoſt has made you Overſeers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchaſed with his own Blood. [x] The Words are very ſolemn, and the Conſideration, enforcing them, is a mighty one. They import the Obligations of the Clergy, both to an Exactneſs in their own Deportment, and to earneſt and conſtant Labours, in Imitation of the Apoſtle, who, during the three Years of his Stay in this Place, had been ſerving God with all Humility of Mind, with many Tears and Temptations; had taught them publickly, and from Houſe to Houſe; and had not ceaſed to warn every one, both Day and Night: Wherefore I take you to Record, ſays he, this Day, that I am pure from the Blood of all Men.

To excite his Care and Diligence, therefore, let every Man, appointed to this holy Office, think, and think often, that he is accountable for Souls committed to his Charge: For Souls! methinks in that one Word there is a Sermon; for immortal Souls! for precious Souls, one whereof is of more Worth than all the World, beſides the Price of the Blood of the Son of God: "Have always therefore in Remem" brance, as our Church exhorts the new-ordained Prieſt, how great a Treaſure is " committed to your Charge; for they are the Sheep of Chriſt, which he bought " with his Death, and for whom he ſhed his Blood. The Church and Congrega" tion, whom ye ſerve, is his Body: And if it ſhall happen, that the Church, or " any Member thereof, ſhould take any Hurt or Hinderance, by Reaſon of your " Neglect, you know the Greatneſs of the Fault, and alſo the horrible Puniſhment
" that will enſue," [y] Feed therefore the Flock of God, which is among you, taking the Overſight thereof, not by Conſtraint, but willingly; not for filthy Lucre, but of a ready Mind: neither as being Lords over God's Heritage, but being Enſamples to the Flock, and when the chief Shepherd ſhall appear, ye ſhall receive a Crown of Glory, that fadeth not away.

IV. ANOTHER Branch of the Apoſtles Commiſſion is, that they and their Succeſſors ſhould make ſuch Laws and Conſtitutions; ſhould appoint ſuch Rites, and impoſe ſuch Cenſures, as ſhould be thought conduceable to the good Government of the Church. —— [z] For this is implied in the very Nature of Government, that, in itſelf, it ſhould have a Legiſlative Power, to command and oblige the Subject to do and forbear ſuch Things, as it ſhall judge conducive to the Preſervation or Diſturbance of the Commonweal; without which Power, no Government can be enabled to obtain its End, which is the Good of the Publick. Since therefore the Church, by Chriſt's own Inſtitution, is a regular and well-ordered Society of Men, either we muſt ſuppoſe, that its Government is defective, which is a ſad Imputation upon our Saviour's Wiſdom, or allow, that it has a Legiſlative Power inherent in it. This Power, however, muſt not be ſuppoſed to extend to every Thing: [a] It cannot change any of thoſe Laws, which God has given us: It cannot impoſe any Article of Faith, or Rule of Moral Duty; nor can it preſcribe any Condition of Salvation, which is not either expreſſly contained in the Scriptures, or, by neceſſary Conſequence, may be deduced from them. All that it pretends to do, is to limit thoſe Things, which are left indefinite, and to preſcribe ſuch Rules, as are found requiſite for the Maintenance of Peace, Order, and Decency: And if in theſe Particulars it has no Power, it has in Effect no Power at all. The Scripture is very frequent and expreſs in requiring us to ſubmit ourſelves to thoſe, that rule over us, and watch for our Souls: But now there is no room for this Submiſſion, if we will not allow them to interpoſe their Authority in ſuch Things, as in themſelves are confeſſed to be indifferent. [b] What the Scriptures command, that we are obliged to do, though our Governors ſhould not require it, or though they ſhould forbid it: What the Scriptures prohibit, that, though the Church ſhould exact it, we may not do, becauſe we are to obey God rather than Man: Either therefore the Governors of the Church have Authority in Things, neither commanded nor forbidden by the Word of God, or, as we ſaid, they have no Authority at all. That they have no original, abſolute, deſpotic Authority over the Conſciences of Men, is readily acknowledged;

4. To appoint religious Rites, proved from Reaſon.

* Acts xx. 28, &c. [x] Biſhop Burnet's Paſtoral Care. [y] 1 Pet. v. 2, &c. [z] Scott's Mediator.
[a] Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-Government. [b] Biſhop Smalridge's Sermons.

acknowledged; but they that have a derived, delegated, limited Authority in such Things, as God hath left undetermined by any Rules of Scripture, so that their Decisions, when no Ways repugnant to God's Word, ought to be obeyed by all their Subjects, is plain from all those Scriptures, which require Subjection to higher Powers. Primarily, and of itself, the Law of God only obliges our Consciences, because God only hath a direct Power over the Conscience; but Ecclesiastical Laws do also oblige us indirectly, by Force of the Law of God. God, by appointing Governors in the Church, hath directed us to whom we ought to pay our Obedience: When therefore, in such Cases, we obey the Commands of our Governors, we do not so properly obey them, as God: Either therefore we must expunge out of Holy Writ all those Passages, which make Obedience to Governors a Part of our Christian Duty, or we must submit to their Commands, in Observance of those Usages, which God hath no where forbid, and which they, by that Authority, wherewith God hath invested them, do think it proper to enjoin.

[c] WHO that God is, whom alone we are to worship; with what Affection of Mind we ought to worship him; with what Devotion of Soul, and Humiliation of Body, we are to perform our Worship to him, we are perfectly instructed by the Scriptures: But concerning the Circumstances of Worship, in what Place we shall meet together to worship him, at what Times we shall assemble at such a Place, what particular Gesture of Body we shall use, what he, who officiates, shall wear in the publick Worship, the Scriptures no where determine. Either therefore we may lawfully do something, which the Scriptures do not expressly command, or it is not lawful for us to worship God at any fixed Time, and to say our Prayers together in any appointed Place, because the Scriptures have no where determined the Hour of the Day, when we should meet to worship God; nor the precise Place, where we should pray unto him; and therefore, in Things of this Nature, the constant Custom has been, for Churches, in all Ages, to be determined by the Wisdom of their Governors.

The Practice of the Jewish, [d] THE Religion of the Jews was delivered to one Nation, the chief Parts of it confined to one Place, and the Rites and Ceremonies of their Worship strictly limited, lest they should fall into the idolatrous Practices of the Neighbours round about them: And yet we find, in our Saviour's Time, many Rites (such as the whole Constitution of their Synagogues, with Offices and Services appropriated to them, the Institution of Baptism, and many Observances in the Paschal Solemnity) which were not prescribed by Moses, nor mentioned in any Part of the Old Testament; and these our blessed Lord was so far from condemning, merely because they were super-added to the Law, that himself observed many of them: For he not only frequented the Temple-Service, but their Synagogues likewise; and consecrated both their Baptism, and their Custom of blessing Bread and Wine, after the Paschal Supper, to be fœderal Rites of the Christian Covenant. And, if so much Liberty was allowed in so limited a Religion, it seems highly suitable to the sublimer State of the Christian Liberty, that there should be room left for such Appointments or Alterations, as the different State of Time and Places should require.

and Christian Church. IF we look into the Practice of the Apostles, we shall find, that, besides the standing Rules of the Gospel, they appointed sundry Things, as the several Occasions of the Churches under their Care seemed to require. That Converts from Gentilism should abstain from Blood, in order to their more easy Incorporation with the Jews; that there should be an Order of Deaconesses, who should minister to the first Preachers of the Gospel, and assist them in converting or baptizing Women; that it was customary, by a Kiss of Charity, for the Primitive Christians to express their mutual Love to one another; that in several of St Paul's Epistles, especially those to the Corinthians, he prescribes particular Rules for the Decency of Divine Worship, and other Things, which were not determined by Christ; and that, in the next Ages after the Apostles, the Governors of the Church used the same Liberty, and made several Laws and Canons for the more orderly conducting it, long before the Emperors became Christians, is too plain to need any Proof. [e] Nay, in some Cases, they exercised this Authority with universal Approbation, even to the laying aside Apostolick Usages; for the Kiss of Charity and the Order of Deaconesses have have for many Ages been diſuſed, and the World is ſatisfied, to this Day, with the Reaſons for letting them fall. And if the Church may lay aſide Apoſtolic Practices, in Matters relating to Order, it has certainly Authority to make new Rules about ſuch Things; ſince it is an higher Attempt to alter what was ſettled by the Apoſtles themſelves, than to eſtabliſh new Rules in Matters, that are left undetermined.

[c] Smalridge's Sermons.
[e] Archbishop Potter, ibid.
[d] Archbishop Potter, on Church Government; and Bishop Burnet, on the Articles.

Cenſures.

AND if the Church has Authority to make Laws, it can hardly be ſuppoſed, but that it has a Power to put them in Execution; to cenſure Offenders, and to exclude them from its Communion, in Caſe they are incorrigible. When the Jewiſh Law was in its full Force and Vigour, there was no Need for excluding notorious Offenders from all civil and religious Communion, becauſe ſuch Perſons were not ſuffered to live; [f] the Soul, that doeth ought preſumptuouſly, (whether it be born in the Land, or a Stranger) the ſame reproacheth the Lord, and that Soul ſhall be cut off from among his People: But after the Babyloniſh Captivity, when the Jews could not fully execute their own Laws, then began they firſt to ſeparate Men from the Congregation for groſs Impieties, as they had done for legal Impurities before. [g] In our bleſſed Saviour's Time, the Puniſhment of Excommunication was very frequent; and, according to the Tradition and Practice of the Jewiſh Maſters, there were three Kinds or Degrees of it. The firſt and loweſt was what they called Niddui, the Greeks, ἀφορισμὸς, a Separation of great Offenders from all civil and religious Commerce. The ſecond was what they called Cherem, the Greeks, ἀνάθεμα, or Execration, becauſe, over and above the aforeſaid Separation, there were, in this Form, certain Curſes out of the Law of Moſes pronounced over the Head of the Offender, to affect him more ſenſibly with the Dread of Divine Vengeance. The third was what they called Schammatha, which was a Sort of Proſcription, whereby the Sinner, whom the former Methods did not reclaim, was for ever cut off from the People of God, his Name razed out of the Book of Life, and himſelf conſigned to Deſtruction, and the Coming of the Lord in Judgment againſt him; for ſo the Word meaneth.

The Practice of the Jewiſh Church herein, and of the Chriſtian.

WHETHER our Saviour, among other Rites, might adopt this likewiſe into his Religion, is not ſo material here to enquire; that he has eſtabliſhed a Juriſdiction in his Church, and given the Rulers thereof full Power to take Cognizance of its Members, is evident from this Paſſage: [h] If thy Brother ſhall treſpaſs againſt thee, go tell him his Fault between him and thee alone; if he ſhall hear thee, thou haſt gained thy Brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that, in the Mouth of two or three Witneſſes, every Word may be eſtabliſhed, i. e. that thou mayeſt be able, in caſe he does not then amend, to produce ſufficient Teſtimony of his Guilt before the Church's Tribunal: And if he ſhall neglect to hear them, i. e. to promiſe Amendment upon their Admonition; take them along with thee, and tell it to the Church, that ſo ſhe may examine the Matter, and, upon thy proving his Guilt by ſufficient Witneſs, may authoritatively admoniſh him to amend: But if he neglect to hear the Church, let him be unto thee an Heathen Man, and a Publican, i. e. give him over for a ſad and deſperate Sinner, as one, that is to be ejected from the Communion of the Church, and no longer to enjoy the common Benefits of a Chriſtian: For I ſay unto you, i. e. to you of the Church, before whom this obſtinate Offender is to be cited and accuſed, whatſoever ye ſhall bind on Earth, ſhall be bound in Heaven, and whatſoever ye ſhall looſe on Earth, ſhall be looſed in Heaven. From which Paſſage it appears, that our Lord is here inſtructing his Church to exerciſe a judicial Power over its Members; for this is a manifeſt Deſcription of a judicial Proceſs. He who has been injured, is firſt directed to tell the Offender of his Fault privately between themſelves; if that have no Effect, to admoniſh him before Witneſs; if this Admonition likewiſe proves unſucceſsful, to complain to the Church; if the Church's Interpoſition be not regarded, then follows the Sentence, whereby the obſtinate Offender is ſeparated from the Communion of the Faithful, and reduced into the State of Heathens; which Sentence Chriſt promiſes to confirm and ratify in Heaven.

AND as our Saviour gave his Apoſtles a judicial Power over the Members of the Church, ſo we find St Paul, in the Caſe of the inceſtuous Corinthian, exerciſing it to the full. The Corinthians, as the Apoſtle tells them, ought to have lamented for the great Scandal, which their offending Brother had given to the Enemies of Religion, and for the Danger, to which he had expoſed himſelf, and thereupon to have excluded him from their Communion; but they having neglected this Part of their their Duty, he himſelf proceeds to paſs Sentence on him; [i] I verily, as abſent in Body, but preſent in Spirit, have judged already, as though I were preſent, concerning him, that hath ſo done this Deed; in the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, when ye are gathered together, and my Spirit, with the Power of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to deliver ſuch an one unto Satan, for the Deſtruction of the Fleſh, that the Spirit may be ſaved in the Day of the Lord Jeſus.

[f] Numb. xv. 30. [g] Comber, on Excommunication. [h] Matth. xviii. 15, &c.

To atteſt the Church's Authority, in the earlieſt Days of Chriſtianity, [k] God was pleaſed to permit Satan to torment thoſe, that were excommunicated, with ſome great Pain, or Diſeaſe of Body, both to deter others, and to bring the Offender to a Senſe of his Sin; which accordingly had Effect upon this Corinthian; for in the ſecond Epiſtle, which the Apoſtle writes, he tells the Church, that [l] ſufficient to ſuch an one is this Puniſhment, which was inflicted of many; and therefore he directs them to comfort and forgive him, viz. by reſtoring him to their Communion, leſt he ſhould be ſwallowed up with over-much Sorrow, and leſt Satan, by that Means, ſhould get Advantage to deſtroy him, by tempting him to Deſpair. As therefore he had before decreed him to be cenſured, in the Name, and by the Authority of Chriſt, ſo now he remits the Cenſure, by the ſame Authority; [m] to whom ye forgive any Thing, I forgive alſo; for if I forgive any Thing, to whom I forgive it for your ſakes forgive I it, in the Perſon of Chriſt. So that here is a full Evidence of the Apoſtle's employing his Juriſdiction, both in cenſuring an Offender, and upon his Repentance, in remitting the Cenſure; and therefore, when we find him in other Places threatening the Wicked, if they perſiſted in their evil Courſes, that he would come with a Rod, and would not ſpare, but would uſe Severity, and revenge all Diſobedience, and this, by the Authority, which the Lord had given him, to Edification, and not to Deſtruction; he very plainly declares, that the Power of Excommunication was in his Hands, wherewith, as he tells us, he chaſtiſed Hymenæus and Alexander, two buſy Hereticks in the Church of Epheſus, whom [n] he delivered unto Satan, that they might learn not to blaſpheme.

An Objection. " BUT this Method of Proceeding, ſome may ſay, was peculiar to the Apoſtles, " and to continue no longer in the Church, than they lived. They had Power to " inflict Diſeaſes, and even Death itſelf upon Offenders, and ſo could execute their " own Sentences themſelves, in ſuch a Manner, as would effectually be felt. But ſince " this Power is departed from the Church, the bare Sentence is mere brutum fulmen, " and of no Uſe or Signification at all." Anſwered. Now the Pretence of the temporary Duration of this Authority in the Church can be no more, than a mere Cavil, ſince Government, in its own Nature, is equally neceſſary at one Time, as at another, and cannot ſubſiſt without a Power of animadverting upon Offenders. The Primitive Church was three hundred Years without the Protection of a Civil Magiſtrate; Moſt of that Time it was actually perſecuted; for the Remainder it was barely connived at; and the mildeſt Emperors were at moſt but like Gallio, who was an Officer under one of the gentleſt of them, Men, that cared for none of theſe Things; and ſhall we ſay, that the Governors of the Church could not exerciſe a Power over its own Members, whilſt it continued in this Condition, when we ſee that St Paul directed both Timothy and Titus, how they ſhould proceed in cenſuring Offenders? Or, becauſe Men are not now ſtricken dead with a Word's ſpeaking, like Ananias and Saphira; or blind, like the Sorcerer Elymas; nor afflicted with ſore Diſeaſes, like thoſe, whom the Apoſtles delivered over to Satan, ſhall we therefore conclude, either that the Church has no Power, or that her Cenſures are of no Avail? Three ſeveral Times has our Saviour repeated it, that the Sentence, which is given by a proper Officer below, he will confirm and ratify in Heaven; and if to be ſecluded from the Prayers and Sacraments of the Chriſtian Church; if to be debarred all Commerce and Society with thoſe, for whom we have the greateſt Love and Eſteem; to be reduced to the Condition of Heathens, and, without Repentance, delivered over to eternal Damnation, be a Puniſhment of no Terror, what can we imagine terrible? So dreadful a Senſe had the Primitive Chriſtians of this Expulſion from all civil and religious Communion, that, when any lay under the Sentence of it, [o] they conſtantly appeared in all the Formalities of Sorrow and Mourning; in a ſordid and ſqualid Habit, with a ſad Countenance, and Tears in their Eyes, ſtanding without the Church-Doors, (for they were not ſuffered to enter) falling down upon their Knees to the Miniſter, and begging the Prayers

[i] 1 Cor. v. 3, &c. [k] Cave's Primitive Chriſtianity. [l] 2 Cor. ii. 6, &c. [m] Ibid. ver. 10. [n] 1 Tim. i. 20. [o] Cave, ibid.

Prayers of all good Chriſtians, as they went in, with all the Expreſſions and Demonſtrations of a dejected Mind; reckoning, the lower they lay in Repentance, the higher it would exalt them, and the leſs they ſpared themſelves, the more God would ſpare them.

AND queſtionleſs, the Severity of the Primitive Diſcipline was a powerful Means, not only to make Offenders themſelves ſenſible of the Heinouſneſs of their Crimes, but, by their exemplary Puniſhment, to guard and terrify others from falling into the like Condemnation; to ſtop the Infection from ſpreading, by enjoining a Separation from all notorious Propagators of Vice; and to provide for the Credit of a Religion, by animadverting upon the diſobedient and unruly, and ſetting a Brand upon ſuch as blaſphemed the Name of God, and brought Scandal upon their holy Profeſſion. If this ancient Ordinance has in theſe our Days loſt its Terror, and fallen into Contempt, this muſt proceed from that Male-Adminiſtration of it, whereby it degenerates either into an uſeleſs or miſchievous Inſtrument: And therefore, to retrieve its loſt Credit, it may not be improper to cloſe up this Subject with theſe important Rules, viz. [a] that this Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure be impartial, without Reſpect of Perſons, or inflicting it on one, rather than another; that it be not exerciſed in ſecular Affairs, which is a groſs perverting of this ſacred Inſtitution; that it be not inflicted for Trifles, for diſputable Matters, but for ſuch important Cauſes, as will juſtify ſo awful a Sentence; that it be executed by a proper Adminiſtrator, i. e. by a ſacred Perſon, a Biſhop, or Preſbyter, and not by a Lay-Deputy, as is done too often; and laſtly that it be uſed with great Gravity and Seriouſneſs, with great Tenderneſs and Charity; for, as it is a ſacred Inſtitution, it is to be adminiſtered with a becoming Solemnity and Reverence, and, as it is a fatherly Cenſure, muſt be diſcharged with a proportionable Affection, and Concernedneſs for the Welfare of Offenders.

V. ONE Part more of the Commiſſion, which our Saviour gave his Diſciples, was the Promiſe, which he made them, and their Succeſſors, of the Perpetuity of his Church, and of his continual protecting and aſſiſting them in all Ages, [a] for lo, I am with you even unto the End of the World: For it is impertinent to ſuppoſe, that the Συντέλεια τῦ αἰῶνος, ſhould mean no more, than the End of the Jewiſh Age, or Oeconomy, which laſted only till the Deſtruction of the Temple and City of Jeruſalem by Titus, as ſome would have it, on Purpoſe to confine this Promiſe to the Perſons of the Apoſtles only; [b] whereas this Phraſe is never once in the whole Bible uſed in this Senſe, but very often, and even by this Evangeliſt too, to denote the laſt Conſummation of all Things. Since the Apoſtles therefore, all of them died within the Compaſs of fourſcore Years after this Promiſe was made, there is no other Way, wherein it could be fulfilled, but by our Lord's being with their Succeſſors, in the Goſpel-Miniſtry, till the World's End. So long then as the Promiſe of God is true, [c] though many Thouſands of Profeſſors have abandoned the Faith, and apoſtatized from the Church; though many particular Churches have been loſt, and ſome bright and glorious Candleſticks quite removed from their Places; yet will not he permit the Church in general to periſh, nor the Gates of Hell to prevail againſt it. In all Ages he will preſerve to himſelf a Number of true Worſhippers, and, in all Exigences, raiſe up ſuch powerful Defenders of his holy Religion, as its moſt inveterate Enemies ſhall not be able to withſtand. And to ſatisfy ourſelves how far this Promiſe is already verified, we will take a ſhort View of the ſeveral Dangers and Viciſſitudes, which Chriſtianity has undergone, ſince its firſt ſetting Foot in the World, in order to perceive the Watchfulneſs of God's Providence and Protection over it.

The Perpetuity of Chriſt's Church.

AFTER the Apoſtles had, for ſome Time, preached in Jeruſalem, and the Regions thereabout, the Church-Hiſtory acquaints us, that they went abroad to convert other Nations, and took each Man his particular Diſtrict; that Peter preached to the Jews, diſperſed in Pontus, Galatia, Bithynia, Cappadocia, &c. Andrew, to the Scythians; John, in Leſſer Aſia; Philip, in Phrygia; Thomas, in Parthia, &c. inſomuch, that the ancient Prophecy was fulfilled, [d] God ſhall enlarge Japheth, and he ſhall dwell in the Tents of Shem, i. e. the Poſterity of the Gentiles ſhall worſhip the true God, and be received into Covenant with him. [e] But no ſooner did the

An hiſtorical Account of the ſeveral Dangers, Chriſtianity has been in, and of God's protecting it in all Ages.

[a] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. Government. [b] Archbiſhop Potter, on Church-
[c] Pearſon, on the Creed. [a] Matth. xxviii. 20.
[d] Gen. ix. 27. [e] Edwards, ibid.

1. From Hereſy.

Chriſtian Religion begin to appear in the World, but Seducers and Hereticks ſprang up in the Church, who might have endangered the common Faith, had not God raiſed up eminent Men to withſtand and confute their Errors. In theſe early Times, we read of ſome, who held, that the general Reſurrection was paſt; and of others, who denied, that Chriſt was come in the Fleſh; of ſome, who maintained the Difference of Meat, and the Unlawfulneſs of Marriage, and even ſuch Opinions, as might be called the Doctrines of Devils: But St Paul ſtood up and oppoſed them all. Simon Magus, whom the Ancients call the Ring-Leader of all Hereſy, denied the Doctrine of the Trinity, and affirmed, that himſelf was God; but St Peter, and other noted Champions, encountered and defeated him. From him however proceeded a numerous Offspring of Hereticks, all differing from one another, as much as they did from Truth; and among theſe, were Ebion and Cerinthus, who held, that Chriſt was a mere Man, and that the Obſervation of the Moſaic Law was neceſſary; but as St Paul confuted the latter Aſſertion, and St John the former, ſo St Jude, the Survivor of all the Apoſtles, except St John, and now grown old in the Profeſſion and Defence of the Goſpel, animated the Chriſtians, in thoſe Times, to this juſt and glorious Conflict; [f] when I gave all Diligence, ſays he, to write to you of the common Salvation, i. e. of the great and important Cauſe of Chriſtianity, which concerns us all, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, that you ſhould earneſtly contend for the Faith, which was once delivered to the Saints; which Exhortation was ſo well obſerved, that [g] in ſucceeding Ages, no ſooner did any Hereſy ſhew its Head, but it preſently met with a ſtrenuous Oppoſition.

2. Perſecutions.

THAT the Chriſtian Religion ſhould engage its Followers in Miſeries and Sufferings, is obvious to any, that conſider the Nature of its Doctrines, and the Tendency of its Deſign. The Severity of its Precepts, ſo directly oppoſite to the corrupt and vicious Inclinations of Men; the Purity of its Worſhip, ſo flatly contrary to the looſe and obſcene Rites and Solemnities of the Heathens; and its abſolute Inconſiſtency with thoſe Religions, that had ſo long obtained in the World, raiſed a general Indignation againſt it, and provoked the Great ones, in thoſe Times, to conſpire its Ruin. Ten bitter Perſecutions were ſucceſſively raiſed againſt its Profeſſors, in which all, that the Wit and Malice of Man could invent, by Way of Torture, was inflicted; and ſo far had the Roman Emperors proceeded once, as appears by the Trophies, and [h] Triumphal Arches, erected to perpetuate the Memory of their Conqueſt over it, as to think, they had quite extinguiſhed Chriſtianity; but it ſtill revived, and grew afreſh. The Cruelties of Adverſaries increaſed the Number of Chriſtians, and the more they ſuffered, the more they flouriſhed; till, at length, an Edict was publiſhed, in Conſtantine's Time, giving Liberty and Encouragement to all Chriſtians to worſhip God, God, according to their own Manner.

3. Hereſies again.

THUS had the Church Reſt from Perſecution; but, not long after, there aroſe heretical and falſe Doctrines, which not only diſturbed the Peace, but impaired the Purity of it. The Arian Hereſy, which blaſphemed the ſacred Trinity, and denied the Divinity of our bleſſed Saviour, ſoon after the general Peace, broke out: But here the Care of Divine Providence was very remarkable, in raiſing up able Champions, ſuch as Athanaſius, Gregory Nyſſen, and Nazianzen, &c. to protect inſulted Truth;

[f] Jude ver. 3.

[g] Thus, in the next Centuries, Marcian and Valentine were attacked by Polycarp, St John's Scholar; and Irenæus, Polycarp's Diſciple, wrote againſt the Hereſies of Simon Magus, Menander, Baſilides, Carpocrates, &c. Tertullian encountered Marcion, Hermogenes, and Apelles; and when the Doctrine of Ebion and Cerinthus was renewed by Sabellius, and Paulus Samoſatenus, theſe Hereticks were oppoſed by Gregory of Neo-Cæſarea, and Dionyſius of Alexandria, and ſo of all the reſt. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

[h] Two Inſcriptions, belonging to theſe Triumphal Arches, were found in Clania in Spain, the one of which is thus:

DIOCLESIANUS JOVIUS. ET MAXIMIAN. HERCULEUS CAES. AUG. AMPLIFICATO PER ORIENTEM ET OCCIDENTEM IMP. ROM. ET NOMINE CHRISTIANORUM DELETO, QUI REMP. EVERTEBANT.

The other thus:

DIOCLESIAN. CAES. AUG. GALERIO IN ORIENTE ADOPT. SUPERSTITIONE CHRIST——UBIQUE DELETA, ET CULTU DEORUM PROPAGATO.

The Meaning of both which is to ſhew, that Dioclesian, and his Colleague, Maximianus, had every where extinguiſhed the wicked Superſtition of Chriſt, as they called it, ſo pernicious to the Commonwealth, and had reſtored Paganiſm, and the Worſhip of the Gods; Cave's Primitive Chriſtianity. But theſe very Emperors, we are told, being tired and wearied out with perſecuting the Church to no Purpoſe, betook themſelves to a private State, and ſpent the reſt of their Lives in Gardening.

Truth; and a ſufficient Number of learned Apologiſts, both [i] of the Greek and Latin Church, to defend it, when it was aſſaulted by Pagans.

WHILE Matters were in this Situation, a new Storm threatened very grievouſly the Church of Chriſt. For Conſtantine the Great, having removed his Army from the Northern to the Eaſtern Territories, and himſelf from Rome to Conſtantinople, gave the Goths and Vandals, and other barbarous Nations, an Opportunity to invade Italy, and lay waſte the Weſtern Empire; while, in the Eaſt, the Errors and Hereſies, the Quarrels and Contentions, that prevailed among Chriſtians, made Way for Mahometiſm, and deſtroyed the moſt flouriſhing Churches, even thoſe that are mentioned in the Revelation. Mahometiſm and Idolatry.

THUS while, in the Eaſt, the World fell off to Mahometiſm, and in the Weſt, to Superſtition and Idolatry, the Church, one would think, was in imminent Danger: But, how much ſoever it might ſuffer by theſe Defections, it was ſtill preſerved from Deſtruction. For, even in the Ages of the greateſt Corruption, [k] ſome generous Souls always appeared, who abhorred the Errors, which then prevailed, and contended earneſtly for the Faith, which was once delivered to the Saints; till, at length, their Zeal and Writings awakened others, to enquire into the Truth of Things, and ſo meditate a Reformation; which was both begun and continued with ſuch a Series of wonderful and ſurprizing Events, as proclaimed God to be the great Author and Director of it.

THUS, in all the Revolutions that have happened, true Religion has ever been preſerved: In all Storms and Tempeſts, the Church has rode ſecurely, and the Gates of Hell have not prevailed againſt it: And, if we enquire into the Grounds and Reaſons hereof, we ſhall find, that the Truth and Faithfulneſs of God are concerned in the Preſervation of it. For when he tells us expreſſly, that he [l] will eſtabliſh it for ever, and that [m] no Weapon, formed againſt it, ſhall proſper; that [n] he hath ſet up a Kingdom, which ſhall never be deſtroyed; that [o] he will reign over the Houſe of Jacob for ever, and of his Kingdom there ſhall be no End; when theſe and ſuch-like Promiſes do every where meet us, we cannot entertain the leaſt Doubt of the perpetual Subſiſtence of God's Church for the Time to come, ſince his watchful Care and Providence over it has been ſo wonderfully conſpicuous, for the Ages that are paſt. Amidſt the ſtrangeſt Occurrences and Revolutions therefore, we may confide in this great Truth, That God's Church ſhall never fail. Say, that, for a Time, it is corrupted with Error and Hereſy; ſay, that it is endangered by Perſecution and Tyranny; ſay, that it is undermined by Stratagem and Policy; yet, it being the ſingular Charge and Care of Heaven, it ſhall never be deſtroyed; and, for this Reaſon, it is repreſented under the Emblem of the Woman in the Revelation, [p] clothed with the Sun, and the Moon under her Feet, and upon her Head a Crown of twelve Stars; who, when ſhe was perſecuted by the Dragon, had two Wings of a great Eagle given her, that ſhe might fly into the Wilderneſs, into her Place, where ſhe is nouriſhed for a Time, and Times, and half a Time, from the Face of the Serpent. The Reaſons of God's protecting it.

[i] Of the Greek Church were Athenagoras, Tatianus, Theophilus Antiochenus, Juſtin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus, Origen, Euſebius, Athanaſius, Theodoret; and of the Latin, Tertullian, Arnobius, Lactantius, Minutius Felix, Auguſtinus, &c.

[k] When the Popiſh Corruptions ſeemed to overſpread the Churches of Europe, God ſtirred up the Waldenſes in France; Wickliff, in England; Huſs, in Bohemia; Zuinglius, in Helvetia; Luther, in Saxony; Calvin, in France; Knox, in Scotland, &c. who vigorouſly made Oppoſition againſt the Errors and evil Practices of the Roman Church. Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I.

[l] Pſal. xlviii. 8. [m] Iſa. liv. 17. [n] Dan. ii. 44. [o] Luke i. 33. [p] Rev. xii. 1, 14.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Gifts and Graces of the HOLY GHOST.

The Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt.

OUR Bleſſed Saviour, being about to aſcend into Heaven, in order to take Poſſeſſion of his Mediatorial Kingdom, ſupports the drooping Spirits of his Diſciples with a Promiſe, that he would ſend a Comforter to them, who ſhould protect and aſſiſt them with his Almighty Power, and enlighten their Minds with his infinite Wiſdom and Knowledge. [a] Be of good Cheer, ſays he, for [b] I will not leave you comfortleſs, but will pray the Father, and he ſhall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever: Only [c] tarry ye in the City of Jeruſalem, until ye receive the Promiſe from the Father, and be endowed with Power from on High. Purſuant to this Order, the Apoſtles, after they had ſeen their Lord aſcend into Heaven, [d] returned to Jeruſalem; and, continuing, with one Accord, in Prayer and Supplication, were, no Doubt, met together for this Purpoſe, when, on the Day of [e] Pentecoſt, ſo called, becauſe it was the fiftieth Day after the Feaſt of the Paſſover, [f] ſuddenly there came a Sound from Heaven, as of a ruſhing mighty Wind, and it filled all the Houſe where they were ſitting. And there appeared unto them cloven Tongues, like as of Fire, and it ſat upon each of them; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghoſt, and began to ſpeak with other Tongues, as the Spirit gave them Utterance.

Why ten Days after Chriſt's Aſcenſion.

WHY our Bleſſed Saviour did not, immediately after his Aſcenſion, ſend the Holy Ghoſt to ſupply his Place, but left his Diſciples, for ſome Time, in this diſconſolate Condition, may, in a great Meaſure, be aſcribed to his Deſign of exerciſing their Faith, and preparing them for a more joyful Reception of the Heavenly Gift, when it came. [g] For, as to be ſhut up in Darkneſs makes the Light more pleaſant and welcome, when we come to enjoy it again; ſo to have been, for ſome Time, deſolate and deſtitute of our wonted Comforts, makes the Return of them, or the Coming of other Comforts in their Place, much more refreſhing and ſatisfactory to us. The ten Days, from the Aſcenſion of our Lord to the Coming of this Bleſſed Spirit, were, by the Apoſtles, as the Scripture ſeems to intimate, moſtly ſpent in Prayer; by which Exerciſe their Expectations were raiſed, their Deſires inflamed and heightened, their Hearts opened and enlarged, and the Value of the Mercy, prayed for, wonderfully inhanſed; and ſo, in all Reſpects, they were now better prepared to receive this Divine Gueſt, which the Father was to ſend in his Name. But this is not all.

THE ſecond of thoſe three great Solemnities, in which all the Males of Iſrael were required to appear before the Lord, in the Place which he ſhould chuſe, was now approaching; and therefore the Divine Wiſdom thought proper to delay the Miſſion of the Comforter, until a large Concourſe of People, at Jeruſalem, might give a better Opportunity for an Event ſo extraordinary more generally to be obſerved, more nicely examined, and more ſpeedily publiſhed Abroad, through the many diſtant Regions, whither the People, now aſſembled, would ſhortly be diſperſed. And, by this Means likewiſe, thoſe very Perſons, who, at the laſt great Feaſt of the Paſſover, had been Eye-Witneſſes of our Saviour's Sufferings and Shame, would have now the ſame Evidence of his Truth and Glory, by thoſe Powers of the Spirit conferred, and thoſe Miracles wrought in his Name, at their Attendance on this ſecond Feſtival, which would be an Over-balance to the Scandal of his Croſs.

The Circumſtances of his Deſcent, and the Import of them.

BUT, whatever the Reaſons of the Holy Ghoſt's Delay might be, 'tis certain, that the Appearances of his Deſcent, when he came, were very ſurprizing, and very inſtructive. The Suddenneſs of the Sound, and the Point of Direction, whence he came

[a] John xvi. 33. [b] Ibid. xiv. 16. [c] Luke xxiv. 49. [d] Acts i. 12, 14.

[e] Concerning the Pentecoſt, we read this Ordinance, [Levit. xxiii. 15, 16.] Ye ſhall count unto you, from the Morrow after the Sabbath, from the Day that ye brought the Sheaf of the Wave-Offering, ſeven Sabbaths ſhall ye compleat; even unto the Morrow after the ſeventh Sabbath, ſhall ye number fifty Days, and ye ſhall offer a new Meat-Offering unto the Lord. Hence, from the ſeven Weeks Interval, this was called the Feaſt of Weeks, and was obſerved, in Memory of the Delivery of the Law from Mount Sinai, juſt fifty Days after the Children of Iſrael had left Egypt. Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III.

[f] Acts ii, 2, &c. [g] Conant's Sermons.

came, were of Uſe to ſtrike an Awe upon the Perſons, and prepare them, with more profound Humility and Reverence, to receive the Approaches, God was making towards them. The Reſemblance of Wind is, of all others, moſt familiar in Scripture to figure the Spirit of God, his Power, and his Effects. Our Saviour himſelf makes uſe of the Similitude: And indeed, what can be more proper to repreſent the Freedom of Divine Grace, as well as the Power of its Operations, thoſe refreſhing, thoſe cleanſing Influences, which fill and penetrate, and move the Hearts of Men, which raiſe a new and happy Ferment there, and lift them up to Heaven, by infuſing pious Diſpoſitions, than Wind, which, like that Spirit, is itſelf inviſible, wonderful, and unaccountable in its Manner of working, but, in its Force and Efficacy, notorious and undeniable?

THE like Propriety [h] ſome have obſerved in the Emblem of cloven Tongues ſitting on the Heads of the Diſciples, in a bright Reſemblance of Fire. The Tongues might denote the Readineſs and Aptneſs of their Expreſſions and Arguments; the Clefts in the Tongues, the Diverſity of the Languages they were to ſpeak; and poſſibly the Sitting of theſe Tongues upon them might ſignify the Permanency of this Gift; that it was not to vaniſh immediately, but allowed to continue, and by their Miniſtry, to be diffuſed and communicated to others, ſo long as the Neceſſities of the Church, and the Propagation of the Chriſtian Faith ſhould require it. Nor can it be imagined, but that Fire was a very fit Reſemblance of the Light, theſe Diſciples received by the Acceſſion of the Holy Spirit; of the clear, unerring Knowledge, they attained of all Things, that it concerned Perſons in their high Character, and Truſt, to underſtand; and of that Zeal and fearleſs Courage, which ſpread itſelf into their Hearts, and kindled ſuch a vital and vigorous Heat therein, that, from thenceforth, we hear no more of any of them trembling at the Charge of belonging to Jeſus, no more aſſembling privately for Fear of the Jews, but putting themſelves forward, induſtriouſly preaching and working Miracles boldly in the Temple, in the Synagogues, in the Streets; declaring, that they muſt, and would ſpeak what they had ſeen and heard; and when treated as Malefactors, upon that very Account, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the Sake of a crucified Maſter.

The Deſcent itſelf, what.

THESE are the Obſervations, which ſome have thought fit to make, concerning the Circumſtances attending the Holy Ghoſt's Deſcent: But by the Deſcent itſelf we muſt not apprehend any local Motion, or Mutation of Place: For ſince, as we had Occaſion to prove elſewhere, the Holy Ghoſt is a Divine Perſon, and, conſequently, every where preſent, it cannot be properly ſaid to remove, or to go from one Place to another; for then muſt it come to a Place, where it was not before, which would deſtroy its Omnipreſence; and therefore the Deſcent muſt be interpreted only of the efficacious Preſence of that bleſſed Spirit, or rather, of the Diſcovery and Manifeſtation of that Preſence, by ſome ſtrange Effects, and uncommon Operations.

The different Sorts of Gifts, what.

NOW the Operations aſcribed to this Spirit are, ſome extraordinary, ſome ordinary; [i] ſome ſpecial to ſome Times and ſome Perſons, others common to all Chriſtians in all Ages; ſome neceſſary for the firſt Planting of the Goſpel, others requiſite to the ſpiritual Growth of true Believers; ſome miraculous Gifts, by which, thoſe, that were furniſhed with them, were qualified to promote the Salvation of other Men; others, ſaving Graces, by which thoſe, who are endued therewith, are enabled to work out their own Salvation: The former, ſuch, as we ought to thank God for having heretofore beſtowed on the Apoſtles, and firſt Preachers of the Goſpel, for the more effectual and ſpeedy Propagation thereof; the latter, ſuch, as we ought to pray to God to beſtow upon ourſelves, as neceſſary to diſpoſe our Underſtandings rightly to apprehend, our Wills chearfully to obey, and our Affections duly to entertain the ſaving Truths and Precepts of the Goſpel. The former not to be pretended to, in theſe our Days, without Enthuſiaſm and Fanaticiſm; the latter not to be neglected, wanted, or uncultivated by us, without Hazard of our everlaſting Salvation: The former, Signs, whereby to diſtinguiſh true Prophets from falſe Perſons, Men really commiſſioned by God, from arrogant Pretenders to Divine Revelation; the latter, ſure Characters, whereby to diſtinguiſh the Regenerate from the Unregenerate; the ſincere Chriſtian, from the Hypocrite; the real Believer, from the nominal; the ſpiritual Perſon, from the carnal; the Child of God, and Heir of [h] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III. and Tillotſon's Sermons, Vol. III.

[i] Smalridge's Sermons.

Glory, from the Child of Wrath, and Son of Perdition. And therefore, in treating of this Argument, our Buſineſs muſt be,

I. To obſerve what theſe extraordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt were; and how highly neceſſary, at that Time, for the firſt Plantation of Chriſtianity. And,

II. What his ordinary Operations are, how highly neceſſary, at this Time, to enable us to perform the Conditions of the Goſpel; and in what Manner we may moſt reaſonably ſuppoſe, that they aſſiſt us herein.

The extraordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt.

I. The Apoſtles then, we muſt imagine, and others intruſted with the great Affair of converting the World to the Chriſtian Religion, ſtood in need of many Gifts, which were not ſo neceſſary in future Ages. As [l] they were to be the firſt Planters of the Goſpel, it was requiſite, 1. That they ſhould be able to ſpeak the ſeveral Languages of the Nations, to whom they were to preach. 2. That they ſhould be fully and clearly inſtructed in the Doctrines, they were to teach. 3. That they ſhould be able to give the moſt convincing Evidence of the Truth and Divinity of their Doctrines. And, 4. That they ſhould be conducted by infallible Advice, thro' all the emergent Difficulties of their Miniſtry: Againſt all which Neceſſities the Holy Ghoſt abundantly ſupplied them. For,

Of Languages.

1. He inſpired them with the Gift of Tongues, without which, they muſt have ſpent a great Part of their Lives, before they could have been capable of preaching the Goſpel to the World, in learning the ſeveral Languages of the ſeveral Nations they were to preach to. The Holy Ghoſt therefore, upon his miraculous Deſcent, did, in an Inſtant, infuſe into them the Habit of ſpeaking ſeveral Languages, inſomuch that, without any Rules or previous Inſtruction, they were heard to ſpeak, to the great Aſtoniſhment of their Hearers, in the [m] fifteen ſeveral Tongues of fifteen ſeveral Nations; and though it was not long before they were diſperſed abroad in the World, and ſome of them into remote Countries, whoſe Names perhaps they never heard of before, yet, wherever they came, they were inſtantly inſpired with the Language of the Country, and ſpake it as freely, as if it had been their Mother-Tongue.

Of Knowledge.

2. What the firſt Preachers of the Goſpel taught, was to be the Standard of Truth and Falſhood to all ſucceeding Generations; and therefore the Holy Ghoſt took care to inſtruct them perfectly in all Points of Doctrine, that ſo their Succeſſors, in all Ages, might ſafely rely on their Authority. And, to this Purpoſe, he not only converſed with their Spirits, and repreſented Things nakedly and immediately to their Underſtanding, but raiſed their Underſtanding likewiſe to comprehend his Revelations; for ſo we are told, that, upon their Reception of the Holy Ghoſt, they [n] ſpake with Tongues, and propheſied, i. e. explained the deep Myſteries of the Goſpel.

Of Miracles.

3. Becauſe it was requiſite, [o] that thoſe, who offered a new Religion to the World, ſhould have it in their Power to convince others, that their Commiſſion was from Heaven; God was pleaſed, by this Miſſion of his Spirit, to endow them with a Power of working Miracles, for the Confirmation of their Doctrine: And, in this Reſpect, they even excelled the Works of Chriſt himſelf, to the full Accompliſhment of his Promiſe; [p] Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, he that believeth on me, the Works that I do, ſhall he do alſo; and greater Works than theſe, ſhall he do, becauſe I go to the Father. For whereas before, the greateſt Part of the miraculous Signs of the Divinity of the Chriſtian Doctrine were performed by Chriſt himſelf, and, conſequently, confined to the Place where he happened to be; the Holy Ghoſt, by impowering ſo many Perſons, in ſo many different Parts, to perform ſo many wonderful Things in Chriſt's Name, did, as it were, carry him in Triumph through the World, and, at once, diſplay his Majeſty and Power over the Face of the whole Earth.

Of Wiſdom.

And, 4. Becauſe the Work, wherein the firſt Propagators of the Goſpel were engaged, was ſuch, as had Difficulties attending it inſuperable to human Prudence and Wiſdom, ſuch as required an invincible Courage, and firm Integrity of Mind, a watchful Prudence, and ſpotleſs Purity of Manners; under all theſe Exigencies, the Holy Ghoſt ſerved the primitive Church in the ſame Capacity, as the Urim and Thummim did the ancient Jews, i. e. as an Oracle, to adviſe them in all Caſes of Difficulty, what they were to ſay and do; for ſo our bleſſed Saviour ſeems to to promiſe, [q] when they bring you before Magiſtrates, take no Thought what ye ſhall anſwer; for the Holy Ghoſt ſhall teach you, at the ſame Hour, what ye ought to ſay.

[l] Scott's Mediator. [m] Acts ii. 4, &c. [n] Ibid. xix. 6. [o] Scott's Mediator. [p] John xiv. 12.

THESE were the Aſſiſtances, which the Spirit of God extended to the Apoſtles, and other Planters of the Chriſtian Faith, without which the great Affair of converting the World muſt, in all Probability, have proved abortive. Had the Chriſtian Religion indeed, like the Jewiſh, been intended for one Nation only, [r] a Diverſity of Languages had been of no farther Uſe, than any other Evidence of the Spirit, whereby the Truth and Miſſion of the Apoſtles were confirmed: But ſince the Deſign of this Religion was to be Univerſal, the firſt Step to make it ſo muſt, in Reaſon, be, to qualify the Propagators of it to converſe with all Nations. Now, the Capacity of talking clearly, tho' but in one, or a very few ſtrange Languages, is an Attainment that coſts much Time and Pains, even to the moſt acute Parts, and unwearied Application: And therefore, without the Gift of Languages, the Converſion of Foreigners muſt have been a tedious, if not impoſſible, Work to ſuch Undertakers, as the Apoſtles were, and whoſe Commiſſion extended to every Nation and Language under Heaven.

The Neceſſity of theſe Gifts to the firſt Chriſtians.

Of Languages.

[s] BUT put the Caſe, they could have acquired a Readineſs of expreſſing themſelves by their own Induſtry, this might, indeed, procure them Applauſe and high Eſteem, but what is Eſteem and Applauſe towards prevailing with Men to embrace new Doctrines and myſterious Truths; to root out inveterate and agreeable Corruptions, and to plant Mortification, ſevere Virtue, and Self-denial, in their Stead? No Authority, leſs than Divine, is ſufficient to perſuade ſuch a Change: No Faculty, attained by Human Methods, can prove a Divine Authority: But when clear Evidence is made of this in one Inſtance, no Difficulty will be found in believing it in others. Allowing therefore, that the Apoſtles ſpake with other Tongues, by Divine Inſpiration, the natural Conſequence of this would be, that the Matter ſpoken of was of the ſame Original; it being inconceivable, how God would be at the Expence of a Miracle, to furniſh Men with Words to expreſs any Doctrine, which was not of his own dictating.

THAT the Apoſtles, as well as the reſt of the Jews, were under many Miſtakes in Matters of Religion, is plain from ſeveral Places of Scripture, where we find them ignorant of the Propheſies concerning the Meſſias, and never once imagining, that he was to ſuffer Death upon the Croſs. This ſhocking Circumſtance, happening to our Saviour, ſo contrary to their Expectations, made them almoſt deſpair of any Deliverance from him: [t] We truſted, ſay they, that it had been he, who ſhould have redeemed Iſrael; which is as much as to ſay, that they deſpaired of it now. We have frequently taken Notice, from whence this Miſapprehenſion of theirs proceeded, viz. From an Opinion, generally received among the Jews, that the Meſſias was to be a temporal Prince, who was to deliver them from the Roman Servitude, and make them a more glorious and triumphant Nation, than ever they had been. The private Appearance, however, of our Saviour's Life, and the Ignominy of his Death, one would think, might have rectified this Notion, and fully ſatisfied them, that his Kingdom was not of this World: But this flattering Expectation of ſecular Greatneſs was ſo agreeable to Fleſh and Blood, this Prejudice was ſo ſtrongly fixed, by being generally received, that it continued with them, even after our Saviour's Reſurrection, as we ſee by the Queſtion they put to him, [u] Lord, wilt thou at this Time reſtore again the Kingdom to Iſrael? So that there was a plain Neceſſity, upon their Lord's Removal, for the Miſſion of another Teacher, to rectify the Miſtakes they lay under, concerning the Nature of Chriſt's Kingdom; to give them right Apprehenſions of what they were to preach; and to inform them more fully, in what were the Myſteries and Secrets of our holy Religion.

Of Knowledge.

AND as the Aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit was neceſſary to enlighten the Minds of the Apoſtles, and firſt Preachers of the Goſpel; ſo was it no leſs neceſſary to fortify their Hearts, and make them act with Conſtancy and Reſolution. For how much Undauntedneſs ſoever we may imagine a righteous Cauſe may give, yet there is ſufficient Reaſon to think, that the Apoſtles, and firſt Planters of Chriſtianity, would not have had Courage enough to go on in their Undertaking, had they not been ſupported by the miraculous Workings and Conſolations of the Holy Spirit.

Of Courage.

They

[q] Luke xii. 11, 12.
[r] Stanhope, on the Epiſtles and Goſpels, Vol. III.
[s] Collier's Sermons.
[t] Luke xxiv. 21.
[u] Acts i. 6.

They were Men inconſiderable both in Fortune and Intereſt: They never acted in publick Stations, and were therefore unpractiſed in that Addreſs, and graceful Application, which gives Aſſurance, and gains Reſpect. They had no Subtlety of Reaſoning, nor Flouriſhes of Rhetorick to ſet off their Defence: Their Defence too was of ſuch a Nature, that they could not prove themſelves innocent, without making their Judges guilty of the moſt horrid Murther: Yet all theſe Diſadvantages did not, in the leaſt, diſcourage them from maintaining their Cauſe, and purſuing their Deſign. For, upon the Holy Ghoſt's Deſcent, * when they were made experimentally ſenſible of its Divine Influence, when they perceived their Minds enriched with a new Stock of unſtudied and ſupernatural Knowledge, and their Tongues able to expreſs it in all the Languages they converſed with, we ſoon find them quitting their Retirement, frequenting the moſt publick Places, and ſpeaking plainly in Defence of their Doctrine. 'Tis ſtrange to obſerve, with what a generous Aſſurance they behaved, when they were ſummoned before Perſons of the greateſt Quality, and the higheſt Authority; with what Freedom they pleaded their Maſter's Innocence, and proclaimed his Honour; with what Undauntedneſs they charged the Court with the Blood of the greateſt and moſt righteous Perſon; with what Unconcern, in ſhort, they expoſed themſelves, and with what Bravery they ſuffered.

Of Miracles. NEITHER were they remarkable only for the Reſolution, they expreſſed upon all Occaſions, but for the miraculous Works they exhibited to the World, and which were highly neceſſary for the firſt eſtabliſhing of a Religion, that was to oppoſe the Vices, and encounter the prevailing Prejudices of the Age. The Religion of the Jews and Gentiles was in preſent Poſſeſſion, had Preſcription on their Side, and, over and above that, gave a much greater Freedom than the Chriſtian. The Heathen Nations had Antiquity and Authority, the Protection of the State, and oracular Reſponſes, to plead for their Errors, and, what is of no ſmall Weight, had ſtrong Inclinations to wiſh them true: So that the Reaſoning of the Apoſtles would have hardly convinced their Hearers; the World would never have believed, that ſuch unpromiſing Perſons were the Embaſſadors of Heaven, had they produced no other Argument but their own Teſtimony: But, when they were heard to ſpeak with Tongues, they never learned; when they could cure Diſeaſes, or inflict them; kill, or make alive, as they thought fit; when, in ſhort, they ſeemed to have the Power of Life and Death delivered into their Hands, and to carry a Kind of Omnipotence about them; this muſt needs draw the Eyes of the People, and awaken in them a ſerious Attention to what was delivered. They could not but conclude, (as we obſerved before) that the Doctrine muſt have no vulgar Meaning, which was ſo wonderfully atteſted; and that thoſe Truths muſt be of more than ordinary Concern, which ſtood recommended by ſo viſible a Countenance of a Divine Power.

The Time of their Continuance in the Church. HOW long theſe ſeveral Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, viz. [x] the Gift of divers Kinds of Tongues, and their Interpretation; the Gift of Propheſy, and diſcerning of Spirits; the Gift of Healing and working Miracles; and the Gift of Wiſdom and Knowledge, as the Apoſtle enumerates them, continued in the Chriſtian Church, is not ſo eaſy a Matter to determine: This, however, we may reaſonably conjecture, [y] that the Gift of Tongues continued until the Goſpel was ſo far eſtabliſhed, that each Country had Natives of their own ordained to the Work of the Miniſtry, and capable of teaching others in their Mother-Tongue: That the Gift of Propheſy was not withdrawn, till the whole New-Teſtament was revealed, and the ſeveral Parts of it collected into one Volume: That the Gift of Wiſdom, or Direction, remained, till the Government of the Church was every where ſettled, and its Affairs reduced to a ſtated Courſe and Method: And, laſtly, that the Gift of Miracles, and among them, of ejecting evil Spirits, abode in the Church, till the Frauds and Impoſtures of the Idol-Gods were diſcovered, and the Heathens had received ſufficient Conviction of the Falſity of their own, and the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion: At leaſt till, the Prejudices of Education being worn off, the Chriſtian Religion ſtood upon equal Terms with the Heathen; under which Situation, its own natural Force could not fail of turning the Balance, and giving it an Advantage.

BUT here we are not to ſuppoſe, becauſe the miraculous Powers of the Holy Ghoſt have long ſince ceaſed, that therefore he hath totally withdrawn himſelf from the Church of Chriſt. He has recalled, indeed, the more viſible Signs of his Preſence, but ſtill he continues the ſame Influence, as certainly, though not as ſenſibly, as as before: For it is by him, that our Saviour promiſes [z] to be with us to the End of the World, and for that Reaſon calls him [a] the other Comforter, who is to abide with us for ever. Which leads us to conſider,

* Collier's Sermons. [x] 1 Cor. xii. 8. [y] Scott's Mediator.

That the Holy-Ghoſt is communicated now.

II. THE ordinary Operations of God's bleſſed Spirit, which the Schools call Graces. That there is a ſanctifying Principle communicated to Believers, preparing and aſſiſting them to the Fruits of Holineſs, and therefore called [b] the Seed of God; that this Principle is more than all moral Endowments, or any Improvements of Nature, that are merely Human, and therefore called [c] the Gift of God; [d] that this is more than the objective Influence of revealed Truths, or of all the outward Actings of Providence, and therefore called the Gift within us; that this Principle is wrought in us by the Operation of the Holy Spirit, and therefore all Virtues are called [e] the Fruits and Works of the Spirit; and Chriſtians, [f] the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt, and [g] an holy Habitation to God, through his Spirit; theſe are Truths that will appear, to any indifferent Enquirer, as plain and evident, as any that are recorded in the Bible. In the Old Teſtament indeed, though there be not that expreſs Declaration of this inward aſſiſting Principle, proceeding from God, and co-operating in Man's Sanctification; yet, when we find Moſes telling the Iſraelites, that [h] the Lord their God would circumciſe their Heart, and the Heart of their Seed, to love the Lord their God, with all their Soul; when we find David making his Supplications to God, [i] to open and turn his Eyes, to unite and incline his Heart, to quicken him, to make him go, to guide, and lead him, [k] to create a clean Heart, and renew a right Spirit within him; when we find Jeremiah promiſing from God, that he would [l] put his Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts, ſo that they ſhould all know him, from the leaſt of them unto the greateſt; and Ezekiel, giving us this Aſſurance, [m] I will take away the ſtony Heart out of your Fleſh, and I will give you an Heart of Fleſh, and I will put my Spirit within you, and cauſe you to walk in my Statutes, and ye ſhall keep my Judgments, and do them; we cannot but ſuppoſe, that the Doctrine of Grace, aſſiſting Men to Goodneſs, was generally received among the Holy Men of old.

A GREAT deal, we acknowledge, of our Saviour's [n] Diſcourſe concerning the Spirit, which he was to pour on his Diſciples, [o] does certainly belong to that extraordinary Effuſion at Pentecoſt, and to thoſe wonderful Effects, which were thereupon to follow; yet, as he had formerly given this, as an Encouragement to all Men to pray, that [p] his Heavenly Father would give this Holy Spirit to every one that aſked him; ſo there are many Parts of that Diſcourſe, ſuch as relate to the Guidance, the Conviction, and the Comforts of that Spirit, which ſeem to belong to the conſtant Neceſſities of all Chriſtians. St Peter, on the Day of Pentecoſt, having converted a great Number to the Chriſtian Faith, ordered them to be baptiſed, and gave them Aſſurance, that they ſhould receive the Gift of the Holy Ghoſt; by which he means, the ſtanding and ordinary Influence of that Spirit; [q] for the Promiſe, ſays he, is to you, and to your Children, and to all that are afar off, all ſucceeding Generations, at what Diſtance ſoever, even as many as the Lord our God ſhall call. What Language St Paul in his Epiſtles ſpeaks, 'tis needleſs to recite, when in every Page we find him declaring, that our Underſtandings are enlightened, our Wills conducted, our Affections diſciplined, and all by the Miniſtry of this Divine Principle; that [r] of ourſelves we can do nothing, but [s] are led by the Spirit; [t] through him are ſtrengthened with Might in the inward Man; [u] by him are ſealed unto the Day of Redemption; and, in one Text to compriſe the Senſe of many, * are waſhed, and ſanctified, and juſtified, in the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and by the Spirit of our God.

The Imperceptibleneſs of his working no Objection.

WE acknowledge indeed, that there is an Obſcurity ſitting upon the Face of this Diſpenſation of Grace. We cannot feel the Impreſſions, nor trace the Footſteps of its diſtinct Working in us. The Meaſures of our Proficiency in Goodneſs ſeem to depend entirely upon thoſe of our own Diligence; and God requires as much Diligence of us, as if he gave us no Grace at all. But then we are to conſider, that there is the ſame Obſcurity upon every Diſpenſation of God's temporal Providence, that there is upon this. † They, who will not allow, that God affords us his [z] Matth. xxviii. 20. [a] John xiv. 16. [b] 1 John iii. 9. [c] 2 Tim. i. 6. [d] Young's Sermons, Vol. II. [e] Gal. v. 22. [f] 1 Cor. vi. 19. [g] Eph. ii. 22. [h] Deut. xxx. 6. [i] Pſal. cxix. 18, 25, 32, 35, 36. [k] Ibid. li. 10. [l] Jer. xxxi. 33, 34. [m] Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27. [n] John xiv. [o] Burnet, on the Articles. [p] Luke xi. 13. [q] Acts ii. 38, 39. [r] 2 Cor. iii. 5. [s] Rom. viii. 14. [t] Eph. iii. 16. [u] Eph. vi. 30. * 1 Cor. vi. 11. † Young, ibid.

Spirit to aſſiſt us in the Work of our Sanctification, do nevertheleſs allow, that he gives us all the temporal good Things we ſtand in need of: But how, in the mean while, does this appear, more than the other? For, when God intends to bleſs a Man with Riches, he does not open the Windows of Heaven, and pour them into his Treaſure; he does not enrich him with ſuch a diſtinguiſhing Providence, as that wherewith he watered Gideon's Fleece, when all the Earth round it was dry: But he endues ſuch a Man with Diligence and Frugality, or elſe adorns him with ſuch acceptable Qualifications, as may recommend him to the Opportunities of Advancement: And thus his Riſe to Fortune is made purely natural, and the diſtinct Operations of God in it do not at all appear. And, in like Manner, when God does, by the inward Aſſiſtance of his Grace, promote a Man to Goodneſs, he does not thereupon ſuddenly change the whole Frame of his Temper, chain up all the Movements of his natural Affections, and infuſe into him ſuch a Syſtem of virtuous Habits, as may make him good without any Pains or Application; but he works his ſpiritual Work by a gradual Proceſs; inſtilling into ſuch a Man, firſt a conſidering Mind, then a ſober Reſolution, and then a diligent Uſe of all ſuch moral Means, as conduce to the forming and perfecting of every particular Virtue. And now, while God, in theſe, and ſuch-like Inſtances, does work in an human and ordinary Way, never ſuperſeding the Power of Nature, but only moving and directing, and aſſiſting her, where ſhe is weak, his Grace is like a little Spring, covered with a great Wheel; though it does all, yet it is not commonly ſeen to do any Thing; and Man, when he pleaſes to be vain and ungrateful, may impute all to his own Power and Application; but with as good Reaſon may he aſcribe all the other Bleſſings of God's ordinary Providence to his own Skill and Acquiſition.

Nor our Ignorance of its Manner.

WE acknowledge again, that there is another Obſcurity upon the Face of his Diſpenſation. [x] We know not the Philoſophy of ſanctifying Grace, nor can we tell, when, or how long, or in what Manner, it operates upon our Minds. This is a Speculation, that our Saviour himſelf argues us ignorant of, as ignorant as we are of the Iſſues and Retreats of the Wind; and yet he thought fit to leave us ſo, whether the Knowledge of it were too excellent for us, or whether it were too uſeleſs: But this hinders not, but that we may be ſure there is ſuch a Principle in us, as ſure as we are, that there is ſuch a Meteor as the Wind, when we hear it blow, though we cannot tell whence it cometh, or whither it goeth. Our Saviour here takes it for granted, [y] that the Noiſe and Sound is Proof ſufficient that the Wind blows; the ſhaking and rattling of Boughs, tearing up Trees, and rocking of Houſes, all convince us, that the Air is in a violent Agitation; and yet we are not privy to the firſt Beginnings of it: We cannot tell what raiſed this mighty Ferment, nor where it ſet out, nor how far it intends, nor what becomes of it, when it ceaſes. And, in like Manner, [z] though we pretend not to declare, but thankfully to admire, by what Ray the Divine Spirit opens, and ſhines in upon our Underſtanding; by what Motion it inſpires good Thoughts, and ſuggeſts holy Reſolutions; by what welcome Violence it draws our Wills, ſteers our Appetites, and checks our Paſſions; by what Diſcipline it extinguiſhes ſinful Imaginations, and looſe Deſires; by what Heat it kindles Love, and Deſire, and Chearfulneſs of Endeavours; by what Power it awes the Devil, and foils Temptations, and removes Impediments, and ſtrengthens and exhilarates amidſt all Difficulties; and, finally, by what patient Art it turns, and moulds, and transforms our ſtubborn Nature into new Notions, new Savours, new Powers, new Acts, new Aims, new Joys, as if we were entirely new Creatures, and deſcended from another Race: Though we pretend not to comprehend, I ſay, the manifold Effects of this [a] unſpeakable Gift; though we readily acknowledge, that it is a Gift ſurpaſſing our Apprehenſion, as much as it does our Deſerts; yet the Man muſt be a Stranger to his own Compoſition, as well as the Power of God that made him, who pretends to call in Queſtion the Reality of the Thing, becauſe of its Abſtruſeneſs. Our own Soul, we know very well, moves, and yet we do not feel it by any Impulſe, that makes a ſenſible Impreſſion upon our outward Structure; nor can we ſay, how this Motion is conveyed from an immaterial to the fineſt corporeal Subſtance; how that commands ſo powerfully, and every Part of this obeys ſo readily. And ſurely then, he, who created Soul and Body both, and found out a Way to move Matter by that which is not Matter, cannot want a Method of making his Spirit correſpond [x] Young's Sermons, Vol. II. [y] Stanhope's Sermons, on ſeveral Occaſions. [z] Young, ibid.

[a] 2 Cor. ix. 15.

correſpond with ours, the Spirit creating with that created by it, no, nor of carrying on this Correſpondence in ſo eaſy and familiar a Manner, that we ourſelves ſhall not be able to diſcern diſtinctly, whence this Wind cometh, or whither it goeth.

That the Holy Ghoſt operates upon our Minds.

IT muſt be allowed, that though the Devil cannot lay us under a Neceſſity to do wickedly, [b] yet he is frequently repreſented in Scripture, as tempting us to ſin; which he can only do mediately, by raiſing ſuch Ideas in our Brain, as may move, and diſpoſe us to engage in ſomething that is criminal. To this Purpoſe he is ſaid [c] to work in the Children of Diſobedience, and to [d] lead them captive, εἰς τὸ ἐκείνου θέλημα, to do his Will. Now the ſame Scripture that acquaints us with this, tells us likewiſe for our Comfort, that [e] ſtronger is he that is in us, than he that is in the World, i. e. that the good Spirit, which dwells in pious Men, is more powerful in them, than Satan is in the Wicked; and therefore, when Satan is repreſented as [f] a lying Spirit in the Mouth of Ahab's Prophet, as [g] moving David to number the People, as [h] entering into Judas, and [i] filling the Heart of Ananias to lye to the Holy Ghoſt; as theſe Expreſſions cannot be accounted for, without allowing him a Power to work upon the Spirits of thoſe Men; ſo, on the other Hand, when God is ſaid to [k] create in us a clean Heart, and to renew a right Spirit within us, &c. if he, by the Spirit, raiſes no good Motions and Ideas in us; if he vouchſafes us no inward Illuminations, by attending to which, we may diſcern the wonderous Things of his Law; we can hardly conceive what the Meaning of theſe Words can be: Nay, how can his Spirit be ſaid [l] to help our Infirmities, [m] to purify our Hearts, to be unto us a Comforter, a [n] Spirit of Sanctification, and [o] of Power, and of a ſound Mind; how can he, I ſay, be all, or any of theſe Things to us; how can he do all, or any of theſe Things for us, unleſs he works ſomething in us? For ſince Conſolation ariſes only from the inward Teſtimony of the Conſcience; ſince Sanctification conſiſts in the renewing of the inward Man, and hath the Soul for its Subject; and ſince the Heart is purified by inward Change and Temper, which render it averſe to Sin, and ſet the Deſires and Inclinations of the Soul againſt it, either the Spirit muſt operate upon the Mind of Man with ſome Kind of Energy, or theſe Effects would never follow.

In all Ages.

TO ſay that theſe Things and Expreſſions concern only the Times, in which the extraordinary Gifts and Operations of the Holy Spirit were vouchſafed, is to make future Ages, ſince the ceaſing of theſe Gifts, deſpair of being comforted, or ſanctified, or even enabled to purify their Heart; and, conſequently, to deſpair of being now the Sons of God, united to Chriſt Jeſus, or poſſeſſed of any of the Fruits of the Spirit. [p] In the primitive Times, the Spirit of God was needful [q] to ſtrengthen Chriſt's Servants in the inward Man, to comfort them under Tribulations, to ſupport them under fiery Trials, and to preſerve them, both from the Subtleties of Satan, and the Temptations of the World: In our Days, there is the ſame Need of his gracious Aſſiſtance for the like Purpoſes, therefore the like Reaſon to expect it; for, as God is the ſame Yeſterday, To-day, and for ever, there is in him, and ever will be, the ſame Benignity of Temper now, as there was in all former Ages, and the ſame good Will and Readineſs of Mind, to give his Holy Spirit to thoſe that aſk it, in order, 1. to illuminate their Underſtandings; 2. to ſanctify their Wills; 3. to excite them in the Ways of Godlineſs; 4. to comfort them under Difficulties; and 5. to enable them to pray with devout and fervent Affections; which are the ordinary Operations of this bleſſed Agent upon Mens Minds.

The ordinary Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt,

1. ONE Office and Gift of the Holy Spirit is, to enlighten our Minds, that we may ſee the great Myſteries of Chriſtianity, and that we may underſtand our Duty aright. For being not only ignorant by Nature, and inattentive to Divine Truths, but prepoſſeſſed likewiſe with Paſſions and Prejudices, which obſtruct our Reception of them; we ſhould hardly attain a competent Senſe of what concerns our eternal State, without the Aſſiſtance of this Divine Inſtructor: And therefore we find the Apoſtle making this the Subſtance of his Prayer for the Epheſians, [r] That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of Glory, might give unto them the Spirit of Wiſdom and Revelation, in the Knowledge of him; and that, the Eyes of their Underſtanding being enlightened, they might know what is the Hope of his Calling, and what the Riches of the Glory of his Inheritance in the Saints. For the Excellency of this heavenly Teacher is,——That he Illumination.

[b] Whitby's Appendix, on 2 Cor. vi. [c] Eph. ii. 2. [d] 2 Tim. ii. 26. [e] 1 John iv. 4. [f] 1 Kings xxii. 21. [g] 1 Chron. xxi. 1. [h] Luke xxii. 3. [i] Acts v. 3. [k] Pſal. li. 10. [l] Rom. viii. 26. [m] 1 Pet. i. 22. [n] 1 Cor. vi. 11. [o] 2 Tim. i. 7. [p] Whitby, ibid. [q] Eph. iii. 16. [r] Ibid. i. 17, 18.

he not only removes thoſe falſe Notions and Perſuaſions, which preclude Conviction, and thoſe unruly Paſſions and Affections, which darken the Mind, but opens, as it were, the Eye of the Soul, to let in the glorious Light of the Goſpel, and by it to diſcern the true Nature of divine Objects. When this is done, he makes choice of the beſt and moſt convincing Arguments, and enforces theſe with the ſtrongeſt and moſt prevailing Motives; Motives, that are fetched from the other World, as well as this, and have the Terrors of the Lord, as well as the Hope of their Calling in their Hand. By this Means he diſpoſes Mens Minds to conſider, and think a long Time of ſuch a Doctrine, ſuch a Reproof, ſuch an Exhortation. He urges the Thing upon them, and will not ſuffer them to baniſh it from their Thoughts; ſo that, at length, it comes to be firmly impreſſed in their Souls, and riveted in their Heart and Conſcience: and what gives this Divine Inſtructor an Advantage, above all human Eloquence and Methods of Perſuaſion, is, that as he is no Stranger to their ſecret Conditions, but better acquainted with the inmoſt Receſſes of their Hearts, than they themſelves are; ſo he can adapt his Convictions to them, and order and methodize them according to the particular Temper and Complexion of their Souls; and hence no doubt it is, that he hath brought, in all Ages, ſo many diſſolute Livers to a Sight of their Errors, and Remorſe for them. The Sword of the Spirit has been ſo happily directed by his Almighty Influence and Operation, that, to ſpeak in the Apoſtle's moſt expreſſive Language, [t] it hath pierced, to the dividing aſunder of Soul and Spirit, and of the Joints and Marrow, and ſo hath become a Diſcerner of the Thoughts, and Intents of the Heart, rifling the Sinner's Conſcience, and ranſacking all the Privacies of his Soul, diſturbing his Security, and powerfully captivating him into the Embraces of the Truth.

Sanctification. 2. ANOTHER of theſe ordinary Operations of the Spirit is Sanctification, which conſiſts in purifying our Wills and Affections from thoſe wicked and inordinate Luſts, which ſet us at Enmity with God. For though our Religion furniſhes us with ſuch Motives, as are infinitely ſufficient to perſuade us; and though our Minds and Wills are not ſo depraved, but that we are ſtill capable to conſider, and free to follow thoſe Motives; yet ſo vain and deſultory are our Minds as to all ſerious and ſpiritual Thoughts, and ſo averſe and inflexible are our Wills as to the ſpiritual and difficult Duties, which theſe Motives perſuade; that, did not the Holy Ghoſt frequently impreſs them on our Minds, and urge and apply them to our Wills and Affections, we ſhould never, of ourſelves, ſo thoroughly conſider them, as to be conquered and perſuaded by them. 'Tis with very good Reaſon therefore, that the Holy Scriptures have aſcribed the Work of [u] our Sanctification, and * Renovation of our Mind to the Efficacy of this bleſſed Spirit; ſince he not only mollifies our Hearts, and bends our ſtubborn Wills to a Compliance with the Divine Precepts; but, by his ſecret Inſinuations, is continually exciting ſuch Deſires and Affections in us, as both exalt and purify our Nature. [x] He excites our Love to God, and to all that is truly worthy of that noble Paſſion, and ſtirs up our Hatred to every Thing, that is contrary to the Purity of his Nature. He enlarges our Hearts with Joy and Gladneſs, while we are ſerving our Maker, but filleth our Souls with Grief and Bitterneſs, whenever we tranſgreſs his Laws. He raiſes in us a Fear of offending the Divine Majeſty, but makes us fearleſs and undaunted in the Diſcharge of our Duty, or in ſuffering for Righteouſneſs Sake. He kindles in us an holy Anger and Indignation againſt Sin, eſpecially if it be of an heinous Nature; and, at the ſame Time, inſpires us with an even and calm Temper, which enables us to live peaceably with all Men; for [y] the Fruit of the Spirit is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-Suffering, Gentleneſs, Goodneſs, Meekneſs, &c.

Excitation. 3. ANOTHER ſtanding Office of the bleſſed Spirit, is to quicken and aſſiſt us in the Duties of Religion. For [z] though it may appear from the Lives both of Heathens and Hypocrites, that all Men may advance farther in a State of Virtue, by the bare Conduct of civil Prudence, and the Force of ſuch Reſolutions, as are merely human, than moſt Chriſtians do attain, amidſt the great, but neglected Advantages of Divine Grace; yet, when we conſider, that Religion is not ſatisfied with many good Acts, no, nor with many good Habits, but only with an Integrity of Goodneſs, and an equal Reſpect to all that is commanded: When we conſider, how hardly reconciled our Underſtandings are to the principal Duties of Chriſtianity, I mean the [s] Edwards's Body of Divinity, Vol. I. [t] Heb. iv. 12. [u] 1 Cor. vi. 11. * Tit. iii. 5.

[x] Edwards, ibid. [y] Gal. v. 22. [z] Young's Sermons, Vol. I.

the Duties of the Croſs, and, under the Notion of their being cruel, or needleſs, or indiſcreet, are apt to ſhift off their Obligation: When we conſider how difficult it is for our weak unſteady Souls to refine themſelves in ſuch a Pitch, as to love God above all thoſe Idols, after which we naturally go aſtray from the Womb; and yet, without ſuch a Love, we have no Principle in us, that can either ſupport, or recommend our Services: When we conſider all theſe Difficulties, the great Taſk before us, the great Indiſpoſitions within us, the Avocations, Seductions, Snares, and Violences, that are always ready to divert us from the Work; we muſt confeſs, that they are Difficulties, purely inſuperable by our own Strength, and muſt therefore require ſome ſupernatural Principle to aſſiſt us in the Performance of them. [a] And this, in ſome Meaſure, God may be ſaid to do, either by admoniſhing, and putting us in mind of our Duty, which, in the Crowd and Hurry of our worldly Occaſions, is apt to be forgotten; or by ſuggeſting to our Minds ſuch Conſiderations of Religion, as are apt to quicken our Endeavours, allure our Hope, alarm our Fear, affect our Ingenuity; and, by theſe ſecret Springs, provoke our Zeal, and encourage our Aſſiduity.

